steenstrupine (stēn′strup-in), n. [Named after K. J. V. Steenstrup, a Danish naturalist.] A rare mineral occurring in massive forms and rhombohedral crystals of a brown color in the sodalite syenite of Greenland. It is a silicate of the rare metals of the cerium group, also thorium, and other elements.

steep[1] (stēp), a. and n. [< ME. stepe, step, stēp, steap, < AS. steáp, steep, high, = OFries. stāp, steep; cf. Icel. steypthr, steep, lofty; Norw. stup, a steep cliff; akin to stoop: see stoop[1], and cf. steep[2], steeple.] I. a. 1. Having an almost perpendicular slope; precipitous; sheer.

Two of these Ilands are steepe and vpright as any wall, that it is not possible to climbe them.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 748.

Thus far our ascent was easy; but now it began to grow more steep, and difficult.
Maundrell, Aleppo to Jerusalem, p. 119.

2†. Elevated; high; lofty.

To a room they came,
Steep and of state. Chapman. (Imp. Dict.)

3. Excessive; difficult; forbidding: as, a steep undertaking; a steep price. [Colloq.]

Perhaps if we should meet Shakspeare we should not be conscious of any steep inferiority.
Emerson, Essays, 1st ser., p. 302.

Neither priest nor squire was able to establish any steep difference in outward advantages between himself and the commons among whom he lived. Froude, Sketches, p. 164.

4†. Bright; glittering; fiery.

His eyen steepe and rollynge in his heede.
Chaucer, Gen. Prol. to C. T., l. 201.

His Ene [eyes] leuenaund with light as a low fyn,
With stremys [gleams] full stithe in his stepe loke.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 7724.

II. n. A steep or precipitous place; an abrupt ascent or descent; a precipice.

Suddenly a splendor like the morn
Pervaded all the beetling gloomy steeps.
Keats, Hyperion, ii.

Yet up the radiant steeps that I survey Death never climbed. Bryant, To the Apennines.

steep[2] (stēp), v. [< ME. stepen, < Icel. steypa, cast down, overturn, pour out, cast (metals), refl. tumble down, = Sw. stöpa = Dan. støbe, cast (metals), steep (corn); causal of Icel. stūpa = Sw. stupa, fall, stoop: see stoop[1], and cf. steep[1].] I. trans. 1. To tilt (a barrel). Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]—2. To soak in a liquid; macerate: as, to steep barley; to steep herbs.

A day afore her [almonds'] setting, hem to stepe
In meeth is goode.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 54.

The Gordons good, in English blood
They steep'd their hose and shoon.
Battle of Otterbourne (Child's Ballads, VII. 24).

The prudent Sibyl had before prepared
A sop in honey steeped to charm the guard.
Dryden, Æneid, vi. 567.

3. To bathe with a liquid; wet; moisten.

Then she with liquors strong his eies did steepe,
That nothing should him hastily awake.
Spenser, F. Q., II. vi. 18.

His coursers, steep'd in sweat and stain'd with gore,
The Greeks' preserver, great Machaon, bore.
Pope, Iliad, xi. 728.

4. To imbue or impregnate as with a specified influence; cause to become permeated or pervaded (with): followed by in.

Is this a time to steep
Thy brains in wasteful slumbers?
Quarles, Emblems, i. 7.

Thou art so steep'd in misery,
Surely 'twere better not to be.
Tennyson, The Two Voices.

The habitual criminal, steeped in vice and used to ignominy, cares very little for disgrace, and accepts punishment as an incident in his career.
Bibliotheca Sacra, XLVII. 594.

II. intrans. To be bathed in a liquid; soak.

And now the midnight draught of sleep,
Where wine and spices richly steep,
In massive bowl of silver deep,
The page presents on knee.
Scott, Marmion, i. 30.

steep[2] (stēp), n. [< steep[2], v.] 1. The process of steeping; the state of being steeped, soaked, or permeated: used chiefly in the phrase in steep.

Strait to each house she hasted, and sweet sleepe
Pour'd on each wooer; which so laid in steepe
Their drowsie temples that each brow did nod.
Chapman, Odyssey, ii. 578.

Whilst the barley is in steep it is gauged by the excise officers, to prevent fraud. Encyc. Brit., IV. 267.

2. That in which anything is steeped; specifically, a fertilizing liquid in which seeds are soaked to quicken germination.

When taken from the white bath, the skins, after washing in water, are allowed to ferment in a bran steep for some time in order to extract a considerable portion of the alum and salt. C. T. Davis, Leather, p. 665.

3. Rennet: so called from being steeped before it is used. [Prov. Eng.]—Rot's steep, in bleaching cotton goods, the process of thoroughly saturating the cloth. The name is due to the former practice of allowing the flour or size with which the goods were impregnated to ferment and putrefy. Also called wetting-out steep.

steep-down (stēp′doun), a. Having a sheer descent; precipitous.

Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!
Shak., Othello, v. 2. 280.

You see Him till into the steep-down West
He throws his course. J. Beaumont, Psyche, iii. 14.

steepen (stē′pn), v. i. [< steep[1] + -en[1].] To become steep.

As the way steepened, . . . I could detect in the hollow of the hill some traces of the old path.
Hugh Miller. (Imp. Dict.)

steeper (stē′pėr), n. [< steep[2] + -er[1].] A vessel, vat, or cistern in which things are steeped; specifically, a vat in which the indigo-plant is steeped to macerate it before it is soaked in the beating-vat.

steepful† (stēp′fūl), a. [< steep[1] + -ful.] Steep; precipitous.

Anon he stalks about a steepfull Rock,
Where som, to shun Death's (never shunned) stroak,
Had clambred vp.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, ii., The Vocation.

steep-grass (stēp′grȧs), n. The butterwort, Pinguicula vulgaris: so called because used like rennet. Also steepweed, steepwort. Britten and Holland, Eng. Plant Names.

steepiness (stē′pi-nes), n. The state or quality of being steepy or steep; steepness. [Rare.]

The cragginess and steepiness of places up and down . . . makes them inaccessible. Howell, Forreine Travell, p. 132.

steeple (stē′pl), n. [< ME. steple, stepel, stepylle, stepul, < AS. stēpel, stȳpel, a steeple, < steáp, steep, high: see steep[1].] 1. A typically lofty structure attached to a church, town-house, or other public edifice, and generally intended to contain the bells of such edifice. Steeple is a general term applied to every secondary structure of this description, whether in the form of a simple tower, or, as is usual, of a tower surmounted by a spire.

Ydeleblisse is the grete wynd that thrauth doun the greate tours and the hege steples and the greate beches ine wodes thrauth to grounde.
Ayenbite of Inwyt (E. E. T. S.), p. 23.

Lod. What does he ith middle looke like?
Asto. Troth, like a spire steeple in a Country Village ouerpeering so many thatcht houses.
Dekker and Middleton, Honest Whore, ii. 1.

At Paris all steeples are clangouring not for sermon.
Carlyle, French Rev., III. i. 4.

2. A lofty head-dress worn by women in the fourteenth century. See hennin.

Some of the more popular of these strange varieties of head-gear have been distinguished as the "horned," the "mitre," the "steeple"—in France known as the "hennin"—and the "butterfly." Encyc. Brit., VI. 469.

3. A pyramidal pile or stack of fish set to dry. Also called pack. See the quotation under pack[1], 10 (b).

steeplebush (stē′pl-bůsh), n. The hardhack; also, Spiræa salicifolia. See Spiræa.

steeplechase (stē′pl-chās), n. A horse-race across a tract of country in which ditches, hedges, and other obstacles must be jumped as they come in the way. The name is supposed to be originally due to any conspicuous object, such as a church-steeple, having been chosen as a goal, toward which those taking part in the race were allowed to take any course they chose. The limits of the steeplechase-course are now marked out by flags.

steeplechaser (stē′pl-chā′sėr), n. 1. One who rides in steeplechases.—2. A horse running or trained to run in a steeplechase.

"If you do not like hunting, you are to affect to," says Mamma. "You must listen to Captain Breakneck's stories at dinner, laugh in the right places, and ask intelligent questions about his steeplechasers."
Nineteenth Century, XXVI. 780.

steeplechasing (stē′pl-chā′sing), n. [< steeplechase + -ing.] The act or sport of riding in a steeplechase.

steeple-crown† (stē′pl-kroun), n. A steeple-crowned hat.

And on their heads old steeple-crowns.
Hudibras Redivivus (1706). (Nares.)

steeple-crowned (stē′pl-kround), a. Having a high peaked crown resembling a steeple: noting various articles of head-gear.

The women wearing the old country steeple-crowned hat and simply made gowns.
Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, II. 138.

steepled (stē′pld), a. [< steeple + -ed[2].] 1. Furnished or adorned with a steeple or steeples.

As we neared the provincial city [Worcester], we saw the steepled mass of the cathedral, long and high, rise far into the cloud-freckled blue. H. James, Jr., Pass. Pilgrim, p. 44.

2. Having the form of a steeple; peaked; towering.

Steepled hattes.
Wright, Passions of the Mind (ed. 1621), p. 330. (Halliwell.)

A steepled turbant on her head she wore. Fairfax.

steeple-engine (stē′pl-en′jin), n. 1. A form of marine steam-engine used on early side-wheel boats, in which the cross-head is the highest part, and the connecting-rod and cylinder are above the crank-shaft.—2. A direct-acting engine in which the crank-shaft is located between the cylinder and the cross-head. The piston-rod is connected with the latter by two branches or limbs which straddle the crank-shaft and crank, and the connecting-rod or pitman plays between the limbs of the piston-rod. It is used for steam-pumps and donkey-engines, being very compact in form.

steeple-fair†, n. [Supposed to be a corruption, simulating steeple (as if 'a church-fair' or 'kermess'), of staple-fair*, < staple[2], market, + fair[2].] A common fair or mart.

These youths, in art, purse, and attire most bare,
Give their attendance at each steeple faire;
Being once hir'd he'l not displease his lord.
Taylor, Works (1630). (Nares.)

steeple-hat (stē′pl-hat), n. A steeple-crowned hat.

An old doublet and a steeple hat. Browning, Strafford.

steeple-house† (stē′pl-hous), n. A church edifice: so called by the early members of the Society of Friends, who maintained that the word church applies properly only to the body of believers.

The reason why I would not go into their steeple-house was because I was to bear my testimony against it, and to bring all off from such places to the Spirit of God, that they might know their bodies to be the temples of the Holy Ghost. George Fox, Journal (Phila.), p. 167.

There are steeple-houses on every hand,
And pulpits that bless and ban;
And the Lord will not grudge the single church
That is set apart for man.
Whittier, The Old South.

steeple-hunting (stē′pl-hun′ting), n. Same as steeplechasing. Carlyle, Sterling, v.

steeple-jack (stē′pl-jak), n. A man who climbs steeples and tall chimneys to make repairs, or to erect scaffolding.

A steeple-jack of Sheffield . . . met with a shocking accident. St. James's Gazette, May 11, 1887. (Encyc. Dict.) steepletop (stē′pl-top), n. The bowhead, or great polar whale (Balæna mysticetus): so called from the spout-holes opening within a sort of cone: a whalers' name. C. M. Scammon.

steeplewise (stē′pl-wīz), adv. In the manner of a steeple; like a steeple.

Thin his haire,
Besides, disordered and vnkembd, his crowne Picked, made steeple-wise; . . . bald he was beside.
Heywood, Dialogues (Works, ed. Pearson, 1874, VI. 120).

steeply (stēp′li), adv. In a steep manner; with steepness; with precipitous declivity: as, a height rising steeply.

At this point it [the highway] steeply overtops the fields on one side. Howells, Indian Summer, xx.

steepness (stēp'nes), n. The state of being steep, in any sense; precipitousness: as, the steepness of a hill or a roof.

steep-to (stēp'tö), a. Abruptly steep: noting a bold shore having navigable water close in to land. [Colloq.]

The pans [pan-ice] rise over all the low lying parts of the Islands, grinding and polishing exposed shores, and rasping those that are steep-to. Amer. Nat., XXII. 230.

steep-tub (stēp'tub), n. A tub in which salt beef and salt pork are soaked before cooking.

steep-up (stēp'up), a. Ascending steeply.

Her stand she takes upon a steep-up hill.
Shak., Passionate Pilgrim, l. 121.

steep-water (stēp'wâ″tėr), n. Water used as a steep, or suitable for steeping; specifically, a steep for flax.

The most celebrated steep-water in the world is the river Lys, which rises in the north of France, and flows through the west of Belgium. Ure, Dict., II. 409.

steepweed, steepwort (stēp'wēd, -wėrt), n. Same as steep-grass.

steepy (stē'pi), a. [< steep[1] + -y[1].] Steep; precipitous.

Ever to rear his tumbling stone upright
Upon the steepy mountain's lofty height.
Marston, Satires, v. 78.

steer[1] (stēr), v. [< ME. steeren, steren, stiren, sturen, steoren, < AS. steóran, stiéran, stȳran = OFries. stiura, stiora = MD. stuyren, stueren, stieren, D. sturen, stieren = MLG. sturen, LG. stieren = OHG. stiuran, stiurran, MHG. stiuren, stiuwern, direct, control, support, G. steuern, control, steer, pilot, = Icel. stȳra = Dan. styre = Sw. styra, steer; cf. Goth. stiurjan, establish, confirm; partly from the noun, AS. steór, etc., a rudder (see steer[1], n.), but in part, as more particularly appears in the Goth., prob. an orig. verb, 'establish' (hence 'direct,' 'steer'), connected with OHG. stiuri, strong, large; cf. Goth. usstiuriba, unbridled, Skt. sthāvara, fixed, stable, etc. The ME. forms are partly confused with the ME. forms of stir.] I. trans. 1. To guide by the movements of a rudder or helm; direct and govern, as a ship on her course.

The two brether were abidyng bothe in a shippe
That was stird with the storme streght out of warde;
Rut on a Rocke, rof all to peces.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 3709.

You yourself shall steer the happy helm.
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., i. 3. 103.

No merchant wittingly
Has steered his keel unto this luckless sea.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I. 399.

2. To pursue in a specified direction; direct: as, to steer one's way or course.

Then with expanded wings he steers his flight Aloft, incumbent on the dusky air.
Milton, P. L., i. 225.

3. To guide; manage; control; govern.

Fyr so wood, it mighte nat be stered,
In al the noble tour of Ilioun.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 935.

I have a soul
Is full of grateful duty, nor will suffer me
Further dispute your precept; you have power
To steer me as you please.
Shirley, Bird in a Cage, i. 1.

4†. To plan; contrive.

Trewely, myn owene lady deere,
Tho sleighte, yit that I have herd yow steere, Ful shapely ben to faylen alle yfeere.
Chaucer, Troilus, iii. 1451.

5. To lead; conduct; draw: as, a bunko-man steers his victim to a bunko-joint. See bunko-steerer.—Steering balloon. See balloon[1].—Steering committee, a small body of men, generally members of a legislative body, engaged in directing the course of legislation. [Slang, U. S.]—To steer a trick at the wheel, to take one's turn in steering a vessel.

II. intrans. 1. To direct and govern a vessel in its course.

Jason . . . the bote tok,
Stird ouer the streame streght to the lond.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 957.

Some of their men were starued, the rest all so weake that onely one could lie along vpon the Helm and sterre.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 745.

2. To direct one's course at sea; sail in a specified direction: as, the ship steers southward; he steered for Liverpool.

The Ottomites, . . .
Steering . . . towards the isle of Rhodes,
Have there injointed them with an after fleet.
Shak., Othello, i. 5. 34.

3. To answer the helm: as, the vessel steers with ease.—4. Figuratively, to take or pursue a course or way; hence, to direct one's conduct; conduct one's self.

Well-born, and wealthy, wanting no support,
You steer betwixt the country and the court.
Dryden, To his kinsman, John Dryden, l. 128.

He relieved her of her burden, and steered along the street by her side, carrying her baked mutton and potatoes safely home. Mrs. Gaskell, Cranford, ii.

To steer clear of, to keep away from; avoid.

It req tires great skill, and a particular felicity, to steer clear of Scylla and Charybdis.
Bacon, Physical Fables, vi., Expl.

To steer roomer. See room[1], adv.—To steer small, to steer with little movement of the helm, and consequently with but slight deviation of the ship's head from the assigned course.—To steer with a small helm, to keep the course accurately, with but slight shifting of the helm in either direction.

steer[1] (stēr), n. [< ME. steere, stere, ster, steor, < AS. steór = MD. stuer, stier, D. stuur = MLG. stur, sture, LG. stür = OHG. stiura, f., MHG. stiure, stiuwer, G. steuer, n., = Icel. stȳri = Sw. Dan. styr, a rudder, a steering-oar, prob. orig. a pole (applied to a steering-oar); cf. Icel. staurr, a post, stake, = Gr. σταυρός, a pole, stake, cross (see staurus): see steer[1], v., and cf. steer[2]. Hence ult. stern[2].] 1†. A rudder; a helm.

With a wawe [wave] brosten was his stere.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 2416.

2†. A helmsman; a pilot.

He that is lord of fortune be thy stere.
Chaucer, Man of Law's Tale, l. 350.

3†. A guide; a director; a governor; a ruler.

My lady dere,
Syn God hath wroght me for I shal yow serve,
As thus I mene ye wol yet be my stere
To do me lyve, if that yow list, or sterve.
Chaucer, Troilus, iii. 1291.

Commodity is the steer of all their actions.
Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 198.

4†. Guidance; direction; government; control.

For whanne I my lady here,
My wit with that hath loste his stere.
Gower, Conf. Amant., i.

To give one a steer, to give one a useful hint; give one a point or tip. [Slang, U. S.]

steer[2] (stēr), n. [< ME. steer, ster, steor, < AS. steór = D. stier = OLG. stier, MLG. stēr = OHG. stior, MHG. G. stier = Icel. stjörr = Goth. stiur, a bull, steer; also without initial s, Icel. thjörr = Sw. tjur = Dan. tyr, a steer; cf. L. taurus (> It. Sp. toro = Pg. touro = F. dim. taureau), < Gr. ταῦρος = OBulg. turŭ = Bohem. Pol. tur = Russ. turŭ = W. tarw = Ir. Gael. tarbh, a bull, steer; prob. akin to OHG. stūri, stiuri, strong, Skt. sthūrin, a pack-horse, sthūla, great, large, powerful, sthūra, a man, sthāvara, fixed, stable, Gr. σταυρός, a pole, stake, etc. (see staurus). Cf. steer[1], ult. from the same root; cf. also stirk, and Taurus.] A young male of the ox kind; a bullock, especially one which has been castrated and is raised for beef. In the United States the term is extended to male beef-cattle of any age.

Juvencus is a yonge oxe whan he is no lenger a calf. and he is then callyd a steere whan he begynneth to be helpfull unto the profit of man in eringe the erth.
Dialogues of Creatures Moralysed, p. 228. (Halliwell.)

Laocoön . . .
With solemn pomp then sacrificed a steer.
Dryden, Æneid, ii. 268.

steer[2] (stēr), v. t. [< steer[2], n.] To make a steer of; castrate (a young bull or bull-calf). [Rare.]

The male calves are steered and converted to beef.
Daily Telegraph, Oct. 18, 1886. (Encyc. Dict.)

steer[3] (stēr), v. and n. An obsolete or dialectal variant of stir[1].

What 's a' the steer, kimmer?
What 's a' the steer?
Charlie he is landed,
An, haith, he'll soon be here.
Jacobite song.

steerable (stēr'a-bl), a. [< steer[1] + -able.] Capable of being steered: as, a steerable balloon.

steerage (stēr'āj), n. [Early mod. E. also steeridye, stirrage; < steer[1] + -age.] 1. The act, practice, or method of steering; guidance; direction; control; specifically, the direction or control of a ship in her course.

By reason of the euil stirrage of the other ship, we had almost boorded each other. Hakluyt's Voyages, II. 110.

But He that hath the steerage of my course Direct my sail! Shak., R. and J., i. 4. 112.

2. That by which a course is steered or directed. [Rare.]

Inscribed to Phœbus, here he hung on high
The steerage [remigium] of his wings.
Dryden, Æneid, vi. 24.

3. Naut., the effect of the helm on a ship; the manner in which the ship is affected by the helm: as, she was going nine knots, with easy steerage.—4. A course steered; a path or way; a course of conduct, or a way of life.

He bore his steerage true in every part,
Led by the compass of a noble heart.
Webster and Rowley, Cure for a Cuckold, iv. 2.

Let our Governors beware in time, lest . . . they shipwrack themselves, as others have don before them, in the cours wherin God was directing the Steerage to a Free Commonwealth. Milton, Free Commonwealth.

5. A rudder; a helm; apparatus for steering; hence, a place of government or control.

This day the William was hald a ground, because she was somewhat leake, and to mend her st erage.
Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 446.

While they who at the steerage stood
And reap'd the profit sought his blood.
Swift, Death of Dr. Swift.

6†. The part of a ship where the tiller traverses; the stern.

I was much surprized, and ran into the steeridge to look on the compass. Dampier, Voyages, an. 1688.

7. (a) In passenger-ships, the part of the ship allotted to the passengers who travel at the cheapest rate, hence called steerage passengers: generally, except in the newest type of passenger-steamers, not in the stern, as might be supposed, but in the bow. (b) Formerly, in a United States man-of-war, the part of the berth-deck just forward of the wardroom: it was generally divided into two apartments, one on each side, called the starboard and port steerages, and assigned to midshipmen, clerks, and others. Now called junior officers' quarters; in the British navy called the gun-room.—Steerage country (naut.). See ★ country.

steerageway (stēr'āj-wā), n. Naut., that degree of forward movement or headway of a ★ ship which renders her subject to the helm.

steerer (stēr'ėr), n. [< steer[1] + -er[1].] 1. One who or that which steers; a steersman.

And I will be the steerer o 't,
To row you o'er the sea.
Young Lekie (Child's Ballads, IV. 13).

2. In a tricycle, the rod and small wheel by which the machine is turned about and guided: called front steerer or back steerer according to its place on the machine.—3. In bunko swindling, one who steers or leads his victim to the rendezvous; a bunko-steerer. [Slang.]—Boat-steerer, in whaling, the second man in rank in a boat's crew, whose duty it is to act as bow-oarsman while going on to the whale, to harpoon or bomb the whale if he is so instructed by the officer, and to steer the boat after the whale has been struck, having shifted ends with the officer. The duties of the boat-steerer, or harpooner or slewer as he is also called, are the most important intrusted to the crew.

steering-compass (stēr'ing-kum″pas), n. See ★ compass.

steering-gear (stēr'ing-gēr), n. Naut., the machinery by which the rudder is managed. In large ships steam-power has come into very general use for this purpose—a wheel, turned by the helmsman in the same manner as when steering by hand, by its action admitting steam to the engines which move the helm.

steering-sail (stēr'ing-sāl), n. Same as stud- ★ dingsail.

steering-wheel (stēr'ing-hwēl), n. The wheel by which the rudder of a ship is shifted and the ship steered.

steerless† (stēr'les), a. [< ME. stereles, < AS. steórleás, having no rudder, < steór, a rudder, + -leás, E. -less; < steer[1], n., + -less.] Having no rudder.

Al stereless withinne a boot am I.
Chaucer, Troilus, i. 416.

Like to the steerless boat that swerves with every wind.
Surrey, Eccl. iii.

steerling (stēr'ling), n. [< steer[2] + -ling[1].] A young steer.

To get thy steerling, once again
I'le play such another strain.
Herrick, A Beucolick, or Discourse of Neatherds.

steerman† (stēr'man), n. [< ME. sterman, steorman, < AS. steórman (= D. stuurman = MLG. sturman, stureman = MHG. stiurman, G. steuermann, steersman, = Icel. stȳrimathr, stjörnarmathr = Sw. styrman = Dan. styrmand, a mate), < steór, rudder, + man, man: see steer[1] and man.] Same as steersman.

Their Star the Bible; Steer-man th' Holy-Ghost.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, i. 1.

steersman (stērz'man), n.; pl. steersmen (-men). [< ME. steresman, < AS. steóresman, steersman, < steóres, gen. of steór, a rudder, + man, man.] One who steers. (a) The steerer of a boat; a helmsman; a pilot.

How the tempest al began,
And how he lost his steresman.
Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 436.

Through it the joyful steersman clears his way,
And comes to anchor in his inmost bay. Dryden.

(Ot) A governor; a ruler.

ilc of the .v. steres-men
Vnder hem welden in stere tgen [ten].
Genesis and Exodus (E. E. T. S.), l. 3417.

steersmanship (stērz'man-ship), n. [< steersman + -ship.] The office or art of a steersman; skill in steering.

They praised my steersmanship.
J. Burroughs, Pepacton, p. 19.

steersmate (stērz'māt), n. [< steer's, poss. of steer[1], + mate[1].] A mate or assistant in steering. [Rare.]

What pilot so expert but needs must wreck, Imbark'd with such a steers-mate at the helm?
Milton, S. A., l. 1045.

steer-staff†, n. [ME. steerstaf; < steer[1] + staff.] Same as steer-tree. Wyclif, Prov. xxiii. 34.

steer-tree† (stēr'trē), n. [Early mod. E. also steretre, stertree, stertre; < ME. steretre; < steer[1] + tree.] 1. A rudder.

Wife, tent the stere-tre, and I shalle asay
The depnes of the see that we bere, if I may.
Towneley Mysteries, p. 31. (Halliwell.)

2. The handle of a plow. Cath. Ang., p. 361, note.

steery (stēr'i), n. [< steer[3] + -y[3].] A stir; a bustle; a tumult. [Scotch.]

"Where's the younger womankind?" said the Antiquary. "Indeed, brother, amang a' the steery, Maria wadna be guided by me—she set away to the Halket-craig-head."
Scott, Antiquary, ix.

steeve[1] (stēv), a. [Sc., also stieve, stive, a var. of stiff, prob. due to Dan. stiv, stiff: see stiff.] Stiff; firm; unbending or unyielding.

A filly buirdly, steeve, an' swank,
An' set weel down a shapely shank
As e'er tread yird.
Burns, Auld Farmer's Salutation to his Auld Mare.

steeve[1] (stēv), v. t.; pret. and pp. steeved, ppr. steeving. [Also stieve; a var. of stive[1], v. Cf. steeve[1], a.] To stiffen: as, to be steeved with cold. Grose. [Prov. Eng.]

steeve[2] (stēv), v.; pret. and pp. steeved, ppr. steeving. [Appar. orig. 'be stiff' (a steeving bowsprit "being fixed stiff or firmly and immovably in the vessel, a horizontal one being movable"): see steeve[2]. Cf. Dan. stiver, a prop, stay, stivebjælke, a beam to prop with.] I. intrans. Naut., to project from the bows at an angle instead of horizontally: said of a bowsprit.

The bowsprit is said to steeve more or less, as the outer end is raised or drooped. Totten, Naval Dict., p. 417.

II. trans. Naut., to give a certain angle of elevation to: as, to steeve a bowsprit.

steeve[2] (stēv), n. [< steeve[2], v.] Naut., the angle of elevation which the bowsprit makes with the horizon.

steeve[3] (stēv), v. t.; pret. and pp. steeved, ppr. steeving. [Also steve; a var. of stive[2], < OF. estiver, stuff, cram (OF. estive, the loading of a ship): see stive[2].] 1. To stuff; cram; pack firmly and tightly. Jamieson. [Scotch.]—2. Naut., to stow, as cargo in a vessel's hold, by means of a steeve or a jack-screw. R. H. Dana, Jr., Before the Mast, p. 306.

steeve[3] (stēv), n. [< steeve[3], v.] A long derrick or spar, with a block at one end, used in stowing cargo. Hamersly, Naval Encyc., p. 777.

steevely (stēv'li), adv. [< steeve[1] + -ly[2].] Firmly; stoutly. Jamieson. Also stievely. [Scotch.]

steeving[1] (stē'ving), n. [Verbal n. of steeve[2], v.] Naut., the angle of elevation which a ship's bowsprit makes with the horizon; a steeve.

steeving[2] (stē'ving), n. [Verbal n. of steeve[3], v.] The operation of stowing certain kinds of cargo, as cotton, wool, or hides, in a vessel's hold with a steeve or a jack-screw. See steeve[3], v. t., 2.

steg (steg), n. Same as stag (in various senses). [Prov. Eng.]

steganographist† (steg-a-nog'ra-fist), n. [< steganograph-y + -ist.] One who practises the art of writing in cipher. Bailey, 1727.

steganography† (steg-a-nog'ra-fi), n. [= F. stéganographie, < Gr. στεγανός, covered (< στέγειν, cover), + γράφειν, write, mark.] The art of writing in cipher, or in characters which are not intelligible except to the persons who correspond with each other; cryptography. Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 498.

The Art of Stenographie, . . . wherevnto is annexed a very easie Direction for Steganographie, or Secret Writing, printed at London in 1602 for Cuthbert Burbie.
Title, quoted in Encyc. Brit., XXI. 836, note.

Steganophthalmata (steg"a-nof-thal'ma-tä), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of steganophthalmatus: see steganophthalmatous.] The covered-eyed acalephs, a division containing those jellyfishes whose sensory tentaculicysts are covered with flaps or lappets proceeding from the margin of the disk: contrasted with Gymnophthalmata. This division contains some of the commonest jellyfishes, as Aurelia aurita; it corresponds to Discophora in a usual sense, more exactly to Discophoræ phanerocarpæ, or Scyphomedusæ. Also called Steganophthalmia. See also cut under Aurelia.

Under view of a segment of the disk of Aurelia aurita; m, a lithocyst with its protective hood, a usual character of Steganophthalmata; c, the arrangement of the radiating canals; g, a gastric pouch with frill-like genital membrane.

steganophthalmate (steg"a-nof-thal'māt), a. and n. [< NL. steganophthalmatus*, < Gr. στεγανός, covered, + ὀφθαλμός, eye.] I. a. Covered-eyed or hidden-eyed, as a hydromedusan; not gymnophthalmate. Also steganophthalmatous, steganophthalmic, steganophthalmous.

II. n. A member of the Steganophthalmata.

steganophthalmatous (steg"a-nof-thal'ma-tus), a. [< NL. steganophthalmatus*: see steganophthalmate.] Same as steganophthalmate.

Steganophthalmia (steg"a-nof-thal'mi-ä), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. στεγανός, covered, + ὀφθαλμός, eye.] Same as Steganophthalmata.

steganophthalmic (steg"a-nof-thal'mik), a. [< steganophthalm-ate + -ic.] Same as steganophthalmate.

steganophthalmous (steg"a-nof-thal'mus), a. [< Gr. στεγανός, covered, + ὀφθαλμός, eye.] Same as steganophthalmate.

steganopod (steg'a-nō-pod), a. and n. [< NL. steganopus (-pod-), < Gr. στεγανόπους (-ποδ-), web-footed, < στεγανός, covered, + πούς (ποδ-) = E. foot.] I. a. In ornith., having all four toes webbed; totipalmate.

II. n. A member of the Steganopodes.

Steganopoda† (steg-a-nop'ō-dä), n. pl. [NL.: see steganopod.] An Aristotelian group of birds, approximately equivalent to the Linnean Anseres, or web-footed birds collectively.

steganopodan (steg-a-nop'ō-dan), a. [< steganopod + -an.] In ornith., totipalmate; steganopod.

Steganopodes (steg-a-nop'ō-dēz), n. pl. [NL.: see steganopod.] An order of natatorial birds, consisting of those which have all four toes webbed and a more or less developed gular pouch; the Totipalmatæ. It is now usually divided into six families, Sulidæ, Pelecanidæ, Phalacrocoracidæ, Plotidæ, Tachypetidæ, and Phaethontidæ, respectively represented by the gannets, pelicans, cormorants, darters, frigates, and tropic-birds. Dysporomorphæ, Pinnipedes, and Piscatores are synonyms. See cuts under anhinga, cormorant, frigate-bird, gannet, pelican, Phaëthon, rough-billed, and totipalmate.

steganopodous (steg-a-nop'ō-dus), a. [< steganopod + -ous.] Same as steganopod.

Steganopus (ste-gan'ō-pus), n. [NL. (Vieillot, 1818): see steganopod.] A genus of phalaropes, having the toes margined with an even membrane, and the bill very long and slender.

Wilson's Phalarope (Steganopus wilsoni).

It includes Wilson's phalarope, S. wilsoni, a North American species, the largest and handsomest of the family. This genus has nothing to do with the order of birds that appears from the term Steganopodes, to be named from it.

Stegocarpi (steg-ō-kär'pī), n. pl. [NL.: see stegocarpous.] A division of bryaceous mosses in which the capsule opens in the upper part by a deciduous lid or operculum. It embraces the larger part of the true mosses.

stegocarpous (steg-ō-kär'pus), a. [< NL. stegocarpus*, < Gr. στέγειν, cover, + καρπός, fruit.] In bot., of or belonging to the Stegocarpi; having an operculate capsule.

Stegocephala (steg-ō-sef'a-lä), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of stegocephalus*: see stegocephalous.] Same as Labyrinthodontia. Also Stegocephali.

stegocephalian (steg"ō-se-fā'li-an), a. and n. [< Stegocephala + -ian.] I. a. Stegocephalous.

II. n. A member of the Stegocephala.

stegocephalous (steg-ō-sef'a-lus), a. [< NL. stegocephalus*, < Gr. στέγειν, cover, + κεφαλή, the head.] Having the head mailed, loricate, or cataphract, as a labyrinthodont; having the characters of, or pertaining to, the Stegocephala.

Stegodon (steg'ō-don), n. [NL. (Falconer, 1857), < Gr. στέγειν, cover, + ὀδούς (ὀδοντ-) = E. tooth.] 1. A genus of fossil elephants of the Tertiaries of India, intermediate in their dental characters between the existing elephants and the mastodons. They are, however, most nearly related to the former, belonging to the same subfamily, Elephantinæ. S. insignis is an example.

2. [l. c.] An elephant of this genus.

stegognathous (ste-gog'na-thus), a. [< Gr. στέγειν, cover, + γνάθος, jaw.] In conch., having a jaw composed of imbricated plates: noting the Bulimulidæ.

Stegopterа† (ste-gop'te-rä), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of stegopterus*: see stegopterous.] An order of neuropterous insects; the roof-winged insects. It included the Panorpidæ or scorpion-flies, the Rhaphidiidæ or snake-flies, the Mantispidæ or mantis-flies, the Myrmeleontidæ or ant-lions, the Hemerobiidæ or lacewings, the Sialidæ or May-flies, and the Phryganeidæ or caddis-flies. The order is now broken up.

stegopterous (ste-gop'te-rus), a. [< NL. stegopterus*, < Gr. στέγειν, cover, + πτερόν, wing, = E. feather.] In entom., roof-winged; holding the wings deflexed when at rest; of or pertaining to the Stegoptera.

Stegosauria (steg-ō-sâ'ri-ä), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. στέγειν, cover, + σαῦρος, a lizard.] An order or suborder of dinosaurs, represented by the families Stegosauridæ and Scelidosauridæ.

stegosaurian (steg-ō-sâ'ri-an), a. and n. [< Stegosauria + -an.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the Stegosauria, or having their characters.

II. n. A dinosaur of the order Stegosauria.

Stegosauridæ (steg-ō-sâ'ri-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stegosaurus + -idæ.] A family of herbivorous dinosaurs, typified by the genus Stegosaurus, with biconcave vertebræ, ischia retrorse and meeting in mid-line, the astragalus coalesced with the tibia, and the metatarsals short. They ★were Jurassic reptiles of great size.

Stegosaurus (steg-ō-sâ'rus), n. [NL. (Marsh, 1877), < Gr. στέγειν, cover, + σαῦρος, a lizard.] 1. The typical genus of Stegosauridæ. It contained species some 30 feet long, mailed with enormous bucklers and spines.—2. [l. c.] A dinosaur of this genus.

steik, v. t. See steek.

steill†, n. An obsolete Scotch spelling of stale[1].

stein[1]†, v. and n. An obsolete Scotch spelling of steen[1], steen[2].

stein[2] (stīn), n. [G. stein, stone.] An earthenware mug, especially one designed to hold beer.

Steinberger (stīn'bèr-gèr), n. A white wine grown on the Rhine, near Wiesbaden in Prussia. The vineyard belongs to the Prussian national domain. Steinberger ranks in estimation second only to the Johannisberger, and in some years is considered better by connoisseurs.

steinbock (stīn'bok), n. [G.: see steenbok.] 1. The ibex.—2. Same as steenbok.

Steinerian (stī-nē'ri-an), a. and n. [Named by Cremona from Steiner (see def.).] I. a. Pertaining to the discoveries of the German geometer Jacob Steiner (1796–1863).—Steinerian polygon. See polygon.

II. n. In math., the locus of points whose first polars with respect to a given curve have double points.

Steiner's surface. See surface.

steing, n. Same as sting[2].

steinheilite (stīn'hī-līt), n. A variety of iolite.

steining (stī'ning), n. Same as steening, 2.

Steinitz gambit. See gambit.

steinkirk (stīn'kėrk), n. See steenkirk.

steinmannite (stīn'man-īt), n. [After J. J. Steinmann, a German mineralogist.] A variety of galena containing some arsenic and antimony. It commonly occurs in octahedral crystals.

steirk, n. See stirk. steive, v. A variant of stive[2].

steke†, v. An obsolete form of stick[1].

stel†. An obsolete form of steel[1], steal[2], stale[2], etc.

stela (stē'lä), n. Same as stele[3].

stele[1]†. An old spelling of steal[1], steal[2].

stele[2]†, n. An obsolete form of stale[2].

★stele[3] (stē'lē, sometimes stēl), n.; pl. stelæ or stelai. [= F. stèle, < L. stela, < Gr. στήλη, an upright slab or pillar, < ἱστάναι, stand, set: see stand and stool.] In archæol.: (a) An upright slab or pillar, often crowned with a rich anthemion, and sometimes bearing more or less elaborate sculpture or a painted scene, commonly used among the ancient Greeks as a gravestone. (b) A similar slab or pillar serving as a milestone, to bear an inscription in some public place, or for a like purpose.

Sculptured Stele.—Monument of the Knight Dexileos (who fell before Corinth 394 B. C.), on the Sacred Way, Athens.

stelechite (stel'e-kīt), n. [= F. stéléchite, < Gr. στέλεχος, the crown of the root of a tree, stump, block, log, the trunk, + -ite[2].] A fine kind of storax, in larger pieces than the common. Also, erroneously, stelochite.

Stelgidopteryx (stel-ji-dop'te-riks), n. [NL. (S. F. Baird, 1858), < Gr. στελγίς (στελγιδ-), a scraper, + πτέρυξ, a wing.] A genus of Hirundinidæ, having the outer web of the first primary serrate by conversion of the barbs into a series of recurved hooks; the rough-winged swallows. S. serripennis is the common rough-winged swallow of the United States, of plain brownish coloration, greatly resembling the bank-swallow. Several others inhabit Central and South America. See cut under rough-winged.

stell (stel), v. t. [< ME. stellen, < AS. stellan (= MD. D. MLG. LG. OHG. MHG. G. stellen), set up, place, fix, < steall (= MD. D. stal = MLG. stal, LG. stall = OHG. MHG. stal, G. stall), a place, stall: see stall[1].] To set; place; fix. [Obsolete or dialectal.]

> Mine eye hath play'd the painter, and hath stell'd
> Thy beauty's form in table of my heart.
> Shak., Sonnets, xxiv.

stell (stel), n. [A var. of stall[1], after stell, v.] 1†. A place; a station.

> The said stell of Plessis.
> Danet's Comines, sig. V 5. (Nares.)

2. A stall; a fold for cattle. Halliwell; Jamieson. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

★stella (stel'ä), n.; pl. stellæ (-ē). [NL., < L. stella, a star: see star[1].] A stellate spongespicule; an aster; a stellate.

stellar (stel'är), a. [= F. stellaire = Sp. estrellar = It. stellare, < LL. stellaris, pertaining to a star, starry, < L. stella, a star: see stella.] Of or pertaining to stars; astral: as, stellar worlds; stellar space; stellar regions.

> These soft fires
> Not only enlighten, but . . . shed down
> Their stellar virtue on all kinds that grow.
> Milton, P. L., iv. 671.

Stellaria (ste-lā'ri-ä), n. [NL. (Linnæus, 1753), name transferred, on account of the star-like blossoms, from a Corispermum so named by Dillenius (1719); < L. stella, a star.] An untenable name for Alsine, a genus of plants, of the family Silenaceæ. It is characterized by the absence of stipules, by flowers usually with five deeply two-cleft petals and three styles, and by a one-celled globose or oblong capsule which commonly splits into three two-cleft or completely parted valves. There are about 75 species, scattered throughout the world; in the tropics they occur only on mountains. Seven species occur in England and about 30 in North America, of which 12 are found in the northeastern United States. They are commonly diffuse herbs, with weak, smooth, or hairy stems, loosely ascending or growing in matted tufts. Their flowers are usually white, and form terminal paniculed cymes, sometimes mixed with leaves. Several species are known as chickweed, and several others as starwort or stitchwort, especially Alsine Holostea (see stitchwort), a common English species, bearing such local names as allbone, breakbones, shirt-buttons, snap-jack. A. longifolia, the long-leafed stitchwort, frequent in the Northern Atlantic States, forms delicate tangled masses of light green overtopped by numerous small white flowers. A. pubera, the great chickweed or starwort, the most showy Atlantic species, forms conspicuous dark-green tufts along shaded banks in earliest spring, from Pennsylvania southward. See also cut under ovary[1], 2.

Great Chickweed (Alsine pubera).

stellary (stel'a-ri), a. Same as stellar.

stellate (stel'āt), a. and n. [< L. stellatus, pp. of stellare, set or cover with stars, < stella, star: see stella.] I. a. Star-like in form; star-shaped; arranged in the form of a conventional star; radiating from a common center like the rays or points of a star: as, stellate leaves; the stellate groups of natrolite crystals.—Stellate bristle or hair, a bristle or hair which branches at the end in a star-shaped manner. See cut under hair, 4.—Stellate fracture, a fracture, occurring usually in a flat bone, in which several fissures radiate from the central point of injury.—Stellate leaves, leaves, more than two in number, surrounding the stem in a whorl, or radiating like the spokes of a wheel or the points of a star. Also called verticillate leaves. See cut under pipsissewa.—Stellate ligament, a costovertebral ligament; the anterior costocentral ligament uniting the head of a rib with the body of a vertebra: so called from the radiated figure in man.—Stellate spicule, an aster; a stellate.—Stellate veins, very minute venous radicles situated just under the capsule of the kidney, arranged in a radiating or stellate manner.

II. n. A stellate microsclere, or flesh-spicule in the form of a star. Encyc. Brit., XXII. 417.

stellated (stel'ā-ted), a. [< stellate + -ed[2].] Same as stellate.—Stellated polygon, polyhedron, etc. See the nouns.

stellately (stel'āt-li), adv. Radiately; like a star; in a stellate manner.

stellate-pilose (stel'āt-pī'lōs), a. In bot., pilose with stellate hairs.

stellation† (ste-lā'shon), n. [< ML. stellatio(n-) (?), < L. stella, a star: see stellate.] 1. The act or process of becoming a star or a constellation.

> The skaly Scorpion 's fixt amongst the rest, . . .
> The cause of it's stellation to enquire,
> And why so beautify'd with heauenly fire,
> Comes next in course.
> Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 138.

2. Same as constellation.

> Stars, and stellations of the heavens.
> Rev. T. Adams, Works, II. 4.

stellature (stel'ā-tūr), n. [< ML. stellatura*, irreg. taken as equiv. to stellionatus: see stellionate.] Same as stellionate.

> Extortion and cozenage is proverbially called crimen stellionatus, the sin of stellature.
> Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 79.

stelled† (steld), p. a. [Pp. of stell: see stell, and cf. stalled, pp. of stall.] Fixed.

> The sea, with such a storm as his bare head
> In hell-black night endured, would have buoy'd up,
> And quench'd the stelled fires. Shak., Lear, iii. 7. 61.
> [Some commentators define the word as 'stellated,' 'starry.'] stelleer†, stelleere†, n. [See steelyard[2].] Same as steelyard[2]. Cotgrave.

Stelleria (ste-lē'ri-ä), n. [NL., named after G. W. Steller: see stellerine.] In ornith., a genus of sea-ducks, the type of which is Steller's eider, S. dispar, usually called Polysticta stelleri. Bonaparte, 1838.

Stellerida (ste-ler'i-dä), n. pl. [NL., prop. Stellarida, < stellaris, starry, + -ida.] A class or other large group of echinoderms of obviously radiate figure; the starfishes and brittle-stars: synonymous with Asteroidea, 2. stelleridan (ste-ler'i-dan), a. and n. [< Stellerida + -an.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the Stellerida.

II. n. A member of the Stellerida, as a starfish or brittle-star.

stelleridean (stel-e-rid'ē-an), n. Same as stelleridan.

stellerine (stel'e-rin), n. [Named after G. W. Steller, the traveler (1709–45).] The arctic or Steller's sea-cow, Rhytina stelleri. See sea-cow, 2, and cut under Rhytina.

Steller's eider. See Polysticta, 1, and Stelleria.

Steller's jay. A jay of northwestern North America, Cyanocitta stelleri, crested like the common blue jay, but chiefly of a blackish color, shading into dull blue on some parts.

Steller's sea-cow. See sea-cow, 2, and cut under Rhytina.

Steller's sea-lion. The northern sea-lion. See Eumetopias (with cut).

stellet†, n. An obsolete form of stylet, 1. Dalyell, Frag. of Scottish History.

stelliferous (ste-lif'e-rus), a. [< L. stellifer, starry, < stella, a star, + ferre = E. bear[1].] Having or abounding with stars.

stelliform (stel'i-fôrm), a. [< L. stella, a star, + forma, form.] Star-like in shape; stellate in form; asteroid; radiated. stellify† (stel'i-fī), v. t. [< ME. stellifyen, < OF. stellifier, < ML. stellificare, place among the stars, convert into a constellation, < L. stella, a star, + facere, make, do (see -fy).] To turn into or cause to resemble a star; convert into a constellation; make glorious; glorify.

> No wonder is thogh Jove her stellifye.
> Chaucer, Good Women, L 525.

> Some thinke this floud to be Nilus, which is also Gyon; and therefore stellified, because it directeth his course from the Meridian. It consisteth of many stars, and lieth iust beneath the star called Canopus, or Ptolomæa.
> Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 176.

Stellio (stel'i-ō), n. [NL., < L. stellio(n-), a lizard: see stellion.] 1. A genus of agamoid lizards, giving name to the Stellionidæ. They have acrodont dentition, naked tympanum, no pores, and Common Stellion (Stellio vulgaris).

the scales of the tail disposed in whorls or verticils. There are several species, ranging from countries bordering the Mediterranean to India. The common stellion or star-lizard, the hardim of the Arabs, S. vulgaris, is abundant in ruins. S. tuberculatus is an Indian species.

2. [l. c.] A lizard of this genus.

stellion (stel'yon), n. [< L. stellio, a newt, a lizard marked with star-like spots, also a crafty, knavish person (cf. stellionate), < stella, a star: see stella.] An agamoid lizard of the genus Stellio or family Stellionidæ; a star-lizard.

> When the stellion hath cast his skin, he greedily devours it again. Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 79.

stellionate (stel'yon-āt), n. [< LL. stellionatus, cozenage, trickery, < L. stellio(n-), a crafty, knavish person, lit. a newt, lizard: see stellion.] In Scots and civil law, a word used to denote all such crimes in which fraud is an ingredient as have no special names to distinguish them, and are not defined by any written law.

Stellionidæ (stel-i-on'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stellio(n-) + -idæ.] A family of Old World acrodont agamoid lizards, named from the genus Stellio, properly merged in Agamidæ; the stellions or star-lizards. See cut under Stellio.

stellular (stel'ū-lär), a. [< L. stellula, a little star, dim. of stella, a star: see stella.] Finely or numerously stellated, as if spangled with little stars; stelliferous, as the surface of a coral; shaped like a little star; resembling little stars; small and stelliform in figure or appearance. Encyc. Brit., XVI. 370.

stellulate (stel'ū-lāt), a. [< L. stellula, a little star (see stellular), + -ate[1].] Resembling little stars or a little star; stellular.

Stellwag's symptom. See symptom.

Stelmatopoda (stel-ma-top'ō-dä), n. pl. A division of Polyzoa or Bryozoa, corresponding to the Gymnolæmata: contrasted with Lophopoda.

stelochite (stel'ō-kīt), n. See stelechite.

stelography (stē-log'ra-fi), n. [< LGr. στηλογραφία, an inscription on a stele or upright slab, < Gr. στήλη, a stele (see stele[3]), + -γραφια, < γράφειν, write.] The practice of writing or inscribing on steles or pillars.

Jacob's pillar . . . thus engraved . . . gave probably the origin to the invention of stelography.
Stackhouse, Hist. Bible, p. 323.

stem[1] (stem), n. [< ME. stem, stam, < AS. stemn, stefn, stæfn, also stofn (> E. dial. stovin), stem, trunk (of a tree), = D. stam, stem, trunk, stock (of a tree or family), = MLG. stam, stamme, stem, stock, = OHG. MHG. stam (stamm-), G. stamm, stem (of a tree), trunk, tree, stock, race, = Icel. stofn, stomn, stem, trunk of a tree, = Sw. stam = Dan. stamme (in comp. stam-), stem, trunk, stock (of a tree), stock, race, family (also with some variation of form in a particular sense, 'the prow of a vessel': see stem[2]); = OIr. tamon, Ir. tamhān (for stamon*), stem, trunk; cf. Gr. στάμνος, an earthen jar; with formative -mn-, < √ sta, stand: see stand. Not related to staff, except remotely.] 1. The body of a tree, shrub, or plant; the firm part which supports the branches; the stock; the stalk; technically, the ascending axis, which ordinarily grows in an opposite direction to the root or descending axis. The stem is composed of fibrous, vascular, and cellular tissues, arranged in various ways; it typically assumes a cylindrical form and a perpendicular position, and bears the remaining aërial parts of the plant. Its form and direction, however, are subject to much variation in particular cases. In regard to internal structure, there are three principal modifications of stems characteristic of three of the great natural classes into which the vegetable kingdom is divided — namely, exogens, endogens, and acrogens. Stems are herbaceous or woody, solid or hollow, jointed or unjointed, branched or simple. Sometimes they are so weak as to be procumbent, although more generally firm and erect; sometimes weak stems are upheld by twining or by other methods of climbing. In some plants the stem is so short as to seem to be wanting, the leaves and flower-stalks appearing to spring from the top of the root. There are also stems, such as the rhizome and tuber, which, being subterranean, have been mistaken for roots. See cuts under baobab, esparto, internode, pipsissewa, snakeroot, rhizome, and tuber.

2. The stalk which supports the flower or the fruit of a plant; the peduncle of the fructification, or the pedicel of a flower; the petiole or leaf-stem. See cuts under pedicel, peduncle, and petiole.

Two lovely berries moulded on one stem.
Shak., M. N. D., iii. 2. 211.

For I maun crush amang the stoure Thy slender stem.
Burns, To a Mountain Daisy.

3. The stock of a family; a race; ancestry.

Ye may all, that are of noble stem,
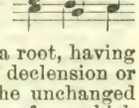
Approach, and kiss her sacred vesture's hem.
Milton, Arcades, l. 82.

4. A branch of a family; an offshoot.



Richard Plantagenet, . . .
Sweet stem from York's great stock.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., ii. 5. 41.

5. Anything resembling the stem of a plant. Specifically — (a) The handle of a tool. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.] (b) That part of a vase, cup, or goblet which unites the body to the foot or base, in examples where the body is not immediately set upon the latter.

Wine-glasses or goblets are classified by the nature of their stems, or by the nature of their feet.
H. J. Powell, Glass-Making, p. 61.

(c) In type-founding, the thick stroke or body-mark of a roman or italic letter. See cut under type. (d) In a vehicle, a bar to which the bow of a falling hood is hinged. (e) The projecting rod of a reciprocating valve, serving to guide it in its action. See cut under slide-valve. (f) In zoöl. and anat., any slender, especially axial, part like the stem of a plant; a stalk, stipe, rachis, footstalk, etc. (g) In ornith., the whole shaft of a feather. (h) In entom., the base of a clavate antenna, including all the joints except the enlarged outer ones: used especially in descriptions of the Lepidoptera.

6. In musical notation, a vertical line added to the head of certain kinds of notes. Of the kinds of note now in use, all but two, the breve and the semibreve, have stems. It may be directed either upward or downward, thus,  . When two voice-parts are written on the same staff, the stems of the notes belonging to the upper part are often directed upward, and those of the lower part downward, particularly when the parts cross, or both use the same note (see figure). The latter note is said to have a double stem. See note[1], 13. Also called tail.

7. In philol., a derivative from a root, having itself inflected forms, whether of declension or of conjugation, made from it: the unchanged part in a series of inflectional forms, from which the forms are viewed as made by additions; base; crude form. — Aërial stem, the above-ground axis of a plant, as opposed to the rootstock or other subterranean form of the stem. — Ancipital, compound, erect, herbaceous, pituitary, secondary, etc., stem. See the adjectives.

stem[1] (stem), v. t.; pret. and pp. stemmed, ppr. stemming. [< stem[1], n.] To remove the stem of; of tobacco-leaf, to strip out the midrib.

stem[2] (stem), n. [< ME. stem*, stam, < AS. stemn*, stefn, stæfn*, also stefna, stæfna, the prow of a ship (steórstefn, the poop, lit. 'steer-stem'), = OS. stamn = D. steven = MLG. LG. steven, prow of a ship (> G. steven, stem (vorder-steven, 'fore stem,' prow, hinter-steven, 'hind stem,' sternpost)), = Icel. stafn, stamn, also stefni, stemni, stem of a ship (prow or stern), = Dan. stevn, stavn = Sw. stäf, prow (fram-stam, 'fore stem,' prow, bakstam, 'back stem,' stem); a particular use, with variations of form, of AS. stemn, stefn, E. stem[1], etc., stem, trunk, post: see stem[1]. The naut. use in E. is prob. in part of Scand. origin.] 1. A curved piece of timber or metal to which the two sides of a ship are united at the foremost end. The lower end of it is scarfed or riveted to the keel, and the bowsprit, when present, rests on its upper end. In wooden ships it is frequently called the main stem, to distinguish it from the false stem, or cutwater. The outside of the stem is usually marked with a scale showing the perpendicular height from the keel, for indicating the draft of water forward. See also cut under forecastle.

Stem and allied parts.

S, stem; K, keel; A, apron; D, deadwood; SN, stemson; DH, deck-hooks; BH, breast hooks; SP, stem-piece, or independent piece; MP, main piece, or lace-piece; BP, bobstay-piece; BWS, bowsprit; G, gripe; F, false keel. (The dotted lines show bolts.)

Pretious jewells fecht from far
By Italian marchants that with Russian stemes Plous up huge forrowes in the Terren Maine.
The Taming of the Shrew, p. 22. (Halliwell.)

2. The forward part of a vessel; the bow.

Turnynge therfore the stemmes of his shyppes towarde the Easte, he affyrmed that he had founde the Ilande of Ophir. Peter Martyr (tr. in Eden's First Books on [America, ed. Arber, p. 66).

False stem, a stem fitted closely to the forward side of the main stem, generally sharp, and introduced for the purpose of decreasing a vessel's resistance and increasing her speed; a cutwater. — From stem to stern, from one end of the ship to the other, or through the whole length.

They skip
From stem to stern; the boatswain whistles.
Shak., Pericles, iv. 1. 64.

stem[2] (stem), v.; pret. and pp. stemmed, ppr. stemming. [< stem[2], n.] I. trans. 1. To dash against with the stem (of a vessel).

They stood off again, and, returning with a good gale, they stemmed her upon the quarter, and almost overset her. Winthrop, List. New England, I. 226.

2†. To keep (a vessel) on its course; steer.

He is the master of true courage that all the time sedately stems the ship.
Cornelius Nepos in English (1723), Ded. (Encyc. Dict.)

3. To make headway against by sailing or swimming, as a tide or current; hence, in general, to make headway against (opposition of any kind).

The breathless Muse awhile her wearied wings shall ease,
To get her strength to stem the rough Sabrinian seas.
Drayton, Polyolbion, iii. 434.

II. intrans. 1. To make headway (as a ship); especially, to make progress in opposition to some obstruction, as a current of water or the wind.

They on the trading flood,
Through the wide Æthiopian to the Cape,
Ply, stemming nightly toward the pole.
Milton, P. L., ii. 642.

2. To head; advance head on.

At first we could scarce lie S. W., but, being got a degree to the Southward of the Line, the Wind veer'd most Easterly, and then we stemmed S. W. by S.
Dampier, Voyages, I. 79.

stem[3] (stem), v. t.; pret. and pp. stemmed, ppr. stemming. [< ME. stemmen; < Icel. stemma = Sw. stämma = Dan. stemme, stem, = OHG. MHG. stemmen, stemen, G. stemmen, stämmen, stop, stem, dam; < √ stam in stam[2], stammer, etc.: see stammer. Not connected with stem[1] or stem[2].] 1. To stop; check; dam up, as a stream.

And loke ge stemme no stepe [step], bot strechez on faste, Til ge reche to areset [stopping-place], rest ge neuer.
Alliterative Poems (ed. Morris), ii. 905.

The best way is, ever, not to attempt to stem a torrent, but to divert it.
A. Hamilton, To Washington (Works, I. 345).

He who stems a stream with sand.
Scott, L. of the L., iii. 28.

He sat down to his milk-porridge, which it was his old frugal habit to stem his morning hunger with.
George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, i. 12.

2. To tamp; make tight, as a joint, with a lute or cement.

stem[4]†, n. and v. An old spelling of steam.

stemapod (stem'a-pod), n. [< Gr. στῆμα, filament (see stamen[1]), + πούς (ποδ-) = E. foot.] One of the caudal filaments of the caterpillars of certain moths, as Cerura and Heterocampa, whose last pair of legs are thus modified into deterrent or repugnatorial organs. A. S. Packard.

stem-character (stem'kar"ak-tėr), n. In gram., same as characteristic letter (which see, under characteristic).

stem-clasping (stem'klâs"ping), a. Embracing the stem with its base; amplexicaul, as a leaf or petiole.

stem-climber (stem'klī"mėr), n. In bot., see climber[1], 2.

stemet, v. t. A Middle English form of steam.

stem-eelworm (stem'ēl"wėrm), n. A minute nematoid, Tylenchus devastatrix, which causes stem-sickness in certain plants. See Tylenchus.

stem-end (stem'end), n. That part or point in a fruit which is attached to the stem: opposed to the blossom-end, which frequently bears the remains of the calyx, as in a pear or an apple. The stem-end is usually inferior to the blossom-end in sweetness and flavor.

stem-head (stem'hed), n. In ship-building, the top of the stem.

stem-knee (stem'nē), n. In ship-building, a knee uniting the stem with the keel.

stem-leaf (stem'lēf), n. A leaf growing from the stem; a cauline leaf.

stemless (stem'les), a. [< stem[1] + -less.] Having no stem; having the stem so little developed as to appear to be wanting; acaulescent. — Stemless lady's-slipper, thistle, violet. See the nouns.

stemlet (stem'let), n. [< stem[1] + -let.] A little stem or stalk; a young stem.

Gives insertion to two multiarticulate stemlets.
English Cyc., Nat. Hist. Division (1855), III. 87.

stemma (stem'ä), n.; pl. stemmata (-a-tä). [< L. stemma, < Gr. στέμμα, a wreath, garland, < στέφειν, put around, encircle, wreathe, crown.] 1. A family tree, or pedigree; specifically, such a pedigree made more or less decorative with heraldic or other ornaments; also, pedigree in general; order of descent; family: as, a man of the stemma of the Cecils. — 2. The simple as distinguished from the compound eye of an invertebrate; an ocellus: always sessile and immovable. — 3. One of the facets or corneules of a compound eye. — 4. In entom., the tubercle from which an antenna arises. — Spurious stemma, a small flat space, covered with semi-transparent membrane, above the bases of the antennæ of certain Orthoptera: it has been supposed to represent a stemma, or simple eye, in a rudimentary form.

Stemmatopteris (stem-a-top'te-ris), n. [NL., < Gr. στέμμα(τ-), a wreath, + πτερίς, a fern.] A generic name proposed by Corda in 1845, and later applied by authors to various Paleozoic fossil trunks of tree-ferns whose preservation is such as to show the spiral arrangement and some of the vascular details of the oval petiolar scars. A large number of species from the coal-measures of America and Europe were formerly referred to Stemmatopteris, but all these are now recognized as representing merely forms of Caulopteris and Ptychopteris (which see), so that Stemmatopteris is no longer generally used as a genus-name.

stemmatous (stem'a-tus), a. [< stemma(t-) + -ous.] Pertaining to a stemma, or having its character; ocellar.

stemmed (stemd), a. [< stem[1] + -ed[2].] Furnished with or bearing a stem: used chiefly in composition: as, a straight-stemmed plant.

stemmer (stem'ėr), n. [< stem[3] + -er[1].] 1. Same as blasting-needle. [Eng.] — 2. An implement used in making joints tight by means of cement.

stemmery (stem'ėr-i), n.; pl. stemmeries (-iz). [< stem[1] + -ery.] A factory where tobacco is stemmed. New York Herald, July 17, 1884. [Local, U. S.]

stemming (stem'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stem[3], v.] 1. The operation of tamping. — 2. The material used in tamping. [Eng. in both uses.]

Stemodia (stē-mō'di-ä), n. [NL. (Linnæus, 1759), shortened from Stemodiacra (P. Browne, 1756), so called from the two-forked stamens; < Gr. στήμων, taken for 'stamen' (see stamen[1]), + δίς, δι-, two-, + ἄκρον, a point, tip.] A genus of dicotyledonous sympetalous plants, belonging to the family Scrophulariaceæ and tribe Gratioleæ. It is characterized by flowers with five nearly equal calyx-lobes, and four perfect didynamous stamens included within the corolla-tube, and by a capsule splitting partly or completely into four valves, the two placentæ separating or remaining united in a column. There are about 30 species, natives of the warmer parts of America and tropics of the old world. They are glandular-hairy or downy herbs, sometimes shrubby and often aromatic. They bear opposite or whorled leaves and solitary or spiked and crowded, usually bluish flowers, sometimes with bracted pedicels. S. maritima is known in Jamaica as bastard or seaside germander, and S. durantifolia as goatweed; the latter, a low clammy plant with purplish spiked flowers, extends also from southern Arizona to Brazil.

Stemona (stē′mō-nä), n. [NL. (Loureiro, 1790), so called from the peculiar stamens; < Gr. στήμων, taken for 'stamen.'] A genus of monocotyledonous plants, type of the family Stemonaceæ. It is distinguished by erect ovules and seeds, and stamens with very short filaments more or less united into a ring, having linear erect anthers with a thickened connective, continued above into an erect appendage. There are 4 or 5 species, natives of India, Malaysia, and tropical Australia. They are smooth, lofty-climbing twiners, growing from a fusiform tuberous root, and bearing shining alternate leaves which are cordate, ovate, or narrower, with three or more nerves and numerous cross-veinlets. The flowers form racemes, or are few or solitary in the axils; the perianth-segments are rather large, distinct, and erect, marked by many nerves.

Stemonaceæ (stē-mō-nā′sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Franchet and Savatier, 1879), < Stemona + -aceæ.] A small family of monocotyledonous plants, of the order Liliales. It is characterized by regular bisexual flowers with a four-parted perianth of two rows, with four stamens and a one-celled ovary which contains two or more ovules and ripens into a two-valved capsule. It includes 7 or 8 species, belonging to 3 genera, of which Stichoneuron and Stemona (the type) are largely Indian; the other genus, Croomia, includes one species in Japan, and another, C. pauciflora, in Florida and adjacent States.

Stemonitaceæ (stē″mō-ni-tā′sē-ē) n. pl. [NL., < Stemonitis + -aceæ.] A family of myxomycetous fungi, belonging, according to the classification of Rostafinski, to the order Amaurochæteæ, which has a single sporangium or æthalium, without the peculiar deposits of lime carbonate that characterize the fructification of other orders, and the spores, capillitium, and columella usually uniformly black, or rarely brownish-violet.

Stemonitis (stē-mō-nī′tis), n. [NL. (Gleditsch), < Gr. στήμων, taken for 'stamen.'] A genus of myxomycetous fungi, giving name to the family Stemonitaceæ.

stem-pessary (stem′pes″ą-ri), n. A pessary with a rod or stem which is passed into the cervix uteri.

stem-piece (stem′pēs), n. In ship-building, a piece between the stem and the chocks, also called independent piece. See cut under stem[2].

stemple (stem′pl), n. [Cf. D. stempel = MHG. stempfel, G. stempel (< D.), a mark, stamp: see stamp.] In mining, a small timber used to support the ground by being laid across the stulls, or in other ways: in some mining districts of England nearly the same as lacing or lagging.

stem-sickness (stem′sik″nes), n. A disease of clover in England. It is caused by a nematoid worm, Tylenchus devastatrix, known as the stem-eelworm, and brings about first a stunted condition and finally the death of the plant.

stemson (stem′sọn), n. [Perhaps a var. of stanchion, confused with stem[2]. Cf. keelson, sternson.] In ship-building, a piece of curved timber fixed on the after part of the apron inside. The lower end is scarfed into the keelson, and receives the scarf of the stem, through which it is bolted.

stem-stitch (stem′stich), n. In pillow-lace making, a stitch by which a thick braid-like stripe is produced: used for the stems of flowers and sprigs, tendrils, etc.

stem-winder (stem′wīn″dėr), n. A watch which is wound up or regulated by means of a contrivance connected with the stem, and not by a key.

sten, v. and n. See stend.

stench[1] (stench), n. [< ME. stench, stunch, < AS. stenc (= OHG. stanc, stanch, MHG. stanc, stenke, G. stank = Sw. Dan. stank), a smell, odor (pleasant or unpleasant), < stincan, smell: see stink, v., and cf. stink, n. Cf. Icel. stækja, a stench.] An ill smell; an offensive odor.

In our way to Tivoli I saw the rivulet of Salforata, formerly called Albula, and smelt the stench that arises from its waters some time before I saw them.
Addison, Remarks on Italy (Bohn), I. 482.

=Syn. Stink, etc. See smell.

stench[1]† (stench), v. t. [< stench[1], n.] To cause to emit a stench; cause to stink.

Dead bards stench every coast.
Young, Resignation, i. 24.

stench[2]† (stench), v. t. An obsolete variant of stanch[1]. Harvey.

stenchful† (stench′fůl), a. [< stench[1] + -ful.] Full of bad odors. Rev. T. Adams, Works, II. 56.

stenchil (sten′chil), n. A Scotch form of stanchel[1] for stanchion.

stench-pipe (stench′pīp), n. In plumbing, an extension of a soil-pipe through and above the roof of a house, to allow foul gases to escape.

stench-trap (stench′trap), n. In a drain, a depression or hollow in which water lies, introduced to prevent the reflex passage of foul air or gas.

stenchy (sten′chi), a. [< stench[1] + -y[1].] Having a stench or offensive smell. Dyer, The Fleece, i.

stencil[1] (sten′sil), v. t.; pret. and pp. stenciled, stencilled, ppr. stenciling, stencilling. [Origin uncertain: (a) According to Skeat, prob. < OF. estinceller (for escinteller*), cover with stars, powder (used in heraldry), lit. 'sparkle,' F. étinceler, sparkle, < L. scintillare, sparkle: see scintillate. Cf. tinsel. (b) In another view, orig. as a noun, identical with stencil[2], a dial. var. of stanchel[1], var. of stanchion, ult. < OF. estance, a support: see stance and stanchion.] To mark out or paint by means of a stencil.

stencil[1] (sten′sil), n. [See stencil[1], v.] 1. A thin plate or sheet of any substance in which a figure, letter, or pattern is formed by cutting through the plate. If the plate thus cut is placed upon a surface and rubbed with color or ink, the pattern or figure will be marked on the underlying substance. For many purposes, the letters, etc., are cut through completely; for transferring a pattern, as in embroidery, the lines of the pattern are often indicated by small holes. In wall decoration, etc., both these plans are employed. Different stencils are often used in the same design, each for a different color.

2. The coloring matter used in marking with a stencil-plate. C. T. Davis, Bricks and Tiles, p. 90.—3. In ceram., a preparation laid upon the biscuit to keep the oil used in transfer-printing or enameling from adhering to the surface; hence, the pattern traced by this preparation, reserving a panel or medallion of the unaltered color of the biscuit.

stencil[2] (sten′sil), n. [A var. of stanchel[1].] A door-post; a stanchion. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.] stenciler, stenciller (sten′sil-ėr), n. [< stencil[1] + -er[1].] One who works with a stencil, especially a decorative painter who applies patterns with a stencil.

stencil-pen (sten′sil-pen), n. A pricking-machine for perforating paper to form a stencil. It consists of a hollow stylus carrying a needle having a reciprocating motion. See electric pen, under pen[2].

stencil-plate (sten′sil-plāt), n. A stencil.

stend (stend), v. i. [< OF. estendre, F. étendre = It. stendere, < L. extendere, stretch forth, extend: see extend.] 1. To extend. [Prov. Eng.]—2. To walk with long steps.—3. To leap; bound; rear; spring. Also sten. [Scotch and prov. Eng.]

stend (stend), n. [< stend, v.] A leap; a spring; a long step or stride. Also sten. Burns, Tam Glen. [Scotch and prov. Eng.]

Stenelytra (stē-nel′i-trą), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of stenelytrus*: see stenelytrous.] In entom., in Latreille's system, the third family of heteromerous Coleoptera, divided into 5 tribes, corresponding to the old genera Helops, Cistela, Dircæa, Œdemera, and Mycterus.

stenelytrous (stē-nel′i-trus), a. [< NL. stenelytros*, < Gr. στενός, narrow, strait, + ἔλυτρον, a cover: see elytrum.] Having narrow elytra; of or pertaining to the Stenelytra.

Stenobothrus (sten-ō-both′rus), n. [NL. (Fischer, 1853), < Gr. στενός, narrow, strait, close, + βόθρος, a hole.] A notable genus of grasshoppers, of the family Acridiidæ, containing such species as S. maculipennis. This is a common grasshopper in most parts of the United States, and resembles the hateful grasshopper or Rocky Mountain locust (Melanoplus spretus) so closely that it has often been mistaken for the latter.

Stenobothrus maculipennis.
a, mature insect; b, pupa; c, larva. (All natural size.)

stenocardia (sten-ō-kär′di-ą), n. [NL., < Gr. στενός, narrow, + καρδία, the heart.] Angina pectoris.

Stenocarpus (sten-ō-kär′pus), n. [NL., so called from the usually narrow fruit; < Gr. στενός, narrow, + καρπός, fruit.] A name given by Robert Brown in 1810 to Cybele, a genus of apetalous trees, of the family Proteaceæ. It is characterized by umbellate flowers, and numerous ovules downwardly imbricated and ripening into seeds which are winged below. There are 14 species, 11 of which are natives of New Caledonia and 3 of Australia. They are trees with alternate or scattered leaves, which are entire or deeply divided into a few pinnate segments, and mostly yellow or red flowers with a somewhat irregular perianth-tube and a nearly globular recurved and at length divided border, disposed in terminal or axillary umbels which are solitary or clustered in a short raceme or a compound umbel, and are followed by coriaceous stalked follicles. Cybele sinuata is known in Queensland as tulip-tree and fire-tree. C. saligna, native of the same regions, is known as beefwood, silky oak, and meleyn.

stenocephalous (sten-ō-sef′a-lus), a. [< Gr. στενός, narrow, + κεφαλή, head.] Narrow-headed.

stenochromy (sten′ō-krō-mi), n. [< Gr. στενός, narrow, + χρῶμα, color.] The art of printing several colors at one impression. This is accomplished by various methods: (1) by dividing the ink-fountain of a printing-press into compartments, one for each color, and allowing the rollers to blend the inks on the distributing-table; (2) by cutting or trimming the rollers of a printing-press in such a way that only the desired parts may take and distribute ink—a different color for each roller or set of rollers; (3) by lithographic methods.

stenocoronine (sten″ō-kō-rō′nin), a. [< Gr. στενός, narrow, + κορώνη, a crow, also a crown.] Having narrow-crowned molars: noting the hippopotamine type of dentition, as distinguished from the eurycoronine or dinotherian. Falconer.

stenoderm (sten′ō-dėrm), n. [< Stenoderma.] A bat of the genus Stenoderma; a stenodermine.—Spectacled stenoderm, Stenoderma perspicillatum, a tropical American bat marked about the eyes as if wearing spectacles. Also called spectacled vampire.

Stenoderma (sten-ō-dėr′mä), n. [NL. (Geoffroy), < Gr. στενός, narrow, + δέρμα, skin, hide.] A genus of American phyllostomine bats, of the subfamily Phyllostomatinæ, having a short, broad, obtuse muzzle, short but distinct noseleaf, no tail, and the interfemoral membrane concave behind. S. achradophilum of the West Indies is so called from its fondness for the berries of Achras sapota, the naseberry.

Stenodermata (sten-ō-dėr′ma-tä), n. pl. [NL.: see Stenoderma.] A section of phyllostomine bats, of which the genera Stenoderma, Artibeus, and Centurio are leading forms. It includes about 20 species, of 9 genera, of Neotropical bats. See cut under Centurio.

stenodermatous (sten-ō-dėr′ma-tus), a. Pertaining to the Stenodermata, or having their characters; resembling a stenoderm.

stenodermine (sten-ō-dėr′min), a. and n. [< Stenoderma + -ine[1].] I. a. Having a contracted wing-membrane, as a bat; of or pertaining to the Stenodermata.

II. n. A stenodermine bat; a stenoderm.

Stenodus (sten′ō-dus), n. [NL. (Richardson, 1836), < Gr. στενός, narrow, + ὀδούς = E. tooth.] A genus of salmonoid fishes, related both to Salmo and to Coregonus, having an elongate body, projecting lower jaw, and weak teeth. The inconnu, or Mackenzie river salmon, is S. mackenzii, attaining a weight of 20 pounds or more, esteemed as a food-fish. See cut under inconnu.

stenograph (sten′ō-gråf), n. [< Gr. στενός, narrow, + γράφειν, write.] 1. A character used in stenography; a writing, especially any note or memorandum, in shorthand.

I saw the reporters' room, in which they redact their hasty stenographs. Emerson, Eng. Traits, p. 265.

2. A stenographic machine; a form of typewriter in which signs and marks of various kinds—dots, dashes, etc.—are used in place of ordinary letters. A number of different machines have been made, essentially type-writers operated by means of a keyboard.

stenograph (sten′ō-gråf), v. i. [< stenograph, n.] To write or represent by stenography. Ill. London News. [Rare.]

stenographer (stē-nog′ra-fėr), n. [< stenograph(y) + -er[1].] One who writes shorthand.

stenographic (sten-ō-graf′ik), a. [= F. sténographique; as stenograph-y + -ic.] Of or pertaining to stenography; shorthand.—Stenographic machine. Same as stenograph, 2.

stenographical (sten-ō-graf′i-kal), a. [< stenographic + -al.] Same as stenographic.

stenographically (sten-ō-graf'i-ka̤l-i), adv. In shorthand; by means of stenography.

stenographist (stē-nog'ra̤-fist), n. [< stenograph-y + -ist.] A stenographer; a shorthand-writer.

stenography (stē-nog'ra̤-fi), n. [= F. sténographie, < Gr. στενός, narrow, close, + -γραφία, < γράφειν, write.] The art of writing by means of brief signs which represent single sounds, groups of sounds, whole words, or groups of words; shorthand; brachygraphy: a generic term embracing all systems of shorthand, or brief writing.

> The cradle age
> Did throng the Seates, the Boxes, and the Stage
> So much that some by Stenography drew
> The plot: put it in print.
> Heywood, If you Know not Me (Works, ed. Pearson, I. 191).

> Sure 'tis Stenographie, everie Character a word, and here and there one for a whole sentence.
> Brome, Northern Lass, iii. 2.

Stenonian duct. See Stenson's duct.

stenopaic, stenopæic (sten-ō-pā'ik, -pē'ik), a. [< Gr. στενός, narrow, + ὀπή, an opening, + -ic.] Having a small or narrow opening.—Stenopaic slit, a narrow slit in an opaque lamina, placed before an eye to test the degree of its astigmatism by determining the difference of its refraction in different meridians.—Stenopaic spectacles, spectacles having an oval metal plate with a small central aperture.

Stenopelmatus (sten-ō-pel'ma̤-tus), n. [NL. (Burmeister, 1838), < Gr. στενός, narrow, + πέλμα, the sole of the foot.] A curious genus of Locustidæ, containing forms known in the western United States as sand-crickets. They are fierce-looking insects with large head and jaws, and live under stones or in burrows in the sand. They are carnivorous, and in New Mexico are commonly but erroneously reputed to be poisonous. Several species are known in the western Sand-cricket (Stenopelmatus fasciatus), about half natural size.

United States, of which S. fasciatus is the commonest. The genus is also represented in Mexico, South America, and Australia.

stenopetalous (sten-ō-pet'a̤-lus), a. [< Gr. στενός, narrow, + πέταλον, a leaf (petal): see petal.] In bot., having narrow petals; narrow-petaled.

stenophyllous (sten-ō-fil'us), a. [< Gr. στενόφυλλος, narrow-leaved, < στενός, narrow, close, + φύλλον, a leaf.] In bot., having narrow leaves.

Stenopsis (stē-nop'sis), n. [NL. (John Cassin, 1851), < Gr. στενός, narrow, + ὄψις, look, appearance.] A genus of South American setirostral goatsuckers, of the family Caprimulgidæ, containing numerous species, as S. cayennensis.

Stenorhynchinæ (sten″ō-ring-kī'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Stenorhynchus + -inæ.] A subfamily of Phocidæ, or seals, typified by the genus Stenorhynchus (or Ogmorhinus); the sterrincks. These seals exclusively inhabit southern seas, for Monachus, sometimes considered stenorhynchine, does not belong here. The only genera besides the type are Lobodon, Leptonychotes (or Leptonyx of Gray, not of Swainson), and Ommatophoca. As explained under sea-leopard, the current name is untenable. See cut under sea-leopard.

stenorhynchine (sten-ō-ring'kin), a. [< Stenorhynchus + -ine[1].] Of or pertaining to the Stenorhynchinæ.

stenorhynchous (sten-ō-ring'kus), a. [< Gr. στενός, narrow, + ῥύγχος, snout.] In ornith., narrow-billed; having a compressed beak.

Stenorhynchus (sten-ō-ring'kus), n. [NL., < Gr. στενός, narrow, + ῥύγχος, snout.] In zoöl.: (a) A genus of crabs, containing the British spider-crab, S. phalangium: same as Macropodia. Lamarck, 1819. (b) A genus of seals. See Stenorhynchinæ. F. Cuvier, 1826. (c) A name of other genera, of birds, reptiles, and insects respectively.

Steno's duct. See Stenson's duct.

stenosed (stē-nōst'), a. [< stenosis + -ed[2].] Characterized by stenosis; morbidly narrowed.

stenosis (stē-nō'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. στένωσις, a straitening, < στενοῦν, make narrow, straiten, < στενός, narrow, strait, close.] The pathological narrowing of a passage.

Stenostomata (sten-ō-stō'ma̤-tä), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. στενός, narrow, + στόμα(τ-), mouth.] A suborder of ctenophorans, containing the saccate, lobate, and teniate comb-jellies, collectively contrasted with the Eurystomata (which see). Most of the comb-bearers belong to this division.

stenostomatous (sten-ō-stom'a̤-tus), a. [NL., < Gr. στενός, narrow, + στόμα(τ-), mouth.] Having a small, narrow, or contracted mouth; not eurystomatous. Also stenostomous.

Stenotaphrum (sten-ō-taf'rum), n. [NL. (Trinius, 1820), so called in allusion to the alternate notches of the rachis, in which the flowers are embedded; < Gr. στενός, narrow, + τάφρος, a ditch or trench.] A genus of grasses, of the tribe Paniceæ. It is characterized by flowers with only three glumes or with a fourth smaller one, the spikelets acute, borne in small fascicles sessile or half-immersed in excavations along a flattened or angled rachis. There are 3 or 4 species, very widely dispersed along sea-shores of tropical regions, and most frequent on the islands of the Indian and South Pacific Oceans. They are creeping grasses sending up short ascending and often compressed branches with spreading, flat, or convolute leaves, and a terminal spike of flowers. S. Americanum, locally known as buffalo-grass, is valued as a means of covering shifting sands with a firm turf, and has proved useful as a fodder-plant, especially on Ascension Island. See St. Augustine grass (under saint[1]).

stenotelegraphy (sten″ō-tē-leg'ra̤-fi), n. [< Gr. στενός, narrow, + E. telegraphy.] A rapid telegraphic transmission of words and sentences by a system of shorthand.

stenoterous (stē-not'e̤-rus), a. [< Gr. στενότερος, compar. of στενός, narrow, strait, close.] Becoming more and more contracted from the center to the circumference, relatively to the radii represented.—Stenoterous map-projection. See projection.

stenotic (stē-not'ik), a. [< stenosis (-ot-) + -ic.] Pertaining to or of the nature of stenosis.

Stenotomus (stē-not'ō-mus), n. [NL. (Gill, 1865), < Gr. στενός, narrow, + τόμος, a cut, slice.] A genus of sparoid fishes, having the incisor teeth very narrow and entire. The type is S. chrysops, the common scup, scuppaug, or porgy. See cut under scup.

stenotype (sten'ō-tīp), n. [< Gr. στενός, narrow, + τύπος, type.] An ordinary type-letter—capital, lower-case, or italic—used to denote a shorthand character or outline. J. E. Munson, Dict. of Phonography, Int.

stenotypic (sten-ō-tip'ik), a. [< stenotype + -ic.] Of or pertaining to stenotypy; printed according to the rules of stenotypy.

stenotypy (sten'ō-tī-pi), n. [< stenotype + -y[3].] A method of representing or describing shorthand characters and outlines by ordinary type-letters. It is used for illustrating phonographic text-books and literature, and also as a system of shorthand for typewriters. Capital letters are used to represent stems; small or lower-case letters stand for adjuncts; and an inverted period shows where a vowel-sound or -sign comes in.

Stenson's duct. 1. The duct of the parotid gland (see parotid): so named from Nil Stenson, or Nicolaus Stenonianus, of Copenhagen (1638–86). Also Stenonian duct, Steno's duct.—2. See ducts or canals of Stenson, under duct.

stent[1] (stent), v. and n. An obsolete or dialectal variant of stint.

stent[2] (stent), v. t. [A var. of stend, ult. of extend, after the noun stent[2].] 1. To stretch.—2. To straiten.—3. To confine. [Scotch in all senses.]

stent[2] (stent), n. [A var. of stend, in def. 2 of extent: see stend, n., stent[2], v., and extent.] 1. A stretcher; a stenter (which see).—2. Extent; limit; in some English mining districts, the limits of a pitch or bargain.

stent[3] (stent), n. [Sc. also stant; < ME. stente, estent, taxation, valuation, < ML. extenta, valuation: see extent.] In Scots law, a valuation of property in order to taxation; a taxation; a tax.

stent[3] (stent), v. t. [< stent[3], n.] In Scots law, to assess; tax at a certain rate.

stent[4]† (stent), n. [ME. stent, stopping-place. Cf. Dan. stente, a stile; ult. < stand, v.] A stopping-place.

stent[5] (stent), n. [Origin obscure.] In mining, same as attle[1]. [Rare, Eng.]

stenter (sten'tėr), n. [< stent[2] + -er[1].] A machine or apparatus for stretching or stentering muslins and other thin fabrics. Also called stenter-hook.

stenter (sten'tėr), v. t. [< stenter, n.] To operate upon (thin cotton fabrics, as book-muslins, etc.) in a manner to impart to them a so-called elastic finish. This work as originally performed by hand was executed by holding the fabric edgewise by the selvages, and pulling it backward and forward while it was subjected to the action of heated air. The various modern machines and frames now employed are designed to produce the same effect upon the goods by an analogous movement and treatment in a current of heated air.

stenting (sten'ting), n. Same as stenton.

stent-master (stent'mȧs″tėr), n. A person appointed to allocate the stent or tax on the persons liable. [Scotch.]

stenton (sten'ton), n. A short heading at right angles to a cross-cut. [North of England coalfields.]

stentor (sten'tor), n. [< L. Stentor, < Gr. Στέντωρ, a Greek herald in the Trojan war, who, according to Homer, had a voice as loud as that of fifty other men together.] 1. A person having a very powerful voice.

> Brutish noises
> (For gain, lust, honour, in litigious prose),
> Are bellow'd out, and cracke the barbarous voices
> Of Turkish stentors.
> Chapman, Iliad, To the Reader, l. 222.

2. In mammal.: (a) The ursine howler, Mycetes ursinus, a platyrrhine monkey of South America; an alouate; any species of Mycetes. See cut under howler. (b) [cap.] The genus of howlers: same as Mycetes[1]. Geoffroy, 1812.—3. In Protozoa: (a) A trumpet-animalcule, or so-called funnel-like polyp. (b) [cap.] The typical genus of Stentoridæ, of elongate, trumpet-like, or infundibuliform figure, with rounded peristome. They are of large size, often brilliant color, social habits, and wide distribution, among the longest- and best-known of infusorians. They were formerly mistaken for or classed with polyps. S. polymorphus is a leading species; S. niger is another. See also cut under Infusoria.

Stentor polymorphus, twenty times natural size.

stentorian (sten-tō'ri-an), a. [< stentor + -i-an. Cf. LL. Stentoreus, Stentorian.] 1. Resembling the voice of Stentor (see stentor, etymology); extremely loud or powerful in sound.

> They echo forth in stentorian clamours.
> Sir T. Herbert, Travels, p. 326.

> He had a stentorian voice, and thundered it out.
> Aubrey, Lives (Ralph Kettle).

2. Able to utter a very loud sound: as, stentorian lungs.

Stentoridæ (sten-tor'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stentor + -idæ.] The trumpet-animalcules or funnel-like infusorians, a family of heterotrichous Infusoria, typified by the genus Stentor.

stentorin (sten'tō-rin), n. [< Stentor + -in[2].] The blue pigment or coloring matter of infusorians of the genus Stentor. E. R. Lankester, 1873.

stentorine (sten'tō-rin), a. [< Stentor + -ine[1].] Of or pertaining to the Stentoridæ.

stentorious† (sten-tō'ri-us), a. [< stentor + -i-ous. Cf. L. Stentoreus, < Gr. Στεντόρειος, pertaining to Stentor, < Στέντωρ, Stentor.] Stentorian. Fuller, Ch. Hist., X. iv. 61.

stentorophonic (sten″tō-rō-fon'ik), a. [< Gr. στεντορόφωνος, loud-voiced like Stentor, < Στέντωρ, Stentor (see stentor), + φωνή, voice.] Speaking or sounding very loud. S. Butler, Hudibras, III. i. 252.

stent-roll (stent'rōl), n. The cess-roll. [Scotch.]

Stenus (stē'nus), n. [NL. (Latreille, 1796), < Gr. στενός, narrow, strait.] A large and cosmopolitan genus of coleopterous insects, typical of the old family Stenidæ, which is now included in the Staphylinidæ. More than 200 species are known, all of small size and active habits, found usually on the banks of streams or ponds.

step (step), v.; pret. and pp. stepped or stept, ppr. stepping. [< (a) ME. steppen, stappen, < AS. steppan, stæppan = OFries. steppa = MD. steppen, stippen, stappen, D. stappen = MLG. stappen = OHG. stephan, stephen, steffen, stepfen, MHG. stepfen, also OHG. staphōn, MHG. staphen, staffen, stapfen, go, step; secondary forms (in part from the noun) of (b) ME. stapen, < AS. stapan* (not found in the inf., for which appears the form steppan or stæppan, above, which has the same pret. stōp, pp. stapen) = OS. stapan = OFries. stapa = MLG. stapen, go, advance; Teut. √ stap, appearing nasalized in stamp, q. v.; cf. Russ. stopa, footstep, sole of the foot; Skt. √ stambh, prop, make firm; ult. < √ sta, stand: see stand.] I. intrans. 1. To move the legs and feet as in walking; advance or recede by a movement of the foot or feet: as, to step forward; to step backward; to step up or down.

> Alayn, for Goddes banes,
> Stepe on thy feet; com out, man, al at anes.
> Chaucer, Reeve's Tale, l. 154.

> He pays you as surely as your feet hit the ground they step on. Shak., T. N., iii. 4. 306.

> 'Tis done—he steps into the welcome chaise.
> Cowper, Retirement, l. 391.

2. To go; walk; march; especially, to go a short distance: as, to step to a neighbor's house.

> He myghte nother stappe ne stonde tyl he a staf hadde.
> Piers Plowman (C), vii. 403.

Pray you, let s step in, and see a friend of mine.
Fletcher, Spanish Curate, iv. 6.

O, if you please, miss, would you step and speak to Mr. Jarndyce?
Dickens, Bleak House, xlv.

3. To advance as if by chance or suddenly; come (in).

By whose death he s stepp'd Into a great estate.
Shak., T. of A., ii. 2. 232.

The old poets step in to the assistance of the medalist.
Addison, Ancient Medals, i.

4. To walk slowly, gravely, or with dignity.

The meteor of a splendid season, she . . .
Stept thro' the stately minuet of those days.
Tennyson, Aylmer's Field.

5. To go in imagination; advance or recede mentally: as, to step back to the England of Elizabeth.

They are stepping almost three thousand years backward into the remotest antiquity.
Pope, Iliad, Pref.

To step aside. (a) To walk to a little distance; retire for the occasion. (b) To deviate from the right path; err.

To step aside is human.
Burns, To the Unco Guid.

To step awry. See awry.—To step out, to increase the length of the step and the rapidity of motion.

Jack or Donald marches away, . . . stepping out briskly to the tune of "The Girl I left behind me."
Thackeray, Vanity Fair, xxx.

II. trans. 1. To set; plant, as in stepping: as, step your foot on this thwart; he has never stepped foot in the city. [Familiar.]—2. To measure by stepping: as, to step off the distance.—3. To perform by stepping, as a dance: as, he stepped a stately galliard.—4. To place or set (two or more cutting-tools) in a tool-post or -rest in such manner that they simultaneously make successive cuts each respectively deeper than the preceding one, so that these cuts present the appearance of a series of ledges or steps.—5. Naut., to fix the foot of (a mast) in its step, as in readiness for setting sail.

step (step), n. [< ME. steppe, < AS. stæpe, a step, footstep, = MD. stappe, steppe, stap, step, D. stap = OHG. stapfo, staffo, MHG. G. stapfe (> It. staffa, a stirrup, > ult. E. staffier), a footstep, footprint; from the verb.] 1. A pace; a completed movement made in raising the foot and setting it down again, as in walking, running, or dancing.

I'll . . . turn two mincing steps Into a manly stride.
Shak., M. of V., iii. 4. 67.

An inadvertent step may crush the snail.
Cowper, Task, vi. 564.

Hence—2. In the plural, walk; passage; course or direction in which one goes by walking.

Conduct my steps to find the fatal tree In this deep forest.
Dryden, Æneid, vi. 276.

But not by thee my steps shall be, For ever and for ever.
Tennyson, A Farewell.

3. A support for the foot in ascending or descending: as, steps cut in a glacier; a structure or an appliance used to facilitate mounting from one level to another, whether alone or as one of a series: as, a stone step (a block of stone having a horizontal surface for the foot); a step of a staircase (one of the gradients composed of the tread and riser taken together); the step of a ladder (one of the rungs or rounds, or one of the treads or foot-pieces in a step-ladder).

The breadth of every single step or stair [should] be never less than one foot.
Sir H. Wotton, Reliquiæ, p. 36.

An hundred winding steps convey That conclave to the upper day.
Scott, Marmion, ii. 33.

On the step of the altar, in front of the railing, were kneeling a band of the Fratres Penitentiæ.
C. E. Norton, Travel and Study in Italy, p. 6.

Specifically—(a) pl. A step-ladder. Also called pair of steps and set of steps. (b) A foot-piece for entering or alighting from a vehicle.

4. The space passed over or measured by one movement of the foot, as in walking; the distance between the feet in walking when both feet are on the ground; a half-pace.

If you move a step Beyond this ground you tread on, you are lost.
Fletcher, Spanish Curate, v 3.

The gradus, a Roman measure, may be translated a step, or the half of a passus or pace.
Arbuthnot.

5. An inconsiderable space; a short distance; a distance easily walked.

'Tis but a step, sir, just at the street's end.
Cowper, To Joseph Hill, Esq.

It is but a step from here to the Wells, and we can walk there.
Thackeray, Book of Snobs, xxxv.

6. Gradation; degree.

The Turkes . . . studie their prophane Diuinitie and Law, and haue among them nine seuerall steps or degrees vnto the highest dignitie.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 313.

7. Degree in progress or advance; particularly, a forward move; gain or advantage; promotion; rise; a grade, as of rank.

Every age makes a step unto the end of all things.
Sir T. Browne, To a Friend.

To earn a garter or a step in the peerage.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., xxii.

"General Tufto . . . and I were both shot in the same leg at Talavera." "Where you got your step," said George [punning].
Thackeray, Vanity Fair, xxviii.

The Silver Bill of 1890 . . . was declared to be a long step toward the goal of free coinage of silver.
New York Times, Jan. 15, 1891.

8. Print or impression of the foot; footprint; footstep; track.

And zit apperen the Steppes of the Asses feet, in 3 places of the Degrees, that ben of fulle harde Ston.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 81.

He seigh the steppes brode of a leoun.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 829.

9. Gait; manner of walking; sound of the step; foot; footfall: as, to hear a step at the door.

A foot more light, a step more true, Ne'er from the heath-flower dash'd the dew.
Scott, L. of the L., i. 18.

10. A proceeding, or one of a series of proceedings; measure; action: as, a rash step; to take prompt steps to prevent something.

It is no vicious blot, murder, or foulness, No unchaste action, or dishonour'd step, That hath deprived me of your grace and favour.
Shak., Lear, i. 1. 231.

Beware of desp'rate steps. The darkest day, Live till to-morrow, will have pass'd away.
Cowper, The Needless Alarm.

11. Naut., a socket of wood or metal, or, in large ships, a solid platform on the keelson, supporting the heel of a mast.—12. In carp., any piece of timber having the foot of another fixed upright in it.—13. In mach.: (a) The lower brass of a journal-box or pillow-block. (b) A socket or bearing for the lower pivot of a spindle or vertical shaft.—14. In music: (a) Same as degree, whether of the scale or of the staff. (b) The interval between two successive degrees of the scale, degrees of the staff, or keys of the keyboard. In the scale, a whole step is a major second, or tone, and a half-step a minor second, or semitone; and the same nomenclature is transferred to the staff and the keyboard. The successive steps between the normal tones of a scale, whether whole or half, are collectively called diatonic; while intervals involving other tones are called chromatic.—Out of step, not keeping step.—Pair of steps, set of steps, a step-ladder, especially one for indoor use.—Step by step. (a) By gradual and regular process. Locke, Human Understanding, ii. 9. (b) With equal pace; at the same rate of progress. Shak., Tempest, iii. 3. 78.—To break step. See break.—To keep step, to walk or march in unison; put the right and left foot forward alternately at the same moment with the corresponding foot of another person: often followed by with.—To keep step to, to walk, march, or dance in time to: as, to keep step to the music.—To take a step, or to take steps, to make a movement in a certain direction, either actually or as beginning any business; take initiatory measures; institute proceedings.

Steps in Timber-work.

step- (step). [< ME. step-, < AS. steóp-, as in steóp-bearn, stepchild (-bairn), steóp-cild, stepchild, steóp-fæder, stepfather, steóp-módor, stepmother, etc., = OFries. stiap-, stiep- = D. stief- = MLG. stēf-, LG. steef- = OHG. stiuf-, stiof-, MHG. G. stief- = Icel. stjūp- = Sw. stjuf-, styf- = Dan. stif-, stiv-, sted-: prob. lit. 'orphaned,' as in AS. steópcild, steópbearn, stepchild, steópsunu, stepson, etc., which are prob. the oldest compounds, the correlative compounds, steópfæder, stepfather, etc., being formed later, when the prefix steóp- was taken appar. in some such sense as 'subsequent,' 'nominal,' or 'in law'; < steópan*, found only as in comp., and in the secondary weak form, in comp. ā-stȳpan*, āstēpan*, in pp. pl. āsteápte, āstēpte, orphaned, = OHG. stiufan, ar-stiufan, bi-stiufan, deprive of parents, orphan.] A prefix used in composition before father, mother, son, daughter, brother, sister, child, etc., to indicate that the person spoken of is a connection only by the marriage of a parent.

step-back (step'bak), a. [Irreg. < step- + *back*1.] Noting the relationship a deceased person bears to his widow's child by a second marriage. [Rare.]

Richard is Henry's step-back father.
The Nation, Aug. 23, 1888, p. 153.

stepbairn (step'bārn), n. [< ME. steopbern, < AS. steópbearn (= Icel. stjūpbarn = Sw. styfbarn = Dan. stybarn), < steóp-, step-, + bearn, child: see step- and *barn*2, bairn.] A stepchild. [Obsolete or Scotch.]

step-bit (step'bit), n. A notched key-bit.

step-box (step'boks), n. A box or casing to inclose the base of an upright spindle or shaft-step, to retain the shaft in place and furnish a bearing, and to hold the lubricant.

stepbrother (step'bruᵺ'ėr), n. [< ME. step brother, stepbroder, < AS. steópbrōthor* (= D. stiefbroeder = MHG. stiefbruoder, G. stiefbruder = Sw. styfbroder = Dan. stifbroder), < steóp-, step-, + brōthor, brother: see step- and brother.] One's stepfather's or stepmother's son by a former marriage.

stepchild (step'child), n. [< ME. stepchild, < AS. steópcild (= OFries. steifkind = D. stiefkind = OHG. stiufchint, MHG. stiefkint, G. stiefkind), < steóp-, step-, + cild, child: see step- and child.] The child of one's husband or wife by a former marriage.

step-country (step'kun'tri), n. A country that rears or receives and protects one born in another country. The speaker in the following quotation is an Italian brought up in Sweden:

Farewell, my father—farewell, my step-country.
Disraeli, Contarini Fleming, ii. 4.

step-cover (step'kuv'ėr), n. On a vehicle, a lid or protecting cover over a step. It is usually so fitted that the opening of the door moves the cover to one side and uncovers the step, or causes it, by a hinge or other device, to turn back out of the way.

step-cut (step'kut), n. Same as trap-cut (which see, under cut).

stepdame (step'dām), n. [Formerly also stepdam, < step- + dame.] A stepmother.

Phryxus . . . with his sister Helle fled from their cruell stepdam Ino.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 341.

step-dance (step'dâns), n. A dance marked by originality, variety, or difficulty in the steps; a dance in which the steps are more important than the figure, as a hornpipe or a clog-dance: usually a pas seul.

Orth'ris began rowlin' his eyes an' crackin' his fingers an' dancin' a step-dance for to impress the Headman.
Rudyard Kipling, The Taking of Lungtungpen.

stepdaughter (step'dâ'tėr), n. [< ME. stepdoughter, stepdoghter, stepdougter, stepdowter, < AS. steópdohtor (= D. stiefdochter = MLG. stēfdochter = MHG. stiuftochter, G. stieftochter = Icel. stjūpdōttir = Sw. styfdotter = Dan. stifdatter), < steóp-, step-, + dohtor, daughter: see step- and daughter.] A daughter of one's husband or wife by a former marriage.

After hir com the stepdoughter of Cleodalis, that hight also Gonnore stepet, a. A Middle English form of *steep*1.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 453.

stepfather (step'fä'ᵺėr), n. [< ME. stepfader, stepfadyr, corruptly stifadre, < AS. steópfæder (= OFries. stiapfeder, stiepfader = D. stiefvader = MLG. stēfvadere = OHG. stiuffater, stioffater, MHG G. stiefvater = Icel. stjūpfadir = Sw. styffader = Dan. stiffader), < steóp-, step-, + fæder, father: see step- and father.] A man who is the husband of one's mother, but is not one's father.

I schel the telle altogadre, Beten Ichaue me stifadre.
Beves of Hamtoun, l. 464.

"He was delighted at his mother's marriage." "Odd, for he knew already what a stepfather was."
Jean Ingelow, Off the Skelligs, xvii.

step-fault (step'fâlt), n. One of a series of small, nearly parallel faults by which strata have been dislocated so as to occupy a position resembling a series of steps or stairs.

step-gage (step'gāj), n. A gage, arranged in the form of steps, for testing and correcting fixed caliper-gages, etc. See cut under *gage*2.

step-grate (step'grāt), n. See *grate*2.

stephane (stef'a-nē), n. [< Gr. στεφάνη, the brim of a helmet, a stephane (see def.), crown. Cf. στέφανος, a wreath, garland, crown: see stephanos.] In Gr. archæol., a head-dress or ornament consisting of a band or coronet typically high in the middle, over the brow, and diminishing toward either side of the head. It is characteristic of the goddess Hera, though often represented as worn by other goddesses, as well as by mortals, and is frequently ornamented with an anthemion, as in the example figured on the following page.

stephanial (ste-fā'ni-al), a. [< stephanion + -al.] Of or pertaining to the stephanion: as, a stephanial point.

stephanic (ste-fan'ik), a. [< Gr. στέφανος, a wreath, crown: see stephanos.] Same as stephanial.

Hera Ludovisi, wearing Stephane.

The arch of the top of the cranium is markedly flat, giving the stephanic region a somewhat angular appearance. H. O. Forbes, Eastern Archipelago, p. 262.

stephanion (ste-fā′ni-on), n.; pl. stephania (-ä). [NL., < Gr. στεφάνιον, dim. of στέφανος, a wreath: see stephanos.] In craniom., the point where the coronal suture crosses the temporal ridge. An upper stephanion and a lower are distinguished, corresponding to the upper and lower temporal ridges. See cut under craniometry.

stephanite (stef′an-īt), n. [Named after Stephan, Archduke of Austria.] A native sulphid of silver and antimony, a mineral of iron-black color and metallic luster. It crystallizes in the orthorhombic system, and is often pseudohexagonal through twinning. Also called black silver or brittle silver ore.

stephanome (stef′a-nōm), n. [For stephanonome*, < Gr. στέφανος, crown (corona), + νέμειν, take, νόμος, law.] An instrument for measuring the angular dimensions of fog-bows—for example, as observed at mountain observatories. See the quotation.

This instrument, named a stephanome, consists of a graduated bar, at one end of which the eye is placed, and in which slides a cross-bar carrying certain projections. With its aid faint objects, for which a sextant would be useless, may be measured to within 5 minutes. Phil. Mag., 5th ser., XXIX. 454.

Stephanophorus (stef-a-nof′ō-rus), n. [NL. (Strickland, 1841), < Gr. στεφανοφόρος, < στέφανος, crown, + φέρειν = E. bear[1].] 1. In ornith., a monotypic Neotropical genus of tanagers, having a short, turgid, almost pyrrhuline bill. S. leucocephalus is bluish-black, with the lesser wing-coverts blue, the vertical crest crimson, the hindhead silky-white, the forehead, lores, and chin black. The length is seven inches. The bird is confined to southern Brazil, Paraguay, Uruguay, and northern parts of the Argentine Republic.

Stephanophorus leucocephalus.

2. In entom., a genus of coleopterous insects. Chevrolat, 1873.

stephanos (stef′a-nos), n.; pl. stephanoi (-noi). [< Gr. στέφανος, a wreath, crown, < στέφειν, put around, encircle, wreathe, crown. Cf. stemma.] In Gr. archæol.: (a) A wreath awarded as a prize to the victor in a public contest, or as a token of honor, especially in recognition of some public service. Such wreaths were sometimes of natural leaves, as of the olive, laurel, oak, parsley, or pine, and sometimes of leaves of metal, as gold, and their award was a very usual distinction among the Greeks. In this sense very commonly expressed by the translators as 'crown,' as in the famous oration "On the Crown" of Demosthenes. (b) A head-ornament or crown akin to the stephane, from which it differs in that it preserves the same height all round, instead of diminishing toward the sides. See cut in preceding column.

Stephanos (b).
Head of Hera on Silver Stater of Elis; 5th century B. C.

Stephanotis (stef-a-nō′tis), n. [NL. (Thouars, 1806), in allusion to the corona of five flattish petaloid bodies or auricles; < Gr. στεφανωτίς, fit for a crown, < στέφανος, a crown.] 1. A genus of asclepiadaceous plants, belonging to the tribe Tylophoreæ, distinguished from Marsdenia by its white salver-shaped or funnelform corolla. There are about fifteen species, natives of Madagascar, the Malay archipelago and southern China, and of Cuba. They are smooth shrubby twiners, often high-climbing, bearing opposite deep-green fleshy or coriaceous leaves, and beautiful fragrant waxy flowers in umbelliform cymes between the petioles. The cylindrical corolla-tube is dilated at the base and often again at the throat, and spreads into five overlapping oblique lobes. The fruit consists of two thick horizontal follicles, with numerous comose seeds. S. floribunda is a favorite evergreen greenhouse climber, commonly known by its generic name stephanotis, also as waxflower, and sometimes, from its native country, as Madagascar jasmine or chaplet-flower.

2. [l. c.] A plant of this genus.

step-ladder (step′lad″ėr), n. A ladder having flat steps, or treads, in place of rungs, and usually provided with an adjustable supporting frame.

stepmother (step′mu*ᴛʜ*″ėr), n. [< ME. stepmoder, stepmodyr, < AS. stēopmōdor (= OFries. stiepmoder = D. stiefmoeder = MLG. stēfmoder = OHG. stiufmuoter, MHG. stiefmuoter, G. stiefmutter = Icel. stjūpmōdhir = Sw. styfmoder = Dan. stifmoder), < steóp-, step-, + mōdor, mother.] 1. A woman who is the wife of one's father, but is not one's mother.

> No, be assured you shall not find me, daughter,
> After the slander of most stepmothers, > Evil-eyed unto you. Shak., Cymbeline, i. 1. 71.

2. A horny filament shooting up by the side of the nail. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]—3. The pansy. Britten and Holland, Eng. Plant Names. [Prov. Eng.]—Stepmother's blessing, a hangnail. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

stepmotherly (step′mu*ᴛʜ*″ėr-li), a. [< stepmother + -ly[1].] Pertaining to or befitting a stepmother; hence, figuratively, harsh or neglectful: in allusion to the behavior popularly attributed to stepmothers.

step-parent (step′pār″ent), n. A stepfather or stepmother.

steppe (step), n. [= F. D. G. Dan. steppe = Sw. stepp, < Russ. stepĭ, a waste, heath, steppe.] A more or less level tract devoid of trees: a name given to certain parts of European and Asiatic Russia, of which the most characteristic feature is the absence of forests. The word steppe was introduced into the scientific literature of western Europe by Humboldt, in whose "Ansichten der Natur"—a work widely circulated, and translated into all the most important European languages—there is a chapter entitled "Steppen und Wüsten" (Steppes and Deserts). The steppe region in Europe begins on the borders of Holland, and extends through northern Germany—where such lands are called Heiden (heaths)—into Russia in Europe, and beyond the Ural Mountains almost to the Pacific Ocean, for a distance of about 4,500 miles. Although the steppes are in general characte ized by the lack of an arboreal and the presence of a grassy vegetation, and by a pretty uniformly level surface, there are many breaks in this botanical and topographical monotony, in the form of forests extending along the streams, large patches of dense and sometimes tall shrubbery, lakes (both fresh and saline), rolling hills, ridges, barren sands, and patches covered with saline efflorescence. The general character of the region is pastoral, and the population (especially of the Asiatic steppes) nomadic; but all this has been to a considerable extent interfered wi h by the spread of Russian civilization and the domination of Russian authority. The Russian and Siberian steppes pass southward into the deserts of central Asia, and northward into the tundra region of the extreme north. Humboldt, in the work named above, occasionally uses the term steppe in describing the pampas and llanos of South America, and the plains, prairies, and barrens of the northern division of the New World, and his example has been followed to a certain extent by other physical geographers writing in regard to America; but the word steppe is nowhere in popular use except as to places where Russian is the dominating language.

Some of the Asiatic Steppes are grassy plains; others are covered with succulent, evergreen, articulated soda-plants: many glisten from a distance with flakes of exuded salt which cover the clayey soil, not unlike in appearance to fresh fallen snow. Humboldt, Aspects of Nature (trans.).

Steppe murrain, rinderpest.

stepped (stept), a. [< step + -ed[2].] 1. Formed in or forming a step or a series of steps.—2. Supported, as a vertical shaft, by a step, step-like bearing, or shoe.—Stepped cone. Same as cone-pulley.—Stepped gable, gage, gearing. See the nouns.—Stepped pyramid, a form of pyramid of which the faces, instead of continuing in one slope from base to apex, Stepped Pyramid, Sakkarah, Egypt.

are formed in a more or less even series of enormous steps. Some of the oldest of the Egyptian pyramids present this form.

stepper (step′ėr), n. [< step + -er[1].] One who or that which steps (with a certain gait or carriage expressed or implied); specifically, a fast horse: often in composition: as, a high-stepper; that horse is a good stepper.

> The mare 's a stepper, and Phil King knows how to handle the ribbons. The Century, XXXVIII. 377.

stepping (step′ing), n. 1. Collectively, the steps of a joint in which the parts at their junction form a series of reëntrant angles, thus resembling a flight of steps, as in the fitting of the doors to the front frames of safes.—2. Collectively, a series of step-like bearings, as the bearings for the spindles of a spinning-frame or spooling-machine, or of a ball-winding machine.

stepping-point (step′ing-point), n. Same as bearding, 1.

stepping-stone (step′ing-stōn), n. 1. A raised stone in a stream or in a swampy place designed to save the feet in walking.—2. A horse-block. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]—3. An aid or means by which an end may be accomplished or an object gained; an assistance to progress.

stepsister (step′sis″tėr), n. [< ME. stepsystyr (= D. stiefzuster = MHG. G. stiefschwester = Sw. styfsyster = Dan. stifsoster); < step- + sister.] One's stepfather's or stepmother's daughter by a former marriage.

stepson (step′sun), n. [< ME. stepsone, stepsune, < AS. steópsunu (= D. stiefzoon = MLG. stēfsone = OHG. stiufsun, MHG. stiefsun, G. stiefsohn = Icel. stjūpson = Sw. styfson = Dan. stifsön), < steóp-, step-, + sunu, son.] A son of one's husband or wife by a former marriage.

step-stone (step′stōn), n. Same as stepping-stone. [Rare.]

step-vein (step′vān), n. In mining, a vein filling a fissure, consisting alternately of flats, or horizontal, and steeply inclined or vertical parts, resembling in form a flight of steps.

-ster. [< ME. -ster, -stre, -estre, -estere, < AS. -estre, used fem. of -ere, as in webbestre, a female weaver (E. webster), fithelstre, a female fiddler, witegestre, a female prophet, etc.; = D. -ster, as in spinster, a female spinner (= E. spinster), etc., = LL. -ster, as in poetaster (see -aster, poetaster, criticaster, etc.), also in oleaster; < Indo-Eur. -as- + -tar.] A termination denoting occupation, as in maltster, gamester, spinster, songster, etc. In the earliest times, and up to about the end of the thirteenth century, it was generally the sign of the feminine gender, corresponding to the masculine -ere or -er. In the fourteenth century it began to give place as a feminine termination to the Norman -ess, with which it was later often combined, as in seamstress, sempstress, songstress, or, if it survived, was used chiefly as masculine, and took on new meanings of contempt or depreciation, as in trickster, gamester, punster, etc., or indicated simple agency or existence, as in deemster, doomster, huckster, tapster, teamster, upholster, roadster, youngster, etc. Some of the older nouns with this suffix survive as surnames, as Baxter, Webster, Sangster, Dempster, etc.

ster. An abbreviation of sterling[2].

steraclet, n. [Early mod. E., also sterracle, sterakel; < ME. steracle; origin obscure.] A strange thing, sight, or performance; a prank.

> Whan thou art sett upon the pynnacle,
> Thou xalt ther pleyn a qweynt steracle,
> Or ellys shewe a grett meracle, > Thysself ffrom hurte thou save.
> Coventry Mysteries, p. 208. (Halliwell.)

stercobilin (stėr′kō-bil-in), n. [< L. stercus (stercor-), dung, + bilis, bile, + -in[2].] The brown coloring matter of the feces.

stercoraceous (stėr-kō-rā′shius), a. [< L. stercus (-cor-), dung, + -aceous.] 1. Pertaining to, composed of, or in any way resembling dung, ordure, or feces; excrementitious; fecal.—2. In entom., frequenting or feeding on dung, as many beetles, flies, etc.—Stercoraceous vomiting, in pathol., vomiting of fecal matter.

stercoræmia, n. See stercoremia.

★stercoral (stėr′kō-ral), a. and n. [< L. stercus (-or-), dung, + -al.] I. a. Of or pertaining to feces; stercoraceous.

II.† n. Dung; excrement.

Stercoranism (stėr′kō-ran-izm), n. [< Stercoran-ist + -ism.] In eccles. hist., the doctrine or belief of the Stercoranists. Also Stercorianism, Stercorarianism.

Stercoranist (stėr′kō-ran-ist), n. [= F. stercoraniste, < ML. Stercoranistæ, < L. stercus (-or-), dung.] A name applied by opponents to various persons in the church who were said to hold a grossly materialistic conception of the Lord's Supper. They were alleged to believe that the Lord's body was, like other food consumed, digested and evacuated. The word was first used by Cardinal Humbert in 1054. Also Stercorianist, Stercorarian.

stercorareous (stėr-kō-rā′rē-us), a. Same as stercoraceous.

Stercorarian (stėr-kō-rā′ri-an), n. [< L. stercorarius, pertaining to dung (< stercus (-or-), dung), + -an.] Same as Stercoranist.

Stercorarianism (stėr-kō-rā′ri-an-izm), n. [< Stercorarian + -ism.] Same as Stercoranism.

Stercorariinæ (stėr-kō-rā-ri-ī′nē), n. pl. [NL., < Stercorarius + -inæ.] The dung-hunters, a subfamily of Laridæ, typified by the genus Stercorarius: same as Lestridinæ. See cuts under skua and Stercorarius.

Stercorarius (stėr-kō-rā′ri-us), n. [NL. (Brisson, 1760), < L. stercorarius, pertaining to dung: see stercorary.] The dung-hunters, skuas, or jägers, a genus of Laridæ, typical of the subfamily Stercorariinæ. Also called Lestris. The name is used (a) for all the species of the subfamily; (b) for the larger species, as S. skua, the smaller being called Lestris (see cut under skua); (c) for the smaller species, S. pomatorhinus, S. parasiticus, and others, the larger being called Buphagus or Megalestris.

Parasitic Jäger (Stercorarius parasiticus).

stercorary (stėr′kō-rā-ri), a. and n. [< L. stercorarius, pertaining to dung (ML. neut. stercorarium*, a place for dung), < stercus (stercor-), dung.] I. a. Pertaining or relating to dung or manure; consisting of dung. D. G. Mitchell, Wet Days, p. 17.

II. n.; pl. stercoraries (-riz). A place, properly secured from the weather, for containing dung.

stercorate (stėr′kō-rāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. stercorated, ppr. stercorating. [< L. stercoratus, pp. of stercorare, dung, manure, < stercus (-or-), dung.] To manure or dung. Scott, Pirate, iv.

stercorate† (stėr′kō-rāt), n. [< stercorate, v.] Dung; excrement. Imp. Dict.

stercoration† (stėr-kō-rā′shon), n. [< L. stercoratio(n-), a dunging or manuring, < stercorare, pp. stercoratus, dung, manure, < stercus (-or-), dung.] The act of manuring with dung. Evelyn, To Mr. Wotton.

stercoremia, stercoræmia (stėr-kō-rē′mi-ą), n. [NL. stercoræmia, < L. stercus (-or-), dung, + Gr. αἷμα, blood.] Contamination of the blood from retained feces.

Stercorianism, Stercorianist (stėr-kō′ri-an-izm, -ist). Same as Stercoranism, Stercoranist.

stercoricolous (stėr-kō-rik′ō-lus), a. [< L. stercus (-or-), dung, + colere, inhabit.] Inhabiting excrement; dwelling in dung. Encyc. Brit., XIX. 842.

Stercorist (stėr′kō-rist), n. [< L. stercus (-or-), dung, + -ist.] A Stercoranist.

stercorite (stėr′kō-rīt), n. [< L. stercus (-or-), dung, + *-ite*2.] A hydrous phosphate of ammonium and sodium, found in guano on the island Ichaboe, off the west coast of Africa.

stercory† (stėr′kō-ri), n. [< L. stercus (-or-), dung.] Excrement; dung. Mir. for Mags., III. 246.

Sterculia (stėr-kū′li-ą), n. [NL. (Linnæus, 1747), so called from the fetid flowers or fruit of certain species; < L. Sterculius, a deity so named, < stercus (stercor-), excrement.] 1. A genus of plants, type of the family Sterculiaceæ and of the tribe Sterculieæ. It is characterized by a stamen-column usually with fifteen anthers crowded without regular order, a five-celled ovary with two or more ovules in each cell, and a fruit of distinct spreading dehiscent carpels. There are about 90 species, natives of warm climates, especially of tropical Asia. They are most commonly large trees, with simple feather-veined leaves, and unisexual flowers in drooping panicles, with a colored bell-shaped calyx, and a fruit of five radiating woody follicles opening on the upper edge; but none of these characters is universal. Their inner bark is composed of a tough fiber which is not affected by moisture, and is in many species a valuable material for cordage, mats, bags, paper, or tow for upholstering. Their seeds are filled with an oil which may be used for lamps, and are slightly acrid but often edible. They are mucilaginous, and often exude an abundance of gum resembling gum tragacanth, swelling into a jelly in cold water without dissolving. S. urens, and perhaps other species, furnish a share of the Indian tragacanth, or kuteera gum; S. Tragacantha of western Africa yields the African or Senegal tragacanth. S. guttata is an East Indian tree, the bark of the younger parts of which yields a strong white fiber. S. Balanghas, of the same region, yields the pigment cassoumba used by the natives of Amboyna. For S. villosa, see oadal. S. quadrifida, the calool of eastern and northern Australia, produces clusters of brilliant scarlet fruits, each with ten or eleven black seeds resembling filberts in taste, and eaten as a substitute for them. S. Chicha, the chicha or panama, yields seeds eaten as nuts in Brazil and northward; it is a handsome tree with yellowish purple-spotted flowers. S. fœtida (see stavewood) is the source of some native remedies in Java. Firmiana platanifolia (Sterculia platanifolia of Linnæus filius), of Japan and China, has been called sultan's parasol. See mahoe and cassoumba.

Sterculia fœtida.
a, flower; b, ovary; c, stamens; d, fruit.
From "Botanicæ dissertationes" of Cavanilles, and dry specimen.

2. In entom., a genus of coleopterous insects. Laporte, 1835.

Sterculiaceæ (stėr-kū-li-ā′sē-ē), n pl. [NL. (Ventenat, 1804), < Sterculia + -aceæ.] A family of dicotyledonous choripetalous plants, of the order Malvales, related to the Malvaceæ and Bombacaceæ, resembling the former in its variety of habit and foliage and its frequently monadelphous stamens. It includes about 660 species, belonging to 51 genera, classed in 8 tribes, natives mostly of the tropics, or occurring farther to the south in Africa and Australia.

sterculiaceous (stėr-kū-li-ā′shius), a. Of or pertaining to the plant family Sterculiaceæ.

sterculiad (stėr-kū′li-ad), n. A plant of the family Sterculiaceæ. Lindley.

Sterculieæ (stėr-kū-lī′ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (A. P. de Candolle, 1824), < Sterculia + -eæ.] A tribe of plants, belonging to the family Sterculiaceæ. It is characterized by unisexual or polygamous flowers without petals, commonly with a colored calyx, and five to fifteen anthers adnate at the summit of a long or short column of united filaments, and either crowded or arranged in a definite series or a ring. It includes 12 genera, of which Sterculia is the type. They are natives mostly of tropical Asia and Africa, extending into Australia and Java. See Sterculia.

stere1†. A Middle English form of *steer*1, *steer*2, *stir*1, *stoor*2.

stere2 (stār), n. [= F. stère, < Gr. στερεός, solid, cubic; prob. < √ sta as in ἱστάναι, stand.] A cubic meter: the French unit for solid measure, equal to 35.31 cubic feet. The word stere is but little used, except with reference to cordwood, cubic meter being the expression in universal use for the solid unit.

Sterelmintha† (ster-el-min′thą), n. pl. [NL., irreg. < Gr. στερεός, stiff, hard, solid, + ἕλμινς (ἑλμινθ-), a worm.] The parenchymatous endoparasitic worms, having no intestinal canal. They formed one of two main divisions, the other being Cœlelmintha, into which the Entozoa were divided by Owen in 1843, corresponding to the parenchymatous intestinal worms or vers intestinaux parenchymateux of Cuvier. They are such as the cestoid and trematoid worms, or tapes and flukes sterelminthic (ster-el-min′thik), a. [< Sterelmintha + -ic.] Of or pertaining to the Sterelmintha.

sterelminthous (ster-el-min′thus), a. Same as sterelminthic.

stereo- (ster′ē-ō, also, especially in trade use, stē′rē-ō). An element of Greek origin, meaning 'solid.'

stereo (ster′ē-ō), n. and a. [Short for stereotype.] Same as stereotype: as, a stereo plate; stereo apparatus.

stereobate (ster′ē-ō-bāt), n. [= F. stéréobate, < Gr. στερεός, solid, firm, + βατός, verbal adj. of βαίνειν, go, step: see *base*2.] In arch., the substructure, foundation, or solid platform upon which a building is erected. In columnar buildings it includes the stylobate, which is the uppermost step or platform of the foundation upon which the columns stand.

Stereobate of the Parthenon, east front (illustrating the convex curvature of the best Greek Doric temple-foundations).

stereobatic (ster″ē-ō-bat′ik), a. [< stereobate + -ic.] Of, pertaining to, or resembling a stereobate; of the character of a stereobate. Encyc. Brit., II. 408.

stereoblastula (ster″ē-ō-blas′tū-lą), n.; pl. stereoblastulæ (-lē). [NL., < Gr. στερεός, solid, + βλαστός, a germ.] A solid blastula; a blastula in which there is no cavity. J. A. Ryder.

stereochrome (ster′ē-ō-krōm), n. [< Gr. στερεός, solid, + χρῶμα, color.] A stereochromic picture. See stereochromy.

stereochromic (ster″ē-ō-krō′mik), a. [< stereochrom-y + -ic.] Of or pertaining to stereochromy; produced by stereochromy.—Stereochromic process, the method of painting by stereochromy.

stereochromy (ster′ē-ō-krō-mi), n. [< Gr. στερεός, solid, + χρῶμα, color.] A method of painting in which water-glass serves as the connecting medium between the color and its substratum.

stereo-clumps (ster′ē-ō-klumps), n. pl. [< stereo + clump.] Sectional blocks of type-metal or wood, usually three fourths of an inch high, made of different sizes so that they can be combined to fit and uphold any size of stereotype plate. When clamps are added, they keep the plate secure in the process of printing. [Eng.]

stereo-electric (ster′ē-ō-ē-lek′trik), a. [< Gr. στερεός, solid, + E. electric.] Noting the electric current which ensues when two solids, especially two metals, as bismuth and antimony, are brought together at different temperatures.

stereogastrula (ster′ē-ō-gas′trō-lą), n.; pl. stereogastrulæ (-lē). [NL., < Gr. στερεός, solid, + NL. gastrula, q. v.] A solid gastrula; a form of gastrula in which no cleavage-cavity is developed. J. A. Ryder.

Stereognathus (ster-ē-og′nā-thus), n. [NL. (Charlesworth, 1854), < Gr. στερεός, solid, + γνάθος, jaw.] A genus of fossil monotrematous mammals from the Lower Oölite of Stonesfield, England. The original fossil was named S. oölitieus.

★stereogram (ster′ē-ō-gram), n. [< Gr. στερεός, solid, + γράμμα, a writing, < γράφειν, write: see *gram*2.] A diagram or picture which represents objects in such a way as to give the impression of relief or solidity; specifically, a double photographic picture or a pair of pictures mounted together for the stereoscope; a stereoscopic picture.

stereograph (ster′ē-ō-gràf), n. [< Gr. στερεός, solid, + γράφειν, write.] Same as stereogram.

stereographic (ster″ē-ō-graf′ik), a. [= F. stéréographique; as stereograph-y + -ic.] Showing the whole of a sphere on the whole of an infinite plane, while preserving the angles.—Stereographic map-projection. See projection.

stereographical (ster″ē-ō-graf′i-kal), a. [< stereographic + -al.] Same as stereographic.

stereographically (ster″ē-ō-graf′i-kal-i), adv. In a stereographic manner; by delineation on a plane.

stereography (ster-ē-og′ra-fi), n. [= F. stéréographie, < Gr. στερεός, solid, + -γραφία, < γράφειν, write.] The art of delineating the forms of solid bodies on a plane; a branch of solid geometry which demonstrates the properties and shows the construction of all solids which are regularly defined.

Stereolepis (ster-ē-ol′e-pis), n. [NL. (Ayres, 1859), < Gr. στερεός, solid, + λεπίς, a scale.] 1. A genus of serranoid fishes of enormous size in comparison with related forms. S. gigas, the jew-fish or black sea-bass of the Californian coast, reaches a length of 5 feet. It is brownish- or greenish-black with large black blotches, most evident in the young.

Jew-fish (Stereolepis gigas).

★2. [l. c.] A fish of this genus.

stereome (ster′ē-ōm), n. [< Gr. στερέωμα, a solid body, < στερεός, solid.] In bot., a name proposed by Schwendener for those elements which impart strength to a fibrovascular bundle. Compare mestome.

stereometer (ster-ē-om′e-tėr), n. [< Gr. στερεός, solid, + μέτρον, a measure.] 1. An instrument for measuring the solid capacity of a vessel.—2. An instrument for determining the specific gravity of liquids, porous bodies, etc.

stereometric (ster″ē-ō-met′rik), a. [< stereometr-y + -ic.] Pertaining to or performed by stereometry.—Stereometric function. See function.

stereometrical (ster″ē-ō-met′ri-kal), a. [< stereometric + -al.] Same as stereometric.

stereometrically (ster″ē-ō-met′ri-kal-i), a. By or with reference to stereometry.

stereometry (ster-ē-om′e-tri), n. [= F. stéréométrie, < Gr. στερεός, solid, cubic, + -μετρία, < μέτρον, measure.] 1. The art of measuring volumes.—2. The metrical geometry of solids.—3. The art or process of determining the specific gravity of liquids, porous bodies, powders, etc.

stereo-mold (ster′ē-ō-mōld), n. [< stereo + mold[3].] A mold used in stereotyping.

stereomonoscope (ster″ē-ō-mon′ō-skōp), n. [< Gr. στερεός, solid, + μόνος, single, alone, + σκοπεῖν, view.] An instrument with two lenses for exhibiting on a screen of ground glass a single picture so as to give it all the effect of solidity.

stereoneural (ster″ē-ō-nū′ral), a. [< Gr. στερεός, solid, + νεῦρον, a nerve.] Having the nervous ★center, if any, solid.

stereoplasm (ster′ē-ō-plazm), n. [< NL. stereoplasma, < Gr. στερεός, solid, + πλάσμα, anything molded or formed: see plasm.] 1. In corals, a delicate endothecal structure occupying different positions in the corallite, often forming vertical processes in the interseptal loculi or encircling septa, or acting as true endotheca. This substance, which connects septa (environing their free edges in some paleozoic corals), stretches across interseptal loculi irregularly, and sometimes fills up the lower part of the inside of the corallum, constituting a solid mass there. It is to be distinguished from the true endotheca.

2. In bot., same as stereoplasma.

stereoplasma (ster″ē-ō-plas′mą), n. [NL.: see stereoplasm.] 1. Same as stereoplasm, 1. Lindström.—2. In cytol., a term proposed by Nägeli for the solid part of protoplasm. Compare hyaloplasma.

stereoplasmic (ster″ē-ō-plaz′mik), a. [< stereoplasm + -ic.] Of the nature of or formed by stereoplasm; consisting of that substance.

stereopticon (ster-ē-op′ti-kon), n. [< Gr. στερεός, solid, + ὀπτικός, pertaining to seeing or sight: see optic.] An improved form of magic lantern, consisting essentially of two complete lanterns matched and connected. The object of the reduplication is to permit the pictures shown to pass from one to the next by a sort of dissolving effect which is secured by alternate use of the two lenses, and at the same time to avoid the delay or the unpleasant sliding of the pictures across the field in view of the audience, but imperfectly avoidable when the simple magic lantern is used. The two lanterns may be either superposed or Double-tier Stereopticon.

A, A′, tubes containing objectives; B, B′, covers for condensers; C, C′, collapsible-bellows fronts of the lanterns, which are mounted one above the other and hinged together at the rear standards (as shown at D) to provide for the elevation or depression necessary to bring the views on the screen into exact superposition; E, E′, lime-light boxes, one of the lime-cylinders F and oxyhydrogen jets G being shown in the upper box, a part of which is removed; H, oxygen holder; I, hydrogen-holder; J, J′, flexible tubes for separately conveying these gases to the burners and mixing them only as they are needed to supply light; L, set-screw for elevation or depression; M, milled heads of shaft operating gear for extending or shortening the lens-tubes A, A′ in adjustment of the focus; N, openings for insertion of slides, with inclined bottoms for insuring exact position.

placed side by side. Some forms of stereopticon are ★made with three lanterns.

stereoscope (ster′ē-ō-skōp), n. [= F. stéréoscope, < Gr. στερεός, solid, + σκοπεῖν, view.] An optical instrument illustrating the phenomena of binocular vision, and serving to produce from two nearly similar pictures of an object the effect of a single picture with the appearance of relief and solidity belonging to ordinary vision. It depends upon the fact that in ordinary vision, while the respective images of an object formed upon the retinas of the two eyes differ slightly because of the divergence of the rays from each point of the object, yet the effect upon the brain is that of a single object seen in perspective relief which the monocular image lacks. The slide of the stereoscope shows two pictures side by side taken under a small difference of angular view, each eye looking upon one picture only; thus, as in ordinary vision, two images are conveyed to the brain which unite into one, exhibiting the objects represented under a high degree of relief. A reflecting form of stereoscope was invented by Sir Charles Wheatstone in 1838. Subsequently Sir David Brewster invented the lenticular or refracting stereoscope, based on the refractive properties of semi-double-convex lenses. This is the one now in general use. There are many forms of it, one of which is shown in the figure. The action is illustrated by the diagram beneath. The light-rays from corresponding points of the two pictures P and P′ are refracted in passing through the lenses L, L′, and their directions changed so that they now seem to the eyes E, E′ to diverge from a common point A beyond the plane of the card. By special effort a skilled observer can combine stereoscopic pictures into one without the use of the instrument, each eye being directed to one picture only and (to produce the normal stereoscopic effect) the one on its own side; the process may be facilitated by interposing a card screen between the pictures so that, for example, the left picture is entirely cut off from the right eye, etc. If the eyes are crossed so that the right eye sees the left picture and the left eye the right only, and the images combined by special effort, the usual stereoscopic effect is reversed—a convex surface becomes concave, etc. A similar pseudoscopic result is obtained with the ordinary stereoscope if the positions of the two pictures are exchanged.

Stereoscope.

stereoscopic (ster″ē-ō-skop′ik), a. [= F. stéréoscopique; as stereoscope + -ic.] Of, pertaining to, or resembling the stereoscope; adapted to the stereoscope; having the form in relief, or proper perspective, as of an object seen in the stereoscope: as, stereoscopic pictures; stereoscopic views.—Stereoscopic camera, diagrams, projection. See the nouns.

stereoscopical (ster″ē-ō-skop′i-kal), a. [< stereoscopic + -al.] Same as stereoscopic.

stereoscopically (ster″ē-ō-skop′i-kal-i), adv. By or as by a stereoscope.

stereoscopist (ster′ē-ō-skō-pist), n. [< stereoscope + -ist.] One versed in the use or manufacture of stereoscopes.

stereoscopy (ster′ē-ō-skō-pi), n. [= F. stéréoscopie, < Gr. στερεός, solid, + -σκοπία, < σκοπεῖν, view.] The use or construction of stereoscopes.

stereotomic (ster″ē-ō-tom′ik), a. [< stereotom-y + -ic.] Pertaining to or performed by stereotomy.

stereotomical (ster″ē-ō-tom′i-kal), a. [< stereotomic + -al.] Same as stereotomic.

stereotomy (ster-ē-ot′ō-mi), n. [= F. stéréotomie, < Gr. στερεός, solid, + -τομία, < τέμνειν, ταμεῖν, cut.] The science or art of cutting solids into certain figures.

stereotrope (ster′ē-ō-trōp), n. [< Gr. στερεός, solid, + τροπή, a turning, < τρέπειν, turn.] An instrument by which an object is perceived as if in motion and with an appearance of solidity or relief as in nature. It consists of a series of stereoscopic pictures, generally eight, of an object in the successive positions it assumes in completing any motion, affixed to an octagonal drum revolving under an ordinary lenticular stereoscope, and viewed through a solid cylinder pierced in its entire length by two apertures, which makes four revolutions for one of the picture-drum. The observer thus sees the object constantly in one place, but with its parts apparently in motion and in solid and natural relief.

stereotype (ster′ē-ō-tīp), n. and a. [= F. stéréotype, < Gr. στερεός, fixed, + τύπος, impression, type: see type.] I. n. 1. The duplicate, in one piece of type-metal, of the face of a collection of types composed for printing. Three processes are used. (a) The plaster process, in which a mold taken from the composed types in fluid plaster of Paris is baked until dry, and is then submerged in melted type-metal. The cast taken in this mold, when cooled, is shaved to proper thickness, making the stereotype plate. (b) The clay process, in which the mold, taken by a press on a prepared surface of stiff clay, is baked until dry, and filled by pouring into it fluid metal. (c) The papier-maché process, in which the mold is made by covering the type with a preparation of paper-pulp and clay, which is beaten into the interstices of the type-surface by a stiff brush. This mold when baked by steam-heat is put in a casting-box, which is filled with melted metal. This is the rudest but quickest process. Stereotypes for daily newspapers are usually made in fifteen minutes. For newspaper-work the plates for rotary presses are molded and cast with a curved surface that fits them to the impression-cylinder. The practice of stereotyping is now confined to newspapers and the cheaper forms of printed work. Plates of books, woodcuts, and the finer forms of printing are now made by the electrotype process. (See electrotype.) Stereotype plates were first made, but imperfectly, by William Ged, at Edinburgh, in 1725. The plaster process, which was the first to become popular, was perfected by Wilson and Lord Stanhope in 1804.

A, Stereotype Founding Apparatus. B, Stereotype Plates from the Mold. a, furnace by which the water-jacketed mold b is uniformly heated. The mold is supported on the frame d and on the rollers f; the parts of the mold are held together by a clamping-screw c; the water is supplied to the water-jacket through the funnel e. In pouring the metal, the mold is placed in position shown in dotted outline.

2. Loosely, an electrotype.—3. The art of making plates of fixed metallic types; the process of producing printed work by means of such plates.

II. a. Of or pertaining to stereotype, or stereotyping, or stereotype printing: as, stereotype work; stereotype plates.

stereotype (ster′ē-ō-tīp), v. t.; pret. and pp. stereotyped, ppr. stereotyping. [< stereotype, n.] 1. To cast a stereotype plate from: as, to stereotype a page or a form.—2. To prepare for printing by means of stereotype plates: as, to stereotype the New Testament.—3. To fix or establish firmly or unchangeably.

> If men cannot yet entirely obey the law, . . . it does not follow that we ought therefore to stereotype their incompetency, by specifying how much is possible to them and how much is not. H. Spencer, Social Statics, p. 506.

stereotype-block (ster′ē-ō-tīp-blok), n. A block of iron or of hard wood, bound with brass, about three fourths of an inch high, on which a stereotype plate is fixed for use.

stereotyped (ster′ē-ō-tīpt), p. a. 1. Made or printed from stereotype plates.—2. Formed in an unchangeable manner; fixed; set: as, stereotyped opinions.

> The entablatures show considerable progress, but the capitals were so stereotyped that it is evident, if any Greek or Roman artists had designed capitals in Gandhara during the period just alluded to, we could predicate exactly what they would have been. J. Fergusson, Hist. Indian Arch., p. 178.

stereotype-metal (ster′ē-ō-tīp-met″al), n. An alloy for stereotype plates; type-metal.

stereotyper (ster′ē-ō-tī-pėr), n. [< stereotype + -er[1].] One who stereotypes, or who makes stereotype plates.

stereotypery (ster″ē-ō-tī′pėr-i), n. [< stereotype + -ery.] 1. The art or work of making stereotype plates.—2. Pl. stereotyperies (-iz). A place where stereotype plates are made; a stereotype foundry.

stereotypic (ster″ē-ō-tip′ik), a. [< stereotype + -ic.] Of or relating to stereotype or stereotype plates.

stereotyping (ster′ē-ō-tī-ping), n. The art, act, or process of making stereotypes.—Paper process of stereotyping. See paper.

stereotypist (ster′ē-ō-tī-pist), n. [< stereotype + -ist.] One who makes stereotype plates; a stereotyper.

stereotypographer (ster″ē-ō-tī-pog′ra-fėr), n. [< stereotypograph-y + -er[1].] A stereotype-printer.

stereotypography (ster″ē-ō-tī-pog′ra-fi), n. [< Gr. στερεός, fixed, + E. typography.] The art or practice of printing from stereotype. ★Imp. Dict.

stereotypy (ster′ē-ō-tī-pi), n. [= F. stéréotypie; as stereotype + -y[3].] The art or business of making stereotype plates.

sterhydraulic (stėr-hī-drâ′lik), a. [Irreg. < Gr. στερεός, solid, + E. hydraulic.] Pertaining to or having an action resembling that of a sterhydraulic press. See the phrase.—Sterhydraulic press, a peculiar form of hydraulic press in which pressure is generated in a hydraulic cylinder by the displacement of a part of the contained liquid through the entrance into its mass of a rod working through a stuffing-box, a screw working in a packed nut, or in some cases a rope wound upon a barrel in the inclosure and pulled into it through a packed hole, the shaft of the winding-barrel or -drum also extending through a stuffing-box in the side of the cylinder, and fitted on the exterior with a winch or a driving-wheel. Of these forms that using a screw is the simplest and best.

sterigma (stē-rig′mą), n.; pl. sterigmata (-ma-tą). [NL., < Gr. στήριγμα, a prop, support, < στερίξειν, prop.] In bot., a stalk or support of some kind: a term of varying application. (a) Same as basidium. (b) The stalk-like branch of a basidium which bears a spore. (c) The footstalk of a spore, especially of a spore of minute size. (d) The cell from which a spermatium is cut off. (e) A ridge or foliaceous appendage proceeding down the stem below the attachment of a decurrent leaf.

sterigmatic (ster-ig-mat′ik), a. [< sterigma(t-) + -ic.] In bot., resembling, belonging to, or of the nature of a sterigma.

steril†, a. An obsolete spelling of sterile.

sterile (ster′il), a. [Formerly also steril; < F. stérile = Sp. Pg. esteril = It. sterile, < L. sterilis, unfruitful, barren; cf. Gr. στερεός, stiff, hard, solid, στέριφος, hard, unfruitful, barren.] 1. Unfruitful; unproductive; not fertile.

> Indeed it goes so heavily with my disposition that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory. Shak., Hamlet, ii. 2. 310.
>
> It is certaine that in sterile years corne sowne will growe to an other kinde. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 525.

2. Barren; not reproducing its kind.

> She is grown sterile and barren, and her births of animals are now very inconsiderable. Dr. H. More, Antidote against Atheism.

3. In bot., of a flower, producing only stamens —that is, staminate or male (compare neutral); of a stamen, having no anther, or a functionless one; of an anther, without pollen; of an ovary, without perfect seeds; of a seed, without an embryo; of a frond, without sori. See cuts under Onoclea, Ophioglossum, sassafras, and smoke-tree. —4. Free from living germs.

> I at first suspected that the biologically sterile tube might not be chemically clean. Medical News, XLIX. 400.

5. Leading to no results; fruitless; profitless; useless.

> I will endeavour that the favour conferred on me rest not sterile. Abbé Mann, in Ellis's Lit. Letters, p. 431.

6. Lacking richness of thought or expression; bald; bare: as, a sterile style; sterile verse.—Sterile wood a shrub or small tree, Coprosma fœtidissima of the Rubiaceæ, found in New Zealand. It is extremely fetid when drying, though inodorous when alive and growing.

sterilisation, sterilise, etc. See sterilization, etc.

sterility (ste-ril′i-ti), n. [< F. stérilité = Sp. esterilidad = Pg. esterilidade = It. sterilità, < L. sterilita(t-)s, unfruitfulness, barrenness, < sterilis, barren, sterile: see sterile.] The state or character of being sterile. (a) Lack of fertility; unproductiveness; unfruitfulness, as of land, labor, etc.

> For the Soil of Spain, the Fruitfulness of their Vallies recompences the Sterility of their Hills. Howell, Letters, I. iii. 32.

(b) Lack of fecundity; barrenness: said of animals or plants.

> Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend
> To make this creature fruitful!
> Into her womb convey sterility!
> Shak., Lear, i. 4. 300.

(c) Fruitlessness; profitlessness.

> The trueness of this formula is only equalled by its sterility for psychological purposes. W. James, Prin. of Psychol., I. 551.

(d) Deficiency in ideas, sentiments, or expression; lack of richness or luxuriance, as in literary style; poverty; baldness; meagerness.

> He had more frequent occasion for repetition than any poet; yet one cannot ascribe this to any sterility of expression, but to the genius of his times, which delighted in these reiterated verses. Pope, Essay on Homer.

sterilization (ster″il-i-zā′shon), n. [< sterilize + -ation.] The act or operation of making sterile; specifically, the process of freeing from living germs. Also spelled sterilisation.

> Sterilization of cow's milk must and will be a most valuable preventive of summer diarrhœa. Medical News, LIII. 12.

sterilize (ster′il-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. sterilized, ppr. sterilizing. [= F. stériliser = Sp. Pg. esterilizar; as sterile + -ize.] To render sterile or unproductive in any way; specifically, in bacteriology, to render free from living germs, as by heating or otherwise. Also spelled sterilise.

> No, no — such wars do thou, Ambition, wage!
> Go sterilize the fertile with thy rage!
> Whole nations to depopulate is thine.
> Savage, Public Spirit.
>
> Prof. Tyndall found that he could not sterilize an infusion of old hay . . . without boiling it continuously for several hours. W. B. Carpenter, Micros., § 309.

★sterilizer (ster′il-ī-zėr), n. [< sterilize + -er[1].] One who or that which sterilizes; especially, any apparatus for rendering substances free from living germs, as by means of heat. Also spelled steriliser.

sterkt. An old spelling of stark[1], stirk.

sterlet (stėr′let), n. [< F. sterlet = Dan. sterlet = Sw. sterlett, < G. sterlet, < Russ. sterlyadĭ, a sterlet.] A species of sturgeon, Acipenser ruthenus. It is of small size and slender form, with a long sharp snout and fringed barbels, and from sixty to seventy lateral shields. It rarely reaches a length of two feet, and is generally not more than a foot long. It inhabits the Black Sea, Sea of Azof, Caspian Sea, and the rivers of Asiatic Russia, as well as certain rivers of Siberia. It is highly esteemed for its flavor, and its roe makes a superior caviar. Compare also cuts under Acipenser.

Sterlet (Acipenser ruthenus).

Sterletus (stėr′le-tus), n. [NL. (Rafinesque, 1820), < F. sterlet, < Russ. sterlyadĭ, sterlet: see sterlet.] A genus of sturgeons, the type of which is the sterlet, having the spines of the dorsal shield posterior, no stellate plates, and the lip emarginate.

sterling[1]†, n. An obsolete form of starling[1].

sterling[2] (stėr′ling), n. and a. [< ME. sterling, sterlinge, sterlynge, starling, the coin so called; cf. D. sterling = Sw. Dan. sterling, sterling (as in mod. E. use), = Icel. sterlingr, a sterling (the English coin so called), = MHG. sterlinc, stærlinc (-ling), a coin so called, G. sterling (as in mod. E. use); = OF. esterlin, a sterling (the English coin so called), sterlin, esterlin, estellin, estelin, a weight of twenty-eight grains (of gold), the twentieth part of an ounce, = Sp. Pg. esterlino, in libra esterlina, a pound sterling, = It. sterlino, in lira sterlina, a pound sterling, also as a noun, sterlino, sterling coin, standard rate (of coin); ML. sterlingus, sterlingum, sterlinus, stollinus, stelligus, sterlingeus, sterilingus, esterlingus, estrilingus, a sterling (the English coin so called), also a weight of twenty-eight grains, the twentieth part of an ounce; all < E., unless, as Kluge asserts, the E. itself (and so in part the OF. and ML.) is < MHG. sterlinc, stærlinc (-ling), which is then < sterl- or ster-, origin unknown, + -ing[3] or -ling[1] as in shilling, farthing (AS. feórthing, feórthling), penny (AS. pening, etc.). In this view the word must have been introduced into ME. use by the Hanse merchants in London, who, according to the story, first stamped the coin in England. The accepted statement is that these merchants were called Easterlings as coming from "the east parts of Germany" (Camden), and that the coin received its name from them; but the similarity appears to be accidental, and the statement, besides other deficiencies, fails to explain the MHG. name, which could not have meant 'Easterling.' It seems more probable that the MHG. word is, like the rest, derived from the ME. word, which must then be due, in spite of unexplained difficulties, to Easterling, or else is derived, as asserted in a statement quoted by Minsheu from Linwood, from the figure of a starling (ME. sterling) at one time engraved on one quarter of the coin so called: see starling[1]. Historical evidence of the truth of this assertion is as yet lacking.] I. n. 1†. A silver coin struck by English (and Scottish) kings from the time of Richard I. (1190).

> Faste comen out of halle
> And shoken nobles and sterlinges.
> Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 1315.
>
> The oldest pieces [of the coinage of Scotland] are silver pennies or sterlings, resembling the contemporary English money, of the beginning of the 12th century. Encyc. Brit., XVII. 656.

2. English money. [Rare.]

> And Roman wealth in English sterling view. Arbuthnot.

II. a. 1. Of fixed or standard national value; conforming to the national standard of value: said of English money, and, by extension, of the precious metals: as, a pound sterling; a shilling sterling. Abbreviated ster., stg.

> In the Canon Law mention is made of 5 shillings sterling, and a merke sterling, cap. 3. de Arbitris, & c. constitut. 12. de procurator. Minsheu, 1617.
>
> When a given weight of gold or silver is of a given fineness, it is then of the true standard, and called esterling or sterling metal. Blackstone, Com., I. vii.
>
> I lost between seven and eight thousand pounds sterling of your English money. J. S. Le Fanu, Dragon Volant, v.

2. Of acknowledged worth or influence; authoritative.

> If my word be sterling yet in England,
> Let it command a mirror hither straight,
> That it may show me what a face I have.
> Shak., Rich. II., iv. 1. 264.

3. Genuine; true; pure; hence, of great value or excellence.

> His sterling worth, which words cannot express,
> Lives with his friends, their pride and their distress.
> Crabbe, Works, II. 27.
>
> I might recall other evidence of the sterling and unusual qualities of his public virtue. R. Choate, Addresses, p. 321.

sterling[3] (stėr′ling), n. See starling[2].

Sterling's formula. See formula.

stern[1] (stėrn), a. [< ME. stern, sterin, sterne, sturne, < AS. styrne, severe, austere, stern (also in comp. styrn-mōd, stern-minded); akin to OHG. stornēn, be astonished, sturni, stupor; perhaps related to OHG. storrēn, MHG. storren, stand out, project, = Goth. staurran,* in comp. and-staurran, murmur against, also to D. stuursch, stern, = Sw. stursk, refractory, and to Icel. stūra, gloom, despair, stūra, mope, fret.] 1. Severe in disposition or conduct; austere; harsh; rigorous; hard.

> No Man was more gentle where there was Submission; where Opposition, no Man more stern. Baker, Chronicles, p. 132.
>
> And sterner hearts alone may feel
> The wound that time can never heal.
> Byron, The Giaour.

2. Characterized by severity or rigor; especially, resulting from or expressive of harshness: as, a stern reply; a stern glance; a stern rebuke.

> He herd thair strakes, that war ful sterin.
> Ywaine and Gawin, l. 3219. (Halliwell.)
>
> If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that stern time, > Thou shouldst have said, "Good porter, turn the key."
> Shak., Lear, iii. 7. 63.
>
> Gods and men
> Fear'd her stern frown. Milton, Comus, l. 446.

3. Grim or forbidding in aspect; gloomy; repelling.

> In passing through these stern and lofty mountains, their path was often along the bottom of a baranco, or deep rocky valley. Irving, Granada, p. 88.

4. Rough; violent; tumultuous; fierce.

> The werre wox in that won wonderly stern.
> Alisaunder of Macedoine (E. E. T. S.), l. 337.
>
> Those stern waves, which like huge mountains roll.
> Drayton, Polyolbion, i. 435.

5. Rigid; stringent; strict.

> Subjected to stern discipline by the rigid enforcement of uniform motives. Maudsley, Body and Will, p. 8.

6†. Stout; strong; heavy.

> The hamur bothe sterne and gret
> That drof the nayles thorow hond and fete.
> Holy Rood (E. E. T. S.), p. 184.
>
> Of bak & of brest al were his bodi sturne.
> Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight (E. E. T. S.), l. 143.

7. Firm; unyielding; inflexible; hard.

> When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept:
> Ambition should be made of sterner stuff.
> Shak., J. C., iii. 2. 97.

The sterner sex. See sex[1]. = Syn. 1. Severe, Harsh, Strict, etc. See austere.—1 and 2. Unrelenting, uncompromising, inflexible.

★stern[2] (stėrn), n. [< ME. sterne, steerne, steorne (not found in AS., where only steór, a rudder, appears: see steer[1], n.) = OFries. stiorne, stiarne, a rudder, = Icel. stjörn, a steering, steerage, rudder; with formative -n, from the root of AS. steór, E. steer, etc., a rudder: see steer[1], n. and v.] 1†. The rudder or helm of a vessel.

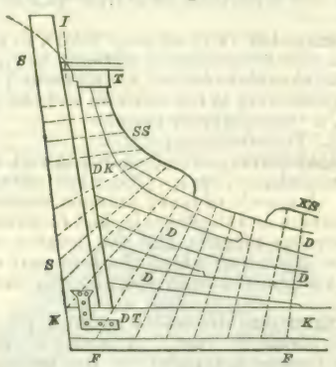
ȝif he ne rise the rather and rauhte to the steorne,
The wynt wolde with the water the bot ouer-throwe.
Piers Plowman (A), ix. 80.



But to preserve the people and the land,
Which now remain as shippe without a sterne.
Norton and Sackville, Ferrex and Porrex, v. 2.

2†. Hence, figuratively, any instrument of management or direction; a guiding agent or agency; also, a post of direction or control.

The father held the sterne of his whole obedience.
Ascham, The Scholemaster, p. 48.

Not a few of them [the eunuchs] have come to sit at the stern of State. Sandys, Travailes, p. 55.

3. The hinder part of a ship or boat, where the rudder is placed; the part furthest removed from the stem or prow. See also cut under poop.

Lower part of Ship's Stern.

S, stern-post; KS, keelson; K, keel; DT, dovetail-plates; I, inner stern-post; D, deadwood; DK, deadwood-knee; SS, sternson; T, deck-transom; F, false keel. (The dotted lines show bolts.)

So, when the first bold vessel dared the seas,
High on the stern the Thracian raised his strain.
Pope, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, l. 39.

4. The hinder parts, backside, buttocks, or rump; the tail of an animal.

He [the dragon] . . . gan his sturdy sterne about to weld,
And him so strongly stroke that to the ground him feld.
Spenser, F. Q., I. xi. 28.

We don't want to deceive ourselves about them, or fancy them cherubs without sterns.
Books of Precedence (E. E. T. S., extra ser.), Forewords, [p. xxiii.

By the stern. See by[1].—From stem to stern. See stem[2].—Square stern, the old-fashioned stern on wooden vessels, which ended abruptly, square to the length. See cut under transom.—Stern foremost, backside foremost; with the stern advanced.—Stern on, the position of a vessel when her stern is presented toward the observer.—To make a stern board. See board.—To moor head and stern. See moor[2].

stern[2] (stėrn), v. [< stern[2], n.] I. trans. 1†. To steer; guide.

Hulke tower . . . is a notable marke for pilots, in directing them which waie to sterne their ships, and to eschew the danger of the craggie rocks.
Stanihurst, Descrip. of Ireland, iii. (Holinshed.)

2. To back (a boat) with the oars; back water; row backward.—Stern all! stern hard! orders to back water given by the officer of a boat to the crew. Also simply stern!

II. intrans. To draw back; back water: said of a boat or its crew.

Meantime Mr. Norton, the mate, having struck the fast whale, he and the second mate sterned off to wait for the whale to get quiet. Fisheries of U. S., V. ii. 273.

stern[3] (stėrn), n. Same as starn[1].

stern[4] (stėrn), n. [A var. of tern: see tern, and cf. Sterna.] A tern.

Sterna (stėr'nä), n. [NL. (Linnæus, 1758), appar. based on E. tern.] A Linnean genus of Laridæ, typical of the subfamily Sterninæ, and containing all the terns or sea-swallows, or variously restricted. It is now commonly confined to species of moderate and large size, white with usually a pearly-blue mantle and black cap, and having a long deeply-forked tail, whose outer feathers are more or less narrowly linear for much of their length. The species are numerous, and are found all over the world, as S. hirundo, the common tern of Europe and America; S. arctica, the arctic tern of the northern hemisphere; S. paradisea or dougalli, the roseate tern (see cut under roseate), very widely distributed; and S. forsteri and S. trudeaui of America. Among the large species, representing a subgenus Thalasseus, are S. tschegrava or caspia, the Caspian tern of Asia, Europe, and America; S. maxima, the royal tern (smaller than the last, in spite of its name) of America; S. elegans, the ducal tern of America. (See cut under Thalasseus.) A group of small species, such as S. minuta of Europe and S. antillarum of America, are called least terns, and all have a white frontal crescent in the black cap: these represent a subgenus Common Tern (Sterna hirundo).

Sternula. (See cut under Sternula.) Some middle-sized terns with dark upper parts, widely distributed in tropical and warm temperate regions, are the subgenus Haliplana, as the common sooty and bridled terns, S. fuliginosa and S. anæsthetica. (See cut under sooty.) Gull-billed terns form a section Gelochelidon (see cut there). The wholly white terns, the black terns, and the noddies belong to other genera. See Sterninæ and tern.

sternadiform (stėr'nȧ-di-fôrm), a. [< NL. sternum, the breast-bone, + L. ad, to, + forma, form.] In ichth., characterized by a tendency to expansion or extension of the thoracic or sternal region, as exemplified in the John-dory and the Serranidæ. Gill.

sternage (stėr'nāj), n. [< stern[2] + -age.] Steerage; direction; course, as of a ship or fleet.

Follow, follow:
Grapple your minds to sternage of this navy,
And leave your England, as dead midnight still.
Shak., Hen. V., iii. Prol., l. 18.

sternal (stėr'nal), a. [= F. sternal, < NL. sternalis, < sternum, the breast-bone: see sternum.] 1. Of or pertaining to the sternum, especially the breast-bone of vertebrates: as, the sternal end of the clavicle; the sternal keel of a bird's breast-bone; sternal articulation; a sternal segment.—2. In Invertebrata, of or pertaining to a sternite; sternitic.—3. Ventral; hemal; on the ventral surface or aspect, where the sternum is situated; on the same side with the sternum; in man, anterior; in other animals, inferior: opposed to dorsal, tergal, or neural.—Sternal band, in embryol., of insects, a longitudinal thickening of the ovum, which gives rise to the sternal region of the body.—Sternal canal, in Crustacea, a median passage between each pair of endosternites, arched over by the meeting of the mesophragmal apophyses of the apodemes of opposite sides. The sternal canal conveys the chain of nervous ganglia and the sternal artery. See cut under Astacidæ.—Sternal glands, a chain of six to ten small lymphatic glands, situated along the course of the internal mammary blood-vessels.—Sternal line, the vertical line on the front of the chest lying over the edge of the sternum.—Sternal region, the region of the front of the chest lying between the sternal lines. It is divided into a superior and an inferior sternal region by a line passing through the uppermost points of the junctions of the third costal cartilages with the sternum.—Sternal rib. (a) A true or fixed rib; one that joins the sternum by its hemapophysis, or costal cartilage, as distinguished from a false rib. See cut under endoskeleton. (b) The hemapophysis of a rib, as distinguished from the pleurapophysis; that part of a bony jointed rib answering to the costal cartilage of a mammalian rib, reaching from the end of the pleurapophysis to the sternum or toward it, as distinguished from a vertebral rib, which is the pleurapophysis alone. See cuts under epipleura and interclavicle.

sternalgia (stėr-nal'ji-ä), n. [NL., < Gr. στέρνον, the breast-bone, + ἄλγος, pain.] 1. Pain about the sternum or breast-bone.—2. Specifically, angina pectoris. See angina.

sternalgic (stėr-nal'jik), a. [< sternalgia + -ic.] Pertaining to or affected with sternalgia; especially, affected with angina pectoris.

sternalis (stėr-nā'lis), n.; pl. sternales (-lēz). [NL., sc. musculus, muscle: see sternal.] A sternal or presternal muscle; specifically, the rectus sternalis of various animals, more expressly called sternalis brutorum and rectus thoracicus superficialis. It is not infrequently present in man.

Sternaspida (stėr-nas'pi-dä), n. pl. [NL., irreg. < Sternaspis (-aspid-) + -ida.] An order of gephyreans, represented by the genus Sternaspis: distinguished from an order Echiurina, both being referred to a subclass Echiuromorpha of the class Gephyrea. Compare Echiuroidea.

Sternbergia (stėrn-bėr'ji-ä), n. [NL. (Waldstein and Kitaibel, 1805), named after Count Kaspar Maria von Sternberg, 1761–1838, author of various botanical and paleontological works.] A genus of monocotyledonous plants, family Amaryllidaceæ and tribe Amaryllideæ. It is characterized by a commonly solitary funnel-shaped perianth without a corona and with somewhat spreading lobes, and by a fleshy nearly indehiscent fruit with roundish and often strophiolate seeds. About 12 species have been described, now by some reduced to 5, all native of Europe and the Mediterranean region. They produce a short flower-stalk from a coated bulb, with leaves at the same time or earlier. S. lutea and several other dwarf species with handsome yellow flowers are cultivated under the name of star-flower. S. lutea is also known as winter daffodil, and S. colchiciflora as Mount Etna lily; these are often sold under the name of amaryllis.

sternbergite (stėrn'bėrg-īt), n. [Named after Count K. M. von Sternberg: see Sternbergia.] An ore of silver, a sulphid of silver and iron, having a pinchbeck-brown color and metallic luster. It occurs foliated, the laminæ being soft and flexible. It leaves a mark on paper like that of graphite.

stern-board (stėrn'bōrd), n. Naut., a backward motion of a vessel. See to make a stern board, under board.

stern-cap (stėrn'kap), n. An iron cap to protect the stern of a boat.

stern-chase (stėrn'chās), n. A chase in which two vessels sail on one and the same course, one following in the wake of the other: as, a stern-chase is a long chase.

stern-chaser (stėrn'chā″sėr), n. A cannon placed in a ship's stern, pointing backward, and intended to annoy a ship that is in pursuit.

Sterneæ (stėr'nē-ē), n. pl. [NL., < Sterna + -eæ.] A subdivision of Sterninæ, containing all the sea-swallows with forked tails and emarginate webs, as distinguished from the Anoëæ or noddies; the typical terns. Coues, 1862.

sterneber (stėr'nē-bėr), n. [< NL. sternebra, < sternum + (vert)ebra.] One of the pieces of which the breast-bone of a vertebrate usually consists; a bony segment of the sternum; a sternite, or sternebral element. The sternum is a serially segmented bone, made up of pieces, primitively separate bones, corresponding to pairs of ribs, every one of which is a sterneber. Thus, in man the manubrium sterni and the xiphoid or ensiform cartilage are each a sterneber; and the gladiolus, the middle part of the breast-bone, is composed of four other sternebers.

sternebral (stėr'nē-bral), a. [< sterneber + -al.] Entering into the composition of the breast-bone; of or pertaining to a sterneber.

sterned[1] (stėrnd), a. [< stern[2] + -ed[2].] Having a stern (of a specified character). Chapman, Iliad, xi.

sterned[2]† (stėrnd), a. [ME., < stern[3] + -ed[2].] Starred; starry. Hampole, Prick of Conscience.

sterner† (stėr'nėr), n. [< stern[2] + -er[1].] A steersman; a guide or director. [Rare.]

He that is "regens sidera," the sterner of the stars.
Dr. Clarke, Sermons (1637), p. 15. (Latham.)

stern-fast (stėrn'fȧst), n. A rope or chain used to confine the stern of a ship or other vessel to a wharf or quay.

★stern-frame (stėrn'frām), n. The several pieces of timber or iron which form the stern of a ship —the stern-post, transoms, and fashion-pieces.

sternfully† (stėrn'fůl-i), adv. [< sternful* (irreg. < stern + -ful) + -ly[2].] Sternly. Stanihurst, Conceites. [Rare.]

stern-gallery (stėrn'gal″ę-ri), n. Naut. See gallery, 9.

stern-hook (stėrn'hůk), n. In ship-building, a curved timber built into the stern of a ship to support the stern-frame.

Sternidæ (stėr'ni-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Sterna + -idæ.] The Sterninæ rated as a family apart from Laridæ.

Sternidius (stėr-nid'i-us), n. [NL. (Le Conte, 1873).] A genus of longicorn beetles, of the family Cerambycidæ, equivalent to Liopus (Leiopus of Serville, 1835). S. aculiferus is a common North American species now placed in Leptostylus. Its larva burrows under the bark of various trees.

Sternidius aculiferus.

sterniform (stėr'ni-fôrm), a. [< NL. sternum, the breast-bone, + L. forma, form.] In entom., having the form or appearance of a thoracic sternum.—Sterniform process or horn, an anterior projection of the first ventral segment of the abdomen, between the bases of the posterior legs: it is more commonly called the intercoxal process.

Sterninæ (stėr-nī'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Sterna + -inæ.] A subfamily of Laridæ, typified by the genus Sterna, containing all the terns or sea-swallows. It differs from Larinæ in the average smaller size, slenderer form, relatively longer wings and tail, the forking of the tail, the small feet, and the slender sharp bill. The bill is paragnathous (not epignathous as is usual in Larinæ), with continuous horny covering, usually long and slender, very sharp, with straight commissure or nearly so, gently curved culmen, long gonys, and slight symphyseal eminence. The wings are extremely long, narrow, and pointed, with the first primary much the longest, and the secondaries all short. The tail is usually long, and forked or forficate, with attenuated outer feathers. The feet are small, and scarcely ambulatorial. There are 60 or more species, of all parts of the world. They are divided into two groups, the Sterneæ or terns proper, including nearly all of the Sterninæ, and the noddies or Anoëæ. Most of the species fall into the single genus Sterna. Other genera are Hydrochelidon, Phaëthusa, Procelsterna, Gygis, Inca, and Anoüs. See Sterna, and cuts there noted.

sternine (stėr'nin), a. [< NL. sterninus, < Sterna, tern.] Resembling or related to a tern; of or pertaining to the Sterninæ.

sternite (stėr'nīt), n. [< NL. sternum, the breastbone, + -ite[2].] 1. In Arthropoda, as an insect or a crustacean, one of the median ventral sclerites of the crust or body-wall; the median ventral piece of any segment, somite, or metamere, whether a distinct piece or only that undistinguished ventral part or region which lies between the insertions of any pair of legs or other appendages. The sternites are primitively and typically all alike, but may be variously modified in different regions of the body, or coalesced with one another or with other pieces of the exoskeleton, or suppressed. See cut under cephalothorax.

2. In entom., specifically, the under or ventral sclerite of an abdominal segment. [Rare.]—3. One of the pieces of the sternum or breastbone of a vertebrate; a sterneber. [Rare.]—Antennary sternite. Same as epistoma (b).

sternitic (stėr-nit'ik), a. [< sternite + -ic.] Of or pertaining to a sternite; sternal, as a sclerite of an arthropod.

stern-knee (stėrn'nē), n. The continuation of a vessel's keelson, to which the stern-post is secured by bolts. Also called sternson and sternson-knee.

stern-light†, n. [< stern[3] + light[1].] Starlight.

> It was mirk mirk night, and there was nae stern light.
> Thomas the Rhymer (Child's Ballads, I. 112).

sternly (stėrn'li), adv. [< ME. sternelich, sterneliche, sturneliche, < AS. styrnlīce, < styrne, stern: see stern[1] and -ly[2].] In a stern manner; with severity, harshness, austerity, or rigor.

sternmost (stėrn'mōst), a. superl. [< stern[2] + -most.] Furthest in the rear; furthest astern: as, the sternmost ship in a convoy.

sternness (stėrn'nes), n. [< ME. sternnesse, steernnesse; < stern + -ness.] The quality or character of being stern.

> With steernnesse ȝe comaundide to hem, and with power.
> Wyclif, Ezek. xxxiv. 4.

= Syn. See stern[1], a.

sternochondroscapularis (stėr-nō-kon-drō-skap-ū-lā'ris), n.; pl. sternochondroscapulares (-rēz). [NL. (sc. musculus, muscle), < Gr. στέρνον, the breast-bone, + χόνδρος, cartilage, + NL. scapularis, q. v.] A muscle of some mammals, not infrequent in man, arising from the first costal cartilage and the sternum, and inserted into the superior border of the scapula. Also called chondroscapularis, scapulocostalis minor, costoscapularis, subclavius posticus.

sternoclavicular (stėr″nō-kla-vik'ū-lär), a. [< NL. sternoclavicularis, < Gr. στέρνον, the breastbone, + NL. clavicula: see clavicular.] Pertaining to the sternum and the clavicle. Also sternoclidal, and sometimes clidosternal.—Sternoclavicular fibrocartilage. See fibrocartilage.—Sternoclavicular ligament, a band of ligamentous fibers uniting the sternum and the clavicle: an anterior and a posterior are distinguished in man.

sternoclavicularis (stėr″nō-kla-vik-ū-lā'ris), n.; pl. sternoclavicularis (-rēz). [NL.: see sternoclavicular.] One of two anomalous muscles in man, anterior and posterior, extending over the sternoclavicular articulation.

sternoclidal (stėr-nō-klī'dal), a. [< Gr. στέρνον, the breast-bone, + κλείς (κλειδ-), key (clavicle), + -al.] Same as sternoclavicular.

sternoclidomastoid (stėr-nō-klī-dō-mas'toid), a. and n. [< NL. sternoclidomastoideus, < sternum, q. v., + clidomastoideus, q. v.] I. a. In anat., of or belonging to the sternum, the clavicle, and the mastoid process. The sternoclidomastoid muscle arises from the summit of the sternum and the inner section of the clavicle, and is inserted into the mastoid process of the temporal bone. It is also called sternomastoid, mastoideus colli, and nutator capitis. See cut under muscle[1].

II. n. The sternoclidomastoid muscle.

sternoclidomastoideus (stėr″nō-klī″dō-mas-toi'dē-us), n.; pl. sternoclidomastoidei (-ī). [NL.: see sternoclidomastoid.] The sternoclidomastoid muscle.

sternocoracoid (stėr-nō-kor'a-koid), a. and n. [< NL. sternocoracoideus, < sternum, q. v., + coracoideus, q. v.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the sternum and the coracoid: as, the sternocoracoid articulation of birds and reptiles; a sternocoracoid muscle.

II. n. The sternocoracoideus.

sternocoracoideus (stėr-nō-kor-a-koi'dē-us), n.; pl. sternocoracoidei (-ī). [NL.: see sternocoracoid.] The sternocoracoid muscle of various animals, arising from the sternum and inserted in the coracoid. It is represented in man by the pectoralis minor.

sternocostal (stėr-nō-kos'tal), a. [< NL. sternocostalis, < sternum, q. v., + L. costa, rib: see costal.] Of or pertaining to the sternum and the ribs or costal cartilages; costosternal.

sternocostalis (stėr″nō-kos-tā'lis), n.; pl. sternocostales (-lēz). [NL.: see sternocostal.] A thin median fan-shaped muscle within the thorax, behind the costal cartilages and breastbone, arising from the lower part of the sternum. Also called transversus thoracis, and usually triangularis sterni.

sternocoxal (stėr-nō-kok'sal), a. [< NL. sternocoxalis, < sternum, q. v., + L. coxa, the hip: see coxal.] Of or pertaining to the sternites and coxæ of an arthropod.

sternofacial (stėr-nō-fā'shal), a. and n. [< NL. sternofacialis, < sternum, q. v., + L. facies, face: see facial.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the sternum and the face: as, a sternofacial muscle.

II. n. The sternofacialis.

sternofacialis (stėr-nō-fā-shi-ā'lis), n.; pl. sternofaciales (-lēz). [NL.: see sternofacial.] A muscle of the hedgehog, arising over the fore part of the sternum and passing to the side of the lower jaw and integument of the face: it assists the action of the orbicularis panniculi.

sternoglossal (stėr-nō-glos'al), a. and n. [< NL. sternoglossalis, < Gr. στέρνον, breast-bone, + γλῶσσα, tongue.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the sternum and the tongue: as, a sternoglossal muscle.

II. n. The sternoglossus.

sternoglossus (stėr-nō-glos'us), n.; pl. sternoglossi (-ī). [NL., < Gr. στέρνον, the breastbone, + γλῶσσα, the tongue.] 1. A long retractor muscle of the tongue, as of the great ant-eater, Myrmecophaga jubata, attached behind to the sternum, and antagonizing the action of the protractor muscles, the genioglossus and stylohyoideus.—2. [cap.] In entom., a genus of coleopterous insects.

sternohyoid (stėr-nō-hī'oid), a. and n. [< NL. sternohyoideus, < sternum, q. v., + hyoides: see hyoid.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the sternum and the hyoid bone.—Sternohyoid muscle, a ribbon-like muscle arising from the manubrium sterni and inner extremity of the clavicle, and inserted into the body of the hyoid bone. It is innervated from the ansa hypoglossi, and its action draws down or back the hyoid bone and larynx. See cut under muscle[1].

II. n. The sternohyoid muscle.

sternohyoidean (stėr″nō-hī-oi'dē-an), a. [< sternohyoid + -e-an.] Same as sternohyoid.

sternohyoideus (stėr″nō-hī-oi'dē-us), n.; pl. sternohyoidei (-ī). [NL.: see sternohyoid.] The sternohyoid.

sternomastoid (stėr-nō-mas'toid), a. and n. [< NL. sternomastoideus, < sternum, q. v., + mastoideus, q. v.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the sternum and the mastoid process of the temporal bone.—Sternomastoid artery. (a) A superficial descending branch of the superior thyroid artery, which is distributed to the sternomastoid, platysma, and the muscles attached to the thyroid cartilage. (b) A small muscular branch of the occipital artery which supplies the sternoclidomastoid.—Sternomastoid muscle. (a) That portion of the sternoclidomastoid which arises from the sternum. (b) The entire sternoclidomastoid, without distinction.

II. n. The sternomastoid muscle.

sternomastoideus (stėr″nō-mas-toi'dē-us), n.; pl. sternomastoidei (-ī). [NL.: see sternomastoid.] The sternomastoid muscle.

sternomaxillaris (stėr-nō-mak-si-lā'ris), n.; pl. sternomaxillares (-rēz). [NL.: see sternomaxillary.] The sternomaxillary muscle.

sternomaxillary (stėr-nō-mak'si-lā-ri), a. [< NL. sternomaxillaris, < sternum, q. v., + L. maxilla, jaw: see maxillary.] Pertaining to the sternum and the mandible: applied to the sternomastoid muscle when, as in the horse, its anterior end is fixed to the mandible.

sternon (stėr'non), n. [NL.: see sternum.] Same as sternum. Wiseman, Surgery. [Rare.]

sternopagus (stėr-nop'a-gus), n.; pl. sternopagi (-jī). [NL., < Gr. στέρνον, breast, chest, + πάγος, that which is firmly set.] In teratol., a double monster with union at the sternum.

Sternoptychidæ (stėr-nop-tik'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Sternoptyx (-ptych-) + -idæ.] A family of iniomous fishes, typified by the genus Sternoptyx. (a) In Günther's system it includes the typical Sternoptychidæ and other families. (b) In Gill's system, a family of iniomous fishes with a compressed ventradiform body, carinated contour, deeply and obliquely cleft or subvertical mouth whose upper margin is constituted by the supramaxillaries as well as intermaxillaries, branchiostegal arch near and parallel with lower jaw, scapular arch with an inferior projection, and one or more of the neural spines abnormally developed and projecting above the back in advance of the dorsal fin. There are 3 genera and about 7 species, small deep-sea fishes of remarkable appearance and organization, representing 2 subfamilies, Sternoptychinæ and Argyropelecinæ. Also Sternoptyges, Sternottidi, and Sternoptygoidei.

sternoptychoid (stėr-nop'ti-koid), a. and n. [< Sternoptyx (-ptych-) + -oid.] I. a. Of, or having characteristics of, the Sternoptychidæ.

II. n. A fish of the family Sternoptychidæ.

Sternoptyx (stėr-nop'tiks), n. [NL. (Hermann, 1781), < Gr. στέρνον, breast, chest, + πτύξ, a fold.] A genus of fishes, so named from the transverse folds on the pectoral or sternal region, typical of the Sternoptychidæ.

sternorhabdite (stėr-nō-rab'dīt), n. In entom., one of the lowermost or sternal pair of rhabdites.

sternoscapular (stėr-nō-skap'ū-lär), a. and n. [< NL. sternoscapularis, < sternum, q. v., + L. scapulæ, shoulder-blades: see scapular.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the sternum and the scapula: as, a sternoscapular muscle.

II. n. The sternoscapularis.

sternoscapularis (stėr-nō-skap-ū-lā'ris), n.; pl. sternoscapulares (-rēz). [NL.: see sternoscapular.] A muscle of many animals, connecting the sternum and the scapula, and forming with the serratus magnus and the levator anguli scapulæ a sling in which the fore part of the body is supported upon the anterior extremities.

Sternothæridæ (stėr-nō-thē'ri-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Sternothærus + -idæ.] A family of pleurodirous tortoises, typified by the genus Sternothærus, to which different limits have been assigned. As generally understood, they have eleven plastral bones, mesoplastrals being distinct, and the skull has no bony temporal roof. The species are confined to Africa and Madagascar.

Sternothærus (stėr-nō-thē'rus), n. [NL. (Bell, 1825), < Gr. στέρνον, breast, chest, + θαιρός, the hinge of a door or gate.] A genus of tortoises, having a hinged plastron (whence the name).

sternothere (stėr'nō-thēr), n. [< NL. Sternothærus, q. v.] An African turtle of the genus Sternothærus. P. L. Sclater.

sternothyroid (stėr-nō-thī'roid), a. and n. [< NL. sternothyroideus, < sternum, q. v., + thyroideus.] I. a. In anat., of or pertaining to the sternum and the thyroid cartilage.—Sternothyroid muscle, a small muscle beneath the sternohyoid on either side, arising from the manubrium sterni, and inserted into the oblique line on the outer side of the thyroid cartilage: it is innervated from the ansa hypoglossi.

II. n. The sternothyroid muscle.

sternothyroideus (stėr″nō-thī-roi'dē-us), n.; pl. sternothyroidei (-ī). [NL.: see sternothyroid.] The sternothyroid muscle.

sternotracheal (stėr-nō-trā'kē-al), a. and n. [< NL. sternotrachealis, < sternum, q. v., + trachea: see tracheal.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the sternum and the trachea; connecting the breast-bone and the windpipe, as a muscle.

II. n. The sternotrachealis.

sternotrachealis (stėr-nō-trā-kē-ā'lis), n.; pl. sternotrachealis (-lēz). [NL.: see sternotracheal.] A muscle which in birds passes from the sternum to the trachea or windpipe; one of a pair, or one pair of two pairs, of long slender muscular slips attaching the trachea to the sternum or the clavicle, or both.

sternotribe (stėr'nō-trīb), a. [< Gr. στέρνον, the breast, + τρίβειν, rub.] In bot., touching the breast, as of an insect: noting those zygomorphous flowers, especially adapted for cross-fertilization by external aid, in which the stamens and styles are so arranged as to strike the visiting insect on the breast. Compare nototribe, pleurotribe.

Sternoxi (stėr-nok'sī), n. pl. [NL., irreg. < Gr. στέρνον, breast, + ὀξύς, sharp.] In entom., in Latreille's system, a section of Serricornes, containing two tribes, the buprestids and elaterids, having the prosternum produced in front and pointed behind: distinguished among the serricorn beetles from Malacodermi and Xylotrogi. It corresponds to the modern families Buprestidæ and Elateridæ in a broad sense. See cuts under Agrilus, Buprestis, click-beetle, Pyrophorus, and wireworm. Also Sternoxia.

sternoxian (stėr-nok'si-an), a. and n. [< Sternoxi + -an.] Same as sternoxine.

sternoxine (stėr-nok'sin), a. and n. [< Sternoxi + -ine[1].] I. a. Pertaining to the Sternoxi, or having their characters.

II. n. A member of the Sternoxi.

stern-port (stėrn'pōrt), n. A port or opening in the stern of a ship.

stern-post (stėrn'pōst), n. The principal piece of timber or iron in a vessel's stern-frame. Its lower end is tenoned into or riveted to the keel, and to it the rudder is hung and the transoms are bolted. See cuts under rudder and stern[2]. — Stern-post knee, a large knee which unites the stern-post and the keel. See cut under stern[2].

stern-sheets (stėrn'shēts), n. pl. The space in a boat abaft the thwarts on which the rowers sit.

sternsman† (stėrnz'man), n. [< stern's, poss. of stern[2], + man.] A steersman; a pilot.

> Off from the sterne the sternesman diuing fell,
> And from his sinews flew his soule to hell.
> Chapman, Odyssey, xii. 582.

sternson (stėrn'son), n. [Appar. < stern[2] + -son as in keelson.] Same as stern-knee.

Sternula (stėr'nū-lä), n. [NL. (Boie, 1822), < Sterna + dim. -ula.] The least terns, a genus of Sterninæ containing species of the smallest size, with moderately forked tail, a white frontal crescent in the black cap, and the bill yellow tipped with black: of cosmopolitan distribution. S. minuta inhabits Europe, Asia, etc.; S. balænarum is South African; S. nereis, S. placens, and S. melanauchen are Asiatic, East Indian, Australian, and Polynesian; S. superciliaris is South American. The common bird of the United States and middle America is S. antillarum, which is very abundant along the Atlantic coast. It is 9 inches long and 20 in extent of wings, white with pearly blue mantle over all the upper parts, a black cap, and the usual white lunule.

American Least Tern (Sternula antillarum).

sternule (stėr'nūl), n. A sea-swallow of the genus Sternula.

sternum (stėr'num), n.; pl. sterna (-nä) or sternums (-numz). [NL., also sternon, < Gr. στέρνον, the breast-bone.] 1. The breast-bone of man and many other vertebrates; a bone or longitudinal series of bones in the middle line of the ventral aspect of the body, chiefly in its thoracic section, completing the thoracic wall by articulation with more or fewer ribs, or elements of the scapular arch, or both: theoretically, in Owen's system, the hemal spines of a series of vertebræ. (a) In man and most mammals the sternum consists of an anterior piece, the "handle," manubrium, or presternum; of several (in man four) segments or sternebers constituting the body of the sternum, gladiolus, or mesosternum; and of a terminal piece, the xiphoid or ensiform cartilage, or xiphisternum. It articulates in man with the clavicles and with seven costal cartilages. The sternebers of a mammalian sternum may remain perfectly distinct, or be ankylosed in one. (See cut under mesosternum.) In cetaceans and sirenians the sternum is much reduced, and may be a single bone or quite rudimentary. In the monotrematous mammals a small median bone called proösteon is developed in front of the præsternum. The parts called episternum, omosternum, interclavicle, in the mammals just mentioned, or in various reptiles, or in batrachians, belong rather to the shoulder-girdle. There is no sternum in some reptiles, as serpents. See cuts under Catarrhina, Elephantinæ, interclavicle, omosternum, and skeleton. (b) In birds the sternum is a large single bone without trace of its original composition of several parts, highly specialized in form and function, in relation to the muscular apparatus of the wings, articulating with several ribs, with the coracoids, and sometimes ankylosed with the clavicle; it appears under two principal modifications, known as the carinate and ratite. (See these words.) The carinate sternum normally develops from five ossific centers, having consequently as many separate pieces in early life. The single median ossification, which includes the keel, is the lophosteon; the anterior lateral pieces, a pair, are the pleurosteæ, which become the costal or costiferous processes; the posterior pair are the metosteæ. In some birds are additional pieces, a pair of coracosteæ and a urosteon. The ratite sternum has no median ossification, or lophosteon. The passerine sternum normally develops a prominent forked manubrium. In a few birds, as cranes and swans, the sternum is hollowed out to receive convolutions of the windpipe. See cuts under carinate, Dinornis, and epipleura. (c) In Chelonia, the plastron of a turtle, consisting of several bones, normally nine, one median, and four lateral in pairs. These bones have no homology with the sternum of other vertebrates. See cuts under carapace, plastron, and Chelonia. 2. In arthropods, as insects and crustaceans, a median sternal or ventral sclerite of any somite of the cephalothorax, thorax, or abdomen; a sternite: the opposite of a tergite or notum. In such cases, sternum and sternite are used interchangeably, sternum being seldom used of the series of sternites as a whole. (See cut under cephalothorax.) In insects the three thoracic sterna are specified as prosternum, mesosternum, and metasternum. In Diptera, sternum generally means the mesosternum, as the other thoracic rings do not show a sternal piece. In Coleoptera, sternum is sometimes extended to include the episterna and epimera, or whole lower surface of a thoracic segment. See episternum, 3. — Antennary sternum. See antennary. — Cephalic sternum, in arachnology, the lower part of the head or gula; the central plate on the lower part of the cephalothorax of a spider, between the bases of the legs. — Sternum collare, in entom., the sternal prominence of the prothorax. — Sternum pectorale, in entom., the sternal prominence of the metathorax.

Shoulder-girdle, or Pectoral Arch, and Sternum of a Lizard (Iguana tuberculata): upper figure, under view; lower figure, side view. sc, scapula; ssc, suprascapula; msc, mesoscapula; cr, coracoid; pcr, precoracoid; mcr, mesocoracoid; ecr, epicoracoid; cl, clavicle; icl, interclavicle; gl, glenoid; st, sternum; xst, xiphisternum.

sternutation (stėr-nū-tā'shon), n. [< LL. sternutatio(n-), a sneezing, < L. sternutare, freq. of sternuere, sneeze.] The act of sneezing. De Quincey, Opium Eater, p. 135.

sternutative (stėr-nū'tā-tiv), a. [< L. sternutare, sneeze, + -ive.] Same as sternutatory. Bailey, 1731.

sternutativeness (stėr-nū'tā-tiv-nes), n. The character of being sternutative. Bailey, 1727.

sternutatory (stėr-nū'tā-tō-ri), a. and n. [= F. sternutatoire, < L. sternutare, sneeze: see sternutation.] I. a. Causing or tending to cause sneezing. Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 476.

II. n.; pl. sternutatories (-riz). Anything which causes sneezing, as snuff; an errhine.

sternutory (stėr'nū-tō-ri), n. An erroneous form of sternutatory. Dunglison.

sternward, sternwards (stėrn'wärd, -wärdz), a. and adv. [< stern[2] + -ward, -wards.] Toward the stern.

sternway (stėrn'wā), n. The movement of a ship backward, or with her stern foremost. — To fetch sternway. See fetch[1].

stern-wheeler (stėrn'hwē″lėr), n. A steam-vessel propelled by one wheel, similar to a side-wheel, mounted astern: used for navigating shallow or narrow waters.

Steropus (ster'ō-pus), n. [NL. (Megerle, 1821), appar. < Gr. στερεός, solid, + ποῦς = E. foot.] A genus of beetles of the family Carabidæ, containing about 100 species, widely distributed throughout Europe, northern Africa, Asia, Australia, and both Americas.

sterquilinous† (stėr-kwi-lī'nus), a. [< L. sterquilinium, sterculinium, stercilinium, sterquilinum, a dunghill or dung-pit, < stercus, dung.] Pertaining to a dunghill; hence, mean; dirty; paltry. Howell, Letters, ii. 48.

sterraster (ste-ras'tėr), n. [< Gr. στερρός, var. of στερεός, solid, + ἀστήρ, star.] A form of spongespicule characteristic of the family Geodinidæ. It is of the polyaxon type, having many rays coalesced for the greater part of their lengths, but ending in separate hooklets.

Sterrastrosa (ster-as-trō'sä), n. pl. [NL.: see sterraster.] In Sollas's classification, a group of choristidan tetractinellid sponges, in which sterrasters are present, usually in addition to simple asters, as in the families Geodinidæ and Placospongidæ: distinguished from Spirastrosa and Euastrosa.

sterrastrose (ste-ras'trōs), a. [< NL. sterrastrosus, < sterraster, q. v.] Provided with sterrasters, as a sponge; of or pertaining to the Sterrastrosa: distinguished from spirastrose.

sterret, n. A Middle English form of star[1].

sterrinck (ster'ingk), n. A seal of the genus Stenorhynchus (Ogmorhinus) or of the subfamily Stenorhynchinæ: as, the saw-toothed or crabeating sterrinck, Lobodon carcinophagus.

sterro-metal (ster'ō-met″al), n. An alloy of about three parts of copper with two of zinc, to which a small amount of iron and tin is added. This alloy is not in general use, but is said to be superior to gun-metal in tenacity, while at the same time less expensive. It has been used in Austria for the pumps of hydraulic presses.

stert[1] (stėrt), v. A dialectal spelling of start[1].

stert[2]†, n. A Middle English form of start[2].

sterte†. [Inf. sterte(n), pret. sterte, pp. stert.] An obsolete preterit of start[1].

stertor (stėr'tor), n. [< NL. stertor, < L. stertere, snore.] A heavy snoring sound which accompanies inspiration in certain diseases. Compare stertorous.

stertorious (stėr-tō'ri-us), a. [< stertor + -i-ous.] Same as stertorous. Poe, Prose Tales, I. 125.

stertoriousness (stėr-tō'ri-us-nes), n. Same as stertorousness. Poe, Prose Tales, I. 125.

stertorous (stėr'tō-rus), a. [< stertor + -ous.] Characterized by a deep snoring sound, such as characterizes the laborious breathing which frequently accompanies certain diseases, as apoplexy.

stertorously (stėr'tō-rus-li), adv. In a stertorous manner.

stertorousness (stėr'tō-rus-nes), n. The quality or state of being stertorous.

starve†, v. A Middle English form of starve.

Stesichorean (ste-sik-ō-rē'an), a. [< LL. Stesichorēus, Stesichorius, < Gr. Στησίχορειος, Stesichorean, < Στησίχορος, Stesichorus (see def.).] Of or pertaining to the Greek lyric poet Stesichorus (Tisias) of Himera (about 632–550 B. C.), inventor of epodic composition; specifically, in anc. pros., noting (a) a trochaic trimeter of the form — ⏑ — — | — ⏑ — — | — ⏑ — —; (b) an encomiologic verse; (c) a line consisting of two dactylic tetrapodies, the last foot a spondee.

stet (stet). [L., 3d pers. sing. pres. subj. act. of stare, stand: see stand.] Let it (that is, the original) stand: a proof-reader's order to cancel an alteration previously made by him. It is indicated by putting a line of dots under what is crossed out, and writing "stet" in the margin. Abbreviated st.

stet (stet), v. t.; pret. and pp. stetted, ppr. stetting. To mark with the word "stet"; direct or cause to remain, after deletion, as printed; forbear to delete. [Colloq.]

stetch (stech), n. A ridge between two furrows, as in plowed land. [Prov. Eng.]

stetch (stech), v. t. [< stetch, n.] To form into ridges with a plow: followed by up. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

stethiæum (steth-i-ē'um), n.; pl. stethiæa (-ä). [NL., < Gr. στηθιαῖος, of the breast, < στῆθος, the breast.] In ornith., the entire anterior half of a bird: opposed to uræum. [Rare.]

stethidium (stē-thid'i-um), n.; pl. stethidia (-ä). [NL., dim. of Gr. στῆθος, the breast.] In entom., the thorax. Illiger.

stethograph (steth'ō-graf), n. [< Gr. στῆθος, the breast, + γράφειν, write.] An instrument for recording the respiratory movements of the thorax. Also called pneumograph.

stethographic (steth-ō-graf'ik), a. [< stethograph + -ic.] Of or pertaining to, or obtained by means of, the stethograph. Nature, XLII. 581.

stethometer (stē-thom'e-tėr), n. [< Gr. στῆθος, the breast, + μέτρον, a measure.] An instrument for measuring the respiratory movements of the walls of the chest. In one form a cord or band is extended round the chest, and its extension, as the thorax is expanded, is shown by an index on a dial-plate.

stethoscope (steth'ō-skōp), n. [= F. stéthoscope, < Gr. στῆθος, the breast, + σκοπεῖν, view.] An instrument used in auscultation to convey the sounds from the chest or other part of the patient to the ear of the observer. — Binaural stethoscope, a stethoscope in which the sound is conducted to both ears. — Differential stethoscope, a double stethoscope having elastic tubular branches and bells which can be applied to different parts of the thorax so as to compare the indications at various points.

Stethoscopes.
a, binaural stethoscope.

stethoscope (steth'ō-skōp), v. t.; pret. and pp. stethoscoped, ppr. stethoscoping. [< stethoscope, n.] To examine by means of a stethoscope. Lancet, 1890, II. 1267.

stethoscopic (steth-ō-skop'ik), a. [< stethoscope + -ic.] Of or pertaining to stethoscopy or the stethoscope; obtained by means of the stethoscope.

stethoscopical (steth-ō-skop'i-kal), a. [< stethoscopic + -al.] Same as stethoscopic.

stethoscopically (steth-ō-skop'i-kal-i), adv. In a stethoscopic manner; by means of the stethoscope.

stethoscopist (steth'ō-skō-pist), n. [< stethoscop-y + -ist.] One who is versed in the use of the stethoscope.

stethoscopy (steth'ō-skō-pi), n. [< Gr. στῆθος, the breast, + -σκοπία, < σκοπεῖν, view.] 1. The examination of the chest.—2. Auscultation with a stethoscope.

stet processus (stet prō-ses'us). [Law L.: L. stet, 3d pers. sing. pres. subj. act. of stare, stand; processus, process.] In old Eng. law: (a) The termination of a suit at law, upon consent of the parties, by an order of court having the effect of staying permanently all further proceedings. (b) The phrase entered on the record as expressing that order.

steve, v. t. See steeve[3].

stevedore (stē've-dōr), n. [< Sp. estivador, a wool-packer, hence a stower of wool for exportation, and gen. one who stows a cargo (cf. Sp. estiva = It. stiva = OF. estive, stowage, ballast), < estivar = Pg. estivar = It. stivare, press close, stow (a cargo), < L. stipare, press together: see stive[2].] One whose occupation is the stowage of goods, packages, etc., in a ship's hold; one who loads or unloads vessels.

steven (stev'en), n. [Early mod. E. also steaven; < ME. steven, stevene, stevyn, stevyne, stefne, stemne, < AS. stefn, stemn = OS. stemna, stemnia = OFries. stemma = MD. stemme, D. stem = MLG. stempne, stemme, LG. stemme = OHG. stimna, stimma, MHG. G. stimme, voice, = Icel. stefna, stemna, direction, summons, = Sw. stämma = Dan. stemme = Goth. stibna, voice; root and connections unknown. Cf. Gr. στόμα, mouth.] 1†. Voice; the voice.

When Little John heard his master speake, Well knew he it was his steven.
Robin Hood and Guy of Gisborne. (Halliwell.)

2†. Speech; speaking; crying out.

Manne, stynte of thy steuen and be stille.
York Plays, p. 365.

3†. That which is uttered; a speech or cry; prayer.

To thee, lady, y make my moone; I praie thee heere my steuen. Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 6.

4†. Word: bidding; command; direction.

Thre semely sonnes and a worthy wiffe
I haue euer at my steven to stande.
York Plays, p. 45.

5. One's word or promise; an agreement; an appointment; hence, anything fixed by appointment.

Stephen kept his steaven, and to the time he gave Came to demand what penance he should have.
Ellis, Spec. of Anc. Poetry, III. 121. (Nares.)

At unset steven†, at a time or place not previously specified; without definite appointment.

It is ful fair a man to bere hym evene,
For al day meeteth men at unset stevene.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 666.

To set a steven, to make an agreement; fix an appointed time. [Prov. Eng.]

Hit fil, on a tyde,
That by her bothe assent was set a steven.
Chaucer, Complaint of Mars, l. 52.

steven (stev'en), v. [< ME. stevenen, < AS. stefnian, call, summon (= Icel. stefna, stemna, cite, summon), < stefn, stemn, voice: see steven, n.] I. trans. 1†. To speak; utter; tell of; name.

In Rome Y shalle gou steuene
And [an] honyred kyrkes fowrty and seuen.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 113.

2†. To call; summon; command; appoint.

Lord God! I loue the lastandly,
And highly, botht with harte and hande,
That me, thy poure prophett Hely,
Haue steuened me in this stede to stande.
York Plays, p. 187.

3. To bespeak. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

II.† intrans. To talk; call out; shout; make a noise.

Ye rebaldis that regnys in this rowte, ȝe stynte of youre steuenyng so stowte.
York Plays, p. 307.

stevened†, a. [< late ME. stevynyd, stevend, stevynd, also and appar. orig. steyned, steynyd, stened, lit. 'stained,' pp. of steynen, steinen, stain: see stain.] Party-colored. Cath. Ang., p. 363.

Item, a stevynyd clothe, a crucifix, . . . xxd.
Paston Letters, III. 408.

Stevia (stē'vi-ä), n. [NL. (Cavanilles, 1797), named after Esteve, a Spanish scientist.] 1. A genus of composite plants, of the tribe Eupatorieæ and subtribe Ageratex. It is characterized by crowded corymbose or loosely panicled heads with five or six nearly equal involucral bracts, five flowers, appendaged anthers, and a variable pappus of several scales or awns or of both mingled in the same head. Over one hundred species have been described, natives of the warmer parts of America from Buenos Ayres to Mexico, and especially numerous westward; absent in tropical Brazil and nearly so in Guiana. They are herbs or shrubs, often somewhat rigid, or rarely diffuse. Their leaves are usually opposite, three-nerved, and serrate, sometimes entire or three-parted. The flowers are white or purplish, forming slender heads. Several species are cultivated as border-plants in Europe. In the United States Piqueria trinervia, a plant bearing a profusion of small white fragrant flowers, is grown under glass in great quantities for cutting and for winter use in houses and is improperly known as S. serrata. Five species extend within the United States into Arizona or Texas.

2. [l. c.] A plant of this genus.

stew[1] (stū), n. [< ME. stewe, stue, stuw, stw, etc., pl. stewes, stues, stuwes, stywes, stives, stuyves, < OF. estuve, estouve, a heated room, hothouse, bath-room, F. étuve, a vapor-bath, stove, = Sp. Pg. estufa = It. stufa, stove, hothouse, < OHG. stubā, stupā, MHG. stube, a heated room, a bath-room, G. stube, a room or chamber in general, = MLG. stove = MD. stove = AS. stofa, a hothouse, bath-room: see stove[1], the same word in a more orig. form. In defs. 8 and 9 the noun is from the verb.] 1. A heated room, especially such a room for bathing purposes; a hothouse; a stove.

It fresethe more strongly in tho Contrees than on this half; and therfore hathe every man Stewes in his Hous, and in tho Stewes thei eten and don here Occupatiouns, alle that thei may. Mandeville, Travels, p. 131.

Whan he came out of his stewe or bayne, he axyd drynke, by the force whereof he was poysoned.
Fabyan, Chron., cxxv.

It [a small artificially warmed room] is used for drying various substances, as plants, extracts, conserves, &c., or for taking vapor baths. In this case the stew or stove is said to be wet or humid; in the opposite case it is said to be dry. Dunglison, Med. Dict., p. 987.

2. Specifically, a hatters' drying-room. Halliwell.—3†. A room; a chamber; a closet.

Troylus, that stood and myghte it se
Thorghout a litel wyndowe in a stewe,
Ther he bishet, sen mydnyght, was on mewe.
Chaucer, Troilus, iii. 601.

4. A brothel; a bagnio: often used in the plural, sometimes with the force of a singular noun.

Sleuthe . . . wedded on Wanhope, a wenche of the stewes. Piers Plowman (C), xxiii. 159.

Wommen of the styves. Chaucer, Friar's Tale, l. 34.

Shall we every decency confound?
Through taverns, stews, and bagnios take our round?
Pope, Imit. of Horace, I. vi. 120.

5†. A lock hospital. See hospital.

In the borough of Southwark, prior to the time sometimes fixed upon for the origin of syphilis, there were places called stews, where prostitutes were confined and received the benefits of surgical assistance.
S. Cooper, Practice of Surgery (6th ed.), p. 332. [(Encyc. Dict.)

6†. A prostitute: sometimes in the plural form with a singular meaning.

And shall Cassandra now be termed, in common speeche, a stewes? G. Whetstone, Promos and Cass., I., iv. 3.

It was so plotted betwixt her husband and Bristoll that instead of that beauty he had a notorious stew sent to him.
Sir A. Weldon, Court of K. James, p. 146.

7†. A close vessel in which something is cooked or stewed; a stew-pot or stew-pan.

I have seen corruption boil and bubble
Till it o'er-run the stew.
Shak., M. for M., v. 1. 321.

8. Food cooked by stewing; especially, meat or fish prepared by slow cooking in a liquid.

The contents of the kettle—a stew of meat and potatoes—. . . had been taken off the fire and turned out into a yellow platter.
George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, i. 11.

9. A state of agitation or ferment; mental disturbance; worry; fuss. [Colloq.]

And he, though naturally bold and stout,
In short, was in a most tremendous stew.
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 104.

Box-stew, an oyster-stew made of box-oysters—that is, of large select oysters.—Irish stew, a dish made of mutton, onions, and potatoes, and sometimes other vegetables, stewed in water mixed with flour, and seasoned with salt and pepper.

stew[1] (stū), v. [< ME. stewen, stuen, stuwen*, < OF. estuver (estuwer*), bathe, stew, F. étuver, stew, = Sp. estufar, estofar, estobar = Pg. estufar = It. stufare, stew (cf. D. MLG. LG. stoven (> G. stoven) = Sw. stufva = Dan. stuve, stew); from the noun: see stew[1], n. Cf. stive[3], a doublet of stew[1].] I. trans. 1†. To bathe, as in a liquid or a vapor-bath.

Stuwyn or bathyn, or stuyn in a stw. Balneo.
Prompt. Parv.

2†. Figuratively, to steep.

The Stockes were fitter for him; the most corrupted fellow about the Suburbs, his conscience is stewd in Bribes.
Brome, Sparagus Garden, v. 13.

3. To cook (food) by simmering or slowly boiling; prepare by cooking in a liquid kept at the simmering-point: as, to stew meat or fruit; to stew oysters.

Stuwyn or stuyn mete. Stupho. Prompt. Parv.

Stew'd shrimps and Afric cockles shall excite
A jaded drinker's languid appetite.
Francis, tr. of Horace's Satires, ii. 4.

Stewed Quaker. See Quaker.

II. intrans. To be cooked by slowly simmering.—To stew in one's own grease. See grease.

stew[2] (stū), n. [< ME. stewe, stue, stiewe, stive = MLG. stouwe, stouw, stou, stow, a dam, weir, fish-pond; connected with stouwen, dam, hem in, = G. stauen, dam, = MD. stouwen, heap up, collect. Cf. stow[1].] 1. A pond, usually artificial, used for domestic purposes; especially, a pool or tank in which fish are kept until needed for the table; a vivarium; a stew-pond.

Many a breem and many a luce in stuwe.
Chaucer, Gen. Prol. to C. T., l. 350.

At the Priory, a low and moist situation, there were ponds and stews for their fish.
Gilbert White, Antiq. of Selborne, Letter xxvi.

We find vivarium sometimes rendered as "vivary" and at other times as "stew." Athenæum, No. 3234, p. 524.

2. A breeding-place for tame pheasants. Encyc. Dict.—3. An artificial bed of oysters: used of the old Roman and also of the modern methods of fattening.

stew[3] (stū), n. [< ME. stew (Sc. pl. stovys), mist; cf. Dan. stöv, dust, D. stof, dust (stofregen, drizzling rain), G. staub, dust.] Dust; a cloud of dust, smoke, or vapor. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.] stew[4]†, v. A Middle English variant of stow[1].

steward (stū'ärd), n. [< ME. steward, stewarde, stewerd, stewerde, stuward, stuard (also stewart, stuart, as in the surname Stewart, Stuart; AF. estuard), earlier stiward, styward, < AS. stigweard, later stīweard (> Icel. stīvardhr), a steward, < stīgu, stīgo, a sty, pen for cattle, + weard, a ward: see sty[2] and ward. Cf. AS. stīgwita, stīwita, a steward, < stīgu, stīgo, a sty, + wita, an officer, adviser.] 1. One who has charge of the household or estate of another; a majordomo; especially, a person employed in a court, household, or important domestic establishment of any kind to superintend financial affairs, as by keeping accounts, collecting rents or other revenue, or disbursing money for household expenses.

This lessoun loke thow noȝt for-ȝete:
The stuard countroller, and tresurere,
Sittand at de deshe, thou haylse in fere.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 299.

The first of them, that eldest was and best,
Of all the house had charge and governement,
As Guardian and Steward of the rest.
Spenser, F. Q., I. x. 37.

Protector, steward, substitute
Or lowly factor for another's gain.
Shak., Rich. III., iii. 7. 133.

The hedge broke in, the banner blew,
The butler drank, the steward scrawl'd.
Tennyson, Day-Dream.

2. An officer or retainer appointed to perform duties similar to those mentioned above; especially, a person appointed to provide and distribute food and all the requisites of the table; a purveyor. (a) In some British colleges, one who has charge of the commons. (b) One of a ship's company whose duty it is to distribute provisions to the officers and crew. In passenger-ships he has charge of the table, servants, staterooms, etc., and is called distinctively chief steward, the title steward being also extended to his male helpers—those who wait at table and attend to the staterooms. In a man-of war the paymaster's steward is now styled paymaster's yeoman (see yeoman); the cabin-steward, ward-room steward, steerage-steward, and warrant-officers' steward are petty officers charged with providing for their several messes and keeping the apartments in order.

3. Figuratively, a manager; especially, one who controls expenditure; a disburser.

A man is but a steward of his owne goods; wherof God one day will demaund an account.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 251.

And what not rare? Luxury being the steward, and the treasure unexhaustible. Sandys, Travailes, p. 25.

4. Formerly, in the English gilds, one of the officers in charge of the finances of the society; also, a corresponding functionary in municipal affairs. The title is still given in English towns to magistrates varying in functions, authority, rank, etc. In this latter case it is usually qualified by some limiting word: as, the city steward of York; the land steward of Norwich; the town steward of Northampton; the lord high steward of Gloucester.

That the stewards of euery crafte that ben contributory shullen be called to the accompte to knowe the charge.
English Gilds (E. E. T. S.), p. 385.

5. In the early church, same as econome or œconomus.—6. A fiscal agent of certain bodies; specifically, in the Methodist Church, an officer having charge of the finances and certain other material interests of the church.—Hospital steward. See hospital.—Lord high steward of England, one of the former great officers of state: his chief functions were at an early date assumed by the justiciar. This office was the inheritance of the Earls of Leicester, till forfeited by Simon de Montfort to Henry III., at the close of whose reign it was abolished as a permanent dignity. A lord high steward is now created only for particular occasions—namely, a coronation or the trial of a peer—the office to cease when the business requiring it is ended. In the former case the lord high steward is commissioned to settle matters of precedence, etc.; in the latter, to preside in the House of Lords.—Lord steward of the household, in England, one of the chief officers of the royal household. He is the head of the court called the Board of Green Cloth, which has the supervision of the household expenses and accounts and their payment, the purveyance of provisions, etc.; but his duties are practically performed by a permanent official called the master of the household. The lord steward is a peer and a member of the ministry.—Steward, or high steward of Scotland, an ancient officer of the crown of the highest dignity and trust. He had not only the administration of the crown revenues, but the chief oversight of all the affairs of the household, and the privilege of the first place in the army, next to the king, in battle.—Steward of the Chiltern Hundreds. See Chiltern Hundreds, under hundred.

steward (stū′ärd), v. t. [< steward, n.] To manage as a steward.

Did he thus requite his mother's care in stewarding the estate? Fuller, Holy War, p. 85.

stewardess (stū′är-des), n. [< steward + -ess.] A female steward; specifically, a woman who waits upon women in passenger-vessels, etc.

My new attendant . . . told me she had formerly been the stewardess of a passenger vessel at the same time that her husband was steward.
Jean Ingelow, Off the Skelligs, vi.

stewardly (stū′ärd-li), adv. With or as with the care of a steward; prudently; providently. [Rare.]

It is with a provident deliberation, not a rash and prodigal hand, to be dealt; and to be stewardly dispensed, not wastefully spent.
Tooker, Fabrick of the Church (1604), p. 48. (Latham.) stewardly (stū′ärd-li), a. Managing; careful; provident. Halliwell.

stewardry (stū′ärd-ri), n. [Also stewartry, q. v.; < steward + -ry.] Stewardship.

stewardship (stū′ärd-ship), n. [< ME. stiwardshepe; < steward + -ship.] The office or functions of a steward.

He hym gaue, withynne a litill space,
Of all his lande the Stiwar[d]shepe to holde,
And full power to rewle it as he wold.
Generydes (E. E. T. S.), l. 1056.

Give an account of thy stewardship, for thou mayest be no longer steward. Luke xvi. 2.

stewart†, n. An obsolete spelling of steward.

stewartry (stū′ärt-ri), n. [Sc. var. of stewardry.] 1†. Same as stewardry.

As an human stewartry, or trust,
Of which account is to be giv'n, and just.
Byrom, Poetical Version of a Letter.

2. In Scotland, a jurisdiction over a certain extent of territory, very similar to that of a regality; also, the territory over which this jurisdiction extends. Most stewartries consisted of small parcels of land which were only parts of a county; but the stewartry of Kirkcudbright (often called distinctively "The Stewartry"), and that of Orkney and Shetland, make counties by themselves.

stewed† (stūd), a. [< stew[1] + -ed[2].] Lodged in or belonging to the stews.

O Aristippus, thou art a greate medler with this woman, beyng a stewed strumpette.
Udall, tr. of Apophthegms of Erasmus. (Davies.)

stewerd†, n. An old spelling of steward.

stewish† (stū′ish), a. [< stew[1] + -ish[1].] Pertaining to or befitting the stews.

Rhymed in rules of stewish ribaldry.
Bp. Hall, Satires, I. ix. 9.

stew-pan (stū′pan), n. A utensil in which anything is stewed.

stew-pond (stū′pond), n. Same as stew[2].

There is a dovecote, some delightful stew-ponds, and a very pretty canal.
Jane Austen, Sense and Sensibility, xxx.

stew-pot (stū′pot), n. 1. A pot with a cover for making stews, soups, etc.—2. A covered pan used for heating rooms with charcoal. [Prov. Eng.]

stey†, steyer†, v. and n. Same as sty[1].

steyere†, n. A Middle English form of stair.

stg. An abbreviation of sterling.

sthenia (sthe-nī′ä), n. [NL., < Gr. σθένος, strength.] In pathol., strength; excessive force: opposed to asthenia or debility.

sthenic (sthen′ik), a. [< Gr. σθένος, strength, might, + -ic.] 1. Strong; robust; characterized by power of organization or energy of function, as a part or organ of an animal. See megasthenic, microsthenic.—2. In pathol., attended with a morbid increase of vital (especially cardiac) action. Sthenic diseases are opposed to diseases of debility, or asthenic diseases.—3. Exciting; inspiring: said of feeling. [A use introduced by Kant.]

sthenochire (sthen′ō-kīr), n. [< Gr. σθένος, strength, + χείρ, hand.] An apparatus for exercising and strengthening the hands for pianoforte- or organ-playing.

stiacciato (stiä-chä′tō), a. [It., crushed, flattened (cf. stiacciato, n., a cake), pp. of stiacciare, crush, press.] In decorative art, in very low relief, as if a bas-relief had been pressed flatter.

stiant†, n. A variant of styan for sty[3].

stib (stib), n. [Origin obscure.] The American dunlin, purre, or ox-bird: a gunners' name. See cut under dunlin. F. C. Browne, 1876. [Massachusetts.]

stibble (stib′l), n. A dialectal (Scotch) form of stubble.

stibbler (stib′lėr), n. [< stibble + -er[1].] 1. One who goes from ridge to ridge on the harvest-field, and cuts and gathers the handfuls left by the reapers. Jamieson. Hence—2. One who has no settled charge, but goes from place to place: often applied humorously to a clerical probationer. Scott, Guy Mannering, xlvi. [Scotch in both senses.]

stibborne†, a. A Middle English spelling of stubborn.

stibial (stib′i-al), a. [< NL. stibium + -al.] Like or having the qualities of antimony; antimonial.

stibialism (stib′i-al-izm), n. [< stibial + -ism.] Antimonial intoxication or poisoning. Dunglison.

stibiated (stib′i-ā-ted), a. [< NL. stibium + -ate[1] + -ed[2].] Impregnated with antimony.

stibic (stib′ik), a. [< NL. stibium + -ic.] Same as antimonic.

stibiconite (stib′i-kon-īt), n. [< L. stibium, antimony, + Gr. κονία, powder.] A hydrous oxid of antimony, sometimes massive and compact, and also in powder as an incrustation.

stibious (stib′i-us), a. [< NL. stibium + -ous.] Same as antimonious.

stibium (stib′i-um), n. [NL., < L. stibium, also stibi, stimmi, < Gr. στίβι, στίμμι, a sulphuret of antimony. Cf. antimony.] Antimony.

stiblite (stib′līt), n. Same as stibiconite.

stibnite (stib′nīt), n. [< NL. stibium + -n- (?) + -ite[2].] Native antimony trisulphid (Sb_2S_3), a mineral usually occurring in orthorhombic crystals, sometimes of great size, often acicular, and also massive. See cut under acicular. The color is lead-gray. Stibnite is sometimes blackish and dull externally, and with an iridescent tarnish, but when fresh it has a very brilliant metallic luster, especially on the surface of perfect cleavage. It is very soft, yielding to the pressure of the nail. This ore is the source of most of the antimony of commerce. Also called antimonite and antimony-glance.

stibogram (stib′ō-gram), n. [< Gr. στίβος, a footstep, + γράμμα, a writing.] A graphic record of footprints.

stiborn†, stibourn†, a. Middle English forms of stubborn.

stich (stik), n. [< Gr. στίχος, a row, order, line, < στείχειν, go in line or order: see sty[1]. The word occurs in acrostic[1] (for acrostich), distich, etc.] 1. A verse, of whatever measure or number of feet.—2. A line in the Scriptures.—3. A row or rank, as of trees.

sticharion (sti-kā′ri-on), n.; pl. sticharia (-ä). [< LGr. στιχάριον.] In the Gr. Ch., a vestment corresponding to the alb of the Western Church. Like the alb, it is a long robe with close sleeves, and formerly was of white linen. At the present day, however, it is often of silk or other rich material, and may be purple in color. It is worn by subdeacons, deacons, priests, and bishops.

stichel (stich′el), n. [Also stichall, stetchil; origin obscure.] A term of reproach, applied especially by parents to children. Halliwell. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

Barren, stichel! that shall not serve thy turn.
Lady Alimony, I. 4 b.

sticher (stich′ėr), v. i. [Assibilated freq. of stick[1].] To catch eels in a particular way. See quotation under sticherer.

"Stichering," a Hampshire method [of catching eels], is perhaps one of the most amusing.
Pop. Sci. Mo., XXIX. 259.

sticherer (stich′ėr-ėr), n. [< sticher + -er[1].] One who stichers.

In the wide, deep drains used for irrigation eels abound, and the object of the sticherer is to thrust the sickle under the eel's body, and, with a sudden hoist, to land him on the bank, from which he is transferred to the bag.
Pop. Sci. Mo., XXIX. 259.

sticheron (sti-kē′ron), n.; pl. stichera (-rä). [< MGr. στιχηρόν (sc. τροπάριον), neut. of στιχηρός, pertaining to a versicle, < Gr. στίχος, a verse, versicle.] In the Gr. Ch., a troparion, or one of several troparia, following the psalms and intermingled with stichoi. See stichos.

stichic (stik′ik), a. [< Gr. στιχικός, of lines or verses, < στίχος, a row, line: see stich.] Pertaining to a verse or line; consisting of verses or lines; linear; specifically, in anc. pros., composed of lines of the same metrical form throughout: opposed to systematic.

The stichic portions of the cantica of Terence are divided into strophes. Amer. Jour. Philol., VII. 399.

stichid (stik′id), n. [< stichidium, q. v.] In bot., same as stichidium.

stichidium (sti-kid′i-um), n.; pl. stichidia (-ä). [NL., < Gr. στίχος, a row, line, + dim. -ίδιον.] In bot., a peculiarly modified branch of the thallus in some algæ, which serves as a receptacle for the tetraspores. See cut under Algæ. Farlow, Marine Algæ, p. 165.

stichomancy (stik′ō-man-si), n. [< Gr. στίχος, a row, line, + μαντεία, divination.] Divination by lines or passages in books taken at hazard; bibliomancy.

stichometric (stik-ō-met′rik), a. [< stichometr-y + -ic.] Same as stichometrical. J. R. Harris, Jour. of Philol., No. 15, p. 310.

stichometrical (stik-ō-met′ri-kal), a. [< stichometric + -al.] Of or pertaining to stichometry; characterized by measurement by stichs or lines; stating the number of lines.

Quite lately Mommsen has published . . . a previously unknown stichometrical catalogue of the books of the Bible, and also of the writings of Cyprian.
Salmon, Int. to the New Testament, p. 559, note.

stichometry (sti-kom′e-tri), n. [< Gr. στίχος, a row, line, verse, + -μετρία, < μέτρον, a measure.] In paleog., measurement of manuscripts by lines of fixed or average length; also, an edition or a list containing or stating such measurement.

It ["The Assumption of Moses"] is included in the stichometry of Nicephorus, who assigns it the same length . . . as the Apocalypse of St. John.
Salmon, Int. to the New Testament, p. 526.

stichomythia (stik-ō-mith′i-ä), n. [< Gr. στιχομυθία, dialogue in alternate lines, < στιχομυθεῖν, answer one another line by line: see stich and myth.] In anc. Gr. drama and bucolic poetry, dialogue in alternate lines, or pairs or groups of lines; also, arrangement of lines in this manner. Usually in such dialogue one speaker opposes or corrects the other, often with partial repetition or imitation of his words. Also stichomythy.

The speeches of this play are of inordinate length, though stichomythia in the Greek antithetical manner is also introduced. A. W. Ward, Eng. Dram. Lit., I. 118.

stichos (stik′os), n.; pl. stichoi (-oi). [< Gr. στίχος, a row, line, verse.] 1. In paleog., a line of average length assumed in measuring the length of a manuscript. See epos, 3, and stichometry.—2. In the Gr. Ch., a verse or versicle, as in the psalter or the odes; especially, a verse or part of a verse from a psalm, used as a versicle.

stichwort†, n. See stitchwort.

stick[1] (stik), v.; pret. and pp. stuck, ppr. sticking. [A verb confused in form and meanings with stick[2], stick[1] being more prop. steek (as in dial. uses) or steak* (after the analogy of break, speak, etc.); E. dial. steek, Sc. steik, etc.; < ME. stiken, prop. steken (pret. stak, pp. steken, i-steken, y-steke, stiken, stoken; also, by conformity with stick[2], pret. stiked, stikede, pp. stiked), < AS. stecan* (pret. stæc*, pp. stecen*), pierce, stab, = OS. stekan (pret. stak) = OFries. steka = MD. D. steken = MLG. LG. steken = OHG. stechan, stehhan, MHG. G. stechen (pret. stach, pp. gestochen), pierce; not found in Scand. or Goth. (the Goth. form would be stikan*; cf. Goth. staks, a mark, stigma, stiks, a point, a moment of time); Teut. √ stik = L. √ stig (in instigare, prick, instigate, stinguere* (in comp. distinguere, distinguish, exstinguere, extinguish), stimulus, a prick, goad, stilus, a point, style, etc.) = Gr. √ στιγ (in στίζειν, prick, στίγμα, a prick, mark, spot) = Skt. √ tij for stij*, be sharp. From this root are ult. E. stick[2], stick[3], stitch, steak, sting, etc., and, through OF., ticket, etiquette (from a collateral Teut. root, stake[1], stock[1], stang[1], stoke[2], stoker, etc.); from the L. root are ult. E. style[1], distinguish, extinguish, distinct, extinct, instinct, stimulate, stimulus, instigate, prestige, etc. The verb stick[1], pierce, has been confused, partly in ME. and completely in mod. E., with its derivative stick[2]. The reg. mod. pret. of stick[1] would be stack* or stake* (as in ME.), but the pret. has yielded to the influence of the pp., and, becoming stoke*, appears in mod. E. with shortened vowel stuck, as also in the pp. (cf. break, pret. brake, now broke, pp. broken; speak, pret. spake, now spoke, pp. spoken—verbs phonetically parallel to stick[1]).] I. trans. 1. To pierce or puncture with a pointed instrument, as a dagger, sword, or pin; pierce; stab.

The sowdan and the Cristen everichone
Ben al tohewe [hewed] and stiked at the bord.
Chaucer, Man of Law's Tale, l. 332.

He drew his shining blade,
Thinking to stick her where she stood.
Clerk Colvill; or, The Mermaid (Child's Ballads, I. 194).

A villain fitter to stick swine
Than ride abroad redressing women's wrong.
Tennyson, Gareth and Lynette.

2. To push, thrust, or drive the point or end of, as into something which one seeks to pierce, or into a socket or other receptacle; place and fix by thrusting into something.

A broche golde and asure,
In whiche a ruby set was lik an herte,
Cryseyde hym gaf, and stak it on his sherte.
Chaucer, Troilus, iii. 1372.

The Israelites . . . neither prayed to him, neither kissed his bones, nor offered, nor sticked up candles before him.
Tyndale, Ans. to Sir T. More, etc. (Parker Soc., 1850), p. 123.

I would not see . . . thy fierce sister
In his anointed flesh stick boarish fangs.
Shak., Lear, iii. 7. 58.

3. To thrust; cause to penetrate or enter in any way; loosely, to thrust or put (something) where it will remain, without any idea of penetration.

Byndez byhynde, at his bak, bothe two his handez, . . .
Stik hym stifly in stokez.
Alliterative Poems (ed. Morris), ii. 157.

A lean old gentleman . . . stuck his head out of the window. J. S. Le Fanu, Dragon Volant, i.

Behind the said ear was stuck a fresh rose.
Kingsley, Westward Ho, ii.

4. To insert in something punctured: as, to stick card-teeth; hence, to set with something pointed or with what is stuck in: as, to stick a cushion full of pins.

Tho chambur dore stekes tho vsshер thenne
With preket [candles] and tortes [torches] that conne brenne. Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 315.

Biron. A lemon.
Long. Stuck with cloves. Shak., L. L. L., v. 2. 654.

5. To thrust or fix upon something pointed: as, to stick a potato on a fork

Their heads were stuck upon spears.
Burke, Rev. in France.

6. In carp., to run or strike (a molding) with a molding-plane.—7†. To close; shut; shut up. See steek.

When the kyng had consayuit Cassandra noise,
He comaundet hir be caght, & closit full hard:
In a stithe house of ston stake hir vp fast.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 7191.

Stick a pin there, make a note of that; take heed of that. [Colloq.]—To stick off†, to set off; adorn. Compare the phrase and quotation under II.

The humble variety whereof [of the Torch-bearers' habits] stucke off the more amplie the maskers high beauties, shining in the habits of themselues.
Chapman, Masque of the Middle Temple.

To stick out, to cause to project; protrude.—To stick pigs, to hunt wild hogs with the spear, the hunter being mounted, especially in British India. [Colloq.]

II. intrans. 1. To be fastened or fixed by or as by piercing or by insertion; remain where thrust in: as, the arrow sticks in the target.

Therein stiked a lily flour. Chaucer, Sir Thopas, l. 196.

Lucretia's glove, wherein her needle sticks.
Shak., Lucrece, l. 317.

2. To be thrust; extend or protrude in any direction.

She espied his cloven foot,
From his gay robes sticking thro'.
The Dæmon Lover (Child's Ballads, I. 303).

To stick off†, to appear to advantage; show off; make a display.

I'll be your foil, Laertes; in mine ignorance
Your skill shall, like a star i' the darkest night, Stick fiery off indeed. Shak., Hamlet, v. 2. 268.

To stick out, to project; be prominent.

One hair a little here sticks out. forsooth.
B. Jonson, Volpone, iii. 2.

To stick up, to stand up; be erect. [Colloq.]—To stick up for, to espouse or maintain the cause of, speak or act in defense of; defend: as, to stick up for an absent friend; to stick up for the truth or one's rights. [Colloq.]

Heard him abuse you to Ringwood. Ringwood stuck up for you and for your poor governor—spoke up like a man—like a man who sticks up for a fellow who is down.
Thackeray, Philip, xl.

To stick up to. Same as to stand up to (which see, under stand). [Colloq.]

No matter how excellent may be the original disposition of the head boy, if there is no one who dare stick up to him, he soon becomes intolerable.
Contemporary Rev., LV. 173.

stick[1] (stik), n. [< stick[1], v.] A thrust with a pointed instrument which pierces, or is intended to pierce.

stick[2] (stik), v.; pret. and pp. stuck (formerly sticked), ppr. sticking. [< ME. sticken, stikken, stykken, stiken, styken, steken, stikien, stykien, stekien (pret. stikede, etc.; also, by conformity with stick[1], pret. stak, pp. steken, stoken), be fastened, adhere, also fasten, < AS. stician (pret. sticode) (= MLG. steken), pierce, stab, intr. cleave, adhere, stick; a weak form, parallel with an unrecorded form to be assumed as the cognate of the LG., etc., weak verb, namely AS. steccan* = MD. stecken = MLG. LG. stecken = OHG. stecchen, MHG. G. stecken (pret. steckte; also, by conformity with stechen, pret. stack), stick, set, stick fast, remain, = Sw. sticka = Dan. stikke, stab, sting (these appar. due in part to the LG. forms cognate with stick[1]); not found in Goth., where the form would be stakjan*, standing for staikjan* = AS. as if stēcan*, etc., a secondary form from the root stik*, or else directly from the root stak*, a collateral form of the root stik*: see stick[1], and cf. stick[3]. The forms and senses of the primitive and derivative verbs become confused, and cannot now be wholly separated; in most dictionaries the two verbs are completely merged. Under stick[2] are put all uses of the verb so spelled not clearly belonging originally to stick[1] or stick[3]. The proper pret. of stick[2] is sticked; this has been superseded by stuck, or dial. stack (ME. stak), which prop. belongs only to stick[1].] I. trans. 1. To pierce; stab. See stick[1].—2. To fasten or attach by causing to adhere: as, to stick a postage-stamp on a letter.

Twenty ballads stuck about the wall.
I. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 65.

You should be on the look-out when Debarry's side have stuck up fresh bills, and go and paste yours over them.
George Eliot, Felix Holt, xxviii.

3. To cause to come to a stand; puzzle; pose. [Slang.]—4. To impose upon; cheat; chouse. [Slang.]

The pawnbrokers have been so often stuck . . . with inferior instruments that it is difficult to pledge even a really good violin.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, II. 18.

The second purchaser found a customer willing to give ten francs for it, but the latter's family so ridiculed him for having been stuck on the canvas that he put it away out of sight in his garret. The American, XIII. 14.

5. To beat, as at a game of cards: with for before the penalty or stake: as, to stick one for the drinks at poker. [Slang.]—To be stuck on, to be greatly taken with; be enamored of. [Slang, U. S.]—To be stuck up, to be proud or conceited. [Colloq.]—To stick one's self up, to exalt or display one's self; assert one's self. [Colloq.]—To stick up, to plunder; waylay and rob: as, to stick up a mail-coach; to stick up a bank. [Bush-rangers' slang, Australia.]

Having attacked, or, in Australian phrase, stuck up the station, and made prisoners of all the inmates.
Leisure Hour, March, 1885, p. 192. (Encyc. Dict.)

II. intrans. 1. To cleave as by attraction or adhesion; adhere closely or tenaciously.

She nadde on but a streit olde sak,
And many a cloute on it ther stak.
Rom. of the Rose, l. 458.

The gray hairs yet stack to the heft.
Burns, Tam o' Shanter.

And on thy ribs the limpet sticks.
Tennyson, The Sailor-Boy.

2. To remain where placed; hold fast; adhere; cling; abide.

A born devil, on whose nature Nurture can never stick. Shak., Tempest, iv. 1. 189.

Now began an ill name to stick upon the Bishops of Rome and Alexandria. Milton, Reformation in Eng., ii.

But finding that they [doubts] still stuck with his followers, he took the last and best way of satisfying them.
Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, II. ii.

"We may teach you to ride by-and-by, I see; I thought not to see you stick on so long—" "I should have stuck on much longer, sir, if her sides had not been wet."
R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, xi.

3. To hold or cling in friendship and affection.

There is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.
Prov. xviii. 24.

Like true, inseparable, faithful loves,
Sticking together in calamity.
Shak., K. John, iii. 4. 67.

4. To be hindered from proceeding or advancing; be restrained from moving onward or from acting; be arrested in a course, career, or progress; be checked or arrested; stop.

And zit in my synne y stonde and sticke,
Yuel custum ys ful hard to blynne.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 197.

I had most need of blessing, and "Amen"
Stuck in my throat. Shak., Macbeth, ii. 2. 33.

We stuck upon a sand bank so fast that it was after sunset before we could get off.
Bruce, Source of the Nile, I. 93.

5. To be embarrassed or puzzled; be brought to a standstill, as by being unable to interpret or remember the words one is attempting to read or recite.

They will stick a long time at a part of a demonstration, not for want of will and application, but really for want of perceiving the connection of two ideas.
Locke, Conduct of the Understanding, § 6.

Some of the young chaps stick in their parts. They get the stage-fever and knocking in the knees.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, III. 142.

6. To scruple; hesitate: with at.

I . . . desired his opinion of it, and in particular touching the paucity of Auditors, whereat I formerly sticked, as you may remember.
Thomas Adams, in Ellis's Lit. Letters, p. 148.

To serve him I should, I think, stick at nothing.
Pepys, Diary, IV. 141.

To stick at it, to persevere. [Colloq.]—To stick by. (a) To adhere closely to; be constant or faithful to.

For, of so many thousands that were vnder mine empire, you only haue folowed and sticked by me.
J. Brende, tr. of Quintus Curtius, v.

(b) To remain with; abide in the memory or possession of: as, ill-gotten gains never stick by a man.

Nothing stickes faster by vs, as appeares,
Then that which we learne in our tender yeares.
Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 197.

To stick in one's gizzard. See gizzard.—To stick in or to one's fingers, to remain unlawfully in one's hands.

He was—if half Leicester's accusations are to be believed—a most infamous peculator. One-third of the money sent by the Queen for the soldiers stuck in his fingers.
Motley, Hist. United Netherlands, II. 87.

To stick out, to refuse to comply or come to terms; hold out or hold back: as, to stick out for a better price.—To stick to, to abide firmly and faithfully by; hold fast to: as, to stick to a resolution.

★stick[2] (stik), n. [< stick[2], v.] 1. An adhesion, as by attraction or viscosity.

A magnetic stick between the wheels and the rails, which largely augments the amount of traction.
Elect. Rev. (Amer.), XVII. 194.

2. Hesitation; demur; a stop; a standstill.

When he came to the Hill Difficulty, he made no stick at that, nor did he much fear the lions.
Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, Sixth Stage.

3. A strike among workmen. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

★stick[3] (stik), n. [< ME. sticke, stikke, < AS. sticca, a stick, peg, nail, = MD. stick, steck, MLG. sticke, LG. stikke = OHG. sticcho, steccho, stecho (> It. stecco, thorn, stecca, staff, F. étiquette, ticket, etc.), MHG. stecke, steche, G. stecken, a stick; cf. Icel. stika, stick (for fuel), a stick (yard-measure): so called as having orig. a sharp point; from the root of stick[1] (AS. stecan*, etc.): see stick[1], stick[2], and cf. stake, steak, stitch, stickle[1], etiquette, ticket, etc.; also stock[1], etc.] 1. A piece of wood, generally rather long and slender; a branch of a tree or shrub cut or broken off; also, a piece of wood chopped or cut for burning or other use: often used figuratively.

Of all townes, castels, fortes, bridges, and habitations, they left not any stick standing.
Spenser, State of Ireland.

Wither'd sticks to gather, which might serve Against a winter's day. Milton, P. R., I. 316.

Come, hostess, lay a few more sticks on the fire. And now, sing when you will.
I. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 174.

2. A cudgel; a rod; a wand; especially, a walking-stick or cane.

Al-though thow stryke me with thi staffe, with stikke or with zerde. Piers Plowman (B), xii. 14.

Your old friend Mr. Burchell, walking . . . with the great stick for which we used so much to ridicule him!
Goldsmith, Vicar, xxx.

Stick is a large genus, running up from switch to cudgel, from rod to bludgeon. De Quincey, Homer, ii.

3. Anything in the form of a stick, or somewhat long and slender: as, a stick of candy; a stick of sealing-wax; one of the sticks of a fan, whether of wood, metal, or other material.

A painted Landskip Fann, cutt. gilded Sticks.
Quoted in Ashton's Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, [I. 176.

4. Specifically—(a) The wand or baton with which a musical conductor directs a chorus or orchestra. (b) The wooden rod or back of a bow for playing on a musical instrument of the viol class. (c) The wooden rod or wand, with a rounded or padded head, with which a drum or similar musical instrument is beaten and sounded; a drumstick.—5. In printing: (a) A composing-stick. (b) A piece of furniture used to lock up a form in a chase or galley. It is called, according to the place it occupies, head-stick, foot-stick, side-stick, or gutter-stick.—6. The rod which is carried by the head of a rocket, and serves to direct its flight.

And the final event to himself [Mr. Burke] has been that, as he rose like a rocket, he fell like the stick.
T. Paine, Letter to the Addressers.

7. A timber-tree. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]—8. Naut., a mast: as, the gale was enough to blow the sticks out of her. [Humorous.]—9. That which is strung on a stick; a string: as, a stick of herring.—10. The number of twenty-five eels, or the tenth part of a bind, according to the old statute de ponderibus. Also called strike.—11. A stick-insect. See stick-bug and walking-stick.—12. A person who is stiff and awkward in bearing; hence, a stupid, incapable, or incompetent person. [Colloq.]

I was surprised to see Sir Henry such a stick. Luckily the strength of the piece did not depend upon him.
Jane Austen, Mansfield Park, xiii.

About the poorest stick for a legislator ever elected.
New York Tribune, Sept. 4, 1855.

As cross as two sticks. See cross[1].—Devil on two sticks. See devil.—In a cleft stick. See cleft[2].—Long stick. In measuring British muslins, long stick is the yard-measure of 36 inches and a thumb, equivalent to 37 inches. It is used to measure goods for the home market. Goods for the foreign market are measured by short stick, in which the yard consists of 35 inches and a thumb, or about 36 inches.—Middle stick, a measure containing 35½ inches and a thumb to the yard, or about 36½ inches.—Stick and stone, the whole; everything: as, to leave neither stick nor stone standing. Compare stock and block, under stock[1].

And this it was she swore, never to marry
But such a one whose mighty arm could carry . . .
Her bodily away through stick and stone.
Beau. and Fl., Knight of Burning Pestle, ii. 1.

To beat all to sticks, to outdo completely. [Colloq., Eng.]

Many ladies in Strasburg were beautiful, still
They were beat all to sticks by the lovely Odille.
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 239.

To cut one's stick. See cut.—To go to sticks and staves, to go to pieces; fall into ruin: in allusion to a tub with broken hoops.

She married a Highland drover or tacksman, I can't tell which, and they went all to sticks and staves.
Miss Ferrier, Inheritance, I. 95. (Jamieson.)

=Syn. 2. See staff.

stick[3] (stik), v. t. [< stick[3], n.] 1. To furnish or set with sticks, as for climbing upon: said of peas.

But I . . . must . . . go stick some rows of peas which are already flourishing in our new garden.
Carlyle, in Froude, First Forty Years, xxiv.

I was sticking peas in my own garden.
Jean Ingelow, Fated to be Free, vi.

2. In printing, to arrange in a composing-stick; compose: as, to stick type.

stickadore†, stickadove† (stik'a-dōr, -duv), n. [Also stickadoue, sticadoue, stickado, steckado, sticados; < F. stechados (Cotgrave), for corrupt forms of NL. stœchados, flos stœchados, flower of Stœchas: stœchados, gen. of Stœchas, q. v.] A species of lavender, Lavandula Stœchas, used officinally. See lavender[2].

stick-bait (stik'bāt), n. Insects or worms found sticking to the under surface of stones, and used as bait. [North Carolina.]

stick-bug (stik'bug), n. 1. Any orthopterous insect of the family Phasmidæ: particularly applied to Diapheromera femorata, the commonest insect of this kind in the United States, where it is also called wood-horse, stick-insect, twig-bug, twig-insect, walking-twig, walking-stick, prairie-alligator, specter, and devil's horse. See cut under Phasma. [Local, U. S.]—2. A predaceous reduvioid bug of the United States, Emesa longipes, with a long slender brown body and long spider-like legs, the front pair of which are raptorial; the spider-bug. When lodged on a twig, it swings its body back and forth like some of the daddy-long-legs. This insect resembles some of the Phasmidæ, which receive the same name, but belongs to a different order.

Stick-bug (Emesa longipes).

stick-culture (stik'kul″tūr), n. A bacterial culture made by thrusting a platinum needle (sterilized and then dipped into a growth of the microbe or other material to be examined) into the culture-medium, as a tube of gelatin.

sticked†. An obsolete past participle of stick[2].

sticker[1] (stik'ėr), n. [< stick[1] + -er[1].] 1. One who or that which sticks or stabs; especially, one who kills swine or other animals by sticking or stabbing.

Master Bardell the pig-butcher, and his foreman, or, as he was more commonly called, Sam the Sticker.
Hood, Sketches on the Road, The Sudden Death.

2. An anglers' gaff. [Slang.]—3. A sharp remark or an embarrassing question, intended or adapted to silence or pose a person. Thackeray.

sticker[2] (stik'ėr), n. [< stick[2] + -er[1].] 1. One who adheres, clings, or sticks to anything.

Although culture makes us fond stickers to no machinery, not even our own. M. Arnold, Culture and Anarchy, Pref.

2. One who sticks, or causes to adhere, as by pasting.

The bill-sticker, whose large flat basket, stuffed with placards, leaned near him against the settle.
George Eliot, Felix Holt, xxviii.

3. Same as paster, 2.—4. An article of merchandise which sticks by the dealer and does not meet with a ready sale. [U. S.]—5. In organ-building, a wooden rod serving to transmit motion between the ends of two reciprocating levers. Stickers are usually held in place by pins in their ends, which work freely in holes or slots in the lever-ends. See cut under organ.

6. pl. The links which drive a crank-axis employed to change the plane and direction of a reciprocating motion. The links are thus named when they act by compression, and are called trackers when they act by tension.

stickful (stik'fůl), n. [< stick[3] + -ful.] In printing, as much composed type as can be contained in a composing-stick.

stick-handle (stik'han″dl), n. The handle of a walking-stick. See cane[1].

stick-helmet (stik'hel″met), n. A mask with additional guards for the forehead and head, used in cudgel-play.

stickiness (stik'i-nes), n. The property of being sticky, adhesive, or tenacious; viscousness; glutinousness.

sticking[1] (stik'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stick[1], v.] The act of stabbing or piercing. (a) The act of thrusting a knife or spear into the neck or body of a beast. Hence—(b) pl. The part of a beast's neck where it is stabbed by the butcher; a coarse and cheap cut of beef or pork.

The meat is bought in "pieces," of the same part as the sausage-makers purchase—the stickings—at about 3*d.* the pound.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 196.

(c) Stitching; needlework. [Scotch, in the form steeking.]

The cloth of it was satin fine,
And the steeking silken wark.
The Jolly Goshawk (Child's Ballads, III. 289).

sticking[2] (stik'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stick[2], v.] 1. The act of coming to a stop. Compare sticking-place.

All stickings and hesitations seem stupid and stony.
Donne, Letters, iv.

Specifically—2. pl. The last of a cow's milk; strippings. [Prov. Eng.]

sticking-place (stik'ing-plās), n. The point where anything sticks, stays, or stops; a place of stay.

Which flower out of my hand shall never passe,
But in my heart shall have a sticking-place.
Gorgeous Gallery of Gallant Inventions (1578), quoted in [Furness's Variorum Shakespeare, Macbeth.

But screw your courage to the sticking-place,
And we'll not fail. Shak., Macbeth, i. 7. 60.

sticking-plaster (stik'ing-plâs″tėr), n. 1. Same as resin plaster (which see, under plaster).—2. Court-plaster.

In the reign of Charles I., . . . suns, moons, stars, and even coaches and four were cut of sticking plaister, and stuck on the face.
J. Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, I. 169.

sticking-point (stik'ing-point), n. Same as sticking-place.

One sight of thee would nerve me to the sticking-point.
Disraeli, Alroy, i. 2.

stick-insect (stik'in″sekt), n. Same as stick-bug, 1. See walking-stick.

stick-in-the-mud (stik'in-thē-mud'), n. An old fogy; a slow or insignificant person. [Colloq.]

This rusty-colored one [a pin] is that respectable old stick-in-the-mud, Nicias.
T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Oxford, I. x.

stickit (stik'it), p. a. [Sc. form of sticked, pp. of stick[2] (and stick[1]).] Stuck. [Scotch.]—Stickit minister, in Scotland, a student of theology who fails to obtain license, or a licentiate who fails to obtain a pastoral charge.

He became totally incapable of proceeding in his intended discourse—. . . shut the Bible—stumbled down the pulpit-stairs, trampling upon the old women who generally take their station there—and was ever after designated as a stickit minister.
Scott, Guy Mannering, ii.

stick-lac (stik'lak), n. See lac[2], 1.

stickle[1] (stik'l), n. [< ME. stikel*, stykyl* (in comp.), < AS. sticel (also, with diff. formative, sticels), a prickle, sting, = MD. stekel, later stickel, D. stekel = LG. stikkel (in comp.), also stikke = OHG. stichil, MHG. stichel, G. dial. stickel, a prickle, sting, = Icel. stikill, the pointed end of a horn, = Norw. stikel, a prickle (cf. MD. staeckel, OHG. stachulla, stacchulla, stachilla, stachila, MHG. G. stachel, a thorn, prickle, sting); akin to sticca, etc., a (pointed) stick (see stick[2]), < stecan*, pierce, prick, stick: see stick[1].] A sharp point; a prickle; a spine. [Obsolete, except in *stickle*back, stickle-haired, stickly, and the local name Pike o' Stickle, one of the two Pikes of Langdale in England.]

stickle[2] (stik'l), a. and n. [Early mod. E. also stikle; < ME. stikel, < AS. sticol, sticel, steep, high, inaccessible, < stecan*, pierce, prick, stick: see stick[1].] I. a. 1. Steep; high; inaccessible.—2. High, as the water of a river; swollen; sweeping; rapid.

When they came thither, the riuer of the Shenin, which inuironeth and runneth round about the citie, they found the same to be so deepe and stikle that they could not passe ouer the same. Giraldus Cambrensis, Conq. of Ireland, [p. 37 (Holinshed's Chron., I.).

II. n. 1. A shallow in a river where the water, being confined, runs with violence.

Patient anglers standing all the day
Neare to some shallow stickle or deepe bay.
W. Browne, Britannia's Pastorals, ii. 4.

2. A current below a waterfall.

The water runs down with a strong, sharp stickle, and then has a sudden elbow in it, where the small brook trickles in. R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, vii.

[Prov. Eng. in all uses.]

stickle[3] (stik'l), v.; pret. and pp. stickled, ppr. stickling. [A mod. var. of stightle, which also appears (with a reg. change of the orig. guttural gh to f) as stiffle: see stightle. In defs. II., 2, 3, the sense has been influenced by association with stick[2].] I.† trans. To interpose in and put a stop to; mediate between; pacify.

They ran unto him, and pulling him back, then too feeble for them, by force stickled that unnatural fray.
Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, i.

II. intrans. 1†. To interpose between combatants and separate them; mediate; arbitrate.

There had been blood shed if I had not stickled.
W. Cartwright, The Ordinary (Hazlitt's Dodsley, XII. 275).

2. To take part with one side or the other; uphold one party to a dispute.

Fortune (as she's wont) turn'd fickle, . . .
And for the foe began to stickle.
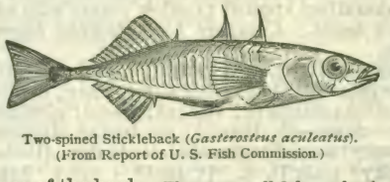
S. Butler, Hudibras, I. iii. 516.

You, Bellmour, are bound in Gratitude to stickle for him; you with Pleasure reap that Fruit which he takes pains to sow. Congreve, Old Batchelor, i. 4.

3. To contest or contend pertinaciously on insufficient grounds; insist upon some trifle.



I hear no news about your bishops, farther than that the lord lieutenant stickles to have them of Ireland.
Swift, Letter, May 13, 1727.

4. To hesitate.

Some . . . stickle not to aver that you are cater-cousin with Beelzebub himself.
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 122.

5. To play fast and loose; waver from one side to the other; trim.

stickleback (stik'l-bak), n. [Also corruptly sticklebag, and metamorphosed tittlebat; < ME. stikelbak*, stykylbak; < stickle[1] + back[1]. Cf. thornback, and see stickling.] Any fish of the family Gasterosteidæ: so called from the sharp

Two-spined Stickleback (Gasterosteus aculeatus).
(From Report of U. S. Fish Commission.)

spines of the back. They are small fishes, a few inches long, of 5 genera, Gasterosteus, Pygosteus, Eucalia, Apeltes, and Spinachia, but very pugnacious and rapacious, being especially destructive to the spawn and fry of many larger fishes. They inhabit fresh waters and sea-arms of northern Europe, Asia, and North America to the number of nearly 20 species. The common two- or three-spined stickleback, banstickle, burnstickle, or tittlebat, is G. aculeatus, 4 inches long. Another is the nine- or ten-spined, Pygosteus pungitius. The fifteen-spined stickleback, or sea-stickleback, is Spinachia vulgaris, of the northerly coasts of Europe, a marine species, from 5 to 7 inches long, of very slender elongate form, with a tubular snout. They are among the most characteristic fishes of the northern hemisphere in the colder regions. Except in the breeding-season, they live in shoals, and are sometimes numerous enough to become of commercial value for their oil or for manure. They are noted for the construction of elaborate nests which the male builds for the eggs, in which several females often or generally deposit their burden. The eggs are comparatively few, and while being hatched are assiduously guarded by the male. The local or popular synonyms of the sticklebacks are numerous, among them prickleback, sprickleback, stickling, and sharpling.

Nest of Stickleback.

sticklebag (stik'l-bag), n. A corruption of stickleback. I. Walton, Complete Angler, i. 5.

stickle-haired† (stik'l-hārd), a. Having a rough or shaggy coat; rough-haired.

Those [dogs] that serve for that purpose are stickle haired, and not unlike the Irish grayhounds.
Sandys, Travailes, p. 60.

stickler (stik'lėr), n. [An altered form of stiteler, stightler*, after stickle for stightle: see stickle[3], stightle.] 1†. An attendant on or a judge of a contest, as a duel; a second; hence, an arbitrator; a peacemaker.

The dragon wing of night o'erspreads the earth,
And, stickler-like, the armies separates.
Shak., T. and C., v. 8. 18.

Buriasso, a stickler or iudge of any combatants, such a one as brings into the listes such as shall fight a combat, or run at tilt. Florio, 1598.

Hee is a great stickler in the tumults of double Iugges, and venters his head by his Place, which is broke many times to keep whole the peace.
Bp. Earle, Micro-cosmographie, A Constable.

2. An obstinate contender about anything, often about a thing of little consequence: as, a stickler for ceremony; an advocate; a partizan.

He was one of the delegates (together with Dr. Dale, &c.) for the Tryall of Mary Queen of Scots, and was a great stickler for the saving of her life.
Aubrey, Lives (William Aubrey).

stickling (stik'ling), n. [Early mod. E. also styckelyng; < ME. stikeling, stykelynge, stekelyng; < stickle[1] + -ing[3]. Cf. stickleback.] A fish: same as stickleback.

stickly (stik'li), a. [< stickle[1] + -y[1].] Prickly; rough. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

stick-play (stik'plā), n. Same as cudgel-play or single-stick.

stick-pot (stik'pot), n. A lath-pot for taking lobsters: the common form of lobster-trap, semicylindrical or rectangular in shape, and constructed of laths or of any narrow strips of wood.

Other names by which they are known to the fishermen are "box-traps," "house-pots," "stick-pots," and "lath-coops." Fisheries of U. S., V. ii. 666.

stickseed (stik'sēd), n. A plant of the genus Lappula, of the borage family. The genus consists of rather slender rough weeds whose seeds bear on the margin from one to three rows of barbed prickles, by which they adhere to clothing, etc. L. Virginiana, the beggar's-lice, is a leading American species.

sticktail (stik'tāl), n. The ruddy duck, Erismatura rubida. See cut under Erismatura. J. P. Giraud, 1844. [Long Island.]

sticktight (stik'tīt), n. A composite weed, Bidens frondosa, whose flat achenia bear two barbed awns; also, one of the seeds. The name is doubtless applied to other plants with adhesive seeds. Compare beggar's-ticks, beggar's-lice.

sticky[1] (stik'i), a. [< stick[2] + -y[1].] 1. Having the property of adhering to a surface; inclining to stick; adhesive; viscous; viscid; glutinous; tenacious.—2. Humid; producing stickiness; muggy: as, a disagreeable, sticky day. [Colloq.]

sticky[2] (stik'i), a. [< stick[3] + -y[1].] Like a stick; stiff.

But herbs draw a weak juyce, and have a soft stalk; and therefore those amongst them which last longest are herbs of strong smell, and with a sticky stalk.
Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 583.

Sticta (stik'tă), n. [NL. (Schreber, 1791), < Gr. στικτός, spotted, dappled, punctuated, verbal adj., < στίζειν, mark with a pointed instrument, prick: see stigma.] A large, mostly tropical, genus of parmeliaceous lichens, of the family Stictaceæ. The thallus is frondose-foliaceous, variously lobed, but for the most part wide-lobed, and coriaceous or cartilaginous in texture. The apothecia are scutelliform, submarginal, elevated, and blackened; the spores are fusiform and acicular, two- to four-celled, usually colorless. There are about 20 North American species. Some of the exotic species, as S. argyracea, are rich in coloring matter. See crottles[2], hazel crottles, lungwort, 3, oak-lungs, rag[1], 3, and cut under apothecium.

sticteine (stik'tē-in), a. [Irreg. < Sticta + -ine.] In bot., relating or belonging to the genus Sticta. E. Tuckerman, N. A. Lichens, I. 83.

stictiform (stik'ti-fôrm), a. [< NL. Sticta + L. forma, form.] In bot., having the form or characters of the genus Sticta.

stid†, n. A Middle English form of stead.

stiddy[1] (stid'i), n. A dialectal form of stithy.

James Yorke, a blacksmith of Lincoln, . . . is a servant as well of Apollo as Vulcan, turning his stiddy into a study.
Fuller, Worthies, Lincoln, II. 295.

stiddy[2], a. A dialectal form of steady[1].

stie†. See sty[1], sty[2], sty[3].

Stiebel's canal. See canal[1].

stieve, stievely. See steeve[1], steevely.

stife[1] (stīf), a. A dialectal variant of stiff.

stife[2] (stīf), n. [Cf. stifle, stive[2].] Suffocating vapor. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

A large open-mouthed chimney or stack, about 45 feet high (one for each set), which serves to carry off the smoke from the fires, the fumes from the metal, and the stife from the grease.
W. H. Wahl, Galvanoplastic Manipulations, lxv. 517.

stiff (stif), a. and n. [Also dial. stife, stive (with diphthong after orig. long vowel); < ME. stif, styf, steef, stef, < AS. stif or stīf = OFries. stef, North Fries. stif, styf, stīf (Siebs) = MD. stief, stijf, D. stijf = MLG. stif or stīf, LG. stief = MHG. stīf (appar. < MLG.), G. steif = Dan. stiv = Sw. styf = Norw. stiv (Icel. stīfr* (Webster), not found, stȳfr (Haldorsen), prob., like the other Scand. forms, of LG. origin); Teut. √ stif, stīf; akin to Lith. stiprus, strong, stipti, be stiff, L. stīpes, a stem (see stipe). Cf. stifle[1].]

I. a. 1. Rigid; not easily bent; not flexible or pliant; not flaccid: as, stiff paper; a cravat stiff with starch.

A stif spere. King Alisaunder, l. 2745.

Oh God, my heart! she is cold, cold, and stiff too,
Stiff as a stake; she's dead!
Fletcher, Double Marriage, v. 2.

Hark! that rustle of a dress,
Stiff with lavish costliness!
Lowell, The Ghost-Seer.

2. Not fluid; thick and tenacious; neither soft nor hard: as, a stiff batter; stiff clay.

I grow stiff, as cooling metals do.
Dryden, Indian Emperor, v. 2.

3. Drawn tight; tense: as, a stiff cord.

Then the two men which did hold the end of the line, still standing there, began to draw, & drew til they had drawn the ends of the line stiffe, & together.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 433.

Keep a stiff rein, and move but gently on;
The coursers of themselves will run too fast.
Addison, tr. of Ovid's Metamorph., ii.

4. Not easily bent; not to be moved without great friction or exertion; not working smoothly or easily.

As he [Rip Van Winkle] rose to walk, he found himself stiff in the joints. Irving, Sketch-Book, p. 56.

The plugs were stiff, and water could not be got.
Mrs. Gaskell, Mary Barton, v.

5. Not natural and easy in movement; not flowing or graceful; cramped; constrained: as, a stiff style of writing or speaking.

And his address if not quite French in ease,
Not English stiff, but frank, and form'd to please.
Cowper, Tirocinium, l. 671.

Our hard, stiff lines of life with her
Are flowing curves of beauty.
Whittier, Among the Hills.

6. Rigidly ceremonious; formal in manner; constrained; affected; unbending; starched: as, a stiff deportment.

This kind of good manners was perhaps carried to an excess, so as to make conversation too stiff, formal, and precise. Addison, Spectator, No. 119.

7. Strong and steady in motion: as, a stiff breeze.

And, like a field of standing corn that 's mov'd
With a stiff gale, their heads bow all one way.
Beau. and Fl., Philaster, iii. 1.

8. Strong; lusty; stanch, both physically and mentally. [Now provincial only.]

Yet oft they quit
The dank, and, rising on stiff pennons, tower
The mild aereal sky. Milton, P. L., vii. 441.

Somtyme I was an archere good,
A stiffe and eke a stronge,
I was commytted the best archere
That was in mery Englonde.
Lytell Geste of Robyn Hode (Child's Ballads, V. 120).

9. Strong: said of an alcoholic drink, or mixed drink of which spirit forms a part.

But, tho' the port surpasses praise,
My nerves have dealt with stiffer.
Tennyson, Will Waterproof.

10. Firm in resistance or persistence; obstinate; stubborn; pertinacious.

A grene hors gret & thikke,
A stede ful stif to strayne [guide].
Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight (E. E. T. S.), l. 173.

Ther the batayle was stiffest and of more strengthe.
Joseph of Arimathie (E. E. T. S.), p. 18.

The boy remained stiff in his denial, and seemed not affected with the apprehension of death.
Winthrop, Hist. New England, II. 58.

11. Hard to receive or accept; hard to bear.

Labienus—
This is stiff news—hath with his Parthian force Extended Asia from Euphrates.
Shak., A. and C., i. 2. 104.

12. Hard to master or overcome; very difficult: as, a stiff examination in mathematics.

We now left the carriages, and began a stiff climb to the top of the hill. Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 447.

13. Naut., bearing a press of canvas or of wind without careening much; tending to keep upright: as, a stiff vessel; a stiff keel: opposed to crank.

It continued a growing storm all the day, and towards night so much wind as we bore no more sail but so much as should keep the ship stiff.
Winthrop, Hist. New England, I. 17.

14. High; steep: as, a stiff price. [Slang.]—15. Unyielding; firm: said of prices, markets, etc.: as, the wheat-market is stiff. [Commercial slang.]—16. Rigid as in death; dead. [Slang.]—A stiff neck. See neck.—To keep a stiff upper lip. See lip.—Syn. 1. Unbending, unyielding.—6. Prim, punctilious.—10. Inflexible, uncompromising.

II. n. 1. A dead body; a corpse. [Slang.]

They piled the stiffs outside the door—
They made, I reckon, a cord or more.
John Hay, Mystery of Gilgal.

2. In hatting, a stiffener.—3. Negotiable paper. [Commercial slang.]—4. Forged paper. [Thieves' slang.]—To do a bit of stiff, to accept or discount a bill. [Slang.]

How are the Three per Cents, you little beggar? I wish you'd do me a bit of stiff; and just tell your father, if I may overdraw my account, I'll vote with him.
Thackeray, Newcomes, vi.

stiff (stif), v. i. [< ME. stiffen, styffen, a later form of stiven, early ME. stifien*, < AS. stifian or stīfian, be stiff, < stif, stīf, stiff: see stiff, a., and cf. stive[1], the older form of the verb.] To become or grow stiff. (a) To become upright or strong.

As sone as they [chicks] styffe and that they steppe kunne,
Than cometh and crieth her owen kynde dame.
Richard the Redeless, iii. 54.

(b) To become obstinate or stubborn.

But Dido affrighted stift also in her obstinat onset.
Stanihurst, Æneid, iv.

stiff-borne (stif'bōrn), a. Carried on with unyielding constancy or perseverance.

The stiff-borne action. Shak., 2 Hen. IV., i. 1. 177.

stiffen (stif'n), v. [= Sw. styfna = Dan. stirne; as stiff + -en[1].] I. intrans. To become stiff. (a) To become less flexible or pliant; become rigid.

With chatt'ring teeth he stands, and stiff'ning hair,
And looks a bloodless image of despair!
Pope, Iliad, xiii. 364.

In this neighbourhood I have frequently heard it said that if a corpse does not stiffen within a reasonable time it is a sign of another death in the family.
N. and Q., 7th ser., X. 114.

(b) To become less soft or fluid; grow thicker or harder; become inspissated: as, jellies stiffen as they cool.

The tender soil then stiff'ning by degrees. Dryden.

(c) To become steady and strong: as, a stiffening breeze. (d) To become unyielding; grow rigid, obstinate, or formal.

Sir Aylmer Aylmer slowly stiffening spoke:
"The girl and boy, Sir, know their differences!"
Tennyson, Aylmer's Field.

(e) To become higher in price; become firmer or more unyielding: as, the market stiffens. [Commercial slang.]

II. trans. To make stiff. (a) To make less pliant or flexible.

From his saddle heavily down-leapt,
Stiffened, as one who not for long has slept.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, III. 259.

(b) To make rigid, constrained, formal, or habitual.

I pity kings, whom Worship waits upon, . . .
Whom Education stiffens into state.
Cowper, Table-Talk, l. 125.

(c) To make more thick or viscous; inspissate: as, to stiffen paste. (d) To make stubborn or obstinate.

The man . . . who is settled and stiffened in vice.
Barrow, Sermons, III. xvi. (Encyc. Dict.)

★stiffener (stif'nėr), n. [< stiffen + -er[1].] One who or that which stiffens. (a) Formerly used specifically for a piece of stiff material worn inside a stock or neckcloth, and also for a similar device worn in leg-of-mutton sleeves. (b) In bookbinding, a thick paper or thin millboard used by bookbinders as an inner lining to bookcovers to give them the needed stiffness.

stiffening (stif'ning), n. [Verbal n. of stiffen, v.] 1. Something that is used to make a substance stiff or less soft, as starch.—2. Something inserted to make a garment, or part of a garment, stiff and capable of keeping its shape. See buckram, crinoline.

stiffening-machine (stif'ning-ma-shēn″), n. In hat-making, an apparatus for applying the heated composition used to harden and stiffen the felt of hats. It consists of a vat filled with melted shellac, and a pair of rollers for removing the superfluous stiffening material after the hat has been dipped in the vat.

stiffening-order (stif'ning-ôr″dėr), n. A custom-house warrant by which ballast or heavy goods may be taken on board before the whole inward cargo is discharged, to prevent the vessel from getting too light. Imp. Dict.

stiff-hearted (stif'här'ted), a. Obstinate; stubborn; contumacious.

They are impudent children and stiffhearted.
Ezek. ii. 4.

stiffle[1] (stif'l), n. A dialectal form of stightle, stickle[3].

stiffle[2]†, n. An obsolete form of stifle[2].

stiffler (stif'lėr), n. [Also stifler; < late ME. styffeler, a var. of stightler*, whence also stickler: see stickler, stickle, stiffle, stightle.] 1†. Same as stickler.

The king intendeth, in eschewing all inconvenients, to be as big as they both, and to be a styffeler atween them.
Paston Letters, III. 98, quoted in J. Gairdner's Richard III. i.

The drift was, as I judged, for Dethick to continue such stifflers in the College of his pupils, to win him in time by hook or crook the master's room.
Abp. Parker, p. 252. (Davies.)

2. A busybody. Halliwell (spelled stifler). [Prov. Eng.]

stiffly (stif'li), adv. [< ME. stifliche, styfly, stifli (= MD. stijflick); < stiff + -ly[2].] In a stiff manner, in any sense of the word stiff.

And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,
But bear me stiffly up. Shak., Hamlet, i. 5. 95.

Pistorius and others stiffly maintain the use of charms, words, characters, &c. Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 271.

stiff-neck (stif'nek), n. Cervical myalgia; sometimes, true torticollis.

stiff-necked (stif'nekt or -nek″ed), a. Stubborn; inflexibly obstinate; contumacious: as, a stiff-necked people.

stiff-neckedness (stif'nekt-nes or -nek″ed-nes), n. The property or character of being stiff-necked; stubbornness.

★stiffness (stif'nes), n. [< ME. styfnesse, styfnes; < stiff + -ness.] The state or character of being stiff, in any sense.

stifftail (stif'tāl), n. The ruddy duck, Erismatura rubida. See cut under Erismatura. [Local, U. S.]

stiff-tailed (stif'tāld), a. Having rigid rectrices or tail-feathers denuded to the base; erismaturine: specifically noting ducks of the genus Erismatura.

stifle[1] (stī'fl), v.; pret. and pp. stifled, ppr. stifling. [Early mod. E. also stifil; < Icel. stīfla = Norw. stivla, dam up, choke, stop, perhaps (like Norw. stivra, stiffen) freq. of Norw. stiva = Sw. styfva = Dan. stive = ME. stiven, stiffen: see stive[1], stiff, v. The word was prob. confused with E. stive[2], < OF. estiver, pack tight, stive: see steve.] I. trans. 1†. To choke up; dam up; close.

Make fast the chamber door, stifle the keyhole and the crannies. Shirley, Traitor, iii. 1.

2. To kill by impeding respiration, as by covering the mouth and nose, by introducing an irrespirable substance into the lungs, or by other means; suffocate or greatly oppress by foul air or otherwise; smother.

Sure, if I had not pinch'd you 'till you wak'd, you had stifled me with Kisses. Congreve, Old Batchelor, ii. 3.

I took my leave, being half stifled with the closeness of the room. Swift, Account of Partridge's Death.

3. To stop the passage of; arrest the free action of; extinguish; deaden; quench: as, to stifle flame; to stifle sound.

They [colored bodies] stop and stifle in themselves the rays, which they do not reflect or transmit.
Newton, Opticks, I. ii. x.

She whisper'd, with a stifled moan.
Tennyson, Mariana in the South.

4. To suppress; keep from active manifestation; keep from public notice; conceal; repress; destroy: as, to stifle inquiry; to stifle a report; to stifle passion; to stifle convictions.

A record surreptitiously or erroneously made up, to stifle or pervert the truth. Blackstone, Com., III. xxv.

=Syn. 2. Suffocate, Strangle, etc. See smother.—4. To hush, muffle, muzzle, gag.

II. intrans. To suffocate; perish by asphyxia.

You shall stifle in your own report,
And smell of calumny. Shak., M. for M., ii. 4. 158.

stifle[2] (stī'fl), n. [Formerly also stiffle; appar. < stiff, dial. stife: see stiff.] 1. The stifle-joint.

If the horse bee but hurt in the stiffle with some stripe or straine.
Topsell, Four-Footed Beasts (1607), p. 405. (Halliwell.)

2. Disease or other affection of the stifle-bone or stifle-joint, as dislocation or fracture of the patella.

stifle-bone (stī'fl-bōn), n. The patella of the horse; the kneepan, kneecap, or bone of the stifle-joint.

stifled (stī'fld), a. [Formerly also stiffled; < stifle[2] + -ed[2].] Affected with stifle. See stifle[2], 2.

The horse is said to be stifled when the stiffling bone is removed from the place.
Topsell, Four-Footed Beasts (1607), p. 405. (Halliwell.)

stifle-joint (stī'fl-joint), n. The stifle or knee-joint of the horse or dog; the joint of the hind leg between the hip and the hock, whose convexity points forward, which is close to the belly, and which corresponds to the human knee. See cut under Equidæ.

stifler (stī'flėr), n. [< stifle[1], v., + -er[2].] Milit. See camouflet.

stifle-shoe (stī'fl-shö), n. A form of horseshoe exposing a curved surface to the ground: used in treating a stifled horse. It is fixed on the sound foot, with the effect of forcing the animal to throw its weight on the weak joint, and thus strengthen it by exercise.

stifling (stī'fling), p. a. Close; oppressive; suffocating: as, a stifling atmosphere.

E'en in the stifling bosom of the town.
Cowper, Task, iv. 753.

stifling-bone†, n. Same as stifle-bone.

stight†, v. [ME. stigten, < AS. stihtan, stihtian (for stiftan*), order, rule, govern, = MD. D. stichten, found, build, impose a law, = OHG. MHG. G. stiften = Icel. stipta, stifta, stigta = Sw. stifta, stikta = Dan. stifte, found, institute; cf. Icel. stētt, foundation, pavement, stepping-stone, foot-piece. Hence stightle.] To found; establish; set.

The ston that theron was stigt was of so stif vertu
That neuer man vpon mold migt it him on haue.
William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 4425.

stightle†, v. [< ME. stightlen, styghtlen, stightelen, stigtlen, styglen, order, arrange, direct, freq. of stighten, AS. stihtan, order, rule, govern: see stight. Hence mod. E. stickle[3], stiffle[2], q. v.] I. trans. 1. To order; arrange; dispose of; take order concerning; govern; direct.

That other was his stiward that stigtled al his meyne.
William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 1199.

II. intrans. To make arrangements; treat; direct; mediate; stickle.

When thay com to the courte keppte wern thay fayre, Stygtled with the stewarde, stad in the halle.
Alliterative Poems (ed. Morris), ii. 90.

★stigma[1] (stig'mä), n.; E. pl. stigmas (stig'mäz), used chiefly in senses 1, 2, and 6; L. pl. stigmata (stig'ma-tä), used more or less in all the senses. [= F. stigmate = Sp. Pg. estigma = It. stimate, stigma = G. stigma, < NL. stigma, < L. stigma, < Gr. στίγμα, pl. στίγματα, a mark, esp. of a pointed instrument, a spot, brand, < στίζειν, mark (with a point), prick, brand: see stick[1].] 1. A mark made with a red-hot iron, formerly in many countries upon criminals as a badge of infamy; a brand impressed on slaves and others.

The Devil, however, does not imprint any stigma upon his new vassal, as in the later stories of witch-compacts.
Lowell, Among my Books, 1st ser., p. 95.

2. Any mark of infamy, slur, or disgrace which attaches to a person on account of evil conduct.

Happy is it for him that the blackest stigma that can be fastened upon him is that his robes were whiter than his brethren's. Bp. Hall, Remains, Pref.

3. In anat. and zoöl., a mark; a marked point or place: variously applied to marks of color, as a spot, and to many different pores or small holes. Specifically—(a) A birth-mark; a nævus. (b) The point or place on the surface of an ovary where a mature Graafian follicle ruptures. (c) In ornith., the place where the calyx or ovisac of the ovary ruptures to discharge an ovum into the oviduct. See calyx, 3 (b). (d) In entom.: (1) The exterior orifice of a trachea; a spiracle. See cuts under pulmonary, flesh-fly, sheep-bot, and Acarida. (2) A chitinous spot or mark on the anterior margin of the fore wings of many insects, formed by a special enlargement of a vein; a pterostigma. (e) In Protozoa, a spot of pigment; the so-called eye of an infusorian. (f) In Annelida, one of the pores or openings of the segmental organs. (g) In Hydrozoa, the pore by which a pneumatocyst opens to the exterior. See cut under Hydrozoa. (h) In Pharyngopneusta, as an ascidian, one of the ciliated openings by which the cavity of the pharynx is placed in communication with that of the atrial canal. See cuts under Appendicularia and Tunicata.

4. A place or point on the skin which bleeds periodically or at irregular intervals during some mental states. The spontaneous appearance of stigmata was formerly regarded superstitiously.—5. pl. In the Rom. Cath. Ch., marks said to have been supernaturally impressed upon the bodies of certain persons in imitation of the wounds on the crucified body of Christ.

In the life of St. Francis of Assisi we have the first example of the alleged miraculous infliction of stigmata.
Encyc. Brit., XXII. 549.

6. In bot., a modified part of the style or, when that is wanting, of the surface of the ovary, which in impregnation receives the pollen. In the latter case the stigma is said to be sessile, as in the poppy and the tulip. When the style is present, the stigma may be terminal, occupying its summit, as in the plum and cherry, or lateral, running down its face in one or two lines, as in Ranunculus. Its form and appearance are very various. In many plants there is only one stigma, while in others there are two, three, five, or many, according to the number of styles or style-branches. The stigma is composed of delicate cellular tissue; its surface is destitute of true epidermis, and is usually moist. See pistil (with cut) and pollen-tube.

Stigmas.

1. Of Cynodon Dactylon. 2. Of Vitis Labrusca. 3. Of Papaver Argemone. 4. Of Gordonia pubescens. 5. Of Tilia Americana. 6. Of Silene Pennsylvanica. 7. Of Tribulus cistoides. 8. Of Dionæa muscipula. 9. Of Linum Virginianum. 10. Of Parietaria officinalis. 11. Of Rumex obtusifolius.

stigma[2] (stig'mä), n. [Gr. στίγμα, the ligature ς, an altered form, to bring in στ, of σίγμα or σῖγμα, the letter σ, ς, sigma: see sigma. The ligature was also called στῖ.] In Gr. gram. and paleog., a ligature (ς) still sometimes used for στ (st), and also used as a numeral (6).

stigma-disk (stig'mä-disk), n. In bot., a disk forming the seat of a stigma, sometimes produced by the fusion of two or more style-apices, as in Asclepias.

stigmal (stig'mal), a. [< stigma[1] + -al.] Of or pertaining to a stigma; stigmatic. Specifically applied in entomology to a vein of the wings of some insects, whose modification makes a stigma (pterostigma).

Stigmaria (stig-mā'ri-ä), n. [NL., < L. stigma, a mark (see stigma[1]), + -aria.] The generic name applied by Brongniart (1822) to a type of fossil root or rhizome, very abundant in the Paleozoic coal-measures of Europe and America, and especially in the under-clay, or clayey material (often mixed with more or less sand) by which most seams of coal are underlain, and which in geological terminology are known as "Stigmaria clays, shales," etc. The Stigmariæ are subcylindrical root-like bodies, usually starting from a center in four main branches, and afterward bifurcating irregularly, and extending sometimes to great distances. The bodies are marked by close, spirally arranged, round depressions, each containing a slightly raised mammillate scar, the point of attachment of a slender, lax rootlet. In some cases the stigmarias have been found attached to the trunk-bases of Sigillaria, in such a way as to indicate their relation as roots of the latter. In other instances roots, apparently indistinguishable from Stigmariæ, are said to have been found joined to the trunks of Lepidodendron. Some paleobotanists believe them to have been floating rhizomal stems capable, on stranding under favorable conditions, of developing, from their nuclear head, a sigillarian tree. This opinion is supported by the frequent occurrence, in Stigmaria clays, of Stigmariæ unaccompanied by any stems, branches, or leaves of Sigillaria or Lepidodendron.

Stigmarian (stig-mā′ri-an), a. [< Stigmaria + -an.] Relating to, containing, or consisting of Stigmaria. Geol. Mag., No. 267, p. 407.

stigmarioid (stig-mā′ri-oid), a. [< Stigmaria + -oid.] In bot., resembling Stigmaria.

stigmata, n. Latin plural of stigma[1].

stigmatal (stig′ma-tal), a. [< stigmata + -al.] In entom., pertaining to, near, or containing the stigmata or breathing-pores; stigmatic: as, the ★stigmatal line of a caterpillar.

stigmatic (stig-mat′ik, formerly also stig′ma-tik), a. and n. [< ML. stigmaticus, < L. stigma, < Gr. στίγμα, a mark, brand: see stigma[1].] I. a. Of or pertaining to a stigma, in any sense of that word. Specifically—(a) Having the character of a brand; ignominious.

> Print in my face
> The most stigmaticke title of a villaine.
> Heywood, Woman Killed with Kindness (Works, II. 110).

(b) Marked with or as with a stigma or brand; repulsive; abhorrent.

> So the world is become ill-favoured and shrewd-pated, as politic in brain as it is stigmatic in limbs.
> Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 19.

(c) In nat. hist., belonging to or having the character of a stigma; stigmal. Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 374. (d) In bot., receptive of pollen: said of parts of the style which have the function without the form of a stigma, as the "silk" of maize. (e) Bearing the stigmata; stigmatized. See stigma[1], 5,—Stigmatic cells, in bot., same as lid-cells.

II. n. 1. A person who is marked with stigmata, in the ecclesiastical or the pathological sense; a stigmatist.—2. A criminal who has been branded; one who bears upon his person the marks of infamy or punishment; a notorious profligate.

> Convaide him to a justice, where one swore
> He had been branded stigmatic before.
> Philomythie (1616). (Nares.)

3. One on whom nature has set a mark of deformity.

> But like a foul, mis-shapen stigmatic,
> Mark'd by the destinies to be avoided.
> Shak., 3 Hen. VI., ii. 2. 136.

stigmatical (stig-mat′i-kal), a. [< stigmatic + -al.] Same as stigmatic. Shak., C. of E., iv. 2. 22.

stigmatically (stig-mat′i-kal-i), adv. With stigmata; with a mark of infamy or deformity.

> If you spye any man that has a looke,
> Stigmatically drawne, like to a furies, > (Able to fright) to such I'le give large pay.
> Dekker, Wonder of a Kingdom, iii. 1.

stigmatiferous (stig-ma-tif′e-rus), a. [< NL. stigma(t-), a stigma, + L. ferre = E. bear[1].] In bot., stigma-bearing.

stigmatiform (stig′ma-ti-fôrm), a. [< NL. stigma(t-), stigma, + L. forma, form.] In entom., having the structure or appearance of a stigma, spiracle, or breathing-pore; spiraculiform.

stigmatisation, stigmatise, etc. See stigmatization, etc.

stigmatist (stig′ma-tist), n. [< Gr. στίγμα(τ-), a mark, a brand (see stigma[1]), + -ist.] One on whom the stigmata, or marks of Christ's wounds, are said to be supernaturally impressed.

stigmatization (stig″ma-ti-zā′shon), n. [< stigmatize + -ation.] 1. The act of stigmatizing, or the condition of being stigmatized; specifically, the supposed miraculous impression of the marks of Christ's wounds on the bodies of certain persons.—2. The act, process, or result of producing, as by hypnotic suggestion, on the surface of the body points or lines which bleed. [Recent.]

Also spelled stigmatisation.

stigmatize (stig′ma-tīz), v. t.; pret. and pp. stigmatized, ppr. stigmatizing. [< F. stigmatiser = Sp. estigmatizar = Pg. estigmatisar = It. stimatizzare, < ML. stigmatizare, < Gr. στιγματίζειν, mark, brand, < στίγμα(τ-), a mark, brand: see stigma[1].] 1. To mark with a stigma or brand.

> They had more need some of them . . . to have their cheeks stigmatised with a hot iron.
> Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 474.

2. To set a mark of disgrace on; disgrace with some mark or term of reproach or infamy.

> It was thought proper to restrain it [comedy] within bounds by a law enacting that no person should be stigmatized under his real name.
> Goldsmith, Essay, Origin of Poetry.

3. To produce red points, sometimes bleeding, in or on: as, a person or the skin stigmatized by hypnotic suggestion. [Recent.]

Also spelled stigmatise.

stigmatized (stig′ma-tīzd), p. a. 1. Marked with a stigma; branded; specifically, marked with the stigmata of the passion.—2. Resembling stigmata: as, the stigmatized dots on the skin in measles.

Also spelled stigmatised.

stigmatose (stig′ma-tōs), a. [< NL. stigmatosus*, < stigma[1], a stigma: see stigma[1].] 1. In bot., same as stigmatic.—2. Affected with stigmata; stigmatized.

stigme (stig′mē), n. [< Gr. στιγμή, a prick, point.] 1. In Gr. paleog., a dot used as a punctuation-mark; especially, a dot placed at the top of the line, like the later Greek colon, and having the value of a period.—2. In Gr. pros., a dot placed over a time or syllable to mark the ictus.

Stigmus (stig′mus), n. [NL. (Jurine, 1807), < Gr. στίγμα, a mark: see stigma[1].] In entom., a genus of fossorial wasps, of the family Pemphredonidæ, having a large stigma to the fore wing and a petiolate abdomen. S. troglodytes of Europe makes its cells in the hollow straws of thatched roofs, and provisions them with masses of immature Thrips.

Stigonema (stī-gō-nē′mā), n. [NL., < Gr. στίζειν, point, dot, + νῆμα, a thread.] A genus of blue-green algæ, giving name to the family Stigonemaceæ.

Stigonemeæ (stī-gō-nē′mē-ē), n. pl. [NL., < Stigonema + -eæ.] A former group of blue-green algæ, embraced, according to late systematists, in the family Scytonemaceæ.

stilar, a. See stylar.

Stilbaceæ (stil-bā′sē-ē), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. στίλβειν, glitter, shine, + -aceæ.] A family of hyphomycetous fungi, characterized by the cohering of the spore-bearing hyphæ into a dense and slender stipe. Also Stilboæ.

stilbite (stil′bīt), n. [< Gr. στίλβειν, glitter, shine, + -ite[2].] 1. A common zeolitic mineral, usually occurring in radiated or sheaf-like tufts of crystals having a pearly luster on the surface of cleavage. It varies in color from white to brown or red. It is essentially a hydrous silicate of aluminium and calcium. Also called desmine. See cut under tufted.

★2. The mineral heulandite.

stile[1] (stīl), n. [Early mod. E. also style; < ME. stile, style, stigele, < AS. stigel (= OHG. stigila, stiagil, MHG. stiegel, stigele, a step, G. dial. stegel, a step), a stile, < stigan (pp. stigen), climb, ascend. Cf. sty[1], n., and stair.] 1. A series of steps, or a frame of bars and steps, for ascending and descending in getting over a fence or wall.

> Jog on, jog on, the foot-path way,
> And merrily hent the stile-a.
> Shak., W. T., iv. 3. 133.

2. In carp., a vertical part of a piece of framing, into which the ends of the rails are fixed by mortises and tenons. See cut of panel-door, under door.

stile[2]†, n. A former and more correct spelling of style[1].

stile[3]†, n. A former spelling of style[2].

stilet[1]† (sti-let′), n. A former and more correct form of stiletto. Scott, Monastery.

stilet[2] (stī′let), n. In zoöl., a small style; a stylet.

stilette† (sti-let′), n. Same as stylet.

stiletto (sti-let′ō), n. [< It. stiletto, a dagger, dim. of stilo, a dagger, < L. stilus, a stake, a pointed instrument: see stile[2], style[2], and cf. stylet.] 1. A dagger having a blade slender and narrow, and thick in proportion to its width—that is, triangular, square, etc., in section, instead of flat.—2. A small sharp-pointed implement used for making eyelet-holes and for similar purposes. Stilettos are of ivory, bone, metal, and other materials.—3†. A beard trimmed into a sharp-pointed form.

> The stiletto beard,
> O, it makes me afeard,
> It is so sharp beneath.
> Acad. of Compl. (Nares.)

> The very quack of fashion, the very he that > Wears a stiletto on his chin? Ford, Fancies, iii. 1.

stiletto (sti-let′ō), v. t. [< stiletto, n.] To strike or wound with a stiletto; hence, in general, to stab.

> Henry IV. . . . [was] likewise stilettoed by a rascal votary. Bacon, Charge against W. Talbot, p. 202.

still[1] (stil), a. and n. [Early mod. E. also stil, stille, styll, stylle; < ME. stille, stylle, < AS. stille = OS. stilli = OFries. stille = MD. stille, stil, D. stil = MLG. stille, LG. still = OHG. stilli, MHG. stille, G. still = Icel. stilltr = Dan. stille = Sw. stilla, quiet, still; with adj. formative, from the root (stel) of AS. steall, etc., a place, stall: see stall[1], stell.] I. a. 1. Remaining in place; remaining at rest; motionless; quiet: as, to stand, sit, or lie still.

> Foot & hond thou kepe fulle stylle
> Fro clawyng or tryppyng, hit ys skylle.
> Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 13.

2. Calm; tranquil; peaceful; undisturbed or unruffled: as, still waters run deep; a still night.

> In the calmest and most stillest night.
> Shak., 2 Hen. IV., iii. 1. 28.

> A Poet in still musings bound.
> Wordsworth, Sonnets, iii. 11.

3. Silent; quiet; calm; noiseless; hushed.

> A man that sayth little shall perceiue by the speeche of another;
> Be thou stil and see, the more shalt thou perceyue in another. Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 85.

> The trumpet's silver sound is still,
> The warder silent on the hill!
> Scott, Marmion, i., Int.

4. Soft; low; subdued: as, a still small voice.

> The gentle blasts of western winds shall move
> The trembling leaves, and through their close boughs breathe > Still musick, whilst we rest ourselves beneath > Their dancing shade. Carew, Poems, p. 70. (Latham.)

5. Not sparkling or effervescing: said of wine, mineral water, and other beverages: contrasted with sparkling; by extension, having but little effervescence. Thus, still champagne is not the non-effervescent natural wine, but champagne which is only moderately sparkling.

6†. Continual; constant.

> But I of these will wrest an alphabet,
> And by still practice learn to know thy meaning.
> Shak., Tit. And., iii. 2. 45.

Still alarm, an alarm of fire given by a person calling at a station, and not by the regular system of fire-signals.—Still days. See day[1].—Still hunt. See hunt.—Still life, inanimate objects, such as furniture, fruits, or dead animals, represented by the painter's art.

> The same dull sights in the same landscape mixt, > Scenes of still life, and points for ever fixed,
> A tedious pleasure on the mind bestow.
> Addison, Epil. to British Enchanters.

II. n. 1. Calm; silence; freedom from noise.

> He [Henry VIII.] had never any . . . jealousy with the King his father which might give any occasion of altering court or counsel upon the change; but all things passed in a still. Bacon, Hist. Hen. VIII.

2. A still alarm. [Colloq.]

> Many alarms were what the firemen called stills, where a single engine went out to fight the fire.
> Elect. Rev. (Amer.), II. xxv. 6.

still[1] (stil), v. [Early mod. E. also stille, stylle; < ME. stillen, < AS. stillan = OS. stillian, stillōn = MD. D. stillen = MLG. LG. stillen = OHG. stillan, stillēn, MHG. G. stillen = Icel. Sw. stilla = Dan. stille, make or become still; from the adj.] I. trans. 1. To make still; cause to be at rest; render calm, quiet, unruffled, or undisturbed; check or restrain; make peaceful or tranquil; quiet.

> Lord, still the seas, and shield my ship from harm.
> Quarles, Emblems, iii. 11.

2. To calm; appease; quiet or allay, as commotion, tumult, agitation, or excitement.

> A turn or two I'll walk,
> To still my beating mind.
> Shak., Tempest, iv. 1. 163.

3. To silence; quiet.

> With his name the mothers still their babes.
> Shak., 1 Hen. VI., ii. 3. 17.

> O still my bairn, nourice;
> O still him wi' the pap!
> Lamkin (Child's Ballads, III. 97).

=Syn. 1 and 2. To lull, pacify, tranquilize, smooth.—3. To hush.

II. intrans. To become calm or tranquil; grow quiet; be still. [Rare.]

> Heruppon the people peacyd, and stilled unto the tyme the shire was doon. Paston Letters, I. 180.

still[1] (stil), adv. [Early mod. E. also stil, stille, styll, stylle; < ME. stille, < AS. stille = OS. stillo = D. stil = OHG. stillo, MHG. stille, G. still = Sw. stilla = Dan. stille, quietly; from the adj.] 1†. Quietly; silently; softly; peacefully.

> Thei criede mercy with good wille,
> Somme lowde & somme stille.
> King Horn (E. E. T. S.), p. 96.

2. Constantly; continually; habitually; always; ever.

> Thou still hast been the father of good news.
> Shak., Hamlet, ii. 2. 42.

> What a set face the gentlewoman has, as she were still going to a sacrifice! B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, iv. 1.

O first of friends! (Pelides thus reply'd)
Still at my heart, and ever at my side!
Pope, Iliad, xi. 743.

3. Now as in the past; till now; to this time; now as then or as before; yet: as, he is still here.

At after noone, with an easy wynde, and salyd styll in alto pelago, leuynge Grece on ye lefte hande and Barbary on the ryght hande. Sir R. Guylforde, Pylgrymage, p. 12.

Poor Wat, far off upon a hill,
Stands on his hinder legs with listening ear,
To hearken if his foes pursue him still.
Shak., Venus and Adonis, l. 699.

Apart she lived, and still she lies alone.
Crabbe, Works, I. 113.

4. In an increased or increasing degree; beyond this (or that); even yet; in excess: used with comparatives or to form a comparative: as, still greater things were expected; still more numerous.

What rich service!
What mines of treasure! richer still!
Fletcher (and another), False One, iii. 4.

The matter of his treatise is extraordinary; the manner more extraordinary still.
Macaulay, Sadler's Law of Population.

5. For all that; all the same; nevertheless; notwithstanding this (or that).

Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss.
Shak., Sonnets, xxxiv.

The Bey, with all his good sense and understanding, was still a Mamaluke, and had the principles of a slave.
Bruce, Source of the Nile, I. 30.

Loud and (or or) still†. See loud.—Still and anon†, at intervals and repeatedly; continually.

And, like the watchful minutes of the hour,
Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time.
Shak., K. John, iv. 1. 47.

still[2] (stil), v. [< ME. stillen*, styllen, in part an abbr. of distil, in part < L. stillare, drop, fall in drops, also let or cause to fall in drops, < stilla, a drop; cf. stiria, a frozen drop, an icicle. Cf. distil, instil.] I.† intrans. To drop; fall in drops. See distil.

From her faire eyes wiping the deawy wet
Which softly stild. Spenser, F. Q., IV. vii. 35.

II. trans. 1†. To drop, or cause to fall in drops.

Her father Myrrha sought,
And loved, but loved not as a daughter ought.
Now from a tree she stills her odorous tears,
Which yet the name of her who sheds them bears.
Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Art of Love, i.

2. To expel, as spirit from liquor, by heat and condense in a refrigerator; distil. See distil.

In Burgos, Anno 21., Doctor Sotto cured me of a certeine wandering feuer, made me eat so much Apium, take so much Barley water, & drink so much stilled Endiue.
Guevara, Letters (tr. by Hellowes, 1577), p. 275.

still[2] (stil), n. [< still[2], v. The older noun was stillatory.] 1. An apparatus for separating, by means of heat, volatile matters from substances a, alembic; b, hot-water jacket; c, head; d, rostrum or beak; e e, worm; f, refrigerator; g, funnel-tube for supplying cold water to the refrigerator; h, h', tubes for conveying away the warm upper stratum of water, which is heated by the condensation of vapor in the worm.

Still.

containing them, and recondensing them into the liquid form. It assumes many forms, according to the purposes for which it is used; but it consists essentially of two parts, a vessel in which the substance to be distilled is heated, and one in which the vapor is cooled and condensed. The most important use of stills is for the distillation of spirituous liquors. See distillation, and cut under petroleum-still.

2. A house or works in which liquors are distilled; a distillery. S. Judd, Margaret, i. 15.—3. In bleaching, a rectangular vessel made of slabs of freestone or flagstone with rabbeted and stemmed joints held together by long bolts, and provided with a steam-chamber below, and with a manhole for introducing the materials for making chlorid of manganese solution, called still-liquor.

stillage (stil′āj), n. [Origin uncertain.] A stout support, in the nature of a stool, for keeping something from coming in contact with the floor of a shop, factory, bleachery, etc. Specifically—(a) In bleaching, a stout low stool or bench to keep textiles or yarns from the floor, and to permit the moisture to drain out of them. (b) In the packing of cloths and other goods for shipment, etc., a stool or bench for supporting the goods taken out of a stock to be packed. Some stillages are made so that they can be tilted, and allow articles placed on them to slide off into packing-boxes, etc.

stillatitious (stil-ạ-tish′us), a. [< L. stillaticius, dropping, dripping, < stillare, pp. stillatus, drop, trickle: see still[2], v.] Falling in drops; drawn by a still. [Rare.] Imp. Dict.

stillatory (stil′ạ-tō-ri), n.; pl. stillatories (-riz). [< ME. stillatorie, a distilling-vessel (cf. OF. F. stillatoire, a.), < ML. stillatorium, neut. of stillatorius*, adj., < L. stillare, pp. stillatus, fall in drops: see still[2], v.] 1. A still; a vessel for distillation; an alembic.

His forheed dropped as a stillatorie
Were ful of plantayne and of paritorie.
Chaucer, Prol. to Canon's Yeoman's Tale, l. 27.

In stillatories where the vapour is turned back upon itself by the encounter of the sides of the stillatory.
Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 27.

2. A laboratory; a place or room in which distillation is performed; a still-room.

Marius, Armanus, as you are noble friends,
Go to the privy garden, and in the walk
Next to the stillatory stay for me.
Beau. and Fl. (?), Faithful Friends, iv. 3.

still-birth (stil′bėrth), n. The birth of a lifeless thing; also, a still-born child.

still-born (stil′bôrn), a. Dead at birth; born lifeless: as, a still-born child.

still-burn (stil′bėrn), v. t. To burn in the process of distillation: as, to still-burn brandy.

stiller[1] (stil′ėr), n. [< still[1] + -er[1].] 1. One who or that which stills or quiets.—2. A wooden disk laid on the liquid in a full pail to prevent splashing. [Prov. Eng.]

stiller[2] (stil′ėr), n. A distiller. Pop. Sci. Mo., XXX. 830.

still-fish (stil′fish), v. i. [< still[1] + fish[1], after still-hunt.] To fish from a boat at anchor.

still-fisher (stil′fish″ėr), n. An angler engaged in still-fishing.

still-fishing (stil′fish″ing), n. Fishing from a boat at anchor, or from the bank of a stream.

still-house (stil′hous), n. A distillery, or that part of it which contains the still.

still-hunt (stil′hunt), v. [< still hunt: see under hunt.] I. trans. To hunt stealthily; stalk; lie in ambush for.

The only way to get one [a grizzly] is to put on moccasins and still-hunt it in its own haunts.
T. Roosevelt, Hunting Trips, p. 327.

The best time to still-hunt deer is just before sunset, when they come down from the hills to drink.
Sportsman's Gazetteer, p. 81.

II. intrans. To hunt without making a noise; pursue game stealthily or under cover.

The best way to kill white-tail is to still-hunt carefully through their haunts at dusk.
T. Roosevelt, Hunting Trips, p. 118.

An inferior sort of still-hunting, as practised, for instance, on Norwegian islands for the large red-deer.
Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XLI. 394.

still-hunter (stil′hun″tėr), n. One who pursues game stealthily and without noise; one who hunts from ambush or under cover; a stalker. W. T. Hornaday, Smithsonian Report, 1887, ii. 430.

Stilliard[1]†, n. See Steelyard[1].

stilliard[2]†, n. An old spelling of steelyard[2].

stillicide (stil′i-sīd), n. [< F. stillicide, < L. stillicidium, stilicidium, a falling of drops, dripping, falling rain, < stilla, a drop (see still[2]), + cadere, fall.] 1†. A continual falling or succession of drops.

The stillicides of water, . . . if there be water enough to follow, will draw themselves into a small thread, because they will not discontinue; but if there be no remedy, then they cast themselves into round drops.
Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 24.

2. In Rom. law: (a) The right to have the rain from one's roof drop on another's land or roof. (b) The right to refuse to allow the rain from another's roof to drop on one's own land or roof.

stillicidious (stil-i-sid′i-us), a. [< stillicide + -i-ous.] Falling in drops. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., ii. 1.

stillicidium (stil-i-sid′i-um), n. [L.: see stillicide.] A morbid dropping or trickling.—Stillicidium lacrymarum, the trickling of tears down over the lower lids from obstruction of the lacrymal passages.—Stillicidium urinæ, a discharge of urine in drops.

stilliform (stil′i-fôrm), a. [< L. stilla, a drop, + forma, form.] Drop-shaped.

stilling (stil′ing), n. [Also stillion; appar. a variant of E. dial. stelling, a shed for cattle (= LG. stelling = G. stellung, a stand, scaffold; cf. Icel. stilling, management), < stell + -ing.] 1. A stand for casks.—2. In a brewery, a stand on which the rounds or cleansing-vats are placed in a trough, which serves to carry off the overflowing yeast.—3. A stand on which pottery is placed in the drying-kiln preparatory to firing.

Stillingia (sti-lin′ji-ạ), n. [NL. (Linnæus, 1767), named after Benjamin Stillingfleet, an English botanist who published botanical papers in 1759.] 1. A genus of plants, of the family Euphorbiaceæ, tribe Hippomaneæ. It is characterized by monœcious flowers in terminal bracted spikes, each bract bearing two glands—the male flowers having a small calyx with two or three broad shallow lobes, and two or rarely three free exserted stamens, and the female flowers bearing an ovary of two or three cells, which terminate in undivided styles united at the base and ripen into two-valved carpels which on falling leave the receptacle armed with three hard spreading horns. There are about 15 species, natives of North and South America, the Mascarene Islands, and the islands of the Pacific. They are mostly smooth shrubs, usually with alternate short-petioled leaves and a few small female flowers solitary under the lower bracts of the dense sterile spike, which bears usually three male flowers under each of the short and broad upper bracts. One species, S. sylvatica, occurs from Virginia southward, for which see queen's-delight and silver leaf.

2. [l. c.] A plant of the above genus, especially the officinal S. sylvatica.

stillion (stil′yon), n. Same as stilling. G. Scamell, Breweries and Maltings, p. 92.

stillitory†, n. An erroneous spelling of stillatory.

still-life, n. See still life, under still[1].

still-liquor (stil′lik″or), n. Bleaching-liquor prepared by the reaction of hydrochloric acid upon manganese binoxid in large stone chambers called stills (whence the name). It is a solution of manganese chlorid.

stillness (stil′nes), n. [< ME. stilnesse, < AS. stilnes, stillnes (= OFries. stilnese, stilnisse = MLG. stilnisse = OHG. stilnissi, stilnessi, MHG. stilnisse, stilnesse), < stille, still: see still[1] and -ness.] The state or character of being still. (a) Rest; motionlessness; calmness: as, the stillness of the air or of the sea. (b) Noiselessness; quiet; silence: as, the stillness of the night. (c) Freedom from agitation or excitement: as, the stillness of the passions. (d) Habitual silence; taciturnity.

still-peering† (stil′pēr″ing), a. Appearing still.

O you leaden messengers,
That ride upon the violent speed of fire,
Fly with false aim; move the still peering air,
That sings with piercing.
Shak, All's Well, iii. 2. 113.

[A doubtful word, by some read still-piercing.]

still-room (stil′röm), n. 1. An apartment for distilling; a domestic laboratory.—2. A room connected with the kitchen, where coffee, tea, and the like are made, and the finer articles supplied to the table are made, stored, and prepared for use. [Eng.]

still-stand (stil′stand), n. A standstill; a halt; a stop. [Rare.]

The tide swell'd up unto his height,
That makes a still-stand, running neither way.
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., ii. 3. 64.

still-watcher (stil′woch″ėr), n. In distilling, a reservoir in which the density of the liquid given over is tested by a hydrometer in order to follow the progress of the distillation.

stilly (stil′i), a. [< ME. stillich, < AS. stillīc (= MLG. stillich, stillik); as still[1] + -ly[1].] Still; quiet.

Oft in the stilly night,
Ere Slumber's chain has bound me,
Fond Memory brings the light
Of other days around me.
Moore, Irish Melodies.

stilly (stil′li), adv. [< ME. stilliche, < AS. stillīce (= MD. stillick, also stillekens = MLG. stilliken, stilken); as still[1] + -ly[2].] 1. Silently; without uproar.

And he a-roos as stilliche as he myght.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 180.

The hum of either army stilly sounds.
Shak., Hen. V., iv., Prol., l. 5.

2. Calmly; quietly; without agitation.

He takes his own, and stilly goes his way.
Dr. H. More, Cupid's Conflict, st. 47.

stilogonidium (stī″lō-gō-nid′i-um), n.; pl. stilogonidia (-ạ). [NL., < L. stilus, a pointed instrument, + NL. gonidium, q. v.] In bot., a gonidium cut off or separated from the end of a sterigma.

stilp (stilp), v. i. [With variation of vowel, < stulp, a prop: see stulp.] 1. To stalk; take long, high steps in walking.—2. To go on stilts or crutches. [Scotch.]

stilpers (stil′pėrz), n. pl. [< stilp + -er[1].] Stilts; crutches. [Scotch.]

stilpnomelane (stilp-nom′e-lān), n. [< Gr. στιλπνός, glittering (< στίλβειν, glitter, glisten), + μέλας (μελαν-), black, dark.] A black, greenish-black, or bronze-colored mineral occurring in foliated plates or thin scales sometimes forming a velvety coating (the variety chalcodite), also in fibrous forms. It is essentially a hydrous silicate of iron.

stilpnosiderite (stilp-nō-sid'e-rīt), n. [< Gr. στιλπνός, glittering, + E. siderite.] Same as ★limonite.

stilt (stilt), n. [Early mod. E. also stylte; < ME. stilte, stylte, < Sw. stylta, a prop, stilt, = Dan. stylte (cf. Norw. styltra), a stilt, = D. stelt, a stilt, wooden leg, = MLG. LG. stelte = OHG. stelza, MHG. G. stelze, a prop, crutch; perhaps akin to stale[2], stalk[2].] 1†. A prop used in walking; a crutch.

Verely she was heled, and left her styltes thore,
And on her fete went home resonably well.
Joseph of Arimathie (E. E. T. S.), p. 47.

I have laughed a-good to see the cripples Go limping home to Christendom on stilts.
Marlowe, Jew of Malta, ii. 3. 215.

2. One of two props or poles, each having a step or stirrup at some distance from the lower end, by means of which one may walk with the feet raised from the ground, and with a longer stride: used for crossing sandy or marshy places, streams, etc., and by children for amusement. Stilts were sometimes merely props fastened under the feet, as if very high-heeled shoes. Those used by children are slender poles about 6 feet long, with steps or stirrups 12 inches or more from one end; the longer end of the pole can be held by the hand or passed behind the arm. In a modified form the upper end of the pole is much shorter, and is fitted with a cross-handle which can be grasped by the hand, or is strapped to the leg below the knee. Stilts are used by the shepherds of the marshy Landes in southwestern France.

The doubtful fords and passages to try
With stilts and lope-staves.
Drayton, Barons' Wars, i. 43.

3. In hydraul. engin., one of a set of piles forming the back for the sheet-piling of a starling. E. H. Knight.—4. The handle of a plow. Scott, Kenilworth, xv.—5. In ceram., a support, generally of clay, used to hold a piece of pottery in the kiln, to allow the fire free access to the bottom of the piece. Also called cockspur and spur (which see).—6. [Abbr. of stilt-bird.] In ornith., any bird of the genus Himantopus: so called from the extremely long, slender legs. The bill is likewise very slender, straight, and sharp. The body is slender, the neck long, the wings are long and pointed, and the tail is short. The stilts are wading-birds living in marshes. They are white below, with most of the upper parts glossy-black, the bill is black, and the legs are of some bright tint. They are very generally distributed over the world, nest on the ground, and lay four dark-colored, heavily spotted eggs. Their food consists of small soft animals found in the mud and water, which they explore wi h their probe-like bills. The common stilt of the Old World is H. candidus or melanopterus; that of the United States is H. mexicanus, a rare bird in the eastern regions of the country, but abundant in some parts of the west. It is about 15 inches long, and 30 in extent of wings; the bill 2¾ inches; the legs, from the feathers to the toes, 7½ inches. There are only three toes, which are semipalmated. This species is locally called longshanks and lawyer. The South American stilt is H. nigricollis; the Australian, H. leucocephalus. A related bird of Australia to which the name extends is Cladorhynchus pectoralis, having the toes webbed like those of the avoset.—Stilt prolegs, in entom., the prolegs of a caterpillar when they are unusually long, so that the body over them is much raised above the surface on which the insect walks.

Black-necked Stilt (Himantopus mexicanus).

stilt (stilt), v. t. [< stilt, n.] To raise above the ordinary or normal position or surface, as if by the use of stilts.

The fluted columns [of San Moisé] are stilted upon pedestals, and their lines are broken by the bands which encircle them like broad barrel-hoops.
Howells, Venetian Life, xviii.

stilt-bird (stilt'bėrd), n. 1. The stilt or stilt-plover.—2†. pl. Wading birds collectively; the grallatorial birds, constituting the old order Grallæ or Grallatores. Also called stilt-walkers.

stilted (stil'ted), p. a. Elevated, as if on stilts; hence, pompous; inflated; formal; stiff and bombastic: said especially of language: as, a stilted mode of expression; a stilted style.

His earliest verses have a stilted, academic flavor.
Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 39.

Stilted arch, an arch which does not spring immediately from the apparent or feigned imposts, as from the capitals of the supporting pillars, but from horizontal courses of masonry resting on these false imposts, as if the arch were raised on stilts. Such arches occur frequently in all mediæval styles, especially as a means of maintaining a uniform height when spans of different widths are used in the same range. Compare arch[1].

Stilted Arch.—Mihrab in the Mosque of Sultan Hassan, Cairo.

stiltedness (stil'ted-nes), n. Stilted character; pompous stiffness. Athenæum, No. 3195, p. 94.

stiltify (stil'ti-fī), v. t.; pret. and pp. stiltified, ppr. stiltifying. [< stilt + -i-fy.] To raise as on stilts; elevate or prop up, as with stilts. [Rare.]

Skinny dwarfs ye are, cushioned and stiltified into great fat giants. C. Reade, Cloister and Hearth, lxv.

Stilton cheese. See cheese[1].

stilt-petrel (stilt'pet'rel), n. A stormy petrel of the genus Fregetta: so called from the length of the legs. F. grallaria is an example.

stilt-plover (stilt'pluv'ėr), n. The stilt or stilt-bird: so called because it has only three toes on each foot, like a plover.

stilt-sandpiper (stilt'sand'pī-pėr), n. A long-legged sandpiper of America, Micropalama himantopus. The adult in summer is blackish above, with each feather edged and tipped with white, or tawny and bay; the under parts are mixed reddish, whitish, and black in streaks on the throat, elsewhere in bars; the ear-coverts are chestnut, the upper tail-coverts white with dusky bars, and the bill and feet greenish-black. The length is 8¾ inches, the extent 16½. The young and the adults in winter are quite different, being ashy-gray above, with little or no trace of the reddish and black; a line over the eye and the whole under parts are white; and the jugulum and sides are suffused with ashy, and streaked with dusky. The bird inhabits North America, breeding in high latitudes, and migrating in the fall to Central and South America. See cut under Micropalama.

stilt-walker (stilt'wâ'kėr), n. 1. One who walks on stilts. Amer. Nat., Nov., 1889, p. 943.—2. A grallatorial bird; a stilt-bird.

stilty (stil'ti), a. [< stilt + -y[1].] Inflated; pompous; stilted. Quarterly Rev.

stilus, n. See stylus.

Stilwell act. See act.

stime (stīm), n. [Also styme; < ME. stime; a var. of steem, stem, a ray of light (see steam). It is otherwise explained as perhaps a var., due to some interference, of shim, < AS. scima, a light, brightness, a gleam of light (see shim[1], shime).] A ray of light; a glimmer; a glimpse: not now used except in negative expressions. [Now only Scotch.]

Ne he iwis might se a stime.
Cursor Mundi, l. 19652. (Stratmann.)

Wherewith he blinded them so close
A stime they could not see.
Robin Hood and the Beggar (Child's Ballads, V. 201).

stimulant (stim'ū-lant), a. and n. [= F. stimulant = Sp. Pg. estimulante = It. stimolante, < L. stimulan(t-)s, ppr. of stimulare, prick, urge, stimulate: see stimulate.] I. a. Stimulating; serving to stimulate, incite, or provoke; specifically, in physiol., temporarily quickening some functional or trophic process.—Stimulant balsam, a mixture of oil of turpentine 8 parts and flour mustard 1 part.

II. n. 1. That which stimulates, provokes, or incites; a stimulus; a spur.

The stimulant used to attract at first must be not only continued, but heightened to keep up the attraction.
Mrs. H. More, Cœlebs, xxv.

2. In physiol., an agent which temporarily quickens some functional or trophic process. It may act directly on the tissue concerned, or may excite the nerves which effect the process or paralyze the nerves which inhibit it. Stimulants comprise certain medicinal substances, as ammonia, alcohol, ethylic ether, as well as physical conditions, such as warmth, cold, light, or electricity, esthetic effects, as music and other products of art, and emotions of various kinds, as joy, hope, etc. Stimulants have been divided into general and topical, according as they affect directly or indirectly the whole system or only a particular part.—Diffusible stimulants, those stimulants, as ether or ammonia, which have a speedy and quickly transient effect.

stimulate (stim'ū-lāt), v.; pret. and pp. stimulated, ppr. stimulating. [< L. stimulatus, pp. of stimulare (> It. stimolare = Sp. Pg. estimular = F. stimuler), prick, urge, stimulate, < stimulus, a goad: see stimulus.] I. trans. 1. To prick; goad; excite, rouse, or animate to action or more vigorous exertion by some effective motive or by persuasion; spur on; incite.

The general must stimulate the mind of his soldiers to the perception that they are men, and the enemy is no more. Emerson, Courage.

Mystery in nature stimulates inquiry; why should it not do so in religion? J. F. Clarke, Self-Culture, p. 149.

2. In physiol., to quicken temporarily some functional or trophic process in.—3. Specifically, to affect by the use of intoxicating drinks.

We were all slightly stimulated [with arrack] before a move was made toward the dinner table.
O'Donovan, Merv, xi.

Stimulating bath, a bath containing aromatic astringent or tonic ingredients.—Syn. 1. To encourage, impel, urge, instigate, provoke, whet, foment, kindle, stir up.

II. intrans. To act as a stimulus.

Urg'd by the stimulating goad,
I drag the cumbrous waggon's load.
Gay, To a Poor Man, l. 87.

★stimulation (stim-ū-lā'shon), n. [= F. stimulation = Sp. estimulación = Pg. estimulação = It. stimolazione, < L. stimulatio(n-), a pricking, incitement, < stimulare, prick, goad, stimulate: see stimulate.] 1. The act of stimulating, or the state of being stimulated; urging; encouragement; incitement; increased or quickened action or activity.

The providential stimulations and excitations of the conscience. Bp. Ward, Sermon, Jan. 30, 1674. (Latham.)

A certain length of stimulation seems demanded by the inertia of the nerve-substance.
W. James, Prin. of Psychol., I. 648.

2. In med., the act or method of stimulating; the condition of being stimulated; the effect of the use of stimulants.

The latent morbid predisposition [to delirium tremens] engendered in the nervous system by prolonged and abnormal stimulation is evoked or brought into activity by the depressing influence of the shock [of a corporeal injury].
J. M. Carnochan, Operative Surgery, p. 153.

=Syn. 1. See stimulate.

stimulative (stim'ū-lā-tiv), a. and n. [= It. stimolativo; as stimulate + -ive.] I. a. Having the quality of stimulating; tending to stimulate.

II. n. That which stimulates; that which rouses into more vigorous action; a stimulant or incentive.

Then there are so many stimulatives to such a spirit as mine in this affair, besides love!
Richardson, Clarissa Harlowe, I. 225. (Davies.)

★stimulator (stim'ū-lā-tor), n. [= F. stimulateur = It. stimolatore, < LL. stimulator, an instigator, < L. stimulare, prick, goad: see stimulate.] One who or that which stimulates.

stimulatress (stim'ū-lā-tres), n. [= F. stimulatrice = It. stimolatrice, < L. stimulatrix, fem. of (LL.) stimulator: see stimulator.] A woman who stimulates or animates.

★stimulose (stim'ū-lōs), a. [< F. stimuleux = It. stimoloso, < L. stimulosus, abounding with prickles, < stimulus, a prick, goad, prickle: see stimulus.] In bot., covered with stings or stimuli.

★stimulus (stim'ū-lus), n.; pl. stimuli (-lī). [= F. stimulus, stimule = Sp. estimulo = Pg. estimulo = It. stimolo, stimulo, < L. stimulus, a goad, a pointed stake, fig. a sting, pang, an incitement, spur, stimulus, < √ stig-, also in instigare, set on, incite, urge, = Gr. στίζειν, pierce, prick, = AS. stecan,* pierce: see stick[1].] 1. Literally, a goad.—2. In bot., a sting: as, the nettle is furnished with stimuli.—3. The point at the end of a crozier, pastoral staff, precentor's staff, or the like. In the staves of ecclesiastical authority the stimulus or point is regarded as the emblem of judgment or punishment.

4. Something that excites or rouses the mind or spirits; something that incites to action or exertion; an incitement or incentive.

We went to dine last Thursday with Mr. ———, a neighboring clergyman, a haunch of venison being the stimulus to the invitation. Sydney Smith, in Lady Holland, vi.

The infinitely complex organizations of commerce have grown up under the stimulus of certain desires existing in each of us. H. Spencer, Social Statics, p. 28.

5. In physiol., something which evokes some functional or trophic reaction in the tissues on which it acts.

Light does not act as a stimulus to the nervous substance, either fibres or cells, unless it have an intensity which is nearly deadly to that substance.
G. T. Ladd, Physiol. Psychology, p. 179.

Absolute stimulus difference, in psychophysics, the actual difference in strength between two stimuli.—Relative stimulus difference, in psychophysics, the ratio of the difference between two stimuli to their mean.—Stimulus receptivity, in psychophysics, the power of appreciating stimuli, measured by the least intensity of stimulus giving the greatest conscious effect.—Stimulus scope, in psychophysics, the difference between the measure of stimulus receptivity and the stimulus threshold.—Stimulus susceptibility, in psychophysics, the power of perceiving a stimulus, so that the greater the stimulus susceptibility the lower the stimulus threshold.—Stimulus threshold, in psychophysics, the minimum amount of stimulus required to produce a conscious effect.

stimy (stī'mi), n. In golf, the position of a ball on a putting-green when it is directly between the hole for which an adversary is playing and his ball, at any distance over six inches between the two.

stimy (stī'mi), v. t. To hinder by a stimy.

stinch†, v. t. [A var. of stanch[1].] To stanch.

stine (stīn), n. A dialectal form of styan.

sting[1] (sting), v.; pret. and pp. stung (pret. formerly stang), ppr. stinging. [< ME. stingen (pret. stang, stong, stonge, pp. stungen, stongen, y-stongen, y-stonge), < AS. stingan (pret. stang, pp. stungen) = Icel. stinga = Sw. stinga = Dan. stinge; cf. Goth. us-stiggan, push, push out, = L. stinguere*, quench: see stick[1], v.] I. trans. 1†. To pierce; prick; puncture.

Thei ben y-sewed with whigt silk, . . .
Y-stongen with stiches.
Piers Plowman's Crede (E. E. T. S.), l. 553.

2†. To impale.

He stingeth him upon his speres orde.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 645.

3. To prick severely; give acute pain to by piercing with a sharp point; especially, to pierce and wound with any sharp-pointed weapon supplied with acrid or poisonous fluid, as a fang or sting, with which certain animals and plants are furnished; bite; urticate: as, to be stung by a bee, a scorpion, or a nettle, or by a serpent or a sea-nettle.

I often have been stung too with curst bees.
B. Jonson, Sad Shepherd, ii. 2.

4. To pain acutely, as if with a sting; goad: as, a conscience stung with remorse.

Unhappy Psyche, stung by these reproaches, Profoundly feels the wound dive in her heart.
J. Beaumont, Psyche, v. 14.

5. To stimulate; goad.

She was trying to task herself up to her duty. At last she stung herself into its performance by a suspicion.
Mrs. Gaskell, North and South, xxxviii.

II. intrans. 1. To have a sting; be capable of wounding with a sting; use the sting: literally or figuratively: as, hornets sting; epigrams often sting; a stinging blow.

At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder. Prov. xxiii. 32.

2. To give pain or smart; be sharply painful; smart: as, the wound stung for an hour.

Under the dust, beneath the grass,
Deep in dim death, where no thought stings.
A. C. Swinburne, Félise.

sting[1] (sting), n. [= Icel. stingi, a pin, a stitch in the side, = Sw. sting, a sting (in sense 4), = Dan. sting, stitch; from the verb.] 1. A sharp-pointed organ of certain insects and other animals, capable of inflicting by puncture a painful wound

I bring no tales nor flatteries; in my tongue, sir,
I carry no fork'd stings. Fletcher, Loyal Subject, ii. 1.

In zoöl., specifically—(a) The modified ovipositor of the females of certain insects, as bees, wasps, hornets, and many other Hymenoptera; an aculeus; a terebra. This weapon is generally so constructed as to inflict a poisoned as well as punctured wound, which may become inflamed and very painful or even dangerous; an irritating fluid is injected through the tubular sting when the thrust is given. See cut under Hymenoptera. (b) The mouth-parts of various insects which are formed for piercing and sucking, as in the mosquito and other gnats or midges, gadflies, fleas, bedbugs, etc. In these cases the wound is often poisoned. See cuts under gnat and mosquito. (c) A stinging hair or spine of the larvæ of various moths, or such organs collectively. See cuts under hag-moth, saddleback, and stinging. (d) The falces of spiders, with which these creatures bite—in some cases, as of the katipo or malmignatte, inflicting a very serious or even fatal wound. See cuts under chelicera and falx. (e) The curved or claw-like telson of the tail of a scorpion, inflicting a serious poisoned wound. See cuts under scorpion and Scorpionida. (f) One of the feet or claws of centipeds, which, in the case of some of the larger kinds, of tropical countries, inflict painful and dangerous wounds. (g) The poison-fang or venom-tooth of a nocuous serpent; also, in popular misapprehension, the harmless soft forked tongue of any serpent. See cuts under Crotalus and snake. (h) A fin-spine of some fishes, capable of wounding. In a few cases such spines are connected with a venom-gland whence poison is injected; in others, as the tail-spines of sting-rays, the large bony sting, several inches long and sometimes jagged, is smeared with a substance which may cause a wound to fester. See cuts under stone-cat, sting-ray. (i) An urticating organ, or such organs collectively, of the jellyfishes, sea-nettles, or other cœlenterates. See cut under nematocyst.

2. An elongate tapering gland-hair, with a swollen base and the apex usually tipped by a small knob, which when broken off sets free an irritant fluid capable of causing more or less inflammation of the skin.—3. The fine taper of a dog's tail. Sportsman's Gazetteer.—4. The operation or effect of a sting; the act of stinging; the usually poisoned punctured wound made by a sting; also, the pain or smart of such a wound.

Their softest touch as smart as lizards' stings!
Their music frightful as the serpents' hiss.
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iii. 2. 325.

5. Anything, or that in anything, which gives acute pain, or constitutes the principal pain; also, anything which goads to action: as, the sting of hunger; the stings of remorse; the stings of reproach.

The sting of death is sin. 1 Cor. xv. 56.

Slander,
Whose sting is sharper than the sword's.
Shak., W. T., ii. 3. 86.

A bitter jest leaves a sting behind it.
Burton, Anat. of Mel., To the Reader, p. 77.

6. Mental pain inflicted, as by a biting or cutting remark or sarcasm; hence, the point of an epigram.

There is nothing harder to forgive than the sting of an epigram. O. W. Holmes, The Atlantic, LXVI. 667.

7. A stimulus, irritation, or incitement; a nettling or goading; an impulse.

The wanton stings and motions of the sense.
Shak., M. for M., i. 4. 59.

Exserted sting. See exserted.

sting[2] (sting), n. [Also steing; a var. of stang[1].] 1†. A pole.—2†. A pike; a spear.—3. An instrument for thatching.—4. The mast of a vessel. [Prov. Eng. or Scotch in all uses.]

sting-and-ling (sting'and-ling'), adv. [Lit. pole and line; < sting[2] + and + ling, Sc. var. of line[2].] Entirely; completely; with everything; hence, by force. [Scotch.]

Unless he had been brought there sting and ling.
Scott, Antiquary, xliv.

stingaree (sting'ga-rē), n. [A corrupt form of sting-ray.] See sting-ray.

sting-bull (sting'bůl), n. The greater weever, or sting-fish, Trachinus draco. See Trachinus and weever. Also called otter-fish.

stinger (sting'ėr), n. [< sting[1] + -er[1].] One who or that which stings, vexes, or gives acute pain.

That malice
Wears no dead flesh about it, 'tis a stinger.
Middleton, More Dissemblers Besides Women, iii. 2.

(a) An animal or a plant that stings.

The Mutilla being a well-armed insect, and a severe stinger. E. D. Cope, Origin of the Fittest, p. 212.

(b) The sting of an insect. (c) A biting or cutting remark. [Colloq.] (d) A smart, telling blow. [Colloq.]

Rooke, . . . rushing at him incautiously, received a stinger that staggered him and nearly closed his right eye.
C. Reade, Hard Cash, xliii.

sting-fish (sting'fish), n. 1. Same as sting-bull. See cut under Trachinus.—2. The sea-scorpion, Myoxocephalus scorpius.

stingily (stin'ji-li), adv. In a stingy manner; with mean niggardliness; in a niggardly manner.

stinginess (stin'ji-nes), n. The state or quality of being stingy; extreme avarice; niggardliness; miserliness.

stinging (sting'ing), p. a. 1. That uses a sting; furnished with a sting or stinging organs of any sort; urticating: as, a stinging insect or sea-nettle.—2. In bot., noting a plant furnished with stinging hairs. See sting[1], 2.—3. That pierces or wounds as with a sting; that causes acute pain, irritation, or the like; keen; sharp; pungent; telling: as, a stinging tongue; a stinging rebuke or remark.

He wrapped her warm in his seaman's coat,
Against the stinging blast.
Longfellow, Wreck of the Hesperus.

The stinging lash of wit.
O. W. Holmes, Opening of Fifth Ave. Theatre, N. Y., 1873.

Stinging ant, an ant of the family Myrmicidæ.—Stinging bug, the blood-sucking cone-nose, Conorhinus sanguisugus, a common bug of the family Reduviidæ, which sucks the blood of man and domestic animals, and inflicts a painful wound. See cut under Conorhinus.—Stinging caterpillar, the larva of any one of certain moths in the United States, as Hemileuca maia, Automeris io, Sibine stimulea, Phobetron pithecium, Prolima- codes scapha, and Megalopyge opercularis, which are provided with stinging spines.—Stinging hair. See hair[1] and stinging spine.—Stinging nettle. See nettle[1], 1.—Stinging spine, in entom., one of the modified bristles of any stinging caterpillar, which are sharp and have an urticating effect. See cuts under hag-moth and saddleback.—Stinging tree. Same as nettle-tree, 2.

Stinging Caterpillar, or Slug-caterpillar, and Moth of Megalopyge opercularis, both natural size.

stinging-bush (sting'ing-bůsh), n. Same as tread-softly.

stinging-cell (sting'ing-sel), n. The thread-cell or lasso-cell with which any cœlenterate, as a sea-nettle, urticates. See nematophore, and cuts under cnida and nematocyst.

stingingly (sting'ing-li), adv. With stinging effect.

stingless (sting'les), a. [< sting[1] + -less.] Having no sting, as an insect. Shak., J. C., v. 1. 35.—Stingless nettle, the richweed or clearweed, Pilea pumila. See clearweed.

sting-moth (sting'môth), n. The Australian Doratifera vulnerans, whose larva is capable of inflicting a stinging wound.

stingo (sting'gō), n. [With a simulated It. or Sp. or L. termination, < sting[1]: in allusion to its sharp taste.] Strong malt liquor. [Colloq.]

Come, let 's in and drink a cup of stingo.
Randolph, Hey for Honesty, ii. 6.

★sting-ray (sting'rā), n. [Also, corruptly, stingaree, stingoree; < sting[1] + ray[2].] A batoid fish of the family Dasyatidæ, as Dasyatis pastinaca, having a long, smooth, flexible, lash-like tail armed near the base with a bony spine several inches long, sharp at the point, and serrated along the sides. It is capable of inflicting a severe and very painful wound, which appears to be poisoned by the slime with which the sting is covered. There are many species of sting-rays, in some of which there are two or three spines bundled together. The British species above named is locally known as fire-flare or fiery-flare. The commonest sting-ray of the North Atlantic coast of the United States is D. centrura, locally known as clam-cracker, and corruptly called stingaree. D. sabina is a similar southern species. The name extends to any ray with a tail-spine. See Myliobatidæ (a).

Southern Sting-ray (Dasyatis sabina). (From Report of U. S. Fish Commission.)

stingtail (sting'tāl), n. A sting-ray.

sting-winkle (sting'wing'kl), n. The hedge-hog-murex, Murex erinaceus or europæus: so called by fishermen because it bores holes in other shell-fish, as if stinging them.

stingy[1] (sting'i), a. [< sting[1] + -y[1].] Stinging; piercing, as the wind; sharp, as a criticism. [Colloq. or prov. Eng.]

stingy[2] (stin'ji), a. [A dialectal (assibilated) form and deflected use of stingy[1].] 1. Ill-tempered. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]—2. Meanly avaricious; extremely close-fisted and covetous; niggardly: as, a stingy fellow.

The griping and stingy humour of the covetous.
Stillingfleet, Sermons, II. vii.

3. Scanty; not full or plentiful.

When your teams
Drag home the stingy harvest.
Longfellow, Wayside Inn, Birds of Killingworth.

=Syn. 2. Parsimonious, Miserly, etc. (see penurious), illiberal, ungenerous, saving, chary.

stink (stingk), v.; pret. and pp. stunk (pret. formerly stank), ppr. stinking. [< ME. stinken, stynken (pret. stank, stonk, pp. stonken), < AS. stincan (pret. stanc, pp. stuncen), smell, have an odor, rise as vapor, = MD. D. stinken = MLG. LG. stinken = OHG. stinchan, smell, have an odor, MHG. G. stinken = Sw. stinka = Dan. stinke, have a bad smell, stink; cf. Gr. τάγγος, rancid. Perhaps connected with Icel. stökkva, spring, leap, sprinkle, but not with Goth. stiggkwan, smite, thrust, strike; cf. L. tangere, touch (see tact, tangent). Hence ult. stench[1].] I. intrans. To emit a strong offensive smell; send out a disgusting odor; hence, to be in bad odor; have a bad reputation; be regarded with disfavor.

And therwithal he stank so horribel.
Chaucer, Monk's Tale, l. 627.

Fall Fate upon us,
Our memories shall never stink behind us.
Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, iii. 7.

Stinking badger, the stinkard or teledu.—Stinking bunt. Same as stinking smut.—Stinking camomile. Same as mayweed.—Stinking cedar, a coniferous tree of the genus Tumion: so named from the strong peculiar odor of the wood and foliage, especially when bruised or burnt. Most properly so called is T. taxifolium, an extremely local tree of western Florida, an evergreen of moderate size, with bright-yellow (or in old trees reddish) wood susceptible of a fine polish, very durable in contact with the soil, and, where found, largely used for fence-posts. Also called savin. See cut under Torreya. The similar Tumion Californicum is the California nutmeg (see nutmeg). T. grande of China, called kaya, affords a good timber. T. nuciferum, a smaller Japanese species, yields a wood valued by coopers and turners, and a food-oil is expressed from its nuts. Also stinking yew.—Stinking crane's-bill. Same as herb-robert.—Stinking goose-foot. Same as notchweed.—Stinking hellebore, hoar-hound. See the nouns.—Stinking mayweed, the common mayweed.—Stinking nightshade. Same as henbane.—Stinking nutmeg, the California nutmeg, one of the stinking cedars. See nutmeg.—Stinking smut. See smut, 3 (b).—Stinking vervain, the guinea-hen weed. See Petiveria.—Stinking yew. Same as stinking cedar.

II. trans. To annoy with an offensive smell; affect in any way by an offensive odor. Imp. Dict.

stink (stingk), n. [< ME. stinke, stynk, stynke; from the verb. Cf. stench[1].] 1. A strong offensive smell; a disgusting odor; a stench.

And fro him comethe out Smoke and Stynk and Fuyr, and so moche Abhomynacioun that unethe no man may there endure. Mandeville, Travels, p. 282.

In Köln, a town of monks and bones,
And pavements fanged with murderous stones,
And rags, and hags, and hideous wenches —
I counted two and seventy stenches,
All well-defined and several stinks!
Coleridge, Cologne.

2†. Hell, regarded as a region of sulphurous smells (or of infamy?).

So have I doon in erthe, allas the while!
That certes, but if thou my socour be,
To stynk eterne he wol my gost exile.
Chaucer, A. B. C., l. 56.

3. A disagreeable exposure. [Slang.]

The newspapers of the district where he was then located had raised before the eye and mind of the public what the "patterers" of his class [genteel beggars] proverbially call a stink—that is, had opened the eyes of the unwary to the movements of "Chelsea George."
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 250.

Fire stink, in coal-mining, a smell indicating the spontaneous combustion of the coal or goaf somewhere in the mine.=Syn. 1. Stench, etc. See smell.

stink-alive (stingk'a-līv), n. The bib or pout, Gadus luscus: so called because it speedily putrefies after death. J. G. Wood.

stinkard (sting'kärd), n. [< stink + -ard.] 1†. One who stinks; hence, a mean, paltry fellow.

Your stinkard has the self-same liberty to be there in his tobacco-fumes which your sweet courtier hath.
Dekker, Gull's Hornbook, p. 133.

That foolish knave, that hose and doublet stinkard.
Chapman, Gentleman Usher, v. 1.

2. The stinking badger of Java, Mydaus meliceps; the teledu. See cut under teledu.—3. In ichth., a shark of the genus Mustelus.

stinkardly† (sting'kärd-li), a. [< stinkard + -ly[1].] Stinking; mean.

You notorious stinkardly bearward.
B. Jonson, Epicœne, iv. 1.

stink-ball (stingk'bâl), n. A preparation of pitch, resin, niter, gunpowder, colophony, asafetida, and other offensive and suffocating ingredients, placed in earthen jars, formerly used for throwing upon an enemy's decks at close quarters, and still in use among Eastern pirates.

stink-bird (stingk'bėrd), n. The hoactzin, Opisthocomus cristatus.

stink-bug (stingk'bug), n. Any one of several malodorous bugs, particularly the common squash-bug, Anasa tristis, of the Coreidæ. See cut under squash-bug.

★stinker (sting'kėr), n. [< stink + -er[1].] 1. One who or that which stinks; a stinkard; a stinkpot.

The air may be purified . . . by burning of stink-pots or stinkers in contagious lanes. Harvey, Consumptions.

2. One of several large petrels, as the giant fulmar, Ossifraga gigantea, which acquire an offensive odor from feeding on blubber or carrion.

stinkhorn (stingk'hôrn), n. [< stink + horn.] In bot., a common name for certain ill-smelling fungi of the genus Phallus. The most common species is P. impudicus. See Phallus, 3.

stinkingly (sting'king-li), adv. In a stinking manner; disgustingly; with an offensive smell.

stinking-weed (sting'king-wēd), n. 1. Same as stinking-weed, 1.—2. A leguminous shrub, ★Anagyris fœtida, of the Mediterranean region.

stinkpot (stingk'pot), n. 1. A pot or jar of stinking materials; a chamber-pot. Smollett.—2†. A receptacle containing a disinfectant. See the quotation under stinker.—3. A stink-ball.—4. The musk-turtle, Cinosternum odoratum or Aromochelys odorata, a stinking kind of turtle common in some parts of the United States. It is a common inhabitant of the eastern and central streams of the country, and is very troublesome to fishermen by swallowing their bait. It is useful as a scavenger.

Stinkpot (Cinosternum odoratum or Aromochelys odorata).

stink-rat (stingk'rat), n. The musk-turtle. See stinkpot, 4. [Local, U. S.]

stink-shad (stingk'shad), n. Same as mud-shad.

stinkstone (stingk'stōn), n. A variety of limestone which gives off a fetid odor when quarried or struck by a hammer. This odor comes from the escape of sulphureted hydrogen, and in most cases it seems to be caused by the decomposition of embedded organic matter. In some quarries in the Carboniferous limestone of Ireland the smell has been found so overpowering that the men were sickened by it, and had to leave off work for a time. (Jukes.) Also called fetid limestone, and swinestone.

stink-trap (stingk'trap), n. A contrivance to prevent the escape of effluvia from the openings of drains; a stench-trap.

stink-turtle (stingk'tėr'tl), n. The musk-turtle. See stinkpot, 4.

★stinkweed (stingk'wēd), n. 1. An ill-smelling cruciferous plant, Diplotaxis muralis, of southern Europe. [Prov. Eng.]—2. The jimson-weed.

★stinkwood (stingk'wûd), n. One of several trees with fetid wood. (a) In South Africa, Ocotea bullata (see Ocotea) and Celtis Kraussiana, the latter a tree 20 feet high and 2 feet in diameter, with a tough yellowish-white wood used for planks, cooperage, etc. (b) In Tasmania, a shrub or tree, Zieria Smithii, also found in Australia, and sometimes called sand-fly bush. (c) In the Mascarene Islands, Fœtidia Mauritiana of the Lecythidaceæ, a tree from 20 to 40 feet high, whose wood is used for foundations, not being attacked by white ants.

stint (stint), v. [Also obs. or dial. stent; < ME. stinten, stynten, stenten, < AS. styntan, make dull, blunt, orig. make short (also in comp. forstyntan, ge-stentan, warn, restrain) (= Icel. stytta (for stynta*), shorten, = Sw. dial. stynta, shorten, = Norw. stytta, stutta, shorten, tuck up the clothes), < stunt, dull, obtuse, stupid, = Icel. stuttr = OSw. stunt = Norw. stutt, short: see stunt.] I. trans. 1. To cause to cease; put an end to; stay; stop. [Obsolete or archaic.]

Sey, "al forgeven," and stynt is al this fare [disturbance].
Chaucer, Troilus, iii. 1107.

Make war breed peace, make peace stint war.
Shak., T. of A., v. 4. 83.

Stint thy babbling tongue!
B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, i. 1.

The thin jackals waiting for the feast
Stinted their hungry howls as he passed by.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I. 172.

2†. To bring to a stand; stay; put a stop to.

The kynges were stynted at the entre of the forest by a river, and ther assembled alle her peple that thei myght haue. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 154.

3. To forbear; cease.

Art thou a seruing man? then serue againe,
And stint to steale as common souldiours do.
Gascoigne, Steele Glas (ed. Arber), p. 67.

Spare not to spur, nor stint to ride,
Until thou come to fair Tweedside.
Scott, L. of L. M., i. 22.

4. To limit; restrain; restrict; hence, to limit or confine to a scanty allowance: as, to stint one's self in food; to stint service or help.

[He] trauels halfe a day without any refreshment then water, whereof wisely and temperately he stinted himselfe. Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, II. 135.

Was the infinite One to be confined to this narrow space? Could His love be stinted to the few to whom He had especially revealed His Will? Channing, Perfect Life, p. 61.

5. To assign a definite task to; prescribe a specified amount of labor for: as, to stint a pupil or a servant. See stint, n., 2.—6. To cover or serve (a mare) successfully; get with foal. See the quotation under stinted, 2.

II. intrans. 1. To cease; desist; stay; stop; hold.

Of this cry they wolde nevere stenten.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 45.

He styntid not, nor neuer wold he sese,
And with his swerd where that his stroke glynt, Owt of ther saufll full redely they went.
Generydes (E. E. T. S.), l. 2420.

And swears she'll never stint. Shak., Pericles, iv. 4. 42.

2. To be saving or careful in expenditure.

It 's in things for show they cut short; while for such as me, it 's in things for life we've to stint.
Mrs. Gaskell, Mary Barton, xxxvii.

stint (stint), n. [Also obs. or dial. stent; < stint, v.] 1. Limit; bound; limitation; restriction; restraint: as, common without stint (that is, without limitation or restriction as to the extent of the pasturage, the number of cattle to be pastured, or the period of the year).

If the summe which the debter oweth be above the stint, he shall not be released. Coryat, Crudities, I. 167.

I know not how, Diuine Prouidence seemeth to haue set those Scythian stints to the Persian proceedings.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 352.

By rallying round the throne the whole strength of the Royalists and High-Churchmen, and by using without stint all the resources of corruption, he [Danby] flattered himself that he could manage the Parliament.
Macaulay, Sir W. Temple.

2. Fixed amount or quantity; allowance; prescribed or allotted task or performance: as, a certain stint of work.

Put me to a certain stint, sir; allow me but a red herring a-day. Fletcher (and another), Love's Cure, ii. 1.

In the divided or social state, these functions are parcelled out to individuals, each of whom aims to do his stint of the joint work. Emerson, Misc., p. 72.

Margaret had a new stint at quilling.
S. Judd, Margaret, i. 2.

If you are sick or weak, and can't finish your stent, you are given twenty blows with the cat.
The Century, XXXVII. 36.

3. One of several small species of sandpiper, especially of the genus Actodromas; a sandpeep. The common stint is the dunlin, purre, or ox-bird, Pelidna alpina. (See dunlin.) This is an early, if not the first, application of the name, as by Ray, who called this bird also ozeye and least snipe. The little stint is Actodromas minuta; the least stint is A. minutilla, which abounds in North America, and is also known as Wilson's sandpiper. Temminck's stint is A. temminckii; the red-necked, A. ruficollis. There are several others of the same genus. The broad-billed sandpiper, Limicola platyrhyncha, is a kind of stint, and the spoon-billed, Eurynorhynchus pygmæus, is another. Extension of the name to the sanderling and to phalaropes is unusual.

American Least Stint (Actodromas minutilla).

stintance† (stin'tans), n. [< stint + -ance.] Stint; limit; restriction; restraint. London Prodigal, p. 7. (Halliwell.) [Rare.]

stinted (stin'ted), p. a. 1. Limited; scanty; scrimped.

> Oh! trifle not with wants you cannot feel,
> Nor mock the misery of a stinted meal.
> Crabbe, Works, I. 9.

2. In foal. See stint, v. t., 6. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

Stinted, 'in foal.' The word was printed, in this sense, in a catalogue of live-stock for sale at Nashville a year or two ago [1886]. Halliwell and Wright give it as an adjective, meaning in foal, used in the West of England.
Trans. Amer. Philol. Ass., XVII. 44.

stintedness (stin'ted-nes), n. The character or condition of being stinted.

stinter (stin'tėr), n. [< stint + -er[1].] One who or that which stints, checks, or puts a stop to: as, a stinter of strife.

> Let us now see whether a set form, or this extemporary way, be the greater hinderer and stinter of it.
> South, Sermons, II. iii.

stintingly (stin'ting-li), adv. Restrictedly; restrainedly; grudgingly. George Eliot, Janet's Repentance, viii.

stintless (stint'les), a. [< stint + -less.] 1†. Ceaseless.

> His life was nothing els but stintlesse passion.
> Rowland, Betraying of Christ (1598). (Halliwell.)

2. Without stint; unstinted; generous.

> He gets glimpses of the same stintless hospitality.
> The Century, XXVII. 201.

stinty (stin'ti), a. [< stint + -y[1].] Restricted; grudging; illiberal. [Rare.]

> Those endowments which our Anglo-Saxon forefathers made to win for themselves and kindred such ghostly aids in another world were neither few nor stinty.
> Rock, Church of our Fathers, ii. 327.

stiony, n. See styany.

Stipa (stī'pä), n. [NL. (Linnæus, 1753), named from the flaxen appearance of the feathery awns of S. pennata; < L. stipa, stupa, stuppa, the coarse part of flax, tow: see stupa.] A genus of grasses, of the tribe Agrostideæ, type of the subtribe Stipeæ. It is characterized by one-flowered panicled spikelets, with their pedicels not continued beyond the flower, which contains three or perhaps sometimes only two lodicules and a narrow acuminate flowering glume indurated closely around the grain and prolonged, usually by a joint, into a long and commonly conspicuously twisted or bent awn. There are nearly 100 species, widely dispersed through both tropical and temperate regions. They are tufted grasses, usually tall, with convolute leaves and a slender, sparingly branched panicle of rather long scattered spikelets, with awns sometimes extremely attenuated. A general name of the species is feather-grass, applying particularly to the highly ornamental S. pennata of Europe. The only common species of the eastern United States is S. avenacea, the black oat-grass; westward the species are numerous—several, known as bunch-, beard-, or feather-grass, being somewhat valuable wild forage-plants of the mountains and great plains. Among these are S. comata (silk-grass) and S. spartea (porcupine-grass), the latter remarkable for its hygrometric awns, which are coiled when dry, but uncoil under moisture and, when resisted, tend to push the seed into the ground. S. Vaseyi, a native of Mexico, New Mexico, etc., is reported to have a narcotic effect upon horses, and is called sleepy-grass. S. aristiglumis of Australia is a valuable fodder-plant, of remarkably rapid growth; S. micrantha of Queensland borrows the name of bamboo. S. tenacissima and S. arenaria, on account of their large membranous spikelets and two-cleft flowering glume, are sometimes separated as a genus, Macrochloa (Kunth, 1835). See esparto, alfa, and atocha-grass.

stipate (stī'pāt), a. [< L. stipatus, pp. of stipare, crowd, press together. Cf. constipate.] In bot., crowded.

stipe[1] (stīp), n. [A dial. var. of steep[1]. Cf. Stiper Stone group.] A steep ascent. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

stipe[2] (stīp), n. [< F. stipe, a stipe, = Sp. estípite, a door-post, = It. stipite, a stock, trunk, post, door-post, < L. stipes (stipit-), a stock, trunk, post, poet. a tree, a branch of a tree; perhaps cognate with E. stiff.] 1. In bot., a stalk or support of some sort, the word being variously employed. (a) In flowering plants, the stalk formed by the receptacle or some part of it, or by a carpel. To distinguish further this kind of stipe, various other terms are employed, as thecaphore, gynophore, gonophore, anthophore, gynobase, and carpophore. See cut under Arachis. (b) The stalk or petiole of a frond, especially of a fern or seaweed. See cut under seaweed. (c) In fungi, especially of the genus Agaricus, the stalk or stem which supports the pileus or cap. (d) The caudex of a tree-fern. Also stipes. See cut in next column.

a, Longitudinal section of the flower of Sinapistrum pentaphyllum, showing the calyx, two of the petals, two of the stamens, and the stipitate ovary. b, Frond of Asplenium Trichomanes. c, Agaricus campestris. (s, Stipe in a, b, and c.)

2. In anat., a stem: applied to two branches, anterior and posterior, of the zygal or paroccipital fissure of the brain. B. G. Wilder.—3. In zoöl., a stipes.

stipel (stī'pel), n. [< NL. stipella*, for stipitella*, dim. of L. stipes, a post: see stipe[2].] In bot., a secondary stipule situated at the base of the leaflets of a compound leaf. Unlike stipules, there is only a single one to each leaflet, with the exception of the terminal leaflet, which has a pair.

stipellate (stī'pel-āt), a. [< NL. stipellatus*, < stipella*, a stipel: see stipel.] In bot., bearing or having stipels.

stipend (stī'pend), n. [= Sp. Pg. estipendio = It. stipendio, < L. stipendium, a tax, impost, tribute; in military use, pay, salary; contr. for stipipendium*, < stips, a gift, donation, alms (given in small coin), + pendere, weigh out: see pendent.] A fixed periodical allowance or payment; settled or fixed pay; salary; pay; specifically, in Scotland, the salary paid to a clergyman; the income of an ecclesiastical living.

> Americus Vesputius, . . . vnder the stipende of the Portugales, hadde sayled towarde the south pole many degrees beyond the Equinoctiall.
> Peter Martyr (tr. in Eden's First Books on America, [ed. Arber, p. 134).

> 'Twas a wonder with how small a stipend from his father Tom Tusher contrived to make a good figure.
> Thackeray, Henry Esmond, x.

=Syn. Pay, etc. See salary[1].

stipend (stī'pend), v. t. [< F. stipendier = Sp. Pg. estipendiar = It. stipendiare, pay, hire, < L. stipendiari, receive pay, serve for pay, < stipendium, pay: see stipend, n.] To pay by settled stipend or wages; put upon or provide with a stipend. Shelton, tr. of Don Quixote, xlvii. (Latham.) [Rare.]

stipendiarian (stī-pen-di-ā'ri-an), a. [< stipendiary + -an.] Acting from mercenary considerations; hired; stipendiary. Imp. Dict.

stipendiary (stī-pen'di-ā-ri), a. and n. [< F. stipendiaire = Sp. Pg. estipendiario = It. stipendiario, < L. stipendiarius, pertaining to tribute, contribution, or pay, < stipendium, tribute, pay: see stipend.] I. a. Receiving wages or salary; performing services for a stated price or compensation; paid.—Stipendiary curate. See curate[1].—Stipendiary estate, in law, a feud or estate granted in return for services, generally of a military kind.—Stipendiary magistrate, in Great Britain, a police justice sitting in large cities and towns, under appointment by the Home Secretary on behalf of the crown.

II. n.; pl. stipendiaries (-riz). 1. One who performs services for a settled payment, salary, or stipend.—2. A stipendiary magistrate. See under I.—3. In law, a feudatory owing services to his lord.

stipendiate† (stī-pen'di-āt), v. t. [< L. stipendiatus, pp. of stipendiari, receive pay, serve for pay, < stipendium, tribute, salary: see stipend, v.] To endow with a stipend or salary.

> Besides ye exercise of the horse, armes, dauncing, &c., all the sciences are taught in the vulgar French by professors stipendiated by the greate Cardinal.
> Evelyn, Diary, Sept. 14, 1644.

Stiper Stone group. [< Stiper Stones (see def.).] In geol., a subgroup, the equivalent of the Arenig series in Carnarvonshire: so called from the name Stiper Stones given to a prominent ridge of quartzose rocks rising above the moorland in Shropshire, and extending for about ten miles in length. The Arenig or Stiper Stone group, according to Murchison's arrangement, formed the base of the Silurian system. It is now considered to be the base of Lapworth's Ordovician, of the Cambro-Silurian of Jukes, and of the Lower Silurian of English geologists generally.

stipes (stī'pēz), n. [NL., < L. stipes, stips (stipit-), a stock, trunk: see stipe[2].] 1. In bot., same as stipe[2].—2. In zoöl., a stalk or stem, as an eyestalk or a footstalk; a stipe. Specifically—(a) In entom., the footstalk of the maxilla of an insect, the outer or main division of that organ; the second joint of the maxilla, borne upon the cardo, and through the palpifer and subgalea bearing the palpus, galea, and lacinia, when these organs exist. Also called shaft. See cuts under galea and Insecta. (b) In Myriapoda: (1) The proximal or median one of two pieces of which the protomala, or so-called mandible, consists, the other being the cardo. See protomala, and figure under epilabrum. (2) One of two sets, an inner and an outer, of broad plates into which the deutomala, or second pair of mouth-appendages, of a myriapod is divided. See deutomala. A. S. Packard, Proc. Amer. Philos. Soc., June, 1883, pp. 198, 200.

stipiform (stī'pi-fôrm), a. [< L. stipes, stips (stipit-), a stock, trunk, + forma, form.] In bot. and zoöl., having the form or appearance of a stipe or stipes. See stipe[2], stipes.

stipitate (stip'i-tāt), a. [< NL. stipitatus*, < L. stipes (stipit-), a stock, trunk: see stipe[2].] In bot. and zoöl., having or supported by a stipe or stipes; elevated on a stipe.

stipitiform (stip'i-ti-fôrm), a. [< L. stipes (stipit-), a stock, trunk (see stipe[2]), + forma, form.] In bot. and zoöl., having the form or character of a stipe or stipes; stipiform; stalklike.

stipiture (stip'i-tūr), n. A bird of the genus Stipiturus; an emu-wren.

Stipiturus (stip-i-tū'rus), n. [NL. (Lesson, 1831), < L. stipes (stipit-), a stock, trunk, + Gr. οὐρά, tail.] An Australian genus of warbler-like birds, assigned to the Malurinæ or placed elsewhere, having the tail curiously formed of ten feathers with stiffened shafts and loose decomposed barbs (whence the name); the emu-wrens.

Emu-wren (Stipiturus malacurus).

S. malacurus is a small brownish bird streaked with black, and with a blue throat, described by Latham in 1801 as the soft-tailed flycatcher. The immediate affinities of the genus are with such forms as Sphenœacus and Sphenura (see these words), and the true position of all these forms seems to be among or near the reed- or grass-warblers, especially such as have but ten tail-feathers. See warbler.

stipple (stip'l), v. t.; pret. and pp. stippled, ppr. stippling. [< D. stippelen, speckle, dot over (cf. stippel, a speckle, dim. of stip, a point), freq. of stippen (> G. stippen), prick, dot, speckle, < stip, MD. stip, stup, a point, dot.] To produce gradation in color or shade in (any material) by means of dots or small spots. See stippling.

> The interlaying of small pieces can not altogether avoid a broken, stippled, spotty effect.
> Milman, Latin Christianity, xiv. 10.

stipple (stip'l), n. [< stipple, v.] 1. In the fine arts, same as stippling.—2. In decorative art, an intermediate tone or color, or combination of tones, used to make gradual the passage from one color to another in a design.—Stipple-engraving process, the process of making an engraved plate by stippling. The first step is to lay an etching-ground on a copperplate; the next, after the subject has been transferred as in etching, is to dot in the outline; after which the darker parts are marked with dots, which are laid in larger and more closely in the deeper shades. The plate is then bitten in, the ground is removed, and the lighter parts are laid in with dry-point or the stipple-graver.

stippled (stip'ld), p. a. Spotted; shaded or modeled by means of minute dots applied with the point of the brush or in a similar way.

stipple-graver (stip'l-grā″vėr), n. An engravers' tool of which the point is bent downward so as to facilitate the making of small dots or indentations in the surface of a copperplate.

stippler (stip'lėr), n. [< stipple + -er[1].] 1. One who stipples.—2. A brush or tool used for stippling: as, a stippler made of hog's hair.

stippling (stip'ling), n. [Verbal n. of stipple, v.] In the fine arts, dotted work of any kind, whether executed with the brush-point, the pencil, or the stipple-graver.

stiptic†, a. and n. See styptic.

stipula (stip'ū-lä), n.; pl. stipulæ (-lē). [NL., < L. stipula, a stalk: see stipule.] In ornith., same as stipule.

stipulaceous (stip-ū-lā'shius), a. [< stipula + -aceous.] In bot., same as stipular.

stipular (stip'ū-lär), a. [< NL. stipula + -ar[3].] In bot., of, belonging to, or standing in the place of stipules; growing on stipules, or close to them: as, stipular glands.—Stipular buds, buds which are enveloped by the stipules, as in the tulip-tree.

stipulary (stip'ū-lā-ri), a. [< NL. stipula + -ary.] In bot., relating to stipules; stipular.

Stipulatæ (stip-ū-lā'tē), n. pl. [NL. (J. von Sachs), < stipulatus*, stalked (see stipulate[2]), + -æ.] Sachs's name for the eusporangiate ferns, a division which embraces the Ophioglossaceæ and Marattiaceæ. The name is now abandoned, as it is known that there are no stipules in the Ophioglossaceæ, and that they are sometimes wanting in the Marattiaceæ.

stipulate[1] (stip'ū-lāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. stipulated, ppr. stipulating. [< L. stipulatus, pp. of stipulare (> It. stipulare = Sp. Pg. estipular = F. stipuler), exact, bargain for; origin doubtful: by some referred to OL. stipulus*, firm; by others to L. stipula, a straw.] To arrange or settle definitely, or by special mention and agreement, or as a special condition: as, it is stipulated that A shall pay 5 per cent.

Henry the Fourth and the king my master had stipulated with each other that, whensoever any one of them died, the survivor should take care of the other's child.
Lord Herbert of Cherbury, Life (ed. Howells), p. 129.

Those Articles which were stipulated in their Favour.
Howell, Letters, I. iii. 20.

It is stipulated also that every man shall be bound to obey his own lord "convenienter," or so far as is fitting and right. Encyc. Brit., XXII. 782.

Stipulated damages. (a) In a general sense, a sum named in a contract or obligation as the damages to be paid in case of non-performance. (b) As commonly used in law, damages liquidated by a stipulation—that is, a sum fixed by a contract or obligation in such manner as to be the sum payable in case of breach, without any further question as to the amount of the actual damages.

stipulate[2] (stip'ū-lāt), a. [< NL. stipulatus*, < L. stipula, a stalk, stipule: see stipule.] In bot., having stipules: as, a stipulate stalk or leaf.

stipulation[1] (stip-ū-lā'shon), n. [< F. stipulation = Sp. estipulación = Pg. estipulação = It. stipulazione, < L. stipulatio(n-), a promise, bargain, covenant, < stipulari, demand a formal promise, bargain, covenant, stipulate: see stipulate.] 1. The act of stipulating, agreeing, or covenanting; a contracting or bargaining. —2. That which is stipulated or agreed upon; a contract or bargain, or a particular article or item in a contract: as, the stipulations of the allied powers to furnish each his contingent of troops; a contract containing so many stipulations.—3. In law, specifically—(a) An agreement between counsel or attorneys in a cause, affecting its conduct. (b) An undertaking in the nature of bail taken in the admiralty courts. (c) In Roman law, a contract in which the form consisted in a question and answer, formalities which in course of time came to be recognized as making a valid contract which might dispense with the ceremonials required by the earlier law.

stipulation[2] (stip-ū-lā'shon), n. [< L. stipula, a stalk: see stipule.] In bot., the situation and structure of the stipules.

stipulator (stip'ū-lā-tor), n. [< L. stipulator, one who stipulates, < stipulari, demand a formal promise, bargain, stipulate: see stipulate.] One who stipulates, contracts, or covenants; in Rom. law, one to whom a stipulation or promise was given in the form of contract known as stipulatio. See stipulation[1], 3 (c).

stipule (stip'ūl), n. [= F. stipule = It. stipula, < L. stipula, a stalk, stem, blade, dim. of stipes, stock, trunk: see stipe[2].] 1. In bot.: (a) One of a pair of lateral appendages found at the base of the petiole of many leaves. Stipules are normally flat organs, leaf-like in appearance and use, or colorless and scale-like, and without function—sometimes, however, as in the magnolia, fig, and beech, serving as bud-scales and falling when the leaves expand. Stipules may be free from the petiole, or adnate by one edge, then passing by grades into mere wing-like expansions of its base; they may be free from one another, or variously united, sometimes so as to clasp the stem, sometimes between it and the leafstalk (then intrapetiolar), sometimes sheathing the stem, as in Polygonum, then forming ocreæ (see ocrea). The adjacent members of two opposite pairs may become connate around the stem, as in many Rubiaceæ. Stipules are sometimes reduced to mere bristles, or take the form of spines, as in the common locust; in Smilax they appear to be converted into tendrils. They are often wholly wanting, but where present they generally characterize whole families, as they do the Malvaceæ, Fabaceæ, and Rosaceæ. (b) In the Characeæ, one of certain leaf-like structures springing from the basal nodes of some species of Chara. (c) Same as paraphyllum (b).—2. In ornith., a newly sprouted feather; a pin-feather. Also stipula.

Stipules (St).
1. Of Robinia Pseudacacia. 2. Of Rosa canina. 3. Of Pisum arvense. 4. Of Lathyrus Aphaca. 5. Of Smilax bona-nox.

stipuled (stip'ūld), a. [< stipule + -ed[2].] In bot., furnished with stipules, or lateral leafy appendages.

stipuliform (stip'ū-li-fôrm), a. [< L. stipula, a stalk, + forma, form.] In bot., having the form of a stipule.

stir[1] (stėr), v.; pret. and pp. stirred, ppr. stirring. [Also dial. steer (and stoor); early mod. E. also stirr, stirre, stire, stere; < ME. stiren, steren, sturen, styren, < AS. styrian, move, stir, = North Fries. stiaren = MD. stooren, D. storen, disturb, vex, = MLG. stören, disturb, hinder, = OHG. stören, störren, scatter, destroy, disturb, MHG. stœren, G. stören, disturb, interrupt, hinder, = Sw. störa, disturb; cf. Icel. styrr, a stir, Dan. for-styrre, disturb; not connected with L. sternere, scatter, or E. strew: see strew. Cf. stoor[2]. Hence ult. storm and sturgeon. The ME. forms are in some uses confused with similar forms of steer[1], 'direct,' 'guide.'] I. trans. 1. To move; change the position or situation of: as, to stir hand or foot.

Stonde he neuere so styfliche thorgh sterynge of the bote
He bendeth and boweth the body is vnstable.
Piers Plowman (C), xi. 36.

He pulls you not a hair, nor pares a nail,
Nor stirs a foot, without due figuring
The horoscope. T. Tomkis (?), Albumazar, i. 3.

2. To set in motion; agitate; disturb.

There is everemore gret Wynd in that Fosse, that stere-ethe everemore the Gravelle, and makethe it trouble.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 32.

My mind is troubled, like a fountain stirr'd.
Shak., T. and C., iii. 3. 311.

Airs that gently stir
The vernal leaves. Wordsworth, Ruth.

3. To move briskly; bestir.

Now stureth hym self Arthour,
Thenkyng on hys labour,
And gaderyth to hym strenghth aboute,
Hys kynges & Erles on a rowte.
Arthur (ed. Furnivall), l. 295.

Come, you must stir your Stumps, you must Dance.
Steele, Tender Husband, v. 1.

4. To cause the particles or parts of to change place in relation to each other by agitating with the hand or an implement: as, to stir the fire with a poker; to stir one's coffee with a spoon.

He stireth the coles.
Chaucer, Canon's Yeoman's Tale, l. 267.

Mr. ——, one of the fellowes (in Mr. Fr. Potter's time), was wont to say that Dr. Kettle's braine was like a hasty-pudding, where there was memorie, judgement, and phancy all stirred together. Aubrey, Lives (Ralph Kettle).

5†. To brandish; flourish.

Now hatz Arthure his axe, & the halme grypez, & sturnely sturez hit aboute, that stryke wyth hit thogt.
Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight (E. E. T. S.), l. 331.

6. To bring into notice or discussion; agitate; debate; moot.

Stir not questions of jurisdiction. Bacon, Great Place.

7. To rouse, as from sleep or inaction; awaken.

Nay, then, 'tis time to stir him from his trance.
Shak., T. of the S., i. 1. 182.

Thy dear heart is stirred
From out its wonted quiet.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, II. 344.

8. To move; excite; rouse.

His steed was bloody red, and fomed yre,
When with the maistring spur he did him roughly stire.
Spenser, F. Q., II. v. 2.

The music must be shrill and all confus'd
That stirs my blood.
Beau. and Fl., Maid's Tragedy, i. 1.

9. To incite; instigate; set on.

Feendis threten faste to take me,
And steren helle houndis to bite me.
Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 70.

With him along is come the mother-queen,
An Ate, stirring him to blood and strife.
Shak., K. John, ii. 1. 63.

To stir coals†. See coal.—To stir up. (a) To instigate; incite: as, to stir up a nation to rebellion.

To these undertakings these great Lords of the World have been stirred up rather by the desire of Fame . . . than by the affection of bearing rule.
Raleigh (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 654).

There's that Will Maskery, sir, as is the rampageousest Methodis' as can be, an' I make no doubt it was him as stirred up th' young woman to preach last night.
George Eliot, Adam Bede, v.

(b) To excite; provoke; foment; bring about: as, to stir up a mutiny; to stir up contention.

They gan with fowle reproch
To stirre up strife, and troublous contecke broch.
Spenser, F. Q., III. i. 64.

To be more just, religious, wise, or magnanimous then the common sort stirrs up in a Tyrant both feare and envy. Milton, Eikonoklastes, xv.

(c) To rouse to action; stimulate; quicken: as, to stir up the mind.

[They] are also perpetually stirred up to fresh industry and new discoveries. Bacon, Physical Fables, ii., Expl.

The man who stirs up a reposing community . . . can scarcely be destitute of some moral qualities which extort even from enemies a reluctant admiration.
Macaulay, Sir William Temple.

II. intrans. 1. To pass from rest or inaction to motion or action; move; budge: as, they dare not stir; to stir abroad.

"Master," said he, "be rul'd by me,
From the Green-wood we'll not stir."
Robin Hood and the Golden Arrow (Child's Ballads, V. 384).

No disaffected or rebellious person can stir without being presently known; and this renders the King very safe in his Government. Dampier, Voyages, II. i. 74.

During the time I remained in the convent, the superior thought it proper I should not stir out.
Pococke, Description of the East, II. i. 4.

2. To be in motion; be in a state of activity; be on the move or go; be active: as, to be continually stirring.

If ye will nedys know at short and longe,
It is evyn a womans tounge,
For that is ever sterynge.
Interlude of the Four Elements. (Halliwell, under short.)

If the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats of her a little favour of speech. Shak., Othello, iii. 1. 27.

She will brook
No tarrying; where she comes the winds must stir.
Wordsworth, Sonnets, i. 32.

3. To be in circulation; be current; be on foot.

No ill luck stirring but what lights on my shoulders.
Shak., M. of V., iii. 1. 99.

Ther dyed such multituds weekly of ye plague, as all trade was dead, and little money stirring.
Bradford, Plymouth Plantation, p. 204.

There is no News at all stirring here now.
Howell, Letters, ii. 18.

4. To use an instrument or the hand for making a disturbing or agitating motion, as in a liquid.

The more you stir in it the more it stinks. Bulwer.

5. To be roused; be excited; disturb or agitate one's self.

You show too much of that
For which the people stir. Shak., Cor., iii. 1. 53.

stir[1] (stėr), n. [Early mod. E. also stirre; < stir[1], v.] 1†. Movement; action.

The sounding of our wordes [is] not alwayes egall; for some aske longer, some shorter time to be vttered in, & so, by the Philosophers definition, stirre is the true measure of time. Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 56.

2. A state of motion, activity, briskness, bustle, or the like; the confusion and tumult of many persons in action.

Why all these words, this clamour, and this stir?
Sir J. Denham, Prudence, l. 112.

The house had that pleasant aspect of life which is like the cheery expression of comfortable activity in the human countenance. You could see at once that there was the stir of a large family within it.
Hawthorne, Seven Gables, xiii.

It is well to turn aside from the fretful stir of the present. Huxley, Animal Automatism.

3. Commotion; excitement; tumult: as, his appearance on the scene created quite a stir.

Men may thinke it strange there should be such a stirre for a little corne; but had it beene gold, with more ease wee might haue got it; and had it wanted, the whole Colony had starued.
Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 219.

When Portsey, weighing well the ill to her might grow,
In that their mighty stirs might be her overthrow.
Drayton, Polyolbion, ii. 448.

An Impost was leuied of the subiects, to satisfie the pay due to the souldiours for the Persian warre, which raised these stirres. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 287.

4. Motion; impulse; emotion; feeling.

He did keep
The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,
Still waving, as the fits and stirs of 's mind Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on.
Shak., Cymbeline, i. 3. 12.

5. A poke; a jog.

"Eh, Arthur?" said Tom, giving him a stir with his foot. T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Rugby, ii. 8.

6. A house of correction; a lockup; a prison. [Thieves' slang.]

I was in Brummagem, and was seven days in the new stir, and nearly broke my neck.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 469.

stir[2] (stėr), n. [A corruption of sir.] Sir. [Scottish vulgarism.]

I'm seeking for service, stir. Scott, Old Mortality, viii.

stirabout (stėr'a-bout″), n. [< stir[1] + about.] 1. Oatmeal or other porridge.

The fifth book is of pease-porridge, under which are included frumetary, water-gruel, milk-porridge, rice-milk, flumary, stir-about, and the like.
W. King, Art of Cookery, Letter ix.

2. Oatmeal and dripping or bacon-fat mixed together and stirred about in a frying-pan. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

Stiretrus (stī-rē'trus), n. [NL. (Laporte, 1833), < Gr. στεῖρος, barren, + ἦτρον, the abdomen.] A notable genus of true bugs, of the family Pentatomidæ, comprising about 25 species peculiar to America, most of them tropical. One species, S. anchorago, is found in the southern United States, and is a common enemy of the chinch-bug, Colorado potato-beetle, and cotton-worm.

Stiretrus anchorago. (Hair-line shows natural size.)

striated (stir'i-ā-ted), a. [< stiriate* (< L. stiria, a frozen drop, an icicle; cf. still[2]) + -ed[2].] Adorned with pendants like icicles.

striousᵗ (stir'i-us), a. [< L. stiria, a frozen drop, an icicle, + -ous.] Consisting of or resembling icicles.

Crystal is found sometimes in rocks, and in some places not much unlike the stirious or stillicidious dependencies of ice. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., ii. 1.

stirk (stėrk), n. [Also sterk, sturk; < ME. stirk, styrk, sterk, stirke, styrke, < AS. stirc, a young cow, heifer, styrc, styric, a young steer, = MD. stierick = MLG. sterke, > G. stärke, starke, a young cow, heifer, G. dial. sterk, a young steer; usually explained as derived, with dim. suffix -ic, < AS. steór, etc., a steer; but prob. connected, as orig. 'a young cow that has not yet calved,' with OHG. stero, MHG. ster, a ram, Goth. staira, barren, L. sterilis, barren, Gr. στεῖρος, στέρφος, barren, Skt. stari, barren, sterile: see sterile.] An animal of the ox or cow kind from one to two years old. [Prov. Eng. or Scotch.]

stirless (stėr'les), a. [< stir[1] + -less.] Still; motionless; inactive; very quiet. [Rare.]

She kept her hollow, stirless eyes on his. There was an absence of movement about her almost oppressive. She seemed not even to breathe. Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 228.

stirn (stėrn), n. Same as stern[5].

stiropᵗ, n. An old spelling of stirrup.

stirpᵗ (stėrp), n. [< ME. stirpe, < L. stirps, a stock, root, race.] Stock; race; family.

So is she sprouge of noble stirp and high.
Court of Love, l. 16.

Democracies . . . are commonly more quiet, and less subject to seuition, than where there are stirps of nobles.
Bacon, Nobility (ed. 1887).

stirpicultural (stėr-pi-kul'tūr-al), a. Pertaining to stirpiculture. The Sanitarian, XXIV. 514.

stirpiculture (stėr'pi-kul-tūr), n. [< L. stirps, a stock, race, + cultura, culture.] The breeding of special stocks or strains.

Sentimental objections in the way of the higher stirpiculture. The Nation, Aug. 10, 1876, p. 92.

stirps (stėrps), n.; pl. stirpes (stėr'pēz). [L.: see stirp.] 1. Race; lineage; family; in law, the person from whom a family is descended. See per stirpes, under per. —2. In zoöl., a classificatory group of uncertain rank and no fixed position, by MacLeay made intermediate between a family and a tribe; a superfamily. Compare group[1], section, cohort, and phalanx. —3. In bot., a race or permanent variety.

stirrage[1]ᵗ (stėr'āj), n. [< stir[1] + -age.] The act of stirring; agitation; commotion; stir.

Every small stirrage waketh them.
Granger, On Eccles. (1621), p. 320.

stirrage[2]ᵗ, n. Same as steerage.

stirrer (stėr'ėr), n. [< stir[1] + -er[1].] 1. One who stirs; especially, one who is active or bustling.

Come on, . . . give me your hand, sir; an early stirrer.
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., iii. 2. 3.

Bris. Good day to you.
Cam. You are an early stirrer.
Fletcher, Double Marriage, i. 1.

2. One who stirs or agitates anything, as a liquid, with the hand or an implement for stirring. —3. An implement or a machine used for stirring a liquid or the like.

The liquid being taken out on a pointed glass rod or stirrer. W. B. Carpenter, Micros., § 207.

4. One who incites or instigates; an instigator: often with up: as, a stirrer up of contention.

We must give, I say,
Unto the motives, and the stirrers up
Of humours in the blood.
B. Jonson, Alchemist, iii. 1.

Stirrers of sedition, without any zeal for freedom.
Macaulay, Sir W. Temple.

stirring (stėr'ing), n. [< ME. steringe, styrynge, steringe; verbal n. of stir[1], v.] 1. Movement; motion; activity; effort; the act of moving or setting in motion.

Eche abouten other goynge, Causeth of othres steringe.
Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 800.

The emotions voiced in his song are stirrings of the spirit rather than thrills of the senses.
The Atlantic, LXV., p. 4 of adv'ts.

2ᵗ. Temptation.

3if any sterynge on me stele,
Out of the clos of thi clennesse
Wysse me, lord, in wo & wele,
And kepe me fram vnkyndnesse.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 251.

3. In agri., the second tilth or fallow. Florio, p. 273. (Halliwell.) —4ᵗ. Riot; commotion.

I'll lie about Charing-cross, for, if there be any stirrings, there we shall have 'em.
Webster and Dekker, Northward Ho, i. 2.

stirring (stėr'ing), p. a. [Ppr. of stir[1], v.] 1. Being in active motion; characterized by stir or activity; active; bustling; lively; vivacious; brisk: as, a stirring life; stirring times.

Such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit.
Shak., L. L. L., v. 2. 16.

Those who appear the most stirring in the scene may possibly not be the real movers. Burke, Rev. in France.

2. Animating; rousing; awakening; stimulating; exciting; inspiriting: as, a stirring oration; a stirring march.

Often the ring of his verse is sonorous, and overcomes the jagged consonantal diction with stirring lyrical effect.
Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 302.

3ᵗ. Fickle.

A stythe man of his stature, stirond of wille,
Menyt hym to mony thinges, & of mynde gode.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 3833.

stirrup (stir'- or stėr'up), n. [Early mod. E. also stirrop, stirop, sterope; < ME. stirop, styrop, styrope, sterepe, < AS. stirāp, stigrāp, stigerāp (= MD. stegerep, steeghreep, also stegelreep = OHG. stegareif, MHG. G. stegreif = Icel. stigreip), lit. 'mounting-rope,' < stīgan, mount, + rāp, rope: see sty[1] and rope[1]. Cf. D. stijg-beugel = G. steig-bügel = Sw. stig-bygel = Dan. stig-bøjle, a stirrup, lit. a ring or loop for mounting (see bail[1]).] 1. A support for the foot of a person mounted on a horse, usually a metal loop with the bottom part flat and corrugated or finished with points to give a hold to the sole of the boot and to aid in mounting. The metal loop is suspended from the saddle by a strap or thong, which in modern saddles is adjustable in length. The stirrup of Arab or other Eastern horsemen has a very broad rest for the foot; this projects sometimes beyond the heel, and the sharp edge of it serves instead of a spur. The stirrups of some modern military saddles have a strong front piece of leather or other material which prevents the foot from passing too far into the loop and protects the front of the leg. See also cut under saddle.

1, Stirrup for poulaine; 2, modern stirrup; 3, Mexican wooden stirrup; 4, Mexican wooden stirrup with taps.

Our hoste upon his stiropes stood anon.
Chaucer, Prol. to Shipman's Tale, l. 1.

I'll hold your stirrup when you do alight,
And without grudging wait till you return.
Beau. and Fl., Honest Man's Fortune, iv. 1.

2. Naut., a rope with an eye at its end, through which a foot-rope is rove, and by which it is supported. The ends of stirrups are securely fastened to the yard, and they steady the men when reefing or furling sails.

3. In mach., any piece resembling in shape and functions the stirrup of a saddle, as the iron loop by which a mill-saw hangs from the muley-head or in the sash. —4. In carp., etc., an iron loop-strap or other device for securing a rafter-post or -strut to a tie, or for supporting a beam, etc. —5. A hold for the foot at the end of the stock of a large crossbow, to keep it firm while the bow is bent and the string drawn to the notch. See cut under arbalister. —6. In anat., the stapes or stirrup-bone.

stirrup-bar (stir'up-bär), n. The spring-bar or other device on a riding-saddle to which the upper end of the stirrup-strap is fastened.

stirrup-bone (stir'up-bōn), n. The stapes of a mammal: so called from its shape.

stirrup-cup (stir'up-kup), n. A cup of wine or other liquor presented to a rider when mounted and about to take his departure; a parting-cup.

stirrup-hose (stir'up-hōz), n. pl. Heavy stockings worn over the other garments for the legs by men traveling on horseback in the seventeenth century, and probably earlier. They are described as made very large at the top, and secured by points to the girdle or the bag-breeches.

stirrup-iron (stir'up-ī″ėrn), n. The stirrup proper — that is, the metal loop in which the foot is placed, as distinguished from the leather strap which suspends it.

stirrup-lantern (stir'up-lan″tėrn), n. A small lantern with an iron frame fastened below the stirrup to light the road at night and also to warm the rider's feet: a contrivance used in the fifteenth century and later.

stirrup-leather (stir'up-leᵀᴴ″ėr), n. The leather strap by which a stirrup hangs from the saddle.

stirrup-muscle (stir'up-mus″l), n. The stapedius.

stirrup-oil (stir'up-oil), n. A sound beating; a drubbing. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

stirrup-piece (stir'up-pēs), n. In carp., mach., etc., anything which performs the office of a stirrup, in hanging from a fixed point of support and supporting anything else which lies in its loop or hollow.

stirteᵗ, stirtᵗ. Obsolete forms of the preterit and past participle of start[1].

stitch (stich), n. [< ME. stiche, styche, < AS. stice, a pricking sensation (also in comp. instice, an inward stitch, fær-stice, a sudden stitch or twinge, stic-ādl, stic-wærc, stitch in the side), not found in lit. sense 'pricking,' 'piercing,' = OFries. steke, stek = OHG. stih, MHG. G. stich, a pricking, prick, sting, stab, stitch, = Goth. stiks, a point of time; from the verb, AS. stecan*, etc., prick, sting, stick: see stick[1], stick[2].] 1. An acute sudden pain like that produced by the thrust of a needle; a sharp spasmodic pain, especially in the intercostal muscles: as, a stitch in the side. Such pains in the side may be myalgic, neuralgic, pleuritic, or due to muscular cramp.

'Twas but a stitch into my side,
And sair it troubles me.
The Queen's Marie (Child's Ballads, III. 117).

Corporal sickness is a perpetual monitor to the conscience, every pang a reproof, and every stitch reads a lesson of mortality. Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 441.

2ᵗ. A contortion; a grimace; a twist of the face.

If you talk,
Or pull your face into a stitch again,
As I love truth, I shall be very angry.
Beau. and Fl., Captain, ii. 2.

3. In sewing: (a) One movement of a threaded needle, passing in and out of the fabric, and uniting two parts by the thread, which is drawn tight after each insertion. (b) The part of the thread left in the fabric by this movement. —4. In knitting, netting, crochet, embroidery, lace-making, etc.: (a) One whole movement of the implement or implements used, as knitting-needles, bobbins, hook, etc. (b) The result of this movement, shown in the work itself. —5. The kind or style of work produced by stitching: as, buttonhole-stitch; cross-stitch; pillow-lace stitch; by extension, a kind or style of work with the loom. For stitches in lace, see point[1]. See also whip-stitch. —6ᵗ. Distance passed over at one time; stretch; distance; way.

How far have ye come to-day? So they said, From the house of Gaius our friend. I promise you, said he, you have gone a good stitch; you may well be aweary; sit down. Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, p. 314.

7. In agri., a space between two double furrows in plowed ground; a land or ridge.

And many men at plough he made, that drave earth here and there,
And turn'd up stitches orderly. Chapman, Iliad, xviii. 495.

8. A bit of clothing; a rag: as, he had not a dry stitch on. [Colloq.] —9. In bookbind-

ing, a connection of leaves or pieces of paper, through perforations an inch or so apart, with thread or wire. A single stitch is made with two perforations only, the thread being tied near the entering place of the stitching-needle. A double stitch has three and sometimes four perforations, the thread being reversed in and out on the upper and under side at each perforation. A saddle-back stitch has its perforations in the center of the creased folded double leaves. A side-stitch has perforations through the sides of the leaves, about one eighth of an inch from the back fold. A French stitch has two perforations only in each section of the pamphlet, the second perforation of the first section ending where the first perforation of the second section begins, in which diagonal line the stitching-needle is put through each succeeding section, and is then reversed and locked at the end. A machine-stitch is a succession of ordinary locked stitches made by the sewing-machine. A wire stitch has short staples of turned wire, which are forced through the leaves and clamped by one operation of the wire-stitching machine. See kettle-stitch.—Blind stitch. See blind[1].—Damask stitch. See damask.—Dotted stitch. Same as dot-stitch.—False stitch, in pillow-lace making, same as false vinhole (which see, under pinhole).—Fancy, Flemish, German, glovers', gobelin, herring-bone, honeycomb, idiot, Irish, overcast stitch. See the qualifying words.—Outline-stitch. See outline.—Plaited stitch. See plaited.—Raised stitch. See raise[1].—Royal stitch. See royal.—Russian stitch. A kind of ribbed stitch in crochet. Dict. of Needlework.—Short stitch, a kind of needlework used in embroidery of the simplest kind, where the ground is partly covered by single stitches of a thread usually of different color, the ground not so covered generally forming the pattern.—Slanting stitch. See slant.—To go through stitch with†, to prosecute to the end; complete.

And in regard of the main point, that they should never be able to go through stitch with that war.
Urquhart, tr. of Rabelais, Gargantua, i. 47.

(See also backstitch, chain-stitch, crewel-stitch, cross-stitch, feather-stitch, hemstitch, lock-stitch, rope-stitch, spider-stitch, stem-stitch, streak-stitch, etc.)

★stitch (stich), v. [< ME. sticchen (pret. stigte, stigt), prick, stitch, = MD. sticken, D. stikken = OHG. sticchan, MHG. G. sticken, embroider, stitch; from the noun. Cf. stick[1], v.] I. trans. 1. To unite by stitches; sew.—2. To ornament with stitches.—3. In agri., to form into ridges.—To stitch up. (a) To form or put together by sewing.

She has, out of Impatience to see herself in her Weeds, order'd her Mantua-Woman to stitch up any thing immediately. Steele, Grief A-la-Mode, v. 1.

(b) To mend or unite with a needle and thread: as, to stitch up a rent; to stitch up an artery.

II. intrans. To sew; make stitches.

Stitch! stitch! stitch!
In poverty, hunger, and dirt.
Hood, Song of the Shirt.

stitchel (stich'el), n. A kind of hairy wool. ★[Local.] Imp. Dict.

stitcher (stich'ėr), n. [< stitch + -er[1].] One who stitches; also, a tool or machine used in stitching.

All alike are rich and richer,
King with crown, and cross-legged stitcher,
When the grave hides all.
R. W. Gilder, Drinking Song.

stitchery (stich'ėr-i), n. [< stitch + -ery.] Needlework; in modern times, the labor or drudgery of sewing.

Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon.
Shak., Cor., i. 3. 75.

stitchfallen (stich'fâ/ln), a. [< stitch + fallen, pp. of fall[1].] Fallen, as a stitch in knitting. [Rare.]

A stitch-fal'n cheek, that hangs below the jaw.
Dryden, tr. of Juvenal's Satires, x. 309.

★stitching (stich'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stitch, v.] Stitches collectively; especially, ornamental stitches designed to show on the surface of the work.—Middle stitching (naut.). Same as monk's seam, 1.

stitching-horse (stich'ing-hôrs), n. A harness-makers' clamp or work-holder mounted on a wooden frame or horse. The jaw of the clamp is kept in position by means of a foot-lever. See cut under sewing-clamp.

stitch-wheel (stich'hwēl), n. In harness-making, a small notched wheel mounted in a handle, used to mark the places for the stitches in hand-sewed work; a pricking-wheel.

stitch-work (stich'wėrk), n. Embroidery. B. Taylor, Northern Travel, p. 415.

stitchwort (stich'wėrt), n. [Early mod. E. also stichwort; < ME. stichwurt, < AS. sticwyrt, < stice, stitch, + wyrt, plant: see stitch and wort[1].] One of several plants of the chickweed or starwort genus, Alsine. The proper stitchwort is A. Holostea, the greater stitchwort, locally called allbone, break-bones, shirt-buttons, snap-jack, etc., a pretty old-world species with an erect slender stem and starry white flowers. The name alludes to its reputed virtue for the cure of stitch in the side, or, according to one old work, to its use for curing the sting of venomous reptiles (Prior). A. graminea is in England the lesser stitchwort. In the United States A. longifolia, a plant of similar habit, is named long-leaved stitchwort. The name is sometimes extended, in books, to the whole genus.

stith[1]† (stith), a. [Also stithe; < ME. stith, stithe, < AS. stith = OFries. stith, strong, hard, harsh; cf. Icel. stirdhr, stiff, rigid, harsh, severe.] Strong; hard.

Telamocus he toke, his tru sone,
Stake hym in a stith house, & stuerne men to kepe, Wallit full wele, with water aboute.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 13844.

stith[2]† (stith), n. [< ME. stith, stithe, < Icel. stethi = Sw. städ, an anvil: so called from its firmness; cf. Icel. stathr, a fixed place, AS. stede, a place, stead: see stead. Doublet of stithy.] An anvil; a stithy.

The smyth
That forgeth sharpe swerdes on his stith.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 1168.

stithly† (stith'li), adv. [ME., < AS. stithlīce, strongly, < stith, strong: see stith[1] and -ly[2].] Strongly; stiffly; greatly; sore.

Stithly with stonys [they] steynyt hir to dethe.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 12157.

stithy (stith'i), n.; pl. stithies (-iz). [Also dial. stiddy, steddy, steady; an extension of stith[2] (prob. due to confusion with smithy as related to smith): see stith[2].] 1. An anvil.

"Let me sleep on that hard point," said Varney; "I cannot else perfect the device I have on the stithy."
Scott, Kenilworth.

2. A smithy; a smith's shop; a forge.

And my imaginations are as foul
As Vulcan's stithy. Shak., Hamlet, iii. 2. 89.

stithy (stith'i), v. t.; pret. and pp. stithied, ppr. stithying. [< stithy, n.] To forge on an anvil.

The forge that stithied Mars his helm.
Shak., T. and C., iv. 5. 255.

stithy-man† (stith'i-man), n. A smith.

The subtle stithy-man that lived whilere.
Bp. Hall, Satires, II. i. 44. (Davies.)

stive[1] (stīv), a. Same as steeve[1] for stiff.

stive[1]† (stīv), v. [< ME. stiven, < AS. stifian or stīfian (= OFries. stiva, steva = MD. D. stijven = G. steifen = Sw. styfva = Dan. stive), grow stiff, < stif or stīf, stiff: see stiff.] I. intrans. To become stiff; stiffen.

II. trans. To stiffen.

The hote sunne hade so hard the hides stiued.
William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 3033.

stive[2] (stīv), v. t.; pret. and pp. stived, ppr. stiving. [< OF. estiver = Sp. Pg. estivar = It. stivare, < L. stipare, compress, crowd together. Cf. steeve[3], steve.] To stuff; cram; stow; crowd. [Obsolete or provincial.]

You would think it strange that so small a shell should contain such a quantity, but admire, if you saw them stive it in their ships. Sandys, Travailes, p. 12.

"Things are a good deal stived up," answered the Deacon. "People's minds are sour, and I don't know, Molly, what we can do." S. Judd, Margaret, ii. 8.

stive[3]† (stīv), v. [< ME. stiven, a var. of stuwen, stuwen, < OF. estuver, stew, bathe: see stew[1].] I. trans. To stew, as meat.

II. intrans. To stew, as in a close atmosphere; be stifled. [Provincial.]

I shall go out in a boat. . . . One can get rid of a few hours every day in that way, instead of stiving in a damnable hotel. George Eliot, Daniel Deronda, liv.

stive[3]†, n. An obsolete form of stew.

stive[4] (stīv), n. [Also dial. stew; appar. < MD. stuyve, dust, = G. staub = Dan. støv, dust.] Dust; the dust floating in flour-mills during the operation of grinding. Simmonds.

stiver[1] (stī'vėr), n. [= Sw. styfver = Dan. styver, < MD. stuyver, D. stuiver = G. stuber, a stiver; origin unknown.] 1. A small coin formerly current in Holland and in the Dutch colonies: in Dutch called stuiver. (a) A small silver coin formerly current in Holland, the twentieth part of the Dutch gulden.

Set him free,
And you shall have your money to a stiver,
And present payment. Fletcher, Beggars' Bush, i. 3.

(b) A copper coin formerly current in the Dutch colonies.

Obverse. Reverse.
Stiver.—British Museum. (Size of the original.)

Hence—2. Any very small coin, or coin of little value.

Entre nous, mon cher, I care not a stiver for popularity Bulwer, My Novel, ix. 3.

"There's fourteen foot and over," says the driver,
"Worth twenty dollars, ef it s worth a stiver."
Lowell, Fitz Adam's Story.

stiver[2]† (stī'vėr), n. [< stive[3] + -er[1].] An inhabitant of the stews; a harlot. Beau. and Fl., Scornful Lady, ii. 1.

stiward†, n. A Middle English form of steward.

Stizostedion (stī-zō-stē'di-on), n. [NL. (Rafinesque, 1820), also Stizostedium, Stizotethidium, and prop. Stizostethium*, < Gr. στίζειν, prick, + στῆθιον, dim. of στῆθος, breast.] In ichth., a genus of pike-perches, including two marked species of Europe and North America. They are of large size, are carnivorous, and inhabit fresh waters. S. vitreum is the wall-eyed, goggle-eyed, glass-eyed, yellow, or blue pike, dory, or jack-salmon, and S. canadense the gray pike, ★sand-pike, sauger, or hornfish. See cut under pike-perch.

stoa (stō'ä), n. [< Gr. στοά, sometimes στοιά, a porch, colonnade.] In Gr. arch., a portico, usually a detached portico, often of considerable extent, generally near a public place to afford opportunity for walking or conversation under shelter. The Greek stoa was often richly adorned with sculpture and painting. Many examples had two stories.—The Stoa. Same as the Porch. See porch, Stoic.

Diagram of the construction of a Greek Stoa, as excavated and restored by the Archæological Institute of America, at Assos, 1882.

stoat (stōt), n. [Also stote; a var. of stot[1].] The ermine, Putorius erminea, and other members of that genus when not specified by distinctive names. See ermine[1], weasel, mink, fitchew, polecat, ferret[1]. Stoat more particularly designates the animal in ordinary summer pelage, when it is dull mahogany-brown above, and pale sulphur-yellow below, with the tail black-tipped as in winter.

Stoat or Ermine (Putorius erminea), in summer pelage.

stob (stob), n. [A var. of stub.] 1. A small post.—2. A thorn; spine. Halliwell.—3. A long steel wedge used for bringing down coal after holing. Gresley. [Prov. Eng. in all uses.]

stoblet†, n. A Middle English form of stubble.

stocah† (stō'kä), n. [Early mod. E. also stokaghe; < Ir. Gael. stocach, an idler in the kitchen.] An attendant; a hanger-on: an old Irish term.

The strength of all that nation is the Kearne, Gallo-glasse, Stokaghe, Horsemen, and Horseboyes.
Spenser, State of Ireland.

stoccade† (sto-kād'), n. [Also stockado, stoccado, and stoccata, after Sp. or It.; < OF. estoccade, estocade = Sp. Pg. estocada, a thrust, pass, < It. stoccata, a thrust with a weapon, < stoccare*, < stocco, a truncheon, short sword, < G. stock, a stick, staff, stock, = MD. stock, a stock-rapier, etc.: see stock[1]. Cf. stockade.] 1. A thrust with a sword, one of the movements taught by the early fencing-masters, as in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

Your punto, your reverso, your stoccata, your imbrocata, your passada, your montanto.
B. Jonson, Every Man in his Humour, iv. 5.

2. See stockade.

stoccadet, v. t. See stockade.

stoccadot, stoccatat, n. Same as stoccade.

stocco (stok′ō), n. [It.: see stock[1], stoccade.] A long straight sword for thrusting, similar to the tuck. See tuck[2] and estoc.

stochastict (stō-kas′tik), a. [< Gr. στοχαστικός, able to hit or to guess, conjecturing, < στοχάζεσθαι, aim at, endeavor after, < στόχος, aim, shot, guess.] Conjectural; given to or partaking of conjecture.

Though he [Sir T. Browne] were no prophet, . . . yet in that faculty which comes nearest to it he excelled, i. e. the Stochastick, wherein he was seldom mistaken as to future events, as well publick as private.
Whitefoot, quoted in Sir T. Browne's Works, I. xlvii.

★stock[1] (stok), n. and a. [< ME. stocke, stokke, stok, stoke, stoc (pl. stokkes, the stocks), < AS. stoc, stocc (stocc-), a post, trunk, stock, = OFries. stok = MD. stock, D. stok = MLG. stok, LG. stock = OHG. stoc, stoch, MHG. stoc (> It. stocco, a rapier), G. stock = Icel. stokkr = Dan. stok = Sw. stock (not recorded in Goth.), a post, stock (hence, from Teut., OF. estoc, a stock, trunk of a tree, race, etc., = It. stocco, a stock, trunk of a tree, rapier, etc.: see stocco, stoccade, stock[2], tuck[2], etc.); generally supposed to be connected with the similar words, of similar sense, stick[3], stake[1], and so with stack; but the phonetic connection is not clear. Assuming the sense 'stick' or 'club' to be original, a connection may be surmised with Skt. √ tuj (orig. stug*?), thrust. The senses of this noun are numerous and complicated; the ME. senses are in part due to the OF. estoc.] I. n. 1. A wooden post; a stake; a stump.

The Cros of oure Lord was made of 4 manere of Trees, . . . and the Stock, that stode within the Erthe, . . . was of Cedre. Mandeville, Travels, p. 10.

Ley this ronde plate upon an evene grond or on an evene ston or on an evene stok fix in the gronde.
Chaucer, Astrolabe, ii. 38.

They all went downward, fleetly and gaily downward, and only he, it seemed, remained behind, like a stock upon the wayside. R. L. Stevenson, Will o' the Mill.

2. A wooden block; a block; a log; hence, something lifeless and senseless.

He swore hire yis, by stokkes and by stones,
And by the goddes that in hevene dwelle.
Chaucer, Troilus, iii. 589.

There was an exe, and a stoke, and oon of the lewdeste of the shippe badde hym ley down his hedde, and he should be fair ferd wyth, and dye on a swerd.
Paston Letters, I. 125.

More than dead stocks would startle at such beauty.
Chapman, Blind Beggar of Alexandria.

And those made thee forsake thy God,
And worship stocks and stones.
Wanton Wife of Bath (Child's Ballads, VIII. 155).

3. A person who is as dull and senseless as a block or a log.

Let 's be no stoics nor no stocks. Shak., T. of the S., i. 1. 31.

Such a stock of a child, such a statue! Why, he has no kind of feeling either of body or mind.
Brooke, Fool of Quality, iii.

What a phlegmatic sot it is! Why, sirrah, you 'r an anchorite!—a vile insensible stock. Sheridan, Rivals, iii. 1.

4. A dull object or recipient of action or notice, as of wonder, scorn, or laughter; a butt: generally the second element in a compound: as, a gazing-stock; a laughing-stock.

Howsoever we are all accounted dull, and common jesting stocks for your gallants, there are some of us do not deserve it. Beau. and Fl., Woman-Hater, iii. 3.

Thou art the stock of men, and I admire thee.
Fletcher, Rule a Wife, iii. 5.

I know, and may presume her such,
As, out of humour, will return no love;
And therefore might indifferently be made
The courting-stock for all to practise on.
B. Jonson, New Inn, i. 1.

5. The stalk, stem, or trunk of a tree or other plant; the main body, or fixed and firm part.

Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof die in the ground. Job xiv. 8.

There, in the stocks of trees, white faies do dwell.
B. Jonson, Sad Shepherd, ii. 2.

You know him—old, but full
Of force and choler, and firm upon his feet,
And like an oaken stock in winter woods.
Tennyson, Golden Year.

6. A stem in which a graft is inserted, and which is its support; also, a stem, tree, or plant that furnishes slips or cuttings.

You see, sweet maid, we marry
A gentler scion to the wildest stock.
Shak., W. T., iv. 4. 93.

The scion ever over-ruleth the stock.
Bacon, Nat. Hist., Int. to § 477.

Hence—7. The original progenitor of a family or race; the person from whom any given line of descent or inheritance is derived. See stock of descent, below.

This firste stok was ful of rightwisnesse,
Trewe of his word, sobre, pitous, and free.
Chaucer, Gentilnesse, l. 8.

Brave soldier, yield, thou stock of arms and honour.
Fletcher, Bonduca, v. 5.

8. Direct line of descent; race; lineage; family: as, children of the stock of Abraham.

What things are these! I shall marry into a fine stock!
Brome, Northern Lass, ii. 2.

In his actions and sentiments he belied not the stock to which he pretended. Lamb, Two Races of Men.

They sprang from different stocks. They spoke different languages. Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vi.

9. The principal supporting or holding part; the part in which other parts are inserted, or to which they are attached in order to furnish a firm support or hold. Specifically—(a) The wooden support to which the barrel and lock of a rifle or like firearm are attached, or upon which the bow of the crossbow is mounted. See cuts under gun and gun-carriage. (b) The handle by which a boring-bit is held and turned; a bit-stock; a brace. See cut under brace. (c) The block of wood which constitutes the body of a plane, and in which the cutting iron is fitted. See cuts under plane, rounding-plane, and router. (d) The support of the block on which an anvil is fitted, or of the anvil itself. (e) The crosspiece of an anchor, perpendicular to the shank, formerly of wood, when the shank was passed through a hole cut in the stock, or the latter was made in two parts joggled to receive the shank: now usually of iron, in which case the stock slips through a hole made in the shank. See cut under anchor. (f) An adjustable wrench for holding screw-cutting dies. (g) That part of a plow to which the handles, irons, etc., are attached. (h) A beater, as used in a fulling-mill, in the manufacture of chamois-leather, etc. (i) An arm of a bevel-gage or of a square. (j) The wooden frame in which the wheel and post of a spinning-wheel are supported.

10. A stiff band of horsehair, leather, or the like, covered with black satin, cambric, or similar material, and made to imitate and replace the cravat or neckband; also, a similar neckband, made of various materials, worn by women: formerly worn by men generally, and, in some forms, still in military use. It was sometimes fastened behind with a buckle.

Military Stock, 18th century.

A shining stock of black leather supporting his chin.
Irving, Knickerbocker, p. 321.

He wore a magnificent stock, with a liberal kind of knot in the front; in this he stuck a great pin.
W. Besant, Fifty Years Ago, p. 98.

11. The front part, especially the front side-piece, of a bed. [Scotch.]

I winna lie in your bed,
Either at stock or wa'.
Capt. Wedderburn's Courtship (Child's Ballads, VIII. 12).

12. pl. An apparatus for the confinement of vagrants and petty offenders, formerly in use in different parts of Europe, and retained until recently in country villages in England. It consisted of two heavy timbers, one of which could be raised, and when lowered was held in place by a padlock or the like; notches in these timbers, forming round holes when the upper timber was shut down in place, held firmly the legs of those upon whom this punishment was inflicted; in some cases a second row of openings could be used to retain the hands, and even the neck, also. Compare pillory.

Stocks.

This yere was ordeyned in euery warde [of London] a peyr stockis. Arnold's Chronicle, p. xxxvi.

Mars got drunk in the town, and broke his landlord's head, for which he sat in the stocks the whole evening.
Steele, Tatler, No. 4.

13. The frame or timbers on which a ship rests while building; hence, generally, on the stocks, in course of construction or preparation.—14†. That part of the tally which the creditor took away as evidence of the king's debt, the part retained in the Exchequer being called the counterstock. See tally.

It was the custom when money was borrowed for State purposes to record the transaction by means of notches on a stick (commonly hazel), and then to split the stick through the notches. The lender took one half as a proof of his claim against the Exchequer, and it was called his Stock. The Exchequer kept the other half, which was called the counterstock, and which answered the same purpose as was served in after-times by the counterfoil.
Bithell, Counting-House Dict., p. 290.

15. In finance: (a) The money represented by this tally; money lent to a government, or a fund consisting of a capital debt due by a government to individual holders who receive a fixed rate of interest. In modern usage, especially in Great Britain, the name is applied to a capital of which payment cannot be claimed, but on which interest is paid in perpetuity at a given rate; hence, to buy stock is simply to buy the right to this interest on a certain amount of this capital debt—a right which may be sold again. The various kinds of stocks are called the public funds. See fund[1], n., 2.

I have known a Captain rise to a Colonel in two days by the fall of stocks.
Steele, quoted in Ashton's Reign of Queen Anne, II. 206.

The term Stock was originally applied to the material sign and proof of money lent. But as the thing signified was of greater importance to both parties than the sign, it was at length transferred to the money itself, or rather to the right to claim it. In this way Stock came to be understood as money lent to the government, and eventually to any public body whatever.
Bithell, Counting-House Dict., p. 290.

(b) The share capital of a corporation or commercial company; the fund employed in the carrying on of some business or enterprise, divided into shares of equal amount, and owned by individuals who jointly form a corporation; in the plural, shares: as, bank stock; railway stock; stocks and bonds.—16. The property which a merchant, a tradesman, or a company has invested in any business, including merchandise, money, and credits; more particularly, the goods which a merchant or a commercial house keeps on hand for the supply of customers.

Who trades without a stock has naught to fear. Cibber.

"We must renew our stock, Cousin Hepzibah!" cried the little saleswoman. "The gingerbread figures are all gone, and so are those Dutch wooden milkmaids, and most of our other playthings."
Hawthorne, Seven Gables, v.

17. Fund; sum of money.

Mr. Iohn Whitson being Maior, with his brethren the Aldermen, and most of the Merchants of the Cittie of Bristow, raised a stocke of 1000*l.* to furnish out two Barkes.
Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 108.

It 's proverbial He gave them an alms-penny, for which reason Judas carried the bag that had a common stock in it for the poor. Barnard, Heylin, § 104.

The money is raised out of the interest of a stock formerly made up by the nobility and gentry.
Butcher, quoted in Strutt's Sports and Pastimes, p. 103.

18. Hoard or accumulation; store; supply; fund which may be drawn upon as occasion demands: as, to lay in a stock of provisions; a stock of information.

Though all my stock of tears were spent already Upon Pisano's loss. Shirley, Traitor, v. 1.

He set up as a Surgeon upon his bare natural stock of knowledge, and his experience in Tubes. But then he had a very great stock of confidence withal, to help out the other. Dampier, Voyages, I. 388.

A great stock of parliamentary knowledge.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vi.

19†. Share; portion.

Whilst we, like younger Brothers, get at best
But a small stock, and must work out the rest.
Cowley, To Lord Falkland.

Therefore nothing would satisfie him [a young prodigal] unless he were intrusted with the Stock which was intended for him, that he might shew the difference between his Father's Conduct and his own.
Stillingfleet, Sermons, III. i.

20†. Ground; reason; evidence; proof.

He pities our infirmities, and strikes off much of the account upon that stock.
Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 914.

21. The part of a pack of cards which in certain games is not dealt out, but left on the table, to be drawn from as occasion requires.

Nay, then, I must buy the stock; send me good carding! I hope the prince's hand be not in this sport.
Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, iv. 1.

22. In agri.: (a) The horses, cattle, sheep, and other useful animals raised or kept on a farm or ranch: distinctively known as live stock: as, a farmer's land and stock. The term is extended to any animals, as fish or oysters, artificially propagated.

Brandy was produced, pipes lighted, and conversation returned to the grand staple Australian subject—stock.
A. C. Grant, Bush Life in Queensland, I. 141.

(b) The implements of husbandry stored for use. Also called dead stock.—23. The raw material from which anything is made; stuff; material: as, paper-stock (rags, fiber, wood-pulp, etc.); soap-stock.

In its natural state, fat of animals is always associated with cellular tissue and other foreign matters, which must be separated before it can be used as candle stock.
Workshop Receipts, 1st ser., p. 350.

24. The liquor or broth prepared by boiling meat, with or without vegetables, etc., so as to extract the nutritious properties, and used as a foundation for different kinds of soup. Also called soup-stock.—25. A good kind of red and gray brick, used for the exterior of walls and the front of buildings.—26. A name of several cruciferous garden-flowers. (a) One of several species of Gackenia, or sometimes the species in general: originally stock-gillyflower. (b) By extension, the somewhat similar Malcolmia maritima, the Mahon stock, a low diffuse annual, in England called Virginia or virgin stock, though from the shores of the Mediterranean. The name has been applied also to the genus Heliophila.

27†. A covering for the leg; a stocking. Compare nether-stocks.

A linen stock on one leg, and a kersey boot-hose on the other. Shak., T. of the S., iii. 2. 67.

28. In her., the stump of a tree used as a bearing: represented as cut square on top and eradicated—that is, torn up by the roots—with at least the main roots indicated.—29. (a) The pillar or post on which the holy-water vessel was fixed. E. Peacock. Hence—(b) A holy-water vessel, or aspersorium.

Item. oone hollywater stocke of glasse with a bayle.
Inventory 34, Henry VIII.

30. The proceeds of the sale of the catch of a fishing-trip; the net value of a cargo of fish. [New Eng.]—31. pl. A frame in which a horse or other animal can be secured or slung for shoeing or for a veterinary operation.—32. In mining, sometimes used as the equivalent of the German stock (plural stöcke), especially in translating from that language. A "stock" is a mass of ore of irregular form, but usually thick in proportion to its other dimensions, and not having the characters of a true vein, but belonging more properly to the class of segregated veins or masses. Some "stöcke" resemble very nearly the "carbonas" of the Cornish miner; others are akin to the "flats" of the north of England.

33. In early forms of feudalism, commendation. See to accept stock, below.—34. In zoöl., a compound, colonial, or aggregate organism; an aggregate of persons forming one organic whole, which may grow by budding or cast off parts to start a new set of persons: as, a polyp-stock. A polypidom, a polyzoary, a chain of salps or doliolids, etc., are examples. Haeckel extends stock in this sense to the broader biological conception which includes those plants that propagate by buds or shoots. See tectology.—Dead stock. See def. 22.—Drop of stock. See drop.—Fancy stocks. See fancy.—Holy-water stock, a vessel for holy water; a holy-water stoup. See water.—Live stock. See def. 22.—Lock, stock, and barrel. See lock[1].—Long of stock. See long[1].—Net stock. See net[2].—On or upon the stocks. See def. 13.—Preference or preferred stock. See preference.—Rolling stock. See rolling-stock.—Stock-and-bill tackle. Same as stock-tackle.—Stock and block†, everything; both capital and interest.

Before I came home I lost all, stock and block.
Bailey, tr. of Colloquies of Erasmus, p. 236.

Stock and die, a screw-cutting die in its holder.—Stock certificate. (a) In the law of corporations, a certificate issued by a corporation or joint-stock company to a shareholder, as evidence of his title to a specified number of shares of the capital stock. (b) In Eng. finance, a certificate issued by or on behalf of the government, pursuant to the National Debt Act, 33 and 34 Vict., c. 71, to a holder of consols or of some other public indebtedness or annuities, as evidence of his title to such stock, with coupons annexed, entitling the bearer of the coupon to the corresponding dividend. A stock certificate is evidence of title to the stock, as distinguished from the stock itself, which is considered as an intangible right.—Stock company. (a) A commercial or other company or corporation whose capital is divided into shares, which are held or owned by individuals, generally with limited liability, as distinguished from a partnership: as, a stock company for the manufacture of window-glass. (b) A company of actors and actresses employed more or less permanently under the same management, and usually connected with a central or home theater.—Stock dividend. See dividend.—Stock indicator. See indicator.—Stock in trade, the goods kept for sale by a shopkeeper; hence, a person's mental equipment or resources considered as qualifying him for a special service or business.—Stock of descent, in the law of inheritances, the person with whose ownership any given succession of inheritance is considered as commencing. At common law, in order to determine who was entitled to succeed as heir, the inquiry was for the heir of the person last actually seized. This rule has been superseded by modern legislation.—To accept stock, in early feudal customs, the act of a lord in receiving another person as his vassal.—To give stock, the act of a person in becoming the vassal of a lord.—To have on the stocks, to have in hand; be at work upon.—To take stock. (a) Same as to accept stock. (b) In com., to make an inventory of stock or goods on hand; hence, with of, to make an estimate of; set a value upon; investigate for the purpose of forming an opinion; loosely, to notice.

In taking stock of his familiarly worn . . . nautical clothes, piece by piece, she took stock of a formidable knife in a sheath at his waist, . . . and of a whistle hanging round his neck, and of a short jagged knotted club.
Dickens, Our Mutual Friend, ii. 12.

To take stock in. (a) To take a share or shares in; take or have an interest in. Hence—(b) To repose confidence in; believe in: as, to take little stock in one's stories. [Colloq.]

Captain Polly gives the right hand of fellowship to two boys in whom nobody else is willing to take stock, and her faith in them saves them.
Harper's Mag., Oct., 1889, Literary Notes.

To water stocks. See water, v. t.

II. a. Kept in stock; ready for service at all times; habitually produced or used; standing; as, a stock play; a stock anecdote; a stock sermon.

The old stock-oaths, I am confident, do not amount to above forty-five, or fifty at most.
Swift, Polite Conversation, Int.

The master of the house, who was burning to tell one of his seven stock stories. Dickens, Sketches, Tales, x. 2.

stock[1] (stok), v. [< ME. stocken, stokken = MD. MHG. stocken, G. stöcken, put in the stocks; from the noun: see stock[1], n.] I. trans. 1. To provide with a stock, handle, or the like: as, to stock a gun or an anchor.

They can mend and new stock their pieces, as well, almost, as an Englishman.
Gov. Bradford, in App. to New England's Memorial, p. 456.

2. To fasten, bolt, or bar, as a door or window. [Old and prov. Eng.]

Oftyn tymes the dure is stokked, and we parsons & vicars cannot get brede, wyne, nor water.
Fabric Rolls of York Minster (1519), p. 268. (E. Peacock.)

3. To put in the stocks as a punishment; hence, to confine; imprison.

Rather deye I wolde and determine,
As thynketh me now, stokked in prisone,
In wrechednesse, in filthe and in vermyne.
Chaucer, Troilus, iii. 380.

They suffered great hardships for this their love and good-will, being often stocked, stoned, beaten, whipped, and imprisoned. Penn, Rise and Progress of Quakers, v.

4. To lay up in store; accumulate for future use: as, to stock goods. Scott, Quentin Durward, xviii.—5. To provide or supply with stock. (a) To supply with a stock of goods; store with commodities; store with anything: as, to stock a warehouse.

Our Author, to divert his Friends to Day, Stocks with Variety of Fools his Play.
Steele, Tender Husband, Prol.

The bazaars were crowded with people, and stocked with all manner of eastern delicacies.
R. F. Burton, El-Medinah, p. 419.

(b) To supply with cattle, sheep, etc., or, in some uses, to supply with domestic animals, implements, etc.: as, to stock a farm.

He has bought the great farm, . . .
And stock'd it like an emperor.
Fletcher (and another?), Prophetess, v. 2.

(c) To furnish with a permanent growth, especially with grass: as, to stock a pasture.

6. To suffer to retain milk for many hours, as cows before selling.—7†. To dig up; root out; extirpate by grubbing: sometimes with up.

This tyme is to be stocked every tree
Away with herbes brode, eke root and bough.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 182.

The wild boar not only spoils her branches, but stocks up her roots. Decay of Christian Piety.

8. Same as stack[1], 2.

II. intrans. 1. To branch out into shoots immediately above ground; tiller: applied to grasses, grain, or flowers.

About two months ago broad blanks were to be seen on many oatfields, and, though they were stocked a little, the crop is yet far too thin. The Scotsman.

2. To send out sprouts, as from a stem which has been cut over: said of a tree or plant.—3. To make a certain profit on stock. See stock[1], n., 30. [New Eng.]

stock[2]† (stok), n. [< OF. estoc = It. stocco, a rapier: see stock[1], and cf. estoc, tuck[2].] 1. Same as estoc; also, a thrusting-sword used in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, superseding the cut-and-thrust sword of earlier times.—2. Same as stoccade, 1.

stock[2]† (stok), v. t. [< stock[2], n.] To hit with a rapier or stock.

Oh, the brave age is gone! in my young days
A chevalier would stock a needle's point
Three times together.
Fletcher (and another), Love's Cure, iii. 4.

stock-account (stok'a-kount″), n. In com., an account in a ledger showing on one side the amount of the original stock with accumulations, and on the other the amount of what has been disposed of.

stockade (sto-kād′), n. [Formerly *stoccade, stoccado, stockado, prop. stacade, stacada, < Sp. estacada, a fence or paling, < estaca, a stake, a pale.] 1. In fort., a fence or barrier constructed by planting upright in the ground timber, piles, or trunks of trees, so as to inclose an area which is to be defended. In Oriental warfare such stockades are often of formidable strength and great extent, as the stockades of Rangoon. 2. An inclosure or pen made with posts and stakes.—3. In hydraul. engin., a row of piles serving as a breakwater, or to protect an embankment.

stockade (sto-kād′), v. t.; pret. and pp. stockaded, ppr. stockading. [Formerly also stockado, stoccade; < stockade, n.] To encompass or fortify with posts or piles fixed in the ground.

On the back of the Hill, the Land being naturally low, there is a very large Moat cut from the Sea to the River, which makes the whole an Island; and that back part is stockadoed round with great Trees, set up an end.
Dampier, Voyages, II. i. 160.

stockado† (sto-kā′dō), n. 1. Same as stoccade.

Robrus, who, addict to nimble fence,
Still greets me with stockado's violence.
Marston, Satires, i. 132.

2. Same as stockade.

Stockadoes, Palizadoes, stop their waters.
Heywood, Four Prentises (Works, ed. 1874, II. 242).

stockado†, v. t. See stockade.

stock-beer (stok′bēr), n. Lager-beer. See beer[1]. [Rare.]

stock-blind (stok′blīnd), a. Blind as a stock or block; stone-blind.

True lovers are blind, stockblind.
Wycherley, Country Wife, ii. 1.

stock-board (stok′bōrd), n. 1. In brickmaking, a board over which the mold is passed, and which forms the bottom of the mold in molding.—2. In organ-building, the upper board of a wind-chest.

stock-book (stok′bůk), n. In com., a book in which a detailed account is kept of the stock of goods on hand.

stock-bow (stok′bō), n. A crossbow of any kind; a bow mounted on a stock.

stock-breeder (stok′brē″dėr), n. One whose occupation is the breeding of live stock; a stock-farmer; a stock-raiser.

★stock-broker (stok′brō″kėr), n. [< stock[1] + broker.] A broker who, for a commission, attends to the purchase and sale of stocks or shares, and of government and other securities, in behalf and for the account of clients. On the London stock-exchange brokers cannot deal directly with brokers, but must treat with a class of operators called jobbers. See jobber[2], 4.

stock-broking (stok′brō″king), n. The business of a stock-broker.

stock-brush (stok′brush), n. A brush in which the tufts are arranged on a flat wooden stock with a handle. Encyc. Brit., IV. 403.

stock-buckle (stok′buk″l), n. A buckle used to fasten the stock (see stock[1], n., 10), usually at the back of the neck. These buckles were frequently of gold, and sometimes jeweled.

stock-car (stok′kär), n. On a railroad, a car used to transport live stock, as horses, cattle, pigs, and sheep; a cattle-car. It is usually a long covered car, with sides and ends formed with slats for ventilation, and is sometimes fitted with conveniences for feeding and watering the stock.

stock-dove (stok′duv), n. [< ME. stok-douve, stokke-dowe = MD. stock-duyve; as stock[1] + dove[1]: so called, according to some writers, because it was at one time believed to be the stock of the many varieties of the domestic pigeon; according to others, from its breeding in the stocks of trees.] The wild pigeon of Europe, Columba œnas. It is closely related to the rock-dove, C. livia, with which it has often been confounded, but is smaller and darker-colored, without white on the neck or wings. Also rarely called hole-dove. Compare rock-dove, ring-dove.

stock-duck (stok′duk), n. The common mallard, Anas boscas.

stock-eikle (stok′ī″kl), n. Same as hickwall. ★[Worcestershire, Eng.]

stocker (stok′ėr), n. [< stock[1] + -er[1].] 1. A workman who makes or fits gun-stocks.

The stocker upon receiving the stock first roughs it into shape, or, as it is called, trims it out, with a mallet, chisel, and draw-knife. W. W. Greener, The Gun, p. 249.

2. One who is employed in the felling and grubbing up of trees. [Prov. Eng.]—Stockers' saw, a small saw designed especially for the use of the gun-stocker or armorer.

stock-exchange (stok'eks-chānj″), n. 1. A building, place, or mart where stocks or shares are bought and sold.—2. An association of brokers and dealers or jobbers in stocks, bonds, and other securities, created under state or municipal authority, or by corporations concerned in the business connected with the carrying on of railways, mines, manufactures, banks, or other commercial or industrial pursuits.

stock-farm (stok'färm), n. A farm devoted to stock-breeding.

stock-farmer (stok'fär″mėr), n. A farmer who is chiefly engaged in the breeding and rearing of different kinds of live stock. Also called store-farmer.

stock-father† (stok'fä″ᴛʜėr), n. A progenitor.

stock-feeder (stok'fē″dėr), n. 1. One who is chiefly engaged in the feeding or fattening of live stock; a stock-farmer.—2. An attachment to a manger for the automatic supply of a certain quantity of feed to stock at fixed intervals.

stock-fish[1] (stok'fish), n. [< ME. stokefysche, stokfysche = D. MLG. stokvisch = MHG. stocvisch, G. stockfisch = Sw. stockfisk = Dan. stokfisk; as stock[1], n., + fish[1]. The exact sense in which stock is here used is uncertain; various views are reflected in the quotations.] Certain gadoid fish which are cured by splitting and drying hard without salt, as cod, ling, hake, haddock, torsk, or cusk. Codfish are thus hard-dried in the air without salt most extensively in Norway and Greenland, but the art has not been acquired in the United States.

From hense [Norway] is brought into all Europe a fysshe of the kindes of them whiche we caule haddockes or hakes, indurate and dryed with coulde, and beaten with clubbes or stockes, by reason whereof the Germayns caule them stockefysshe.
R. Eden, tr. of Jacobus Ziglerus (First Books on America, [ed. Arber, p. 303).

Cogan says of stockfish, "Concerning which fish I will say no more than Erasmus hath written in his Colloquio. There is a kind of fishe which is called in English Stockfish: it nourisheth no more than a stock." . . . Stockfish whilst it is unbeaten is called Buckhorne, because it is so tough; when it is beaten upon the stock, it is termed stockfish. Quoted in Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 155, note.

stock-fish[2] (stok'fish), n. [< stock[1], n., 22, + fish[1].] In fish-culture, fish adapted or used for stocking rivers, ponds, lakes, etc.

stock-gang (stok'gang), n. In a saw-mill, a group or gang of saws arranged in a frame and used for reducing a log or balk to boards, etc., at one passage through the machine. A saw used in such a stock-gang is called a stock-saw.

stock-gillyflower (stok'jil″i-flou-ėr), n. A plant of the genus Gackenia, chiefly G. incana: so called as having a woody stem, to distinguish it from the clove-gillyflower or carnation.

stock-hawk (stok'hâk), n. The peregrine falcon, Falco peregrinus. See cut under duck-hawk. [Shetland.]

stock-holder (stok'hōl″dėr), n. One who is a proprietor of stock in the public funds, or who holds some of the shares of a bank or other company.

stock-horse (stok'hôrs), n. A horse used on an Australian station in driving, mustering, cutting out, and similar work.

He was an aged stockhorse, which I had bought very cheap, as being a secure animal to begin with.
H. Kingsley, Hillyars and Burtons, l.

stockily (stok'i-li), adv. In a stocky manner; short and stout: as, a stockily built person.

stock-indicator (stok'in″di-kā-tọr), n. See indicator.

stockinet (stok-i-net'), n. [Adapted from stockinget, < stocking + -et.] An elastic knitted textile fabric, of which undergarments, etc., are made. Also spelled stockinget or stockingette, and also called jersey, jersey cloth, and elastic cloth.

stocking (stok'ing), n. [< stock[1] + dim. -ing.] 1. A close-fitting covering for the foot and lower leg. Stockings were originally made of cloth or milled stuff, sewed together, but they are now usually knitted by the hand or woven in a frame, the material being wool, cotton, or silk.

Their legges were adorn'd with close long white silke stockings, curiously embroidered with golde to the Middelegge.
Chapman, Masque of Middle Temple and Lincoln's Inn.

2. Something like or suggesting such a covering. (a) The lower part of the leg of a quadruped when of a different color from the rest: as, a horse or cow with white stockings. See cut under gayal. (b) A covering of feathers on the shank of some birds; a legging or leg-muff. Compare blue-stocking, 2, and see cuts under Eriocnemis, Spatnura, and pouter.—Elastic stocking, a stocking of elastic webbing, used for giving uniform pressure to a limb, as in the treatment of varicose veins.—In one's stockings or stocking-feet, without shoes or slippers: used in statements of stature-measurements: as, he stands six feet in his stockings (that is, with his shoes off).—Lisle-thread stocking. See thread.—Silk stockings. See silk.—To sew up one's stocking. See sew[1].

stocking (stok'ing), v. t. [< stocking, n.] To dress in stockings; cover as with stockings. Dryden.

stockinger (stok'ing-ėr), n. [< stocking + -er[1].] 1. One who knits or weaves stockings.

The robust rural Saxon degenerates in the mills to the Leicester stockinger, to the imbecile Manchester spinner.
Emerson, English Traits, x.

2. One who deals in stockings and other small articles of apparel.

stockinget (stok-ing-et'), n. Same as stockinet.

stocking-frame (stok'ing-frām), n. A special form of knitting-machine; also, a general term for the knitting-machine.

stocking-loom (stok'ing-lōm), n. A stocking-frame.

stocking-machine (stok'ing-ma-shēn″), n. A stocking-frame or knitting-machine.

stocking-maker (stok'ing-mā″kėr), n. A bottle-tit, Acredula caudata, or A. rosea: translating a French name, débassaire, referring to the long woven nest, likened to a stocking. C. Swainson.

stocking-yarn (stok'ing-yärn), n. Loosely spun thread, made especially for stockings.

stockish (stok'ish), a. [< stock[1] + -ish[1].] Like a stock or block; stupid; blockish. Shak., M. of V., v. 1. 81. [Rare.]

stockishness (stok'ish-nes), n. The quality or character of being stockish; stupidity; lack of sense or feeling. [Rare.]

Friend,
I've seen you with St. John—O stockishness!
Wear such a ruff, and never call to mind
St. John's head in a charger?
Browning, Strafford, iii. 3.

stock-jobber (stok'job″ėr), n. One who speculates in stocks for gain; one whose occupation is the purchase and sale of stocks or shares.

Publick Knaves and Stock-Jobbers pass for Wits at her end of the Town, as common Cheats and Gamesters do at yours. Steele, Tender Husband, ii. 1.

stock-jobbery (stok'job″ėr-i), n. The practice or business of dealing in stocks or shares.

stock-jobbing (stok'job″ing), n. The business of dealing in stocks or shares; the purchase and sale of stocks, bonds, etc., as carried on by jobbers who operate on their own account.

stockless (stok'les), a. Without a stock: as, stockless anchors; stockless guns.

stock-list (stok'list), n. A list, published daily or periodically in connection with a stock-exchange, enumerating the leading stocks dealt in, the prices current, the actual transactions, etc.

stockman (stok'man), n.; pl. stockmen (-men). 1. A man who has charge of the stock in an establishment of any kind.—2. A stock-farmer or rancher.—3. A man employed by a stock-farmer as a herdsman or the like. [U. S. and Australia.]

stock-market (stok'mär″ket), n. 1. A market where stocks are bought and sold; a stock-exchange.—2. The purchase and sale of stocks or shares: as, the stock-market was dull.—3. A cattle-market.

stock-morel (stok'mor″el), n. A fungus, Morchella esculenta. See morel[2], Morchella.

stock-owl (stok'oul), n. The great eagle-owl of Europe, Bubo ignavus.

stock-pot (stok'pot), n. A pot in which soup-stock is prepared and kept ready for use.

stock-printer (stok'prin″tėr), n. An instrument for automatically printing stock quotations transmitted by telegraph; a stock-indicator.

stock-pump (stok'pump), n. A pump which, by means of levers, is operated by the weight of an animal as it walks on the platform of the pump, seeking water.

stock-punished (stok'pun″isht), a. Punished by being confined in the stocks. Shak., Lear, iii. 4. 140.

stock-purse (stok'pėrs), n. A fund used for the common purposes of any association or gathering of persons.

stock-raiser (stok'rā″zėr), n. One who raises cattle and horses; a stock-farmer.

stock-ranch (stok'rânch), n. A stock-farm. [Western U. S.]

stock-range (stok'rānj), n. A tract or extent of country over which live stock (especially cattle) range. [Western U. S.]

stock-rider (stok'rī″dėr), n. A man employed as a herdsman on an unfenced station in Australia.

Now and afterwards I found out that he was a native of the colony, a very great stock-rider, and was principal overseer to Mr. Charles Morton.
H. Kingsley, Hillyars and Burtons, xlviii.

★stock-room (stok'rōm), n. A room in which is kept a reserved stock of materials or goods ready for use or sale.

stocks (stoks), n. pl. See stock[1], 12.

stock-saddle (stok'sad″l), n. A saddle used in the western United States, an improvement of the old Spanish and Mexican saddle. Its peculiarity is its heavy tree and iron horn, made to withstand a strong strain from a rope or reata.

For a long spell of such work a stock-saddle is far less tiring than the ordinary Eastern or English one, and in every way superior to it.
T. Roosevelt, The Century, XXXV. 863.

stock-station (stok'stā″shọn), n. A ranch or stock-farm. [Australia.]

stock-still (stok'stil'), a. Still as a stock or fixed post; perfectly still.

If he begins a digression, from that moment, I observe, his whole work stands stock-still.
Sterne, Tristram Shandy, i. 22.

stock-stone (stok'stōn), n. A scouring-stone used in the stretching and smoothing of leather before currying.

stock-tackle (stok'tak″l), n. A tackle used in handling an anchor and rousing it up to secure it for sea: usually called a stock-and-bill tackle.

stock-taking (stok'tā″king), n. See to take stock, under stock[1].

stock-train (stok'trān), n. A train of cars carrying cattle; a cattle-train. [U. S.]

stock-whaup (stok'hwâp), n. The curlew, Numenius arquata: the whaup.

stockwork (stok'wėrk), n. [< stock[1] + work; tr. G. stockwerk.] In mining, that kind of ore-deposit in which the ore is pretty generally or uniformly distributed through a large mass of rock, so that the excavations are not limited to a certain narrow zone, as they are in the case of an ordinary fissure-vein. This mode of occurrence is almost exclusively limited to, and very characteristic of, stanniferous deposits, and the word is used especially in describing those of the Erzgebirge. Also called stockwerk (the German name).

The name of interlaced masses, or stockworks, is given to masses of igneous rock penetrated by a great number of little veins of metallic ores which cross in various ways. Callon, Mining (tr. by Le Neve Foster and Galloway), I. 47.

The stockwerk consists of a series of small veins, interlacing with each other and ramifying through a certain portion of the rock.
J. D. Whitney, Met. Wealth of the U. S., p. 39.

stocky (stok'i), a. [< stock[1] + -y[1]. Cf. stogy.] 1. Short and stout; stumpy; stock-like.

They had no titles of honour among them but such as denoted some bodily strength or perfection: as, such a one "the tall," such a one "the stocky," such a one "the gruff." Addison, Spectator, No. 433.

2. In zoöl., of stout or thick-set form; stout-bodied.—3. In bot., having a strong, stout stem, not spindling.

Stocky plants, vigorous, and growing rapidly, are better than simply early plants. Science, XIV. 364.

4. Headstrong; stubborn. [Prov. Eng.]

stock-yard (stok'yärd), n. An inclosure connected with a railroad, or a slaughter-house, or a market, etc., for the distribution, sorting, sale, or temporary keeping of cattle, swine, sheep, and horses. Such yards are often of great size, and are arranged with pens, sheds, ★stables, conveniences for feeding, etc.

stodgy (stoj'i), a. [Assibilated form of stogy, ult. of stocky.] 1. Heavy; lumpy; distended. [Colloq., Eng.]

"Maggie," said Tom, . . . "you don't know what I've got in my pockets." . . . "No," said Maggie. "How stodgy they look, Tom! Is it marls or cobnuts?"
George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, I. 5.

2. Crammed together roughly; lumpy; crude and indigestible. [Colloq., Eng.]

The book has too much the character of a stodgy summary of facts. Saturday Rev.

3. Wet; miry. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

stœchiology, stœchiometrical, etc. Same as stoicheiology, etc.

stog (stog), v.; pret. and pp. stogged, ppr. stogging. [< stog, n.; ult. a var. of stock[1], v. Cf. stodge, v.] I. trans. 1. To plunge a stick down through (the soil), in order to ascertain its depth; probe (a pool or marsh) with a pole. [Scotch.]—2. To plunge and fix in mire; stall in mud; mire. [Colloq., Eng.]

It was among the ways of good Queen Bess,
Who ruled as well as mortal ever can, sir,
When she was stogg'd, and the country in a mess,
She was wont to send for a Devon man, sir.
West Country song, quoted in Kingsley's Westward Ho, x.

II. intrans. To plant the feet slowly and cautiously in walking. Jamieson. [Scotch.]

stogy (stō′gi), a. and n. [< stog + -y[1]. Cf. stodgy, stocky.] I. a. Rough; coarse; heavy: as, stogy shoes; a stogy cigar.

One of his legs, ending in a stogy boot, was braced out in front of him. The Century, XXXVI. 88.

II. n.; pl. stogies (-giz). 1. A rough, heavy shoe.—2. A long, coarse cigar. [Colloq. in all uses.]

stoic (stō′ik), a. and n. [Formerly also stoick; = F. stoique = Sp. estoico = Pg. estoico = It. stoico, < L. stoicus, < Gr. στωικός, pertaining to a porch or portico, specifically pertaining to that called Στοὰ Ποικίλη, 'the Painted Porch' in the Agora at Athens, and to the school of philosophy founded by Zeno, who frequented this porch.] I. a. [cap.] Pertaining to the Stoics, or to their teaching: as, a Stoic philosopher; the Stoic doctrine; hence, manifesting indifference to pleasure or pain (compare stoical).

II. n. 1. [cap.] A disciple of the philosopher Zeno, who founded a sect about 308 B. C. He taught that men should be free from passion, unmoved by joy or grief, and submit without complaint to the unavoidable necessity by which all things are governed. The Stoics are proverbially known for the sternness and austerity of their ethical doctrines, and for the influence which their tenets exercised over some of the noblest spirits of antiquity, especially among the Romans. Their system appears to have been an attempt to reconcile a theological pantheism and a materialist psychology with a logic which seeks the foundations of knowledge in the representations or perceptions of the senses, and a morality which claims as its first principle the absolute freedom of the human will. The Stoics teach that whatever is real is material; matter and force are the two ultimate principles; matter is of itself motionless and unformed, though capable of receiving all motions and all forms. Force is the active, moving, and molding principle, and is inseparably joined with matter; the working force in the universe is God, whose existence as a wise thinking being is proved by the beauty and adaptation of the world. The supreme end of life, or the highest good, is virtue—that is, a life conformed to nature, the agreement of human conduct with the all-controlling law of nature, or of the human with the divine will; not contemplation, but action, is the supreme problem for man; virtue is sufficient for happiness, but happiness or pleasure should never be made the end of human endeavor. The wise man alone attains to the complete performance of his duty; he is without passion, although not without feeling; he is not indulgent, but just toward himself and others; he alone is free; he is king and lord, and is inferior in inner worth to no other rational being, not even to Zeus himself.

Certain philosophers of the Epicureans and of the Stoicks encountered him. Acts xvii. 18.

Hence—2. A person not easily excited; one who appears or professes to be indifferent to pleasure or pain: one who exhibits calm fortitude.

Flint-hearted Stoics, you, whose marble eyes
Contemn a wrinkle, and whose souls despise
To follow nature's too affected fashion.
Quarles, Emblems, ii. 4.

School of the Stoics, the Porch. See porch.

stoical (stō′i-kal), a. [< stoic + -al.] Of, pertaining to, or characteristic of the Stoics; hence, manifesting or maintaining indifference to pleasure or pain; exhibiting or proceeding from calm fortitude: as, stoical indifference.

It is a common imputation to Seneca that, though he declaimed with so much strength of reason, and a stoical contempt of riches and power, he was at the same time one of the richest and most powerful men in Rome.
Steele, Tatler, No. 170.

Stoical ethics. See Stoic, n., 1.

stoically (stō′i-kal-i), adv. In the manner of the Stoics, or of a stoic; without apparent feeling or sensibility; with indifference to pleasure or pain; with calm fortitude.

stoicalness (stō′i-kal-nes), n. The state of being stoical; indifference to pleasure or pain; ★calm fortitude.

stoicheiology (stoi-kī-ol′ō-ji), n. [Also stoichiology, and more prop. stœchiology; < Gr. στοιχεῖον, a small post, also a first principle (dim. of στοῖχος, a row, rank, < στείχειν, go in line or order: see stich), + -λογία, < λέγειν, speak: see -ology.] A division of a science which treats of the nature of the different kinds of objects that science deals with, but not of the manner in which they are associated with one another; the doctrine of elements.

The conditions of mere thinking are given in certain elementary requisites; and that part of logic which analyzes and considers these may be called its stoicheiology, or doctrine of elements. . . . Logical stoicheiology, or the doctrine conversant about the elementary requisites of mere thought. . . . In its stoicheiology, or doctrine of elements, logic considers the conditions of possible thought.
Sir W. Hamilton, Logic, iv., xxiv.

stoicheiometrical (stoi″kī-ō-met′ri-kal), a. [Also stœchiometrical; < stoicheiometr-y + -ic-al.] ★Pertaining to stoicheiometry.

stoicheiometry (stoi-kī-om′e-tri), n. [Also stœchiometry; < Gr. στοιχεῖον, a first principle, + μέτρον, a measure: see meter[1].] The science of calculating the quantities of chemical elements involved in chemical reactions or processes.

Stoician†, n. [ME. stoicien; as Stoic + -ian.] A Stoic. Chaucer, Boëthius, v. meter 4.

stoicism (stō′i-sizm), n. [= F. stoïcisme; as stoic + -ism.] 1. [cap.] The opinions and maxims of the Stoics; also, the conduct recommended by the Stoics.—2. A real or pretended indifference to pleasure or pain; the bearing of pain without betraying feeling; calm fortitude.

He [Nuncomar] had just parted from those who were most nearly connected with him. Their cries and contortions had appalled the European ministers of justice, but had not produced the smallest effect on the iron stoicism of the prisoner. Macaulay, Warren Hastings.

=Syn. 2. Insensibility, Impassibility, etc. See apathy.

stoicity†, (stō-is′i-ti), n. [< stoic + -ity.] Stoicalness; stoical indifference. B. Jonson, Epicœne, i. 1.

stoit (stoit), v. i. [A dial. var. of stot[2].] 1. To walk in a staggering way; totter; stumble on any object. [Scotch.]—2. To leap from the water, as certain fish. Day. [Prov. Eng.]

stoiter (stoi′tėr), v. i. [A dial. var. of stotter.] Same as stoit.

stoke[1]†, v. t. and i. [< ME. stoken, < OF. estoquer (= It. stoccare*), stab, thrust, < estoc, a rapier, stock: see stock[2], stoccade.] To pierce; stick; thrust.

Ne short swerd for to stoke with point bytynge.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 1688.

stoke[2] (stōk), v.; pret. and pp. stoked, ppr. stoking. [< stoker, taken as an E. noun, < stoke* + -er[1], but appar. < D. stoker, < stoken, kindle a fire, incite, instigate, < MD. stock, D. stok, a stick, stock, rapier: see stock[1]. Cf. stoke[1].] I. trans. To poke, stir up, and maintain the fire in (a furnace, especially one used with a boiler for the generation of steam for an engine); supply with fuel; trim and maintain combustion in.

Much skill is needed to stoke the furnace of a steam-boiler successfully; and one stoker will often be able to keep the steam well up when another of equal strength and diligence will fail altogether.
Brande and Cox, Dict. Sci., Lit., and Art.

Cold stoking, in glass-manuf., the process of lowering the temperature of the oven until the glass attains the proper consistency necessary for blowing.

II. intrans. To attend to and supply a furnace with fuel; act as a stoker or fireman.

stoke-hole (stōk′hōl), n. The compartment of a steamer in which the furnace-fires are worked: in the United States called fire-room.

stoker (stō′kėr), n. [< D. stoker, one who kindles or sets on fire, < stoken, kindle a fire, stir a fire, < stok, a stock, stick (hence a poker for a fire): see stock[1], and cf. stoke[2].] 1. One who attends to and maintains suitable combustion in a furnace, especially a furnace used in generating steam, as on a locomotive or steamship; a fireman.—2. A poker. [Rare.]—Mechanical stoker, an automatic device for feeding fuel to a furnace, and for keeping the grate free from ashes and clinkers. Many such machines have been invented. Endless aprons or chains, or revolving toothed cylinders, are common feeders, distributing the coal to the grate in definite quantity as needed, while shaking grates, revolving grate-bars, and special bars called picker-bars, with teeth working in the air-spaces of the grate, are employed for the discharge of ashes and cinders.

Stokesia (stō-kē′si-ä), n. [NL. (L'Heritier, 1788), named after Dr. Jonathan Stokes (1755–1831), a British botanist.] A genus of composite plants, of the tribe Vernonicæ, characterized by large stalked heads of blue flowers, with smooth three- or four-angled achenes and a pappus of four or five long bristles. The corollas, unlike the tubular type otherwise prevalent in the tribe, are flattened above the middle and somewhat ligulate, and toward the outside of the head, by their increased size and deeply five-parted border, they suggest the family Cichoriaceæ. The only species, S. lævis, is a native of the southern United States near the Gulf of Mexico, a rare plant of wet pine-barrens. It is an erect shrub, clad above with loose wool and alternate clasping leaves, and bearing petioled leaves below, which are entire or spiny-fringed. The handsome blue flowers form large terminal heads which are purplish in the bud, resemble those of the China aster, and are grown in large quantities for the London market, under the name of Stokes's aster.

Roman Woman Clad in the Stola (over which is draped the palla).

stola (stō′lä), n.; pl. stolæ (-lē). [L.: see stole[2].] An ample outer tunic or dress worn by Roman women over the under-tunic or chemise: it fell as low as the ankles or feet, and was gathered in around the waist by a girdle. It was a characteristic garment of the Roman matrons, as the toga was of the men, and divorced women and courtezans were not permitted to wear it. See cut in preceding column.

stole[1] (stōl). Preterit and obsolete past participle of steal[1].

stole[2] (stōl), n. [< ME. stole, stoole, < OF. estole, F. étole = Sp. Pg. estola = It. stola, < L. stola, a stola, robe, stole, < Gr. στολή, a long robe; orig., in a gen. sense, dress, equipment, sacerdotal vestment or vestments; < στέλλειν, set, array, despatch: see stell.] 1. A stola, or any garment of similar nature.

Forsoth the fadir seyde to his seruauntis, Soone brynge ȝe forth the first stoole, and clothe ȝe him.
Wyclif, Luke xv. 22.

Behind, four priests, in sable stole.
Sung requiem for the warrior's soul.
Scott, L. of L. M., v. 30.

2. In the Roman Catholic, Oriental, and Anglican churches, an ecclesiastical vestment, consisting of a narrow strip of silk or other material, worn over the shoulders (by deacons over one shoulder) and hanging down in front to the knees or below them. It is widened and fringed at the ends, and usually has a cross embroidered on it at the middle and at each extremity. Stoles are worn of different colors, according to the ecclesiastical season. When celebrating the eucharist a priest wears his stole crossed upon the breast and secured by the girdle, at other times simply pendent from the shoulders. A bishop, on account of his pectoral cross, wears it pendent even when celebrating. A deacon wears it over the left shoulder and tied on the right side. In the Greek Church the stole has been worn since early times in two different forms, the deacon's (orarion) and the priest's (epitrachelion). Originally the stole was of linen, and probably was a napkin or cloth indicative of ministering at the altar and at agapæ. The pall or omophorion is of entirely distinct origin. See orarium.

Forth comth the preest with stole aboute his nekke,
And bad hire be lyke to Sarra and Rebekke
In wysdom and in trouthe of mariage.
Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, l. 459.

3. A chorister's surplice or cotta: an occasional erroneous use.

Six little Singing-boys—dear little souls—
In nice clean faces, and nice white stoles.
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 210.

4. In her., usually, a bearing representing a scarf with straight and parallel sides, fringed at each end.—Groom of the stole, the first lord of the bed-chamber in the household of an English king.—Order of the Golden Stole, a Venetian order, the badge of which was a stole of cloth of gold worn over the robes. It disappeared with the independence of the republic of Venice.—Stole-fee, a fee paid to a priest for religious or ecclesiastical service, as for marriages, christenings, and funerals.

stole[3] (stōl), n. Same as stolon.

stole[4]†, n. An obsolete form of stool.

stoled (stōld), a. [< stole[2] + -ed[2].] Wearing a stole. G. Fletcher, Christ's Triumph After Death.

stolen (stō′ln), p. a. [Pp. of steal[1].] Obtained or acquired by stealth or theft: as, stolen goods.

Stolen waters are sweet. Prov. ix. 17.

Stolephoridæ (stol-e-for′i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stolephorus + -idæ.] A family of malacopterygian fishes, typified by the genus Engraulis; the anchovies. The body is oblong or elongate; the snout is produced forward; the mouth is very large and inferior; the maxillaries are very narrow, and project backward; the dorsal fin is submedian and short; the anal fin is rather long; the pectorals are normal; and the ventrals are abdominal, but further advanced than usual, and of moderate size. There is no lateral line, but along the sides is generally developed a broad silvery band, to which the typical genus owes its name. The species are mostly of small size, rarely exceeding 6 inches, and often less. About 70 are known, some inhabiting almost all tropical and temperate seas. Engraulididæ is a synonym.

stolephoroid (stō-lef′ō-roid), n. and a. [< Stolephorus + -oid.] I. n. A fish of the family Stolephoridæ.

II. a. Of, or having characters of, the Stolephoridæ.

Stolephorus (stō-lef′ō-rus), n. [NL. (Lacépède, 1803), < Gr. στολή, a stole, + φέρειν = E. bear[1].] A genus of fishes, related to the herrings, but with a produced snout, and a broad silvery band which has been compared to the white stole or band worn by priests. Stolephorus japonicus occurs in Japan and southward, and has been wrongly supposed to be an anchovy. It is one of the round herrings, and the use of the name Stolephorus for the anchovies, as in many recent publications, is without scientific warrant.

stolid (stol'id), a. [= Sp. estólido = Pg. estolido = It. stolido, < L. stolidus, unmovable, slow, dull, stupid; prob. akin to Gr. στερεός.] Heavy; dull; stupid; not easily moved; lacking in or destitute of susceptibility; denoting dullness or impassiveness: as, a stolid person; a stolid appearance.

> But the stolid calm of the Indian alone > Remains where the trace of emotion has been.
> Whittier, Mogg Megone, i.

=Syn. Doltish, wooden.

stolidity (stō-lid'i-ti), n. [= It. stolidità, < LL. stolidita(t-)s, dullness, stupidity, < L. stolidus, dull, stupid: see stolid.] The state or character of being stolid; dullness; stupidity.

> These certainly are the fools in the text, indocile, intractible fools whose stoliaity can baffle all arguments, and be proof against demonstration itself.
> Bentley, Sermons, i.

=Syn. See stolid.

stolidly (stol'id-li), adv. In a stolid manner: as, to gaze stolidly at one. Bailey.

stolidness (stol'id-nes), n. Stolidity.

stolo (stō'lō), n.; pl. stolones (stō-lō'nēz). [L.: see stolon.] In zoöl., a stolon.—Stolo prolifer, the proliferating stolon of some animals, as certain ascidians; a germ-stock. See stolon, 2 (e).

stolon (stō'lon), n. [NL., < L. stolo(n-), a shoot, branch, sucker.] 1. In bot.: (a) In phanerogams, a reclined or prostrate branch which strikes root at the tip, developing a new plant.

Carex Goodenovii, showing the stolons.

A very slender naked stolon with a bud at the end constitutes a runner, as of the strawberry. See also cut under Solidago. (b) In mosses, a shoot running along or under the ground, and eventually rising into the air and producing fully leafed shoots. Goebel.—2. In zoöl., some proliferated part or structure, likened to the stolon of a plant, connecting different parts or persons of a compound or complex organism, and usually giving rise to new zooids by the process of budding. See cuts under Campanularia and Willsia. (a) A process of protoplasm between the different compartments of a multilocular foraminifer. (b) The procumbent, adherent, or creeping basal section of the stock of some social infusorians. (c) One of the prolongations of the cœnosarc of some actinozoans. (d) The second stage of the embryo of some hydrozoans. (e) The germ-stock or prolongation of the tunic of some compound ascidians, as a salp; a stolo prolifer. See cuts under Salpa and cyathozooid.

Also stole.

stolonate (stō'lon-āt), a. [< stolon + -ate[1].] In zoöl., giving rise to or provided with a stolon or stolons; originating in a stolon; stoloniferous.

stoloniferous (stō-lō-nif'e-rus), a. [< L. stolo(n-), a shoot, sucker, + ferre, bear, carry: see -ferous.] Producing or bearing stolons; proliferating, as an ascidian or a hydroid; stolonate.

stolzite (stol'zīt), n. [Named after Dr. Stolz of Teplitz in Bohemia.] Native lead tungstate, a mineral occurring in tetragonal crystals of a green, brown, or red color, and resinous or subadamantine luster. Sometimes called scheelitine.

stoma (stō'mä), n.; pl. stomata (-ma-tä). [NL., < Gr. στόμα (στοματ-), pl. στόματα, the mouth, a mouth, opening, entrance or outlet, a chasm, cleft, etc., the face, front, fore part, etc.; = Zend staman, mouth. Cf. stomach, from the same source.] 1. In zoöl., a mouth or ingestive opening; an oral orifice; an ostium or ostiole: chiefly used of small or simple apertures, as a cytostome; hence, also, a small opening of any kind through which something may pass in or out; a pore. Specifically—(a) An opening of a lymphatic vessel; a lymphatic pore or orifice, as an interstice between the cells of a serous membrane. (b) The outer opening of a trachea or air-tube of an insect; a spiracle or breathing-hole. (c) A branchial pore of an ascidian or acranial vertebrate.

2. In bot., a minute orifice or slit in the epidermis of leaves, etc., which opens directly into air-cavities or intercellular spaces that pervade the interior, and through which free ingress and egress of air take place; a breathing-pore. The apparatus of the stoma consists usually of a pair of cells (there are several in the Equisetaceæ, Hepaticæ, etc.), called guard-cells or guardian-cells, between the opposed concave sides of which lies the slit or opening, which extends through the whole height of the epidermis and permits free communication between the intercellular spaces and the external air. According to Van Tieghem, the stomata are always open in sunlight and closed in darkness. These cells are strongly thickened on the upper and under walls of their opposed faces, while elsewhere their walls are relatively thin. The opening and closing of a stoma depend upon the difference in thickness of the parts of the walls. When the turgescence of the guard-cells increases, they curve more strongly, and consequently the cleft widens; but with decreased turgescence the cleft becomes narrower. See also cut under Iris.

Longitudinal Section of a Stoma taken from the leaf of Ornithogalum perfoliatum. (Magnified.)

1. Strobilanthes Sabinianus. 2. Phyllaurea variegata. 3. Limnocharis flava. a, Stomata. (Magnified.)

3. In Swedenborg's philosophy, a cubical figure with hollowed surfaces, being the figure of the interstices of spheres arranged in what Swedenborg calls the fixed quadrilateral pyramidal position, supposed to be that natural to the spherical particles of water.

stomacace (stō-mak'a-sē), n. [NL., < L. stomacace, < Gr. στομακάκη, a disease of the mouth, scurvy of the gums, < στόμα, mouth, + κάκη, badness, < κακός, bad.] Ulcerous stomatitis. See stomatitis.

stomach (stum'ak), n. [Now conformed terminally to the L. spelling, but pron. according to its ME. origin; early mod. E. stomack, stomacke, stomak, stomake; < ME. stomak, stomake, stomoke, < OF. estomac, estomach, F. estomac = Pr. estomach = Sp. estómago = Pg. estomago = It. stomaco, the stomach, < L. stomachus, the throat, gullet, also the stomach, fig. taste, liking, also distaste, dislike, irritation, chagrin, < Gr. στόμαχος, the throat, gullet, the orifice of the stomach, hence also the stomach, lit. (as shown also in other uses, the neck of the bladder or of the uterus, etc.) a mouth or opening, < στόμα, mouth, opening: see stoma.] 1†. The throat; the gullet; the mouth.

> Spiteful tongues in cankered stomachs placed.
> Raleigh. (Imp. Dict.)

2. A more or less sac-like part of the body where food is digested. In the lowest animals any part of the sarcode or protoplasmic substance of the body is capable of digesting food, and forms during the process a temporary stomach, as in an amœba. In many infusorial animalcules special vacuoles containing food are formed. These are inconstant both in number and in position, whence Ehrenberg's name, Polygastrica, for these organisms. In the highest protozoans, which have a definite oral or ingestive area, there is likewise a more or less fixed digestive tract, constituting a stomach. A few of the metazoans have no true digestion, and consequently no stomach; such are the parenchymatous or anenterous worms, which imbibe or soak in nutriment already elaborated in the tissues of the host of which they are parasites. But the vast majority of animals above the protozoans have an intestinal digestive tract the whole or a part of which may properly be called a stomach. In most of these, again, a definite stomach exists as a specialized, usually dilated, part of the alimentary canal, in which food is subjected to a certain degree of digestion subsequent to mastication and insalivation and prior to further digestive changes which go on in the intestine. Among vertebrates more than one section of the alimentary canal is called a stomach, and many vertebrates have more than one. Thus, in birds there are a true glandular stomach, the proventriculus, in which the esophagus ends, and a muscular or grinding stomach, the gizzard or gigerium. In mammals the stomach always extends from the end of the gullet to the beginning of the gut. It is of extremely variable size and shape. Kinds of mammalian stomachs sometimes distinguished are the simple, as in man, the carnivores, etc.; the complex or plurilocular stomach, as in various marsupials, rodents, some monkeys, etc.; and the compound or pluripartite. The last is confined to the ruminants. (See Ruminantia.) In man the stomach is the most dilated and most distensible part of the alimentary canal. It occupies parts of the left hypochondriac and epigastric regions of the abdomen, immediately within the abdominal walls, below the diaphragm and partly under the liver, to the right of the spleen, and above the transverse colon. In form it is irregularly conoidal, and curved upon itself. When moderately distended, it is about 12 inches long and 4 wide; it weighs 3 or 4 ounces. But the size, shape, and hence the anatomical relations, vary greatly in different individuals and in different states of distention. It begins where the gullet ends, at the esophageal or cardiac orifice, and ends at the pyloric orifice, where the duodenum begins. From the cardiac orifice the stomach bulges to the left in a great cul-de-sac, the fundus cardiacus, or cardiac end, in contact with the spleen, and from this greatest caliber the organ lessens in diameter with a sweep to the right. The lesser curvature or short border of the stomach, between the cardiac and pyloric orifices, is uppermost, and is connected with the liver by the lesser or gastrohepatic omentum. The greater curvature or long border of the stomach is opposite the other, between the same two points, and gives attachment to the great or gastrocolic omentum. These two curvatures separate the anterior and posterior surfaces. The stomach is held in place by folds of peritoneum, the gastrocolic, gastrohepatic, gastrosplenic, and gastrophrenic omenta, the last of which gives it most fixity. The arteries of the stomach are the gastric (a branch from the celiac axis), the pyloric and right gastro-epiploic branches of the hepatic, the left gastro-epiploic, and short branches from the splenic artery. The veins end in the splenic, superior mesenteric, and portal veins. The numerous lymphatics consist of a deep set and a superficial set. The nerves are the terminal branches of both pneumogastrics and many branches from the sympathetic system. The coats of the stomach are four—serous, muscular, submucous, and mucous. The serous layer is the peritoneum, which covers the whole organ on both its surfaces, and is reflected away from it along each of its curvatures. The muscular coat includes three sets of fibers—longitudinal, circular, and oblique, the last chiefly limited to the cardia. The submucous coat is simply the connective tissue between the muscular layer and the mucous membrane lining the stomach. This mucous membrane is the so-called "coat" of the stomach. It is thick, pinkish, reddish, or brownish, with a soft velvety surface, thrown into longitudinal folds or rugæ when the organ is contracted. Studding the surface of the mucous membrane are numberless depressions or alveoli of polygonal tending to hexagonal form, $\frac{1}{250}$ to $\frac{1}{100}$ of an inch in diameter; these are the enlarged mouths of the tubular gastric glands, which secrete the gastric juice by the action of which gastric digestion is effected. Two kinds of these follicles are distinguished by their microscopic structure—the pyloric and the cardiac. The former are found chiefly at and near the pyloric end, the latter most typical at the cardiac, and there are intermediate forms in intermediate regions. The epithelium lining the mucous membrane and its alveoli is of the kind called columnar. Besides the four coats above described, a fifth, a layer of involuntary muscular fibers between the mucous membrane and the submucous layer, is distinguished as the muscularis mucosæ. The digestive activity of the stomach is intermittent, and depends upon the stimulus which the presence of food occasions. The muscular arrangement is such that food is continually rolled about, so that every part of the mass is submitted to the action of the gastric juice. In the stomach the proteids are converted into albumins and peptones by the pepsin, milk is curdled by the rennet-ferment, the gelatiniferous tissues are dissolved, and other less important changes are effected. See also cuts under alimentary, Asteroidea, Appendicularia, Dibranchiata, Doliolidæ, intestine, peritoneum, Plumatella, pluteus, Protula, Pulmonata, Pycnogonida, Ruminantia, Salpa, Tragulus, and Tunicata.

Human Stomach and Beginning of Intestine, laid open to show rugæ.

a, esophagus or gullet; b, cardiac (left) dilatation of stomach; c, lesser curvature of stomach, opposite which is the (unlettered) greater curvature; d, pylorus, at right extremity of stomach; e, biliary or hepatic duct; f, gall-bladder, whose duct, the cystic duct, forms with the hepatic duct the ductus communis choledochus, or common bile-duct; g, pancreatic duct, opening into the last; h, i, duodenum, or beginning of the small intestine.

3. The digestive person or alimentary zooid of a compound polyp. See gasterozooid.—4. In most insects of the orders Lepidoptera, Diptera, and some Hymenoptera, a bladder-like expansion of the esophagus, which can be dilated at the will of the insect; the sucking-stomach, by means of which the nectar of flowers or other liquid is sucked up, as water is drawn into a syringe. In mandibulate insects the ingluvies or crop takes the place of the sucking-stomach, and nearly all insects have two true stomachs, called proventriculus and ventriculus.

5. Appetite; desire or relish for food: as, to have a good stomach for one's meals.

> The body is ay so redy and penyble
> To wake, that my stomak is destroyed.
> Chaucer, Summoner's Tale, l. 139.

> Pray, seat you, lords; we'll bear you company,
> But with small stomach to taste any food.
> Leau. and Fl. (?), Faithful Friends, iii. 2.

> I'll make as bold with your meat; for the trot has got me a good stomach. Cotton, in Walton's Angler, ii. 234.

> In some countries, where men and women have good travelling stomachs, they begin with porridge, then they fall to capon, or so forth, but if capon come short of filling their bellies, to their porridge again, 'tis their only course.
> Webster and Dekker, Northward Hoe, i. 1.

Hence—6. Relish; taste; inclination; liking: as, to have no stomach for controversy.

> He also hathe tolde me moche off hys stomake and tendre faver that he owythe to yow. Paston Letters, III. 160.

> Finding that the citizens had apparently no stomach for the fight, he removed his trophies, and took his departure.
> Motley, Dutch Republic, II. 66.

7. Disposition. (a) Spirit; temper; heart.

Though I bee not worthie to receive any favor at the handes of your maistership, yet is your excellente herte and noble stomake worthie to shewe favour.
Udall, in Ellis's Lit. Letters, p. 4.

This was no small Magnanimity in the King, that he was able to pull down the high Stomachs of the Prelates in that time. Baker, Chronicles, p. 50.

(b†) Compassion; pity.

Nere myn extorcioun I myghte nat lyven,
Nor of swiche japes wol I nat be shryven, Stomak ne conscience ne knowe I noon.
Chaucer, Friar's Tale, l. 143.

(c) Courage; spirit.

For in them, as men of stowter stomackes, bolder spirites, and manlyer courages then handycraftes men and plowemen be, doth consiste the whole powre, strength, and puissaunce of oure army, when we muste fight in battayle.
Sir T. More, Utopia, tr. by Robinson, p. 39.

(d†) Pride; haughtiness; conceit.

He was a man
Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking Himself with princes.
Shak., Hen. VIII., iv. 2. 34.

(e†) Spleen; anger; choler; resentment; sullenness.

From that time King Richard, mooued in stomacke against King Philip, neuer shewed any gentle countenance of peace & amitie. Hakluyt's Voyages, II. 23.

Many learned men haue written, with moch diuersitie for the matter, and therfore with great contrarietie and some stomacke amongest them selues.
Ascham, The Scholemaster, p. 123.

Which might teach these times not suddenly to condemn all things that are sharply spoken, or vehemently written, as proceeding out of stomach, virulence, and ill nature. Milton, Church-Government, ii., Int.

Circulating stomach, one of the temporary food-vacuoles of an infusorian or other protozoan, which moves about with a kind of cyclosis. See Polygastrica.—Frigidity of the stomach, a state of gastric debility formerly considered to depend on sexual excesses.—Fullness of the stomach, a feeling of weight or distention in the epigastric region.—Glandular stomach. See proventriculus.—Hypogenesia of the stomach, unnatural smallness of the stomach, seen in some children.—Masticatory stomach. See masticatory.—Muscular stomach. See muscular and gizzard.—Pit of the stomach, the depression just below the sternum: same as epigastrium, 1. Also called infrasternal fossa, scrobiculus cordis, and anticardium.—Proud stomach, a haughty disposition. Compare def. 7.

Truths whilk are as unwelcome to a proud stomach as wet clover to a cow's. Scott, Pirate, xviii.

Rugæ of the stomach, folds of the mucous membrane, present when the organ is contracted, and extending for the most part in a longitudinal direction. See cut in def. 2.—Sour stomach, that condition of the stomach which causes acid eructations.—Sucking-stomach. See def. 4.—To stay the stomach. See stay[2].

stomach (stum′ak), v. [= OF. estomaquer = Sp. Pg. estomagar = It. stomacare, disgust, refl. feel disgust, < L. stomachari, feel disgust, be angry, < stomachus, distaste, dislike, stomach: see stomach, n.] I. trans. 1†. To encourage; hearten.

When he had stomached them by the Holy Ghost to shoot forth his word without fear, he went forward with them by his grace, conquering in them the prince of this world. Lp. Bale, Select Works (Parker Soc.), p. 313.

2†. To hate; resent; remember or regard with anger or resentment.

If that any stomach this my deed,
Alphonsus can revenge thy wrong with speed.
Greene, Alphonsus, iii.

A plague on them all for me! . . . O, I do stomach them hugely. B. Jonson, Every Man in his Humour, iii. 2.

3. To put up with; bear without open resentment or opposition: as, to stomach an affront.

"The priests talk," said he, "of absolution in such terms that laymen can not stomach it."
Motley, Dutch Republic, I. 76.

4. To turn the stomach of; disgust. [Rare.]

It is not because the restaurants are very dirty — if you wipe your plate and glass carefully before using them, they need not stomach you. Howells, Venetian Life, vi.

II.† intrans. To be or become angry.

What one among them commonly doth not stomach at such contradiction? Hooker.

stomachal (stum′ak-al), a. and n. [= F. stomacal = Sp. Pg. estomacal = It. stomacale, < NL. stomachalis*, < L. stomachus, stomach: see stomach.] I. a. 1. Of or pertaining to the stomach; gastric: as, stomachal tubes.

The body-wall, which encloses the stomachal cavity.
Gegenbaur, Comp. Anat. (trans.), p. 92.

2. Relating to the stomach, or to a region of the body which contains the stomach; gastric; epigastric; abdominal; ventral: as, the stomachal part of a crab's carapace.—3. Remedial of a disordered stomach; peptic or digestive; cordial; stomachic.—Stomachal teeth, sharp, horny processes of the lining of the proventriculus, and sometimes of other parts of the alimentary canal, found in many insects and crustaceans, and serving for the comminution of food.

II. n. A stomachic.

stomach-animals† (stum′ak-an″i-malz), n. pl. The Infusoria. See Polygastrica. Öken.

stomach-brush (stum′ak-brush), n. A brush designed to be introduced into the stomach, by way of the esophagus, to stimulate secretion.

stomach-cough (stum′ak-kôf), n. A form of reflex cough excited by irritation of the stomach or small intestine.

stomacher (stum′ak-ėr), n. [< stomach, v., + -er[1].] 1. One who stomachs, in any sense of the word.—2†. A stomachic; an appetizer.

In Sir Kenelm Digby's "Choice and Experimentel Receipts in Physick and Chirurgery" (London, 1675) I find a preparation of herbs for external application with this heading: "To strengthen the stomach use the following stomacher." N. and Q., 7th ser., IV. 173.

3. A part of the dress covering the front of the body, generally forming the lower part of the bodice in front and usually projecting down into the skirt or lapping over it—the name being given to the whole front piece covering the pit of the stomach and the breast. In some fashions the stomacher was richly embroidered, and ornamented with jewels, as in Europe in the sixteenth century.

Less fashionable ladies, between 1615 and 1625, discarded the tight and pointed stomacher and farthingale, and wore, over an easy jerkin and ample petticoat, a loose gown open in front, made high to meet the ruff.
Encyc. Brit., VI. 473.

4. A plaque or brooch, usually large, the name being derived from that part of the dress upon which the brooch was worn. J. B. Atkinson, Art Jour. (1867), p. 203.

stomachful† (stum′ak-fûl), a. [Early mod. E. also stomackfull; < stomach + -ful.] Full of stomach or wilfulness; proud; spirited; wilful; perverse; stubborn; sturdy.

From all those Tartars he hath had an Army of an hundred and twenty thousand excellent, swift, stomackfull Tartarian horse. Capt. John Smith, True Travels, I. 39.

Nay, if I had but any body to stand by me, I am as stomachful as another. Wycherley, Plain Dealer, iii. 1.

stomachfully† (stum′ak-fûl-i), adv. In a stomachful, or perverse or wilful, manner; stubbornly; perversely. Bp. Hall, The Golden Calf.

stomachfulness† (stum′ak-fûl-nes), n. Stubbornness; perverseness; wilfulness.

Pride, stomachfulness, headiness — avail but little.
Granger, On Eccles. (1621), p. 248.

stomach-grief (stum′ak-grēf), n. Anger.

Stomacke grief is when we wil take the matter as hot as a toste. We neede no examples for this matter, hot men have to many. Sir T. Wilson, Art of Rhetoric.

stomachic (stō-mak′ik), a. and n. [= F. stomachique = Sp. estomático = Pg. estomachico = It. stomachico, < L. stomachicus, < Gr. στομαχικός, pertaining to the stomach, < στόμαχος, the stomach: see stomach.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the stomach. (a) Stomachal; gastric: as, stomachic vessels or nerves. (b) Specifically, sharpening the appetite, and stimulating gastric digestion. See stomachal, 3.

He [Boswell] was . . . gluttonously fond of whatever would yield him a little solacement, were it only of a stomachic character. Carlyle, Boswell's Johnson.

Stomachic balsam, a mixture of balsam of Peru with oil of nutmeg and other volatile oils, as those of wormwood, cloves, mace, peppermint, orange-peel, and amber, made up in different proportions.—Stomachic calculus, a concretion, usually containing hair, found in the stomach, particularly of lower animals. See bezoar.—Stomachic fever, gastric fever. See fever[1].

II. n. A medicine which sharpens the appetite, and is supposed to stimulate digestion, as the bitter tonics; a stomachal.

stomachical (stō-mak′i-kal), a. [< stomachic + -al.] Same as stomachic. Wiseman, Surgery, i. 18.

stomaching† (stum′ak-ing), n. [Verbal n. of stomach, v.] Resentment. Shak., A. and C., ii. 2. 9.

stomachless (stum′ak-les), a. [Early mod. E. stomacklesse; < stomach + -less.] Lacking stomach; having no appetite. Bp. Hall, Balm of Gilead, ii. § 6.

stomachous† (stum′ak-us), a. [< L. stomachosus, angry, choleric, < stomachus, distaste, dislike: see stomach.] Resentful; sullen; obstinate.

Young blood is hot; youth hasty; ingenuity open; abuse impatient; choler stomachous.
G. Harvey, Four Letters.

stomach-piece (stum′ak-pēs), n. In ship-carp., same as apron, 3.

stomach-plaster (stum′ak-plȧs″tėr), n. See plaster.

stomach-pump (stum′ak-pump), n. A small pump or syringe used in medical practice for the purpose of emptying the stomach or of introducing liquids into it. It resembles the common syringe, except that it has two apertures near the end, instead of one, in which the valves open different ways, so as to constitute a sucking and a forcing passage. When the object is to empty the stomach, the pump is worked while its sucking orifice is in connection with a flexible tube passed into the stomach; and the extracted matter escapes by the forcing orifice. When, on the contrary, the object is to force a liquid into the stomach, the tube is connected with the forcing orifice, by which the action of the pump is reversed. It is now not much used, the stomach being emptied, when necessary, by the stomach-tube working as a siphon.

stomach-qualmed (stum′ak-kwämd), a. Same as stomach-sick. Shak., Cymbeline, iii. 4. 193.

stomach-sick (stum′ak-sik), a. Nauseated; qualmish; hence, having an aversion.

Receiuing some hurt in his stomack by drinking those cold waters, he proued stomach-sick to his expedition also.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 289.

stomach-staggers (stum′ak-stag″ėrz), n. A disease in horses, depending on a paralytic affection of the stomach. The animal so affected dozes in the stable, resting his head in the manger; on awaking, or being aroused, he falls to eating, and continues to eat voraciously, death from apoplexy or repletion often resulting.

stomach-sweetbread (stum′ak-swēt″bred), n. The pancreas of the calf, as used for food: distinguished from the throat-sweetbread, or thymus gland of the same animal.

stomach-timber (stum′ak-tim″bėr), n. Same as belly-timber. [Slang.]

As Prior tells, a clever poet, . . .
The main strength of ev'ry member Depends upon the stomach timber.
Combe, Dr. Syntax's Tours, xxxiii.

stomach-tooth (stum′ak-töth), n. A lower canine milk-tooth of infants: so called because there is often gastric disturbance at the time of its appearance.

stomach-tube (stum′ak-tūb), n. A long flexible tube to be introduced into the stomach, through the gullet, as for washing out the stomach.

stomach-worm (stum′ak-wėrm), n. A common intestinal roundworm, Ascaris lumbricoides, sometimes found in the human stomach.

stomachy (stum′ak-i), a. [< stomach + -y[1].] Proud; haughty; irascible; easily offended. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

stomack†, stomak†, stomake†, n. Obsolete spellings of stomach.

stomapod (stō′ma-pod), a. and n. Same as stomatopod.

Stomapoda (stō-map′ō-dä), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. στόμα, mouth, + πούς (ποδ-) = E. foot.] Same as Stomatopoda. Latreille, 1817.

stomapodiform (stō-ma-pod′i-fôrm), a. [< NL. Stomapoda + L. forma, form.] Resembling or shaped like a stomatopod, especially of the genus Squilla. Applied in entomology to certain elongate, somewhat flattened larvæ which have the abdomen wider than the thorax, long antennæ, and six legs, the anterior pair being large and raptorial. In aquatic species the body is furnished with lateral false gills. The larvæ of Ephemera are examples of this form.

stomapodous (stō-map′ō-dus), a. [< stomapod + -ous.] Same as stomatopod.

stomata, n. Plural of stoma.

stomatal (stō′ma-tal), a. [< NL. stoma(t-) + -al.] In bot. and zoöl., relating or belonging to stomata.

stomate (stō′māt), a. and n. [< NL. stomatus* for stomatatus*, < stoma (stomat-), a stoma: see stoma.] I. a. Having a stoma or stomata; stomatous.

II. n. A stoma.

stomatia, n. Plural of stomatium.

stomatic (stō-mat′ik), a. and n. [= It. stomatico, < Gr. στοματικός, of or pertaining to the mouth, < στόμα(τ-), mouth: see stoma.] I. a. In zoöl. and bot., of or pertaining to a stoma or stomata; oral.

II. n. A medicine for diseases of the mouth.

stomatiferous (stō-ma-tif′e-rus), a. [< NL. stoma(t-) + L. ferre, bear, carry: see -ferous.] Bearing or provided with stomata; stomatophorous.

stomatitis (stō-ma-tī′tis), n. [NL., < Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + -itis.] Inflammation of the interior of the mouth, including the mucous membrane of the lips, gums, tongue, cheeks, and palate.—Aphthous stomatitis, inflammation of the mucous membrane of the mouth-cavity, consisting in the formation of small superficial ulcers. Also called aphthæ, canker sore mouth follicular or vesicular stomatitis.—Catarrhal stomatitis, a simple local or general inflammation of the mucous membrane of the mouth-cavity. Also called oral catarrh, erythema of the mouth, and erythematous, simple, and superficial stomatitis.—Gangrenous stomatitis. See noma.—Mercurial stomatitis, an inflammation of the mucous membrane of the mouth, with ulceration, caused by mercurial poisoning.—Parasitic stomatitis, inflammation of the mouth due to or complicated with the growth on the mucous membrane of Oidium albicans. Also called thrush, pseudomembranous stomatitis.

—Ulcerous stomatitis, inflammation of the mucous membrane of the mouth-cavity, usually unilateral, resulting in the formation of multiple ulcers. Also called fetid stomatitis, phlegmonous stomatitis, and putrid sore mouth.

stomatium (stō-mā'shi-um), n.; pl. stomatia (-ä). [NL., dim. of stoma: see stoma.] A stoma.

Stomatoda (stō-ma-tō'dä), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + εἶδος, form.] Von Siebold's name for the ciliate infusorians, regarded by him as the only animalcules with distinct stomata, or oral apertures: distinguished from Astoma, or the supposed mouthless flagellate infusorians.

stomatodæum (stō″ma-tō-dē'um), n.; pl. stomatodæa (-ä). [NL.: see stomodæum.] Same as stomodæum. [Rare.]

The stomatodæum: a sac-like involution of the epidermis abutting against the mesenteron, spacious, and well marked on account of its dense pigmentation.
Huxley and Martin, Elementary Biology, p. 171.

stomatode (stō'ma-tōd), a. and n. [< Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + εἶδος, form.] I. a. Having a stoma or cytostome, as an infusorian; stomatophorous; of or pertaining to the Stomatoda.

As regards the classification of the Protozoa, a rough and useful division is into mouth-bearing or "stomatode" Protozoa, in which there is a distinct mouth, and mouthless or "astomatous" Protozoa. H. A. Nicholson.

II. n. A member of the Stomatoda.

stomatodendron (stō″ma-tō-den'dron), n.; pl. stomatodendra (-drä). [NL., < Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + δένδρον, a tree.] One of the dendritic branches of the Rhizostomidæ, ending in minute polypites. Encyc. Dict.

stomatodynia (stō″ma-tō-din'i-ä), n. [NL., < Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + ὀδυνη, pain.] Pain in the mouth.

stomatogastric (stō″ma-tō-gas'trik), a. [< Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + γαστήρ, stomach: see gastric.] Of or pertaining to the mouth and stomach: applied to the set or system of visceral nerves which ramify upon the alimentary canal of many invertebrates. See figure and description.

Stomatogastric and other Visceral Nerves of Crawfish (Astacus fluviatilis).

Œ, esophagus, around which is the esophageal ring; C, cardiac; P, pyloric parts of stomach; a, cerebroganglion; b, commissural nerve of left side, in place; b′, commissural nerve of right side, cut away and turned down (these longitudinal commissures being completed in the esophageal ring by c, postesophageal transverse commissures); d, d, d, azygous nerve, with h, a ganglion; i, lateral branch, uniting with g, a posterolateral nerve; e, f, anterolateral and mediolateral nerves; k, hepatic nerve.

The Crayfish possesses a remarkably well-developed system of visceral or stomatogastric nerves.
Huxley, Anat. [Invert., p. 286.

stomatological (stō″ma-tō-loj'i-kal), a. [< stomatolog-y + -ic-al.] Pertaining to stomatology.

stomatologist (stō-ma-tol'ō-jist), n. [< stomatolog-y + -ist.] One versed in stomatology.

stomatology (stō-ma-tol'ō-ji), n. [< Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + -λογία, < λέγειν, speak: see -ology.] The sum of scientific knowledge concerning the mouth.

stomatomorphous (stō″ma-tō-môr'fus), a. [< Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + μορφή, form.] In bot., mouth-shaped.

stomatonecrosis (stō″ma-tō-nek-rō'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + νέκρωσις, deadness: see necrosis.] Gangrenous stomatitis. See stomatitis and noma.

Stomatophora (stō-ma-tof'ō-rä), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of stomatophorus: see stomatophorous.] Protozoa which are provided with a mouth or its equivalent: a higher series of protozoans: same as Infusoria, 2: opposed to Lipostomata.

stomatophorous (stō-ma-tof'ō-rus), a. [< NL. stomatophorus, < Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + φέρειν = E. bear[1].] Having a mouth or stoma; of or pertaining to the Stomatophora; not lipostomatous.

stomatoplastic (stō″ma-tō-plas'tik), a. [< stomatoplast-y + -ic.] Pertaining to stomatoplasty.

stomatoplasty (stō'ma-tō-plas-ti), n. [< Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + πλαστός, verbal adj. of πλάσσειν, form, mold.] Plastic surgery of the mouth.

stomatopod (stō'ma-tō-pod), a. and n. [< NL. stomatopus (-pod-), < Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + ποῦς (ποδ-) = E. foot.] I. a. Having some of the legs close by the mouth, as a mantis-shrimp; of or pertaining to the Stomatopoda. Also stomatopodous, stomapodous.

II. n. A member of the Stomatopoda, in any sense.

Also stomapod.

Stomatopoda (stō-ma-top'ō-dä), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of stomatopus (-pod-): see stomatopod.] An order of malacostracous podophthalmic crustaceans, to which various limits have been assigned. (a†) As constituted by Latreille in 1817, in the form Stomapoda, the second order of Crustacea, the so-called sea-mantes, or gastrurans, divided into two families, Unipeltata and Bipeltata, of which only the former are properly stomatopodous, the other being the so-called glass-crabs (Phyllosoma), or larval forms of other crustaceans. Hence—(b†) An artificial order of the higher crustaceans, under which are included not only the Squillidæ or Stomatopoda proper, but also the Mysidæ or opossum-shrimps, and related forms, the Lucriferidæ, etc. (c) Restricted by Huxley to the family Squillidæ. See cuts under mantis-shrimp and Squillidæ.

Squilla, Gonodactylus, and Coronis appear to me to differ so widely and in such important structural peculiarities, not only from the Podophthalmia proper, but from all other Crustacea, as to require arrangement in a separate group, for which the title of Stomatopoda may well be retained. Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 317.

stomatopodous (stō-ma-top'ō-dus), a. [< stomatopod + -ous.] Same as stomatopod.

Stomatopora (stō-ma-top'ō-rä), n. [NL. (Brown, 1835), < Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + πόρος, pore: see pore[2].] Same as Aulopora.

stomatoporoid (stō-ma-top'ō-roid), a. [< Stomatopora + -oid.] Pertaining to or characteristic of a coral of the genus Stomatopora. Geological Jour., XLV. iii. 566.

Stomatopterophora (stō-ma-top-te-rof'ō-rä), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + πτερόν, feather, + φέρειν = E. bear[1].] In J. E. Gray's classification (1821), the fourth class of mollusks, divided into two orders, Pterobranchia and Dactyliobranchia; the Pteropoda or pteropods.

stomatorrhagia (stō″ma-tō-rā'ji-ä), n. [NL., < Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + -ραγία, < ῥηγνύναι, break, burst.] Hemorrhage from the mouth.

stomatoscope (stō'ma-tō-skōp), n. [< Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + σκοπεῖν, view.] A form of gag for keeping the jaws separated so as to expose the interior of the mouth to view: also, a modification of the rhinoscope.

stomatotheca (stō″ma-tō-thē'kä), n.; pl. stomathecæ (-sē). [NL., < Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + θήκη, box, chest.] In entom., the mouth-case, or that part of the integument of a pupa which covers the mouth.

stomatous (stō'ma-tus), a. [< Gr. στόμα(τ-), mouth, + -ous.] Provided with stomata; stomatophorous; stomate.

Stomias (stō'mi-as), n. [NL. (Cuvier, 1817), < Gr. στόμα, mouth.] A genus of deep-sea fishes, typical of the family Stomiatidæ, having a long compressed body with delicate deciduous scales, a row of phosphorescent or luminous spots along each side, and a rayed dorsal opposite the anal fin: so called from the large and deep mouth, armed with a formidable array of teeth. S. ferox is found from Greenland to Cape Cod. Specimens are taken at various depths from 450 to 1,800 fathoms.

Stomiatidæ (stō-mi-at'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stomias (see stomiatoid) + -idæ.] A family of physostomous fishes, typified by the genus Stomias. They are deep-sea Atlantic fishes, of 5 or 6 species and 3 genera, divided into 2 subfamilies, according to the presence or absence of an adipose fin.

stomiatoid (stō'mi-a-toid), a. and n. [< Stomias (assumed stem Stomiat-).] I. a. Resembling a fish of the genus Stomias; of or pertaining to the Stomiatidæ.

II. n. Any fish of the family Stomiatidæ.

stomodæal (stō-mō-dē'al), a. Same as stomodeal.

stomodæum (stō-mō-dē'um), n.; pl. stomodæa (-ä). [NL., < Gr. στόμα, mouth, + ὁδαῖος, by the way, < ὁδός, way.] An anterior part of the alimentary canal or digestive tract, being so much of the whole enteric tube as is formed at the oral end by an ingrowth of the ectoderm: correlated with proctodæum, which is derived from the ectoderm at the aboral end, both being distinguished from enteron proper, which is of endodermal origin.

stomodeal (stō-mō-dē'al), a. [< stomodæum + -al.] Pertaining to or having the character of a stomodæum. Also spelled stomodæal.

Stomoxyidæ (stō-mok-sī'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stomoxys + -idæ.] A family of brachycerous dipterous insects, typified by the genus Stomoxys, often merged in the Muscidæ. It contains such genera as Stomoxys, Hæmatobia, and Glossina, and includes some well-known biting flies, as the horn-fly, stable-fly, and tsetse-fly. Also Stomoxidæ (Meigen, 1824) and Stomoxidea (Westwood, 1840), and, as a subfamily of Muscidæ, Stomoxyinæ or Stomoxinæ.

Stomoxys (stō-mok'sis), n. [NL. (Geoffroy, 1764), < Gr. στόμα, mouth, + ὀξύς, sharp.] A notable genus of biting flies, typical of the family Stomoxyidæ, or merged with the Muscidæ. They are gray, of medium size, and resemble the common house-fly in appearance. The mouth-parts are developed into a horny proboscis. S. calcitrans, common to Europe and North America, is a familiar example. See stable-fly, 1.

stomp[1] (stomp), n. A dialectal form of stamp; specifically, in coal-mining, one of the plugs of wood driven into the roof of the level, to which are fastened the "lines" serving to direct the miner in his proper course; they may also be used as bench-marks. Gresley. [Midland coalfield, Eng.]

stomp[2]†, n. and v. An obsolete form of stump.

stompers (stom'pėrz), n. pl. A dialectal form of stampers. See stamper, 3.

stonage† (stō'nāj), n. [< stone + -age.] A collection or heap of stones. Halliwell.

Would not everybody say to him, We know the stonage at Gilgal? Leslie. (Nares.) stond (stond), v. and n. An obsolete or dialectal form of stand.

stondent. An obsolete past participle of stand.

stone (stōn), n. and a. [Also E. dial. stean, ★steen, Sc. stane, stain; < ME. stoon, ston, stan, < AS. stān = OS. stēn = OFries. stēn = D. steen = MLG. stēn, LG. stoen = OHG. MHG. G. stein = Icel. steinn = Sw. Dan. sten = Goth. stains, a stone; prob. akin to OBulg. stiena = Russ. stiena, a wall, and to Gr. στία, στίον, a stone. Hence steen[1], steen[2].] I. n. 1. A piece of rock of small or moderate size. The name rock is given to the aggregation of mineral matter of which the earth's crust is made up. A small piece or fragment of this rock is generally called a stone, and to this a qualifying term is frequently added: as, cobble-stone or gravel-stone. See rock[1].

Lo, heere be stoonys hard y-wrougte,
Make hereof breed.
Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 43.

Are there no stones in heaven
But what serve for the thunder?
Shak., Othello, v. 2. 234.

He is not a man, but a block, a very stone.
Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 450.

2. The hard material of which rock consists: in contradistinction to metal, wood, etc.

Al hem to-dryven ase ston doth the glas.
Flemish Insurrection (Child's Ballads, VI. 270).

He made a harp of her breast-bone, . . .
Whose sounds would melt a heart of stone.
The Cruel Sister (Child's Ballads, II. 236).

That we might see our own work out, and watch
The sandy footprint harden into stone.
Tennyson, Princess, iii.

3. A piece of rock of a determined size, shape, or quality, or used for a defined purpose: as, a grind*stone;* a hearth*stone;* an altar-stone. Specifically—(a†) A gun-flint.

About seauen of the clocke marched forward the light peeces of ordinance, with stone and powder.
Holinshed, Chron., III. 947.

(b) A gravestone; a monument or memorial tablet.

You shall shine more bright in these contents
Than unswept stone besmear'd with sluttish time.
Shak., Sonnets, lv.

(c) A millstone. (d) In printing, an imposing-stone. (e) In glass-manuf., a flattening-stone.

4. A precious stone; a gem. See precious.

Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels.
Shak., Rich. III., i. 4. 27.

5. A small, hard, rounded object resembling a stone or pebble: as, a hail-stone; a gall-stone; an ear-stone. Specifically—(a) A calculous concretion in the kidney or urinary bladder or gall-bladder, etc.; hence, the disease arising from a calculus. (b) A testicle: generally in the plural. [Vulgar.] (c) The nut of a drupe or stone-fruit, or the hard covering inclosing the kernel, and itself inclosed by the pulpy pericarp, as in the peach, cherry, or plum. See drupe and endocarp (with cuts). (d†) A hard, compact mass; a lump or nugget.

Marvellous great stones of yron.
Lerners, tr. of Froissart's Chron., I. 498.

6†. The glass of a mirror; a mirror of crystal.

Lend me a looking-glass;
If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,
Why, then she lives. Shak., Lear, v. 3. 262.

7. A common measure of weight in use throughout the northwest and central countries of Europe, but varying much in different countries. The English imperial standard stone is 14 pounds avoirdupois, and is commonly used in England in giving the weight of a man, but other values are in common use, varying with the article weighed: thus, the stone of butchers' meat or fish is 8 pounds, of cheese 16 pounds, of glass 5 pounds, of alum 13½ pounds, of hemp usually 32 pounds, though a statute of George II. made it 16 pounds, and one of Henry VIII. 20 pounds; of lead 12 pounds, though the statute de ponderibus makes it 15 pounds of 25 "shillings" each, equal to 14½ pounds avoirdupois. There were in the early part of the nineteenth century many local stones in use in England, but in the United States this unit is unknown. The stone of 14 pounds is not recognized in the statute de ponderibus, and first appears as a weight for wool. The old arithmetics call 14 pounds half a quarter, and either do not mention the stone, or define it as 8 pounds. The only legal stone in Great Britain now is that of 14 pounds.

And sende ye me word how mech more yn value yn a stoon shall I syle my wolle. Paston Letters, I. 155.

He was not a ghost, my visitor, but solid flesh and bone;
He wore a Palo Alto hat, his weight was twenty stone.
O. W. Holmes, Nux Postcœnatica.

Alençon stone, pure rock-crystal cut in rose or brilliant form.—Amazonian or Amazon stone. See Amazonian[2].—Arkansas stone, a fine-grain whetstone found in Arkansas, and used to sharpen surgical and dental instruments.—Armenian stone. See Armenian.—Artificial stone, a material prepared for decorative and building purposes by consolidating sand with the aid of some chemical. The best-known and most extensively used artificial stone is Ransome's, which is made by mixing sand with silicate of soda in a pug-mill, so as to form a plastic substance, which is then rolled or pressed into any desired form. The articles as thus prepared are then immersed in a solution of calcium chlorid, when double decomposition takes place, a calcium silicate being formed which firmly cements the particles of sand together, while the sodium chlorid, the other product of the decomposition, is afterward removed by washing. This material has been somewhat extensively used in England and elsewhere. Other processes akin to this, but in which different chemicals were used, have also been patented in the United States, but the materials thus produced have not met with any extensive sale. Beton or concrete has also been employed as a building material, to take the place of stone or brick, especially the "béton-Coignet," which is extensively used in and near Paris and elsewhere. Beton and concrete, which are mixtures of sand, gravel, stone chippings, fragments of brick, etc., with common or hydraulic mortar or cement, are also frequently, but not correctly, designated artificial stone.—Ayr stone, a stone used for polishing marble and surfacing metals. The harder varieties are used as whetstones. Also called water of Ayr, Scotch stone, and smoke-stone.—Bath stone, a rock used extensively for building purposes in England, and especially near Bath (whence its name). It is a limestone, having an oölitic structure, and belonging to the Inferior Oölite, which lies directly upon the Lias, the lowest division of the Jurassic of Continental and American geologists. Also called Bath oölite.—Beer stone, a hard sandy chalk stratum of small thickness, occurring westward of Seaton in Devonshire, England. It forms a part of the Lower Chalk, and contains Inoceramus mytiloides. This series of beds, not having a thickness of more than 10 feet, is only of local importance, but it has been quarried as a building-stone for many hundred years, and parts of Exeter Cathedral are built of it.—Bologna stone, or Bolognian stone, a variety of barite, or barium sulphate, found in roundish masses, composed of radiating fibers, first discovered near Bologna. It is phosphorescent in the dark after being heated to ignition, powdered, and exposed to the sun's light for some time.—Bristol stone, rock-crystal, or Bristol diamond, small round crystals of quartz, found in the Clifton limestone, near the city of Bristol in England.—Caen stone, the French equivalent of the English Bath oölite. It is a cream-colored building-stone, of excellent quality, got near Caen in Normandy. Although soft in the quarry, it is of fine texture and hardens by exposure, so as to become extremely durable. Winchester and Canterbury cathedrals, Henry VII. s chapel at Westminster, and many churches are built of it. It is still frequently used in England.—Cambay stones. See carnelian.—Centurial stones. See centurial.—Ceylon stone, a dark-green, brown, or black spinel from Ceylon, also called ceylonite: the name is also given to other minerals or gems from Ceylon.—Channel-stone. See channel[1].—Charnwood Forest stone, an oilstone found only in Charnwood Forest in Leicestershire, England. It is one of the best substitutes for the Turkey oilstone, and is much used to give a fine edge to knives and other tools.—Cornish stone. Same as china-stone, 2.

Cornish stone is used for almost all English wares, both in the body and the glaze. Spons' Encyc. Manuf., p. 1560.

Crab's stones. Same as crab's eyes (which see, under crab[1]). See also crabstone.—Crape stone, a trade-name for onyx of which the surface is cut in imitation of crape and colored a lusterless black. A similar article is made from artificial silicious compounds cast in molds.—Cut stone, hewn stone, or work in hewn stone; ashlar.—Deaf as a stone. See deaf.—Dimension stone, ashler.—Drafted stone, ashler stone having a chisel-draft around the face, the part inside the draft being left rough.—Heraclean stone. See Heraclean.—Hewn stone, blocks of stone with faces dressed to shape by the hammer.—Holy stone, a stone used in magical rites, whether as a magic mirror or show-stone, or as a sort of amulet.—Infernal, ledger, lithographic, Lydian stone. See the adjectives.—Maltese stone, a limestone of a delicate brown cream-color, very compact, and almost as soft as chalk. The natives of the island of Malta turn and carve it into various ornamental objects.—Memorial, meteoric, Moabite stone. See the adjectives.—Mocha stone (formerly also Moco stone; also Mocha-pebble; so called from Mocha in Arabia, where the stone is plentiful), a variety of dendritic agate, containing dark outlines of arborization, like vegetable filaments, due to the presence of metallic oxids, as of manganese and iron; moss-agate.—Philosopher's stone. See elixir, 1.—Portland stone, in England, a rock belonging to the Portlandian series: so named from the Isle of Portland, where it is typically developed. The Portlandian is a part of the Jurassic series, and lies between the Purbeckian, the highest member of that series, and the Kimmeridgian. The Portland group, or Portlandian, consists of two divisions, the Portland stone and the Portland sand; the former has several subdivisions, to which local names are attached, such as curf, base-bee, and whit-bee. The Portland stone, which is a nearly pure carbonate of lime, is an important building-stone in England, and was extensively used by Inigo Jones and Sir Christopher Wren, in important public buildings, especially in St. Paul's Cathedral.—Precious stone. See precious.—Protean stone. See Protean.—Quarry-faced stone, cut stone of which the face is left rough as it comes from the quarry, as distinguished from tooled, hammer-faced, pitch-faced stone, etc.—Rocking stone. See rock[2].—Rosetta stone, a stele or tablet of black basalt, found in 1799 near Rosetta, a town of Egypt, on the delta of the Nile, by M. Boussard, a French officer of engineers. This stone bears a trilingual inscription, a decree of Ptolemy V. (Epiphanes) in Greek and Egyptian hieroglyphic and demotic. The inscription was deciphered chiefly by Champollion, and afforded the key to the interpretation of Egyptian hieroglyphics. The monument is now in the British Museum.—Rough-pointed stone. See rough[1].—Rubbed stone, stonework of which the surface is cut straight with the stone-saw, and afterward smoothed by rubbing with grit or sandstone.—Samian stone. See Samian.—Saracen's or Sarsen's stone. See Saracen.—Scotch stone. Same as Ayr stone.—Shipman's stone†. See shipman.—Sonorous stone. See sonorous.—Standing stone. See standing.—Stick and stone. See stick[3].—Stone cancer. Same as scirrhous cancer (which see, under scirrhous).—Stone of the second class. See elixir, 1.—Stones of sulphur. See sulphur.—To leave no stone unturned, to do everything that can be done; use all practicable means to effect an object; spare no exertions.

New crimes invented, left unturn'd no stone
To make my guilt appear, and hide his own.
Dryden, Æneid, ii. 133.

To mark with a white stone, to mark as particularly fortunate, favored, or esteemed. The phrase arose from the custom among the Romans of marking their lucky days on the calendar with a white stone (as a piece of chalk), while unlucky days were marked with charcoal. Brewer.

=Syn. 1 and 2. See rock[1].

II. a. 1. Made of stone: as, a stone house; a stone wall.

The lion on your old stone gates
Is not more cold to you than I.
Tennyson, Lady Clara Vere de Vere.

2. Made of stoneware: as, a stone jar; a stone mug.

Now mistress Gilpin (careful soul!)
Had two stone bottles found,
To hold the liquor that she loved,
And keep it safe and sound.
Cowper, John Gilpin.

Stone age. See archæological ages, under age.—Stone ax, an ax-head or hatchet-head made of hard stone. Such axes are found, belonging to prehistoric epochs, and have also been in use down to the present time among savage tribes in different parts of the world. Compare stone-ax.—Stone brick. See brick[2].—Stone jug. See jug[1], 2.—Stone ocher. See ocher.

stone (stōn), v. t.; pret. and pp. stoned, ppr. stoning. [< ME. stonen, stanen (in earlier use stenen, whence mod. E. dial. steen[1]), < AS. stānan = OHG. steinōn, MHG. steinen = Sw. stena = Dan. stene = Goth. stainjan (cf. D. steenigen = G. steinigen), pelt with stones, stone; from the noun.] 1. To throw stones at; pelt with stones.

With stones men shulde hir stryke and stone hir to deth.
Piers Plowman (B), xii. 77.

Francis himself was stoned to death.
R. W. Dixon, Hist. Church of Eng., xv.

2. To make like stone; harden. [Rare.]

O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart.
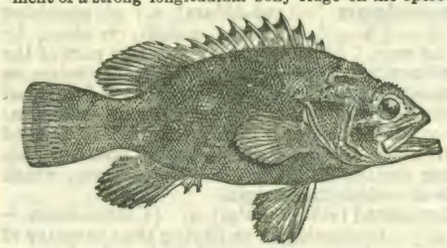
Shak., Othello, v. 2. 63.

3. To free from stones, as fruit.



She picked from Polly's very hand the raisins which the good woman was stoning for the most awfully sacred election cake. H. B. Stowe, Oldtown, p. 270.

4. To provide or fit with stones, as by lining, walling, or facing: as, to stone a well or a road.—5. In leather-manuf., to work (the leather) with a stock-stone to reduce it to uniform thickness, stretch it, and make it smooth-grained.

stone-ax (stōn'aks), n. [< ME. stonax*, < AS. stānæx, < stān, stone, + æx, ax.] An ax or a hammer with two somewhat obtuse edges, used in hewing stone.

stone-basil (stōn'baz″il), n. Same as basil-weed.

stone-bass (stōn'bȧs), n. A fish of the family Serranidæ, Polyprion americanus, or another of the same genus. It is distinguished by the development of a strong longitudinal bony ridge on the operculum, and the serration of the spines of the anal and ventral fins. It inhabits moderately deep water in the Mediterranean and neighboring Atlantic. (Also called wreck-fish and cernier.) The corresponding stone-bass of Pacific waters is a very similar though distinct species, P. oxygeneios. See Polyprion.

Stone-bass (Polyprion americanus).

stone-bird (stōn'bėrd), n. 1. The vinous grosbeak, or moro.—2. The stone-snipe, or greater yellowlegs. See cut under yellowlegs.

stone-biter (stōn'bī″tėr), n. The common wolf-fish. See cut under Anarrhichas.

stone-blind (stōn'blīnd'), a. [= Icel. steinblindr = Sw. Dan. sten-blind; as stone + blind.] Blind as a stone; wholly blind, either literally or figuratively.

I thought I saw everything, and was stone-blind all the while. George Eliot, Mr. Gilfil, xviii.

stone-blue (stōn'blū), n. A compound of indigo and starch or whiting.

stone-boat (stōn'bōt), n. A drag or sled without runners, used for moving stones; also, a wagon-platform hung below the axles, used for the same purpose. [U. S.]

stonebock (stōn'bok), n. Same as steenbok.

stone-boilers (stōn'boi″lėrz), n. pl. People who practise stone-boiling.

The Australians, at least in modern times, must be counted as stone-boilers.
E. B. Tylor, Early Hist. Mankind, ix.

stone-boiling (stōn'boi″ling), n. The act or process of making water boil by putting hot stones in it.

The art of boiling, as commonly known to us, may have been developed through this intermediate process, which I propose to call stone-boiling.
E. B. Tylor, Early Hist. Mankind, ix.

stone-borer (stōn'bōr″ėr), n. A mollusk that bores stones; a lithodomous, lithophagous, or saxicavous bivalve. See cuts under accessory, date-shell, Glycymeris, and piddock.

stone-bow (stōn'bō), n. [< ME. stonbowe; < stone + bow[2].] A weapon somewhat resembling a crossbow, for shooting stones; a catapult; also, a sort of toy.

O, for a stone-bow, to hit him in the eye!
Shak., T. N., ii. 5. 51.

Item, six stone bowes that shoot lead pellets.
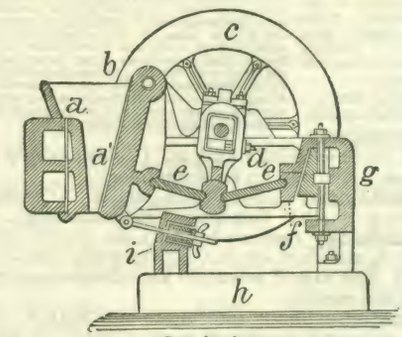
Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 363.



Children will shortly take him for a wall,
And set their stone-bows in his forehead.
Beau. and Fl., King and No King, v. 1.

stone-bramble (stōn'bram″bl), n. Same as roebuck-berry.

stone-brash (stōn'brash), n. In agri., a subsoil composed of shattered rock or stone.

stonebreak (stōn'brāk), n. The meadow-saxifrage, Saxifraga granulata: so called from the virtue, according to the doctrine of signatures, of its pebble-like bulbs against calculus. The name is also a general equivalent of saxifrage.

stone-breaker (stōn'brā″kėr), n. One who or that which breaks stones; specifically, a machine for pounding or crushing stone; an ore-mill; a stone-crusher.

Stone-breaker.

a, stationary jaw; a′, oscillating jaw; b, hopper; c, fly-wheel; d, short pitman connecting crank-wrist with toggles; e, e, toggles; f, frame, strengthened at g, where the thrust of the toggles is received; h, base of machine; i, rubber spring which withdraws the lower end of the jaw a′.

stone-bruise (stōn'brōz), n. A bruise caused by a stone; especially, a painful and persistent bruise on the sole of the foot, commonly in the middle of the ball of the foot, due to walking barefooted; also, a bruise produced on the hand, as by ball-playing. [Local, U. S.]

stonebuck (stōn'buk), n. [< ME. stonbukke*, < AS. stānbucca, the ibex, < stān, stone, rock, + bucca, buck. In mod. use, tr. D. steenbok, G. steinbock: see steenbok.] The steenbok.

stone-butter (stōn'but″ėr), n. A sort of alum.

stone-canal (stōn'ka-nal″), n. In echinoderms, the duct leading from the madreporic plate to the circular canal: so called because it ordinarily has calcareous substances in its walls. Also sand-canal. Gegenbaur, Comp. Anat. (trans.), p. 220.

stone-cast (stōn'kȧst), n. The distance which a stone may be thrown by the hand; a stone's cast; a stone's throw.

About a stone-cast from the wall
A sluice with blacken'd waters slept.
Tennyson, Mariana.

stonecat (stōn'kat), n. A name of several catfishes, as Noturus flavus, common in many parts of the United States. This is one of the largest, sometimes exceeding a foot in length. Schilbeodes Stonecat (Noturus flavus).

insignis is another, found in the Middle and Southern States. There are several more, a few inches long, all of fresh waters of the same country.

stone-centiped (stōn'sen″ti-ped), n. A centiped of the family Lithobiidæ.

stonechacker (stōn'chak″ėr), n. Same as stonechat.

stonechat (stōn'chat), n. One of several different Old World chats, belonging to the genera Saxicola and (especially) Pratincola; a kind of bushchat: applied to three different English birds, and extended, as a book-name, to several others of the above genera. (a) Improperly, the wheatear, Saxicola œnanthe, and some other species of the restricted genus Saxicola. See cut under wheatear. [In this sense chiefly Scotch and American, the wheatear being the only bird of the kind which straggles to America.] (b) Improperly, the whin-bushchat or whinchat, Pratincola rubetra. [Eng.] (c) The black-headed bushchat, Pratincola rubicola, a common bird of Great Britain and other parts of Europe. The true stonechat is about 5 inches long, the wing 2½, the tail scarcely 2. The male in full plumage has the head and most of the back black, the feathers of the back mostly edged with sandy brown; the upper tail-coverts white, varied with black and brown; the wings and tail blackish-brown, the former with a large white area on the coverts and inner secondaries; the sides of the neck and breast white; the rest of the under parts rufous-brown; the bill and feet black; and the eyes brown. It nests on the ground, and lays four to six bluish-green eggs clouded and spotted with reddish-brown. Also called chickstone, stone-chacker, stonechatter, stoneclink, stonesmich, stonesmitch, or stonesmickle, and stonesmith.

Stonechat (Pratincola rubicola), in a usual plumage.

The Stonechat closely resembles the Whinchat, . . . a circumstance which has caused much confusion: . . . for in almost all parts of England the Whinchat, by far the commonest species, popularly does duty for the Stonechat, and in many parts of Scotland the Wheatear is universally known by that name. Seebohm, Hist. Brit. Birds, I. 317.

stonechatter (stōn'chat″ėr), n. Same as stonechat.

stone-climber (stōn'klī″mėr), n. The dobson or hellgrammite. See cut under sprawler. [Local, U. S.]

stoneclink (stōn'klingk), n. Same as stonechat.

stone-clover (stōn'klō″vėr), n. The rabbit-foot or hare's-foot clover, Trifolium arvense, a low slender branching species with very silky heads, thence also called puss-clover. It is an Old World plant naturalized in America.

stone-coal (stōn'kōl), n. [= G. steinkohle; as stone + coal.] Mineral coal, or coal dug from the earth, as distinguished from charcoal: generally applied in England to any particularly hard variety of coal, and especially to that called in the United States anthracite. See coal.

stone-cold (stōn'kōld'), a. Cold as a stone. Fletcher and Shirley, Night-Walker, iv. 4.

stone-color (stōn'kul″or), n. The color of stone; a grayish color.

stone-colored (stōn'kul″ord), a. Of the usual color of a large mass of stone, a cold bluish gray.

stone-coral (stōn'kor″al), n. Massive coral, as distinguished from branching coral, or tree-coral; hard, sclerodermatous or lithocoralline coral, as distinguished from sclerobasic coral. Most corals are of this character, and are hexacoralline (not, however, the red coral of commerce, which is related to the sea-fans and other octocorallines).

stonecrab (stōn'krab), n. 1. Any crab of the family Homolidæ.—2. A European crab, Lithodes maia.—3. A large, stout, edible crab of the Atlantic coast of the United States, Menippe Stonecrab (Menippe mercenaria).

mercenaria.—4. The dobson or hellgrammite. See cut under sprawler. [Local, U. S.]

stone-crawfish (stōn'krâ″fish), n. A crawfish of Europe, specified as Astacus torrentium, in distinction from the common crawfish of that country, A. fluviatilis.

stone-cray (stōn'krā), n. A distemper in hawks. Imp. Dict.

stone-cricket (stōn'krik″et), n. One of the wingless forms of the orthopterous family Locustidæ, living under or among stones and in dark places, and popularly confounded with true crickets (which belong to the orthopterous family Gryllidæ or Achetidæ). There are many species, of various parts of the world, some simply called crickets, and others cave-crickets. The commonest American stone-crickets belong to the genus Ceuthophilus, as C. maculatus, etc. See cave-cricket, and cut under Hadenœcus.

stonecrop (stōn'krop), n. [< ME. stoncrop, < AS. stāncrop, stonecrop, < stān, stone, + crop, the top or head of a plant, a sprout, a bunch or cluster of flowers: see stone and crop.] The wall-pepper, Sedum acre: so called as frequently growing upon walls and rocks. It is native throughout Europe and Asiatic Russia, and somewhat employed in ornamental gardening; in America called moss, mossy stonecrop, etc., from its creeping and matting stems beset with small sessile leaves. The flowers are bright-yellow in small terminal cymes. The name is also extended to other species of similar habit, especially S. ternatum, and not seldom to the whole genus.—Ditch-stonecrop, a plant of the genus Penthorum, chiefly the American P. sedoides, a weed-like plant with yellowish-green flowers, common in ditches and wet places.—Great stonecrop, an old designation of the kidneywort, Umbilicus Umbilicus, also of Sedum album.—Mossy stonecrop. See def.

stone-crush (stōn'krush), n. A sore on the foot caused by a bruise from a stone. [Local.]

★stone-crusher (stōn'krush″ėr), n. A mill or machine for crushing or grinding stone or ores for use on roads, etc.; an ore-crusher; an ore-mill; a stone-breaker (which see).

stone-curlew (stōn'kėr″lū), n. 1. The stone-plover or thick-knee, Œdicnemus crepitans. See cut under Œdicnemus.—2. The whimbrel, Numenius phæopus.—3. In the southern United States, the willet, Symphemia semipalmata: a misnomer. Audubon.

stone-cutter (stōn'kut″ėr), n. 1. One whose occupation it is to hew or cut stones for building, ornamental, or other purposes.—2. A machine for shaping or facing stones.

stone-cutting (stōn'kut″ing), n. The business of cutting or hewing stones for walls, monuments, etc.

stoned (stōnd), a. [< stone + *-ed*².] Having or containing stones, in any sense.

Of stoned fruits I have met with three good sorts: viz., Cherries, plums, and persimmons.
Beverley, Hist. Virginia, iv. ¶ 12.

The way
Sharpe ston'd and thorny, where he pass'd of late.
W. Browne, Britannia's Pastorals, ii. 3

stone-dead (stōn'ded'), a. [< ME. standeed, standed (= Sw. Dan. stendöd); < stone + dead.] Dead as a stone; lifeless.

The Geant was by Gaffray don bore,
So discomfite standede, and all cold.
Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 3121.

He cannot be so stupid, or stone-dead.
B. Jonson, Volpone, i. 1.

stone-deaf (stōn'def'), a. Deaf as a stone; totally deaf.

stone-devil (stōn'dev″l), n. The dobson or hellgrammite. See cut under sprawler. [Virginia.]

stone-dresser (stōn'dres″ėr), n. 1. One who tools, smooths, and shapes stone for building purposes. Simmonds.—2. One of a variety of power-machines for dressing, polishing, and finishing marbles, slates, and other building-stones.

stone-dumb (stōn'dum'), a. Perfectly dumb. The Century, XXXV. 622. [Rare.]

stone-eater (stōn'ē tėr), n. Same as stone-borer.

stone-engraving (stōn'en-grā ving), n. The art of engraving on stone. See lithography, etching, gem-engraving.

stone-falcon (stōn'fâ″kn), n. See falcon, and cut under merlin.

stone-fern (stōn'fėrn), n. A European fern, Ceterach Ceterach: so called from its habit of growing on rocks and stone walls.

★stone-fish (stōn'fish), n. The shanny. Parnell. [Local, Scotch.]

stone-fly (stōn'flī), n. Any insect of the family Perlidæ or order Plecoptera: so called because the larval forms abound under the stones of streams. (See cut under Perla.) P. bicaudata, whose larva is much used by anglers, is an example.

stone-fruit (stōn'frōt), n. [= D. steenvrucht = G. steinfrucht = Sw. stenfrukt = Dan. stenfrugt; as stone + fruit.] In bot., a drupe; a fruit whose seeds are covered with a hard shell enveloped in a pulp, as the peach, cherry, and plum. See drupe.

Bring with you the kernels of peares and apples, and the stones of such stonefruits as you shall find there.
Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 439.

stonegale (stōn'gāl), n. Same as staniel.

stone-gall[1] (stōn'gâl), n. [< stone + *gall*³.] A roundish mass of clay often occurring in variegated sandstone.

stone-gall[2] (stōn'gâl), n. Same as staniel.

stone-gatherer (stōn'gaтн″ėr-ėr), n. A horse-machine for picking up loose stones from the ground. It consists of a receiving-box with a toothed wheel and a traveling apron, or a fork with curved teeth, and a lever for emptying it into the box when loaded.

stone-gray (stōn'grā), n. A dark somewhat brownish-gray color.

stone-grig (stōn'grig), n. The pride or mud-lamprey, Lampetra fluviatilis.

stone-hammer (stōn'ham″ėr), n. A hammer for breaking or rough-dressing stones.

stone-hard (stōn'härd), a. 1. Hard as a stone; unfeeling. Shak., Rich. III., iv. 4. 227.—2†. Firm; fast.

Steken the gates ston-harde wyth stalworth barrez.
Alliterative Poems (ed. Morris), ii. 884.

stone-harmonicon (stōn'här-mon″i-kon), n. Same as lapideon and rock-harmonicon.

stone-hatch (stōn'hach), n. The ring-plover, Ægialites hiaticula: so called from nesting on shingle. See cut under Ægialites. Yarrell. [Prov. Eng.]

stone-hawk (stōn'hâk), n. Same as stone-falcon.

stone-head (stōn'hed), n. The bed-rock; the solid rock underlying the superficial detritus. [Eng.]

stone-hearted (stōn'här″ted), a. Same as stony-hearted.

Weepe, ye stone-hearted men! Oh, read and pittie!
W. Browne, Britannia's Pastorals, ii. 1.

stone-horse† (stōn'hōr), n. The common stonecrop, Sedum acre; also, S. reflexum. Britten and Holland.

stone-horse (stōn'hôrs), n. A stallion. [Obsolete or provincial.]

My grandfathers great stone-hors, flinging up his head, and jerking out his left legge.
Marston, Antonio and Mellida, II., i. 3.

stone-leek (stōn'lēk), n. Same as cibol, 2.

stone-lichen (stōn'lī″ken), n. A lichen growing upon stones or rocks, as species of Parmelia, Umbilicaria, etc. See lichen.

stone-lily (stōn'lil″i), n. A fossil crinoid; a crinite or encrinite, of a form suggesting a lily on its stem. Also called lily-encrinite. A. Geikie, Geol. Sketches, i.

stone-liverwort† (stōn'liv″ėr-wėrt), n. The plant Marchantia polymorpha.

stone-lobster (stōn'lob″stėr), n. See lobster. [Local, U. S.]

stone-lugger (stōn'lug″ėr), n. 1. A catostomoid fish of the United States, Catostomus or Hypentelium nigricans; the hog-sucker or hog-molly. Also called stone-roller and stone-toter.—2. A cyprinoid fish of the United States, Campostoma anomalum, or some other member of that genus. It is 6 or 8 inches long; in the males in spring some of the parts become fiery-red, and the head and often the whole body is studded with large rounded tubercles. It is herbivorous, and abounds in deep still places in streams from New York to Mexico.

★Also stone-roller. See cut under Campostoma.

stoneman (stōn'man), n. [< stone + dial. man, a heap of stones, < W. maen, a stone. Cf. dol- men.] A pile of rocks roughly laid together, usually on a prominent mountain-peak or -ridge, and intended to serve either as a landmark or as a record of a visit; a cairn.

stone-marten (stōn′mär″ten), n. Same as beech-marten.

stone-mason (stōn′mā″sn), n. One who dresses stones for building, or builds with them; a builder in stone.

stone-merchant (stōn′mėr″chant), n. A dealer in stones, especially building- or paving-stones.

stone-mill (stōn′mil), n. 1. A machine for breaking or crushing stone; a stone-breaker; an ore-crusher. See cut under stone-breaker. —2. A stone-dresser. See stone-dresser, 2.

stone-mint (stōn′mint), n. The American dittany. See Cunila.

stone-mortar (stōn′môr″tär), n. A form of mortar used for throwing projectiles of irregular and varying form, such as stones.

stonen (stō′nen), a. [< ME. stonen, also stenen, < AS. stǣnen, of stone, < stān, stone: see stone and *-en*².] Consisting or made of stone. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

He forsothe areride a stonen signe of worship.
Wyclif, Gen. xxxv. 14.

stone-oak (stōn′ōk), n. An oak, Quercus Javensis, found in Java and other islands: so named from its thick osseous nut, which is peculiar among acorns in being ridged, with the cupule fitting into the furrows.

stone-oil (stōn′oil), n. Rock-oil or petroleum.

stone-owl (stōn′oul), n. The Acadian or sawwhet owl, Nyctala acadica, which sometimes hides in quarries or piles of rock. See cut under Nyctala. [Pennsylvania.]

stone-parsley (stōn′pärs″li), n. The plant Sison Amomum; also, Seseli Libanotis and other species of the genus Seseli.

stonepecker (stōn′pek″ėr), n. 1. The turnstone, Strepsilas interpres. See cut under turnstone. [Local, Great Britain.] —2. The purple sandpiper, Tringa maritima, a bird of similar resorts and habits. [Shetland Islands.]

stone-pine (stōn′pīn), n. See *pine*¹, also oil-tree, 5, and pignon, 1.

stone-pit (stōn′pit), n. A pit or quarry where stones are dug.

stone-pitch (stōn′pich), n. Hard inspissated pitch.

stone-plover (stōn′pluv″ėr), n. 1. The stone-curlew, thick-kneed plover, or thick-knee, a charadriomorphic or plover-like wading bird of the family Œdicnemidæ, Œdicnemus crepitans, a common bird of Europe. See cut under Œdicnemus.—2. Hence, one of various limicoline birds of the plover and snipe families. (a) The Swiss, gray, or bullhead plover, Squatarola helvetica. See cut under Squatarola. (b) The ring-plover, Ægialites hiaticula, or the dotterel, Eudromias morinellus; a stone-runner. See cuts under Ægialites and dotterel. (c) A shore-plover of the genus Esacus, as E. recurvirostris. (d) The bar-tailed godwit, Limosa lapponica. See cut under Limosa. (e) The whimbrel, Numenius phæopus.

stone-pock (stōn′pok), n. A hard pimple which suppurates; acne.

stone-priest† (stōn′prēst), n. A lascivious priest. Grim the Collier. (Davies.) stoner (stō′nėr), n. [< stone + *-er*¹.] One who or that which stones, in any sense of that word.

stone-rag (stōn′rag), n. A lichen, Parmelia saxatilis.

stone-raw (stōn′râ), n. 1. Same as stone-rag. —2. The turnstone, Strepsilas interpres. [Armagh, Ireland.]

stonern† (stō′nėrn), a. [Var. of stonen.] Consisting or made of stone. [Scotch.]

The West Port is of stonern work, and mair decorated with architecture and the policy of bigging.
Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, ii.

stone-roller (stōn′rō″lėr), n. Same as stone-lugger.

stone-root (stōn′röt), n. See horse-balm and heal-all.

stone-rue (stōn′rö), n. The fern Asplenium Ruta-muraria. [Eng.]

stone-runner (stōn′run″ėr), n. Same as stone-plover, 2 (b). [Prov. Eng.]

stone-saw (stōn′sâ), n. A power sawing-machine for cutting marble, slate, and other stone into blocks and thin slabs suitable for use in plumbing, building, and architectural decoration. The most common type consists of a strong and massive framework supporting a gang of saw-blades set in a horizontal frame or sash and suspended by swinging bars over the block of marble to be cut. The frame, by means of suitable connections, is given a swinging, reciprocating motion across the block. The cutting blades are not strictly saws, as the cutting is done by means of sharp sand continually fed to the moving blades, the sand rapidly cutting the marble. The sand is kept continually wet by streams of water that also serve to keep the blades from becoming heated by friction. A block of marble 6 × 6 feet and 9 feet long can be cut into six or more thin slabs at one time. Circular sand-fed disks are also used in cutting small blocks of marble and in making thin slabs of slate and are called circular cutting-off saws.

Stone-saw.

stone's-cast (stōnz′kâst), n. Same as stone-cast.

stoneseed (stōn′sēd), n. A plant of the genus Lithospermum, particularly the gromwell, L. officinale and L. arvense. The name refers to the hardness of the seeds.

stone-shot (stōn′shot), n. The distance a stone can be thrown, either from a cannon or from a sling.

stone-shower (stōn′shou″ėr), n. A fall of aërolites; a meteoric shower.

stonesmickle (stōn′smik″l), n. See stonechat.

stone-snipe (stōn′snīp), n. 1. The greater telltale, greater yellowshanks, or long-legged tattler, Totanus melanoleucus, a common North American bird of the family Scolopacidæ. The length is from 13 to 14 inches, the extent 24; the bill is 2 or more inches long, the tarsus 2½. The legs are chrome-yellow; the bill is greenish-black. The upper parts are dusky, speckled with whitish; the under parts are white, streaked on the jugulum, marked on the sides, flanks, and axillars with dusky bars and arrow-heads. The tail is barred with blackish and white. The stone-snipe inhabits North America at large, breeding in high latitudes, and is chiefly seen in the United States during the migrations and in winter. It is a noisy and restless denizen of marshes, bays, and estuaries. See cut under yellowlegs. 2. Same as stone-plover, 1. Encyc. Dict.

stone-sponge (stōn′spunj), n. A lithistidan sponge: so called from the hardness. See Lithistida.

stone-squarer (stōn′skwâr″ėr), n. One who forms stones into square shapes; a stone-cutter.

And Solomon's builders and Hiram's builders did hew them, and the stonesquarers [the Gebalites, R. V.].
1 Ki. v. 18.

stone-still (stōn′stil′), a. [< ME. ston-stille; < stone + *still*¹.] Still as a stone; absolutely motionless, silent, etc. Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight (E. E. T. S.), l. 242.

stone-sturgeon (stōn′stėr″jon), n. Same as lake-sturgeon.

stone-sucker (stōn′suk″ėr), n. The lamprey; a petromyzont. [Local, Eng.]

stone-thrush (stōn′thrush), n. The mistle-thrush. [Prov. Eng.]

stone-toter (stōn′tō″tėr), n. 1. Same as stone-lugger, 1. Also toter.—2. A cyprinoid fish, Exoglossum maxillingua: a cut-lips. [Local, U. S., in both senses.]

stone-walling (stōn′wâ″ling), n. 1. The process of walling with stone; hence, walls built of stone. Encyc. Brit., II. x. 388.—2. Parliamentary obstruction by talking against time, raising technical objections, etc. [Australia.]

He is great at stone-walling tactics, and can talk against time by the hour.
Mrs. Campbell Praed, The Head Station, p. 35.

stoneware (stōn′wâr), n. Potters' ware made from clay of very silicious nature, or a composition of clay and flint. The clay is beaten in water and purified, and the flint is calcined, ground, and suspended in water, and then mixed (in various proportions for various wares) with the clay. The mixture is then dried in a kiln until it is sufficiently solid to be kneaded, and is then beaten and tempered before being molded into shape. When fired it is not porous, like common pottery, but vitrified through its whole substance in consequence of the great amount of silex contained in the prepared clay. Vessels of stoneware are generally glazed by means of common salt. The salt, being thrown (at a certain stage of the firing) into the kiln, becomes volatilized by the heat, the chlorin escaping, leaving the soda behind to form a fine thin glaze on the ware, which is of great hardness and resists ordinary acids. See grès de Flandres, under grès, and Cologne ware, under *ware*². See also articles in the supplement.

stoneweed (stōn′wēd), n. 1. Same as stone-seed.—2. The doorweed, Polygonum aviculare. Britten and Holland. [Prov. Eng.]

stonework (stōn′wėrk), n. Work consisting of stone; masons' work of stone.—Broken-range stonework. See range, n.—Crandalled stonework. See crandall.—Random, range, etc., stonework. See the qualifying words.

stone-works (stōn′wėrks), n. sing. and pl. 1. A stone-cutting establishment.—2. An establishment for the making of stoneware. Jewitt.

stonewort (stōn′wėrt), n. [< stone + *wort*¹.] 1. A plant of the genus Chara: so called from the calcareous deposits which frequently occur on the stems.—2. Sometimes, the stone-parsley, Sison Amomum.

stone-yard (stōn′yärd), n. A yard or inclosure in which stone-cutters are employed.

stong (stong), n. [A var. of *stang*¹.] An instrument with which eels are commonly taken. Richardson. [Lincolnshire, Eng.]

stonify† (stō′ni-fī), v. t.; pret. and pp. stonified, ppr. stonifying. [< stone + -i-fy.] To make stony; petrify. [Rare.]

Wilkes of stone, a shell-fish stonified.
Holland's Camden, p. 365, margin. (Davies.)

stonily (stō′ni-li), adv. In a stony manner; stiffly; harshly; frigidly.

stoniness (stō′ni-nes), n. The quality of being stony: as, the stoniness of ground or of fruit; stoniness of heart.

stonish¹† (stō′nish), a. [< stone + *-ish*¹.] Stony. Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), ii. 7.

stonish²† (ston′ish), v. t. [An aphetic form of astonish. Cf. *stony*².] Same as astonish. Shak., Venus and Adonis, l. 825.

stonishment† (ston′ish-ment), n. Same as astonishment. Spenser, F. Q., III. iv. 19.

stont†. A Middle English form of stant, stent, contraction of standeth, present indicative third person singular of stand.

stony¹ (stō′ni), a. [< ME. stony, stany, < AS. stǣnig (= OHG. MHG. steinag, G. steinig = Sw. stenig), stony, < stān, stone: see stone. Cf. AS. staniht = G. steinicht = Dan. stenet, stony.] 1. Containing stones; abounding in stone.—2. Made of stone; consisting of stone; rocky.

And some fell on stony [the rocky, R. V.] ground, where it had not much earth; and immediately it sprang up, because it had no depth of earth. Mark iv. 5.

With love's light wings did I o'er-perch these walls;
For stony limits cannot hold love out.
Shak., R. and J., ii. 2. 67.

3. Hard like stone, but not made of stone; stone-like.

The cocoa-nut with its stony shell.
Whittier, The Palm-Tree.

Specifically, in anat. and zoöl., very hard, like a stone; hard as a rock. (a) Sclerodermic or madreporarian, as corals. (b) Lithistidan, as sponges. (c) Especially thick and hard, as some opercula of shells. See sea-bean, 3. (d) Petrous or petrosal, as bone. (e) Otolithic, as concretions in the ear. See ear-bone, ear-stone, otolith. (f) Turned to stone; petrified, as a fossil.

4. Pertaining to or characteristic of stone: as, a stony quality or consistency.

Chattering stony names
Of shale and hornblende, rag and trap and tuff.
Tennyson, Princess, iii.

5. Rigid; fixed; hard, especially in a moral sense; hardened; obdurate.

Thou knowest that all these things do little or nothing move my mind—my heart, O Lord, is so stony.
J. Bradford, Works (Parker Soc., 1853), II. 257.

6. Painfully hard and cold; chilling; frigid; freezing.

The stony feare
Ran to his hart, and all his sence dismayd.
Spenser, F. Q., II. viii. 46.

Out of my stony griefs Bethel I'll raise.
Sarah F. Adams, Nearer, my God, to Thee.

He . . .
Gorgonised me from head to foot
With a stony British stare.
Tennyson, Maud, xiii.

Stony cataract, a cataract with great hardening of the lens.

stony²†, v. [< ME. stonyen, stonien; cf. *astony, stun*¹, *stound*³, and aston.] I. trans. 1. To stun.

He was stonyed of the stroke that he myght not stonde on his feet ne meve no membre that he hadde.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 265.

2. To astonish; confound.

Sothely thise wordes when I here thaym or redis tham stonyes me. Hampole, Prose Treatises (E. E. T. S.), p. 43.

II. intrans. To be or become stunned or astounded.

By land and sea, so well he him acquitte,
To speake of him I stony in my witte.
Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 296.

stony-hearted (stō′ni-här″ted), a. Hard-hearted; unfeeling; obdurate. Shak., 1 Hen. IV., ii. 2. 28.

stood (stůd). Preterit and past participle of stand.

★stook (stůk), n. [Also dial. stouk; prob. < MLG. stūke, LG. stuke, a heap or bundle, as of flax or turf, = G. stauche, a bundle, as of flax; cf. MD. styck, a chest, hamper.] A shock of corn, consisting, when of full size, of twelve sheaves. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

But stooks are cowpet wi' the blast.
Burns, Third Epistle to J. Lapraik.

Stook, twelve sheaves of corn stuck upright, their upper ends inclining towards each other like a high pitched roof. Myrc's Instructions for Parish Priests (E. E. T. S.), [Notes, p. 79.

stook (stůk), v. [< stook, n.] I. trans. To set up, as sheaves of grain, in stooks or shocks. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

Still shearing, and clearing,
The tither stooked raw [row].
Burns, To the Guidwife of Wauchope House.

II. intrans. To set up grain in stooks.

Those that binde and stooke are likewise to have 8*d.* a day, for bindinge and stookinge of winter corne is a man's labor. Best's Farming Book (1641), p. 43. (E. Peacock.) stooker (stůk'ėr), n. [< stook + -er[1].] One who sets up sheaves in stooks or shocks in the harvest-field. J. Wilson.

★stool (stöl), n. [< ME. stool, stole, stol, < AS. stōl = OS. stōl = OFries. stōl = D. stoel = MLG. stōl, LG. stol = OHG. stuol, stual, stōl, MHG. stuol, G. stuhl = Icel. stōll = Sw. Dan. stol = Goth. stōls, a seat, chair; cf. OBulg. stolŭ = Russ. stolŭ = Lith. stalas, a table, = Gr. στήλη, an upright slab (see stele[3]); from the root of stall, stell, ult. from the root of stand: see stall[1], stell, stand.] 1. A seat or chair; now, in particular, a seat, whether high or low, consisting of a piece of wood mounted usually on three or four legs, and without a back, intended for one person; also, any support of like construction used as a rest for the feet, or for the knees when kneeling.

I may nouȝte stonde ne stoupe ne with-oute a stole knele.
Piers Plowman (B), v. 394.

By sitting on the stage, you may . . . have a good stool for sixpence. Dekker, Gull's Hornbook, p. 141.

Oh! who would cast and balance at a desk,
Perch'd like a crow upon a three-legg'd stool?
Tennyson, Audley Court.

2†. The seat of a bishop; a see.

This bispryche [Salisbury] wes hwylen two bispriche; theo other stol wes at Remmesbury, . . . the other at Schireburne. Old Eng. Misc. (ed. Morris), p. 145.

3. Same as ducking-stool.

I'll speed me to the pond, where the high stool
On the long plank hangs o'er the muddy pool,
That stool, the dread of every scolding quean,
Yet sure, a lover should not die so mean.
Gay, Shepherd's Week, Wednesday, l. 107.

4. The seat used in easing the bowels; hence, a fecal evacuation; a discharge from the bowels.—5†. A frame for tapestry-work.

This woful lady lerned had in youthe
So that she werken and enbrouden couthe,
And weven in hir stole the radevore
As hit of women hath be woned yore.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 2352.

6. The root or stump of a timber-tree, or of a bush, cane, grass, etc., which throws up shoots; also, the cluster of shoots thus produced.

What is become of the remains of these ancient vineyards, as vines shoot strongly from the stoul, and are not easily eradicated? Archæologia, III. 91. (Davies.)

The male prisoners, who were besom-makers, had been seen cutting sticks in Sweethope Dene . . . a few days before, and these sticks, having been compared with some stools in that secluded wood from which cuttings had been made, were found to correspond.
North-Country Lore and Legend, II. 254.

7. The mother plant from which young plants are propagated by the process of layering. Lindley.—8. Naut.: (a) A small channel in the side of a vessel for the deadeyes of the backstays. (b†) An ornamental block placed over the stem to support a poop-lantern.—9. A movable pole or perch to which a pigeon is fastened as a lure or decoy for wild birds. See the extract under stool-pigeon, 1. Hence—10. A stool-pigeon; also, a decoy-duck.

The decoys, or stools, as they are called, are always set to windward of the blind. . . . The stools should be set in a crescent-shaped circle [about fifty of them] with the heads of the decoys pointing to the wind. Shore Birds, p. 44.

11. Material spread on the bottom for oyster-spat to cling to; set, either natural or artificial. See cultch.—Back-stool, a kind of low easy-chair.—Folding stool. See fold[1].—Office stool, a high stool made for use by persons writing at a high desk, such as are used by bookkeepers and clerks.—Stool of a window, or window-stool, in arch., the flat piece on which the sash shuts down, corresponding to the sill of a door.—Stool of repentance, in Scotland, an elevated seat in a church on which persons were formerly made to sit to receive public rebuke as a punishment for fornication or adultery. Compare cutty-stool.

What! d'ye think the lads wi' the kilts will care for yer synods, and yer presbyteries, and yer buttock-mail, and yer stool o' repentance? Scott, Waverley, xxx.

To fall between two stools, to lose, or be disappointed in, both of two things between which one is hesitating.

No one would have thought that . . . Lily was aware . . . that she was like to fall to the ground between two stools—having two lovers, neither of whom could serve her turn. Trollope, Last Chronicle of Barset, xxxv.

(See also camp-stool, footstool, night-stool, piano-stool.) stool (stöl), v. [< stool, n.] I. intrans. 1. To throw up shoots from the root, as a grass or a grain-plant; form a stool. See stool, n., 6.

I worked very hard in the copse of young ash with my bill-hook and a shearing knife, cutting out the saplings where they stooled too close together.
R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, xxxviii.

2. To decoy duck or other fowl by means of stools. [U. S.]

For wet stooling, the wooden ones [decoys] are preferable, as the tin ones soon rust and become worthless.
Shore Birds, p. 45.

3. To be decoyed; respond to a decoy. [U. S.]

They [widgeons] stool well to any shoal-water duck decoys, and answer their call. Sportsman's Gazetteer, p. 206.

4. To evacuate the bowels.

II. trans. To plow; cultivate. [Prov. Eng.]—To stool turfs, to set turfs two and two, one against the other, to be dried by the wind. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

stool-ball (stöl'bâl), n. An outdoor game of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, generally played by women alone, but sometimes in company with men. See second quotation.

Daugh. Will you go with me?
Wooer. What shall we do there, wench?
Daugh. Why, play at stool-ball.
Fletcher (and another), Two Noble Kinsmen, v. 2.

Stool-Ball. This game, so often mentioned in old writers, is still played in almost every village in Sussex, and is for ladies and girls exactly what cricket is to men. Two pieces of board 18 inches by 12 are fixed to two sticks from 3 to 4 feet high, according to the age of the players. These sticks are stuck in the ground sloping a little backwards, and from 10 to 15 yards apart. The players take sides, generally eight to ten each. . . . The bowler pitches the ball at the board, which in fact is the wicket. If he hits it the player is out. The same is the case if the ball is caught; and the running out, stumping, &c., are exactly like cricket. N. and Q., 3d ser., XI. 457.

stool-end (stöl'end), n. In mining, a part of rock left unworked for the purpose of supporting the rest.

★stool-pigeon (stöl'pij″ọn), n. 1. A pigeon fastened to a stool, and used as a decoy.

The Stool-Pigeon, also, as familiar to English ears as to ours, exists here—and even in the Eastern States—still in both its primary signification and its figurative extension. In the former it means the pigeon, with its eyes stitched up, fastened on a stool, which can be moved up and down by the hidden fowler, an action which causes the bird to flutter anxiously. This attracts the passing flocks of wild pigeons, which alight and are caught by a net, which may be sprung over them.
De Vere, Americanisms, p. 210.

Hence—2. A person employed as a decoy: as, a stool-pigeon for a gambling-house: such a fellow is generally a "rook" who pretends to be a "pigeon." See pigeon, 2, and rook[1], 3.

stoom (stöm), n. and v. Same as stum.

stoop[1] (stöp), v. [Formerly and still dial. stoup; < ME. stoupen, stowpen, stupen, < AS. stūpian = MD. stuypen = Icel. stūpa (very rare), stoop, = Norw. stupa, fall, drop, = Sw. stupa, dial. stjupa, fall, drop, tr. lower, incline, tilt; akin to steep[1]: see steep[1], and cf. steep[2]. The reg. mod. form from AS. stūpian is stoup (pron. stoup), as in dialectal use. The retention of or reversion to the orig. AS. vowel-sound ō occurs also in room (< AS. rūm) (and in wound (as pron. wönd), < AS. wund).] I. intrans. 1. To bend; bow; incline; especially, of persons, to lower the body by bending forward and downward.

He hit on his helme with a heuy sword,
That greuit hym full gretly, gert hym to stoupe.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 7256.

The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light.
Shak., Venus and Adonis, l. 1028.

How sweetly does this fellow take his dowst!
Stoops like a camel!
Fletcher (and another?), Nice Valour, iv. 1.

2. To be bent or inclined from the perpendicular; specifically, to carry the head and shoulders habitually bowed forward from the upright line of the rest of the body.

A good leg will fall; a straight back will stoop; a black beard will turn white. Shak., Hen. V., v. 2. 168.

Tall trees stooping or soaring in the most picturesque variety. George Eliot, Felix Holt, xxiii.

3. To come down; descend.

The cloud may stoop from heaven and take the shape,
With fold to fold, of mountain or of cape.
Tennyson, Princess, vi. (song).

4. Specifically, to swoop upon prey or quarry, as a hawk; pounce.

As I am a gentleman,
I'll meet next cocking, and bring a haggard with me
That stoops as free as lightning.
Tomkis (?), Albumazar, iii. 5.

Here stands my dove; stoop at her if you dare.
B. Jonson, Alchemist, v. 3.

5. To condescend; deign: especially expressing a lowering of the moral self, and generally followed by an infinitive or the preposition to.

Is Religion a beggarly and contemptible thing, that it doth not become the greatness of your minds to stoop to take any notice of it? Stillingfleet, Sermons, I. v.

Frederic, indeed, stooped for a time even to use the language of adulation. Macaulay, Frederic the Great.

6. To yield; submit; succumb.

Thus hath the Field and the Church stouped to Mahomet.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 242.

I will make thee stoop, thou abject.
B. Jonson, Every Man out of his Humour, v. 3.

II. trans. 1. To bend downward; bow.

Myself . . .
Have stoop'd my neck under your injuries.
Shak., Rich. II., iii. 1. 19.

She stooped her by the runnel's side.
Scott, Marmion, vi. 30.

2. To incline; tilt: as, to stoop a cask. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]—3. To bring or take down; lower, as a flag or a sail.

Nor, with that Consul join'd, Vespasian could prevail
In thirty several fights, nor make them stoop their sail.
Drayton, Polyolbion, viii. 212.

4. To put down; abase; submit; subject.

I will stoop and humble my intents
To your well-practised wise directions.
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., v. 2. 120.

5. To cast down; prostrate; overthrow; overcome.

You have found my spirit; try it now, and teach me
To stoop whole kingdoms.
Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, i. 1.

6†. To swoop or pounce down upon.

The hawk that first stooped my pheasant is killed by the spaniel that first sprang all of our side.
Webster and Dekker, Northward Hoe, v. 1.

7. To steep; macerate. [Prov. Eng.]

stoop[1] (stöp), n. [< stoop[1], v.] 1. The act of stooping or bending down; hence, a habitual bend of the back or shoulders: as, to walk with a stoop.

Now observe the stoops,
The bendings, and the falls.
B. Jonson, Sejanus, i. 1.

His clumsy figure, which a great stoop in his shoulders, and a ludicrous habit he had of thrusting his head forward, by no means redeemed.
Dickens, Martin Chuzzlewit, ii.

2. The darting down of a bird on its prey; a swoop; a pounce.

Once a kite, hovering over the garden, made a stoop at me. Swift, Gulliver's Travels, ii. 5.

Hence—3†. That which stoops or swoops; a hawk. [Rare.]

You glorious martyrs, you illustrious stoops,
That once were cloister'd in your fleshly coops.
Quarles, Emblems, v. 10.

4. A descent from superiority, dignity, or power; a condescension, concession, or submission: as, a politic stoop.

Can any loyal subject see
With patience such a stoop from sovereignty?
Dryden.

To give the stoop†, to stoop; submit; yield.

O that a king should give the stoop to such as these.
Ep. Hacket, Abp. Williams, ii. 186. (Davies.)

stoop[2], stoup[2] (stöp, stoup), n. [< ME. stop, stope, appar. a var. (due to confusion with the related ME. stoppe, < AS. stoppa: see stop[2]) of stepe, steap, < AS. steáp, a cup, = MD. stoop, a cup, vessel, D. stoop, a measure of about two quarts, = MLG. stōp, a cup, vessel, also a measure, LG. stoop, a measure, = OHG. stouf, stouph, MHG. stouf, G. stauf, a cup, = Icel. staup, a cup, = Sw. stop (< D. or LG.), a measure of about three pints; also in dim. form, MHG. stubechin, G. stübchen, a gallon, measure; prob. ult. identical with Icel. staup, a lump (orig. meaning something cast), hence a vessel of metal, etc., from the verb represented by Icel. steypa = Sw. stöpa = Dan. støbe, cast (metals), pour out (liquids), E. steep: see steep[2]. The spelling stoup is partly Sc., and in the Sc. pron. stoup is prob. of Icel. origin.] 1. A drinking-vessel; a beaker; a flagon; a tankard; a pitcher.

Fetch me a stoupe of liquor.
Shak. (folio 1623), Hamlet, v. 1. 68.

Hence—2. Liquor for drinking, especially wine, considered as the contents of a stoop: as, he tossed off his stoop.

He took his rouse with stoups of Rhenish wine.
Marlowe, Doctor Faustus, [iii. 4.

3. A basin for holy water, usually placed in a niche or against the wall or a pillar at the entrance of Roman Catholic churches: also used in private houses. In the Greek Church it is called a colymbion or hagiasmateron. In this sense usually written stoup. Sometimes also called by the French name bénitier, and formerly holy-water stock, holy-water stone.

Holy-water Stoup.—Church of San Miniato, Florence.

stoop[3] (stöp), n. [Derived from D. usage in New York; < D. stoep, a stoop (een hooge stoep, a high stoop), MD. stoepe, a stoop, a bench at the door, = OS. stōpo = OHG. stuofa, MHG. stuofe, G. stufe, a step, guide; a doublet of stope, lit. a step, and from the root of step (AS. stapan, steppan, pret. stōp): see step.] An uncovered platform before the entrance of a house, raised, and approached by means of steps. Sometimes incorrectly used for porch or veranda. [U. S.; originally New York.]

Stoop.—Van Rensselaer House, at Greenbush, New York.

Nearly all the houses [in Albany] were built with their gables to the street, and each had heavy wooden Dutch stoops with seats at its door. J. F. Cooper, Satanstoe, xi.

They found him [Stuyvesant], according to custom, smoking his afternoon pipe on the stoop, or bench at the porch of his house. Irving, Knickerbocker, p. 297.

stoop[4] (stöp), n. [Also stoup; a var. of stulp.] 1†. The stock or stem, as of a tree; the stump.

It may be known, hard by an ancient stoop,
Where grew an oak in elder days, decay'd.
Tancred and Gismunda, iv. 2.

2. A post or pillar; specifically, an upright post used to mark distance, etc., on a race-course.

Stoulpe, before a doore, souche. Palsgrave.

Carts or waines are debarred and letted [by coaches]: the milk-maid's ware is often spilt in the dirt, . . . being crowded and shrowded up against stalls and stoopes.
John Taylor, Works, ii. 242. (Bartlett.)

And 'twere well to have a flag at the ending stoup of each heat to be let down as soon as the first horse is past the stoup. Quoted in N. and Q., 7th ser., VI. 421.

3. An upright support; a prop or column; specifically, in coal-mining, a pillar of coal left to support the roof.—4. Figuratively, a sustainer; a patron.

Dalhousie, of an auld descent,
My chief, my stoup, and ornament.
Ramsay, Poems, II. 367. (Jamieson.)

[Prov. Eng. and Scotch in all uses.]

Stoop and room, a method of mining coal in use in Scotland, differing but little from the pillar and breast method. See pillar.—Stoop and roop. [Also stoup and roup; a riming formula, of which the literal or original meaning is not obvious; explained by Jamieson as for stump and rump.] The whole of everything; every jot: often used adverbially.

"But the stocking, Hobbie?" said John Elliot; "we're utterly ruined. . . . We are ruined stoop and roop."
Scott, Black Dwarf, x.

Stoop and thirl. Same as stoop and room. N. and Q., 7th ser., VI. 264.

stooped (stö'ped or stöpt), a. [< stoop[1] + -ed[2].] Having a stoop in posture or carriage; round-shouldered; bent.

The college witticism that "——— and ———" (another highly esteemed university dignitary) "are the stoopedest men in New Haven." The Atlantic, LXIV. 557.

stooper (stö'pėr), n. [< stoop[1] + -er[1].] One who or that which stoops.

stooping (stö'ping), p. a. 1. Leaning; bending forward and downward; hence, bent; bowed: as, stooping shoulders; a stooping figure.—2†. Yielding; submissive.

A stooping kind of disposition, clean opposite to contempt. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, vii. 24.

3. In her., swooping or flying downward as if about to strike its prey: noting a hawk used as a bearing. Also spelled stouping.

stoopingly (stö'ping-li), adv. In a stooping manner or position; with a bending of the body forward. Sir H. Wotton, Reliquiæ, p. 260.

stoop-shouldered (stöp'shōl'dėrd), a. Having a habitual stoop in the shoulders and back.

stoor[1] (stör), a. [Also stour; early mod. E. also stoore; Sc. stour, stoure, sture, < ME. stoor, store, stor, < AS. stōr = OFries. stōr = Icel. stōrr = Dan. Sw. stor, great, large.] 1. Great; large; strong; mighty.

He was store man of strenght, stoutest in armes.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 3743.

On a grene hille he sawe a tre,
The savoure of hit was stronge & store.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 101.

2. Stiff; hard; harsh.

Stoure, rude as course clothe is, gros. Palsgrave.

Now, to look on the feathers of all manner of birds, you shall see some so low, weak, and short, some so coarse, stoore, and hard, and the ribs so brickle, thin, and narrow, that it can neither be drawn, pared, nor yet will set on.
Ascham, Toxophilus (ed. 1864), p. 123.

3. Austere; harsh; severe; violent; turbulent: said of persons or their words or actions.

O stronge lady stoore, what dost thow?
Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, l. 1123.

Thenne ho gef hym god-day, & wyth a glent lazed,
& as ho stod, ho stonyed hym wyth ful stor wordez.
Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight (E. E. T. S.), l. 1291.

Stowre of conversacyon, estourdy. Palsgrave.

4. Harsh; deep-toned. Halliwell.

[Obsolete or provincial in all uses.]

stoor[2] (stör), v. [Also stour; < ME. storen, < AS. as if stōrian*, a var. of stȳrian = MLG. stōren, etc., move, stir: see stir[1] and steer[3], doublets of stoor[2].] I. intrans. 1. To move; stir. Halliwell. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

Loke ye store not of that stedd, Whedur y be quyck or dedd.
MS. Cantab. Ff. ii. 38, f. 191. (Halliwell.)

2. To move actively; keep stirring. [Prov. Eng.]—3. To rise up in clouds, as smoke, dust, etc. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

II. trans. 1. To stir up, as liquor. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.] Hence—2. To pour; especially, to pour leisurely out of any vessel held high. [Scotch.]—3. To sprinkle. Jamieson. [Scotch.]

stoor[2] (stör), n. [Also stour; < stoor[2], v. Cf. stir[1], n. In some senses confused in the spelling stour with stour[3].] 1. Stir; bustle; agitation; contention. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

An infinite cockneydom of stoor and din.
Carlyle, in Froude, i. 161.

2. Dust in motion; hence, also, dust at rest. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

Our ancient crown 's fa'n in the dust—
De'il blin' them wi' the stoure o't.
Burns, Awa', Whigs, Awa'.

3. A gush of water. Jamieson; Halliwell (under stour, stowre). [Scotch.]—4. Spray. [Scotch.]—5. A sufficient quantity of yeast for brewing. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

stoor[3]†, n. A Middle English form of store[3].

stoorey (stö'ri), n. [Cf. stoor[2], n., 5.] A mixture of warm beer and oatmeal stirred up with sugar. [Prov. Eng.]

stoorness† (stör'nes), n. [Also stourness; < ME. stowrnes, stowrenes; < stoor[1] + -ness.] Strength; power.

And Troiell, the tru knight, trayturly he slogh, Noght thurgh stowrenes of strokes, ne with strenght one.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 10345.

stoory (stö'ri), a. [Also stoury, stowry; < stoor[2], n., 2, + -y[1].] Dusty. [Scotch.]

An aye she took the tither souk,
To drouk the stowrie tow.
Burns, I Bought my Wife a Stane of Lint.

stooth (stöth), n. [Early mod. E. stothe; prob. < Icel. stoth = Sw. stod, a post: cf. AS. studu, > ME. stode, E. stud, a post, etc.: see stud[1].] A stud; a post; a batten. [Obsolete or provincial.]

For settinge in ij. stothes and mendyng the wall of the receiver's chalmer over the stare.
Howden Roll (1552), in Fabric Rolls of York Minster, [p. 355. (E. Peacock.) stooth (stöth), v. t. [< stooth, n.] To lath and plaster. Halliwell; Jamieson. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

stoothing (stö'thing), n. [< stooth + -ing[1], or a var. of studding, accom. to stooth.] Studding; battening.

stop[1] (stop), v.; pret. and pp. stopped, ppr. stopping. [< ME. stoppen, stoppien, < AS. stoppian (in comp. for-stoppian), stop up, = OS. stuppōn = MD. D. stoppen = MLG. LG. stoppen, stuff, cram, = OHG. stoffōn, stoppōn, MHG. G. stopfen, stoppen = Icel. Sw. stoppa = Dan. stoppe, stop. (a) According to the usual view, = OF. estouper, F. étouper = CSp. estopar = It. stoppare, stop up with tow, < LL. stupare, stuppare, stop up with tow, cram, stop, < L. stupa, stuppa = Gr. στύπη, στύππη, coarse part of flax, hards, oakum, tow: see stupa, stupe[1]. (b) But this explanation, which suits phonetically, is on grounds of meaning somewhat doubtful; it does not appear from the early instances of the verb that the sense 'stop with tow,' 'stuff,' is the original. The similarity with the L. and Rom. forms may be accidental, and the Teut. verb may be different (though mingled with the other), and connected with OHG. stophōn, MHG. stupfen, stüpfen, pierce, and so ult. with E. stump. Cf. stuff, v., derived, through the F., from the same Teut. source.] I. trans. 1. To close up, as a hole, passage, or cavity, by filling, stuffing, plugging, or otherwise obstructing; block up; choke: as, to stop a vent or a channel.

Ther is an eddre thet is y-hote ine latin aspis, thet is of zuiche kende thet hi stoppeth thet on eare mid erthe, and thet other mid hare tayle, thet hi ne yhere thane charmere.
Ayenbite of Inwyt (E. E. T. S.), p. 257.

Imperious Cæsar, dead, and turn'd to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away.
Shak., Hamlet, v. 1. 237.

Mountains of ice, that stop the imagined way,
Beyond Petsora eastward, to the rich Cathaian coast. Milton, P. L., x. 291.

2. To make close or tight; close with or as with a compressible substance, or a lid or stopper: as, to stop a bottle with a cork; hence, to stanch.

The eldest and wysest at Geball were they that mended and stopped thy shippes. Bible of 1551, Ezek. xxvii. 9.

Have by some surgeon, Shylock, on your charge,
To stop his wounds, lest he do bleed to death.
Shak., M. of V., iv. 1. 258.

Children yet
Unborn will stop their ears when thou art nam'd.
Beau. and Fl., Laws of Candy, v. 1.

This place [a Maronite convent] is famous for excellent wine, which they preserve, as they do in all these parts, in large earthen jars, close stopped down with clay.
Pococke, Description of the East, II. i. 103.

3. To shut up; inclose; confine.

Forthi yf combes ronke of hony weep,
Three dayes stopped up afte home hem [bees] keep.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 138.

Whatever spirit . . . leaves the fair at large Shall feel sharp vengeance soon o'ertake his sins,
Be stopp'd in vials, or transfix'd with pins.
Pope, R. of the L., ii. 126.

4. To hinder from progress or procedure; cause to cease moving, going, acting, working, or the like; impede; check; head off; arrest: as, to stop a car; to stop a ball; to stop a clock; to stop a thief.

"How dare you stop my errand?" he says;
"My orders you must obey."
Child Noryce (Child's Ballads, II. 41).

Did they exert themselves to help onward the great movement of the human race, or to stop it?
Macaulay, Sir J. Mackintosh.

5. To hold back, as from a specified course, purpose, end, or the like; restrain; hinder: followed by from (obsolete or dialectal of).

No man shall stop me of this boasting. 2 Cor. xi. 10.

Thus does he poison, kill, and slay, . . .
Yet stops me o' my lawfu' prey.
Burns, Death and Dr. Hornbook.

6. To prevent the continuance of; suppress; extinguish; bring to an end: as, to stop a leak.

Thei putten here hondes upon his mouthe, and stoppen his Brethe, and so thei sleen him.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 201.

If there be any love to my deservings
Borne by her virtuous self, I cannot stop it.
Beau. and Fl., Knight of Burning Pestle, i. 1.

7. To check or arrest by anticipation.

The grief . . . that stops his answer.
Shak., Lucrece, l. 1664.

Every bold sinner, when about to engage in the commission of any known sin, should . . . stop the execution of his purpose with this question: Do I believe that God has denounced death to such a practice, or do I not?
South. (Johnson.)

8. To keep back; withhold.

Do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair?
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., v. 1. 24.

Nor stops, for one bad cork, his butler's pay.
Pope, Imit. of Horace, II. ii. 63.

9. To cease from; discontinue; bring to a stop.

When the crickets stopped their cry,
When the owls forbore a term,
You heard music; that was I.
Browning, Serenade at the Villa.

10. In musical instruments: (a) Of the lute and viol classes, to press (a string) with the finger so as to shorten its vibrating length, and thus raise the pitch of the tone produced from it. (b) Of the wind group generally, to close (a finger-hole in the tube) so as to change the nodes of the vibrating column of air, and thus alter the pitch of the tone. (c) Of wind-instruments of the trumpet class, to insert the hand into (the bell) so as to shorten the length of the vibrating column of air, and thus to raise the pitch of the tone.—11. Naut., to make fast with a small line: as, to stop a line to a harpoon-staff.—12. To put the stops, or marks of punctuation, in; point, as a written composition; punctuate.

If his sentences were properly stopped.
Landor. (Imp. Dict.)

13. In masonry, plastering, etc., to point or dress over (an imperfect or damaged place in a wall) by covering it with cement or plaster.—14. In hort., same as top[1], v. t., 8.

After the end of July it is not advisable to continue the topping—technically stopping—of the young shoots.
Encyc. Brit., XII. 254.

15. To ward off; parry. [Pugilistic slang.]—A stopping oyster†. See oyster.—Stopping the glass. See glass.—To stop a gap. See gap.—To stop a line. See line[2].—To stop down a lens, in photog., etc., to reduce the amount of light admitted through a lens by using stops or diaphragms. See stop[1], n., 12.—To stop off. (a) In founding, to fill in (a part of a mold) with sand to prevent metal from running into that part when the casting is made. The form of the casting can frequently be thus changed without the expense of altering a pattern or making a new pattern. (b) In galvanoplastic operations, to apply a varnish to (parts of a plate or object), to prevent the deposit of metal upon the varnished parts during immersion in the gilding or electroplating solution.—To stop one's mouth, to silence one; especially, to silence one by a sop or bribe.

Let repentance stop your mouth;
Learn to redeem your fault.
Ford, Lover's Melancholy, iv. 1.

If you would have her silent, stop her mouth with that ring. Wycherley, Gentleman Dancing-Master, v. 1.

To stop out. (a) In the arts, to protect (a surface, etc.) from chemical or other action by covering with a coating: as, in photography, to cover with paint, paper, etc., as parts of a negative which are not to be printed; in electrotyping, to cover with wax, as parts of the black-leaded mold, to prevent the deposit of copper on those parts; in etching, to cover with a varnish or other resisting composition, as parts of a plate which are not to be bitten by the acid. (b) Theat., to cover (some of the teeth) with black wax, so as to make them invisible.=Syn. 1 and 4. To interrupt, block, blockade, barricade, intercept, end.—9. To suspend, intermit.

II. intrans. 1. To check one's self; leave off; desist; stay; halt; come to a stand or stop, as in walking, speaking, or any other action or procedure.

Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my task?
Shak., 3 Hen. VI., iii. 2. 52.

Terence . . . always judiciously stops short before he comes to the downright pathetic.
Goldsmith, Sentimental Comedy.

No rattling wheels stop short before these gates.
Cowper, Task, iv. 144.

2. To discontinue; come to an end; cease to be: as, the noise stopped; an annuity stops.—3. To make a halt or a stay of longer or shorter duration; tarry; remain.

We . . . went about half a mile to the east of Tortura, not designing to stop there.
Pococke, Description of the East, II. i. 60.

Mr. Brontë and old Tabby went to bed. . . . But Charlotte . . . stopped up . . . till her weak eyes failed to read or to sew. Mrs. Gaskell, Charlotte Brontë, II. 121.

"I would rather stop abed," said I; "what have I to do with fighting?" R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, lxiv.

I've been up country some weeks, stopping with my mother. S. O. Jewett, Deephaven, p. 17.

4. To intercept, ward off, or parry a blow. [Pugilistic slang.]

Don't stop with your head too frequently.
A. L. Gordon, In Utrumque Paratus.

To stop off or over, to make a brief or incidental stay at some point in the course of a journey; lie off or over: also used as a noun or an adjective: as, a stop-over check; the ticket allows a stop-off in Chicago. [Colloq.]—To stop out, to stay out all night, as in the streets, or away from one's proper lodging-place.

Mr. Hall, at Bow-street, only says, "Poor boy, let him go" But it 's only when we've done nothink but stop out that he says that.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, II. 563.

★ stop[1] (stop), n. [< stop, v.] 1. The act of stopping, in any sense. (a) A filling or closing up.

A breach that craves a quick expedient stop!
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iii. 1. 288.

(b) An impeding or hindering; obstruction; stoppage.

What 's he? One sent,
I feare, from my dead mother, to make stop
Of our intended voyage. Brome, Antipodes, i. 7.

(c) A pause; a stand; a halt.

When he took leave now, he made a hundred stops,
Desir'd an hour, but half an hour, a minute.
Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, iii. 1.

Mrs. Crummles advancing with that stage walk which consists of a scride and a stop alternately.
Dickens, Nicholas Nickleby, xxv.

(d) Termination; ending.

How kingdoms sprung, and how they made their stop,
I well observed. J. Beaumont, Psyche, ii. 49.

(e) A stay; a tarrying.

Coming to the Corner above Bethlehem Gate, [we] made a stop there, in order to expect the return of our Messenger. Maundrell, Aleppo to Jerusalem, p. 67.

2†. A state of hesitation or uncertainty; a standstill.

At which sudden question, Martius was a little at a stop.
Bacon, Holy War.

3. That which stops or hinders; especially, an obstacle or impediment; specifically, a weir.

He that is used to go forward, and findeth a stop, falleth out of his own favour. Lacon, Lmpire (ed. 1887).

What they called stops . . . were in effect wears or kidels.
Sir J. Hawkins, in Walton's Complete Angler, p. 274, note.

4. In musical instruments: (a) Of the lute and viol classes, a pressure on a string so as to shorten its vibrating length, and raise the pitch of its tone. (b) Of wind-instruments, the closing of a finger-hole in the tube so as to alter the pitch of its tone. (c) Of wind-instruments of the trumpet class, the inserting of the hand into the bell so as to raise the pitch of the tone.—5. Any lever or similar device for thus stopping a string or finger-hole.

His jesting spirit, which is now crept into a lute-string and now governed by stops. Shak., Much Ado, iii. 2. 62.

In every instrument are all tunes to him that has the skill to find out the stops. Brome, Sparagus Garden, iii. 4.

6. In an organ, a graduated set of pipes of the same kind, and giving tones of the same quality. A complete stop has at least one pipe for each digital of the keyboard to which it belongs; if a stop has less it is called a partial stop; if more, it is called a compound stop or mixture-stop. The number of pipes constituting a stop varies according to the compass of the keyboard to which it belongs, the usual number being now sixty-one for manual keyboards, and either twenty-seven or thirty for pedal keyboards, while mixture-stops have between twice and five times as many. Stops are variously classified, as follows: (a) As to general quality of tone, the principal qualities recognized being the organ-tone (as in the open diapason, the octave, the fifteenth, etc.), the flute-tone (as in the bourdon, the stopped diapason, the melodia, the flute, etc.), the string-tone (as in the viol da gamba, the violina, the dulciana, etc.), and the reed-tone (as in the oboe, the clarinet, the trumpet, etc.). The first three groups are also called flue-stops, and the last reed-stops, from the construction of their pipes (see pipe[1], 2). (b) As to the pitch of the tones relative to the digitals used, the two classes being foundation- and mutation-stops, of which the former give tones exactly corresponding to the normal pitch of the digitals, while the latter give tones distant from that pitch by some fixed interval, like one, two, or three octaves, or even a twelfth. Foundation-stops are usually called eight-feet stops, because the length of an open pipe sounding the second C below middle C is approximately eight feet; while for an analogous reason mutation-stops sounding an octave below the normal pitch of the digitals are called sixteen-feet stops; those sounding the octave above, four-feet stops; those sounding the second octave above, two-feet stops, etc. The specific names of stops are not only numerous, but often vary without sufficient reason. Some names have a merely technical significance, as diapason, principal, etc.; some indicate the instrument which they are intended to imitate, as flute, trumpet, violoncello, etc.; while others mark the extent of the mutation produced, as octave, twelfth, quint, etc. Each partial organ has its own stops, which can be sounded only by means of the digitals of its own keyboard. The pipes of a stop are usually arranged in a transverse row on the wind-chest, the order of disposition, or plantation, varying somewhat. Under them, and between the upper and middle boards of the chest, is a movable strip of wood called a slider, which (together with both these boards) is perforated with holes corresponding to the plantation of the pipes. The position of the slider is controlled through a system of levers by a handle near the keyboard called a register, stop-knob, or stop. When this handle is pulled out or drawn, the holes of the slider are coincident with those of the two boards, so that the air can pass freely from the pallets into the pipes; when the handle is pushed in, the holes of the slider are not coincident with those of the two boards, and communication between the pallets and the pipes is cut off. In the one case the stop is said to be "on," in the other "off." When the slider controlling the use of the upper pipes of a stop is separated from that controlling the lower, the stop is called divided. Since the handles controlling the use of the pipes or stops proper are made of the same general shape as those controlling various mechanical appliances, like couplers, the former are also called sounding or speaking stops, in distinction from the latter, or mechanical stops. Stops whose quality or power of tone is decidedly individual, so as to fit them for the performance of solo melodies, are called solo stops. See organ, reed-organ, pipe, etc.

The pathetic stop of Petrarch's poetical organ was one he could pull out at pleasure.
Lowell, Among my Books, 1st ser., p. 368.

7. Same as stop-knob.—8. pl. In the harpsichord, handles controlling levers by which the position of the jacks could be varied so as to alter the force or quality of the tones produced.—9. A mark to indicate a stop or pause in reading; a mark of punctuation.

I can write fast and fair,
Most true orthography, and observe my stops.
Middleton, More Dissemblers besides Women, iii. 2.

Who walked so slowly, talked in such a hurry,
And with such wild contempt for stops and Lindley Murray!
C. S. Calverley, Isabel.

10. In joinery, one of the pieces of wood nailed on the frame of a door to form the recess or rebate into which the door shuts.—11. Naut.: (a) A projection at the head of a lower mast, supporting the trestletrees. (b) A bit of small line used to lash or fasten anything temporarily: as, hammock-stops, awning-stops.—12. In optics, a perforated diaphragm inserted between the two combinations of a double lens, or placed in front of a single lens, to intercept the extreme rays that disturb the perfection of the image. The practical effect of the stop is to increase the depth of the focus and sharpness of definition, but to diminish the illumination in the exact ratio of the diameter of the stop to that of the lens, and hence, in photography, to increase correspondingly the necessary time of exposure.

Microscopes, in which, whatever be the size of the lens itself, the greater portion of its surface is rendered inoperative by a stop. W. B. Carpenter, Micros., § 10.

13. In bookbinding, a small circular finishing-tool used by bookbinders to stop a line or fillet at its intersection with another line.—14. In lace-manuf. (in the application of the Jacquard attachment described under loom, 2, to a lace-frame), a point at which the different sets of warp-threads are concentrated or brought to a sort of focus, and which in the design of a pattern is taken as a basis for measurement in determining the distances the respective threads in the set must be moved to form the desired pattern. The movements of the mechanism are adjusted in accordance with these measurements.—15. In phonetics, an alphabetic sound involving a complete closure of the mouth-organs; a mute; a check.—16. The concavity of a dog's face, marking the division between forehead and muzzle.—17. In fencing, the action whereby a fencer, instead of parrying a blow and then thrusting, allows a careless opponent to run on his sword-point. He may hasten the stop by extending the sword-arm. (See stop-thrust.) The stop is discouraged in fencing as a game, since much use of it shortens the passages, and destroys combinations of feints, disengagements, coupés, etc.—Double stop. See single stop.—Full stop. (a) A period. (b) In lute-playing: (1) A chord followed by a pause. (2) A chord in producing which all the strings are stopped by the fingers.—Geneva stop. See Geneva movement, under movement.—Half-stop, in an organ, a stop which contains half, or about half, the full number of stops.—Harmonic stop. See harmonic.—Incomplete or imperfect stop. See incomplete.—Open stop, in organ-building, a stop whose pipes are open at the upper end.—Pedal stop. See pedal.—Service stop, in railroading, a stop made by a railway-train, in the regular way and at stations designated by the regulation schedule, as distinguished from an emergency stop.—Single stop, in ship-building, the scoring down of the carlines between the beams, by which means a carline is prevented from sinking any lower than its intended position. The double stop is generally used for deeper carlines than the single stop.—To hunt upon the stop†, to hunt with or like a stop-hound—that is, slowly and with frequent pauses; hence, to be lukewarm.

If any [Christian] step a little forward, do not the rest hunt upon the stop? Rev. S. Ward, Sermons, p. 91.

To put a stop to, to cause to stop, temporarily or permanently; break off; end.=Syn. 1. Stop, Cessation, Stay, Suspension, Intermission, Pause, Rest. These words may denote the failure or interruption of forward motion or of activity. Stop is an energetic word, but the most general: it is opposed to going forward or going on; cessation may be temporary or final, and is opposed to continuance; a stay is a stop viewed as a lingering or delay: as, a short stay in the place; or, as a legal term, simply a stop: as, a stay of proceedings; suspension is a complete but presumably temporary stop: as, a suspension of work or pay; intermission is a strictly temporary stop; pause is a brief stop, in full expectation of going on; rest is a stop for refreshment from weariness.

stop[2] (stop), n. [< ME. stoppe, < AS. stoppa, a bucket or pail: see stoop[2].] A bucket; a pail; a small well-bucket; a milk-pail. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

stop[3]†, n. A Middle English form of stoop[2].

stop-cock (stop'kok), n. A faucet with a valve of some form, operated by a handle: used to open or close a pipe or passage for water, gas, etc. Such cocks are sometimes made self-closing, to prevent waste.

stop-collar (stop'kol'ăr), n. In mach., an adjustable collar which can be placed and held by a set-screw on a shaft or rod as a stop or gage to limit the motion of a movable part sliding on the rod or shaft, as a fitting on the main shaft on which the carriage of a typewriter slides, and adjustments in many other machines.

stop-cylinder (stop′sil″in-dėr), n. In printing. See cylinder-press and printing-machine.

stop-drill (stop′dril), n. A form of drill made with a solid shoulder, or admitting of the attachment of a collar by a side-screw, to limit the depth of penetration of the tool.

stope[1] (stōp), n. [< ME. stope* = MD. stoepe, etc., a step; or a var. of stape, stap, a step (cf. stopen, stope, stapen, pp. of steppen): see step, and cf. stoop[3].] An excavation made in a mine to remove the ore which has been rendered accessible by the shafts and drifts. These are, to a certain extent, permanent constructions, being carefully supported by the necessary timbering and left open for passage, while the stopes are only supported so far as may be necessary for the safety of the mine, and are more or less completely filled up with the attle or refuse rock left behind after the ore has been picked out and sent to the surface.

stope[1] (stōp), v. t. and i.; pret. and pp. stoped, ppr. stoping. [< stope[1], n.] In mining, to remove the contents of a vein. The stoping is done after a vein or lode has been laid open by means of the necessary shafts and drifts. See stoping.

stope[2]† (stōp), n. An obsolete form of stoop[2].

stope[3]†, stopent. Middle English forms of stapen, past participle of step.

stop-finger (stop′fing″gėr), n. Same as faller-wire, 2.

stop-gap (stop′gap), n. and a. [< stop[1], v., + obj. gap.] I. n. That which fills a gap or hiatus, or, figuratively, that which serves as an expedient in an emergency.

I declare off; you shall not make a stop-gap of me.
Foote, The Cozeners, i. 1.

A good deal of conversation which is . . . introduced as a stop-gap. Proc. Eng. Soc. Psych. Research, XVII. 450.

II. a. Filling a gap or pause, as in the course of talk.

The "well's" and "ah's," "don't-you-know's," and other stop-gap interjections.
Proc. Amer. Soc. Psych. Research, I. 312.

★ stop-gate (stop′gāt), n. A gate used to divide a canal into sections, so that in case of a break in an embankment in one section the water can be shut off from flowing into it from other sections.

stop-hound (stop′hound), n. A dog trained to hunt slowly, stopping at the huntsman's signal. Davies (under stop).

Sir Roger, being at present too old for fox-hunting, to keep himself in action, has disposed of his beagles and got a pack of stop-hounds. Budgell, Spectator, No. 116.

★ stoping (stō′ping), n. [Verbal n. of stope[1], v.] In mining, the act of excavating mineral ground to remove the ore after this has been rendered accessible by the necessary preliminary excavations—namely, sinking one or more shafts or winzes and running drifts.—Overhand stoping, a method of working out the contents of a vein by advancing from below upward, the miner being thus always helped by gravity. It is the method most commonly employed. That part of the material thrown down which is worth saving is raised to the surface, and the refuse rock (attle or deads) resting on the stulls remains in the excavation, helping to support the walls of the mine, and giving the miner a place on which to stand.—Underhand stoping, excavating the ore by working from above downward. In underhand stoping everything loosened by blasting has to be lifted up to be got out of the way. The advantage of this method is that in case the ore is very valuable, less of it need be lost by its getting so mixed with the attle that it cannot be picked out.

stop-knob (stop′nob), n. In organ-building, the handle by which the player controls the position of the slider belonging to a particular stop, or set of pipes. When the knob is drawn out, the pipes are ready to be sounded by the keys. The name of the stop is commonly written on the knob. Also called register and stop. See cut under reed-organ.

stopless (stop′les), a. [< stop[1] + -less.] Not to be stopped or checked. [Rare.]

Making a civil and staid senate rude
And stopless as a running multitude.
Sir W. Davenant, On King Charles the Second's Return.

★ stop-motion (stop′mō″shon), n. In mech., a device for automatically arresting the motion of an engine or a machine, when from any cause it is necessary to stop suddenly to prevent injury to the machine or material. Stop-motion mechanisms are applied to looms, spinning-, roving-, and drawing-machines, winding-machines, elevators, knitting-machines, and engines. They are divided into two classes: those operated by some mechanical means, as a weighted arm resting on the thread of a loom, where the breakage of the thread causes the arm to fall; and those actuated by electricity, in which the fall of an arm closes a circuit, and by means of a magnet sets in motion some mechanical device for arresting the motion. In most machines the usual method is the shifting of the belt that moves the machine. In engines the stoppage and fall of the governor closes the steam-valve. Electrical stop-motion appliances, not self-acting, are sometimes used; in case of a break-down the use of a push-button releases a weight that by suitable mechanism shuts off steam from the engine.—Fork-and-grid stop-motion, in a power-loom, a stop-motion in which a grid on the batten acts in connection with a fork, which when the weft-thread breaks causes a lever to drop and stops the loom.

stop-net (stop′net), n. An addition to the main ★net in seine-fishing. Encyc. Brit., IX. 254.

★ stop-order (stop′ôr″dėr), n. In stock-broking, an order given by a person to his broker to sell or buy a specified stock when the price reaches a specified figure.

stop-over (stop′ō″vėr), n. and a. See to stop off or over, under stop[1], v. i.

stoppage (stop′āj), n. [< stop[1] + -age.] 1. The act of stopping, in any sense, or the state of being stopped; especially, a stopping of motion or procedure.

His majesty, . . . finding unexpected stoppage, tells you he now looks for a present proceed in his affairs.
Court and Times of Charles I., I. 344.

2. A deduction made from pay or allowances to repay advances, etc.—Stoppage in transit or in transitu, in law, the act of a seller of goods who has sent them on their way to the buyer, in reclaiming them before they have come into the actual possession or control of the buyer, and terminating or suspending performance of the sale: a right allowed in case of discovering the buyer to be insolvent.

stoppet†, n. [ME., < AS. stoppa, a vessel: see stoop[2].] A pail or bucket. Prompt. Parv., p. 477; Halliwell.

stopped (stopt), p. a. 1. In playing musical instruments, noting the effect produced by stopping in any of the senses described under stop[1], v. t., 10.—2. In an organ, having the upper end plugged: said of a pipe: opposed to open. The tone produced by a stopped pipe is an octave lower than that produced by an open pipe of the same length.—Stopped diapason, in organ-building. See diapason (e).—Stopped note. See note[1].

stoppel[1]†, n. An obsolete form of stopple.

stoppel[2]†, n. Same as estoppel.

Abatements, stoppels, inhibitions.
Marston, Scourge of Villanie, vii. 87.

★ stopper (stop′ėr), n. [< stop[1] + -er[1].] 1. One who or that which stops or plugs. (a) One who fills up holes or openings.

The ancients of Gebal and the wise men thereof were in thee thy calkers [margin: stoppers of chinks].
Ezek. xxvii. 9.

(b) That which closes or fills up (an opening, etc.), as a plug, a bung, or a cork; especially, such an article for the mouth of a fruit-jar, decanter, or vial, when made of the same material as the vessel itself, and having no special name, as cork, bung, etc.; a stopple; specifically, a device for closing bottles for aërated water. See cut under siphon-bottle. (c) A convenient utensil made of wood, bone, ivory, or the like, formerly used to compress or pack some loose or flocculent substance into small compass.

I sold little bone "tobacco-stoppers"—they're seldom asked for now; stoppers is quite out of fashion.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 490.

(d) One who or that which brings to a stop or stand; specifically, one of the players in tennis, foot-ball, and other games, who stops the balls. Halliwell. (e) Naut., a piece of rope secured at one end to a bolt or the like, used to check the motion of another rope or of a cable. Stoppers for cables are of various construction, such as an iron clamp with a lever or screw, a claw of iron with a rope attached, etc. (f) In an organ, a wooden plug inserted in the tops of certain kinds of pipes, as in those of the stopped diapason, flute, bourdon, etc., whence they are called stopped pipes. Such pipes are tuned by means of the stopper. (g) In a vehicle, a bar of wood with iron points pivoted to the body, and allowed to trail on the ground behind to serve as a stop or brake in ascending steep grades. Such a device is used, for instance, on ice-carts plying on hilly streets, where stoppages are frequent.

2. The upper pad or principal callosity of the sole of a dog's foot.

The leg, or bones below the knee [of the greyhound], should be of good size, the stopper (or upper pad) well united to it, and firm in texture.
Dogs of Great Britain and America, p. 45.

★ 3. A small tree of one of four species of the genus Eugenia occurring in Florida. Of the species E. buxifolia is the gurgeon or Spanish stopper, E. monticola is the white stopper, and E. procera is the red stopper. The last is somewhat abundant, and has a very heavy, hard, strong, and close-grained wood of a light yellowish-brown color, likely to be valuable for cabinet-making and coarse engraving. The remaining species so called is E. longipes, a rare tree bearing a small red fruit with the flavor of cranberries. All except the last are found also in the West Indies. Sargent.—Cat-head stopper. See cat-head.—Spanish stopper. See def. 3. (See also fighting-stopper.) stopper (stop′ėr), v. t. [< stopper, n.] 1. To close or secure with a stopple: as, stoppered bottles.—2. To fit with a stopple or stopples.

The mouth of the vessel to be stoppered is ground by an iron cone fixed to a lathe.
H. J. Powell, Glass-making, p. 73.

3. Naut., to secure with a stopper or stoppers.—To stopper a cable, to put stoppers on a cable to prevent it from running out of the ship when riding at anchor.

stopper-bolt (stop′ėr-bōlt), n. Naut., a large ring-bolt driven into the deck before the main hatch, etc., for securing the stoppers.

stopper-hole (stop′ėr-hōl), n. In iron-puddling, a hole in the door of the furnace through which the metal is stirred. See cut under puddling-furnace.

stopper-knot (stop′ėr-not), n. A knot in the end of a rope-stopper made by double-walling the strands.

stopping (stop′ing), n. [Verbal n. of stop[1], v.] 1. The act of one who or that which stops, in any sense. Specifically—(a) The process of filling cracks or fissures, as in an oil-painting, with a composition preparatory to restoring; also, the material used in the process.

The stopping, as this mixture [of size and whiting] is called, is pressed into the cracks by means of a palette-knife. Workshop Receipts, 2d ser., p. 127.

(b) In etching. See to stop out (a), under stop[1], v. t. (c) The act or process of altering the pitch of the tones of a musical instrument in any of the ways described under stop[1], v. t., 10.

2. Something that stops. Specifically—(a) In mining, any solid wall or brattice built across a passage in a mine, to shut out the air from the goaves, or to limit it to certain passages, or to keep the gas confined, or for any other purpose. (b) In dental surg., material for filling cavities in teeth. (c) In farriery, a ball or pad for stuffing the space in a horse's foot within the inner edge of the shoe.—Double stopping, in viol-playing, the act or process of producing tones simultaneously from two stopped strings.

stopping-brush (stop′ing-brush), n. 1. In hat-making, a brush used to sprinkle boiling water upon the napping and the hat-body to assist in uniting them.—2. In etching, a camel's-hair brush used in stopping out parts of etched plates.

stopping-coat (stop′ing-kōt), n. The covering of resistant material applied to any part of an object about to be exposed to the action of an acid or other agent, in order to protect that part from such action.

stopping-knife (stop′ing-nīf), n. A knife used in stopping, as a glaziers' putty-knife.

stop-plank (stop′plangk), n. One of the planks employed to form a sort of dam in some hydraulic works. They generally occupy vertical grooves in the wing walls of a lock or weir, to hold back water in case of temporary disorder of the lock-gates.

stop-plate (stop′plāt), n. An end-bearing for the axle in a railroad journal-box, designed to resist end-play of the axle.

stopple[1] (stop′l), n. [< ME. stoppel, stoppell, stopell; < stop + -el, now -le, a noun-formative indicating the instrument (as also in whittle, swingle, etc.).] 1. That which stops or closes the mouth of a vessel; a stopper: as, a glass stopple; a cork stopple.

Item, j. litill botell, with j. cheyne and j. stopell, weiyng xxxviij. unces. Paston Letters, I. 472.

Who knows, when he openeth the stopple, what may be in the bottle? B. Jonson, Bartholomew Fair, ii. 1.

2. A plug sometimes inserted in certain finger-holes of a flute or flageolet to accommodate its scale to some unusual series.

stopple[1] (stop′l), v. t.; pret. and pp. stoppled, ppr. stoppling. [< stopple[1], n.] To stop or close with a stopple.

His hours of study clos'd at last,
And finish'd his concise repast,
Stoppled his cruise, replac'd his book
Within its customary nook.
Cowper, Moralizer Corrected.

stopple[2] (stop′l), n. [< ME. stopyll, stouple; a more orig. form of stubble: see stubble.] Stubble. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

And thoru haubert and ys coler, that nere nothyng souple,
He smot of ys heved as lyȝtlyche as yt were a lute stouple.
Robert of Gloucester, p. 223.

★ stop-ridge (stop′rij), n. A band slightly elevated upon the surface of a blade or a similar part of an implement, intended to stop and hold it in the proper place, as in the handle. In stone celts the presence of such a stop-ridge marks a certain class or category.

stop-rod (stop′rod), n. In weaving, the rod which extends longitudinally under the batten of a loom, forming a part of the stop-motion, and which raises a catch that, if not raised, engages mechanism which immediately stops the loom. Every time the shuttle enters the shuttle-box fairly it acts upon a stop-finger to cause the stop-rod to lift the catch; but, if the shuttle is stopped in its course through the shed, the catch is not raised, the loom is stopped, and the warp, which would otherwise be broken by the impact of the reed against the shuttle while in the shed, is thus saved.

stop-ship† (stop′ship), n [< stop[1], v., + obj. ship; a translation of the Gr. ἐχενηίς, the remora: see Echeneis, and cf. mora, remora.] The fish remora.

O Stop-ship, . . . tell vs where thou doo'st thine Anchors hide;
Whence thou resistest Sayls, Owers, Wind, and Tide.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, i. 5.

stop-thrust (stop′thrust), n. In fencing, a slight thrust at one's opponent, instead of a parry, made after he has begun to lunge forward in an attack. The stop-thrust goes over by delicate gradations into the time-thrust, but is not considered by fencers a fine blow like the time-thrust.

stop-valve (stop′valv), n. 1. In hydraul., a valve which closes a pipe against the passage of fluid. It is usually a disk which occupies a chamber above the pipe when the passageway through the latter is open, and is driven down by a screw to stop the aperture.

2. In steam-engines, a valve fitted to the steam-pipes, where they leave the several boilers, in such a way that any boiler may be shut off from the others and from the engines.

stop-watch (stop′woch), n. A watch which records small fractions of a second, and in which the hands can be stopped at any instant, so as to mark the exact time at which some event occurs: chiefly used in timing races.

He suspended his voice in the epilogue a dozen times, three seconds and three fifths by a stop-watch, my lord, each time. Sterne, Tristram Shandy, iii. 12.

stop-water (stop′wâ″tėr), n. [< stop[1], v., + obj. water.] 1. Naut., a drag.—2. In shipbuilding: (a) A plug of soft wood driven tightly into a hole at the joint of a scarf, the expansion of which, when immersed, prevents water from working up through the scarf and behind the bottom planking. (b) In building iron ships, a piece of canvas or felt covered with red lead used to make water-tight joints where calking is difficult.

stop-wheel (stop′hwēl), n. See Geneva movement, under movement.

stop-work (stop′wėrk), n. A device attached to the barrel of a watch, musical box, etc., to prevent overwinding.

stor[1]†, a. A Middle English form of stoor[1].

stor[2]†, n. [ME., < AS. stōr, incense, storax (= W. ystor, resin, rosin), < L. storax, storax: see storax.] Incense.

Thet Stor signefied Gode werkes, for ase se smech of the store wanne hit is i-do into the ueréé and goth upward to the heuene and to Gode warde Swo amuntel sí gode biddinge to gode of tho herte of tho gode cristenemanne.
Old Eng. Misc. (ed. Morris), p. 28.

storable (stōr′a-bl), a. [< store[3] + -able.] Capable of being stored. R. S. Ball, Exper. Mechanics, p. 262.

★storage (stōr′āj), n. [< store[3] + -age.] 1. The act of storing, in any sense; specifically, the keeping of goods in a store, warehouse, or other place of deposit.—2. The price charged or paid for keeping goods in a storehouse.—Cold storage, storage in refrigerating chambers or other places artificially cooled, as for the preservation of articles liable to be damaged by heat.—Storage battery. See battery.—Storage magazine. Same as magazine, 1 (a).—Storage warehouse. See warehouse.

storage-bellows (stōr′āj-bel″ōz), n. See organ[1], 6.

storax (stō′raks), n. [= F. storax, styrax, < L. storax, styrax, < Gr. στύραξ, a sweet-smelling resin so called, also a tree producing it.] 1. A solid resin resembling benzoin, with the fragrance of vanilla, formerly obtained from a small tree, Styrax officinalis, of Asia Minor, Syria, and southern Europe. It was in use from ancient times down to the close of the 18th century, but has disappeared from the market, the trees having been mostly reduced to bushes by excessive lopping.

This, that, and ev'ry thicket doth transpire
More sweet than storax from the hallowed fire.
Herrick, Apparition of his Mistresse.

2. The tree yielding storax, or some other tree or shrub of the same genus. Among the American species, Styrax Californica is a handsome Californian shrub. See cut in next column.—Liquid storax, a balsam known from ancient times with the true storax, obtained by boiling and pressing from the inner bark of the Oriental sweet-gum tree, Liquidambar orientalis, itself also called liquidambar. It is a semi-fluid adhesive substance with the properties of a stimulant expectorant, but now scarcely used in Western practice except as a constituent in the compound tincture of benzoin (resembling friars' balsam: see benzoin), and as an application for itch. It has long been used in making incense and fumigating preparations, and also enters into perfumery. Its chief markets are China and India. A similar balsam is obtained, chiefly in Burma, from Altingia excelsa, known (together with the last) in East Indian commerce as rose-maloes, rasamala, etc. In Formosa and southern China a dry terebinthinous resin of the same character is derived from Liquidambar Formosana (a species recently identified). An American liquidambar, or liquid storax, or a substitute for it, is procured as natural exudation or by incision from the bark Branch with Flowers of Storax (Styrax Californica).

a, a leaf, showing nervation.

of the sweet-gum, Liquidambar styraciflua, in the hotter parts of its habitat. It is better known in Europe than in the United States, where it is perhaps most used for making chewing-gum.

Storax liquida [cometh] from Rhodes.
Hakluyt's Voyages, II. 277.

Storax ointment. See ointment.

storax-tree (stō′raks-trē), n. Same as storax, 2.

store[1]†, a. A Middle English form of stoor[1].

store[2]†, v. A Middle English form of stoor[2].

store[3] (stōr), v. t.; pret. and pp. stored, ppr. storing. [< ME. storen, also astoren, astorien, < OF. estorer, esturer, estaurer, make, build, establish, provide, furnish, store, < L. instaurare, renew, repair, make, ML. also provide, store, < in, in, to, + staurare*, set up, place (found also in restaurare, restore), < staurus*, fixed, = Gr. σταυρός, n., an upright pole, a stake, cross, = Skt. sthāvara, fixed, = AS. steór, a rudder, etc.; from the root of stand: see stand. Cf. restore, instauration, etc. Hence store[3], n., storage, story[2], etc.] 1. To provide; furnish; supply; equip; outfit.

No Cytee of the World is so wel stored of Schippes as is that. Mandeville, Travels, p. 207.

Her Mind with thousand Virtues stor'd.
Prior, Ode to the King after the Queen's Death, st. 35.

I believe for Greek & Latin there come very few lads so well stored to the University.
William Lloyd, in Ellis's Lit. Letters, p. 188.

2. To stock with provisions; provision; replenish.

Alle thine castles ich habbe wel istored.
Layamon, l. 13412.

Backe to the yle of Alango, where some of vs went a londe . . . to store vs of newe vytaylles.
Sir R. Guylforde, Pylgrymage, p. 59.

3. To deposit in a store or warehouse for preservation or safe-keeping; warehouse.

Now was stored
In the sweet-smelling granaries all the hoard
Of golden corn.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I. 393.

4. To lay up in reserve; accumulate; hoard: often with up.

According to Sir W. Thomson a single Faure cell of the spiral form, weighing 165 lbs., can store 2,000,000 foot-pounds of energy.
W. L. Carpenter, Energy in Nature (1st ed.), p. 125.

5†. To restore.

Keppit the fro combraunse & fro cold deth,
Storet thee to strenght & thi stythe londes,
And dawly hir distitur of hir fader.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 726.

★store[3] (stōr), n. and a. [< ME. stor, store, stoor (cf. W. ystór = Gael. stor, < E.), < OF. estore, estoire, estorie, provisions, store, a fleet, navy, army, < ML. staurum (also, after OF., storium), same as instaurum, store, < L. instaurare, renew, restore, ML. also provide, furnish, store: see store[3], v.] I. n. 1. That which is provided or furnished for use as needed; a stock accumulated as for future use; a supply; a hoard; specifically, in the plural, articles, particularly of food, accumulated for a specific object; supplies, as of food, ammunition, arms, or clothing: as, military or naval stores; the winter stores of a family.

He . . . kepte hir to his usage and his store.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 2337.

500 pounds of hard bread, sleeping-bags, and assorted subsistence stores were landed from the floe.
Schley and Soley, Rescue of Greely, p. 77.

Hence—2. A great quantity; a large number; abundance; plenty: used with, or archaically without, the indefinite article.

That olde man of pleasing wordes had store.
Spenser, F. Q., I. i. 35.

With store of ladies, whose bright eyes
Rain influence, and judge the prize.
Milton, L'Allegro, l. 121.

3. A place where supplies, as provisions, ammunition, arms, clothing, or goods of any kind, are kept for future use or distribution; a storehouse; a warehouse; a magazine.

Sulphurous and nitrous foam, . . .
Concocted and adjusted, they reduced
To blackest grain, and into store convey'd.
Milton, P. L., vi. 515.

Hence—4. A place where goods are kept for sale by either wholesale or retail; a shop: as, a book-store; a dry-goods store. See note under shop[1], 2. [U. S. and British colonies.]

Stores, as the shops are called.
Capt. B. Hall, Travels in N. A., I. 8.

Bill of stores. See bill[3].—Bonded store. See bonded.—Coöperative store. See coöperative.—Fancy store. See fancy.—General-order store, a customs warehouse in which goods are stored temporarily, as unclaimed, or arriving in advance of invoice or transportation papers, or through other like cause of detention. Such goods are obtainable only on a general order.—General store, a store or shop where goods of all ordinary kinds are kept for sale; especially, such a store in a country village or at cross-roads.—In store, laid up; on hand; ready to be produced: as, we know not what the future has in store for us.

I have an hour's talk in store for you.
Shak., J. C., ii. 2. 121.

Marine, ordnance, public stores. See the qualifying words.—Sea-stores, provisions and supplies on shipboard for use at sea. Compare ship-stores.—Ship-stores, provisions and supplies for use on board ships at sea or in port: such supplies are sealed, as non-dutiable, by the customs officers.—Small stores, in the U. S. navy, a general term embracing tinware, tobacco, soap, razors, brushes, thread, needles, etc., issued and charged to the men by the paymaster.—Subsistence stores. See subsistence.—To set store by. See set[1], v. t., 18.—To tell no store of†, to make no account of; set no store by.

I ne telle of laxatyves no store,
For they ben venymous, I woot it weel;
I hem diffye, I love hem never a deel.
Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, l. 334.

II. a. 1†. Hoarded; laid up: as, store linen; store fruit.

Of this treasure . . . the gold was accumulate, and store treasure; . . . but the silver is still growing.
Bacon, Holy War.

2. Containing stores; set apart for receiving stores or supplies. Compare store-city.—3. Obtained at a store or shop; purchased or purchasable at a shop or store: as, store clothes; store teeth (humorously used for false teeth). This word in rural or frontier use is commonly opposed to home-made, and implies preference: as, stylish store curtains; in town use it is usually opposed to made to order, and implies disparagement: as, clumsy store boots. [Colloq., U. S.]—Store casemate. Same as barrack casemate (which see, under barrack).—Store cattle, lean cattle bought for fattening by squatters who find that they have more grass than the natural increase of their herd requires. [Australia.]

Oh, we are not fit for anything but store cattle: we are all blady grass. Mrs. Campbell Praed, Head Station, p. 74.

Store pay, payment for country produce, labor, etc., by goods from a store, in lieu of cash; barter. [Rural, U. S.]

See, a girl has just arrived with a pot of butter to trade off for store pay. She wants in exchange a yard of calico, a quarter of tea, . . . and a bottle of rum.
Capt. Priest's Adventures, p. 54. (Bartlett.) store[4]†, n. A Middle English form of stour[3].

store[5] (stōr), n. [< F. store, a window-shade, spring-blind, roller-blind, < L. storea, a mat.] A window-shade: the French term used in English for such a shade when of decorative character, especially when of French manufacture.

store-city (stōr′sit″i), n. In the Old Testament, a city provided with stores of provisions for troops.

He [Solomon] built Tadmor in the wilderness, and all the store cities, which he built in Hamath.
2 Chron. viii. 4.

store-farm (stōr′färm), n. A stock-farm; a cattle-farm; a sheep-farm. Scott, Heart of Mid-Lothian, xlii. [Scotch.]

store-farmer (stōr′fär″mėr), n. Same as stock-farmer. [Scotch.]

storehouse (stōr′hous), n. 1. A house in which things are stored; a building for the storing of grain, food-stuffs, or goods of any kind; a magazine; a repository; a warehouse; a store.

They ne'er cared for us yet; suffer us to famish, and their store-houses crammed with grain.
Shak. Cor., i. 1. 83.

2†. A store; a plentiful supply.

And greatly joyed merry tales to faine,
Of which a storehouse did with her remain.
Spenser, F. Q., II. vi. 6.

storekeeper (stōr'kē″pėr), n. 1. One who has the care or charge of a store or stores. (a) A shopkeeper. [U. S.] (b) An officer in a dockyard in charge of stores and storehouses; the superintendent of a storehouse in a navy-yard. (c) Milit., a civilian employee in the United States army who has charge of the military stores at depots and arsenals. A military storekeeper is an officer of the quartermaster's department; an ordnance storekeeper, of the ordnance department; a medical storekeeper, of the medical department. They were formerly officers having the rank and pay of mounted captains in the army.

2. Figuratively, an article in a stock of goods that remains so long on hand as to be unsalable. [Slang, U. S.]

storekeeping (stōr'kē″ping), n. The act of taking charge of stores or a store.

storeman (stōr'man), n.; pl. storemen (-men). 1. A man in charge of stores or supplies: as, the storeman's stock of bolts and screws.—2. A man employed in a storehouse for the work of storing goods.

The question of wages of shifters and store-men has been referred to arbitration.
Weekly Echo, Sept. 5, 1885. (Encyc. Dict.) store-master (stōr'mȧs″tėr), n. The tenant of a store-farm. [Scotch.]

storer (stōr'ėr), n. [< store[3] + -er[1].] One who lays up or accumulates a store.

Storeria (stō-rē'ri-ȧ), n. [NL. (Baird and Girard, 1853), named after Dr. D. H. Storer, an American naturalist.] A genus of harmless colubriform serpents of North America, of the family Colubridæ. Two common species of the United States are S. dekayi, and S. occipitomaculata, the spotted-neck snake.

store-room (stōr'röm), n. A room set apart for stores or supplies, especially table and household supplies.

Miss Jenkyns asked me if I would come and help her to tie up the preserves in the store-room.
Mrs. Gaskell, Cranford, ii.

store-ship (stōr'ship), n. A government vessel detailed to carry stores for the use of a fleet or garrison, or to store them in foreign ports.

storey, n. See story[2].

storge (stôr'gē), n. [< Gr. στοργή, natural love or affection, < στέργειν, love, as parents their children.] The strong instinctive affection of animals for their young; hence, the attachment of parents for children, or of children for parents; parental or filial love. [Rare and technical.]

In the storge, or natural affections of divers animals to their young ones, . . . there appears in the parent manifest tokens of solicitousness, skill, and in some cases courage too. Boyle, Christian Virtuoso, pt. II. aph. viii.

The innocence of infancy . . . is the cause of the love called storge. Swedenborg, Conjugial Love (trans.), § 395.

storial† (stō'ri-ȧl), a. [ME. storial, an aphetic form of historial.] 1. Historical.

This is storial sooth, it is no fable.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 702.

2. Of the nature of a story.

He shal fynde ynowe, grete and smale,
Of storial thyng that toucheth gentillesse,
And eek moralitee and hoolynesse.
Chaucer, Prol. to Miller's Tale, l. 71.

storiated (stō'ri-ā-ted), a. [Cf. historiated.] Decorated with elaborate ornamental and illustrative designs, as title-pages of books in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, in which the ornamentation often covered the entire page.

The mania for the acquisition of storiated title-pages has led to the cruel spoliation of thousands of rare old books.
London Art Jour., No. 51, p. 91.

storied[1] (stō'rid), a. [< story[1] + -ed[2].] 1. Celebrated or recorded in story or history; associated with stories, tales, or legends.

To-morrow hurry through the fields
Of Flanders to the storied Rhine!
M. Arnold, Calais Sands.

2. Adorned with scenes from a story, or from history, executed by means of sculpture, painting, weaving, needlework, or other art: as, storied tapestries.

Storied windows, richly dight,
Casting a dim religious light.
Milton, Il Penseroso, l. 159.

Can storied urn, or animated bust,
Back to its mansion call the fleeting breath?
Gray, Elegy.

storied[2] (stō'rid), a. [Formerly also storeyed; < story[2] + -ed[2].] Having stories or stages: as, a four-storied building.

storier (stō'ri-ėr), n. [< story[1] + -er[1].] A relater of stories; a story-teller; a historian.

The honeyed rhythm of this melodious storier.
J. Rogers Rees, Poetry of the Period (Bookworm, p. 65).

storify[1]† (stō'ri-fī), v. t. [< story[1] + L. facere, make, do: see -fy.] To make or tell stories about.

storify[2] (stō'ri-fī), v. t.; pret. and pp. storified, ppr. storifying. [< story[2] + L. facere, make, do: see -fy.] To range, as beehives over and under one another, in the form of stories. Phin, Dict. Apiculture, † 67. [Rare.]

storiologist (stō-ri-ol'ō-jist), n. [< storiolog-y + -ist.] A student or expounder of popular tales and legends; one who is versed in folk-lore. [Recent.]

The resuscitation of the roe from its bones will recall to storiologists similar incidents in European and especially Scandinavian and Icelandic folk-lore.
N. and Q., 7th ser., I. 484, note.

storiology (stō-ri-ol'ō-ji), n. [< E. story[1] + Gr. -λογία, < λέγειν, speak: see -ology.] The science of folk-lore; the study of popular tales and legends. [Recent.]

For Chaucer's direct source, it might be well worth while for students of comparative storiology who have leisure . . . to examine these and similar monkish collections of exempla [of the thirteenth century].
N. and Q., 7th ser., I. 485.

★stork (stôrk), n. [< ME. stork, < AS. storc = D. MLG. LG. stork = OHG. storah, MHG. G. storch (also OHG. storc, MHG. G. dial. stork) = Icel. storkr = Sw. Dan. stork, a stork; cf. OBulg. strŭkŭ, Bulg. strŭk, shtrŭk = Serv. shtrk = ORuss. sterkŭ, Russ. sterkhŭ = Lith. starkus = Lett. stārks = Hung. eszterag = Albanian sterkjok, a stork. The relation of the Teut. to the Slav. and other forms is undetermined. Cf. Gr. τόργος, a vulture, τόργος ὑγρόφοιτις, a swan.] A large altricial grallatorial bird, of the family Ciconiidæ and especially of the subfamily Ciconiinæ (which see for technical characters). The stork is related to the herons, spoonbills, and ibises, but not very closely to the cranes. There are several species, found in nearly all temperate and tropical regions. They are tall and stately birds, equaling the cranes and larger herons in stature, but are readily distinguished by many technical characters. Storks are wading birds, frequenting the vicinity of water; but some of them become semi-domesticated, and often nest on buildings. Their fidelity and amiability are traditional. They feed chiefly on reptiles (as snakes and lizards), amphibians (as frogs), fishes, mollusks, and worms, but also sometimes capture small quadrupeds and birds. The best-known species is the common white stork of Europe, Ciconia alba; when adult, it is pure-white with black-tipped wings and reddish bill and feet; it is about 3½ feet long, and stands 4 feet high. The black stork of the same country is C. nigra, a rarer species. Various birds of different countries, technically storks, are known by other names, as adjutant, marabou, maguari, jabiru, shell-ibis, and wood-ibis. See these words, and cuts under adjutant-bird, Ciconiidæ, Grallæ, jabiru, openbill, Pelargomorphæ, simbil, and Tantalus.—Black-necked stork, Xenorhynchus australis, of India and Australia, related to the American jabiru and African saddle-billed stork, the three being often placed in the genus Mycteria.—Black stork. See def.—Episcopal stork, Dissoura episcopus. See cut under Pelargomorphæ.—Giant stork, the adjutant-bird.—Hair-crested stork, Leptoptilus (Cranopelargus) javanicus, a small and quite distinct species of marabou, related to the adjutant, found in parts of India, Java, Sumatra, etc.—Maguari stork, Euxenura maguari. See maguari.—Marabou stork. See marabou, and cut under adjutant-bird.—Pouched stork. Same as adjutant-bird.—Saddle-billed stork, Ephippiorhynchus senegalensis. See the generic name.—White-bellied stork, Sphenorhynchus abdimi. See cut under simbil.—White stork. See def.

stork-billed (stôrk'bild), a. Having a bill like a stork's, as a kingfisher of the genus Pelargopsis. See cut under Pelargopsis.

stork's-bill (stôrks'bil), n. 1. A plant of the genus Erodium, particularly the heron's-bill, E. cicutarium (also called hemlock stork's-bill), a low bushy herb with pinnate leaves, a mostly Old World plant, abundantly naturalized in many parts of the United States, perhaps indigenous in the west. See alfilerilla. — 2. A plant of the related genus Pelargonium, which includes the geraniums, etc., of gardens.

Flowering Plant of Stork's-bill (Erodium cicutarium). a, one of the carpels.

★storm (stôrm), n. [< ME. storm, < AS. storm, storm, = OS. MD. D. MLG. LG. storm = OHG. MHG. G. sturm = Icel. stormr = Sw. Dan. storm (not in Goth.; cf. It. stormo, a fight, It. dial. sturm = Pr. estorn = OF. estour, estor, estur (> E. stour[3], a tumult, stir) = Ir. Gael. stoirm = Bret. stourm, a storm, all < Teut.); perhaps, with formative -m, from the root of stir[1] (√ stur, √ stor) or of L. sternere, strew: see stir[1], strew.] 1. A disturbance of the normal condition of the atmosphere, manifesting itself by winds of unusual direction or force, or by rain (often with lightning and thunder), snow, or hail, or by several of these phenomena in combination; a tempest: also used with reference to precipitation only, as in hail-storm, thunder-storm, snow-storm. A storm is usually associated with an area of low pressure, and its intensity or violence depends upon the steepness of the density-gradients which produce it. The terms area of low pressure, cyclone, cyclonic storm, and storm are often used interchangeably. In area of low pressure the primary reference is to the state of the barometer, in cyclone it is to the gyratory character of the atmospheric circulation, and in storm to the disturbance of the weather: but each term is extended to include the whole of the attendant phenomena.

And there arose a great storm of wind. Mark iv. 37.

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm.
Shak., Lear, iii. 4. 29.

2. Specifically—(a) Technically, in nautical use, a wind of force 11 on the Beaufort scale, being that in which a man-of-war could carry only storm-staysails.

The wind suddenly shifted in a heavy rain squall from SSE. to W., and increased to a storm; at 12 noon the barometer read lowest, and the wind was blowing a storm.
Monthly Weather Review (1887), p. 40.

(b) A fall of snow. (c) A prolonged frost. [Prov. Eng.] Hence, figuratively—3. A tempestuous flight or descent of objects fiercely hurled: as, a storm of missiles.

No drizzling shower,
But rattling storm of arrows barb'd with fire.
Milton, P. L., vi. 546.

4. A violent disturbance or agitation of human society; a civil, political, or domestic commotion; a tumult; a clamor.

I will stir up in England some black storm
Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven or hell.
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iii. 1. 349.

5. A destructive or overwhelming calamity; extremity of adversity or disaster.

Having passed many bitter brunts and blastes of vengeaunce, they dread no stormes of Fortune.
Spenser, Shep. Cal., February, Embleme.

An old man, broken with the storms of state.
Shak., Hen. VIII., iv. 2. 21.

6. A vehement or passionate outbreak, as of some emotion, or of the expression of such emotion: as, a storm of indignation; a storm of applause; a storm of hisses.

Mark'd you not how her sister
Began to scold and raise up such a storm?
Shak., T. of the S., i. 1. 177.

Her bosom shaken with a sudden storm of sighs.
Tennyson, Locksley Hall.

7. Milit., a violent assault on a fortified place or strong position; a dashing attempt by troops to capture a fortified place, as by scaling the walls or forcing the gates.

How by storm the walls were won,
Or how the victor sacked and burnt the town.
Dryden.

Cyclonic storm, a storm in which the wind blows spirally inward and with an additional steady ascension. The circulation of the wind is clockwise in the southern and counter-clockwise in the northern hemisphere.—Electric storm. See electric.—Eye of a storm, the calm region at the center of a violent cyclonic storm, where the clouds clear away and blue sky appears—occurring mostly in the tropics. This phenomenon is due to the circumstance that the winds immediately bordering the central area blow circularly around it, leaving a region of calm, a gently descending current, and a consequent clearing of the sky.—High-area storm, a storm associated with an area of high pressure.—Low-area storm. Same as cyclonic storm.—Magnetic, revolving, etc., storm. See the adjectives.—Storm and stress [a translation of the German Sturm und Drang, alluding to a drama by Klinger, "Sturm und Drang"], a name given to a period in German literary history (about 1770 to 1790) influenced by a group of younger writers whose works were characterized by passion and reaction from the old methods; hence, a proverbial phrase for unrest or agitation.—To take by storm. (a) Milit., to carry by assault. See def. 7.

The recollection of the victory of Roanoke imparted to the Federals that assurance which is a great element of success; they knew that a battery could be taken by storm.
Comte de Paris, Civil War in America (trans.), I. 587.

(b) To captivate or carry away by surprising or delighting: as, the new singer has taken the town by storm.—Wind-storm, a storm with heavy wind, without precipitation.=Syn. 1. Tempest, etc. See wind[2].

storm (stôrm), v. [< ME. stormen, sturmen, < AS. styrman = D. MLG. LG. stormen = OHG. sturman, MHG. G. stürmen = Icel. styrma = Sw. storma = Dan. storme, storm, cf. It. stormire, make a noise, stormeggiare, ring the storm-bell, throng together; from the noun.] I. intrans. 1. To blow with great force; also, to rain, hail, snow, or sleet, especially with violence: used impersonally: as, it storms.—2. To fume; scold; rage; be in a violent agitation or passion; raise a tempest.

> The Dolphin then, discrying Land (at last),
> Stormes with himselfe for hauing made such haste.
> Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, i. 5.

> When . . . I see a gentleman lose his money with serenity, I recognise in him all the great qualities of a philosopher. If he storms and invokes the gods, I lament that he is not placed at the head of a regiment.
> Steele, Guardian, No. 174.

3. To move with violence; rush angrily or impetuously: as, he stormed about the room.

> Bobby Wick stormed through the tents of his Company.
> R. Kipling, Only a Subaltern.

II. trans. To attack and attempt to take possession of, as by scaling walls or forcing gates or breaches; assault: as, to storm a fortified town: often used figuratively.

> With eager warmth they fight, ambitious all > Who first shall storm the breach, or mount the wall.
> Addison, To the King.

storm-area (stôrm'ā″rē-ā), n. The area covered by a storm; the region within the closed isobars surrounding a center of low pressure. In the United States this region is generally an oval whose length is, on the average, nearly twice its width. Its longest diameter may be turned in any azimuth, but is most frequently directed to a point between north and north 60° east. Over the ocean storm-areas are generally nearly circular.

storm-beat, storm-beaten (stôrm'bēt, -bē″tn), a. Beaten or damaged by storms.

storm-belt (stôrm'belt), n. A belt of maximum storm-frequency. On charts containing a large number of storm-tracks the paths are found to be mostly divided into several well-defined groups whose loci form natural storm-belts. In the United States three storm-belts are distinguished: (1) that of storms which appear in the northwest British provinces, advance eastward to the lake region, and thence down the St. Lawrence valley; (2) that of storms which originate in the southwest near the Gulf of Mexico, and move northeastward to the lakes; (3) that of the West India hurricanes, which first move westerly, and then northeastward along the Atlantic coast. Over Europe three storm-belts may be distinguished: one lying across the northern Mediterranean, one across the North Sea and the Baltic, and one northeast and southwest off the coast of Norway and the British Isles. Also called storm-zone.

storm-bird (stôrm'bêrd), n. 1. A petrel; one of the birds of the family Procellariidæ, including the albatrosses, fulmars, etc., as well as those to which the name petrel is more commonly applied; specifically, the stormy petrel. See cut under petrel.—2. A bird that indicates or seems to foretell bad weather by its cries or other actions, as a storm-cock. Compare rain-bird.

storm-bound (stôrm'bound), a. Confined or delayed by storms; relating to hindrance by storms: as, we were storm-bound in port.

> Weeks of storm-bound inactivity.
> Carlyle, To John Carlyle, Feb. 11, 1830.

storm-card (stôrm'kärd), n. A transparent card containing lines to represent the wind-directions in all quarters of a cyclonic storm: devised by Reid as an aid to seamen in avoiding dangerous storms. When the card is drawn to suitable scale, and placed over the position of a vessel on a chart, so that the observed wind-direction and the same wind-direction on the card are brought into coincidence, the bearing of the center of the card from the point of observation indicates the direction of the center of the storm. Knowing the direction of the storm-center, its probable path can be laid down with considerable precision, and the best course for the vessel may then be determined. It is now known that a storm-card cannot universally be used to discover the bearing of a storm-center, for the angle between the wind and the radius varies in different latitudes, and is different at different distances from the center. Also called storm-circle, storm-compass.

storm-center (stôrm'sen″tėr), n. The position of lowest pressure in a cyclonic storm. In the typical case the wind throughout the storm-area blows spirally inward toward the storm-center, changing from a radial to an approximately circular path, and increasing in force as the center is approached. The center itself is an area of comparative calm, accompanied by a partial or complete clearing away of the clouds, and a mild temperature. (See eye of a storm, under storm.) Violent ocean storms frequently exemplify this typical description; but in land storms which present irregularities of all kinds, these conditions are in general only partially realized.

storm-circle (stôrm'sėr″kl), n. Same as storm-card.

storm-cloud (stôrm'kloud), n. A cloud that brings or threatens storm.

storm-cock (stôrm'kok), n. 1. The fieldfare, Turdus pilaris; also, the mistlethrush, T. viscivorus.

> Its song . . . it [the missel] begins . . . very early in the spring, often with the new year, in blowing showery weather, which makes the inhabitants of Hampshire call it the storm-cock. Pennant, Brit. Zoöl. (ed. 1776), I. 302.

2. The green woodpecker, Gecinus viridis. [Prov. Eng. in all uses.]

storm-compass (stôrm'kum″pas), n. Same as storm-card.

storm-cone (stôrm'kōn), n. A cone consisting of tarred canvas extended on a frame 3 feet high and 3 feet wide at the base, used either alone or along with the drum as a storm-signal. See cut under storm-signal. [Eng.]

storm-current (stôrm'kur″ent), n. A surface sea-current produced by the force of the wind in a storm. Such a current frequently outruns its generating storm, and affords the first announcement thereof on a distant shore by increasing there the intensity of the usual current or by changing its set.

storm-door (stôrm'dōr), n. An outer or additional door for protection against inclement weather: in general used temporarily, for the winter only.

storm-drum (stôrm'drum), n. A cylinder of tarred canvas extended on a hoop 3 feet high and 3 feet wide, hoisted in conjunction with the cone as a storm-signal. See storm-signal. [Eng.]

stormer (stôr'mėr), n. [< storm + -er[1].] One who storms; specifically (milit.), a member of an assaulting party.

storm-finch (stôrm'finch), n. See finch[1], and cut under petrel.

storm-flag (stôrm'flag), n. See storm-signal.

stormful (stôrm'fûl), a. [< storm + -ful.] Abounding with storms.

> They know what spirit brews the stormful day.
> Collins, Ode on the Popular Superstitions of the Highlands.

stormfulness (stôrm'fûl-nes), n. The state of being stormful; stormy character or condition. Coleridge.

storm-glass (stôrm'glȧs), n. A hermetically sealed tube containing an alcoholic solution of camphor, together with crystals of nitrate of potash and ammonium chlorid: so named because an increase in the amount of the precipitate was supposed to indicate the approach of stormy weather. The changes in the amount of the precipitate are due solely to variations of temperature, and the instrument is simply a chemical thermoscope.

storm-house (stôrm'hous), n. A temporary shelter for men employed in constructing or guarding railroads, or other works in exposed situations.

stormily (stôr'mi-li), adv. In a stormy manner; tempestuously storminess (stôr'mi-nes), n. The state of being stormy, or of being agitated or visited by violent winds; tempestuousness; impetuousness; violence.

storming-party (stôr'ming-pär″ti), n. Milit., the party to whom is assigned the duty of making the first assault in storming an enemy's works.

storm-kite (stôrm'kīt), n. A device, on the principle of a kite, for carrying a rope from a ship to the shore in a storm.

stormless (stôrm'les), a. [< storm + -less.] Free from storms; without storm.

> Our waking thoughts > Suffer a stormless shipwreck in the pools
> Of sullen slumber. Tennyson, Harold, v. 1.

storm-pane (stôrm'pān), n. An extra square of glass fitted in a frame provided with clamps, used to fit over a window in an exposed building, as a lighthouse, in case of breakage.

storm-path (stôrm'pȧth), n. Same as storm-track.

storm-pavement (stôrm'pāv″ment), n. In hydraul. engin., a sloping stone pavement lining the sea-face of a pier or breakwater. E. H. Knight.

storm-petrel (stôrm'pet″rel), n. A small blackish petrel, belonging to the genus Procellaria as now restricted, or to one of a few closely related genera, as Oceanites, Cymochorea, and Halocyptena. The three best-known storm-petrels are Procellaria pelagica, Cymochorea leucorrhoa, and Oceanites oceanicus. All are also called Mother Carey's chickens. See cut under petrel. The form stormy petrel is also common.

storm-proof (stôrm'prōf), a. Proof against storms or stress of weather.

storm-sail (stôrm'sāl), n. A sail made of very stout canvas, of smaller size than the corresponding sail in ordinary use, set in squally or heavy weather.

storm-signal (stôrm'sig″nal), n. A signal displayed on sea-coasts and lake-shores for indicating the expected prevalence of high winds or storms. For this purpose flags and lanterns are used in the United States, and a cone by day and a triangle of three red lights by night in Great Britain. In the practice of the United States Weather Bureau, a red flag with black center is displayed by day when a violent storm is expected, and an additional pennant indicates the quadrant of the probable wind-direction, as follows: red pennant above flag, northeasterly winds; red pennant below flag, southeasterly winds; white pennant above flag, northwesterly winds; white pennant below flag, southwesterly winds. By night, a red light indicates easterly winds, and a white light above a red light indicates westerly winds. In the British system the inverted cone indicates a storm-wind from the southeast veering through the south, the upright cone a northwest gale veering through the north. See weather-flag and phrases under signal. See also phrases under signal, in the supplement.

storm-stay (stôrm'stā), n. A stay on which a storm-sail is set.

storm-stayed (stôrm'stād), a. Prevented from proceeding on, or interrupted in the course of, a journey or voyage by storms or stress of weather.

storm-stone (stôrm'stōn), n. Same as thunder-bolt.

storm-tossed (stôrm'tost), a. Tossed about by storm or tempest: as, a storm-tossed bark; hence, agitated by conflicting passions or emotions: as, his storm-tossed spirit is at rest.

storm-track (stôrm'trak), n. The path traversed by the center of a cyclonic storm. North of the parallel of 30° storm-tracks almost invariably pursue an easterly course, having generally a northerly inclination. Within the tropics storm-tracks almost invariably tend westerly, generally with an inclination toward the pole; they have rarely, if ever, been traced nearer to the equator than 6°. Continuous storm-tracks are sometimes traced across North America, the Atlantic ocean, and Europe; but in general less than 12 per cent. of the storms leaving America reach the European coast.

storm-wind (stôrm'wind), n. The wind or blast of a storm or tempest; a hurricane; also, a wind that brings a storm.

> Then comes, with an awful roar, > Gathering and sounding on,
> The storm-wind from Labrador,
> The wind Euroclydon,
> The storm-wind!
> Longfellow, Midnight Mass.

storm-window (stôrm'win″dō), n. 1. An outer window to protect the inner from inclemency of the weather.—2. A window raised from the roof and slated above and on each side.

stormy (stôr'mi), a. [< ME. stormi, < AS. stormig (= D. Sw. stormig = MHG. sturmic, G. stürmig), < storm, storm: see storm.] 1. Characterized by storm or tempest, or by high winds; tempestuous; boisterous: as, a stormy season.

> No cloudy show of stormy blustering weather
> Doth yet in his fair welkin once appear.
> Shak., Lucrece, l. 115.

> His trumpet has often been heard by the neighbors, of a stormy night, mingling with the howling of the blast.
> Irving, Knickerbocker, p. 448.

2. Characterized by violent disturbances or contentions; agitated; turbulent.

> For love is yet the moste stormy lyf,
> Right of hymself, that ever was begonne.
> Chaucer, Troilus, ii. 778.

> His [Warren Hastings's] administration, so eventful and stormy, closed in almost perfect quiet.
> Macaulay, Warren Hastings.

3. Violent; passionate; easily roused to anger or strife.

> The lives of all your loving complices
> Lean on your health; the which, if you give o'er
> To stormy passion, must perforce decay.
> Shak., 2 Hen. IV., i. 1. 165.

> The stormy chiefs of a desert but extensive domain.
> Scott.

4. Associated with storms, as seen in them or supposed to presage them: specifically, in ornithology, noting certain petrels.—Stormy petrel. Same as storm-petrel.—Syn. 1. Windy, gusty, squally, blustering. See wind[2].

storm-zone (stôrm'zōn), n. Same as storm-belt.

> The regions between 40° and 70° latitude are the great storm zones of the world.
> R. Hinman, Eclectic Physical Geography, p. 94.

stornello (stôr-nel'lō), n.; pl. stornelli (-li). [It.] A form of Italian folk-song, usually improvised and either sentimental or satirical.

The Tuscan and Umbrian stornello is much shorter [than the rispetto], consisting, indeed, of a hemistich naming some natural object which suggests the motive of the little poem. Encyc. Brit., XIX. 272.

Storthing (stôr'ting), n. [< Dan. Norw. storthing (= Icel. stōrthing), great or high court, parliament, < stor (= Sw. stor = Icel. störr = AS. stōr, > E. stoor), great, + thing = Sw. ting = Icel. thing, assembly, meeting, = AS. thing: see thing[2].] The national parliament of Norway. It is composed of 123 members, who are chosen by indirect election. The Storthing is convened every year, and divides itself into an upper house (Lagthing) and a lower house (Odelsthing). The former is composed of one fourth, and the latter of three fourths of the members. See Lagthing and Odelsthing.

storven†. Preterit plural and past participle of Middle English sterven, die. See starve.

story[1] (stō'ri), n.; pl. stories (-riz). [< ME. storie, storye (cf. It. storia, < LL. storia), an aphetic form of istorie, historie, history: see history.] 1. A connected account or narration, oral or written, of events of the past; history.

The prime vertue of Story is verity.
Howell, Vocall Forrest, Pref.

She was well versed in the Greek and Roman story, and was not unskilled in that of France and England.
Swift, Death of Stella.

There 's themes enough in Caledonian story
Would show the tragic muse in a' her glory.
Burns, Prologue for Mr. Sutherland's Benefit. ★

2. An account of an event or incident; a relation; a recital: as, stories of bravery.

A lered man, to lere the [teach thee]
. . . of gode Friday the storye.
Piers Plowman (B), xiii. 447.

And tell sad stories of the death of kings;
How some have been deposed, some slain in war.
Shak., Rich. II., iii. 2. 156.

To make short of a long story, . . . I have been bred up from childhood with great expectations.
Dickens, Martin Chuzzlewit, vi.

3. In lit., a narrative, either true or fictitious, in prose or verse; a tale, written in a more or less imaginative style, of that which has happened or is supposed to have happened; specifically, a fictitious tale, shorter and less elaborate than a novel; a short romance; a folk-tale.

Call up him that left half-told
The story of Cambuscan bold,
Of Camball and of Algarsife,
And who had Canace to wife.
Milton, Il Penseroso, l. 110.

Voltaire has a curious essay to show that most of our best modern stories and plots originally belonged to the eastern nations. I. D'Israeli, Curios. of Lit., I. 174.

4. The facts or events in a given case considered in their sequence, whether related or not; the experience or career of an individual: as, the story of a foundling; his is a sad story.

Weep with me, all you that read
This little story.
B. Jonson, Epitaph on Salathiel Pavy.

There was not a grave in the church-yard but had its story. Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 206.

5. An anecdote: as, a speech abounding in good stories.

I will go yet further, and affirm that the success of a story very often depends upon the make of the body, and formation of the features, of him who relates it.
Steele, Guardian, No. 42.

Sometimes I recorded a story, a jest, or a pun for consideration. O. W. Holmes, The Atlantic, LXVI. 666.

6. A report; an account; a statement; anything told: often used slightingly: as, according to his story, he did wonders.

Fal. You confess, then, you picked my pocket?
Prince. It appears so by the story.
Shak., 1 Hen. IV., iii. 3. 191.

All for a slanderous story, that cost me many a tear.
Tennyson, The Grandmother.

7. A falsehood; a lie; a fib. [Colloq. and euphemistic.]

I wrote the lines; . . . owned them; he told stories. (Signed) Thomas Ingoldsby.
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 116, note.

8. The plot or intrigue of a novel or drama: as, many persons read a novel, or are interested in a play, only for the story.

It is thought clever to write a novel with no story at all, or at least with a very dull one.
R. L. Stevenson, A Gossip on Romance.

9†. A scene from history, legend, or romance, depicted by means of painting, sculpture, needlework, or other art of design.

The walles also of all the body of the Chirche, from the pyllers to the Rooff, be poyntyd with storys from the begynnyng of the world.
Torkington, Diarie of Eng. Travell, p. 49.

To erect greate Chapells, . . . to paint faire stories, and to make rich ornaments.
Guevara, Letters (tr. by Hellowes, 1577), p. 341.

There 's his chamber, . . . 'tis painted about with the story of the Prodigal, fresh and new.
Shak., M. W. of W., iv. 5. 8.

Blind story, a pointless tale.—To be in a or one story†, to be in the same story†, to agree in testimony; give the same account.

So I find they are all in a story.
Sheridan, The Duenna, ii. 3.

=Syn. 1. Relation, Narration, etc. (see account); record, chronicle, annals.—2. Anecdote, Story. See anecdote.—3. Tale, fiction, fable, tradition, legend.—4. Memoir, life, biography.

story[1] (stō'ri), v.; pret. and pp. storied, ppr. storying. [< story[1], n. Cf. history, n.] I. trans. 1. To tell or describe in historical relation; make the subject of a narrative, tale, or legend; relate.

Pigmies (those diminutive people, or sort of apes or satyrs, so much resembling the little men storied under that name). Evelyn, True Religion, I. 261.

What the sage poets, taught by the heavenly Muse,
Storied of old in high immortal verse,
Of dire chimeras, and enchanted isles.
Milton, Comus, l. 516.

2. To ornament with sculptured or painted scenes from history or legend. Compare storied[2].

II. intrans. To relate; narrate.

Cupid, if storying Legends tell aright,
Once framed a rich Elixir of Delight.
Coleridge, Composition of a Kiss.

story[2] (stō'ri), n. [Sometimes storey, early mod. E. storie, stourie; < ME. story, prob. < OF. estoree*, a building, a thing built, < estoree, fem. pp. of estorer, build, < L. instaurare, erect, build, etc.: see store[3], v.] 1†. A building; an edifice.

Hii [they] bygonne her heye tounes strengthy [strengthen] vaste aboute,
Her castles & storys, that hii myghte be ynne in doute [danger]. Rob. of Gloucester, p. 181.

2. A stage or floor of a building; hence, a subdivision of the height of a house; a set of rooms on the same level or floor. A story comprehends the distance from one floor to another: as, a story of nine, twelve, or sixteen feet elevation.

They founde the kyng in his pallaice sittynge vppon a floure or stourie made of the leaues of date trees wrought after a curious diuise lyke a certeyne kynde of mattes.
R. Eden, tr. of Antonio Pigafetta (First Books on America, [ed. Arber, p. 257).

Upon the ground storey a fair gallery, open, upon pillars; and upon the third storey likewise an open gallery upon pillars, to take the prospect and freshness of the garden. Bacon, Building (ed. 1887).

Attic story. See attic[2], 1.—Mezzanine story. Same as entresol.—The upper story, the brain; the wits. [Familiar and ludicrous.]

He 's a good sort o' man, for all he 's not overburthen'd i' th' upper storey. George Eliot, Amos Barton, i.

story-book (stō'ri-bůk), n. A book containing one or more stories or tales; a printed collection of short tales.

If you want to make presents of story-books to children, his [Richter's] are the best you can now get.
Ruskin, Elements of Drawing, App.

story-post (stō'ri-pōst), n. In building, an upright post supporting a beam on which rests a floor or a wall, as when the whole front of a ground floor is glazed.

story-rod (stō'ri-rod), n. A wooden strip used in setting up a staircase. It is equal in height to the staircase, and is divided according to the number of steps in the stairs.

story-teller (stō'ri-tel″ėr), n. 1. One who tells stories, true or fictitious, whether orally or in writing. Specifically—(a) One whose calling is the recitation of tales in public: as, the story-tellers of Arabia.

"Master," said he [Achmet], "I know many stories, such as the story-tellers relate in the coffee-houses of Cairo."
B. Taylor, Journey to Central Africa, xix.

(b) One given to relating anecdotes: as, a good story-teller at a dinner-table.

Good company will be no longer pestered with dull, dry, tedious storytellers. Swift, Polite Conversation, Int.

(c) One who tells falsehoods; a fibber. [Colloq. and euphemistic.]

Becky gave her brother-in-law a bottle of white wine, some that Rawdon had brought with him from France, . . . the little story-teller said.
Thackeray, Vanity Fair, xliv.

story-telling (stō'ri-tel″ing), n. 1. The act or art of relating stories, true or fictitious.

Story-telling . . . is not perfect without proper gesticulations of the body, which naturally attend such merry emotions of the mind. Steele, Guardian, No. 42.

2. The telling of fibs; lying. [Colloq. and euphemistic.]

story-writer (stō'ri-rī″tėr), n. 1. A writer of stories.

The story-writer's and play-writer's danger is that they will get their characters mixed, and make A say what B ought to have said.
O. W. Holmes, Atlantic Monthly, LXVI. 664.

2†. A historian; a chronicler.

Rathumus the storywriter, and Semellius the scribe, . . . and the judges. 1 Esd. ii. 17.

stosh (stosh), n. [Origin obscure.] Fish-offal; gurry; especially, a thick paste made by grinding slivers in a bait-mill, and used as toll-bait; chum; pomace.

stot[1] (stot), n. [Early mod. E. also stotte; < ME. stot, stott, stotte, a horse, a bullock; cf. Icel. stūtr, a bull, the butt-end of a horn, a stumpy thing, = Sw. stut, a bullock, also a blow, bang, dial. a young ox, a young man, = Norw. stut, a bullock, also an ox-horn, = Dan. stud, a bullock; prob. lit. 'pusher,' from the root of D. stooten = G. stossen, push, thrust, strike, = Icel. stauta, strike, beat, stutter, = Sw. stöta = Dan. stöde, strike, push, thrust, = Goth. stautan, strike. Cf. stoat, stote[1].] 1†. A horse; a stallion.

This reve sat upon a ful good stot,
That was al pomely grey and highte Scot.
Chaucer, Gen. Prol. to C. T., l. 615.

2. A young ox; a steer.

And Grace gaue Pieres of his goodnesse foure stottis, Al that his oxen eryed they to harwe after.
Piers Plowman (B), xix. 262.

To procure restitution in integrum of every stirk and stot that the chief . . . and his clan had stolen since the days of Malcolm Canmore. Scott, Waverley, xv.

The woman would work — ay, and get up at any hour; and the strength of a stot she had.
W. Black, Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 889.

3. A weasel; a stoat. See cut under stoat.

Lamb, wolf, fox, leopard, minx, stot, miniver.
Middleton, Triumphs of Love and Antiquity.

[The name was formerly applied in contempt to a human being.

"Nay, olde stot, that is not myn entente," Quod this somonour, "for to repente me."
Chaucer, Friar's Tale, l. 332.]

stot[2] (stot), v. i.; pret. and pp. stotted, ppr. stotting. [Formerly stote; < ME. stoten; = D. stooten, push, etc.: see stot[1], and cf. stotter, stut, stutter[1].] 1. To stumble; walk irregularly; bounce in walking. Compare stoit. [Prov. Eng.]

They stotted along side by side.
Miss Ferrier, Inheritance, ii. 367.

2. To rebound, as a ball. [Prov. Eng.]

stotay†, v. i. [ME. stotayen, stotaien, < OF. estoteier, estotier, estoutoier, etc., be thrown into disorder, tr. throw into disorder, maltreat (< estout, estot, etc., rash, bold, stout: see stout[1]), but in sense confused with stoten, stumble: see stot[2].] To stumble; stagger.

Than he stotays for made, and alle his strenghe faylez, Lokes upe to the lyfte, and alle his lyre chaunges!
Downne he sweys fulle swythe, and in a swoune fallys!
Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 4272.

stote[1], n. See stoat.

stote[2]†, v. See stot[2] and stut[1].

stoter†, v. i. An obsolete form of stotter.

stoteye†, n. [ME., < OF. estotie, estoutie, estutie, boldness, rashness, < estout, estot, bold, stout: see stout[1].] Cunning; stratagem.

Hade he had his ost he wold [haue] a-saide there
To haue with stoteye & strengthe stoutli hire wonne.
William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 4985.

stotter (stot'ėr), v. [< ME. stoteren; freq. of stot[2]. Cf. stutter[1].] I. intrans. To stumble. [Prov. Eng.]

II. trans. To affect with staggers.

He'd tell what bullock's fate was tragick
So right, some thought he dealt in magick;
And as well knew, by wisdom outward,
What ox must fall, or sheep be stotered.
D'Urfey, Colin's Walk, i. (Davies.)

stouk, n. An obsolete or dialectal form of stook.

stound[1]† (stound), n. [< ME. stounde, stund, stunt, stunde, < AS. stund, a time, space of time, season, = OS. stunda = OFries. stunde, stonde = MD. stonde, a time, while, moment, D. stond, a moment, = MLG. stunde, stunt, LG. stunde = OHG. stunta, stunt, MHG. stunde, a time, while, hour, G. stunde, an hour, = Icel. Sw. Dan. stund, a time, while, hour, moment; perhaps orig. 'a point of resting or standing,' and akin to stand.] A time; a short time; a while; a moment; an instant.

Now lat us stynte of Troylus a stounde.
Chaucer, Troilus, i. 1086.

Soe death is heer & yonder in one stound.
Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 129.

Upon a stound, in a moment.

stound[2] (stound), v. i. [Also stoun; = Icel. stynja = Dan. stönne = D. stenen = LG. stenen, stönen, > G. stöhnen, groan. Cf. stound[2], n.] 1. To ache; smart. [Prov. Eng.]—2. To long;

pine: as, the cows stound for grass. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

stound[2]†, n. [ME.: see stound[2], v.] Sorrow; grief; longing.

> To putte awey the stoundes stronge,
> Which in me lasten alle to longe.
> Rom. of the Rose, l. 2639.

stound[3] (stound), v. t. [A var. of stun[1], as astound of astun, aston: see stun[1], stony[2], aston, astun, etc.] 1. To stun as with strokes; beat heavily: as, to stound the ears with the strokes of a bell. [Prov. Eng.]—2. To astound; amaze.

> Your wrath, weak boy? Tremble at mine unless > Retraction follow close upon the heels
> Of that late stounding insult.
> Keats, Otho the Great, iv. 2. 95.

stound[3] (stound), n. [< stound[3], v.] 1. A stunning blow or stroke; the force of a blow.

> Like to a mazed steare,
> That yet of mortall stroke the stound doth beare.
> Spenser, F. Q., IV. vi. 37.

2. Astonishment; amazement; bewilderment.

> Thus we stood as in a stound,
> And wet with tears, like dew, the ground.
> Gay, Shepherd's Week, Prol., l. 23.

stound[4]† (stound). An obsolete past participle of stun[1]. Spenser.

stound[5] (stound), n. [A dial. var. of stond, stand: see stand, n.] A vessel to contain small beer. [Prov. Eng.]

stoundmeal† (stound'mēl), adv. [< ME. stoundmele, stoundemele, < AS. stundmǣlum, at times, < stund, time, space of time (see stound[1]), + mǣlum, dat. pl. of mǣl, a time: see meal[2], and cf. dropmeal, flockmeal, piecemeal, thousandmeal, etc.] At times; at intervals; from moment to moment: also used adjectively.

> The lyf of love is fulle contrarie,
> Which stoundemele can ofte varie.
> Rom. of the Rose, l. 2304.
>
> This wynde that moore and moore
> Thus stoundemele encresseth in my face.
> Chaucer, Troilus, v. 674.

stoup. See stoop[1], stoop[2], stoop[4].

stour[1], a. See stoor[1].

stour[2], v. and n. See stoor[2].

stour[3] (stour or stör), n. [Early mod. E. also stowre, Sc. also sture; < ME. stour, store, stor, stur, < OF. estor, estour (also rarely estorme, also estormie, estourmie, esturmie), a tumult, conflict, assault, shock, battle, = Pr. estor = It. stormo, dial. sturm, tumult, noise, bustle, throng, troop, band, < OHG. sturm, storm, battle, = E. storm: see storm. For the loss of the final m in OF., cf. OF. tour, turn, jour, day, etc., with loss of final n (see turn, tour[2]).] 1. Tumult; conflict; a warlike encounter; shock of arms; battle.

> Men sen al day and reden ek in storyes
> That after sharpe stoures ben oft victories.
> Chaucer, Troilus, iii. 1066.
>
> His horsemen they raid sturdily,
> And stude about him in the stoure.
> Raid of the Reidswire (Child's Ballads, VI. 135).

2†. A fit; a paroxysm.

> Which suddein fitt, and halfe extatick stoure,
> When the two fearefull wemen saw, they grew > Greatly confused in behaveoure.
> Spenser, F. Q., III. iii. 50.

3†. Encounter; time or place of meeting.

> Maidens blush when they kiss men;
> So did Phillis at that stowre;
> Her face was like the rose flower.
> Greene, The Shepherd's Ode (trans.).

stour[4] (stour), n. [Also stower; < ME. stoure, stourre, < Icel. staurr, a stake, pale; perhaps akin to Gr. σταυρός, a stake, cross: see steer[1] and staurus.] 1. A stake.

> And if he wille no te do soo, I salle late hym witt that ge salle sende a grete powere to his citee, and bryne it up stikke and stourre.
> MS. Lincoln A. i. 17, f. 41. (Halliwell.)

2. A round of a ladder.—3. A stave in the side of a wagon. Halliwell.—4. A long pole by which barges are propelled against the stream. Also called poy. [Prov. Eng. in all uses.]

Stourbridge clay. A refractory clay from Stourbridge, in Worcestershire, England, occurring in the coal-measures, extensively worked for the manufacture of fire-brick and crucibles.

stoured (stourd), a. [Early mod. E. stowered; < stour[4] + -ed[2].] Staked. [Prov. Eng.]

> Standyng together at a comon wateryng place ther called Hedgedyke, lately stowered for catall to drynke at.
> Archæologia, XXIII. 23. (Halliwell.) stournesst, stoury. Same as stoorness, stoory.

stout[1] (stout), a. and n. [< ME. stout, stowte, sometimes stought; < OF. stout, estout, estolt, estot, estut, F. dial. stout, proud, = Pr. estout, stout, bold, valiant, rash, impetuous, violent, < MD. stolt, D. stout, stout, bold, rash, also stupid (influenced by It. stolto, silly, < L. stultus: see stultify), = AS. stolt = OFries. stult = MLG. LG. stolt = OHG. MHG. G. stolz, proud (MHG. also foolish, due to the influence of the It. word), = Icel. stoltr = Sw. Dan. stolt, proud; perhaps akin to stilt. Hence ult. (< OF.) ME. stotay, stoteye.] I. a. 1. Bold; valiant; brave; daring.

> So sterne he was & stoute & swiche st[r]okes lent;
> Was non so stif stelen wede that with-stod his wepen.
> William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 3535.

Verily Christian did here play the man, and showed himself as stout as Hercules could, had he been here.
Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, p. 286.

Have you a stout heart? Nerves fit for sliding panels and tapestry? Jane Austen, Northanger Abbey, xx.

2†. Proud; haughty.

> I was hig of herte and stowte,
> And in my clothing wondre gay.
> Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 36.

As stout and proud as he were lord of all.
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., i. 1. 187.

3. Firm; resolute; persistent†; stubborn.

He was a great Becketist—viz, a stout opposer of Regal Power over Spiritual Persons.
Fuller, Worthies, Wilts, II. 467.

Shakespeare was Article XL. of stout old Doctor Portman's creed. Thackeray, Pendennis, ix.

4. Hardy; vigorous; lusty; sturdy.

The people of this part of Candia are stout men, and drive a great coasting trade round the island in small boats, by carrying wood, corn, and other merchandizes.
Pococke, Description of the East, II. i. 241.

> Seven braw fellows, stout and able
> To serve their king and country weel.
> Burns, Dedication to G. Hamilton.

5. Firm; sound; stanch; strong.

> The stoutest vessel to the storm gave way.
> Dryden, Æneid, i. 170.

6. Solid; substantial.

> With blithe air of open fellowship,
> Brought from the cupboard wine and stouter cheer.
> Wordsworth, Excursion, ii.

7. Bulky in figure; thick-set; corpulent.

Mrs. Reed was rather a stout woman; but . . . she ran nimbly up the stair. Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, iv.

=Syn. 1. Valorous, manful, gallant.—4 and 5. Stalwart, Sturdy, etc. See robust.

II. n. Strong ale or beer of any sort; hence, since the introduction of porter, porter of extra strength: as, Dublin stout.

> The waiter's hands, that reach
> To each his perfect pint of stout.
> Tennyson, Will Waterproof.

stout[1] (stout), v. [< ME. stouten; < stout[1], a.] I. intrans. 1†. To be bold or defiant.

> Lewed man, thou shalt cursyng doute,
> And to thy prest thou shalt nat stoute.
> MS. Harl. 1701, f. 72. (Halliwell.)

2. To persist; endure: with an impersonal it. [Prov. Eng.]

We stouted it out and lived.
Annals of Phila. and Penn., I. 385.

II.† trans. To dare; defy; resist.

> For no man ful comunly
> Besecheth a wyfe of foly,
> But there the wyfe ys aboute
> The gode man for to stoute.
> MS. Harl. 1701, f. 20. (Halliwell.)

stout[2] (stout), n. [Also stut; < ME. stout, stut, < AS. stūt, a gnat.] 1. A gnat.—2. A gadfly. [Prov. Eng. in both uses.]—3†. A firefly or miller.

Pirausta, a fire-flye; . . . some call it a candle-flie, a stout, a miller-fowle, or bishop. Florio.

stout-dart (stout'därt), n. A British noctuid moth, Agrotis ravida.

stouten (stout'n), v. t. [< stout[1] + -en[1].] To make stout; strengthen. [Rare.]

The pronounced realist is a useful fellow-creature, but so also the pronounced idealist—stouten his work though you well may with a tincture of modern reality.
R. W. Gilder, New Princeton Rev., IV. 12.

stouth (stouth), n. [< ME. stouth, stealth, < Icel. stuldr = Sw. stöld, stealth: see stealth.] Theft; stealth; also, a clandestine transaction. Jamieson. [Scotch.]

> Sum rownys till his fallow thaym betwene, > Hys mery stouth and pastyme lait ȝistrene.
> Gavin Douglas, Æneid, xii., Prol., l. 212.

stouth-and-routh (stouth'and-routh'), n. [A Sc. riming formula, in which one of the words appears to be wrenched, as usual, from its lit. meaning: prob. orig. as if 'plunder and plenty,' i. e. much property acquired and inherited: stouth, theft, stealth (cf. stouthrief, robbery with violence, also provision, furniture); routh, plenty: see routh[3].] Plenty; abundance. [Scotch.]

It 's easy for your honour and the like o' you gentle folks to say sae, that hae stouth-and-routh, and fire and fending, and meat and claith, and sit dry and canny by the fireside. Scott, Antiquary, xi.

stout-hearted (stout'här″ted), a. Having a stout or brave heart; also, obstinate.

The stouthearted are spoiled; they have slept their sleep.
Ps. lxxvi. 5.

stout-heartedness (stout'här″ted-nes), n. The quality of being stout-hearted; courage; especially, moral courage.

If any one wants to see what German stout-heartedness, rectitude, and hard work could do for Syria, he had better go and live for a while in the German colony at Haïfa.
Contemporary Rev., LIV. 366.

stouthrief (stouth'rēf), n. [Also corruptly stouthrie; < stouth + reaf, Sc. rief, reif, robbery: see reaf.] In Scots law, theft accompanied by violence; robbery; burglary. The term is usually applied in cases in which robbery is committed within a dwelling-house.

stoutly (stout'li), adv. [< ME. stoutly; < stout + -ly[2].] In a stout or sturdy manner; with boldness, stanchness, or resolution.

stoutness (stout'nes), n. [< ME. stoutnes; < stout + -ness.] The state or quality of being stout, ★in any sense.

stove[1] (stōv), n. [Early mod. E. also stoove, rarely stouph; not found in ME. and rare in AS. (see below); < MD. stove, a heated room, bath-room, also (with dim. stofken) a foot-stove used by women, later D. stoof, a stove, furnace, = MLG. stove, a heated room, bath-room, in gen. a room, LG. stove, usually stave, a bath-room, in gen. a room, = OHG. stubā, stupā, MHG. stube, a heated room, a bath-room, G. stube, a room (cf. OF. estuve, F. étuve = Pr. estuba = Sp. Pg. estufa = It. stufa, a bath-room, hothouse, < OHG.), = AS. stofa, a bath-room (glossing L. balneum), = Icel. stofa, stufa, a bath-room with a stove, = Sw. stuga = Dan. stue, a room; cf. OBulg. istŭba, izba, a tent, Bulg. a hut, cellar, = Sloven. izba, jezba, a room, = Serv. izba, a room, = Bohem. izba, jizba = Pol. izba, a bath-room, = Russ. istŭba, izba, a hut, dial. kitchen, = Albanian isbe, a cellar, = Rum. izbe, a stove, = Turk. izbe, a cellar, = OPruss. stubo = Lith. stuba = Lett. istaba = Finn. tupa = Hung. szoba, a bath-room; all prob. < OHG. or G. The orig. sense appears to have been 'a heated room.' The application of the name to a means of heating is comparatively recent. From the Teut., through OF., are derived E. stew[1] and stive[3], which are thus doublets of stove[1].] 1. A room, chamber, or house artificially warmed. [Obsolete except in the specific uses (a), (b), below.]

When a certain Frenchman came to visit Melanchthon he found him in his stove, with one hand dandling his child in the swaddling clouts and the other holding a book and reading it. Fuller.

When you have taken Care of your Horse, you come whole into the Stove, Boots, Baggage, Dirt and all, for that is a common Room for all Comers.
N. Bailey, tr. of Colloquies of Erasmus, I. 288.

Specifically—(a) In hort., a glazed and artificially heated building for the culture of tender plants: the same as a greenhouse or hothouse, except that the stove maintains a higher temperature—not lower than 60° F. See greenhouse, hothouse, and dry-stove. [Eng.] (b) A drying-chamber, as for plants, extracts, conserves, etc.; also, a highly heated drying-room, used in various manufactures.

They are sumtimes inforced to rype and dry them [grain] in theyr stooues and hottes houses.
R. Eden, tr. of Sebastian Munster (First Books on America, [ed. Arber, p. 292).

2†. A place for taking either liquid or vapor baths; a bath-house or bath-room.

In that village there was a Stoue, into which the captaine went in the morning, requesting M. Garrard to go also to the same to wash himselfe.
Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 423.

There are in Fez a hundred bath-stoues well built, with foure Hals in each, and certaine Galleries without, in which they put off their clothes.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 617.

3. A closed or partly closed vessel or receiver in which fuel is burned, the radiated heat being utilized for warming a room or for cooking. Stoves are made of cast-iron and sheet-iron, and also of earthenware in the form of tiles cemented together, of plaster held together by a frame of wire, or the like, and of masonry solidly put together. The stoves of tiles, masonry, etc., radiate less heat than iron stoves, but when heated remain hot for a long time. Stoves are divided into the two main classes of cooking-stoves and warming-stoves, and are also classified according to the fuel used, as wood-stoves, gas-stoves, etc. There are many varieties, named according to their use, as the car-stove, camp-stove, foot-stove, tinmen's stove, etc., or according to some attachment, as a water-back stove. Warming-stoves range from the open fireplace or Franklin stove to magazine and base-burning fireplaces and heaters for warming more than one room, which are more properly furnaces. The word was first used in English in this sense as applied to foot-stoves. See foot-stove, oil-stove, gas-stove.

The sempstress speeds to Change with red-tipt nose;
The Belgian stove beneath her footstool glows.
Gay, Trivia, ii. 338.

4. In ceram., a pottery-kiln.—5. In a furnace, the oven in which the blast is heated.—6. In bookbinding, an apparatus with which the finisher heats his tools, formerly made to burn charcoal, but latterly gas.—Air-tight stove. See air-tight.—Bark-stove. Same as bark-bed.—Base-burning stove. See base-burning.—Camp-stove, a small sheet-iron stove, light and portable, used for both cooking and heating, as in a tent.—Cooking-stove, a stove arranged especially for cooking, having ovens, and often a water-back, exposed to the heat of the fire, and pot-holes above the fire.—Franklin stove, a form of open stove invented by Benjamin Franklin in the early part of his life, and called by him "the Pennsylvania fireplace." The name is now given (a) to any open stove with or without doors that open widely, and with andirons or a grate similar to those of an ordinary fireplace; (b) to a kind of fireplace with back and sides of ironwork and some arrangement for heating the air in chambers which communicate with the room.—Norwegian stove, a chamber the walls of which are made as perfect non-conductors of heat as possible, used for cooking by enabling a pot or saucepan full of boiling water, placed in it, to retain its heat for a great length of time, thus stewing the meat, etc., which it may contain. The same chamber may be used as a refrigerator, as it keeps ice unmelted for a long time.—★Rotary stove. See rotary oven, under oven.

stove[1] (stōv), v. t.; pret. and pp. stoved, ppr. stoving. [< stove[1], n. Cf. stew[1], v., stive[3], v.] 1. To heat in a stove or heated room; expose to moderate heat in a vessel. Specifically—(a) To keep warm in a house or room by artificial heat: as, to stove orange-trees.

For December and January, and the latter part of November, you must take such things as are green all winter; . . . lemon-trees, and myrtles, if they be stoved.
Bacon, Gardens (ed. 1887).

(b) To heat in or as in a stove: as, to stove feathers; to stove printed fabrics (to fix the color); to stove ropes (to make them pliable); to stove timber.

Light upon some Dutchmen, with whom we had good discourse touching stoveing, and making of cables.
Pepys, Diary, II. 210.

And in 1726, when the ship was surveyed by the Master Shipwrights of Portsmouth and Deptford, with the view to her being rebuilt, it was found that the stoved planks were fresher and tougher, and appeared to have fewer defects, than those which had been charred, many of the latter being found rotten. Fincham, Ship-building, iii. 32.

(c) In vinegar-manuf., to expose (malt-wash, etc.) in casks to artificial heat in a close room, in order to induce acetous fermentation. (d) In ceram., to expose to a low heat. See pottery, porcelain, and kiln. (e) To cook in a close vessel; stew. [Scotch or prov. Eng.]

The supper was simple enough. There were oatcakes and cheese on the table, a large dish of stoved potatoes steaming and savory, and a jug of milk.
Mrs. Oliphant, Joyce, v.

2†. To shut up, as in a stove; inclose; confine.

A naked or stow'd fire, pent up within the house without any exit or succession of external fresh and unexhausted vital air, must needs be noxious and pernicious.
Evelyn, Advertisement to Quintenye. (Richardson.)

Fighting cocks . . . must then be stoved, which meant putting them in deep baskets filled with straw, covering them with straw, and shutting down the lids.
J. Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, I. 302.

★stove[2] (stōv). Preterit and past participle of stave.

stove-coal (stōv′kōl), n. Coal of either of two sizes: (a) large stove, or No. 3, which passes through a 2¼- to 2-inch mesh, and over a 1¾- to 1⅝-inch mesh, and (b) small stove, known as No. 4, which passes through a 1¾- to 1⅝-inch mesh, and over a 1⅜- to 1-inch mesh. Penn. Surv. Gloss.

stove-drum (stōv′drum), n. A chamber over a stove in which the heated gases are received before being discharged into the chimney, in order that their heat may be utilized.

stove-glass (stōv′glȧs), n. See glass.

stove-hearth (stōv′härth), n. The horizontal shelf or ledge which in some stoves lies outside and in front of the grate containing the fuel. [New Eng.]

stove-house (stōv′hous), n. Same as stove[1], 1. (a) Same as stove[1], 1 (a). (b) In the preparation of furs, a house or chamber in which the skins are dried.

The stove-house is full of iron racks upon which are placed iron rods, which receive the skins.
Ure, Dict., IV. 380.

stove-jack (stōv′jak), n. Same as smoke-jack, 2.

stovepipe (stōv′pīp), n. 1. A metal pipe for conducting smoke, gases, etc., from a stove to a chimney-flue.—2. Same as stovepipe hat. [Colloq., U. S.]—Stovepipe hat. Same as chimney-pot hat (which see, under hat[1]). [Colloq., U. S.]

He bore himself like an ancient prophet, and would have looked like one only for his black face and a rusty stove-pipe hat.
Harper's Mag., LXXX. 391.

stovepiping (stōv′pī″ping), n. [< stovepipe + -ing.] Tubing for a stovepipe.

A piece of stove-piping about 18 in. long.
Workshop Receipts, 2d ser., p. 102.

stove-plant (stōv′plant), n. A plant cultivated in a stove. See stove[1], 1 (a).

stove-plate (stōv′plāt), n. 1. One of the plates or lids serving to cover the apertures in the top of a cooking-stove; a griddle.—2. Same as stove-hearth. Trans. Amer. Philol. Ass., XVII., App., p. xii. [Pennsylvania.]

stove-polish (stōv′pol″ish), n. See polish[1].

stover[1] (stō′vėr), n. [< ME. stover, < OF. es-★tover, estovoir, necessaries, < estover, estoveir, estovoir, estuvoir, estevoir, astovoir, istovoir, entovoir, stovoir, used impers., it is necessary; origin unknown.] Fodder and provision of all sorts for cattle. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

Where live nibbling sheep,
And flat meads thatch'd with stover, them to keep.
Shak., Tempest, iv. 1. 63.

stover[2]† (stō′vėr), v. i. [Origin obscure.] To bristle up; stiffen. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

Beard, be confin'd to neatness, that no hair
May stover up to prick my mistress' lip.
Ford, Love's Sacrifice, ii. 1.

stove-truck (stōv′truk), n. 1. In a cannon-foundry, a truck on which ordnance is moved.—2. A truck for moving heavy stoves. It is run under the stove, when, by means of a lever, its platform is raised, and lifts the stove. The lever serves as a ★handle for guiding the truck. E. H. Knight.

stow[1] (stō), v. t. [< ME. stowen, stawen, stewen, < AS. stowigan, stow, = MD. stouwen, stuwen, D. stuwen = MLG. stouwen, stowen, LG. stauen, bring to a stand, hinder, = OHG. stowan, stouwan, stuwan, stūan, stūen, stuowan, MHG. stouwen, G. stauen, bring to a halt, hem in, stow, pack, = Sw. stufva = Dan. stuve, stow, pack (< LG. ?); lit. 'place,' 'put in place,' < stow, a place, = OFries. sto, a place, = Icel. stō*, in eld-stō, a fireplace, = Lith. stowa, a place where one stands; prob. from the root of stand (√ sta): see stand, staw. But the continental forms (to which is due stow[2]) may not be connected with the AS. verb, which is rare. Cf. bestow. See also stew[2].] 1. To put in a suitable or convenient place or position; put in a place aside or out of the way; lay up; put up; pack; especially, to pack in a convenient form: as, to stow bags, bales, or casks in a ship's hold; to stow sheaves.

He radde religion here ruele to holde,
"Leste the kyng and hus consail 3oure comunes a-peyre,
And be stywardes of 3oure stedes til 3e be stewed betere."
Piers Plowman (C), vi. 146.

Foul thief, where hast thou stow'd my daughter?
Shak., Othello, i. 2. 62.

We pointed to the white rolls of stowed hammocks in the nettings.
J. W. Palmer, Up and Down the Irrawaddi, p. 219.

2. To accumulate or compactly arrange anything in; fill by packing closely: as, to stow a box or the hold of a ship.

The tythe o' what ye waste at cartes
Wad stow'd his pantry!
Burns, To W. Simpson.

3. To contain; hold.

Shall thy black bark those guilty spirits stow
That kill themselves for love?
Fletcher, Mad Lover, iv. 1.

There was an English ship then in the roads, whereof one Mr. Mariot was master; he entertained as many as his ship could stow. Winthrop, Hist. New England, II. 293.

4. To furl or roll up, as a sail.—5. In mining, to fill up (vacant spaces) with stowing. A mine is worked by the method of stowing when all the valuable substance—ore, or coal, or whatever it may be—is taken out, and the vacant space packed full of deads or refuse, either that furnished by the workings themselves, or stuff brought from the surface, or both together.

6†. To bestow; give; grant.

If thou dost flow
In thy frank guiftes, & thy golde freely stow,
The principall will make thy pennance ebbe.
Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 81.

7†. To intrust; commit, give in charge.

Stowyne or waryne, or besettyne, as men done moneye or chaffer. Commuto. Prompt. Parv., p. 478.

To stow down. (a) To put in the hold of a vessel; stow away; specifically, to run (oil) into the casks of a whaler. (b) To furnish as the stowdown: as, the whale stowed down 75 barrels of oil.

stow[2] (stō), v. [ME. stowen: see stow[1].] I. trans. 1†. To resist; hinder; stop.

3iff any man stow me this nyth,
I xal hym 3eve a dedly wownde.
Coventry Mysteries, p. 217. (Halliwell.)

2. To put out of sight or hearing; be silent about. [Slang.]

Now if you'll stow all that gammon and speak commonsense for three minuts, I'll tell you my mind right away.
Whyte Melville, White Rose, II. xx.

II.† intrans. To make resistance; resist.

Thay stekede stedys in stoure with stelene wapynes,
And alle stowede wyth strenghe that stode theme agaynes!
Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 1489.

stow[3] (stou), v. t. [Cf. LG. stuve, stuf, a remnant, stuf, blunt, stumpy.] To cut off; crop; lop. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

If ever any body should affront his kinsman, . . . he would stow his lugs out of his head, were he the best man in Glasgow. Scott, Rob Roy, xxxvi.

stow[4] (stō), n. [A dial. var. of stove[1].] In tin-plate manuf., the structure which contains the furnace and the series of five pots. [Prov. Eng.]

stow[4] (stō), v. t. [A dial. var. of stove[1].] To dry in an oven. [Prov. Eng.]

stowage (stō′āj), n. [< stow[1] + -age.] 1. The act or operation of stowing.

Coasting vessels, in the frequent hurry and bustle attendant upon taking in or discharging cargo, are the most liable to mishap from the want of a proper attention to stowage. Poe, Narrative of A. Gordon Pym, vi.

2. The state of being stowed; also, a place in which something is or may be stowed; room for stowing.

I am something curious, being strange,
To have them [jewels, etc.] in safe stowage.
Shak., Cymbeline, i. 6. 192.

They may as well sue for Nunneries, that they may have some convenient stowage for their wither'd daughters.
Milton, On Def. of Humb. Remonst.

In every vessel there is stowage for immense treasures.
Addison. (Johnson.)

3. Money paid for stowing goods.—4. That which is stowed.

We ha' ne'er better luck
When we ha' such stowage as these trinkets with us.
Fletcher (and another), Sea Voyage, i. 1.

stowaway (stō′a-wā″), n. [< stow[1] + away.] One who, in order to secure a free passage, conceals himself aboard an outward-bound vessel, with the hope of remaining undiscovered until too late to be sent ashore.

stowdown (stō′doun), n. The act of stowing down, also that which is stowed down, in the hold of a vessel.

stower[1] (stō′ėr), n. [< stow[1] + -er[1].] One who stows; specifically, a workman who assists in stowing away the cargo in the hold of a vessel.

stower[2], stowered†. See stour[4], stoured.

stowing (stō′ing), n. In mining, rubbish, or material of any kind, taken from near at hand, or brought from the surface, and used to fill up places from which ore, coal, or other valuable substance has been removed.

stowlins (stō′linz), adv. [Contracted from stolenlings*, < stolen + -ling[2].] Stealthily.

Rab, stowlins, prie'd her bonnie mou' . . .
Unseen that night. Burns, Halloween.

stown (stoun). A Scotch past participle of steal.

My mither she fell sick, and the cow was stown awa.
Auld Robin Gray.

stowre†. Same as stoor[1], stoor[2].

stow-wood (stō′wůd), n. Naut., billets of wood used for steadying casks in a vessel's hold.

S. T. P. An abbreviation of Sacræ or Sacrosanctæ Theologiæ Professor, Professor of Sacred Theology.

stra†, n. An obsolete form of straw[1].

strabism (strā′bizm), n. [< NL. strabismus.] Same as strabismus.

strabismal (strā-biz′mal), a. [< strabism + -al.] Same as strabismic.

strabismic (strā-biz′mik), a. [< strabism + -ic.] Pertaining to, affected by, or involving strabismus; squinting; distorted.

strabismical (strā-biz′mi-kal), a. [< strabismic + -al.] Same as strabismic. Science, XIII. 364.

strabismometer (strab-is-mom′e-tėr), n. [< NL. strabismus, q. v., + Gr. μέτρον, measure.] An instrument for measuring strabismus; a strabometer.

strabismus (strā-bis′mus), n. [= F. strabisme, < NL. strabismus, < Gr. στραβισμός, a squinting, < στραβός, crooked, distorted, < στρέφειν, twist, turn about.] Squint; a failure of one of the visual axes to pass through the fixation-point (the point which is looked at). The eye whose visual axis passes through the fixation-point is called the working eye, the other the squinting eye.—Absolute strabismus, strabismus occurring for all distances of the fixation-point.—Concomitant strabismus, strabismus which remains about the same in amount for all positions of the fixation-point.—Convergent strabismus, strabismus in which the visual axes cross between the fixation-point and the eyes. Diplopia from this cause is said to be homonymous.—Divergent strabismus, divergent squint, in which the visual axes diverge, or at least cross beyond the fixation-point. Diplopia from this cause is said to be crossed.—Latent strabismus, strabismus existing only when one eye is occluded.—Manifest strabismus, strabismus occurring when both eyes are open.—Monolateral strabismus, strabismus in which it is always the visual axis of the same eye which fails to pass through the fixation-point.—Relative strabismus, strabismus occurring for some and not for other distances of the fixation-point.—Strabismus deorsum vergens, downward squint, in which the visual axis of the squinting eye passes lower than the fixation-point.—Strabismus sursum vergens, upward squint, in which the visual axis of the squinting eye passes higher than the fixation-point.

strabometer (strā-bom′e-tėr), n. [< Gr. στραβός, crooked, + μέτρον, measure.] An instrument for measuring strabismus; a strabismometer.

strabotomy (strā-bot′ō-mi), n. [< Gr. στραβός, crooked, distorted (< στρέφειν, twist, turn about), + -τομία, < τέμνειν, ταμεῖν, cut.] In surg., the operation for the cure of squinting by cutting the attachment of a muscle or muscles to the eyeball.

strachy†, n. A word of doubtful form and meaning, occurring only in the following passage, where in the earlier editions it is italicized as a title or proper name.

There is example for't; the lady of the Strachy married the yeoman of the wardrobe. Shak., T. N., iii. 5. 45.

stracken†. An obsolete past participle of strike. Chaucer.

stract (strakt), a. [Aphetic form of distract.] Distracted. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

So I did, but he came afterwards as one stract and besides himselfe. Terence in English (1614). (Nares.)

strad (strad), n. [Origin obscure.] A kind of leather gaiter worn as a protection against thorns. Halliwell.

straddle (strad′l), v.; pret. and pp. straddled, ppr. straddling. [A var. of stridle, striddle, freq. of stride: see striddle, stride.] I. intrans. 1. To stand or walk with the legs wide apart; sit or stand astride.

At length (as Fortune serude) I lighted vppon an old, straddling usurer. Nashe, Pierce Penilesse, p. 11.

Then Apollyon straddled quite over the whole breadth of the way, and said, I am void of fear in this matter. Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, i.

2. To include or favor two apparently opposite or different things; occupy or take up an equivocal position in regard to something: as, to straddle on the tariff question. [Colloq.]

II. trans. 1. To place one leg on one side and the other on the other side of; stand or sit astride of: as, to straddle a fence or a horse.—2. To occupy or take up an equivocal position in regard to; appear to favor both sides of: as, to straddle a political question. [Colloq.]

The platform [of the Ohio Democrats] contains the well-known plank straddling the tariff question, which has appeared in previous Democratic platforms of that and other States. The Nation, July 3, 1884, p. 4.

3. To double (the blind) in poker.

straddle (strad′l), n. [< straddle, v.] 1. The act of standing or sitting with the legs far apart.—2. The distance between the feet or legs of one who straddles.—3. In speculative dealings on 'change, a "privilege" or speculative contract covering both a "put" and a "call"—that is, giving the holder the right at his option (1) of calling, within a specified number of days, for a certain stock or commodity at a price named in the contract, or (2) of delivering to the person to whom the consideration had been paid a certain stock or commodity upon terms similarly stated. See call[1], n., 15, privilege, n., 5, and put[1], n., 5. Also called spread eagle. [Slang.]—4. In the game of poker, a doubling of the blind by the player immediately to the left of the age.—5. An attempt to take an equivocal or non-committal position. [Colloq.]—6. In mining, one of the vertical timbers by which the different sets are supported at a fixed distance from each other in the shaft; a vertical post used in various ways in timbering a mine, as in supporting the framework of a shaft at a hanging-on place.

straddle (strad′l), adv. [Short for astraddle.] Astride; with straddled legs: as, to ride straddle.

straddle-bug (strad′l-bug), n. A sort of tumble-bug; a scarabæid beetle with long legs, of the genus Canthon, as C. lævis. See cut under tumble-bug. [U. S.]

Out in the woods for a good time. Cloth spread on the green-sward, crickets and straddle bugs hopping and crawling over sandwiches and everything else.
St. Nicholas, XVII. 12, advt.

straddle-legged (strad′l-legd), a. Having the legs wide apart; with the legs astride of an object. W. H. Russell.

straddle-pipe (strad′l-pīp), n. In gas-manuf., a bridge-pipe connecting the retort with the hydraulic main. E. H. Knight.

straddle-plow (strad′l-plou), n. A plow with two triangular parallel shares set a short distance apart, used to cover a row of corn, etc., by running it so that the line of seed comes between the shares. E. H. Knight.

stradiot† (strad′i-ot), n. [< OF. stradiot, estradiot: see estradiot.] Same as estradiot.

strae (strā), n. A Scotch form of straw[1].

straget, n. [< L. strages, slaughter.] Slaughter; destruction.

He presaged the great strage and messacre which after hapned in Sicilia. Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 230.

★straggle (strag′l), v. i.; pret. and pp. straggled, ppr. straggling. [Formerly also stragle; a var. of strackle*, freq. of strake (perhaps due in part to the influence of draggle, but cf. stagger for stacker[1]): see strake[1]. Straggle is not connected with stray.] 1. To roam or wander away, or become separated, as from one's companions or the direct course or way; stray.

In the plain beyond us, for we durst not straggle from the shore, we beheld where once stood Ilium by him [Ilus] founded. Sandys, Travailes, p. 16.

I found my self four or five Mile to the West of the Place where I stragled from my Companions.
Dampier, Voyages, II. ii. 84.

2. To roam or wander at random, or without any certain direction or object; ramble.

Master George How, one of the Councell, stragling abroad, was slaine by the Salvages.
Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 100.

3. To escape or stretch out ramblingly or beyond proper limits; spread widely apart; shoot too far in growth.

Trim off the small superfluous branches on each side of the hedge, that straggle too far out.
Mortimer, Husbandry.

How these tall
Naked geraniums straggle!
Browning, Pippa Passes, i.

4. To be dispersed; be apart from any main body; stand alone; be isolated; occur at intervals or apart from one another; occur here and there: as, the houses straggle all over the district.

straggler (strag′lėr), n. [< straggle + -er[1].] 1. One who straggles or strays away, as from his fellows or from the direct or proper course; one who lags behind or becomes separated in any way from his companions, as from a body of troops on the march.

This maner of speech is termed the figure of digression by the Latines, following the Greeke originall; we also call him the straggler, by allusion to the souldier that marches out of his array. Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 195.

The first stragglers of a battalion of rocks, guarding a sort of pass, beyond which the beck rushed down a waterfall. Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xxxiv.

2. Specifically, in ornith., a stray, or strayed bird, out of its usual range, or off its regular migration. The stragglers are the casual or accidental visitants in any avifauna. In the nature of the case they are never numerous as regards individuals; but the list of what are technically called stragglers in any region or locality usually becomes, in the course of time, a long one, so far as species are concerned. Thus, in the avifauna of the District of Columbia, the stragglers are about as many species as the regular visitants of either summer or winter, or the permanent residents of the year round, though fewer than the spring and autumn migrants.

3. One who roams or wanders about at random, or without settled direction or object; a wanderer; a vagabond; especially, a wandering, shiftless fellow; a tramp.

Let 's whip these stragglers o'er the seas again.
Shak., Rich. III., v. 3. 327.

Bottles missing are supposed to be half stolen by stragglers and other servants.
Swift, Advice to Servants (Butler).

4. Something that shoots beyond the rest or too far; an exuberant growth.

Let thy hand supply the pruning-knife,
And crop luxuriant stragglers.
Dryden, tr. of Virgil's Georgics, ii. 503.

5. Something that stands apart from others; a solitary or isolated individual.

I in a manner alone of that tyme left a standing straggler, peradventur, though my frute be very smaul, yet, bicause the grownd from whens it sprong was so good, I may yet be thought somwhat fitt for seede, whan all yow the rest ar taken up for better store.
Ascham, in Ellis's Lit. Letters, p. 14.

straggle-tooth (strag′l-töth), n. An irregular or misshapen tooth; a snaggle-tooth; a snag.

straggling (strag′ling), n. [Verbal n. of straggle, v.] A mode of dressing the surfaces of grindstones.

stragglingly (strag′ling-li), adv. In a straggling manner; one here and one there, or one now and one again: as, to come in stragglingly.

straggling-money (strag′ling-mun″i), n. In the British navy: (a) Money given to those who apprehend deserters or others who have straggled or overstayed their leave of absence. (b) Money deducted from the wages of a man absent from duty without leave.

straggly (strag′li), a. [< straggle + -y[1].] Straggling; lone and spread out irregularly: as, a straggly scrawl; a straggly village. [Colloq.]

stragular (strag′ū-lär), a. In ornith., pertaining to the stragulum or mantle; pallial.

stragulum (strag′ū-lum), n.; pl. stragula (-lä). [< L. stragulum, a cover, coverlet: see strail.] In ornith., the mantle; the pallium; the back and folded wings taken together, in any way distinguished from other parts, as by color on a gull or tern. [Rare.]

strahlite (strä′līt), n. [< G. strahl, a ray, beam, ★arrow (see strale), + -ite[2].] Same as actinolite.

straight[1] (strāt), a. and n. [Formerly also streight, straught, Sc. straught, straucht, and, with the omission of the silent guttural, strait (prob. by confusion with the diff. word strait[1], narrow, strict, which was also, on the other hand, formerly spelled straight); < ME. streight, streght, streizt, rarely streit, straight, lit. 'stretched,' < AS. streht, pp. of streccan, stretch: see stretch. Cf. ME. strek, strik, < AS. strec, stræc, streac = MLG. LG. strak = OHG. strach, MHG. strac, G. strack, extended, stretched, straight, = Dan. (obs.) strag, straight, erect, tight; from the same ult. root. Cf. the equiv. right, lit. 'stretched.'] I. a. 1†. Stretched; drawn out.

Sithe thi fleisch, lord, was furst perceyued
And, for oure sake, laid streizt in stalle.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 252.

Pirrus with his streite sword.
Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, l. 537.

2. Without bend or deviation, like a string tightly stretched; not crooked or curved; right; in geom., lying, as a line, evenly between its points. This is Euclid's definition. The principal characteristic of a straight line is that it is completely determined, if unlimited, by any two points taken upon it, or, if limited, by its two extremities. The idea of measurement does not enter into the idea of a straight line, and it is unnecessary to introduce that idea into the definition, as is done when it is said (after Legendre) to be the shortest distance between two points.

He that knoweth what is straight doth even thereby discern what is crooked, because the absence of straightness in bodies capable thereof is crookedness.
Hooker, Eccles. Polity, i. 8.

There is no moe such Cæsars; other of them may have crook'd noses, but to owe such straight arms, none.
Shak., Cymbeline, iii. 1. 38.

Be pleased to let thy Holy Spirit lead me in the straight paths of sanctity, without deflections to either hand.
Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 86.

3. Without interruption or break; direct.

Forth-with declarid to hys peple all,
And to thys cite his peple gan cal,
Wher-vnto thai had an euyn streight way.
Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 1308.

With straight air—that is, with the pressure from the main reservoir, or the air-pump, going directly to the brake cylinder—the engineer can apply the brakes to all the wheels of his train simultaneously.
Scribner's Mag., VI. 333.

4. Direct; authoritative; sure; reliable: as, a straight tip. [Slang.]—5. Upright; marked by adherence to truth and fairness; fair; honorable: as, a man straight in all his dealings. [Colloq.]—6. Proceeding or acting with directness; keeping true to the course. [Colloq.]

He shows himself to be a man of wide reading, a pretty straight thinker, and a lively and independent critic.
The Nation, Dec. 6, 1888, p. 459.

7. Free from disorder or irregularity; in order: as, his accounts are not quite straight.

Finally, being belted, curled, and set straight, he descended upon the drawing-room.
Thackeray, Pendennis, vii.

He told her that she needn't mind the place being not quite straight, he had only come up for a few hours—he should be busy in the studio.
H. James, Jr., The Century, XXXVI. 218.

8. Unqualified; unreserved; out-and-out: as, a straight Democrat (that is, one who supports the entire platform and policy of his party).—9. Unmixed; undiluted; neat. [Slang.]

Dissipating their rare and precious cash on "whisky straight" in the ever-recurring bar-rooms.
Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XXXIX. 76.

10. East and west; along an east and west line: used of the position of the body in Christian burial.

First Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial that wilfully seeks her own salvation?
Sec. Clo. I tell thee she is; and therefore make her grave straight; the crowner hath sat on her, and finds it Christian burial. Shak., Hamlet, v. 1. 4.

11. In poker, consisting of a sequence; forming a straight: as, a straight hand; a straight flush.—A straight face, an unsmiling face; a sober, unamused expression: as, he could with difficulty keep a straight face. [Colloq.]—Long straight†. See long[1].—Straight accents, the long marks over the vowels, as ā, ē, ī, ō, ū, ȳ.—Straight angle. See angle[3], 1.—Straight arch, in arch., a form of arch spanning an aperture in which the intrados is represented by straight lines which meet in a point at the top and comprise two sides of a triangle.—Straight ends and walls, a system of working coal, somewhat similar to "board and pillar." [North Wales.]—Straight flush. See flush[9].—Straight intestine, bowel, or gut, the rectum. See cuts under alimentary, intestine, and peritoneum.—Straight sheer. See sheer[3], 1.—Straight sinus, ticket, tubule, etc. See the nouns.

II. n. 1. The condition of being straight, or free from curvature or crookedness of any kind: as, to be out of the straight. [Colloq.] —2. A straight part or direction: as, the straight of a piece of timber.—3. In poker, a sequence of cards, generally five in number, or a hand containing such a sequence.

straight[1] (strāt), adv. [< ME. streight, streyght, streyghte, etc.; < straight[1], a.] 1. In a straight line; without swerving or deviating from the direct course; directly.

Streight aforn hym a fair feld gan behold.
Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 4661.

Floating straight, obedient to the stream.
Shak., C. of E., i. 1. 87.

2. At once; immediately; directly; straightway.

And went streyghte into the Hospytall, and refresshed vs with mete and drynke, and rested vs there an houre or .ij. bycause of our watche the nyght byfore.
Sir R. Guylforde, Pylgrymage, p. 28.

Shew him an enemy, his pain 's forgot straight.
Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, i. 1.

straight[1] (strāt), v. t. [< straight[1], a.] To make straight; straighten. [Rare.]

The old gypsy, in the mean time, set about arranging the dead body, composing its limbs, and straighting the arms by its side. Scott, Guy Mannering, xxvii.

straight[2]†, a. and n. An obsolete spelling of ★strait[1].

straightaway (strāt'a-wā″), a. Straight forward, without turn or curve: as, a straightaway course in a yacht- or horse-race.

At the Ascot, where I was last Thursday, the course is a straightaway one. T. C. Crawford, English Life, p. 28.

straight-billed (strāt'bild), a. Having the bill straight, as a bird; rectirostral.

straight-cut (strāt'kut), a. Cut in a straight manner: applied to fine grades of cut smoking tobacco. The leaves are flattened out, packed compactly, and cut lengthwise, long fibers being thus obtained that present a beautiful silky appearance.

★straight-edge (strāt'ej), n. A bar having one edge, at least, as straight as possible, to be used as a fiducial line in drawing and testing straight lines. Such instruments when of the greatest accuracy are somewhat costly. Common straight-edges for ruling ordinary lines, testing the surface of millstones, brickwork and stonework, etc., are made of wood, and range from a slip of wood one foot long to planks cut in the form of a truss and ten or more feet in length. See cut under plumb-rule.

straighten[1] (strā'tn), v. [< straight[1] + -en[1].] I. trans. To make straight, in any sense; specifically, to reduce from a crooked to a straight form.

A crooked stick is not straightened unless it be bent as far on the clean contrary side.
Hooker, Eccles. Polity, iv. 8.

To straighten the sheer. See sheer[3].

II. intrans. To become straight; assume a straight form.

straighten[2], v. t. See straiten.

straightener (strāt'nėr), n. [< straighten[1] + -er[1].] One who or that which straightens.

straightening-block (strāt'ning-blok), n. An anvil used in straightening buckled saws. E. H. Knight.

straightening-machine (strāt'ning-ma-shēn″), n. In metal-work, any machine for removing a twist, bend, buckle, or kink from rails, rods, plates, straps, tubes, or wire.

straightforth† (strāt'fôrth'), adv. [Early mod. E. streight foorth; < straight[1] + forth[1].] Directly; straightway.

She smote the ground, the which streight foorth did yield A fruitfull Olyve tree. Spenser, Muiopotmos, l. 325.

straightforward (strāt'fôr'wärd), adv. [Also straightforwards, formerly also straitforward; < straight[1] + forward[1].] Directly forward; right ahead.

Look not on this side or that side, or behind you as Lot's wife did, but straightforwards on the end.
J. Bradford, Letters (Parker Soc., 1853), II. 211.

straightforward (strāt'fôr'wärd), a. [< straightforward, adv.] 1. Direct; leading directly forward or onward.

Midway upon the journey of our life
I found myself within a forest dark,
For the straightforward pathway had been lost.
Longfellow, tr. of Dante's Inferno, i. 3.

2. Characterized by uprightness, honesty, or frankness; honest; frank; open; without deviation or prevarication: as, a straightforward course; a straightforward person, character, or answer.

In prose he wrote as he conversed and as he preached, using the plain straightforward language of common life.
Southey, Bunyan, p. 40.

straightforwardly (strāt'fôr'wärd-li), adv. In a straightforward manner. Athenæum, No. 3258, p. 451.

straightforwardness (strāt'fôr'wärd-nes), n. Straightforward character or conduct; undeviating rectitude: as, a man of remarkable straightforwardness.

straight-hearted, a. See strait-hearted.

straight-horn (strāt'hôrn), n. A fossil cephalopod of the family Orthoceratidæ, some of which were 12 or 15 feet long; an orthoceratite. P. P. Carpenter.

straight-joint (strāt'joint), a. Noting a floor the boards of which are so laid that the joints form a continuous line throughout the length.

straightly[1] (strāt'li), adv. [< straight[1] + -ly[2].] In a straight line; not crookedly; directly: as, to run straightly on. Imp. Dict.

straightly[2]†, adv. An obsolete spelling of straitly.

straightness (strāt'nes), n. The property or state of being straight.

straight-out (strāt'out), a. and n. I. a. Out-and-out; straight: as, straight-out Republicans.

II. n. In U. S. politics, one who votes a straight or strictly party ticket; a thorough partizan.

Other Straight-outs, as they call themselves, . . . cannot take Grant and the Republicans.
The Nation, Aug. 22, 1872, p. 113

straight-pight† (strāt'pīt), a. [< straight[1] + pight.] Straight-fixed; erect.

Straight-pight Minerva. Shak., Cymbeline, v. 5. 164.

straight-ribbed (strāt'ribd), a. In bot., having the lateral ribs straight, as leaves of Castanea, palms, etc.

straightway (strāt'wā), adv. [< ME. streightwey; < straight[1] + way[1].] Immediately; forthwith; without loss of time; without delay.

Thei hilde her streight-wey toward north wales to a Citee that longed to the kynge Tradily-uaunte.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 558.

And straightway the damsel arose and walked.
Mark v. 42.

straightways† (strāt'wāz), adv. [< straightway + adv. gen. -s.] Straightway.

None of the three could win a palm of ground but the other two would straightways balance it.
Bacon, Empire (ed. 1887).

straight-winged (strāt'wingd), a. In entom., having straight wings; orthopterous.

straik[1], n. A Scotch spelling of strake[2].

straik[2], v. t. A Scotch form of stroke[2].

strail†, n. [< ME. strayle, < AS. streagl, strægel,* contr. strǣl, a bed-cover, carpet, rug, = OF. stragule, a mantle, coverlet, < L. stragulum, a spread, covering, coverlet, blanket, carpet, rug, also stragula, a covering, blanket; neut. and fem. respectively of stragulus, serving for spreading or covering, < sternere, pp. stratus, spread, strew: see stratum.] A covering; a coverlet.

★Prompt. Parv., p. 478.

strain[1] (strān), v. [Early mod. E. also strayne; < ME. straynen, streinen, streynen, straynyen, < OF. streindre, estraindre, straindre, F. étreindre = Pr. estrenher, estreigner = It. strignere, stregnere, stringere, < L. stringere, pp. strictus, draw tight; akin to Gr. στραγγός, twisted, στραγγίζειν, press out, Lith. stregti, become stiff, freeze, AS. streccan, stretch, etc.: see stretch, straight[1]. From L. stringere are also ult. E. constrain, distrain, restrain, stringent, strait[1], strict, etc.] I. trans. 1†. To draw out; stretch; extend, especially with effort or care.

And if thi vynes footes IV ascende, Thenne armes IV is goode forth forto streyne.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 70.

All their actions, voyces, and gestures, both in charging and retiring, were so strained to the height of their qualitie and nature that the strangenesse thereof made it seeme very delightfull. Capt. John Smith, Works, I. 136.

2†. To draw tight; tighten; make taut.

To the pyller, lorde, also,
With a rope men bownd the too,
Hard drawe and streynyd faste.
Holy Rood (E. E. T. S.), p. 181.

Sir Mungo, who watched his victim with the delighted yet wary eye of an experienced angler, became now aware that, if he strained the line on him too tightly, there was every risk of his breaking hold.
Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, xv.

3†. To confine; restrain; imprison.

There the steede in stoode strayned in bondes.
Alisaunder of Macedoine (E. E. T. S.), l. 1157.

4. To stretch to the utmost tension; put to the stretch; exert: as, to strain every nerve to accomplish something.

He sweats,
Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture
That acts my words. Shak., Cymbeline, iii. 3. 94.

5. To stretch beyond measure; push beyond the proper extent or limit; carry too far.

He strained the Constitution, but he conquered the Lords. N. A. Rev., CXLII. 593.

6. To impair, weaken, or injure by stretching or overtasking; harm by subjection to too great stress or exertion; hence, to sprain.

Hold, sir, hold, pray use this whistle for me,
I dare not straine my selfe to winde it I,
The Doctors tell me it will spend my spirits.
Brome, Sparagus Garden, iv. 7.

Prudes decay'd about may tack,
Strain their necks with looking back. Swift.

7. To force; constrain.

Whether that Goddes worthy forwetyng
Streyneth me nedely for to don a thing.
Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, l. 422.

The quality of mercy is not strain'd.
Shak., M. of V., iv. 1. 184.

His mirth
Is forc'd and strain'd.
Sir J. Denham, The Sophy. (Latham.)

8. To urge; press.

Note if your lady strain his entertainment
With any strong or vehement importunity.
Shak., Othello, iii. 3. 250.

9. To press; squeeze; hence, to hug; embrace.

He that nyght in armes wold hire streyne Harder than ever Paris did Eleyne.
Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, l. 509.

I would have strain'd him with a striet embrace.
Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Metamorph., x. 407.

10. To press through a filter or colander; separate extraneous or coarser matters from (a liquid) by causing it to pass through a filter or colander; purify from extraneous matter by filtration; filter: as, to strain milk.—11. To separate or remove by the use of a filter or colander: with out. See phrase under v. i., below.

Ye blind guides, which strain out the gnat, and swallow the camel. Mat. xxiii. 24 [R. V.].

12†. To force out by straining.

I at each sad strain will strain a tear.
Shak., Lucrece, l. 1131.

13. To deform, as a solid body or structure.—To strain a point. See point[1].—To strain courtesy, to use ceremony; stand too much upon form or ceremony; insist on the precedence of others; hang back through excess of courtesy or civility.

My business was great; and in such a case as mine a man may strain courtesy. Shak., R. and J., ii. 4. 55.

Strain not courtesies with a noble enemy.
Lamb, Two Races of Men.

=Syn. 10. Bolt, Screen, etc. See sift.

II. intrans. 1. To exert one's self; make violent efforts; strive.

To build his fortune I will strain a little.
Shak., T. of A., i. 1. 143.

What
Has made thy life so vile that thou shouldst strain
To forfeit it to me? J. Beaumont, Psyche, ii. 105.

2. To urge; press.

Nay, Sir, indeed the fault is yours most extreamlie now. Pray, sir, forbear to strain beyond a womans patience.
Brome, Northern Lass, iii. 3.

3. To stretch strugglingly; stretch with effort.

This parlor looked out on the dark courtyard, in which there grew two or three poplars, straining upward to the light. Mrs. Gaskell, Sylvia's Lovers, iii.

No sound, no sight as far as eye could strain.
Browning, Childe Roland.

4. To undergo distortions under force, as a ship in a high sea.

A ship is said to strain if in launching, or when working in a heavy sea, the different parts of it experience relative motions. Sir W. Thomson, in Phil. Trans., CXLVI. 481.

The ship ran
Straining, heeled o'er, through seas all changed and wan.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, III. 10.

5. To drip; ooze; filter; drain; flow; issue: as, water straining through sand becomes pure.

Then, in the Deserts dry and barren sand,
From flinty Rocks doth plentious Rivers strain.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Triumph of Faith, iii. 18.

To strain at, to strive after; endeavor to reach or obtain.

I do not strain at the position.
Shak., T. and C., iii. 3. 112.

To strain at a gnat, a typographical error found in the authorized version (Mat. xxiii. 24) for strain out a gnat, the phrase found in Tyndale's and Coverdale's and other ★versions. See def. 11, above, and quotation there.

strain[1] (strān), n. [< strain[1], v. In some uses (def. 7), cf. strain[2].] 1†. Stretch; extent; pitch.

If it did infect my blood with joy,
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride.
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., iv. 5. 171.

May our Minerva
Answer your hopes, unto their largest strain!
B. Jonson, Every Man out of his Humour, Ind.

2. Stretching or deforming force or pressure; violence. [This use of the word, while permissible in literature, is incorrect in mechanics. The strain is not the force, but the deformation produced by the force.]

A difference of taste in jokes is a great strain on the affections. George Eliot, Daniel Deronda, xv.

3. Tense or constrained state or condition; tension; great effort.

A dismal wedding! every ear at strain
Some sign of things that were to be to gain.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, II. 314.

Whether any poet . . . has exerted a greater variety of powers with less strain and less ostentation. Landor.

4. In mech., the effect on a body of the application of any system of balanced forces. Where the forces applied to a body are in equilibrium, so that no acceleration results, the body is changed either in shape or size or both and the deformation produced is taken as a measure of the strain. Strain is indeed frequently defined as the deformation thus produced. The word, which had previously been ill-defined, was made a scientific and precise term in this sense by Rankine in 1850. Thomson and Tait, in their "Treatise on Natural Philosophy," extend the term to deformations of liquid masses, and even of groups of points; and Tait subsequently extends it to any geometrical figure, so that it becomes a synonym of deformation.

Fresnel made the very striking discovery that glass and other simply refracting bodies are rendered doubly refracting when in a state of strain. Tait, Light, § 292.

In this paper the word strain will be used to denote the change of volume and figure constituting the deviation of a molecule of a solid from that condition which it preserves when free from the action of external forces.
Rankine, Axes of Elasticity (1855).

A strain is any definite alteration of form or dimensions experienced by a solid. . . . If a stone, a beam, or a mass of metal in a building, or in a piece of framework, becomes condensed or dilated in any direction, or bent, or twisted, or distorted in any way, it is said to experience a strain.
W. Thomson, Mathematical Theory of Elasticity (1856).

5. A stretching of the muscles or tendons, giving rise to subsequent pain and stiffness; sprain; wrench; twist.—6. A permanent deformation or injury of a solid structure.—7. Stretch; flight or burst, as of imagination, eloquence, or song. Specifically—(a) A poem; a song; a lay.

All unworthy of thy nobler strain.
Scott, L. of the L., i., Int.

(b) Tune; melody.

I was all ear,
And took in strains that might create a soul
Under the ribs of death. Milton, Comus, l. 561.

In sweet Italian Strains our Shepherds sing.
Congreve, Opening of the Queen's Theatre, Epil.

(c) In a stricter sense, in music, a section of a piece which is more or less complete in itself. In written music the strains are often marked by double bars.

An Cynthia had but seen me dance a strain, or do but one trick, I had been kept in court.
B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, iv. 1.

(d) Tone; key; style or manner of speech or conduct.

The third [sort] is of such as take too high a strain at the first. Bacon, Youth and Age (ed. 1887).

That sermon is in a strain which I believe has not been heard in this kingdom. Burke, Rev. in France.

(e) Mood; disposition.

Henry . . . said, "I am come, young ladies, in a very moralizing strain, to observe that our pleasures in this world are always to be paid for."
Jane Austen, Northanger Abbey, xxvi.

Axes of a homogeneous strain, three straight lines of particles perpendicular to one another both before and after the strain.—Composition of strains. See composition of displacements, under composition.—Concurrent stress and strain. See concurrent.—Homogeneous or uniform strain, a strain which leaves every straight line of particles straight, and every pair of parallel lines parallel.—Longitudinal strain. See longitudinal.—Normal plane of a homogeneous strain, one of three planes each containing two of the three axes. There is generally only one such system of planes through each point of the body.—Orthogonal strain. (a) Relatively to a stress, a strain which neither does nor uses work by virtue of that stress. (b) Relatively to another strain, a strain orthogonal to a stress perfectly concurrent to the other strain.—Principal strain. Same as principal strain-type (which see, under strain-type).—Pure strain, a homogeneous strain which does not rotate any axis of the strain.—Simple strain, any one of a number of strains conceived as independent components of other strains which they are employed to define. The phrase simple strain has no definite meaning, but simple longitudinal strain, simple tangential strain, simple shearing strain, etc., mean such strains existing not as components merely, but as resultants. Thus, if a bar is elongated without any transverse contraction or expansion, there is a simple longitudinal strain in the direction of the elongation. A simple tangential strain is a homogeneous strain in which all the particles are displaced parallel to one plane.—Strain-ellipsoid. See ellipsoid.—To heave a strain. See heave.—Type of a strain. See type.

★strain[2] (strān), n. [An altered form, due appar. to confusion with strain[1], 7, of what would be reg. streen; < ME. streen, strene, stren, earlier streon, istreon, race, stock, generation, < AS. gestreón, gestrión, gain, wealth (= OS. gistriuni, = OHG. gistriuni, gain, property, wealth, business); appar. confused in ME. with the related noun, ME. strend, strynd, strund, < AS. strȳnd, race, stock; < streónan, strȳnan = OHG. striunan, beget, gestreónan, get, acquire.] 1. Race; stock; generation; descent; hence, family blood; quality or line as regards breeding; breed; a race or breed; a variety, especially an artificial variety, of a domestic animal. Strain indicates the least recognizable variation from a given stock, or the ultimate modification to which an animal has been subjected. But since such variation usually proceeds by insensible degrees, the significance of strain grades into that of breed, race, or variety.

Bountee comth al of God, nat of the streen
Of which they been engendred and ybore.
Chaucer, Clerk's Tale, l. 101.

O, if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,
Young man, thou couldst not die more honourable.
Shak., J. C., v. 1. 59.

The ears of a cat vary in shape, and certain strains, in England, inherit a pencil-like tuft of hairs, above a quarter of an inch in length, on the tips of their ears.
Darwin, Var. of Animals and Plants, i.

2. Hereditary or natural disposition; turn; tendency; character.

Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant strain.
Shak., Lear, v. 3. 40.

And here I shall not restrain righteousness to the particular virtue of justice, but enlarge it according to the genius and strain of the book of the Proverbs. Tillotson.

3. Sort; kind; style.

Let man learn a prudence of a higher strain.
Emerson, Essays, 1st ser., p. 214.

4. Trace; streak.

With all his merit there was a strain of weakness in his character. Bancroft, Hist. Const., II. 6.

5. The shoot of a tree. Halliwell (under strene). [Prov. Eng.]—6†. The track of a deer.

When they haue shot a Deere by land, they follow him like bloud-hounds by the bloud, and straine, and oftentimes so take them. Capt. John Smith, Works, I. 134.

strain[3]† (strān), v. t. [An aphetic form of distrain.] To distrain.

When my lord refused to pay the two shillings, Mr. Knightly charged the constable to strain two shillings' worth of goods. Court and Times of Charles I., I. 56.

strainable (strā′na-bl), a. [Early mod. E. streinable, streynable; < strain[1] + -able.] 1†. Constraining; compelling; violent.

This yere the Duke of Burgon, . . . with his xii. M. men, was dryuen in to Englond, with a ferse streynable wynde, in ther selynge towarde Spayn.
Arnold's Chron. (1502), p. xliii.

2. Capable of being strained.

strainably† (strā′na-bli), adv. [Early mod. E. streinablie; < strainable + -ly[2].] Violently; fiercely.

The wind . . . droue the flame so streinablie amongest the tents and cabins of the Saxons, that the fire . . . increased the feare amongst the soulddiors wonderfullie.
Holinshed, Hist. Scotland, p. 95.

strained[1] (strānd), p. a. [< strain[1] + -ed[1].] Forced; carried beyond proper limits: as, a strained interpretation of a law.

strained[2] (strānd), a. [< strain[2] + -ed[2].] Of this or that strain or breed, as an animal.

★strainer (strā′nėr), n. [< ME. streynour, strenyoure; < strain[1] + -er[1].] 1. One who or that which strains.—2. A stretcher or tightener: as, a strainer for wire fences.—3. Any utensil for separating small solid particles from the liquid that contains them, either to preserve the solid objects or to clarify the liquid, or for both purposes.

Item, j. dressyng knyfe, j. fyre schowle, ij. treys, j. streynour. Paston Letters, I. 490.

4. In carriage-building: (a) A reinforcing strip or button at the back of a panel. (b) Canvas glued to the back of a panel to prevent warping or cracking. Also called stretcher.—Strainer of Hippocrates. Same as Hippocrates's sleeve (which see, under sleeve[1]).

strainer-vine (strā′nėr-vīn), n. The sponge-gourd, Luffa acutangula, and other species: so called from the use of the fibrous network contained in its fruit for straining palm-wine.

straining (strā′ning), n. [Verbal n. of strain[1], v.] In saddlery, leather, canvas, or other fabric drawn over a saddle to form a base for the seating. It is put on the saddle with a tool called a straining-fork, the fabric having first been stretched on a machine called a straining-reel. Also called straining-leather.—Cross-straining, canvas or webbing drawn transversely over the first straining.

straining-beam (strā′ning-bēm), n. In a queen-post roof, a horizontal beam uniting the tops of the two queen-posts, and acting as a tie-rod to resist the thrust of the roof; a straining-piece. If a similar beam is placed on the main tie-rod, between the bases of the posts, it is called a straining-sill.

straining-leather (strā′ning-leтн″ėr), n. In saddlery, same as straining.

straining-piece (strā′ning-pēs), n. Same as straining-beam.

straining-sill (strā′ning-sil), n. See straining-beam.

strain-normal (strān′nôr″mal), n. A normal of a homogeneous strain.

strain-sheet (strān′shēt), n. In bridge-building, a skeleton drawing of a truss or other part of a bridge, with the calculated or computed greatest strain to which it will be subjected annotated at the side of each member. In making the actual working-drawings, the respective members are drawn to a size sufficient to sustain the stresses so marked on the sheet multiplied by a certain predetermined "factor of safety." Also called stress-sheet.

straint† (strānt), n. [< OF. estrainte, estreinte, fem. of estraint, F. étreint, pp. of OF. estraindre, F. étreindre, strain: see strain[1], v., and cf. restraint, constraint.] A violent stretching or tension; a strain; pressure; constraint.

Uppon his iron coller griped fast,
That with the straint his wesand nigh he brast.
Spenser, F. Q., V. ii. 14.

strain-type (strān′tīp), n. The type of a strain.—Principal strain-type, one of six strain-types such that, when the homogeneous elastic solid to which they belong is homogeneously strained in any way, the potential energy of the elasticity is expressed by the sum of the products of the squares of the components of the strain expressed in terms of these strain-types, each multiplied by a determinate coefficient.

★strait[1] (strāt), a. and n. [Early mod. E. also straight, streight, streit, etc.; < ME. strait, strayt, straite, strayte, streit, streyt, streite, also sometimes straight, < OF. estreit, estrait (F. étroit), narrow, strict (as a noun, a narrow passage of water), = Pr. estreit = Sp. estrecho = Pg. estreito = It. stretto, narrow, strict, < L. strictus, pp. of stringere, draw tight: see strain[1], stringent. Cf. strict, which is a doublet of strait, the one being directly from the L., the other through OF. and ME. The word strait[1], formerly also spelled straight, has been more or less confused with the diff. word straight[1], which was sometimes spelled strait.] I. a. 1. Narrow; having little breadth or width.

Egypt is a long Contree; but it is streyt, that is to seye narow; for thei may not enlargen it toward the Desert, for defaute of Watre. Mandeville, Travels, p. 45.

Strait is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it. Mat. vii. 14.

Britons seen, all flying
Through a strait lane. Shak., Cymbeline, v. 3. 7.

2. Confined; restricted; limited in space or accommodation; close.

Ther was swich congregacioun
Of peple, and eek so streit of herbergage,
That they ne founde as much as o cotage
In which they bothe myghte ylogged be.
Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, l. 169.

And the sons of the prophets said unto Elisha, Behold now, the place where we dwell with thee is too strait for us. 2 Ki. vi. 1.

3†. Of time, short; scant.

If thi nede be greet & thi tyme streite,
Than go thi silf therto & worche an houswijfes brayde.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 41.

4†. Tight.

You rode, like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off, and in your strait strossers. Shak., Hen. V., iii. 7. 57.

He [man] might see that a strait glove will come more easily on with use.
Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii. 205.

I denounce against all strait Lacing, squeezing for a Shape. Congreve, Way of the World, iv. 5.

5†. Close. (a) Near; intimate; familiar.

He, forgetting all former injuries, had received that naughty Plexirtus into a straight degree of favour, his goodness being as apt to be deceived as the other's craft was to deceive. Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, ii. (Lathæm.)

(b) Strict; careful.

Much strait watching of master bailiffs is about us, that there be no privy conference amongst us.
Bp. Ridley, in Bradford's Letters (Parker Soc., 1853), II. 94.

(c) Close-fisted; stingy; avaricious.

I do not ask you much;
I beg cold comfort; and you are so strait
And so ingrateful, you deny me that.
Shak., K. John, v. 7. 42.

6. Strict; rigorous; exacting.

It was old and som del streit.
Chaucer, Gen. Prol. to C. T., l. 174.

After the most straitest sect of our religion I lived a Pharisee. Acts xxvi. 5.

Whom I believe to be most strait in virtue.
Shak., M. for M., ii. 1. 9.

Led a streight life in continencie and austerity, and was therefore admired as a Prophet, and resorted to out of all parts. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 379.

Bound them by so strait vows.
Tennyson, Coming of Arthur.

7†. Sore; great; difficult; distressing.

At a strayte neede they can wele stanche bloode.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 17.

8†. Hard-pressed; straitened; hampered.

Mother, I kindly thank you for your Orange pills you sent me. If you are not too straight of money, send me some such thing by the woman, and a pound or two of Almonds and Raisons.
Strype, in Ellis's Lit. Letters, p. 178.

To make your strait circumstances yet straiter.
Secker, Sermons, II. xi.

II. n. 1. A narrow pass or passage.

Thei rode forth the softe pas straite and clos till they come to the straite be-twene the wode and the river, as the kynge loot hadde hem taught.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 160.

The barbarous people lay in waite for him in his way, in the straight of Thermopyles.
North, tr. of Plutarch, p. 394.

Honour travels in a strait so narrow,
Where one but goes abreast.
Shak., T. and C., iii. 3. 154.

2. Specifically, a narrow passage of water connecting two bodies of water: often used in the plural: as, the Strait or Straits of Gibraltar; the Straits of Magellan; the Straits of Dover. Abbreviated St.—3. A strip of land between two bodies of water; an isthmus.

A broken chancel with a broken cross,
That stood on a dark strait of barren land:
On one side lay the Ocean, and on one Lay a great water. Tennyson, Passing of Arthur.

4†. A narrow alley in London.

Look into any angle of the town, the Streights, or the Bermudas, where the quarrelling lesson is read, and how do they entertain the time, but with bottle-ale and tobacco? B. Jonson, Bartholomew Fair, ii. 6.

Cant names then given to the places frequented by bullies, knights of the post, and fencing masters. . . . These Streights consisted of a nest of obscure courts, alleys, and avenues, running between the bottom of St. Martin's Lane, Half-Moon, and Chandos Street.
Gifford's Note at "Bermudas" in the above passage.

5. A tight or narrow place; difficulty; distress; need; case of necessity: often in the plural.

Finding himself out of straits, he will revert to his customs. Bacon, Expense (ed. 1887).

The straits and needs of Catiline being such
As he must fight with one of the two armies.
B. Jonson, Catiline, v. 6.

Take me; I'll serve you better in a strait.
Tennyson, Princess, i.

6†. pl. Cloth of single width, as opposed to broad cloth: a term in use in the sixteenth century and later.—Between the Straits, through and beyond the Straits of Gibraltar: used by American sailors with reference to a voyage to Mediterranean ports: as, he has made two voyages between the Straits.—Perineal strait. See perineal.—Straits of the pelvis, in obstet., the openings of the pelvic canal, distinguished as the superior and inferior straits. See pelvis.—Straits oil. See oil.

strait[1]† (strāt), v. t. [Also straight; < strait[1], a.] 1. To make strait or narrow; narrow; straiten; contract.

He [Crassus] set his ranks wide, casting his souldiers into a square battell. . . . Yet afterward he changed his mind againe, and straighted the battell [formation] of his footmen, fashioning it like a brick, more long than broad, making a front and shewing their faces every way.
North, tr. of Plutarch, p. 477.

2. To stretch; draw tight; tighten.

This weighty Scott sall strait a rope,
And hanged he shall be.
Lang Johnny Moir (Child's Ballads, IV. 278).

3. To press hard; put to difficulties; distress; puzzle; perplex.

If your lass
Interpretation should abuse, and call this Your lack of love or bounty, you were straited
For a reply. Shak., W. T., iv. 4. 365.

strait[1]† (strāt), adv. [< ME. streite, streyte; < strait[1], a.] Narrowly; tightly; closely; strictly; rigorously; strenuously; hard.

Hir hosen weren of fyn scarlet reed
Ful streite yteyd.
Chaucer, Gen. Prol. to C. T., l. 457.

Worceter sayd at Castre it schuld be nessessary for 3ow to have good witnesse, as he saythe it schuld go streythe with 3ow wytheowt 3owr witnesse were rythe sofycyent.
Paston Letters, I. 516.

strait[2]†, a. and adv. An old spelling of straight[1].

straiten (strā′tn), v. t. [Formerly also straighten; < strait[1] + -en[1].] 1. To make strait or narrow; narrow; contract; diminish.

Let not young beginners in religion . . . straiten their liberty by vows of long continuance.
Jer. Taylor, Holy Living, iv. 7.

2. To confine; hem in.

Feed high henceforth, man, and no more be straiten'd
Within the limits of an empty patience
Ford, Fancies, iv. 1.

3. To draw tight; tighten.

My horses here detain,
Fix'd to the chariot by the straiten'd rein.
Pope, Iliad, v. 325.

4. To hamper; inconvenience; restrict.

An other time having straightned [var. straighted] his enemies with scarcity of victuals.
North, tr. of Plutarch, p. 495.

Newtown men, being straitened for ground, sent some to Merimack to find a fit place to transplant themselves.
Winthrop, Hist. New England, I. 159.

The shackles of an old love straiten'd him.
Tennyson, Lancelot and Elaine.

5. To press hard, as with want or difficulties of any kind; distress; afflict with pecuniary difficulties: as, to be straitened in money matters.

So straitened was he at times by these warlike expenses that when his daughter married Boabdil, her bridal dress and jewels had to be borrowed. Irving, Granada, p. 68.

straitforward†, adv. An old spelling of straightforward.

strait-handed† (strāt′han″ded), a. Parsimonious; niggardly; close-fisted.

In the distribution of our time God seems to be strait-handed, and gives it to us, not as nature gives us rivers, enough to drown us, but drop by drop.
Jer. Taylor, Holy Dying, ii. 1.

strait-handedness† (strāt′han″ded-nes), n. Niggardliness; parsimony.

The Romish doctrine makes their strait-handedness so much more injurious as the cause of separation is more just. Bp. Hall, Cases of Conscience, iv. 3.

strait-hearted (strāt′här″ted), a. Narrow; selfish; stingy. Sterne, Tristram Shandy, ii. 17.

strait-jacket (strāt′jak″et), n. Same as strait-waistcoat.

strait-laced (strāt′lāst), a. 1. Made close and tight by lacing, as stays or a bodice.—2. Wearing tightly laced stays, bodice, etc.

We have few well-shaped that are strait-laced.
Locke, Education, § 11.

Hence—3. Strict in manners or morals; rigid in opinion.

And doubt'st thou me? suspect you I will tell
The hidden mysteries of your Paphian cell
To the strait-lac'd Diana?
Randolph, Complaint against Cupid.

Why are you so strait-lac'd, sir knight, to cast a lady off so coy? Peele, Sir Clyomon and Sir Clamydes.

One so strait-laced
In her temper, her taste, and her morals and waist.
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 113.

straitly (strāt′li), adv. [Formerly also straightly; < ME. straitly, streytly, straitliche, streitliche; < strait[1] + -ly[2].] In a strait manner. (a) Narrowly; closely.

If men look straitly to it, they will find that, unless their lives are domestic, those of the women will not be.
Margaret Fuller, Woman in 19th Cent., p. 36.

(b) Tightly; tight.

Other bynde it straitly with sum bonnde.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 74.

"Spare me not," he said to Christie; for even that ruffian hesitated to draw the cord straitly. Scott, Monastery, xxxi.

(c) Strictly; rigorously.

Streytly for-bede ȝe that no wyfe [woman] be at ȝoure mete. Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 329.

His majesty hath straitly given in charge
That no man shall have private conference,
Of what degree soever, with his brother.
Shak., Rich. III., i. 1. 85.

(d) Closely; intimately. (e) Hardly; grievously; sorely.

I hear how that you are something straitly handled for reading books, speaking with good men, yea, praying to God, as you would do.
J. Bradford, Letters (Parker Soc., 1853), II. 203.

straitness (strāt′nes), n. [Formerly also straightness; < ME. streitnes, streytnesse; < strait[1] + -ness.] The state or quality of being strait. (a) Narrowness; smallness; confined or restricted character.

For the streitnes of thin astrelabie, than is every smal devysioun in a signe departed by two degrees & two.
Chaucer, Astrolabe, i. 17.

By reason of the straitness of all the places.
2 Mac. xii. 21.

(b) Strictness; rigor.

If his own life answer the straitness of his proceeding, it shall become him well. Shak., M. for M., iii. 2. 269.

(c) Distress; difficulty; pressure from narrowness of circumstances or necessity of any kind, particularly from poverty; want; scarcity.

But he seyd ther shal no thyng hurt hym but youre streytnesse of mony to hym. Paston Letters, II. 38.

I received your loving letter, but straightness of time forbids me. Winthrop, in New England's Memorial, p. 191.

He was never employed in public affairs, . . . the straitness of his circumstances keeping him close to his trade.
Everett, Orations, II. 13.

strait-waistcoat (strāt′wāst′kōt), n. A garment for the body made of canvas or similar strong textile material, and so shaped as to lace up behind and fit closely. It has sleeves much longer than the arms, and usually sewed up at the ends, so that the hands cannot be used to do injury. The sleeves can also be tied together so as to restrain the wearer. It is used for the control or discipline of dangerous maniacs and other violent persons. Also called strait-jacket.

strake[1] (strāk), v. i.; pret. and pp straked, ppr. straking. [< ME. straken; a collateral form of streken, striken, a secondary form of strīken, < AS. strīcan (pret. strāc), go, pass swiftly over: see streak[1], strike, and stroke[1]. Hence ult. straggle.] To move; go; proceed. [Old and prov. Eng.]

And with that worde right anoon
They gan to strake forth.
Chaucer, Death of Blanche, l. 1311.

★strake[2] (strāk), n. [Sc. also straik; < ME. strake; in part a var. of streke, mod. E. streak[2], and in part of strok, mod. E. stroke: see strake[1], streak[2], stroke[1].] 1†. A streak; a stripe.

Summe lowe places therof by the water syde looke like redde cliffes with white strakes like wayes a cable length a piece.
R. Eden, First Books on America (ed. Arber, p. 331).

2†. A strip; a narrow tract.

This Morrea is a plentyous countrey, and almoste inuyrounde with the see, excepte one strake of a .vj. myle brode, whiche yeueth entre into Grecia, that ye Turke hathe.
Sir R. Guylforde, Pylgrymage, p. 12.

3†. A reef in a sail.

Ffor ne han thei striked a strake and sterid hem the better,
And abated a bonet or the blast come,
They had be throwe ouere the borde backewarde ichonne.
Richard the Redeless, iv. 80.

4. A rut in a road. [Prov. Eng.]—5. A crack in a floor. [Prov. Eng.]—6. A breadth of planking or plating; specifically, a continuous longitudinal line of plank or plates placed end to end on a vessel. Also spelled streak.—7. The iron band used to bind the fellies of a wheel; the hoop or tire of a wheel.—8. A piece of board or metal used for scraping off the skimpings in hand-jigging or tozing.—9. Same as lye[3].—10. A bushel: more commonly strike (which see). [Obsolete or colloq.]

Come, Ruose, Ruose! I sold fifty strake o' barley to-day in half this time. Farquhar, Recruiting Officer, iii. 1.

11. In hunting, a particular signal with a horn.

And of him [Sir Tristram] wee had . . . all the blasts that long to all manner of games. First to the uncoupeling, to the seeking, to the rechace, to the flight, to the death, and to strak, and many other blasts and termes.
Sir T. Malory, Morte d'Arthur, II. cxxxvii.

Binding-strake. See binding.—Shutter strake, the last strake put in between adjacent strakes to close up the surface.

strake[3]† (strāk). An obsolete preterit of strike.

strake[4] (strāk), v. t. A dialectal (Scotch) form of stroke[2].

stralet (strāl), n. See streal.

stram (stram), v.; pret. and pp. strammed, ppr. stramming. [Cf. Dan. stramme = Sw. stramma, be too tight, tighten, stretch, straiten, < Dan. stram = Sw. stram = G. stramm, tight, stiff, stretched; cf. D. straf, G. straff, severe, strict, stern.] I. intrans. 1. To spring or recoil with violence. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]—2. To spread out the limbs; walk with long ungraceful strides. [Colloq.]

II. trans. To dash down violently; beat. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

stram (stram), n. A hard, long walk. [Colloq.]

I hed sech a stram this mornin'.
H. B. Stowe, Oldtown, p. 568.

stramage†, n. [ME., < OF. stramage* (ML. stramagium), scattered straw, < L. stramen, straw, litter, < sternere, pp. stratus, scatter, strew: see stratum. Cf. stramineous, strammel.] Straw; litter. Prompt. Parv., pp. 478, 480.

stramash (stra-mash′), v. t. [Developed from stramazoun, pronounced later something like stramashin*, and so taken for stramashing*, the verbal n. of a supposed verb stramash*. Otherwise a made verb, on the basis of stramazoun; cf. squabash, a word of similar type.] To strike, beat, or bang; break; destroy. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch] stramash (stra-mash′), n. [See stramash, v.] A tumult; fray; fight; struggle; row; disturbance. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

Seaforth profited by the confusion to take the delinquent who had caused this stramash by the arm.
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 35.

stramazone†, stramazoun†, n. [< OF. estramaçon, a cut with a sword, a downright blow, bang, < It. stramazzone, a cut with a sword, a blow in fencing, < stramazzo, a knock-down blow.] In old fencing, a cut delivered from the wrist with the extreme edge of the sword near the point. Egerton Castle, Schools and Masters of Fence.

I, being loth to take the deadly advantage that lay before me of his left side, made a kind of stramazoun, ran him up to the hilts through the doublet, through the shirt, and yet missed the skin.
B. Jonson, Every Man out of his Humour, iv. 4.

stramineous (strā-min′ē-us), a. [< L. stramineus, made of straw, < stramen, straw, litter: see stramage.] 1. Consisting of straw; strawy. —2. Like straw; light.

His sole study is for words . . . to set out a stramineous subject. Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 223.

3. Straw-colored; pale-yellowish.

strammel (stram′el), n. [< OF. estramier, straw, < estraim, estrain, stran = It. strame, straw, litter, < L. stramen, straw: see stramage.] Straw; litter. [Cant.]

Sleep on the strammel in his barn.
Scott, Guy Mannering, xxviii.

stramonium (strā-mō′ni-um), n. [F. stramonium = Sp. Pg. estramonio = It. stramonia, < NL. stramonium (stramonium spinosum), stramonia, strammonia, stramonium; origin obscure.] 1. The thorn-apple, Datura Stramonium: so called particularly as a drug-plant. It is a stout ill-scented poisonous weed with green stem and pure-white flowers, widely diffused, in America often called Jamestown weed or jimson-weed. D. Tatula, a similar, but commonly taller, species with purple stem and pale-violet corolla (purple stramonium), has the same properties. It is found in the Atlantic United States.

2. An officinal drug consisting of the seeds or leaves of stramonium, the seeds being more powerful. Its properties are the same as those of belladonna. See belladonna and Datura.—Stramonium ointment. See ointment.—Stramonium plaster. See plaster.

stramony (stram′ō-ni), n. [< NL. stramonium.] Stramonium.

strand[1] (strand), n. [< ME. strand, strond, < AS. strand = MD. strande, D. strand = late MHG. strant, G. strand = Icel. strönd (strand-) = Sw. Dan. strand, border, edge, coast, shore, strand; root unknown.] 1. The shore or beach of the sea or ocean, or (in former use) of a lake or river; shore; beach.

He fond bi the stronde,
Ariued on his londe,
Schipes fiftene.
King Horn (E. E. T. S.), l. 35.

The strand
Of precious India no such Treasure shows.
J. Beaumont, Psyche, iii. 24.

2. A small brook or rivulet. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]—3. A passage for water; a gutter. B. Jonson, Epig. of Inigo Jones. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch (Scotch also strawn).]—Strand mole-rat, the Cape mole-rat of South Africa, Bathyergus maritimus. See mole-rat, and cut under Bathyergus.

strand[1] (strand), v. [= D. MLG. G. stranden = Icel. Sw. stranda = Dan. strande; from the noun.] I. trans. To drive or run aground on the sea-shore: as, the ship was stranded in the fog: often used figuratively.

II. intrans. 1. To drift or be driven on shore; run aground, as a ship.

Stranding on an isle at morn. Tennyson, Enoch Arden.

2. To be checked or stopped; come to a standstill.

strand[2] (strand), n. [With excrescent d, for stran* (Sc. strawn), < D. streen, a skein, hank of thread, = OHG. streno, MHG. strene, stren, G. strähne, a skein, hank; root unknown.] 1. A number of yarns or wires twisted together to form one of the parts of which a rope is twisted; hence, one of a number of flexible things, as grasses, strips of bark, or hair, twisted or woven together. Three or more strands twisted together form a rope. See cut under crown, v. t., 9.

Wampum beads and birchen strands Dropping from her careless hands.
Whittier, Truce of Piscataqua.

2. A single thread; a filament; a fiber.

The continuous communication of the gray matter of the spinal cord with the motor and sensory strands.
J. M. Carnochan, Operative Surgery, p. 97.

3. A string. [Scotch, in the form strawn.]—Mycelial strand. Same as fibrous mycelium (which see, under mycelium).

strand[2] (strand), v. t. [< strand[2], n.] 1. To break one or more of the strands of (a rope).—2. In rope-making, to form by the union or twisting of strands.—Stranded wire, a wire rope. [Eng.]

strand-bird (strand′bėrd), n. Any limicoline wading bird which is found on the strand or beach, as a beach-bird, sanderling, sandpiper, sand-snipe, bay-snipe. See the distinctive names, and shore-bird, bay-birds.

stranding-machine (stran′ding-ma-shēn′), n. A machine for twisting strands into ropes.

strand-mycele, strand-mycelium (strand′mī-sēl′, -mī-sē′li-um), n. Same as fibrous mycelium (which see, under mycelium).

strand-plover (strand′pluv′ėr), n. The Swiss, gray, bull-head, or black-bellied plover, Squatarola helvetica. See cut under Squatarola.

strand-rat (strand′rat), n. The strand mole-rat (which see, under strand[1]).

strand-wolf (strand′wůlf), n. The brown hyena, Hyæna brunnea, found in South Africa.

strang (strang), a. A dialectal form of strong[1]. [North. Eng. and Scotch.]

strange (strānj), a. [Early mod. E. straunge; < ME. strange, straunge, estrange, < OF. estrange, estrenge, estraigne, estreigne, etc., F. étrange = It. strano, strange, foreign, < L. extraneus, that is without, external, < extra, without, on the outside: see extraneous, extra-.] 1. Foreign; alien; of or belonging to some other country. [Archaic.]

I have been an alien in a strange land. Ex. xviii. 3.

She hadde passed many a straunge strem.
Chaucer, Gen. Prol. to C. T., l. 464.

Also asmuche as may be, eschew straunge words.
Gascoigne, Notes on Eng. Verse (Steele Glas, etc., ed. Arber).

One of the strange queen's lords.
Shak., L. L. L., iv. 2. 134.

2. Of or pertaining to another or others; alien; belonging to others, or to some other place or neighborhood; not lawfully belonging to one; intrusive.

The mouth of strange women is a deep pit.
Prov. xxii. 14.

Strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds.
Shak., Cymbeline, i. 4. 97.

Call me not Mother; for if I brought thee forth, it was As foolish hens at times hatch vipers, by Sitting upon strange eggs.
Byron, Deformed Transformed, i. 1.

3. Not before known, heard, or seen; unfamiliar; unknown; new: as, the custom was strange to them.

To knowe the verrey degree of any maner sterre straunge or unstraunge after his longitude, thow he be indeterminat in their astrelabie. Chaucer, Astrolabe, ii. 17.

Our strange garments cleave not to their mould
But with the aid of use. Shak., Macbeth, i. 3. 145.

Then a soldier,
Full of strange oaths, . . .
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel.
Shak., As you Like it, ii. 7. 150.

Sat 'neath strange trees, on new flowers growing there,
Of scent unlike to those we knew of old.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I. 44.

4. Outlandish; queer; odd.

This power that some of them have is disguised gear and strange fashions. Latimer, Sermon bef. Edw. VI., 1550.

They were enforced for feare of quarell & blame to disguise their players with strange apparell, and by colouring their faces and carying hatts & capps of diuerse fashions to make them selues lesse knowen.
Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 25.

5. Unusual; singular; wonderful; surprising; remarkable; of a kind to excite curiosity; not easily explained or explainable: as, a strange story, if true; a strange hallucination.

This is above strange,
That you should be so reckless!
B. Jonson, Devil is an Ass, iii. 3.

Losing, by a strange after-game of Folly, all the battels we have won. Milton, Free Commonwealth.

You will see an odd country, and sights that will seem strange to you. Cotton, in Walton's Angler, ii. 228.

6. Like a stranger; reserved; distant; estranged; not familiar.

And Joseph saw his brethren, and he knew them, but made himself strange unto them, and spake roughly unto them. Gen. xlii. 7.

Litle and litle he [Cæsar] withdrewe from men his accustomed gentilnesse, becomyng more . . . strange in countenance than euer before.
Sir T. Elyot, The Governour, ii. 5.

Let us be very strange and well bred.
Congreve, Way of the World, iv. 5.

7. Unacquainted; inexperienced; unversed.

I know thee well;
But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.
Shak., T. of A., iv. 3. 56.

8†. Unfavorable; averse to one's suit.

Thow that his lady evere more be straunge,
Yit lat hym serve hire til that he be ded.
Chaucer, Parliament of Fowls, l. 584.

A strange fish. See a cool fish, under fish[1].—Strange sail (naut.), an unknown vessel.—To make a thing strange†, to make it a matter of difficulty, or of surprise or astonishment.

Straunge he made it of hir mariage;
His purpos was for to bistowe hire hye
Into some worthy blood of auncetry.
Chaucer, Reeve's Tale, l. 60.

She makes it strange; but she would be best pleased
To be so anger'd with another letter.
Shak., T. G. of V., i. 2. 102.

To make strange†, to seem to be surprised or shocked; look astonished; express astonishment.

Lyford denied, and made strange of sundry things laid to his charge.
N. Morton, New England's Memorial, p. 116.

= Syn. 4. Singular, Odd, etc. See eccentric.—5. Surprising, Curious, etc. See wonderful.

strange† (strānj), v. [< ME. straungen; < strange, a.; in part by apheresis from estrange, q. v.] I. trans. To alienate; estrange.

And these presidents consedred wolde discorage any man to a bide but a litel amonges hem that so straunged hem self from me and mistrusted me.
Paston Letters, I. 508.

II. intrans. 1. To wonder; be astonished.

Whereat I should strange more, but that I find . . .
Fuller, Holy War, p. 169. (Latham.)

2. To be estranged or alienated.

strange (strānj), adv. [< strange, a.] Strangely.

She will speak most bitterly and strange.
Shak., M. for M., v. 1. 36.

strangeful† (strānj′fůl), a. [< strange + -ful.] Strange; wonderful. [Rare.]

O Frantick France! why dost not Thou make vse
Of strangefull Signes, whereby the Heav'ns induce Thee to repentance?
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, i. 2.

strangely (strānj′li), adv. In a strange manner, in any sense of the word strange.

strangeness (strānj′nes), n. The state or character of being strange, in any sense of that word.

stranger (strān′jėr), n. [< ME. stranger, straunger, estraunger, < OF. estranger, F. étranger (= It. straniere), a stranger, foreigner, < estrange, strange: see strange.] 1. One who comes from another country or region; a foreigner.

There shall no stranger eat of the holy thing.
Lev. xxii. 10.

And there ben nouther Thefes ne Robboures in that Contree; and every man worschipethe other; but no man there dothe no reverence to no Straungeres, but zif thei ben grete Princes. Mandeville, Travels, p. 250.

I am a most poor woman, and a stranger,
Born out of your dominions.
Shak., Hen. VIII., ii. 4. 15.

2. A person with whom one is not acquainted; one whose name and character are unknown.

I do desire we may be better strangers.
Shak., As you Like it, iii. 2. 275.

"As I hope to be sav'd," the stranger said,
"One foot I will not flee."
Robin Hood and the Stranger (Child's Ballads, V. 406).

The name of envy is a stranger here.
Fletcher (and another ?), Nice Valour, v. 2.

3. One who is ignorant (of) or unacquainted (with): with to.

I am no stranger to such easy calms
As sit in tender bosoms.
Ford, Broken Heart, iii. 4.

I . . .
Unspeak mine own detraction, here abjure
The taints and blames I laid upon myself,
For strangers to my nature.
Shak., Macbeth, iv. 3. 125.

They say she 's quite a stranger to all his gallantries.
Swift, Polite Conversation, iii.

4. One not belonging to the house; a guest; a visitor.

A messinger passed forth tho by,
Wher Gaffray with gret toth was in his manere
At ioyous disport ryght full merily
At Lusignen Castell with strangers many.
Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 6017.

Fit to honour and receive
Our heavenly stranger. Milton, P. L., v. 316.

5. In law, one not privy or party to an act.—6. Something popularly supposed or humorously said to betoken the approach of a stranger or guest, as guttering in a candle or a teastalk in a cup of tea.—7. Specifically, in entom., the noctuid moth Hadena peregrina: an English collectors' name.—Strangers' Court. See court.—Strangers' fever. See fever[1].

stranger† (strān'jėr), v. t. [< stranger, n.] To estrange; alienate.

Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath.
Shak., Lear, i. 1. 207.

strangle (strang'gl), v.; pret. and pp. strangled, ppr. strangling. [< ME. strangelen, < OF. estrangler, F. étrangler = Sp. Pg. estrangular = It. strangolare, strangulare, < L. strangulare, < Gr. στραγγαλᾶν, στραγγαλίζειν, strangle, < στραγγάλη, a halter, cf. στραγγός, twisted, < *στράγγειν, draw tight, squeeze; cf. L. stringere, draw tight: see strain[1], stringent.] I. trans. 1. To choke by compression of the windpipe; kill by choking; throttle.

And yet I'll have it done; this child shall strangle thee.
Fletcher, Pilgrim, ii. 2.

2. To suppress; keep from emergence or appearance; stifle.

Strangle such thoughts as these with any thing
That you behold the while. Shak., W. T., iv. 4. 47.

3†. To suffocate by drowning. Defoe. = Syn. 1. Choke, Stifle, etc. See smother.

II. intrans. To be choked or strangled.

★strangle (strang'gl), n. [< ME. strangle; < strangle, v.] 1†. Strangulation. Chaucer.—2. pl. An infectious catarrh of the upper air-passages, especially the nasal cavity, of the horse, ass, and mule, associated with suppuration of the submaxillary and other lymphatic glands. The disease usually attacks young animals. Enfeebled health, exposure, and neglect are predisposing causes. It may appear as an epizootic in large stables. The mortality is from 2 to 3 per cent. The disease begins with fever and a serous discharge from the nose, which later becomes viscid. At the same time a swelling appears under the jaws, indicating inflammation and suppuration of the submaxillary glands. The disease ordinarily lasts several weeks. Complications may, however, appear. The throat and neighboring lymphatics may become involved and the infection extend to various parts of the system, giving rise to pyemia. Specific bacteria (streptococci) have been found in the suppurating glands.

strangleable (strang'gl-a-bl), a. [< strangle + -able.] Capable of being strangled. [Rare.]

I own, I am glad that the capital strangler should in his turn be strangleable, and now and then strangled.
Chesterfield.

strangler (strang'glėr), n. [< OF. estrangleur, F. étrangleur = It. strangolatore, < ML. strangulator, < L. strangulare, strangle: see strangle.] One who or that which strangles or destroys.

The band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very strangler of their amity.
Shak., A. and C., ii. 6. 130.

strangle-tare (strang'gl-tār), n. The broom-rape, Orobanche: so named from its parasitism upon tares or other plants; also, species of Vicia and Lathyrus, as tares which strangle other plants by their climbing; also, the twining parasite Cuscuta Europæa, European dodder. See cuts under Cuscuta and Orobanche. [Old or prov. Eng.]

strangleweed (strang'gl-wēd), n. The dodder, Cuscuta, and, in books, the broom-rape, Orobanche. Compare strangle-tare. Britten and Holland, Eng. Plant Names. [Old or prov. Eng.]

stranguary†, n. Same as strangury. Sterne, Tristram Shandy, ix. 5.

strangulate (strang'gū-lāt), a. [< L. strangulatus, pp. of strangulare, strangle: see strangle.] Same as strangulated.

strangulate (strang'gū-lāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. strangulated, ppr. strangulating. [< L. strangulatus, pp. of strangulare, strangle: see strangle.] To strangle; in pathol., to compress so as to suppress the function of a part, as a loop of intestine, a vessel, or a nerve. See strangulated.

Creepers of literature, who suck their food, like the ivy, from what they strangulate and kill.
Southey, Doctor, Interchapter vii. (Davies.)

A strong double ligature was passed through this part of the cheek, with the intention of strangulating the projection [a tubercle or tumor] at its base.
J. M. Carnochan, Operative Surgery, p. 47.

strangulated (strang'gū-lā-ted), p. a. 1. In pathol., compressed so as to suppress the function of a part: as, a hernia is said to be strangulated when it is so compressed as to obstruct the circulation in the part and cause dangerous symptoms.—2. In bot., contracted and expanded in an irregular manner.—3. In entom., constricted; much narrowed: especially noting the thorax or abdomen when constricted in one or more places, as in many ants.—Strangulated hernia. See def. 1 and hernia.

strangulation (strang-gū-lā'shon), n. [< F. strangulation = Sp. estrangulación = Pg. estrangulação = It. strangolazione, < L. strangulatio(n-), a choking, a suffocating, < strangulare, pp. strangulatus, choke, suffocate: see strangle.] 1. The act or state of strangling; a sudden and violent compression of the windpipe, constriction being applied directly to the neck, either around it or in the fore part, or from within the esophagus, so as to prevent the passage of air, and thereby suspend respiration and, if the constriction is prolonged, destroy life.—2. In pathol., the state of a part too closely constricted, as the intestine in strangulated hernia.—3. Excessive or abnormal constriction of any kind.

At the point where the strangulation takes place the glacier lies in a kind of basin, of which the lower lip presents proofs of the most intense erosion.
A. Geikie, Geol. Sketches, vi.

strangurious (strang-gū'ri-us), a. [< LL. stranguriosus, affected with strangury, < L. stranguria, strangury: see strangury.] Affected with strangury; of the nature of strangury; noting the pain of strangury.

strangury (strang'gū-ri), n. [< F. strangurie = OSp. estrangurria, Sp. estangurria = Pg. estranguria = It. stranguria, < L. stranguria, < Gr. στραγγουρία, retention of urine, < στράγξ (στραγγ-), a drop, that which is squeezed out (< *στράγγειν, draw or bind tight, squeeze: see strangle), + οὐρεῖν, urinate, < οὖρον, urine.] 1. Scanty micturition with painful sense of spasm.

He, growing ancient, became sick of the stone, or strangury, whereof, after his suffering of much dolorous pain, he fell asleep in the Lord.
N. Morton, New England's Memorial, p. 262.

2. In hort., a swelling or disease in plants produced by tight ligatures.

★strap (strap), n. [Also, more orig., strop, dial. strope (the form strop being also in reg. E. use in some senses); < ME. stropp, strope, < AS. stropp = MD. strop, stroop, D. strop = MLG. strop = MHG. strupfe, strüppfe, G. struppe, strüppe, strippe = Sw. stropp = Dan. strop, a strap, = OF. estrope, F. étrope = Sp. Pg. estrovo, an oar-thong, < L. stroppus, struppus, a thong, strap, fillet, akin to Gr. στρόφος, a twisted band, < στρέφειν, twist: see strophe. Doublet of strop[1].] 1. A narrow strip of leather or other flexible material, generally used for some mechanical purpose, as to surround and hold together, or to retain in place. In ordinary use straps are most frequently of leather, and are often used with one or more buckles, or a buckle and slide, allowing of a more or less close adjustment of the strap. See cut under shot-pouch. Specifically — (a) Naut.: (1) A piece of rope with the ends spliced together, used for attaching a tackle to anything or for slinging any weight to be lifted. (2) A ring of rope or band of iron put round a block or deadeye, suspending it or holding it in place. Sometimes spelled strop. (b) A razor-strop. See razor-strop and strop[1]. (c) An ornament like a strap; a shoulder-strap. See shoulder-strap, 2.

2. A long and narrow piece of thin iron or other metal used to hold different parts together, as of a frame or the sides of a box; a leaf of a hinge; in carp., an iron plate for connecting two or more timbers, to which it is bolted or screwed.—3. In bot., the ligule in florets of Compositæ (see ligule); also, in some grasses, the leaf exclusive of its sheath.—4. A string. [Scotch.]

They winna string the like o' him up as they do the puir whig bodies that they catch in the muirs, like straps o' onions.
Scott, Old Mortality, x.

5. Credit; originally, credit for drink. [Slang.]—6. In a vehicle: (a) A plate on the upper side of the tongue and resting upon the doubletree, to aid in holding the wagon-hammer. (b) A clip, such as that which holds a spring to the spring-bar or to the axle. (c) The stirrup-shaped piece of a clevis. E. H. Knight.—7. A strap-oyster.

strap (strap), v. t.; pret. and pp. strapped, ppr. strapping. [< strap, n.] 1. To fasten or bind with a strap: especially in the sense of compressing and holding very closely: often with up or down.

He carries white thread gloves, sports a cane, has his trousers tightly strapped.
W. Besant, Fifty Years Ago, p. 49.

2. To beat or chastise with a strap. [Colloq.]—3. To sharpen with a strap; strop, as a razor.

"I shouldn't wonder if we had a snow-storm before it's over, Molly," said Pluck, strapping his knife on the edge of the kit.
S. Judd, Margaret, i. 17.

4. To hang. [Scotch.]

Weel I wot it's a crime, baith by the law of God and man, and mony a pretty man has been strapped for it [murder].
Scott, St. Ronan's Well, xiv.

To be or become strapped, to lose one's money; be bankrupt or out of money. [Slang.]—To strap a deadeye, to fasten a strap of rope or iron round a block, deadeye, or bull's-eye.

★strap-bolt (strap'bōlt), n. Same as lug-bolt.

strap-game (strap'gām), n. A swindling trick otherwise known as prick the garter, prick at the loop, and fast and loose (which see, under fast[1], a.).

strap-head (strap'hed), n. In mach., a journal-box formed at the end of a connecting-rod.

strap-hinge (strap'hinj), n. See hinge.

strap-joint (strap'joint), n. In mach., a connection formed by a strap, key, and gib, as on the end of a pitman. E. H. Knight.

strap-laid (strap'lād), a. Noting a flat rope made by placing two or more strands of hawser-laid rope side by side, piercing them laterally, and binding them together by twine inserted through the pierced holes.

strap-mounts (strap'mounts), n. pl. The buckles, chapes, slides, etc., with which leather straps are fitted.

strap-oil (strap'oil), n. A beating. [Humorous.]

strap-oyster (strap'ois″tėr), n. A long slender oyster which grows upright in mud. Also called stuck-up, stick-up, coon-heel, shanghai, razor-blade, rabbitear, etc. [New Jersey.]

strappado (stra-pā'dō), n. [Formerly also strapado; < OF. strapade, F. estrapade = Sp. estrapada = It. strappata, < strappare, pull.] A punishment or torture which consisted in raising the victim to a certain height by a rope and letting him fall suddenly, the rope being secured to his person in such a way that the jerk in falling would inflict violent pain. For example, the hands being tied together, the rope would be secured to the wrists; the punishment was more severe when the arms had previously been brought behind the back.

We presently determined rather to seeke our liberties then to bee in danger for euer to be slaues in the country, for it was told vs we should haue ye strapado.
Hakluyt's Voyages, II. 253.

They vse also the Strappado, hoising them vp and downe by the armes with a cord.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 441.

strappado (stra-pā'dō), v. t. [< strappado, n.] To torture by the strappado.

Oh, to redeeme my honour,
I would haue this hand cut off, these my brests sear'd,
Be rack'd, strappado'd, put to any torment.
Heywood, Woman Killed with Kindness (Works, ed. 1874, [II. 141).

strapper (strap'ėr), n. [< strap + -er[1].] 1. One who has to do with straps; specifically, one who has charge of the harnessing of horses.

Men who, though nothing but strappers, call themselves grooms.
Encyc. Brit., XII. 195.

2. Anything bulky; a large, tall person. [Colloq.]

A strapper—a real strapper, Jane; big, brown, and buxom; with hair just such as the ladies of Carthage must have had.
Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xx.

★strapping[1] (strap'ing), n. [Verbal n. of strap, v.] 1. The act of fastening with a strap.—2. A beating; a whipping. [Colloq.]—3. Material for straps, or straps in general.

Securing the loose flaps of the lip with pieces of strapping.
Lancet, 1890, I. 183.

strapping[2] (strap'ing), p. a. [Ppr. of strap, v., used, like thumping, whacking, whopping, bouncing, and other participial adjectives expressing violent action, to denote something of impressively large size.] Tall; lusty; robust. [Colloq.]

Then that t'other great strapping Lady—I can't hit off her Name.
Congreve, Double-Dealer, iii. 10.

strapping-plate (strap'ing-plāt), n. In mining, one of the wrought-iron plates by which the spears of a pump-rod are bolted together. Also called spear-plate.

strapplet (strap'l), v. t. [Freq. of strap, v.] To bind with a strap; strap; entangle.

His ruin startled th' other steeds, the gears crack'd, and the reins Strappled his fellows; whose misrule Automedon restrains
By cutting the entangling gears.
Chapman, Iliad, xvi. 438.

strap-rail (strap'rāl″), n. A flat rail laid upon a continuous longitudinal sleeper.

strap-shaped (strap'shāpt), a. Ligulate; shaped like a strap: used especially of the corollas of the Cichoriaceæ.

strap-skein (strap'skān), n. In carriage-building, a flat strip of iron let into the wood of an axle-arm to protect it from wear.

strap-work (strap'wėrk), n. Architectural ornament consisting of a narrow fillet or band represented as folded and crossed, and occasionally interlaced with another.

strap-worm (strap'wėrm), n. A cestoid worm of the family Ligulidæ.

strapwort (strap'wėrt), n. A sea-coast plant of the Mediterranean region and western Europe, Corrigiola littoralis, of the Silenaceæ. It is an herb with numerous slender trailing stems, suggesting the name, and small white flowers in little heads or cymes, the sepals petal-like on the margin.

Strasburg finch, pâté, ware, etc. See finch[1], etc.

strass (stras), n. [So called from the name of the German inventor, Josef Strasser.] 1. Same as paste[1], 3.—2. The refuse of silk left in making up skeins. E. H. Knight.

strata, n. Plural of stratum.

stratagem (strat'a-jem), n. [Formerly also strategem; early mod. E. stratageme; < OF. stratageme, F. stratagème = Sp. estratagema = Pg. estratagema, stratagema = It. stratagemma (in Rom. erroneously spelled with a in the second orig. syllable), < L. strategema, < Gr. στρατήγημα, the act of a general, a piece of generalship, < στρατηγεῖν, be a general, command an army, < στρατηγός, a general, the leader or commander of an army: see strategy.] 1. An artifice in war; a plan or scheme for deceiving an enemy.

> The man that hath no music in himself,
> Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
> Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils.
> Shak., M. of V., v. 1. 85.

> He [Henry V.] never fought Battel, nor won Town, wherein he prevailed not as much by Stratagem as by Force. Baker, Chronicles, p. 179.

2. Any artifice; a trick by which some advantage is intended to be obtained.

> Ambition is full of distractions; it teems with stratagems, and is swelled with expectations as with a tympany. Jer. Taylor.

> It is an honest stratagem to take advantage of ourselves. Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, ii. 13.

=Syn. 1 and 2. Artifice, Manœuver, Trick, etc. See artifice.—2. Deception, plot, trap, device, snare, dodge, contrivance.

stratagematic (strat#a-je-mat'ik), a. [< OF. stratagematique, < NL. strategematicus*, < Gr. στρατήγημα(τ-), a stratagem: see stratagem.] Using stratagem; skilled in strategy. Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie (ed. Arber), p. 35. [Rare.]

stratagematically (strat#a-je-mat'i-kal-i), adv. By stratagem or artifice. G. Harvey, Four Letters.

stratagemic (strat-a-jem'ik), a. [< stratagem + -ic.] Containing or characterized by stratagem or artifice. [Rare.]

stratagemical (strat-a-jem'i-kal), a. [< stratagemic + -al.] Same as stratagemic. Cotgrave; Swift (?), Tripos, iii.

stratarithmetry (strat-a-rith'me-tri), n. [Irreg. < Gr. στρατός, an army, + ἀριθμός, a number (see arithmetic), + -μετρία, < μέτρον, measure.] Milit., the art of drawing up an army or body of men in a geometrical figure, or of estimating or expressing the number of men in such a figure. Imp. Dict.

strategetic (strat-ē-jet'ik), a. [< Gr. στρατηγητικός, pertaining to the command of an army, < στρατηγεῖν, be a general, command an army: see stratagem.] Same as strategic.

strategetical (strat-ē-jet'i-kal), a. [< strategetic + -al.] Same as strategical.

strategetically (strat-ē-jet'i-kal-i), adv. In a strategetical manner.

strategetics (strat-ē-jet'iks), n. [Pl. of strategetic (see -ics).] Same as strategy.

strategi, n. Plural of strategus, 1.

strategic (stra-tej'ik), a. [= F. stratégique, < LL. strategicus* (in neut. pl. strategica, the deeds of a general), < Gr. στρατηγικός, of or pertaining to a general, < στρατηγός, a general: see stratagem, and cf. strategy.] Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of strategy; demanded by, used in, or characterized by strategy: as, strategic movements.—Strategic battle. See battle[1], 1.

strategical (stra-tej'i-kal), a. [< strategic + -al.] Same as strategic.

strategically (stra-tej'i-kal-i), adv. In a strategic manner; as regards strategy.

strategics (stra-tej'iks), n. [Pl. of strategic (see -ics).] Same as strategy.

strategist (strat'ē-jist), n. [= F. stratégiste; as strateg-y + -ist.] One skilled in strategy.

> He [Milton] was a strategist rather than a drill-sergeant in verse, capable, beyond any other English poet, of putting great masses through the most complicated evolutions without clash or confusion, but he was not curious that every foot should be at the same angle.
> Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 286.

strategus (stra-tē'gus), n. [< L. strategus, < Gr. στρατηγός, the commander of an army, a general: see strategy.] 1. Pl. strategi (-jī). A military commander in ancient Greece: as, Diæus was strategus of the Achean League.—2. [cap.] [NL. (Hope, 1837).] In entom., a genus of large American scarabæid beetles, whose males usually have three prothoracic horns. They are mainly tropical and subtropical, but S. antæus extends north to Massachusetts.—3. [cap.] [NL.] A genus of mollusks.

strategy (strat'ē-ji), n. [< OF. strategie, F. stratégie = Sp. estrategia = It. strategia, strategy (cf. L. strategia, a government, province), < Gr. στρατηγία, the office or dignity of a commander, generalship, a pretorship, government, province, < στρατηγός, the leader or commander of an army, a general, a governor, pretor, consul, < στρατός, an army, host, soldiery (prop. an encamped army, lit. 'scattered, spread' (= L. stratus, scattered, spread), < στορεννύναι = L. sternere (pp. stratus), scatter, spread, strew: see stratum), + ἀγειν, lead (see agent).] 1. The science of combining and employing the means which the different branches of the art of war afford, for the purpose of forming projects of operations and of directing great military movements; the art of moving troops so as to be enabled either to dispense with a battle or to deliver one with the greatest advantage and with the most decisive results; generalship. In strategy three things demand especial consideration: (1) the base of operations, or line from which an army commences its advance upon an enemy; (2) the objective, or objective point, the point which it aims to possess, or the object which it strives to attain; (3) the line of operations, or that line which an army must pass over to attain its objective point. When an army assumes a strictly defensive attitude, the base of operations becomes the line of defense, and in a retrograde movement the line of operations becomes the line of retreat. Strategical points are the points of operations of an army—namely, points whose occupation secures an undoubted advantage to the army holding them for offensive and defensive purposes, and points which it is the chief object of an army to attain. The theater of operations comprises the territory to be invaded or defended by an army. It includes the base of operations, the objective point, the front of operations, the lines of operation, the lines of communication which connect the several lines of operations, obstacles, natural or artificial, lines of retreat, and places of refuge. The front of operations is the length of the line in advance of the base of operations covered or occupied by an army.

2. The use of artifice, finesse, or stratagem for the carrying out of any project.

strath (strath), n. [< Gael. srath = Ir. srath, sratha = W. ystrad, a valley; perhaps connected with street, ult. < L. strata: see street.] In Scotland, a valley of considerable size, often having a river running through it and giving it its distinctive appellation: as, *Strath*spey (the valley of the Spey), *Strath*earn (the valley of the Earn), and *Strath*more (the great valley).

strathspey (strath-spā'), n. [So called from Strathspey in Scotland.] 1. A Scotch dance, invented early in the eighteenth century, resembling the reel, but slower, and marked by numerous sudden jerks.

> While youths and maids the light strathspey
> So nimbly danced, with Highland glee!
> Scott, Glenfinlas.

2. Music for such a dance or in its rhythm, which is duple, moderately rapid, and abounding in the rhythmic or metric figure called the Scotch snap or catch (which see, under Scotch[1]), or its converse.

straticulate (strā-tik'ū-lāt), a. [< NL. straticulatus*, < straticulum*, dim. of stratum, a layer: see stratum.] Arranged in thin layers, as a banded agate.

stratification (strat#i-fi-kā'shon), n. [= F. stratification = Sp. estratificación = It. stratificazione; as stratify + -ation.] 1. The act of stratifying, or the state of being stratified; formation or arrangement in layers.

> It was formerly the practice in England, as it still is on the Continent, to tan by the process of stratification, for which purpose a bed of bark is made upon the bottom of the pit; upon this is laid the hide, then bark, then a hide, and so on until the pit is full. Encyc. Brit., XIV. 385.

2. Specifically, in geol., deposition in beds or strata; the mode of occurrence of those rocks which have been laid down or spread over the surface by water. The most important indication and result of stratification is that the rock separates more or less easily along the planes between the beds or strata. Each stratification-plane marks a change in the character of the deposit, or a shorter or longer period during which deposition was suspended. Often one stratum is succeeded by another of quite different character, showing a change in the existing conditions. Sometimes, however, a rock is distinctly stratified, but each stratum separates easily into much thinner layers, closely resembling one another in petrographic character: this is generally called lamination. In some cases the apparent stratification seems to be of the nature of an imperfect cleavage, there having been a certain amount of rearrangement of the particles of the rock parallel to the planes of deposition. See cuts under Artesian and erosion.

3. In physiol., the thickening of a cell-wall by the deposition of successive thin layers of formed material; also, the arrangement of the layers so deposited.

> It is now known that stratification is due to a subsequent change in the amount of water of organization present in particular parts of the [cell-]wall. Bessey, Botany, p. 33.

4. In elect., the appearance presented by an electric discharge, or a series of rapid discharges, in a rarefied gas, light and dark bands or striæ being produced.

stratified (strat'i-fīd), p. a. Arranged or disposed in layers or strata: as, stratified rocks. See cut under erosion.—Stratified cartilage, ordinary white fibrocartilage.—Stratified epithelium. See epithelium.—Stratified thallus, in lichens, a thallus in which the gonidia, or algal cells, are disposed in one or more layers, thus producing stratification. See heteromerous, (c) (2).

stratiform (strat'i-fôrm), a. [< NL. stratum, a layer, + forma, form.] Forming or formed into a layer or lamella; embedded as a stratum or layer; stratified: specifically used in the anatomy of a form of cartilage.—Stratiform cartilage or fibrocartilage, a layer of cartilage embedded in a groove of bone along which the tendon of a muscle plays: referring not to a special kind of cartilage, but to the particular form in which it is arranged. The cartilage lining the bicipital groove of the humerus, on which the tendon of the long head of the biceps glides, is an example.

stratify (strat'i-fī), v. t.; pret. and pp. stratified, ppr. stratifying. [= F. stratifier = It. stratificare, < NL. stratum, a layer, + L. facere, make, do.] To form into a layer or layers, as substances in the earth; lay or arrange in strata.

stratigrapher (strā-tig'ra-fėr), n. [< stratigraph-y + -er[1].] One who devotes himself to the study of stratigraphical geology. Nature, XLIII. 142.

stratigraphic (strat-i-graf'ik), a. [< stratigraph-y + -ic.] Having to do with the order of succession, mode of occurrence, and general geological character of the series of stratified rocks of which the earth's crust is largely composed.

stratigraphical (strat-i-graf'i-kal), a. [< stratigraphic + -al.] Same as stratigraphic.

stratigraphically (strat-i-graf'i-kal-i), adv. In a stratigraphic manner; as regards stratigraphy, or the disposition of strata.

stratigraphist (strā-tig'ra-fist), n. [< stratigraph-y + -ist.] One who studies stratigraphy; a stratigrapher. Nature, XXXVIII. 506.

stratigraphy (strā-tig'ra-fi), n. [< NL. stratum, a layer, + Gr. -γραφία, < γράφειν, write.] In geol., order and position of the stratified groups; all that part of geological science which is not specially theoretical or paleontological; general descriptive geology.

Stratiomyia (strat#i-ō-mī'i-ą), n. [NL. (Macquart, 1838), orig. Stratiomys (Geoffroy, 1764), also Stratiomya (Schiner, 1868), Stratyomis (Schelling, 1803), Stratyomys (J. E. Gray, 1832); irreg. < Gr. στρατιώτης, a soldier, + μυῖα, a fly.] The typical genus of the family Stratiomyidæ. They are medium-sized or rather large flies of dark color with light spots or stripes. The larvæ live in mud or damp sand, and the flies are found upon umbelliferous and other flowers growing near water. About 40 species are known in North America, and about 20 in Europe. They are sometimes called chameleon-flies, from the name of one species, S. chamæleon.

Stratiomyidæ (strat#i-ō-mī'i-dē), n. pl. [NL. (Leach, 1819, as Stratiomydæ), < Stratiomyia + -idæ.] A family of true flies, belonging to the brachycerous Diptera and to the section Notacantha. It is a large and wide-spread family; about 200 species occur in North America. They vary much in size and color, and have a large hemispherical head, flattened or convex abdomen, and tibiæ usually without spurs. They are mostly flower-flies, and are often found upon vegetation in damp places.

Stratioteæ (strat-i-ō'tē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Reichenbach, 1828), < Stratiotes + -eæ.] A tribe of monocotyledonous plants, of the family Vallisneriaceæ, consisting of the genus Stratiotes (which see for characterization). Authors have differed widely as to the scope of this tribe. In the system of Bentham and Hooker it includes five genera and is practically the subfamily Stratiotoideæ of Engler, in his family Hydrocharitaceæ, the Hydrocharidaceæ of Lindley (which see).

Stratiotes (strat-i-ō'tēz), n. [NL. (in def. 1 (Linnæus, 1735) so called from the sword-like leaves), < Gr. στρατιώτης, sc. ποτάμιος, an Egyptian water-plant, by some said to have been the water lettuce, Pistia Stratiotes; lit. 'river-soldier,' < στρατιώτης, a soldier, < στρατιά, an army, < στρατός, an army: see strategy. Cf. stradiot, estradiot.] 1. A genus of water-plants, belonging to the family Vallisneriaceæ, and constituting the tribe Stratioteæ. It is without floating leaves, unlike the rest of its tribe, and is characterized by spathes of two leaves which in the male inclose the base of a long pedicel bearing two or more flowers with from 11 to 15 stamens each. The female flowers are solitary and short-pedicelled, with numerous linear staminodes, 6 slender two-cleft styles, and a beaked ovary becoming in fruit ovoid and acuminate, externally fleshy, and exserted from its spathe on a recurved pedicel. The only species, S. aloides, the water-soldier, is a native of Europe and Siberia, and resembles a small aloe. It is a perennial submerged aquatic, with somewhat fleshy crowded sword-shaped leaves, which are acute, sessile, and sharply serrate. The flowers are borne above the surface of the water; each perianth consists of three calyx-like segments and three much larger wavy crisped white petals. Old names are knightswort, crab's-claw, and water-sengreen.

2. In entom., a genus of South American carabid beetles. Putzeys, 1846.

strato-cirrus (strā-tō-sir'us), n. [NL., < stratus + cirrus.] A cloud very like cirro-stratus, but more compact in structure, and formed at a lower altitude. Abercromby.

stratocracy (strā-tok'ra-si), n. [< Gr. στρατός, an army, + -κρατία, < κρατεῖν, rule.] A military government; government by force of arms.

Enough exists to show that the form of polity [according to Plato's system] would be a martial aristocracy, a qualified stratocracy. De Quincey, Plato.

strato-cumulus (strā-tō-kū'mū-lus), n. [NL., < stratus + cumulus.] A stratum of low cloud consisting of separate irregular masses; a cloud of the layer type, but not sufficiently uniform to be pure stratus. Also called cumulo-stratus.

stratographic (strat-ō-graf'ik), a. [< stratography + -ic.] Pertaining to stratography.

stratographical (strat-ō-graf'i-kal), a. [< stratographic + -al.] Same as stratographic.

stratographically (strat-ō-graf'i-kal-i), adv. In a stratographic manner.

stratography (strā-tog'ra-fi), n. [< Gr. στρατός, an army, + -γραφία, < γράφειν, write.] Description of armies or what belongs to an army.

A great commander by land and by sea, he [Raleigh] was critical in all the arts of stratography, and delights to illustrate them on every occasion. I. D'Israeli, Amen. of Lit., II. 273.

Stratonic (strā-ton'ik), a. Same as Stratonical.

Stratonical (strā-ton'i-kal), a. [< Strato (see def.) + -ic-al.] Pertaining to Strato or Straton of Lampsacus, called "the physicist," the third head of the Peripatetic school of philosophy, over which he presided from 288 to 270 B. C. He was a thorough materialist, and held that every particle of matter has a plastic and seminal power, and that the world is formed by natural development.—Stratonical atheism†, a form of evolutionism which replaces the absolute chance of the Epicureans by a sort of life which is regarded as an intrinsic attribute of matter.

There is, indeed, another form of atheism, . . . we for distinction sake shall call Stratonical, such as, being too modest and shamefaced to fetch all things from the fortuitous motion of atoms, would therefore allow to the several parts of matter a certain kind of natural (though not animal) perception, such as is devoid of reflexive consciousness, together with a plastic power whereby they may be able artificially and methodically to form and frame themselves to the best advantage of their respective capabilities—something like to Aristotle's Nature, but that it hath no dependence at all upon any higher mind or deity. Cudworth, Intellectual System, ii. § 3.

stratopeite (strā-tō'pē-īt), n. [< NL. stratum, a layer; second element uncertain.] A hydrous silicate of manganese, of uncertain composition, derived from the alteration of rhodonite.

stratose (strā'tōs), a. [< NL. stratosus*, < stratum, a layer: see stratum.] In bot., stratified; arranged in more or less clearly defined layers. Farlow, Marine Algæ, p. 51.

stratotic (strā-tot'ik), a. [Irreg. < Gr. στρατός, an army, + -t-ic; or erroneously for stratiotic*, < Gr. στρατιωτικός, of or pertaining to a soldier, < στρατιώτης, a soldier: see Stratiotes.] Warlike; ★military. [Rare.] Imp. Dict.

stratum (strā'tum), n.; pl. strata (-tä). [NL., < L. stratum, a spread for a bed, a coverlet, quilt, blanket, a pillow, bolster, a bed, also pavement, prop. neut. of stratus (= Gr. στρατός, an army), pp. of sternere, = Gr. στορεννύναι, spread, extend. Cf. strew.] A layer of material, formed either naturally or artificially. (a) In geol., a bed or series of beds of one kind of sedimentary rock between others of a different kind. (b) In zoöl. and anat., a layer of tissue, as a membrane, etc.; a lamina or lamella; especially, one of several similar or superposed layers specified by a qualifying word: used with either English or Latin context. —Gonidial stratum. See gonidial.—Rise of strata, in geol. See dip, n., 4 (a).—Secondary strata, in geol., the Mesozoic strata.—Stratum bacillosum. Same as rod-and-cone layer of the retina (which see, under retina).—Stratum cinereum, a layer of gray matter in the nates, lying just beneath the stratum zonale, with few and small ganglion-cells.—Stratum corneum, the outer layer of the epidermis, above the stratum granulosum. See cut under skin.—Stratum cylindrorum. Same as stratum bacillosum.—Stratum gelatinosum, a layer of gray matter of the olfactory bulb, consisting of fusiform or pyramidal gray nerve-cells in a fine mesh of white nerve-fiber.—Stratum glomerulosum, a layer of gray matter of the olfactory bulb, consisting of nodulated masses containing small nuclear cells, among which is a convoluted olfactory nerve-fiber.—Stratum granulosum, the thin stratum next above the stratum spinosum of the epidermis, consisting of cells rendered granular by minute globules of ceratohyalin. It is wanting over the lips and under the nails, and gives the white color to the skin. See cut under skin.—Stratum lacunosum, a layer of the hippocampus major, next above the stratum radiatum, characterized by the open reticulated nature of the neuroglia.—Stratum lucidum, the lowest layer of the stratum corneum of the epidermis. See cut under skin.—Stratum opticum, the layer in the upper quadrigeminal body which lies below the stratum cinereum, composed of longitudinal white fibers interspersed with ganglion-cells.—Stratum radiatum, a layer of the hippocampus major, striated at right angles to its surfaces by the processes of the large pyramidal cells which lie along its inner border.—Stratum spinosum, the lowest layer of the epidermis, next to the corium, formed of prickle-cells, and limited above by the stratum granulosum. Also called rete mucosum, rete Malpighii or Malpighi, and stratum Malpighii or Malpighi. See cut under skin.—Stratum zonale, a superficial stratum of white nerve-fibers.

stratus (strā'tus), n. [NL., < L. stratus, a spread for a bed, a coverlet, < sternere, pp. stratus, spread, extend: see stratum.] A continuous horizontal sheet of cloud, generally of uniform thickness. It is essentially a fine-weather cloud, and is characteristic of areas of high pressure. In the evening and morning of fine days it frequently appears as a low foggy canopy overspreading the whole or a part of the sky, and disappears as the heat of the day increases. All low detached clouds which look like lifted fog and are not consolidated into definite form are stratus. It is the lowest of the clouds. Abbreviated s. See cut under cloud.

All cloud which lies as a thin flat sheet must either be pure stratus or contain the word strato in combination. Abercromby, Weather, p. 71.

straucht, straught[1] (strâcht), a. and v. Obsolete or dialectal (Scotch) forms of straight[1].

straught[2]† (strât), a. [By apheresis from distraught. Cf. strict.] Distraught.

So as being now straught of minde, desperate, and a verie foole, he goeth, etc. R. Scot, Witchcraft, I. 8 b. (Nares.)

straughte†, straught[3]†. Obsolete forms of the preterit and past participle of stretch.

stravagant†, a. [= It. stravagante; an aphetic form of extravagant.] Extravagant; profuse.

stravaig (stra-vāg'), v. i. [Also stravaige; prop. stravague*, < OF. estravaguer = OIt. stravagare, < ML. extravagari, wander out or beyond: see extravagant. Cf. stravagant.] To stroll; wander; go about idly. [Scotch and Irish.]

What did ye come here for? To go prancing down to the shore and back from the shore—and stravaygging about the place? W. Black, In Far Lochaber, vii.

stravaiger (stra-vā'gėr), n. [< stravaig + -er[1].] One who wanders about idly; a stroller; a ★wanderer. [Scotch and Irish.]

straw[1] (strâ), n. and a. [= Sc. strae; < ME. straw, strau, stra, stre, stree, < AS. streáw*. streá*, streów* (found independently only in the form strēwu (appar. pl.), in two glosses, otherwise only in comp. streáwberie, etc.: see strawberry) = OS. strō = OFries. strē = MD. stroo, stroy, D. stroo = MLG. strō, LG. stro = OHG. strō, MHG. strou, strō (straw-, strouw-, strōw-), G. stroh = Icel. strā = Sw. strå = Dan. straa, straw; appar. 'that which is scattered about' (if so, it must have been orig. applied to the broken stalks of grain after threshing, the simple sense 'stalk' being then later), from the root of strew (dial. straw): see strew, straw[2]; cf. L. stramen, straw, < sternere, pp. stratus, strew (see strand[3], stramage, strammel, stratum).] I. n. 1. The stalk or stem of certain species of grain, pulse, etc., chiefly of wheat, rye, oats, barley, buckwheat, and pease, cut or broken off (and usually dry); also, a piece of such a stem.

When shepherds pipe on oaten straws. Shak., L. L. L., v. 2. 913.

2. Such stalks collectively, especially after drying and threshing: as, a load of straw. In this sense a collective without plural.

Ne how the fyr was couched first with stree,
And thanne with drye stokkes cloven a three.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 2075.

3. Figuratively, anything proverbially worthless; the least possible thing.

For thy sword and thy bow I care not a straw,
Nor all thine arrows to boot.
Robin Hood and the Tanner (Child's Ballads, V. 225).
Love, like despair, catches at straws.
Scott, Quentin Durward, xxxv.

4. [In allusion to the proverb, "A straw shows which way the wind blows."] A slight fact, taken as an instance in proof of a tendency.—5. A clay pipe, especially a long one. [Colloq.] —6. Same as straw-needle.—7. In entom., a stick-insect; a walking-stick.—Dunstable straw, wheat-straw used for bonnet-plaits. The middle part of the straw above the last joint is selected. It is cut into lengths of about 10 inches, which are then split by a machine into slips of the requisite width. Whole Dunstable signifies a plait that is formed of seven entire straws, while a patent Dunstable consists of fourteen split straws. Simmonds.—Face of straw, a sham; a mere effigy.

Off drops the Vizor, and a Face of Straw appears.
Roger North, Lxamen, III. viii. § 6.

In the straw, lying-in, as a mother; in childbed.

Our English plain Proverb de Puerperis, "they are in the straw," shows Feather-Beds to be of no ancient use among the common sort of our nation.
Fuller, Worthies, Lincolnshire, II. 263. (Davies.)

Jack of straw. Same as jackstraw, 1.—Leghorn straw. See leghorn.—Man of straw. See man.—Pad in the straw†. See pad[2].—To break a straw†, to quarrel. Udall, tr. of Apophthegms of Erasmus, p. 68.—To draw straws, to give indications of sleepiness.

Lady Answ. I'm sure 'tis time for honest folks to be a-bed.
Miss. Indeed my eyes draw straws.
Swift, Polite Conversation, iii.

To lay a straw†, to pause and make a note. Holland, tr. of Camden, p. 141.

II. a. 1. Made or composed of straw: as, a straw hat.—2. Sham; fictitious; useless: as, a straw bid. Compare straw bail, under bail[2], 5.—Straw bond. See bond[1].—Straw bonnet, a bonnet made of woven or plaited straw. See straw hat, Dunstable straw (above), and leghorn.—Straw hat, a hat made of straw either woven together in one piece or, as is more common, plaited into a narrow braid which is wound spirally, the separate turns being sewed together where the edges touch. Hats for men and bonnets for women are included under the general term.—Straw mosaic, rope, etc. See the nouns.—Straw vote, a vote taken without previous notice, in a casual gathering or otherwise. See I., 4.

straw[1] (strâ), v. t. [< straw[1], n.] To furnish or bind with straw; apply straw to.—Strawed seal, a seal containing a straw, a blade of grass, or a rush, or several of these, embedded in the wax, often around it as a border, or tied in fastening the seal to the document. Such additions to the ordinary seal were often made in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries; but whether the purpose was to strengthen or protect the wax or to preserve a fragment of the clod delivered in making livery of seizin seems to be matter of conjecture.

straw[2] (strâ), v. t. An obsolete or dialectal form of strew. Ex. xxxii. 20.

She strawed the roses on the ground,
Threw her mantle on the brier.
Lord John (Child's Ballads, I. 135).

★strawberry (strâ'ber"i), n.; pl. strawberries (-iz). [< ME. strawbery, strauberi, strabery, straberi, strebery, streberi, strebere, also (in comp.) strawbyry, strobery, < AS. streáwberie, streáwberige, also contracted streáberie, streáberige, streáberge, also streówberge, streuberie. late AS. strēberie (in comp.), strawberry (also called eorthberie, G. erdbeere, 'earth-berry'), < streáw*, straw, + berie, berry: see straw[1] and berry[1]. The first element, lit. 'straw,' is very rare in AS. use, and its exact application here is uncertain. It may be taken in the sense of 'a long stem,' referring to the runners of the plant, or it may allude to an old habit of stringing the berries on a straw. The word is often erroneously explained as a corruption of a supposed strayberry*, or even as referring to the common use of straw or hay about the plants to keep the earth from soiling the berries. No corresponding name appears in the other languages. Cf. strawberry-wise.] The fruit of any of the species of the genus Fragaria, or the plant itself. The plants are stemless, propagating by slender runners (whence they are often called strawberry-vines), with trifoliate leaves, and scapes a few inches high, bearing mostly white-petaled flowers in small cymes, followed by the "berry," which consists of an enlarged fleshy receptacle, colored scarlet or other shade of red, bearing the achenes on its exterior. About twenty-five species are recognized by recent authors, though all of them are exceedingly variable. F. vesca is common throughout the northern old world and northward in North America. It includes the alpine strawberry, hautboy, and wood-strawberry (see below), was probably the first cultivated, and is the source of many artificial varieties, including the perpetuals. The Virginian or scarlet strawberry, F. Virginiana, is common eastward in North America, and extends with its variety Grayana to Kansas and Indian Territory. The achenes, which in F. vesca are superficial, are in this species sunk in pits. The famous Hovey's seedling, produced near Boston about 1840, and later Wilson's Albany (or simply Wilson's), mark the beginning of the American strawberry-culture. Both these sorts were derived from the pine-strawberry, a form of F. Chiloensis. In Chile and along the Pacific coast from San Francisco to Alaska grows the Chile strawberry, F. Chiloensis, a low stout densely hairy plant with thick leaves and large flowers, which has been the source of valuable hybrids in France and England. The Indian strawberry, Duchesnea Indica, peculiar in its yellow petals and tasteless fruit, is only of ornamental value. The strawberry was not cultivated by the ancients; its culture in Europe began probably in the fifteenth or sixteenth century. It is now grown in great quantities in Europe and North America for its delicious subacid fruit, which is used fresh for dessert, and also canned or made into jam, and affords a syrup for flavoring drinks, ices, creams, etc. The varieties, which are mainly or wholly from the first three species above named, are numerous and constantly changing. See cuts under flagellum and Fragaria.

> The strawberry grows underneath the nettle.
> Shak., Hen. V., i. 1. 60.

> Dr. Boteler said, of strawberries, "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did."
> I. Walton, Complete Angler (ed. Bohn), p. 158.

Alpine strawberry, a European species, Fragaria collina.—Ananas strawberry. Same as pine-strawberry, below.—Barren strawberry, in England, Potentilla sterilis, resembling the strawberry in its trifoliate leaves and white flowers; in America, Waldsteinia fragarioides, having the leaves three-parted, but the flowers yellow. Neither has fleshy fruit.—Bog-strawberry, the marsh-fivefinger, Comarum palustre.—Carolina strawberry, a misnomer of the pine-strawberry, once thought to have come from Carolina.—Chili strawberry. See def. and pine-strawberry.—Crushed strawberry, a crimson-red color of considerably reduced luminosity and somewhat reduced chroma. A color disk of 38 parts pure red, 7 parts artificial ultramarine, 48 parts velvet-black, and 7 parts white shows a crushed strawberry.—Hautboy strawberry. See hautboy, 2.—Pine-strawberry, a variety of the Chili strawberry (see def. above), so called from its pineapple flavor. Also Ananas strawberry. See Carolina strawberry. [Eng.]—Scarlet strawberry, specifically, the Virginian strawberry. [Eng.]—Strawberry-crown borer, a curculionid beetle, Tyloderma fragariæ, which lays its eggs at the crown of the strawberry-plant in the United States, and whose larva often seriously damages the crop.—Strawberry false-worm. See strawberry saw-fly (below), and strawberry-worm.—Strawberry leaf-roller, a tortricid moth, Ancylis fragariæ, the larva of which rolls the leaves of the strawberry-plant in the United States; also, one of several other moths whose larvæ have this habit. See cut under leaf-roller.—Strawberry-leaves, a dukedom: from the eight strawberry-leaves on a ducal coronet.—Strawberry root-borer, a moth, Anarsia lineatella, whose larva burrows in the roots of this plant, and often does great damage.—Strawberry run. See run[1].—Strawberry saw-fly, a small black saw-fly, Emphytus maculatus, whose larva is a strawberry-worm. See cut under Emphytus.—Strawberry spinach. Same as strawberry-blite.—Strawberry tongue, in med., a red papillated tongue, as seen in scarlatina.—Wild strawberry, any native strawberry; also, sometimes, species of Potentilla, from their resemblance to the true strawberry.—Wood-strawberry, the typical form of Fragaria vesca. [Eng.]

Strawberry-crown borer (Tyloderma fragariæ).
a, larva, full-grown; b, adult beetle, from side; c, same, from above. (Hair-lines show natural sizes.)

strawberry-bass (strâ'ber-i-bȧs), n. Same as grass-bass.

strawberry-blite (strâ'ber-i-blīt), n. A species of goosefoot, Blitum capitatum, also B. virgatum, whose flower-heads ripen into a bright-red juicy compound fruit. They are old-world plants found in gardens, and the fruit, though insipid, is said to have been formerly used in cookery. Also called strawberry spinach.

strawberry-borer (strâ'ber-i-bōr″ėr), n. One of several different insects whose larvæ mine, bore, or burrow in the crown, leaf, or root of the strawberry. See the specific phrase-names under strawberry.

strawberry-bush (strâ'ber-i-bu̇sh), n. A low upright or straggling American shrub, Euonymus Americanus: so named from its crimson and scarlet fruit.

strawberry-clover (strâ'ber-i-klō″vėr), n. A species of clover, Trifolium fragiferum, of Europe and temperate Asia. It resembles the common white clover, T. repens, but has the fruiting heads involucrate, and very dense from the inflation of the calyxes, which are also somewhat colored, thus suggesting the name.

strawberry-comb (strâ'ber-i-kōm), n. See comb[1], 3.

strawberry-crab (strâ'ber-i-krab), n. A small maioid or spider-crab of European waters, Eurynome aspera: so called from the reddish tubercles with which the carapace is studded.

strawberry-finch (strâ'ber-i-finch), n. Same as amadavat.

strawberry-geranium (strâ'ber-i-jē-rā″ni-um), n. See geranium and saxifrage.

strawberry-mark (strâ'ber-i-märk), n. A kind of birth-mark; a vascular nævus, of reddish color and soft consistency, like a strawberry.

strawberry-moth (strâ'ber-i-môth), n. Any moth whose larva injures the strawberry. (a) A strawberry root-borer. (b) A strawberry leaf-roller. (c) One of three geometrids, Mesoleuca truncata, Ania limbata, and Xanthotype crocataria, whose larvæ feed on the foliage of the strawberry. (d) The smeared dagger, Apatela oblinita.

strawberry-pear (strâ'ber-i-pãr), n. The fruit of a cactaceous plant, Cereus triangularis, of the West Indies, etc., or the plant itself. This plant has three-angled branches which climb by rooting. The fruit is subacid, pleasant, and cooling, and is said to be the best-flavored afforded by any plant of the order.

Strawberry-pear (Cereus triangularis).

strawberry-perch (strâ'ber-i-pėrch), n. The grass-bass.

strawberry-plant (strâ'ber-i-plant), n. 1. See strawberry.—2. Same as strawberry-shrub.

strawberry-roan (strâ'ber-i-rōn), a. See roan[1].

strawberry-shrub (strâ'ber-i-shrub), n. The sweet shrub, Butneria florida and other species. See calycanthus.

strawberry-tomato (strâ'ber-i-tō̤-mā″tō), n. The winter-cherry, Physalis Alkekengi. The berry, inclosed within an inflated calyx, resembles a cherry or a very small tomato in appearance. Also called husk-tomato.

strawberry-tree (strâ'ber-i-trē), n. [< ME. strawbery-tre; < strawberry + tree.] 1†. The strawberry-plant. See the quotation under strawberry-wise.—2. A handsome evergreen shrub or bushy tree, Arbutus Unedo, native in southern Europe. The scarlet granulated fruit at a distance resembles a strawberry, but is dry and lacking in flavor, though sometimes eaten. In Spain a sugar and a spirit are extracted from it. The flowers appear in autumn, when also the fruit, which ripens only the second season, is present. The name is extended to the other species of the genus. See cut under Arbutus, 3.

strawberry-vine (strâ'ber-i-vīn), n. See strawberry.

strawberry-wise†, n. [< ME. strawbery wyse, strawbyry vyse, strobery wyse, streberiwise, < AS. streawberie-wīse, streáberie-wise, later stræberiewise, strawberry-plant, < streáwberie, strawberry, + wise, here appar. a particular use of wīse, way, manner, wise: see strawberry and wise[2].] The strawberry-plant.

> Strawbery wyse (strawberytre, K. strawbe[ry] wyse, H. strawbyry vyse, S). Fragus. Prompt. Parv., p. 478.

strawberry-worm (strâ'ber-i-wėrm), n. The worm, grub, or caterpillar of any insect which injures the strawberry; especially, the larva of the strawberry saw-fly, Emphytus maculatus, more fully called strawberry false-worm. See cut under Emphytus. [U. S.]

strawboard (strâ'bōrd), n. A thick and coarse hard-rolled fabric of yellow paper or cardboard made of straw: largely used by makers of cheap paper boxes.

straw-buff (strâ'buf), n. Straw-color of very low chroma, as in Manila paper.

straw-built (strâ'bilt), a. Built or constructed of straw. Milton, P. L., i. 773.

straw-cat (strâ'kat), n. The pampas-cat.

straw-coat (strâ'kōt), n. Same as paillasse, 2.

straw-color (strâ'kul″or), a. and n. I. a. Straw-colored; stramineous.

> Your straw-colour beard. Shak., M. N. D., i. 2. 95.

II. n. An extremely luminous, very cool yellow color, of somewhat reduced chroma, recalling the color of yellow straw, but cooler in hue. There is a wide range of chroma in colors called by this name.

straw-colored (strâ'kul″ord), a. Pale light-yellow, like dry straw; corn-colored; stramineous: as, the straw-colored bat, Natalus albiventer.

straw-cotton (strâ'kot″n), n. A cotton thread made for the manufacture of hats and other articles of straw.

straw-cutter (strâ'kut″ėr), n. In agri., any machine for cutting straw and hay into short pieces suitable for feed for cattle.

straw-drain (strâ'drān), n. A drain filled with straw.

straw-embroidery (strâ'em-broi″dėr-i), n. Fancy work done upon net, usually black silk net, by means of yellow straw, which forms the flowers and principal parts of the pattern, and silk of the same color.

strawen† (strâ'en), a. [< straw[1] + -en[1].] Made of straw. Stow.

straw-fiddle (strâ'fid″l), n. A variety of xylophone in which the wooden bars are laid on rolls of straw. Also gigelira and sticcado.

straw-fork† (strâ'fôrk), n. A pitchfork.

> Flail, strawfork, and rake, with a fan that is strong.
> Tusser, September's Husbandry.

straw-house (strâ'hous), n. A house for holding straw after the grain has been thrashed out.

strawing (strâ'ing), n. The occupation of selling straws in the street and giving with them something which is forbidden to be sold, as indecent papers, political songs, and the like. Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 229. [Cant.]

straw-necked (strâ'nekt), a. Having husky or straw-like feathers on the neck: as, the straw-necked ibis, Carphibis spinicollis.

straw-needle (strâ'nē dl), n. A long thin needle used for sewing together straw braid, as in the manufacture of hats. Also called straw.

straw-ride (strâ'rīd), n. A pleasure-ride in the country, taken in a long wagon or sleigh filled with straw, upon which the party sit. [Colloq., U. S.]

strawsmall (strâ'smâl), n. The whitethroat, Sylvia cinerea: so called from the straw used in constructing its nest. [Eng.]

strawsmear (strâ'smēr), n. 1. Same as strawsmall.—2. The garden-warbler, Sylvia hortensis.—3. The willow-warbler, Phylloscopus trochilus. [Prov. Eng. in all senses.]

straw-stem (strâ'stem), n. 1. In glass-making, the stem of a wine-glass pulled out of the substance of the bowl. Hence—2. A wine-glass having a stem of the above character.

> A party of young men . . . let fall that superb cut-glass Claret, and shivered it, with a dozen of the delicately-engraved straw-stems that stood upon the waiter.
> G. W. Curtis, Potiphar Papers, ii.

straw-stone (strâ'stōn), n. Same as carpholite.

straw-underwing (strâ'un″dėr-wing), n. A British noctuid moth, Cerigo matura, having straw-colored underwings, with a broad, smoky marginal band.

straw-wine (strâ'wīn), n. Wine made from grapes which have been dried or partly dried by exposure to the sun: so called from the bed of straw upon which they have been laid. Such wine is generally sweet and rich.

> We may presume that oseye was a luscious-sweet, or straw-wine, similar to that which is still made in that province [Alsace]. Labees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 206, note.

★straw-worm (strâ'wėrm), n. The larva of a trichopterous neuropterous insect; a caddis-worm: so called from the bits of straw of which it builds its case. See cut under caddis-worm.

strawy (strâ'i), a. [< straw[1] + -y[1].] Pertaining to, made of, or like straw; consisting of straw; resembling straw.

> There the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge,
> Fall down before him, like the mower's swath.
> Shak., T. and C., v. 5. 24.

straw-yard (strâ'yärd), n. See the quotation.

> They [trampers] come back to London to avail themselves of the shelter of the night asylums or refuges for the destitute (usually called straw-yards by the poor).
> Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, II. 138.

straw-yellow (strâ'yel″ō), n. A chromatic variety of straw-color, or a yellow verging upon straw-color.

stray[1] (strā), v. [< ME. strayen, straien, < OF. estraier, estrayer, estraer, estraer, wander about, stray (said of an animal, esp. of a horse, going about without its master), also of a person, wander, ramble, prob. lit. 'go about the streets or highways' (= It. stradare, put on the way, show the way) (cf. estraier, estrayer, wandering about, straying, stray, = Pr. estradier, one who wanders about the streets, < ML. as if stratarius*; cf. also It. stradiotto, a wanderer, traveler, gadder, a particular use of stradiotto, a soldier, free-booter (see stradiot, estradiot), associated with strada, street), < estree, strce, strae, also (after Pr.) estrade, a street, road, highway, = Pr. estrada = It. strada, a street, road, highway, < L. strata, a street, road: see estre[2] and street. According to some etymologists the OF. estraier is prob. = Pr. estraguar, < ML. extravagari, wander, < L. extra, without, + vagari, wander: see extravagant, extravagate. Cf. astray, estray, v., doublets of stray[1].] I. intrans. 1. To wander, as from a direct course; deviate or go out of the way or from the proper limits; go astray.

> A sheep doth very often stray,
> An if the shepherd be a while away.
> Shak., T. G. of V., i. 1. 74.

2. To wander from the path of truth, duty, or rectitude; turn from the accustomed or prescribed course; deviate.

We have erred, and strayed from thy ways like lost sheep. Book of Common Prayer, General Confession.

Tom Tusher never permitted his mind to stray out of the prescribed University path.
Thackeray, Henry Esmond, x.

3. To move about without or as without settled purpose or direction.

My eye, descending from the hill, surveys
Where Thames among the wanton valleys strays.
Sir J. Denham, Cooper's Hill, l. 160.

The Cardinal de Cabasolle strayed with Petrarch about his valley in many a wandering discourse.
I. D'Israeli, Lit. Char. Men of Genius, p. 147.

=Syn. 1. To straggle.—1 and 3. Wander, Rove, etc. See ramble, v.

II. trans. To cause to stray; mislead; seduce. [Rare.]

Hath not else his eye
Stray'd his affection in unlawful love?
Shak., C. of E., v. 1. 51.

★stray[1] (strā), a. and n. [Early mod. E. also straye, straie; by apheresis from estray, n., as well as astray, orig. pp., < F. estraié, estrayé, strayed, astray, pp. of estraier, estrayer, stray: see stray[1], v. Cf. estray, n. In defs. II., 3 and 4, directly from the verb.] I. a. Having gone astray; strayed; wandering; straggling; incidental.

Stray beest, that goethe a-stray. Prompt. Parv., p. 478.

That little apothecary who sold a stray customer a pennyworth of salts. Thackeray, Pendennis, ii.

II. n. 1. Any domestic animal that has left an inclosure or its proper place and company, and wanders at large or is lost; an estray.

Impounded as a stray
The King of Scots. Shak., Hen. V., i. 2. 160.

Hence—2. A person or persons astray; a straggler; a truant.

Strike up our drums, pursue the scatter'd stray.
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., iv. 2. 120.

There is also a school for strays and truants.
Harper's Mag., LXXVIII. 545.

3. The act of wandering. [Rare.]

I would not from your love make such a stray,
To match you where I hate. Shak., Lear, i. 1. 212.

4. A pasturage for cattle. [Prov. Eng.]

The eight hundred acres, more or less, in six different strays without the walls, belonging to the four ancient wards, and on which freemen have exclusive right to depasture their cattle. Harper's Mag., LXXIX. 843.

On the stray†, upon stray†, deserting; straggling; scattering; wandering.

Lokis well to the listis, that no lede passe!
If any stert vpon stray, strike hym to dethe!
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 6258.

Right of stray, the right of pasturing cattle on commons. Halliwell.

stray[2]† (strā), n. [Early mod. E. also strayve*, streave; < ME. strayve, streyve, appar. for strayre*, streyre, < OF. estraiere, estrayere, estraihere, estrahiere, estrahere, f., estraier, estrayer, m. (ML. reflex estraieria, estraeria), usually in pl. estraieres, etc., goods left by an alien or bastard intestate, and escheated to the king as unowned or 'stray,' < estraier, estrayer, adj., straying, stray. The word was confused with the related noun stray[1], prop. a straying animal, and as a more technical term suffered some variation in use.] Property left behind by an alien at his death, and escheated to the king in default of heirs.

Somme seruen the kynge, . . . chalengynge hus dettes,
Of wardes and of wardemotes, wayues and strayues.
Piers Plowman (C), i. 92.

strayed (strād), p. a. Wandering; astray: as, strayed cattle; a strayed reveler.

strayer (strā'ėr), n. [< stray[1] + -er[1].] One who or that which strays; a wanderer.

stray-line (strā'līn), n. 1. In whaling, that part of the towline which is in the water when fast to a whale.—2. The unmarked part of a log-line, next to the chip, which is allowed to run off before beginning to count, in order to clear the chip from eddies at the stern. The limit of the stray-line is indicated by a rag called the stray-mark.

strayling (strā'ling), n. [< stray[1] + -ling[1].] A little waif or stray. [Rare.]

Hardy Asiatic straylings, whose seeds have followed the grains. Grant Allen, Colin Clout's Calendar, p. 182.

stret†, n. A Middle English form of straw[1].

streak[1] (strēk), v. i. [< ME. streken, a var. of strīken, a secondary form of strīken (pret. pl. and pp. striken), go: see strike, v., and cf. strake[1], v. Cf. sneak, ult. < AS. snīcan. As used in the United States, this verb is commonly associated with streak[2], n.] To run swiftly. [Obsolete or prov. Eng. and U. S.]

O'er hill and dale with fury she did dreel;
A' roads to her were good and bad alike,
Nane o' 't she wyl'd, but forward on did streek.
Ross, Helenore, p. 56. (Jamieson.)

They jest streaked it out through the buttery-door!
H. B. Stowe, Oldtown, p. 172.

★streak[2] (strēk), n. [< ME. streke, strike, < AS. strica, a line, stroke (= MD. streke, D. streek = MLG. streke, LG. streek = OHG. MHG. G. strich, a stroke, line, G. streich, a stroke, blow, etc., = Icel. stryk, strykr, a streak, stroke, = Sw. streck = Dan. streg, a streak, line, = Goth. striks, a stroke of a pen), < strīcan (pp. stricen), go: see strike, and cf. stroke, strake[2]. The L. strīga, a swath, furrow, is of diff. origin.] 1. A line, band, or stripe of somewhat irregular shape.

While the fantastic Tulip strives to break
In two-fold Beauty, and a parted Streak.
Prior, Solomon, i.

In dazzling streaks the vivid lightnings play.
Cowper, Heroism, l. 18.

2. In mineral., the line or mark of fine powder produced when a mineral is scratched, or when it is rubbed upon a hard, rough surface, as that of unglazed porcelain. The color of the streak is often an important character, particularly in the case of minerals having a metallic luster. For example, certain massive forms of the iron ores hematite and magnetite resemble each other closely, but are readily distinguished by the fact that the former has a red and the latter a black streak.

3. In zoöl., a color-mark of considerable length for its width, and generally less firm and regular than a stripe. See streaked, streaky, and compare stripe, 1.—4. Figuratively, a trait; a vein; a turn of character or disposition; a whim.

Some Streaks too of Divinity ran,
Partly of Monk, and partly Puritan.
Cowley, The Mistress, Wisdom.

Mrs. Britton had been churning, and the butter "took a contrary streak," as she expressed it, and refused to come. E. Eggleston, The Graysons, xviii.

5. Naut., same as strake[2], 6.—6†. A rung of a ladder.

You are not a little beholden to the poor dear soul that 's dead, for putting a streak in your ladder, when you was on the last step of it. Cumberland, Natural Son, iii.

7. A short piece of iron, six of which form the wheel-tire of a wooden artillery-carriage.—Germinal streak, primitive streak. Same as primitive groove (which see, under primitive).—Streak of luck, fortunate chance; run of luck. [Colloq., U. S.]—Streak of the spear. See spear[1], 6.—To go like a streak (sc. of lightning), to go very rapidly; rush. [Colloq., U. S.]

streak[2] (strēk), v. t. [< streak[2], n.] To put a streak upon or in; break up the surface of by one or more streaks.

Eche a strete was striked & strawed with floures.
William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 1617.

The last faint gleams of the sun's low beams
Had streak'd the gray with red.
Scott, The Gray Brother.

streak[3] (strēk), v. [Also streek, streik; an unassibilated form of stretch: see stretch.] I. trans. 1. To stretch; extend. [Obsolete or dialectal.]

As the lion lies before his den,
Guarding his whelps, and streaks his careless limbs.
Chapman, Gentleman Usher, v. 1.

2. To lay out, as a dead body. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

The streikit corpse, till still midnight,
They waked, but naething hear.
Young Benjie (Child's Ballads, II. 302).

II. intrans. To stretch out; shoot, as a rocket or a shooting-star.

Fore-god, my lord, haue you beheld the like [a blazing star]?
Look how it streaks! what do you think of it?
Heywood, If you Know not Me (Works, ed. 1874, I. 292).

★streaked (strēkt or strē'ked), a. 1. Striped; striate; having streaks or stripes; especially, having lengthwise streaks, as distinguished from crosswise bands, bars, or fasciæ.—2. Confused; ashamed; agitated; alarmed. [Low, U. S.]

But wen it comes to bein' killed—I tell ye I felt streaked
The fust time 't ever I found out wy baggonets wuz peaked.
Lowell, Biglow Papers, 1st ser., ii.

Streaked falcon. See falcon.—Streaked gurnard, a fish, Trigla lineata.—Streaked sandpiper†. See sandpiper.

streakfield (strēk'fēld), n. The scuttler, or six-striped lizard, Cnemidophorus sexlineatus: so called from the swiftness with which it scuttles or streaks across fields.

streakiness (strē'ki-nes), n. The state or quality of being streaked or streaky.

streaking (strē'king), n. [< streak[2] + -ing.] A streak; a stripe.

She . . . striped its pure, celestial white
With streakings of the morning light.
J. R. Drake, The American Flag.

streak-stitch (strēk'stich), n. A stitch in needle-made lace by means of which an open line is left in the mat or toilé.

streaky (strē'ki), a. [< streak[2] + -y[1].] 1. Having streaks; marked with streaks; streaked. It differs from striped in that the lines are not accurately parallel, nor straight and uniform.

When streaky sunset faded softly into dusk.
R. D. Blackmore, Kit and Kitty, xiv.

Hence—2. Uneven in quality; variable in character or excellence: as, his poetry is decidedly streaky. [Colloq.]

streal (strēl), n. [Early mod. E. also strale; < ME. strel*, stral, < AS. strǣl, an arrow, missile, = OS. strāla = MD. straele, D. straal = MLG. strale = OHG. strāla, MHG. strāle (> It. strale), G. strahl, an arrow, beam of light, = Icel. strjāl, an arrow, = Sw. stråle = Dan. straale, a beam of light, jet of water, flash of lightning, = OBulg. striela = Russ. strela, an arrow; cf. Russ. strielitz, an archer (see strelitz).] 1. An arrow. Wright (spelled streale). [Prov. Eng.]—2†. The pupil of the eye.

The strale of the eye, pupilla.
Withals, Dict. (ed. 1608), p. 278. (Nares.)

★stream (strēm), n. [< ME. streem, strem, < AS. stream = OS. strōm = OFries. stram = D. stroom = MLG. strom = OHG. stroum, strōm, MHG. stroum, strūm, strām, G. strom = Icel. straumr = Sw. Dan. ström (Goth. not recorded), a stream; with initial str- for orig. sr-, akin to OIr. sruth, Ir. sroth, a stream, sruaim, a stream, Russ. struia, Lith. srowe, a stream, Gr. ῥοῖς, a flowing, ῥεῦμα, a flowing, a stream, river, etc. (see rheum[1]), ῥυθμός, a flowing, rhythm (see rhythm); < √ sru = Gr. ῥεῖν (for σρεϝεν*), = Skt. √ sru, flow.] 1. A course of running water; a river, rivulet, or brook.

He stod bi the flodes strem.
Genesis and Exodus (E. E. T. S.), l. 2096.

He brought streams also out of the rock, and caused waters to run down like rivers. Ps. lxxviii. 16.

As streams their channels deeper wear.
Burns, To Mary in Heaven.

2. A steady current in a river or in the sea; especially, the middle or most rapid part of a current or tide: as, to row against the stream; the Gulf Stream.

My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.
Shak., Othello, ii. 3. 65.

Row, brothers, row! the stream runs fast,
The rapids are near, and the daylight 's past!
Moore, Canadian Boat-Song.

3. A flow; a flowing; that which flows in or out, as a liquid or a fluid, air or light.

Bright was the day, and blew the firmament:
Phebus hath of gold hise stremes doun ysent
To gladen every flour with his warmness.
Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, l. 976.

Forth gusht a stream of gore blood thick.
Spenser, F. Q., II. i. 39.

A wandering stream of wind,
Breathed from the west, has caught the expanded sail.
Shelley, Alastor.

4. Anything issuing from a source and moving or flowing continuously: as, a stream of words; a stream of sand; a stream of people.

With never an end to the stream of passing feet.
Tennyson, Maud, xxvii. 1.

5. A continued course or current; the course or current of affairs or events; current; drift.

Such was the stream of those times that all men gave place unto it, which we cannot but impute partly to their own oversight. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v. 42.

For science, God is simply the stream of tendency by which all things fulfil the law of their being.
M. Arnold, Literature and Dogma, i.

6. A rift: so called by English anglers. Norris.—Gulf Stream. See gulf.—Stream-function of the motion of an incompressible fluid in two dimensions, such a function that the total instantaneous flow across any curve, referred to the unit of time, is equal to the difference of the values of the stream-function at the extremities of the curve.—Stream of thought, the train of ideas which pass successively into present consciousness, regarded as analogous to a current flowing past a point upon the bank.—The stream, the Gulf Stream.=Syn. 1 and 2. Stream, Current, Eddy. All rivers and brooks are streams, and have currents. An eddy is a counter-current, a current contrary to the main direction.

stream (strēm), v. [< ME. stremen = D. stroomen = G. strömen = Icel. streyma = Sw. strömma = Dan. strömme; from the noun.] I. intrans. 1. To move or run in a continuous current; flow continuously. See streaming, n., 2.

Within those banks, where rivers now
Stream, and perpetual draw their humid train.
Milton, P. L., vii. 306.

On all sides round
Streams the black blood. Pope, Odyssey, iii. 581.

2. To move or proceed continuously and uniformly, or in unbroken succession.

And to imperial Love, that god most high,
Do my sighs stream. Shak., All's Well, ii. 3. 82.

Streaming files of wild ducks began to make their appearance high in the air. Irving, Sketch-Book, p. 437.

3. To pour out a stream; also, to throw off a stream from the surface: as, streaming eyes; a streaming umbrella.

Then grateful Greece with streaming eyes wou'd raise Historic marbles, to record his praise.
Fenton, in Pope's Odyssey, i. 305.

Blasts that blow the poplar white,
And lash with storm the streaming pane.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, lxxii.

4. To move swiftly and continuously, as a ray of light; streak.

I looked up just in time to see a superb shooting star stream across the heavens. Nature, XXX. 455.

5. To stretch out in a line; hang or float at full length: as, streaming hair.

Standards and gonfalons 'twixt van and rear Stream in the air. Milton, P. L., v. 590.

Ribands streaming gay. Cowper, Task, iv. 541.

II. trans. 1. To discharge in a stream; cause to flow; pour out.

Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood.
Shak., J. C., iii. 1. 201.

Calanus told Onesicritus of a golden world, where meale was as plentifull as dust, and fountaines streamed milke, hony, wine, and oyle. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 454.

2. To cause to float out; wave.

Many a time hath banish'd Norfolk fought, . . .
Streaming the ensign of the Christian cross Against black pagans, Turks, and Saracens.
Shak., Rich. II., iv. 1. 94.

3†. To stripe or ray. See streaming, a. [Rare.]

The herald's mantle is streamed with gold. Bacon.

4. (a) In mining, to wash, as the superficial detritus, especially that accumulated in the beds of rivers, for the purpose of separating any valuable ore which it may contain. See placer[2]. The term stream, long in use in Cornwall, exclusively with reference to tin ores, seems hardly to have come into general use in any mining regions except those in which the ore of tin is mined. (b) In dyeing, to wash in running water, as silk, before putting in the dye. Workshop Receipts, 2d ser., p. 40.—To stream a buoy. See buoy.

stream-anchor (strēm'ang″kor), n. Naut., an anchor of a size intermediate between the bower-anchor and the kedge. It is used for warping and like purposes. In the United States navy stream-anchors weigh from 400 to 1,500 pounds, and are about one fourth the weight of bower-anchors.

stream-cable (strēm'kā″bl), n. The cable or hawser of the stream-anchor.

stream-clock (strēm'klok), n. [Tr. G. stromuhr.] An instrument for determining the velocity of blood in a vessel; a rheometer.

stream-current (strēm'kur″ent), n. See the quotation, and also drift-current.

A current whose onward movement is sustained by the vis a tergo of a drift-current is called a stream-current.
Encyc. Brit., III. 19.

★streamer (strē'mėr), n. [ME. stremer, stremere; < stream + -er[1].] 1. That which streams out, or hangs or floats at full length: applied to anything long and narrow, as a ribbon.

All twinkling with the dewdrops' sheen,
The brier-rose fell in streamers green.
Scott, L. of the L., i. 11.

(a) A long narrow flag; a pennon extended or flowing in the wind: same as pennant, 1 (a).

His brave fleet
With silken streamers the young Phœbus fanning.
Shak., Hen. V., iii., Prol., l. 6.

(b) A stream or column of light shooting upward or outward, as in some forms of the aurora borealis.

He knew, by the streamers that shot so bright,
That spirits were riding the northern light.
Scott, L. of L. M., ii. 8.

(c) A long flowing strip of ribbon, or feather, or something similar, used in decoration, especially in dress.

A most airy sort of blue and silver turban, with a streamer of plumage on one side.
Charlotte Brontë, Villette, xx.

(d) A long-exserted feather which streams away from the rest of the plumage of some birds; a pennant or standard. See cuts under Semioptera and standard-bearer.

2. In mining, a person who washes for stream-tin. See streaming.—3. The geometrid moth Anticlea derivata: an English collectors' name.

streamful (strēm'fûl), a. [< stream + -ful.] Full of streams or currents.

Like a ship despoiled of her sails,
Shov'd by the wind against the streamful tide.
Drayton, Legend of Pierce Gaveston, st. 105.

stream-gold (strēm'gōld), n. See the quotation.

The gold of alluvial districts, called stream-gold or placer-gold, occurs, as well as alluvial tin, among the debris of the more ancient rocks. Ure, Dict., III. 298.

stream-ice (strēm'īs), n. Pieces of drift or bay ice forming a ridge and following the line of current.

At 4 A. M. a seemingly close pack was seen to the eastward, but later it developed into stream-ice of small extent.
A. W. Greely, Arctic Service, p. 67.

streaminess (strē'mi-nes), n. The quality or state of being streamy.

I give the case of a star-group which is certainly not the most remarkable for streaminess.
R. A. Proctor, Universe of Stars (2d ed., 1878), p. 22.

streaming (strē'ming), n. [Verbal n. of stream, v.] 1. In tin-mining, the washing of tin ore from the detritus with which it is associated. The now almost entirely exhausted deposits of detrital tin ore in Cornwall and Devon were called streams, because they occur chiefly in or near the bottoms of the valleys and adjacent to the present streams, or in the manner of deposits formed by streams, analogous to the channels of the Californian and the gutters of the Australian miners; the miners were themselves called streamers; the localities where streaming was carried on, stream-works; and the ore obtained, stream-tin.

2. In biol., the peculiar flowing motion of the particles of protoplasm in an amœba or other rhizopod, by which the form of the animalcule changes or pseudopods are protruded; also, the similar circulation or rotation of the protoplasm of some plant-cells. See protoplasm, and rotation of protoplasm (under rotation).

streaming (strē'ming), p. a. In her., issuing, as rays of light: as, rays streaming from the dexter chief.

streamless (strēm'les), a. [< stream + -less.] Not traversed by streams; unwatered. Encyc. Brit., XXIV. 758.

streamlet (strēm'let), n. [< stream + -let.] A small stream; a rivulet; a rill.

Unnumber'd glittering streamlets play'd,
And hurled every where their waters sheen.
Thomson, Castle of Indolence, i. 3.

stream-line (strēm'līn), n. See line[2], and line of flow (under flow[1]).—Stream-line surface. See surface.

streamling (strēm'ling), n. [< stream + -ling[1].] Same as streamlet.

A thousand Streamlings that n'er saw the Sun,
With tribute silver to his service run.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, ii., The Captaines.

stream-tin (strēm'tin), n. In mining, tin ore, or oxid of tin, obtained in streaming (which see).

stream-wheel (strēm'hwēl), n. An undershot wheel, or current-wheel.

stream-works (strēm'wėrks), n. sing. and pl. In mining, a locality where the detrital deposits are washed in order to procure the valuable metal or ore which they may contain; alluvial washings, or surface mining. The words stream-works and stream (v. t.) are rarely, if ever, used except with reference to the separation of tin ore from detrital deposits.

streamwort (strēm'wėrt), n. A plant of the family Haloragidaceæ. [Rare.]

streamy (strē'mi), a. [Early mod. E. also stremy; < stream + -y[1].] 1. Abounding in streams. (a) Full of running water or of springs.

Arcadia
(However streamy), now adust and dry, Deny'd the Goddess Water.
Prior, First Hymn of Callimachus.

(b) Full of or emitting streaming rays of light.

In streamy sparkles, kindling all the skies,
From pole to pole the trail of glory flies.
Pope, Iliad, xiii. 321.

2. Having the form of a beam or stream of light.

streatt, n. An obsolete form of street.

Streatfield's operation. See operation.

strebery†, n. An obsolete form of strawberry.

Strebla (streb'lä), n. [NL. (Wiedemann, 1824), < Gr. στρεβλός, twisted, crooked, < στρέφειν, twist.] A peculiar genus of pupiparous dipterous insects, of the family Nycteribiidæ, including certain so-called bat-lice or bat-ticks. S. vespertilionis is a common bat-parasite occurring in South America and the West Indies.

streblosis (streb-lō'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. στρεβλός, twisted: see Strebla.] The angle through which it is necessary to rotate an element of a figure to bring it into coincidence with the corresponding element of a given conformable figure.

Streblus (streb'lus), n. [NL. (Loureiro, 1790), so called in allusion to its branches, which form a dense mass of rigid straggling twigs; < Gr. στρεβλός, twisted: see Strebla.] A genus of dicotyledonous apetalous plants, belonging to the family Moraceæ, type of the tribe Streblieæ. It is characterized by usually diœcious flowers, the male in clustered two-bracted heads, the female solitary on the peduncle, the perianth consisting of four widely overlapping segments which closely invest the one-celled ovary. As in most of the subtribe, its cotyledons are very unequal, and the larger, which is very fleshy, incloses the smaller. The only species, S. asper, is the tonkhoi or paper-tree of the Siamese, who prepare several kinds of paper from its bark, including a heavy and a thin white paper, and a black paper for use like a slate, much employed in the native law-courts. It is a small tree, reaching about thirty feet in height, bearing dark-green oval coriaceous two-ranked leaves, and occurring from China and Manila to the Andaman Islands.

strecchet, v. An old spelling of stretch.

street, n. A Middle English form of straw[1].

streel (strēl), v. i. [Cf. streal.] To trail; stream.

A yellow satin train that streeled after her like the tail of a comet. Thackeray, Vanity Fair, xx.

streent, n. A Middle English form of strain[2].

streept, v. A Middle English form of strip[1].

street (strēt), n. [Early mod. E. also streat, streate; < ME. streete, strete, stret, strate, < AS. strǣt = OS. strata = OFries. strete = MD. straete, D. straat = MLG. strāte, LG. strate = OHG. strāza, MHG. strāze, G. strasse = Icel. stræti = Sw. stråt = Dan. stræde (= It. strada = Sp. Pg. Pr. estrada = OF. estree, stree, strae, F. étrée = W. ystrad, ystrid = OIr. srāth = Ir. Gael. sraid = NGr. στράτα), < LL. strata, a street, road, highway, orig. via strata, a paved way, < L. strata, fem. of stratus, pp. of sternere, strew, scatter, spread, cover, pave: see stratum. Street is one of the very few words regarded as received in England from the Roman invaders, others being chester (Chester), port, wall, and -coln in Lincoln. Cf. stray[1], stray[2].] 1†. A paved road; a highway.

This grand-child, great as he [Mulmutius], those four proud Streets begun
That each way cross this Isle, and bounds did them allow. Drayton, Polyolbion, viii. 74.

There were at that time [fifth year after the Conquest] in England four great roads, . . . of which two ran lengthways through the island, and two crossed it, . . . Watlinge-strete, Fosse, Hikenilde-strete, and Erming-strete.
Guest, Origines Celticæ, II. 218.

2. A public way or road, whether paved or unpaved, in a village, town, or city, ordinarily including a sidewalk or sidewalks and a roadway, and having houses or town lots on one or both sides; a main way, in distinction from a lane or alley: as, a fashionable street; a street of shops. Abbreviated St, st. Compare road, 3. Strictly, the word excludes the houses, which are on the street; but in a very common use it includes the land and houses, which are then in the street: as, a house in High Street. In law, street sometimes includes as much of the surface, and as much of the space above and of the soil or depth beneath, as may be needed for the ordinary works which the local authorities may decide to execute on or in a street, including sidewalks.

Up Fish Street! down Saint Magnus' Corner!
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iv. 8. 1.

3. The way for vehicles, between the curbs, as distinguished from the sidewalks: as, to walk in the street.—4. Hence, a path or passageway inclosed between continuous lines of objects; a track; a lane.

It seemed to bee, as it were, a continued street of shippes. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 435.

I was ushered through an actual street of servitors.
Disraeli, Vivian Grey, iii. 8.

5†. A path; a way.

Than makest thou his pees with his sovereyn,
And bringest him out of the croked streete.
Chaucer, A. B. C., l. 70.

While I ran by the most secret streets,
Eschewing still the common haunted track.
Surrey, Æneid, ii. 975.

6. The inhabitants of a street collectively. [Colloq.]

All the whole street will hate us, and the world
Point me out cruel. Middleton, Chaste Maid, v. 2.

Grub Street. See Grub-street.—Lombard Street. See Lombard[2], 1.—Queer Street. See queer[1].—Street Arab. See Arab, 2.—Street broker. See broker.—The street, a street (as Wall Street in New York) or locality where merchants or stock-brokers congregate for business; the commercial exchange: as, it is rumored on the street.

Common places whyther marchauntes resort as to the burse or streate. Peter Martyr (tr. in Eden's First Books [on America, ed. Arber, p. 186).

To have the key of the street. See key[1].—To spin street-yarn. See spin.=Syn. 2. Road, etc. See way.

streetage (strē'tāj), n. [< street + -age.] A charge made for the use of a street. [Rare.]

street-car (strēt'kär), n. A passenger-car for local or city travel, drawn on the surface of the public streets by horses, by a locomotive engine, or by an endless cable, or propelled by electricity. [U. S.]

The street-cars rattled in the foreground, changing horses and absorbing and emitting passengers.
H. James, Jr., The Bostonians, xxxiv.

street-door (strēt′dōr), n. The door of a house or other building which opens upon a street.

When you step but a few doors off . . . to see a brother-footman going to be hanged, leave the street door open.
Swift, Advice to Servants (Footman).

streeted (strē′ted), a. Provided with streets.

There are few Places this Side the Alps better built, and so well streeted as this [Antwerp].
Howell, Letters, I. i. 12.

street-locomotive (strēt′lō″kō-mō-tiv), n. See locomotive.

street-orderly (strēt′ôr″dėr-li), n. A person employed to keep the streets clean by the prompt removal of rubbish, dung, or dirt of any kind by means of a hand-brush and bag.

By the street-orderly method of scavaging, the thoroughfares are continually being cleansed, and so never allowed to become dirty; whereas, by the ordinary method, they are not cleansed until they are dirty.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, II. 257.

street-railroad (strēt′rāl″rōd), n. A railroad constructed upon the surface of a public street in towns and cities; a tramway. Cars on such railroads are variously propelled, and the railroads take specific names from the system of propulsion, as cable-railroad, horse-railroad, electric railroad. [U. S.]

street-sweeper (strēt′swē pėr), n. One who or that which sweeps the streets; specifically, a machine provided with brushes and scrapers for removing dust, mud, etc., from the streets.

street-walker (strēt′wâ″kėr), n. 1. One who walks the streets; a pedestrian.

All street-walkers and shop-keepers bear an equal share in its hourly vexation [the nuisance of beggars].
Swift, Proposal for giving Badges to Beggars.

2. A common prostitute who walks the streets at night.

streetward[1] (strēt′wârd), n. [< street + ward.] Formerly, an officer who had the care of the streets.

streetward[2] (strēt′wȧrd), adv. and a. [< street + -ward.] Next the street; looking out on the street. Tennyson, Enoch Arden.

streetway (strēt′wā), n. [< street + way.] The open space of a street; the roadway.

streight[1]†. An old spelling of straight[1].

streight[2]†, streighten†. Old spellings of strait[1], straiten. Drayton.

streik†, v. See streak[3].

streine†, streinable†. Old spellings of strain[1], strainable. Holinshed.

streit†, streite†, a. Old spellings of strait[1].

streke†. A Middle English form of streak[1], streak[2], and strike.

strelitz (strel′its), n. [< G. strelitze, < Russ. strieletsŭ, an archer, shooter, < strielyatĭ, shoot, striela, an arrow; prob. < OHG. strāla, G. strahl = AS. strǣl, arrow: see streal.] A soldier of the ancient Muscovite guards, abolished by Peter the Great.

Strelitzia (strē-lit′si-ȧ), n. [NL. (Banks, 1789), named after Queen Charlotte, wife of George III. of England, and descended from the German house of Mecklenburg-Strelitz.] 1. A genus of monocotyledonous plants, of the family Musaceæ, type of the tribe Strelitzieæ, distinguished by its flowers with three free sepals and three very dissimilar and peculiar petals, of which the outer is short, broad, and concave or hooded, the two lateral long, narrow, more or less united, and continued into a long petaloid appendage. There are 4 species, natives of South Africa. They are singular plants, producing an erect or subterranean woody rootstock, and large leaves which resemble those of a small banana-tree, or are reduced mainly or completely to tall erect cylindrical petioles. The large handsome flowers are borne few together far exserted from a spathe, which consists of one or two large boat-shaped bracts on a terminal or axillary scape. S. Reginæ, known as queen-plant, bird's-tongue flower, or bird-of-paradise flower, produces large brilliant flowers, highly prized for the oddity of their shape and coloring, showing the unusual combination of orange and blue. S. augusta, a larger species with small white flowers and purple bracts, has a tall palm-like stem.

2. [l. c.] A plant of this genus.

streme†, n. and v. An obsolete spelling of stream.

stren†, strene†, n. Middle English forms of strain[2].

strenger†, strengest†, a. Earlier comparative and superlative of strong[1].

strengite (streng′īt), n. [Named after A. Streng, of Giessen, Germany.] A hydrous phosphate of iron, occurring in reddish orthorhombic crystals: it is isomorphous with scorodite.

strength (strength), n. [< ME. strengthe, strencthe, strenkyth, also strenthe, streinthe, < AS. strengthu (= OHG. strengida), strength, < strang, strong: see strong[1]. Cf. length, < long.] 1. The property of being strong; force; power. Specifically—(a) In animals, that attribute of an animal body by which it is enabled to move itself or other bodies. The strength of animals is the muscular force or energy which they are capable of exerting. See horse-power.

Vlixes also, with angarely mony
Of tulkis [knights] of Traci, tor men of strenkyth.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 6894.

The external indications of strength are the abundance and firmness of the muscular fibres.
Bentham, Introd. to Morals and Legislation, vi. 9.

[Used in plural with same sense as singular.

Alle his [Samson's] strengthes in his heres were.
Chaucer, Monk's Tale, l. 68.]

(b) In inanimate things, the property by which they sustain the application of force without breaking or yielding: as, the strength of a bone; the strength of a beam; the strength of a wall; the strength of a rope.

Our castle's strength
Will laugh a siege to scorn.
Shak., Macbeth, v. 5. 2.

The citty is of no greate strength, having a trifling wall about it. Evelyn, Diary, May 21, 1645.

Hence—2. Power or vigor of any kind; ability; capacity for work or effective action, whether physical, intellectual, or moral: as, strength of grasp or stroke; strength of mind, memory, or judgment; strength of feeling (that is, not intensity but effectiveness of emotion).

If, rather than to marry County Paris,
Thou hast the strength of will to slay thyself.
Shak., R. and J., iv. 1. 72.

The belief
He has of his own great and catholic strengths
In arguing and discourse.
B. Jonson, Devil is an Ass, i. 2.

In the world of morals, as in the world of physics, strength is nearly allied to hardness.
Lecky, Europ. Morals, I. 354.

3. One who or that which is regarded as an embodiment of force or strength; that on which confidence or reliance is firmly set; stay; support; security.

God is our refuge and strength. Ps. xlvi. 1.

Thy counsel, in this uttermost distress,
My only strength and stay. Milton, P. L., x. 921.

Hitherto, Davenant observes, in taxing the people we had gone chiefly on land and trade, which is about one-third of the strength of England.
S. Dowell, Taxes in England, II. 56.

4. Force; violence; vehemence; intensity.

Zee schulle undrestonde, that the Soudan is Lord of 5 Kyngdomes, that he hathe conquered and aproped to him be Strengthe. Mandeville, Travels, p. 35.

And al men speken of hunting,
How they wolde slee the hert with strengthe.
Chaucer, Death of Blanche, l. 351.

If you did know to whom I gave the ring, . . .
You would abate the strength of your displeasure.
Shak., M. of V., v. 1. 198.

5. Degree of the distinguishing or essential element or constituent; the power to produce sensible effects on other bodies; potency: said of liquors and the like: as, the strength of an acid; the strength of wine or spirits; the strength of a potion or a poison.—6. Force as measured or stated in figures; amount or numbers of any collective body, as of an army or a fleet: as, a play adapted to the whole strength of the company; the full strength of a regiment.

Demand of him of what strength they are a-foot.
Shak., All's Well, iv. 3. 181.

Half a dozen gentlemen, furnished with a good strength of water-spaniels.
Gilbert White, Nat. Hist. Selborne, To T. Pennant, xxii.

7. Available force or backing, as of a candidate: as, his strength is greatest in the cities. [Political cant.]—8. Force proceeding from motion and proportioned to it; vehemence; impetuosity: as, the strength of a current of air or water; the strength of a charge of cavalry.—9. A stronghold.

Syne they hae left him, hail and feir,
Within his strength of stane
Auld Maitland (Child's Ballads, VI. 222).

"No to say it 's our best dwelling," he added, turning to Bucklaw, "but just a strength for the Lord of Ravenswood to flee until." Scott, Bride of Lammermoor, vii.

10. In colors, the relative property possessed by a pigment of imparting a color to and modifying the shade of any other pigment to which it is added. Thus, one pound of lampblack added to 100 pounds of white lead produces a dark-gray shade, but one pound of ivory-black added in the same way would have little effect on the white.

11. In the fine arts, boldness of conception or treatment.

Carracci's strength, Correggio's softer line.
Pope, Epistle to Jervas, l. 37.

12. In soap-making. See the quotation.

A peculiar phenomenon may be remarked in the cooling [of a little of the soap placed on a glass plate], which affords a good criterion of the quality of the soap. When there is formed around the little patch an opaque zone, a fraction of an inch broad, this is supposed to indicate complete saponification, and is called the strength; when it is absent, the soap is said to want its strength. When this zone soon vanishes after being distinctly seen, the soap is said to have false strength. Ure, Dict., III. 852.

On the strength (milit. and naval), on the muster-rolls. [Colloq.]

The colonel had put the widow woman on the strength; she was no longer an unrecognized waif, but had her regimental position.
Arch. Forbes, in Eng. Illust. Mag., VI. 525.

On or upon the strength of, in reliance upon the value of; on the faith of: as, to do something on the strength of another's promise.

My father set out upon the strength of these two following axioms. Sterne, Tristram Shandy, ii. 19.

Proof strength. See proof, a.—Strength of a current, in elect., the quantity of electricity which passes in a unit of time, measured in amperes. See Ohm's law, under law[1].—Strength of materials. See material.—Strength of pole. See pole[2].—Strength of the source. See the quotation.

The time rate of supply of liquid through the source is called the strength of the source.
Minchin, Uniplanar Kinematics, vi.

To measure strength. See measure.—Syn. 1. Force, etc. See power[1].

strength† (strength), v. t. [< ME. strengthen, strenthen; < strength, n.] To strengthen.

Take this for a general reule, that every counseil that is affermed or strengthed so strongly that it may not be chaunged for no condicioun that may bitide—I say that thilke counseil is wikked.
Chaucer, Tale of Melibeus (Harleian MS.).

The helpe of Gods grace in that tribulation to strength him.
Sir T. More, Cumfort against Tribulation (1573), fol. 16.

His armes and leggys [were] well lengthed and strengthed.
Fabyan, Chron., clvi.

strengthen (streng′thn), v. [< strength + -en[1].] I. trans. To make strong or stronger; add strength to, either physical, legal, or moral; confirm; establish: as, to strengthen a limb; to strengthen an obligation; to strengthen a claim; to strengthen authority.

Charge Joshua, and encourage him, and strengthen him. Deut. iii. 28.

Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest . . .
With powerful policy strengthen themselves.
Shak., 3 Hen. VI., i. 2. 58.

For the more strenthening the Acts of this Parliament, the King purchased the Pope's Bulls, containing grievous Censures and Curses to them that should break them.
Baker, Chronicles, p. 149.

Strengthening plaster. See plaster.—Syn. To invigorate, fortify, brace, nerve, steel, corroborate, support, heighten.

II. intrans. To grow strong or stronger.

The young disease, that must subdue at length,
Grows with his growth, and strengthens with his strength.
Pope, Essay on Man, ii. 136.

strengthener (strength′nėr), n. [Formerly also strengthner; < strengthen + -er[1].] One who or that which makes strong or stronger; one who or that which increases strength, physical or moral.

Whose plays are strengtheners of virtue.
Mary Lamb, Tales from Shakspere, Pref.

strengthful (strength′fûl), a. [< strength + -ful.] Abounding in strength; strong. Marston.

strengthfulness (strength′fûl-nes), n. The state or quality of being strengthful or strong; fullness of strength.

strengthing (streng′thing), n. [Verbal n. of strength, v.] A strengthening. Palsgrave. (Halliwell.) strengthless (strength′les), a. [< strength + -less.] Destitute of strength, in any sense of the word. Shak.; Boyle.

strengthner† (strength′nėr), n. Same as strengthener.

strengthy (streng′thi), a. [Early mod. E. also strenthie; < strength + -y[1]. Cf. lengthy.] Having strength; strong.

The simple and strenthie defence of ane iust caus.
J. Tyrie, Refutation, Pref. 2. (Jamieson.)

strenkle (streng′kl), v. t. An obsolete or Scotch form of strinkle.

strenkle (streng′kl), n. [< ME. strenkyll; < strenkle, v. Cf. sprinkle, n.] A sprinkler. [Obsolete or Scotch.]

Strenkyll to cast holy water, vimpilon.
Palsgrave. (Halliwell.)

strenth†, n. An obsolete form of strength.

strenuity† (stre-nū′i-ti), n. [< L. strenuita(t-)s, nimbleness, friskness, < strenuus. quick, active, vigorous: see strenuous.] Strenuousness.

About in the see
No Prince was of better strenuitee.
Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 206.

strenuosity (stren-ū-os'i-ti), n. [< strenuous + -ity.] 1. The state or character of being strenuous; strenuousness.—2. A strained effect, or a straining for effect, as in a literary composition.

Strenuosity in style is not quite the same thing as strength. The Academy, Jan. 30, 1886, p. 73.

strenuous (stren'ū-us), a. [< L. strenuus, quick, active, brisk, vigorous; cf. Gr. στερεός, firm, hard, στρηνής, strong.] 1. Strong; vigorous; active; pushing.

Him whose strenuous tongue
Can burst Joy's grape against his palate fine.
Keats, Melancholy.

2. Eagerly pressing or urgent; energetic; zealous; ardent; bold; earnest; valiant; intrepid.

To strenuous minds there is an inquietude in overquietness. Sir T. Browne, Christ. Mor., i. 33.

This scheme encountered strenuous opposition in the council. Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vi.

3. Necessitating vigor or energy; accompanied by labor or exertion.

What more oft, in nations grown corrupt, . . .
Than to love bondage more than liberty,
Bondage with ease than strenuous liberty?
Milton, S. A., l. 271.

Worldlings revelling in the fields
Of strenuous idleness. Wordsworth, Memory.

=Syn. 1 and 2. Energetic, resolute.

strenuously (stren'ū-us-li), adv. In a strenuous manner; with eager and pressing zeal; ardently; boldly; vigorously; actively.

strenuousness (stren'ū-us-nes), n. The state or character of being strenuous; eagerness; earnestness; active zeal.

strepet†, v. An old spelling of strip[1].

strepent (strep'ent), a. [< L. strepen(t-)s, ppr. of strepere, make a noise, rumble, murmur.] Noisy; loud. [Rare.]

Peace to the strepent horn!
Shenstone, Rural Elegance.

Strepera (strep'e-rä), n. [NL. (Lesson, 1831), < L. strepere, make a noise.] An Australian genus of corvine passerine birds, typical of the subfamily Streperinæ, having long wings and naked nostrils. Also called Coronica (Gould, 1837). There are 7 species, commonly called crow-shrikes, of a black, blackish-brown, or gray color, more or less varied with white or rufous. The type is Corvus graculinus of White, the noisy roller of Latham, Coracias or Gracula or Barita strepera of various authors, now Strepera graculina. It is glossy-black, with the base of the tail and an alar speculum white, the iris yellow. The length is 18½ inches. S. crissalis, arguta, intermedia, cuneicauda (or anaphonensis: see squeaker), melanoptera, and fuliginosa are the other species.

Crow-shrike (Strepera graculina).

streperine (strep'e-rin), a. [< Strepera + -ine[1].] Of or pertaining to birds of the genus Strepera.

streperous (strep'e-rus), a. [< L. strepere, make a noise, rumble, murmur, + -ous. Cf. obstreperous.] Noisy; loud; boisterous. [Rare.]

In a streperous eruption it [the bay or laurel] riseth against fire. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., ii. 6.

strephotome (stref'ō-tōm), n. [< Gr. στρέφω, twist, turn, + -τομος. < τέμνειν, ταμεῖν, cut.] A corkscrew-like needle used in an operation for the radical cure of inguinal hernia.

Strepitores (strep-i-tō'rēz), n. pl. [NL., pl. of strepitor*, < L. strepere, make a noise: see strepent.] A group of insessorial birds, established by Blyth in 1849 for those Cuvierian Passerinæ which are non-passerine, and primarily divided into Syndactyli, Zygodactyli, and Heterodactyli. See these words.

strepitoso (strep-i-tō'sō), adv. [It., < strepito, noise, < L. strepitus, noise: see strepitous.] In music, in an impetuous, boisterous, noisy manner.

strepitous (strep'i-tus), a. [< L. strepitus, noise, < strepere, make a noise: see strepent.] Noisy.

strepsicere (strep'si-sēr), n. [< strepsiceros.] An antelope with twisted horns; a strepsiceros.

strepsiceros (strep-sis'e-ros), n. [NL., < L. strepsiceros, < Gr. στρεψίκερως*, an animal with twisted horns, called by the Africans addax.] 1†. Some antelope with twisted horns, as the koodoo; originally, perhaps, the addax.—2. [cap.] [NL. (Hamilton Smith, 1827).] A genus of antelopes with twisted or spiral horns. The only species are S. imberbis and S. kudu, the koodoo. See cut under koodoo.

Strepsilas (strep'si-las), n. [NL. (Illiger, 1811), < Gr. στρέψις, a turning round, < στρέφειν (aor. στρέψαι), twist, turn, + λᾶς, λᾶας, a stone.] The typical genus of a subfamily Strepsilainæ; the turnstones. The bill is short, constricted at the base, tapering to a sharp point, with ascending gonys longer than the mandibular rami, short and broad nasal fossæ, and short shallow grooves in the under mandible. The legs are short and stout, with the tarsus scutellate in front and reticulate on the sides and back, and four toes, cleft to the base. There are 3 species—S. interpres, the common turnstone, and S. melanocephalus of the North Pacific, besides S. morinella of eastern America. The genus was also called Cinclus, Arenaria, and Morinella. See cuts under Pressirostres and turnstone. The generic name is now Arenaria.

strepsipter (strep-sip'tėr), n. [< NL. Strepsiptera.] A member of the Strepsiptera.

Strepsiptera (strep-sip'te-rä), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of strepsipterus*: see strepsipterous.] 1. An order of insects, named by Kirby in 1833 from the twisted wings, synonymous with Rhipiptera of Latreille, and corresponding to the family Stylopidæ. The fore wings are mere twisted filaments or pseudelytra; the hind wings are expansive and fan-shaped; the females are wingless. The strepsipters are parasitic on hymenopterous and homopterous insects. They are by some regarded as anomalous Coleoptera degraded by parasitism. See cut under Stylops. 2†. In Gegenbaur's system of classification, a family of neuropterous insects, forming with Phryganida the suborder Trichoptera.

strepsipteral (strep-sip'te-ral), a. [< strepsipter-ous + -al.] Same as strepsipterous.

strepsipteran (strep-sip'te-ran), n. and a. [< NL. Strepsiptera + -an.] I. n. A strepsipter.

II. a. Same as strepsipterous.

strepsipterous (strep-sip'te-rus), a. [< NL. strepsipterus*, < Gr. στρέφειν (aor. στρέψαι), twist, turn, + πτερόν, a wing.] Having twisted front wings, as a stylops; of or pertaining to the Strepsiptera; rhipipterous. Also strepsipteran, strepsipteral. See cut under Stylops.

strepsirrhinal, strepsirhinal (strep-si-rī'nal), a. [< strepsirrhine + -al.] Same as strepsirrhine.

strepsirrhine, strepsirhine (strep'si-rin), a. and n. [< NL. strepsirrhinus*, < Gr. στρέφειν (aor. στρέψαι), turn, twist, + ῥίς (ῥιν-), nose.] I. a. Having twisted or curved nostrils, as a lemur; of or pertaining to the Strepsirrhini; neither catarrhine nor platyrrhine, as a primate. Also strepsorhine.

II. n. Any lemur or prosimian; a member of the Strepsirrhini.

Strepsirrhini, Strepsirhini (strep-si-rī'nī), n. pl. [NL. (Geoffroy): see strepsirrhine.] The lemuroid mammals, or lemurs: so called from the twisted nostrils, in distinction from Catarrhini and Platyrrhini. In these animals the nostrils are at the corners of the snout, and somewhat comma-shaped, as is usual in mammals, instead of having the more human character of those of the higher Primates. The term is exactly synonymous with Prosimiæ or Lemuroidea, excepting that in early usages of all three of these names of lemurs the so-called flying-lemurs (Galeopithecidæ) were wrongly included, these being insectivorous and not primatial mammals, now always excluded from the strepsirrhines. Also Strepsirhina, Strepsirrhina, and Strepsorhina.

Streptanthus (strep-tan'thus), n. [NL. (Nuttall, 1825), so called from the greatly twisted claws of the petals; < Gr. στρεπτός, twisted (< στρέφειν, twist, turn), + ἄνθος, flower.] A genus of dicotyledonous choripetalous plants, of the family Brassicaceæ and tribe Thelypodieæ, characterized by a calyx commonly of large size, longer and sometimes connate stamens, and petals usually borne on a twisted claw. There are about 35 species, natives of North America, and chiefly of the western United States. They are smooth annuals or perennials, with entire or lyrate leaves and commonly bractless flowers, which are purple or sometimes white or yellow, and in some species pendulous. S. maculatus, a pink-flowered species, has been called Arkansas cabbage.

streptobacteria (strep″tō-bak-tē'ri-ä), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. στρεπτός, twisted, + NL. bacterium.] A supposed bacterium, consisting of a chain of short rod-formed bacteria linked together. Ziegler, Pathol. Anat. (trans.), i. 185.

Streptocarpus (strep-tō-kär'pus), n. [NL. (Lindley, 1828), so called from the spirally twisted fruit; < Gr. στρεπτός, twisted, + καρπός, fruit.] A genus of dicotyledonous sympetalous plants, of the family Gesneriaceæ, type of the tribe Streptocarpeæ. It is characterized by flowers with an elongated corolla-tube which is much enlarged above, and contains two perfect stamens and a linear ovary imperfectly four-celled by the protrusion of lobed placentæ densely covered on their margins with ovules, and becoming a spirally twisted capsule which is linear and terete and splits into valves coherent at the base and apex. There are about 50 species, natives of tropical and South Africa and of Madagascar. They are woolly or downy herbs, chiefly with spreading radical leaves or with a single leaf (a persistent cotyledon), sometimes with a stem bearing opposite leaves. The handsome flowers are mostly pale purple or blue; they form a many-flowered cyme, or are borne few or singly upon their peduncle. S. Dunnii, a remarkable species from the Transvaal mountains, is cultivated for its peculiar solitary grayish-green leaf, prostrate on the ground and over 3 feet long, with thick fleshy veins and clothed beneath with close reddish down, and for its bright-red tubular decurved flowers, of which there are sometimes over one hundred on a scape at once. Several other species are in cultivation under glass, especially hybrids (S. Dunnii and S. parviflorus) with several large leaves and rich crimson flowers, and S. Rexii, with blue flowers. They are known as Cape primrose.

streptococchemia, streptococchæmia (strep″-tō-ko-kē'mi-ä), n. [NL., < streptococci + Gr. αἷμα, blood.] The presence of streptococci in the blood.

streptococci (strep-tō-kok'sī), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. στρεπτός, twisted, + κόκκος, a berry.] A chain of micrococci linked together, occurring in some specific diseases. See Streptococcus, in the supplement.

Streptoneura (strep-tō-nū'rä), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of streptoneurus: see streptoneurous.] A branch of anisopleurous Gastropoda, in which the long loop of visceral nerves embracing the intestine is caught and twisted into a figure-of-8 by the torsion which the animal undergoes in its development. The Streptoneura are divided into two orders, Zygobranchia and Azygobranchia. They include all the anisopleural gastropods except the opisthobranchs and pulmonifers. The nearest synonym is Prosobranchiata.

streptoneural (strep-tō-nū'ral), a. [< streptoneurous + -al.] Same as streptoneurous.

streptoneurous (strep-tō-nū'rus), a. [< NL. streptoneurus*, < Gr. στρεπτός, twisted, + νεῦρον, a nerve.] Having twisted (visceral) nerves; specifically, pertaining to the Streptoneura, or having their characters.

Streptopus (strep'tō-pus), n. [NL. (F. A. Michaux, 1803), so called from the abruptly bent flower-stalk; < Gr. στρεπτός, twisted, + ποῦς = E. foot.] A genus of monocotyledonous plants, belonging to the family Convallariaceæ. Characterized by nodding solitary or twin axillary flowers, divided into six more or less spreading segments, with a filiform or columnar style which is three-cleft at the apex. There are about five species, natives of Europe, North America, and temperate parts of Asia. They are rather delicate plants, from a short and densely fiber-bearing or a creeping rootstock, with a simple or sparingly branched stem, bearing numerous ovate or lanceolate alternate sessile or clasping leaves. The small rose-colored or whitish flowers hang upon slender recurved or reflexed peduncles, followed by small roundish berries with numerous pale oblong or curving striate seeds. They are known by the name twisted-stalk, translating the genus name. S. amplexifolius is found in Europe, and, together with S. roseus, in northern North America, and southward in the mountains.

streptospondylian (strep″tō-spon-dil'i-an), a. Same as streptospondylous.

streptospondylous (strep-tō-spon'di-lus), a. [< NL. streptospondylus*, < Gr. στρεπτός, twisted + σπόνδυλος, σφόνδυλος, a vertebra.] Having the character of the vertebral articulations reversed, or supposed to be so, as in the genus Streptospondylus.

Streptospondylus (strep-tō-spon'di-lus), n. [NL. (Meyer): see streptospondylous.] A genus of fossil dinosaurians, founded on remains represented by vertebræ of the Wealden and Oölitic formations. It was originally placed among the opisthocœlian Crocodilia, but is now regarded as a dinosaurian of the family Megalosauridæ (Huxley).

streptostylic (strep-tō-stī'lik), a. [< NL. streptostylicus, < Gr. στρεπτός, twisted, + στῦλος, a pillar.] Having the quadrate bone freely articulated with the skull, as in ophidian and saurian reptiles; not monimostylic; of or pertaining to the Streptostylica.

Streptostylica (strep-tō-stil'i-kä), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of streptostylicus: see streptostylic.] Streptostylic reptiles, a prime division of ordinary reptiles (as snakes and lizards), having an articulated quadrate bone and a pair of extracloacal copulatory organs: opposed to Monimostylica. They were divided into Ophi- dia and Sauria (including Amphisbæna). Stannius, 1856.

Streptothrix (strep'tō-thriks), n. [NL. (Corda, 1839), < Gr. στρεπτός, twisted, + θρίξ, the hair.] A genus of hyphomycetous fungi. The fertile hyphæ are colored, erect, and much branched, the branches being spirally bent. The conidia are simple and dark-colored. S. fusca is common on branches of Juniperus in Europe and America. Incorrectly applied to Actinomyces.

stress[1] (stres), v. t. [< OF. estrecier, estressier, estrechier, estroyssier, etc., straiten, contract, < ML. as if strictiare*, < L. strictus, pp. of stringere, draw together, compress: see stringent, strain[1], strict. Cf. distress.] 1. To straiten; constrain; press; urge; hamper. [Rare.]

If the magistrate be so stressed that he cannot protect those that are pious and peaceable, the Lord help.
Waterhouse, Apol. for Learning, p. 155. (Latham.)

2. In mech., to subject to a stress.

The theory of elastic solids . . . shows that when a solid is stressed the state of stress is completely determined when the amount and direction of the three principal stresses are known. Thomson and Tait, Nat. Phil., § 832.

3. To lay the stress, emphasis, or accent on; emphasize.

If he had eased his heart in stressing the first syllable, it was only temporary relief.
G. Meredith, The Egoist, xviii.

★stress[1] (stres), n. [< stress[1], v.] 1. Constraining, urging, or impelling force; constraining power or influence; pressure; urgency; violence.

By stress of weather driven,
At last they landed. Dryden, Æneid, i. 503.

2. In mech., the action on a body of any system of balanced forces whereby strain or deformation but no acceleration of the body as a whole results. Rankine, by whom the word stress was first used in a rigorous manner in mechanics, defined it as the reaction of an elastic body to the external forces applied to it. Stress may consist of forces acting from all directions equally, as in hydrostatic pressure, or of a single pair of equal and opposite forces producing longitudinal compression or extension, or of one or more torsional couples tending to twist the body, or of any combination of the above.

In this paper the word strain will be used to denote the change of volume and figure constituting the deviation of a molecule of a solid from that condition which it preserves when free from the action of external forces; and the word stress will be used to denote the force, or combination of forces, which such a molecule exerts in tending to recover its free condition, and which, for a state of equilibrium, is equal and opposite to the combination of external forces applied to it.
Rankine, Axes of Elasticity, § 2.

A stress is an equilibrating application of force to a body. . . . It will be seen that I have deviated slightly from Mr. Rankine's definition of the word stress, as I have applied it to the direct action experienced by a body from the matter around it, and not, as proposed by him, to the elastic reaction of the body equal and opposite to that action. Thomson, Phil. Trans., CLXVI. 487.

3. Stretch; strain; effort.

Though the faculties of the mind are improved by exercise, yet they must not be put to a stress beyond their strength. Locke, Conduct of the Understanding, xxviii.

4. Weight; importance; special force or significance; emphasis.

Consider how great a stress he laid upon this duty, . . . and how earnestly he recommended it. Bp. Atterbury.

This, on which the great stress of the business depends.
Locke. (Johnson.)

So rare the sweep, so nice the art,
That lays no stress on any part.
Lowell, Appledore.

5. The relative loudness with which certain syllables or parts of syllables are pronounced; emphasis in utterance; accent; ictus. In elocution, initial, opening, or radical stress is stress or emphasis at the beginning; medial or median stress is that in the middle; and close, final, or vanishing stress is stress at the end of a vowel-sound. The union of initial and final is compound stress, that of all three stresses is thorough stress. —Anticlastic stress. See anticlastic. —Axis of a stress, one of three mutually perpendicular lines meeting at any point of a body in which a given stress tends to produce only elongation or contraction, without any tangential action. —Center of stress. See center[1]. —Close stress. See def. 5. —Composition of stresses. See composition of displacements, under composition. —Compound stress. See def. 5. —Concurrent stress and strain. See concurrent. —Final stress. See def. 5. —Homogeneous stress, in mech., a stress which affects alike all similar and similarly turned portions of matter within the boundary within which the stress is said to be homogeneous. —Initial stress. See def. 5. —Lateral stress. See lateral. —Medial, median stress. See def. 5. —Normal stress, a stress such that its tendency to change the relative positions of two parts of a solid always acts along the normals to the surface separating those parts. Such a stress consists of three extensive or compressive stresses along three rectangular axes. —Orthogonal stress. (a) Relatively to a homogeneous strain, a stress which neither increases nor diminishes the work of producing that strain. (b) Relatively to another stress, a stress orthogonal to a strain perfectly concurrent with the other stress. —Perfectly concurrent stress. (a) Relatively to another stress, a stress equal to that other multiplied by a real number. (b) Relatively to an infinitesimal homogeneous strain, a stress such that, if the strain be so compounded with a rotation as to produce a pure strain, the motions of the particles upon the surface of a sphere relatively to its center represent in magnitude and direction the components of the stress. —Principal tension of a stress, a component of the stress along one of its axes. —Radical stress. See def. 5. —Shearing stress, a stress tending to produce a shear. —Storm and stress. See storm. —Synclastic stress, a stress upon a plate tending to give it a positive curvature. —Tangential stress, a stress such that its tendency to change the relative positions of two parts of a solid always acts along the tangents to the surface separating those parts. Such a stress consists of three shearing stresses having orthogonal axes. —The principal axes of stress. See axis[1]. —Thorough stress. See def. 5. —Type of a stress. See type. —Vanishing stress, an increasing loudness toward the end of a vowel-sound, producing the effect of a jerk. See def. 5. =Syn. 5. Accent, etc. See emphasis.

stress[2] (stres), n. [< stress[1], v. In part an aphetic form of distress, q. v.] 1. Distress; difficulty; extremity; pinch. [Obsolete or archaic.]

And help the pure that ar in stres
Opprest and hereit mercyles.
Lauder, Dewtie of Kyngis (E. E. T. S.), l. 469.

The agony and stress
Of pitying love. Whittier, The Two Rabbis.

2. In law: (a) The act of distraining; distress. (b) A former mode of taking up indictments for circuit courts.

stress-diagram (stres'dī″a-gram), n. See diagram.

stressless (stres'les), a. [< stress[1] + -less.] Without stress; specifically, unaccented. Encyc. Brit., XVIII. 788.

stress-sheet (stres'shēt), n. In bridge-building, same as strain-sheet.

★stretch (strech), v. [< ME. strecchen (also unassibilated streken, whence mod. E. dial. streek, streak, var. strake) (pret. *straughte, straght, strahte, streahte, streighte, streigte, streihte, strehte, pp. straught, straugt, streight, streigt, streiht), < AS. streccan (pret. strehte, pp. streht) = OFries. strekka = D. strekken = MLG. strecken = OHG. strecchen, MHG. G. strecken = Sw. sträcka = Dan. strække, draw out, stretch; connected with the adj. AS. stræc, strec, strong, violent (lit. stretched?), = MHG. strac (strack-), G. strack, straight; √ strak, perhaps orig. √ srak*, a var. of √ rak in retch[2], reck, reach[1]; otherwise akin to L. stringere, pp. strictus, draw tight (see stringent, strain[1], strait[1]), and to Gr. στραγγός, twisted tight. Hence straight[1], orig. pp. of stretch. Connection with string, strong[1], etc., is uncertain.] I. trans. 1†. To draw (out); pull (out).

But stert vp stithly, straght out a swerde.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 1240.

2. To draw out to full length; extend; expand; spread: as, to stretch one's self; to stretch the wings; to stretch one's legs; hence, sometimes, to tighten; make tense or taut.

Redli, of zour rigt arm that ouer rome streyt,
I se wel the signifiaunce.
William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 2957.

I have stretched my legs up Tottenham Hill to overtake you. I. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 43.

3. To extend, or cause to reach or extend, lengthwise, or between specified points: as, to stretch a rope from one point to another.

My wings shall be Stretch'd out no further then from thee to thee.
Quarles, Emblems, iii. 12.

Phœnicia is stretched by some . . . euen to Ægypt, all alongst that Sea-coast. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 95.

A clothes-line with some clothes on it . . . is stretched between the trunks of some stunted willows.
Ruskin, Elements of Drawing, iii.

4. To draw out or extend in any direction by the application of force; draw out by tensile stress: as, to stretch cloth; to stretch a rubber band beyond its strength.

My business and that of my wife is to stretch new boots for millionaires. Harper's Mag., LXXVIII. 623.

5. To distend or expand forcibly or violently; strain by the exercise of force; subject to stress, literally or figuratively.

Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout blood.
Shak., T. and C., iv. 5. 10.

They that stretch his Infallibility further do they know not what. Selden, Table-Talk, p. 86.

6. To extend or strain too far; impair by straining; do violence to; exaggerate: as, to stretch the truth. —7†. To exert; strain.

Till my veins
And sinews crack, I'll stretch my utmost strength.
Beau. and Fl. (?), Faithful Friends, iii. 3.

Stretching their best abilities to expresse their loues.
Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 182.

8. To reach or hold out; put forth; extend.

He drough oute a letter that was wrapped in a cloth of silke, and straught it to the kynge.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 639.

Stretch thine hand unto the poor. Ecclus. vii. 32.

9. To cause to lie or fall extended at full length: as, to stretch an opponent on the ground by a blow. —10. To hang. [Slang.]

The night before Larry was stretched.
R. Burrowes, in Prout's Reliques, p. 267.

To stretch a point. Same as to strain a point (which see, under point[1]).

II. intrans. 1. To extend; reach; be continuous over a distance; be drawn out in length or in breadth, or both; spread.

Twenty fadme of brede the armes straughte.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 2058.

The town stretcheth along the bottome of the haven, backt on the West with a rocky mountain.
Sandys, Travailes, p. 10.

2. To be extended or to bear extension without breaking, as elastic substances; attain greater length: literally or figuratively.

The inner membrane, . . . because it would stretch and yield, remained unbroken. Boyle.

The terms . . . must be very elastic if they would stretch widely enough to include all the poems.
O. W. Holmes, Emerson, xiv.

3. To go beyond the truth; exaggerate. [Colloq.]

What an allay do we find to the credit of the most probable event that is reported by one who uses to stretch!
Government of the Tongue.

4. Naut., to sail by the wind under all sail. —5. To make violent efforts in running. —Stretching convulsions, tetanic convulsions which, acting through the extensor muscles, straighten the limbs. —Stretch out! an order to a boat's crew to pull hard.

★stretch (strech), n. [< stretch, v.] 1. A stretching or straining, especially a stretching or straining beyond measure: as, a stretch of authority.

A great and suddain stretch or contortion.
Ray, Works of Creation, p. 287.

It is only by a stretch of language that we can be said to desire that which is inconceivable.
W. K. Clifford, Lectures, I. 229.

2. A state of tension; strain: as, to be on the stretch.

Those put a lawful authority upon the stretch, to the abuse of power, under the colour of prerogative.
Sir R. L'Estrange.

3. Reach; extent; scope.

At all her stretch her little wings she spread.
Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Metamorph., Ceyx and Alcyone, l. 482.

This is the utmost stretch that Nature can,
And all beyond is fulsome, false, and vain.
Granville, Unnatural Flights in Poetry.

It strains my faculties to their highest stretch.
Swift, Tale of a Tub, ix.

4. A long tract; an extended or continued surface or area, relatively narrow; a reach; distance; sweep: as, a long stretch of country road; a great stretch of grassy land; a stretch of moorland.

The grass, here and there, is for great stretches as smooth and level as a carpet.
H. James, Jr., Trans. Sketches, p. 147.

5. One of the two straight sides of a race-course, as distinguished from the bend or curve at each end. The home-stretch is that part of the course which the contestant goes over after passing the last curve just before completing the race.

6. Naut., the reach or extent of progress on one tack; a tack. —7. In weaving: (a) The plot of ground on which a weaver stretches his warp. (b) The length of spun-yarn between the spindles and roller-beam, which is wound upon the spindles each time the carriage is run toward the roller-beam. Also called draw. Spons' Encyc. Manuf., i. 760. —8. A single continued effort; one uninterrupted sitting, diet, shift, turn, or the like: as, to work ten hours at a stretch.

She could not entertain the child long on a stretch.
Bulwer, Night and Morning, ii. 8.

But all of them left me a week at a stretch to attend the county fair. The Century, XXVIII. 555.

9. A year's imprisonment or punishment. [Thieves' slang.] —10. Course; direction: as, the stretch of seams of coal. —11. Stride; bound, as of a running animal. Gay.

★stretcher (strech'ėr), n. [< stretch + -er[1].] 1. One who or that which stretches or expands. Specifically —(a) A tool for stretching the fingers of leather gloves, that they may be put on more easily. (b) In shoemaking, same as shoe-stretcher. (c) A frame, composed of four pieces of wood, upon which painters' canvas is drawn tight. By driving small wedges in at the angles the tension is increased. (d) One of the rods in an umbrella attached at one end to one of the ribs, and at the other to the tube sliding upon the handle. (e) In a vehicle, a jointed rod which when extended expands the carriage-bows, and thus spreads the hood or cover. (f) A short piece of wood placed in the clue of a hammock to extend it.

2. In masonry, a brick or stone laid horizontally with its length in the direction of the face of the wall, as distinguished from a header, which is laid lengthwise across the thickness of the wall, so that its small head or end is seen in the external face of the wall. See cut under inbond.—3. One of the cylindrical rails between the legs of a chair; a round. E. H. Knight.—4. In cabinet-making, a low shelf serving as a brace or stay to the legs of a table, and roomy enough to hold a vase, a basket of flowers, or other ornament.—5. In carp., a tie-timber in a frame.—6. Naut., a narrow piece of plank placed across a boat for the rowers to set their feet against; also, a cross-piece placed between a boat's sides to keep them apart when the boat is hoisted up and griped.—7. A light, simple litter, without inclosure or top, upon which a dead body or a wounded person can be carried: so called because generally composed of canvas stretched on a frame, or because the body is stretched out upon it. Such frames, covered with canvas, are often used as beds, as in camping.—8. A flat board on which corpses are stretched or laid out preparatory to coffining.—9. In angling: (a) The leader at the extreme end of the line. (b) The tail-fly; the fly that is fastened to the cast called the stretcher; a stretcher-fly. See tail-fly (under fly[2]) and whip.—10. A statement which overstretches the truth; a lie. [Colloq.]—11. In carriage-building, same as strainer, 4.

stretcher-bond (strech'ėr-bond), n. A method of building in which bricks or stones are laid lengthwise in contiguous courses, the joints of one coming at half length of the bricks or stones in the other. See cuts under bond.

stretcher-fly (strech'ėr-flī), n. The fly on the stretcher of a casting-line, at the extreme end.

stretcher-mule (strech'ėr-mūl), n. In cotton-manuf., a mule which stretches and twists fine rovings, advancing them a stage toward finishing. E. H. Knight.

stretch-halter (strech'hâl″tėr), n. [< stretch, v., + obj. halter[1].] One who ought to be hanged; a scoundrel. Also crack-rope, wag-halter, etc.

'Sfoot, look here, look here, I know this is the shop, by that same stretch-halter.
Heywood, If you Know not Me (Works, ed. 1874), I. 283.

★stretching-frame (strech'ing-frām), n. 1. In cotton-manuf., a machine for stretching rovings previous to spinning them into yarn.—2. A frame on which starched fabrics are stretched to dry. It is sometimes arranged so that the direction of the tension can be changed in order to give the fabric a soft and elastic finish.

stretching-iron (strech'ing-ī″ėrn), n. In leather-manuf.: (a) A curriers' tool for stretching curried leather, smoothing the surface, removing rough places, and raising the bloom. It consists of a flat piece of metal or stone set in a handle. (b) Same as softening-iron.

stretching-machine (strech'ing-ma-shēn″), n. Any machine by which some material is stretched; specifically, a machine in which cotton goods and other textile fabrics are stretched, to lay all their warp- and woof-yarns truly parallel.

stretching-piece (strech'ing-pēs), n. See strut[2].

stretchy (strech'i), a. [< stretch + -y[1].] 1. Liable to stretch unduly.

A workman with a true eye can often counteract stretchy stock. Harper's Mag., LXX. 282.

2. Inclined to stretch one's self: a consequence of fatigue or sleepiness. [Colloq. in both uses.]

But in the night the pup would get stretchy and brace his feet against the old man's back and shove, grunting complacently the while. S. L. Clemens, Roughing it, xxvii.

stretta (stret'tä), n.; pl. strette (-te). [It., fem. of stretto, drawn tight: see strait[1], strict.] Same as stretto.

stretto (stret'tō), n.; pl. stretti (-ti). [It., < L. strictus, drawn tight: see strait[1], strict.] In music: (a) In a fugue, that division in which the entrances of the answer are almost immediately after those of the subject, so that the two overlap, producing a rapidly cumulative effect. The stretto properly follows the "working out." When a stretto is constructed in strict canon, it is sometimes called a stretto maestrale or magistrale. (b) In dramatic music, a quickening of the tempo at the end of a movement for the sake of climax.

strew (strö or strō), v. t.; pret. strewed, pp. strewed or strewn, ppr. strewing. [Also archaically strow, formerly or dial. also straw; < ME. strewen, strawen, streowen, < AS. streówian, also streówian, strewian* (Somner) = OS. strewian, strowian = OFries. strewa = D. strooijen = OHG. strewen, MHG. ströuwen, strouwen, G. streuen = Icel. strá = Sw. Dan. strö = Goth. straujan (pret. strawida), > It. sdrajare, stretch, strew; cf. OBulg. streti, strew, < L. sternere (pret. stravi, pp. stratus), scatter (see stratum), = Gr. στορεννύναι, στρωννύναι, strew, scatter, = Skt. √ star, scatter. The relation of the Teut. to the variant L. and Gr. roots is not wholly clear. Hence ult. straw[1], n. The three pronunciations strō, strō, strâ are due to the instability of the AS. vowel or diphthong before w, and its wavering in ME.] 1. To scatter; spread loosely: said of dry, loose, separable things: as, to strew seed in beds; to strew sand on the floor; to strew flowers over a grave.

I bad hem strowe floures on my bed.
Chaucer, Good Women (1st version), l. 101.

And a very great multitude spread their garments in the way; others cut down branches from the trees, and strawed [spread, R. V.] them in the way. Mat. xxi. 8.

2. To cover in spots and patches here and there, as if by sprinkling or casting loosely about.

And [they] made soche martire that all the feilde was strowed full of deed men and horse.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 294.

Forerun fair Love, strewing her way with flowers.
Shak., L. L. L., iv. 3. 380.

3. To spread abroad; give currency to.

She may strew
Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds.
Shak., Hamlet, iv. 5. 14.

strewing (strö'ing or strō'ing), n. [Verbal n. of strew, v.] Anything strewed, or suitable to be strewed (for some special purpose).

The herbs that have on them the cold dew o' the night
Are strewings fitt'st for graves.
Shak., Cymbeline, iv. 2. 285.

strewment (strö'mėnt or strō'mėnt), n. [< strew + -ment.] The act of strewing, or something strewn.—Maiden strewments†. See maiden.

strewn (strön or strōn). A past participle of strew.

streyte†. A Middle English spelling of strait[1].

stria (strī'ä), n.; pl. striæ (-ē). [= F. strie, < L. ★stria, a furrow, channel, hollow.] 1. In anat., zoöl., and bot., a stripe or streak; a line, or linear marking, whether of elevation or depression—as a ridge or a furrow—or of texture or color. See cuts under brain, muscle[1], and Diatomaceæ.—2. In arch., a fillet between the flutes of columns, pilasters, and the like.—3. In pathol., a linear hemorrhagic macula.—4. An imperfection in the form of a streak or band, whether a discoloration or an irregularity of structure, especially in glass.—5. pl. In elect., the peculiar stratifications of the light observed in vacuum-tubes (Geissler tubes) upon the passage of an electrical discharge.—Confluent, dilated, distinct striæ. See the adjectives.—Dislocated stria. See dislocate.—Glacial striæ, nearly parallel lines, varying in depth and coarseness, engraved on rock-surfaces by the passage of ice in which fragments of rock are embedded. See glaciation, 3.—Obliterate, scutellar, etc., striæ. See the adjectives.—Striæ acusticæ, transverse white lines, more or less apparent, on the floor of the fourth ventricle, arising close to the middle line, and curving outward over the restiform bodies to the nucleus accessorius of the auditory nerve. Also called lineæ transversæ, striæ medullares.—Striæ musculares, the transverse striæ or stripes of striped muscular fiber. See cut under muscle[1].—Stria lateralis, a lateral stria on the surface of the corpus callosum, running lengthwise on either side of the striæ longitudinales.—Stria longitudinalis, stria Lancisi. Same as nerve of Lancisi (which see, under nerve).—Stria medullaris thalami, a band of white fibers running backward along the junction of the median and superior surfaces of the thalamus to end in the habenular ganglion.

strial (strī'al), a. [< stria + -al.] Of the nature of striæ; marked by striæ. Amer. Jour. Sci., XXXI. 135. [Rare.]

★striate (strī'āt), a. [= F. strié, < L. striatus, pp. of striare, furrow, channel, < stria, a furrow, channel, hollow: see stria.] 1. Striped or streaked; marked with striæ; scored with fine lines; striped, as muscle; striated.—2. Having a thread-like form.

Des Cartes imagines this earth once to have been a sun, and so the centre of a lesser vortex, whose axis still kept the same posture, by reason of the striate particles finding no fit pores for their passages but only in this direction. Ray.

striate (strī'āt), v. t.; pret. and pp. striated, ppr. striating. [< L. striatus, pp. of striare (> F. strier), furrow, channel, < stria, a furrow, channel: see stria.] To mark with striæ; cause striation in; score; stripe. Nature, XXX. 23.

—Striated fiber, striated muscular fiber, striated muscle, the striped fiber characteristic of the voluntary muscles, though also found in a few other red muscles which are involuntary, as those of the heart. See muscle[1].—Striated ipecacuanha. See ipecacuanha.—Striated sandpiper†. See sandpiper.

striately (strī'āt-li), adv. In a striate manner; with striæ.

striate-plicate (strī'āt-plī″kāt), a. In bot., striate by reason of minute folds.

striate-punctate (strī'āt-pungk″tāt), a. In entom., having rows of punctures set in regular lines very close together, sometimes elongated or running into one another.

striate-sulcate (strī'āt-sul″kāt), a. In bot., ★striate with minute furrows.

striation (strī-ā'shon), n. [< striate + -ion.] 1. The state of being striated; a striate condition or appearance; striature; also, one of a set of striæ; a stria.—2. In geol., grooves, flutings, and scratches made on the surfaces of rocks by the passage over them of bodies of ice: a result frequently observed along the sides of existing glaciers, and in regions which were formerly occupied by ice.—3. In mineral., fine parallel lines on a crystalline face, commonly due to the oscillatory combination of two crystalline forms.

striatopunctate (strī-ā″tō-pungk'tāt), a. Same as striate-punctate.

striatum (strī-ā'tum), n.; pl. striata (-tä). [L. striatum (sc. corpus), neut. of striatus, streaked: see striate.] The great ganglion of the forebrain: more fully called corpus striatum.

striature (strī'a-tūr), n. [< L. striatura, condition of being furrowed or channeled, < striare, pp. striatus, furrow, channel: see striate.] Disposition of striæ; mode of striation; striation; also, a stria.

stricht, n. [Irreg. < L. strix (strig-), a screech-owl.] A screech-owl.

The ruefull strich, still waiting on the bere.
Spenser, F. Q., II. xii. 36.

strick (strik), n. [A var. of strike. Cf. strickle.] 1. A flat piece of wood for leveling grain in a measure; a strickle.

A stritchill; a stricke: a long and round peece of wood like a rolling pinne (with us it is flat), wherewith measures are made even. Nomenclator. (Nares.)

2†. A bushel measure.

One cheesepress, one coffer, one strick, and one fourme [form]. Worcestershire Wills of 16th and 17th Cents., [quoted in N. and Q., 7th ser., X. 369.

3. A handful or bunch of flax, jute, or other fiber, heckled and sorted, or ready to be heckled.

The heckler stakes a handful or strick of rough flax.
Encyc. Brit., XIV. 665.

★stricken (strik'n), p. a. [Pp. of strike, v.] 1. Struck; smitten: as, the stricken deer.—2. Advanced; far gone.

I chaunced to espye this foresayde Peter talkynge with a certayne Straunger, a man well stricken in age.
Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), p. 29.

Stricken hour, a whole hour, marked as completed by the striking of the clock.

He persevered for a stricken hour in such a torrent of unnecessary tattle. Scott.

strickle (strik'l), n. [Early mod. E. also strikle, and assibilated stritchel, stritchell, stritchill, strichell; < ME. strikile, strykylle (= MD. strijckel, streekel, strekel), a strickle; dim. of strick.] 1. A straight-edge used to sweep grain off level with the top of a measure when measuring grain.—2. A wooden swingle for dressing flax.—3. In carp. and masonry, a pattern or template.—4. In founding: (a) A straight-edge used to remove superfluous sand to a level with the top of a flask after ramming the sand into it. Compare loam-board. (b) A template or pattern used in sweeping patterns in sand or loam.—5. In cutlery, a straight-edge fed with emery, and employed to grind the edges of knives arranged spirally on a cylinder. E. H. Knight.

strickler (strik'lėr), n. [Also strikler; < strickle + -er[1].] A strickle or strike. Randle Holme, Acad. of Armory, p. 337. (Nares.) [Local, Eng.]

strict (strikt), a. [= F. strict (OF. streit, etc.), < L. strictus, pp. of stringere, draw tight, bind, contract: see stringent, strain[1]. Cf. strait[1], the older form of the same word.] 1. Drawn tight; tight; close: as, a strict ligature. Arbuthnot.

The lustful god, with speedy pace,
Just thought to strain her in a strict embrace.
Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Metamorph., i. 976.

2. Tense; stiff: as, a strict or lax fiber.—3. Narrow; restricted; confined; strait. [Obsolete or archaic.]

Strict passage [the ear] through which sighs are brought, And whispers for the heart, their slave.
Wordsworth, Power of Sound, i.

4. Close; intimate.

There never was a more strict friendship than between those Gentlemen.
Steele, in A. Dobson's Selections from Steele, Int., p. xl.

5. Absolute; unbroken: as, strict silence.—6. Exact; accurate; careful; rigorously nice: as, words taken in their strictest sense; a strict command.

I wish I had not look'd
With such strict eyes into her follies.
Beau. and Fl., Thierry and Theodoret, i. 2.

And fall into deception unaware,
Not keeping strictest watch.
Milton, P. L., ix. 363.

7. Exacting; rigorous; severe; rigid: as, strict in keeping the Sabbath; a strict disciplinarian.

Within these ten days take a monastery,
A most strict house.
Beau. and Fl., Thierry and Theodoret, i. 1.

Not over-ruled by fate
Inextricable, or strict necessity.
Milton, P. L., v. 528.

Strict statutes and most biting laws.
Shak., M. for M., i. 3. 19.

8. Restricted; taken strictly, narrowly, or exclusively: as, a strict generic or specific diagnosis.—9. In zoöl., constricted; narrow or close; straitened; not loose or diffuse: as, the strict stem of some corals.—10. In bot., close or narrow and upright: opposed to lax: said of a stem or an inflorescence.—11. In music, regular; exactly according to rule; without liberties: as, a strict canon or fugue.—A strict hand. See hand.—Strict constructionist, counterpoint, cross-examination. See the nouns.—Strict creditor's bill. See creditor's action, under creditor.—Strict foreclosure, fugue, sense, etc. See the nouns.—Strict imitation. See imitation, 3.—Strict settlement, in law, a device in English conveyancing by which the title to landed estates is preserved in the family by conveying it in such manner that the father holds an estate for life and the eldest son a contingent or expectant estate in remainder, with interests also in other members of the family, so that usually only by the concurrence of father and son, and often of trustees also, can complete alienation be made.=Syn. 6. Close, scrupulous, critical. —7. Severe, Rigorous, etc. See austere.

striction (strik'shon), n. [< L. strictio(n-), a drawing or pressing together, < stringere, pp. strictus, draw tight, contract: see strict.] A drawing or pressing together.—Line of striction of a ruled surface, the locus of points on the generators of a ruled surface where each is nearest to the next consecutive generator.

strictland†, n. [< strict + land: prob. suggested by island.] An isthmus. Halliwell. [Rare.]

strictly (strikt'li), adv. In a strict manner. (a) Narrowly; closely; carefully: as, the matter is to be strictly investigated. (b) Exactly; with nice or rigorous accuracy, exactness, or precision: as, strictly speaking, all men are not equal.

Horace hath but more strictly spoke our thoughts.
B. Jonson, Poetaster, v. 1.

(c) Positively; definitely; stringently.

Charge him strictly
Not to proceed, but wait my farther pleasure.
Dryden, Spanish Friar, iii. 3.

(d) Rigorously; severely; without remission or indulgence; with close adherence to rule.

I wish those of my blood that do offend
Should be more strictly punish'd than my foes.
Beau. and Fl., Woman-Hater, iv. 1.

(e) Exclusively; out-and-out; thoroughly.

Cornwall . . . was a strictly British land, with a British nomenclature, and a British speech which lingered on into the last century. E. A. Freeman, Amer. Lects., p. 149.

strictness (strikt'nes), n. The state or quality of being strict, in any sense.

stricture (strik'tūr), n. [= F. stricture = It. strettura, < L. strictura, a contraction, < stringere, draw tight, contract: see strict. Cf. straiture.] 1†. A drawing tight; contraction; compression; binding.

Christ . . . came to knit the bonds of government faster by the stricture of more religious ties.
Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 207.

2. In pathol., a morbid contraction of some mucous canal or duct of the body, as the esophagus, intestine, urethra, or vagina.—3†. Strictness.

A man of stricture and firm abstinence.
Shak., M. for M., i. 3. 12.

4. Sharp criticism; critical remark; censure.

I leave it [autobiography] wholly, both as to the matter and stile, to your emendations. . . . By your blots and strictures it may receive a beauty which of itself it had not. J. Cotton, in Aubrey's Letters and Lives, I. 20.

5†. Mark; trace; evidence; sign.

The God of nature implanted in their vegetable natures certain passive strictures, or signatures, of that wisdom which hath made and ordered all things with the highest reason. Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 46.

Cock's, Syme's, and Wheelhouse's operations for stricture. See operation.—Resilient, spasmodic, etc., stricture. See the adjectives. (See also bridle-stricture.) strictured (strik'tūrd), a. [< stricture + -ed[2].] Affected with stricture: as, a strictured duct.

strid. A preterit (obsolete) and past participle of stride.

striddle (strid'l), v.; pret. and pp. striddled, ppr. striddling. [Freq. of stride. Cf. straddle.] To straddle. [Prov. Eng.]

stride (strīd), v.; pret. strode (formerly also strid), pp. stridden or strid, ppr. striding. [< ME. striden (pret. strode, strood, strade), < AS. strīdan (pret. strād, pp. striden), stride, = MD. striden, D. strijden = MLG. striden (pret. streed), stride, strive, = OHG. strītan, MHG. strīten, G. streiten = Dan. stride, strive, contend; also in weak form, OS. strīthian = OFries. strīda = Icel. strīdha = Sw. strida, strive; orig. appar. contend, hence, in a particular use, go hastily, take long steps. Hence the comp. bestride and freq. striddle, also straddle, bestraddle; and, through OF., strive and strife.] I. intrans. 1. To walk with long steps; step.

There was no Greke so grym, ne of so gret wille, Durst abate on tho buernes, ne to bonke stride;
Ne afforse hym with fight to ferke out of ship.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 5687.

Hell trembled as he strode. Milton, P. L., ii. 676.

2. To stand with the feet far apart; straddle.

Because th' acute, and the rect-Angles too,
Stride not so wide as obtuse Angles doo.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, ii., The Columnes.

The arches, striding o'er the new-born stream.
Burns, Verses Written in Kenmore Inn.

Striding level, a spirit-level the frame of which carries at its two extremities inverted Y's below, so that it may be placed upon two concentric cylinders and straddle any small intervening projections. The striding level is a necessary adjunct of the transit-instrument when this is used for determining time, and is used in many leveling-instruments.

II. trans. 1. To pass over at a step: as, to stride a ditch.

Another, like an Embrian's sturdy Spouse, Strides all the Space her Petticoat allows.
Congreve, tr. of Ovid's Art of Love, iii.

2. To sit astride on; bestride; straddle; ride upon.

And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast. Shak., Macbeth, i. 7. 22.

★stride (strīd), n. [< stride, v.] 1. A step, especially one that is long, measured, or pompous; a wide stretch of the legs in walking.

Simplicity flies away, and iniquity comes at long strides upon us. Sir T. Browne, Urn-Burial, Ded.

Her voice theatrically loud,
And masculine her stride.
Pope, Imit. of Earl of Dorset.

A lofty bridge, stepping from cliff to cliff with a single stride. Longfellow, Hyperion, iii. 2.

2. The space measured or the ground covered by a long step, or between putting down one foot and raising the other.

Betwixt them both was but a little stride,
That did the house of Richesse from hell-mouth divide.
Spenser, F. Q., II. vii. 24.

strident (strī'dent), a. [= F. strident = Sp. Pg. estridente = It. stridente, < L. striden(t-)s, ppr. of stridere, give a harsh, shrill, or whistling sound, creak.] Creaking; harsh; grating.

"Brava! brava!" old Steyne's strident voice was heard roaring over all the rest. Thackeray, Vanity Fair, li.

stridently (strī'dent-li), adv. Creakingly; harshly; gratingly.

stridor (strī'dor), n. [L., < stridere, give a harsh, shrill, or whistling sound, creak: see strident.] A harsh, creaking noise.—Stridor dentium, grinding of the teeth: a common symptom during sleep in children affected with worms or other intestinal irritation. It occurs also in fevers as a symptom of irritation of the brain.

stridulant (strid'ū-lant), a. [< NL. as if stridulan(t-)s*, ppr. of stridulare:* see stridulate.] Strident or stridulous, as an insect; capable of stridulating; specifically, of or pertaining to the Stridulantia.

Stridulantia (strid-ū-lan'shi-ą), n. pl. [NL. (Burmeister, 1835): see stridulant.] A group of hemipterous insects, including various forms which have the faculty of stridulating; specifically, the cicadas. See Cicadidæ.

★stridulate (strid'ū-lāt), v. i.; pret. and pp. stridulated, ppr. stridulating. [< NL. as if stridulatus*, pp. of stridulare*, < L. stridulus, giving a shrill sound, creaking: see stridulous.] To make a stridulous noise, as an insect; effect stridulation, as the cicada; grate, scrape, or creak with the organs of stridulation; shrill; chirr.

stridulating-organ (strid'ū-lā-ting-ôr'gan), n. In entom., a finely wrinkled or file-like surface or plate, frequently having a pearly luster, by friction of which against another surface brought into contact with it a creaking sound is produced. These organs are variously situated on the wings, elytra, legs, abdomen, thorax, and even the head.

stridulation (strid-ū-lā'shon), n. [< stridulate + -ion.] The act, process, or function of stridulating; the power of so doing, or the thin, harsh, creaking noise thus produced; a shrilling. Stridulation is effected by rubbing together hard or rough parts of the body, often specially modified in various ways for that purpose, being thus not vocalization or phonation. It is highly characteristic of many homopterous insects, as the cicadas; of many orthopterous insects, as various locusts or grasshoppers; and of some coleopterous insects, or beetles. It rarely occurs in lepidopterous insects, but has been observed in some butterflies and moths, and also in a few spiders, as of the genus Theridion. Among the Hymenoptera it occurs in the so-called 'cow-ants' of the family Mutillidæ.

stridulator (strid'ū-lā-tor), n. [< stridulate + -or[1].] An insect which stridulates, shrills, or chirrs; that which is stridulatory.

stridulatory (strid'ū-lā-tō-ri), a. [< stridulate + -ory.] Pertaining to stridulators or stridulation; stridulant or stridulous; shrill or shrilling; chirring.

stridulous (strid'ū-lus), a. [< L. stridulus, creaking, rattling, hissing, < stridere, creak: see strident.] Making a small harsh sound; having a thin, squeaky sound; squeaky; creaking.

To make them [the old men] garrulous, as grasshoppers are stridulous. Chapman, Iliad, iii., Commentary.

Stridulous angina. Same as laryngismus stridulus (which see, under laryngismus).

strie†, v. t. A Middle English form of strew.

strife (strīf), n. [< ME. strif, < OF. estrif, < Icel. strīth, strife, contention, pain, grief, = Sw. Dan. strid, combat, contention, = OS. OFries. strid = D. strijd = OHG. MHG. strīt, G. streit, strife, = OL. stlis (gen. stlit-), L. lis (lit-), strife, litigation (see litigate); from the verb, Icel. strīdha, strive, contend, etc.: see stride. Cf. strive.] 1. A striving or effort to do one's best; earnest attempt or endeavor.

With strife to please you, day exceeding day.
Shak., All's Well, Epil.

2. Emulative contention or rivalry; active struggle for superiority; emulation.

Weep with equal strife
Who should weep most. Shak., Lucrece, l. 1791.

Thus gods contended (noble strife, Worthy the heavenly mind!)
Who most should do to soften anxious life.
Congreve, To the Earl of Godolphin.

3. Antagonistic contention; contention characterized by anger or enmity; discord; conflict; quarrel: as, strife of the elements.

Sith for me ye fight, to me this grace
Both yield, to stay your deadly stryfe a space.
Spenser, F. Q., II. vi. 33.

Twenty of them fought in this black strife.
Shak., R. and J., iii. 1. 183.

To take strife†, to enter into conflict.

For which he took with Pome and Cesar stryf.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 595.

=Syn. 2 and 3. Strife, Contention. These words agree in being very general, in having a good sense possible, and in seeming elevated or poetical when applied to the organized quarrels of war or to anything more than oral disputes. Strife is the stronger. Contention often indicates the more continued and methodical effort, and hence is more often the word for rivalry in effort to possess something. Such a rivalry, when definite in form and limited in time, is a contest: as, the contests of the Greek games. A contention that is forcible, violent, exhausting, or attended with real or figurative convulsions or contortions, is a struggle. See battle[1], encounter.

strifeful (strīf'fūl), a. [< strife + -ful.] Full of strife; contentious; discordant.

But stryfull mind and diverse qualitee
Drew them in partes, and each made others foe.
Spenser, F. Q., II. ii. 13.

strig (strig), n. [Origin obscure.] 1. The footstalk of a flower, leaf, or fruit. Ure, Dict., I. 302.—2. The tang of a sword-blade. See tang.

strig (strig), v. t.; pret. and pp. strigged, ppr. strigging. [< strig, n.] To remove the footstalk from: as, to strig currants.

striga (strī'gą), n.; pl. strigæ (-jē). [NL., < L. striga, a swath, furrow, < stringere, draw tight, contract: see strict.] 1. In bot., a sharp-pointed appressed bristle or hair-like scale, constituting a species of pubescence in plants. —2. In zoöl., a streak or stripe; a stria.—3. In arch., a flute of a column.

strigate (strī'gāt), a. [< NL. strigatus*, < L. striga, a furrow: see striga.] In entom., same as strigose.

Striges (strī'jēz), n. pl. [NL., < L. strix (strig-), an owl.] The owls, or Strigidæ, as a suborder of Raptores; as a distinct order, the nocturnal birds of prey. The physiognomy is peculiar from the lateral expansion, lengthwise contraction, and diploic thickening of the skull, which is often asymmetrical. The eyes look forward, not laterally as in other birds, and are set in a peculiar disk of radiated feathers more or less completely formed, the feathers of the front being antrorse and adpressed, hiding the base of the bill. This is the facial disk, of which some radiating feathers of peculiar shape and texture constitute a ruff. The eyes are very large, with a peculiarly shaped eyeball, the cornea being protuberant, and with the sclerotic presenting a figure somewhat like a short acorn in its cup; the iris is capable of great movement, dilating and contracting the pupil more than is usual in birds. The ear parts are very large, often unlike on opposite sides of the head, and provided with a movable external flap, the operculum, sometimes of great extent. The tufts of feathers, or so-called "ears," of many owls are the corniplumes or plumicorns. The bill is peculiar in that the nostrils open at the edge of the cere rather than in its substance, and the tomia are never toothed. There are four toes, of which the outer is versatile and shorter than the inner, with three of its joints together shorter than the fourth joint. The claws are all long, sharp, and curved, and the middle one is sometimes pectinate. The feathers lack aftershafts, and the plumage is peculiarly soft and blended, conferring a noiseless flight. The birds have no ambiens muscle, one pair of intrinsic syringeal muscles, a nude oil-gland, long clubbed cæca, short intestines, moderately muscular gizzard, capacious gullet without special crop, a peculiar structure of the tarsometatarsi and shoulder-joint, a manubriated and double-notched or entire sternum, basipterygoid processes, and spongy maxillopalatines and lacrymals. The suborder is divided into two families, Strigidæ and Bubonidæ. Nycthar pages is a synonym. See cuts under barn-owl, braccate, *Bubo*2, hawk-owl, Otus, Nyctala, *owl*1, snow-owl, and Strix.

Strigidæ (strij'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., ‹ Strix (Strig-) + -idæ.] The owls as a family of strigine or nocturnal birds of prey of the order Raptores: used in three senses. (a) Same as Striges, including all owls. (b) Same as Aluconidæ, including only the barn-owls. (c) Including all owls excepting the Aluconidæ. In this sense the distinctive characters are the furculum not ankylosed to the double-notched or fenestrate sternum, the middle claw not pectinate, and the facial disk ★incomplete or not triangular.

strigil (strij'il), n. [‹ L. strigilis (= Gr. στλεγγίς), a scraper, ‹ stringere, draw tight, contract, touch, graze, stroke: see strict.] 1. An instrument of metal, ivory, or horn, used by the ancients for scraping the skin at the bath and in the gymnasium; a flesh-scraper. See cut under Lysippan.—2†. A flesh-brush, or a glove of hair-cloth, rough toweling, or other article used for stimulating the skin by rubbing.

You are treated after the eastern manner, washing with hot and cold water, with oyles, and being rubbed with a kind of strigil of seal's-skin, put on the operator's hand like a glove. Evelyn, Diary, June, 1645.

strigilate (strij'i-lāt), a. [‹ NL. strigilatus*, ‹ strigilis, q. v.] In entom., noting the front leg of a bee when it is furnished with a strigilis.

strigilis (strij'i-lis), n.; pl. strigiles (-lēz). [NL., ‹ L. strigilis, a scraper: see strigil.] An organ on the first tarsal joint of a bee's fore leg, used to curry or clean the antennæ; a curry-comb: so called on account of the fringe of stiff hairs. At the end of the tibia is a movable spur, and on this spur an expanded membrane, the velum, which can be brought into contact with the strigilis, forming a circular orifice. The bee lays the antenna in the hollow of the strigilis, presses the velum of the spur upon it, and draws the antenna through the aperture thus formed.

strigilose (strij'i-lōs), a. [Also, erroneously, strigillose; dim. of strigose.] In bot., minutely strigose.

strigine (strij'in), a. [‹ L. strix (strig-) + *-ine*2.] Owl-like; related to or resembling an owl. (a) Of or pertaining to the Striges, or Strigidæ in a broad sense. (b) In a narrow sense, belonging to the Strigidæ (c); distinguished from bubonine.

strigment† (strig'ment), n. [‹ L. strigmentum, that which is scraped off, a scraping, ‹ stringere, draw tight, contract, graze, stroke: see strigil.] Scraping; that which is scraped off.

Brassavolus and many other, beside the strigments and sudorous adhesions from men's hands, acknowledge that nothing proceedeth from gold in the usual decoction thereof. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., ii. 5.

Strigopidæ (stri-gop'i-dē), n. pl. [NL. (Bonaparte, 1849), ‹ Strigops + -idæ.] The Strigopinæ regarded as a family apart from Psittacidæ.

Strigopinæ (strig-ō-pī'nē), n. pl. [NL., ‹ Strigops + -inæ.] The owl-parrots; a subfamily of Psittacidæ, or the only subfamily of Strigopidæ, represented by the genus Strigops. Also Stringopinæ. O. Finsch.

Strigops (strī'gops), n. [NL. (G. R. Gray, 1845); also Strigopsis; also Stringops and Stringopsis (Van der Hoeven, 1856); ‹ Strix (Strig-), a screech-owl, + Gr. ὤψ, eye, face.] A genus of Psittacidæ, or made type of a family Strigopidæ, containing the kakapo, or nocturnal flightless parrot of New Zealand, S. habroptilus; the owl-parrots: so called from the owlish physiognomy. The sternal keel and the furculum are defective, and the birds have not the power of flight. See cut under owl-parrot.

strigose (strī'gōs), a. [‹ NL. strigosus, ‹ striga, q. v.] 1. In bot., rough with strigæ; beset with sharp-pointed and appressed straight and stiff hairs or bristles: as, a strigose leaf or stem.—2. In entom., streaked, or finely fluted; having fine, close parallel ridges or points, like the surface of a file. Also strigate.

strigous (strī'gus), a. [‹ NL. strigosus: see ★strigose.] Same as strigose.

strike (strīk), v.; pret. struck, pp. struck, stricken (obs. or dial. strucken), ppr. striking. [‹ ME. striken, stryken (pret. strok, stroke, strake, pp. striken, stricken), ‹ AS. strīcan (pret. strāc, pp. strīcen), go, proceed, advance swiftly and smoothly, = OFries. strīka = D. strijken = MLG. striken, LG. striken = OHG. strīhhan (strong), streichōn (weak), MHG. strīchen, streichen, G. streichen, smooth, rub, stroke, spread, strike; cf. Icel. strjūka, strykja = Sw. stryka = Dan. stryge, stroke, rub, wipe, Goth. striks, a stroke, tittle, akin to L. stringere, draw tight, graze, stroke, etc. (see stringent, *strain*1, strict). Cf. *streak*1, *streak*2, *strake*1, *strake*2, stroke, etc. The senses of strike are much involved, the orig. sense 'go,' 'go along,' being commonly lost from view, or retained only as associated with the sense 'hit.'] I. intrans. 1. To go; proceed; advance; in modern use, especially, to go or move suddenly, or with a sudden turn.

A mous that moche good couthe, as me thouȝte,
Stroke forth sternly, and stode biforn hem alle.
Piers Plowman (B), Prol., l. 183.

To avoyd them, we struck out of the way, and crossed the pregnant champian to the foot of the mountaines. Sandys, Travailes, p. 158.

By God's mercy they recovered themselves, and, having the flood with them, struck into the harbour. N. Morton, New England's Memorial, p. 47.

Whether the poet followed the romancer or the chronicler in his conception of a dramatic character, he at the first step struck into that undeviating track of our humanity amid the accidents of its position. I. D'Israeli, Amen. of Lit., II. 239.

A dispatch from Newfoundland says that the caplin have struck in. This means that the cod, the most famous of all commercial fish, has arrived on the banks. Sci. Amer., N. S., LVIII. 352.

2†. To flow; glide; run.

Ase strem that striketh stille.
Morris and Skeat's Specimens Early Eng., ii. 48.

3. To pass with sudden quickness and effect; dart; pierce.

Till a dart strike through his liver. Prov. vii. 23.

How the bright and blissful Reformation (by Divine Power) strook through the black and settled Night of Ignorance and Anti-christian Tyranny. Milton, Reformation in Eng., i.

4. To come suddenly or unexpectedly.

We had struck upon a well-beaten track on entering the hills. B. Taylor, Northern Travel, p. 117.

5. To run or extend in any particular direction, especially with reference to the points of the compass: a word used chiefly by geologists in speaking of the strata, or of stratified masses, but also by miners in indicating the position of the lode or vein. The latter, however, generally use run in preference to strike.—6. To lower a sail, a flag, or colors in token of respect; hence, to surrender, as to a superior or an enemy; yield.

The enemy still came on with greater fury, and hoped by his number of men to carry the prize; till at last the Englishman, finding himself sink apace, and ready to perish, struck. Steele, Spectator, No. 350.

The interest of our kingdom is ready to strike to that of your poorest fishing towns. Swift.

7. To touch; glance; graze; impinge by appulse.

Let us consider the red and white colours in porphyry: hinder light from striking on it, and its colours vanish. Locke, Human Understanding, II. viii. 19.

8. To run aground or ashore; run upon a bank, rock, or other obstacle; strand: as, the ship struck at midnight.—9. To inflict a blow, stroke, or thrust; attack: as, to strike in the dark.

We have drawn our swords of God's word, and stricken at the roots of all evil to have them cut down. Latimer, Sermons, p. 249.

He strake at him, and missed him, d' ye mark?
Chapman, Gentleman Usher, v. 1.

A Surprize in War is like an Apoplexy in the Body, which strikes without giving Warning for Defence. Baker, Chronicles, p. 70.

By their designing leaders taught
To strike at power which for themselves they sought.
Dryden, Astræa Redux, l. 32.

10. To hit; beat; tap: as, the hammer strikes on the bell of a clock.

They plunge their Oars all at one instant into the Water, keeping exact time with each other: and that they may the better do this, there is one that strikes on a small Gong, or a wooden Instrument, before every stroke of the Oar. Dampier, Voyages, II. i. 74.

11. To sound by percussion, with or as with blows; be struck: as, the clock strikes.

One whose Tongue is strung vp like a Clocke till the time, and then strikes, and sayes much when hee talkes little. Ep. Earle, Micro-cosmographie, A Stayed Man.

A deep sound strikes like a rising knell!
Byron, Childe Harold, iii. 21.

12. To use one's weapons; deal blows; fight: as, to strike for one's country.

God's arm strike with us! 'tis a fearful odds.
Shak., Hen. V., iv. 3. 5.

Is not he the same God still? Is his hand shortned that he cannot strike, or doth his heart fail that he dare not punish? Stillingfleet, Sermons, I. x.

13. To press a claim or demand by coercive or threatening action of some kind; in common usage, to quit work along with others, in order to compel an employer to accede to some demand, as for increase of pay, or to protest against something, as a reduction of wages: as, to strike for higher pay or shorter hours of work.—14. To steal, as by pocket-picking. [Slang.]—15†. To give the last plowing before the seed is sown. Davies.

To harrow the ridges ere ever ye strike
Is one piece of husbandry Suffolk doth like.
Tusser, September's Husbandry, st. 9.

16. To take root, as a slip of a plant.

The young tops strike freely if they are taken off about three inches long, and inserted singly in some sandy soil in small pots. The Field, March 12, 1887. (Encyc. Dict.)

17. To fasten to stones, shells, etc., as young oysters; become fixed or set.—18†. To move with friction; grate; creak.

The closet door striked as it uses to do, both at her coming in and going out. Aubrey, Misc., p. 83.

19. In the United States army, to perform menial services for an officer; act as an officer's servant: generally said of an enlisted man detailed for that duty.—20. To become saturated with salt, as fish in the process of pickling or curing.—21. To run; change or fade, as colors of goods in washing or cleaning. Workshop Receipts, 1st ser., p. 321.—To be struck or stricken in years, to be far along in years; to be of an advanced age.

And they had no child, . . . and they both were well stricken in years. Luke i. 7.

The king
Is wise and virtuous, and his noble queen
Well struck in years. Shak., Rich. III., i. 1. 92.

To strike amain. See *amain*1.—To strike at, to make or aim a blow at; attempt to strike; attack: as, to strike at one's rival.—To strike back. (a) To return blow for blow. (b) To refuse to lead, as fish when, instead of following close along the leader and passing into the bowl of the weir, they retreat from the net, and with a sweep double the whole weir.—To strike for, to start suddenly for; make for: as, he struck for home. [Colloq.]—To strike home, to give a decisive and effective blow or thrust.

Who may, in the ambush of my name, strike home.
Shak., M. for M., i. 3. 41.

To strike in. (a) To make a vigorous move, effort, or advance.

If he be mad, I will not be foolish, but strike in for a share. Brome, Northern Lass, iii. 2.

He advises me to strike in for some preferment, now I have friends. Swift, Journal to Stella, xxx.

(b) To put in one's word suddenly; interpose; interrupt.

I proposed the embassy to Constantinople for Mr. Henshaw, but my Lord Winchelsea struck in. Evelyn, Diary, June 18, 1660.

(c) To begin; set about.

It [the water of the Dead Sea] bore me up in such a manner that when I struck in swimming, my legs were above the water, and I found it difficult to recover my feet. Pococke, Description of the East, II. i. 36.

(d) To fall in; conform; join or unite.

I always feared ye event of ye Amsterdamers striking in with us. Cushman, quoted in Bradford's Plymouth Plantation, p. 57.

He struck in very zealously with the Presbyterians, went to their meetings, and was very liberal in his abuses, not only of the Archbishop, but of the whole order. E. Gibson, in Ellis's Lit. Letters, p. 227.

(e) To arrive; come in; make for the shore: said of fish.

Those who have been on the Newfoundland coast when the caplin strikes in will not forget the excitement that ensued. Sci. Amer., N. S., LVIII. 352.

To strike into. (a) To enter upon, as by some sudden act or motion; break into: as, to strike into a run.

It struck on a sudden into such reputation that it scorns any longer to sculk, but owns itself publickly. Government of the Tongue.

(b) To turn into quickly or abruptly; betake one's self to in haste.

It began raining, and I struck into Mrs. Vanhomrigh's, and dined. Swift.

To strike out. (a) In boxing, to deliver a blow from the shoulder. (b) To direct one's course, as in swimming: as, to strike out for the shore. (c) To make a sudden move or excursion: as, to strike out into an irregular course of life.

I concluded to move on and strike out to the south and southwest into Missouri. The Century, XLI. 107.

(d) In base-ball, to be put out because of failure to strike the ball after a certain number of trials: said of the batter.—To strike up. (a) To begin to play or sing.

If the Musicke overcome not my melancholly, I shall quarrel; and if they sodainly do not strike up, I shall presently strike thee downe.
Heywood, Woman Killed with Kindness, i. 1.

He got a little excited, as you may have seen a canary sometimes when another strikes up.
O. W. Holmes, Autocrat, ix.

(b) To make acquaintance; become associated: with with. [Colloq.]

He spurr'd to London, and left a thousand curses behind him. Here he struck up with sharpers, scourers, and Alsatians.
Gentleman Instructed, p. 491. (Davies, under Alsatian.)

II. trans. 1†. To pass the hand over lightly; stroke: as, to strike the beard or hair.

I stryke ones heed, as we do a chyldes whan he dothe well. Je applanie. . . . My father sayeth I am a good sonne; he dyd stryke my heed by cause I had conned my lesson without the booke. Palsgrave.

Also euen when he [Sir T. More] shuld lay doune his head on the blocke, he, hauyng a great gray beard, striked out his beard, and sayd to the hangman, I pray you let me lay my beard ouer the blocke least ye should cut it.
Hall, Chron. (ed. 1809), p. 818.

2†. To pass lightly as in stroking.

I thought, He will surely . . . strike his hand over the place and recover the leper. 2 Ki. v. 11.

3. To make level or even, as a measure of grain, salt, etc., by drawing a strickle or straight-edge along the top, or, in the case of potatoes, by seeking to make the projections equal to the depressions: as, to strike a bushel of wheat; a struck or striked as distinguished from a heaped measure.

Four straiked measures or firlots contains in just proportion four heaped firlots.
Report Scotch Commissioners, 1618.

All grain to be measured stricked, without heaps, and without pressing or shaking down.
Act Irish Parliament, 1695.

4†. To balance the accounts in.

And the said journall, with two other bookes, to lye upon the greencloth dayly, to the intent the accomptants, and other particular clerkes, may take out the solutions entred into said bookes, whereby they may strike their lydgers, and soe to bring in their accompts incontinently upon the same.
Ordinances and Regulations, p. 229. (Halliwell.)

5. To lower or dip; let, take, or haul down: as, to strike the topmasts; to strike a flag, as in token of surrender or salute; to strike or lower anything below decks.

Fearing lest they should fall into the quicksands, [they] strake sail, and so were driven. Acts xxvii. 17.

Now, strike your sailes, yee jolly Mariners,
For we be come unto a quiet rode.
Spenser, F. Q., I. xii. 42.

The Maltese commanding ours to strike their flag for the great masters of Malta, and ours bidding them strike for the King of England.
Court and Times of Charles I., I. 409.

6. To take down or apart; pack up and remove; fold: as, to strike a tent; to strike a scene on the stage of a theater.

The king, who now found himself without an enemy in these parts, struck his tents, and returned to Gaza in Dawaro. Bruce, Source of the Nile, II. 28.

Yes, on the first bad weather you'll give orders to strike your tents. Sheridan (?), The Camp, ii. 3.

7. To lade into a cooler, as cane-juice in sugar-making.—8†. To dab; rub; smear; anoint.

They shall take of the blood, and strike it on the two side posts. Ex. xii. 7.

The mother said nothing to this, but gave nurse a certain ointment, with directions that she should strike the child's eyes with it.
Keightley's Fairy Mythology (Bohn's Ant. Lib.), p. 302.

9. To efface with a stroke of a pen; erase; remove from a record as being rejected, erroneous, or obsolete: with away, out, off, etc.: as, to strike out an item in an account.

Madam, the wonted mercy of the king,
That overtakes your faults, has met with this,
And struck it out.
Beau. and Fl., King and No King, ii. 1.

That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away
From the great compt. Shak., All's Well, v. 3. 56.

Vernon is struck off the list of admirals.
Walpole, Letters, II. 18.

Halifax was informed that his services were no longer needed, and his name was struck out of the Council Book.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vi.

10. To come upon suddenly or unexpectedly; hit upon; light upon; find; discover: as, to strike oil; to strike ore; to strike the right path. [Chiefly colloq.]

One meets (on paper only) with the "eighteen-carat desperado," who has "struck it rich" on the Pikes or in the ranches. Cornhill Mag., N. S., No. 64, p. 389.

We resumed our march the following day, but soon struck snow that materially impeded our progress.
Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 400.

"I didn't strike the stairs at first," whispered the butcher, "and I went too far along that upper hall; but when I came against a door that was partly open I knew I was wrong, and turned back."
F. R. Stockton, Merry Chanter, xii.

11. To enter the mind of, as an idea; occur to.

It appeared never to have struck traveller or tourist that there was anything in Albania except snipes.
R. Curzon, Monast. in the Levant, p. 204.

It struck me that . . . it might be worth while to study him. D. Christie Murray, Weaker Vessel, iv.

12. To impress strongly: as, the spectacle struck him as a solemn one.

It [the temple of Baalbec] strikes the Mind with an Air of Greatness beyond any thing that I ever saw before, and is an eminent proof of the Magnificence of the ancient Architecture. Maundrell, Aleppo to Jerusalem, p. 137.

I have been struck, also, with the superiority of many of the old sepulchral inscriptions.
Irving, Sketch-Book, p. 215.

13. To appear to: as, how does it strike you?

Now, Mrs. Dangle, didn't you say it struck you in the same light? Sheridan, The Critic, i. 1.

When earth breaks up and Heaven expands,
How will the change strike me and you,
In the house not made with hands?
Browning, By the Fireside.

14. To fall into; assume: as, to strike an attitude.

No sooner had the horses struck a canter than Gibbie's jack-boots . . . began to play alternately against the horse's flanks. Scott, Old Mortality, iii.

15. To give a blow to; smite; hit; collide with; impinge upon. See to strike down, off, out, etc., below.

The servants did strike him with the palms of their hands. Mark xiv. 65.

He at Philippi kept
His sword e'en like a dancer; while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cassius.
Shak., A. and C., iii. 11. 36.

The laird strak her on the mouth,
Till she spat out o' blude.
Laird of Wariestoun (Child's Ballads, III. 110).

16. To attack; assail; set upon.

That was the lawe of Iewes,
That what woman were in auoutrie taken, were she riche or pore,
With stones men shulde hir stryke, and stone hir to deth.
Piers Plowman (B), xii. 77.

The red pestilence strike all trades in Rome!
Shak., Cor., iv. 1. 13.

Death struck them in those Shapes again,
As once he did when they were Men.
Prior, Turtle and Sparrow.

17. To assail or overcome, as with some occult influence, agency, or power; smite; shock; blast.

I will go study mischief,
And put a look on, arm'd with all my cunnings,
Shall meet him like a basilisk, and strike him.
Fletcher (and another), False One, iv. 2.

About Maidstone in Kent, a certain Monster was found strucken with the Lightning, which Monster had a Head like an Ass. Baker, Chronicles, p. 75.

Even brave men have been struck with this involuntary trembling upon going into battle for the first time, the series of sensations commencing with the boom of the yet distant cannon.
J. M. Carnochan, Operative Surgery, p. 109.

18. To knock; dash: as, to strike one's foot against a stone.

He struck his hand upon his breast,
And kiss'd the fatal knife. Shak., Lucrece, l. 1842.

19. To deal or inflict: with blow, stroke, or a similar word as object.

Hadst thou foxship
To banish him that struck more blows for Rome
Than thou hast spoken words? Shak., Cor., iv. 2. 19.

Not riot, but valour, not fancy, but policy, must strike the stroke. G. Harvey, Four Letters.

Who would be free, themselves must strike the blow.
Byron, Childe Harold, ii. 76.

20. To produce by blows or strokes: as, to strike fire; to strike a light.

War is a Fire struck in the Devil's tinder-box.
Howell, Letters, ii. 43.

21. To cause to ignite by friction: as, to strike a match.—22. To tap; broach; draw liquor from: as, to strike a cask.

Strike the vessels, ho!
Here is to Cæsar! Shak., A. and C., ii. 7. 103.

23†. To take forcibly or fraudulently; steal: as, to strike money. [Slang.]

Now we haue well bousd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well dronke, let vs steale some thing.
Bp. Earle, Micro-cosmographie, App.

24. To bring suddenly and completely into some specified state, by or as by a swift, sharp blow or stroke: as, to strike one dumb.

S. Paule was himselfe sore against Christ, til Christ gaue him a great fal, and threw him to the ground, and strake him starke blind.
Sir T. More, Cumfort against Tribulation (1573), fol. 11.

Oh, hard news! it frets all my blood,
And strikes me stiffe with horrour and amazement.
Heywood, Fair Maid of the West (Works, ed. 1874, II. 398).

In view of the amazed town and camp,
He strake him dead, and brought Peralta off.
Fletcher (and another), Love's Cure, i. 1.

25. To pierce; stab.

Yet when the tother answered him that there was in euery mans mouth spoke of him much shame, it so strake him to ye heart that w' in fewe daies after he withered & consumed away. Sir T. More, Rich. III. (Works, p. 61 f).

For I hit him not in vaine as Artagerses did, but full in the forehead hard by the eye, and strake him through and through his head againe, and so overthrew him, of which blow he died. North, tr. of Plutarch, p. 792.

26. To produce with sudden force; effect suddenly and forcibly; cause to enter.

It cannot be this weak and writhled shrimp
Should strike such terror to his enemies.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., ii. 3. 24.

Bring out the lady: she can quell this mutiny,
And with her powerful looks strike awe into them.
Fletcher (and another), False One, iv. 2.

Waving wide her myrtle wand,
She strikes a universal peace through sea and land.
Milton, Nativity, l. 52.

27. To stamp with a stroke; impress; hence, to mint; coin: as, to strike coin at the mint.

The princes who struck these medals, says Eugenius, seem to have designed them rather as an ostentation of their wealth than of their virtues.
Addison, Ancient Medals, iii.

Here they are, thirty good Harry groats as ever were struck in bluff old Hal's time. Scott, Abbot, vii.

28. To cause to enter or penetrate; thrust: as, a tree strikes its roots deep.

Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices,
Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms
Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary.
Shak., Lear, ii. 3. 16.

29. To cause to sound; announce by sound: as, the clock strikes twelve; hence, to begin to beat or play upon, as a drum or other instrument; begin to sing or play, as a song or tune: often with up.

Strike up the drums. Shak., K. John, v. 2. 179.

Strike the Lyre upon an untry'd String.
Congreve, Taking of Namure.

When the college clock struck two, Hogg would rise, in spite of Shelley's entreaty or remonstrance, and retire for the night. E. Dowden, Shelley, I. 67.

30. To make; effect; conclude; ratify: as, to strike a bargain. [Compare the Latin fœdus ferire, to strike a treaty; also the phrase to strike hands.]

The rest strike truce, and let loue seale firm leagues twixt Greece and Troy. Chapman, Iliad, iii. 98.

A bargain was struck; a sixpence was broken; and all the arrangements were made for the voyage.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., xvi.

Be admonished, by what you already see, not to strike leagues of friendship with cheap persons, where no friendship can be. Emerson, Essays, 1st ser., p. 195.

31. To cease, stop, quit, or knock off as a coercive measure: as, to strike work.

I never heard of authors striking work, as the mechanics call it, until their masters the booksellers should increase their pay. Scott, in Lockhart's Life, xi.

Don't yo think I can keep three people . . . on sixteen shillings a week? Dun yo think it 's for myself I'm striking work at this time? Mrs. Gaskell, North and South, xvii

32. To make a sudden and pressing demand upon; especially, to make such a demand successfully: as, to strike a friend for fifty dollars. [Colloq.]—33†. To match, as the stock and counterstock of a tally (see tally); hence, to unite; join.

I'll find a portion for her, if you strike
Affectionate hearts, and joy to call you nephew.
Shirley, The Brothers, i. 1.

34†. To fight; fight out.

They fight near to Auxerre the most bloody battle that ever was struk in France.
Raleigh, Hist. World, Pref., p. xx.

We, that should check
And quench the raging fire in others' bloods,
We strike the battle to destruction?
Fletcher and Rowley, Maid in the Mill, iv. 2.

35. To draw (lines) on a surface or on the face of a piece of stuff, as by snapping or twanging a chalked string stretched tightly along it.—36. In carp., to form (a molding) with a molding-plane.—37. To harpoon or bomb (a whale).—38. In angling, to hook (a fish when it rises to the fly but fails to hook itself). It is accomplished by a quick dexterous turn or twist of the wrist.—39. To put (fish) in a strike-barrel.—40. In electroplating, to produce the beginning of a deposit of metal upon, as on a plate or other article of metal placed in the electroplating solution. The work is said to be struck as soon as a uniform film of deposited metal distinctly appears upon its surface.—41. In color-making and dyeing, to affect (a coloring matter) so as to obtain the desired precipitation of color in the vat or on the fabric by the addition of the proper color-producing chemical. See color-striker.

A simpler method of dyeing by means of bichromates is also given, . . . by which the logwood is struck of an intense black and fixed.
O'Neill, Dyeing and Calico Printing, p. 86.

42. In electric lighting, to produce (the arc) by parting the carbons.—A struck battle†, a hard-fought battle.

Ten struck battles
I suck'd these honour'd scars from, and all Roman.
Fletcher, Bonduca, i. 1.

Strike me luck, strike me lucky, a familiar expression used in making a bargain, derived from the old custom of striking hands together in ratification of the bargain, the buyer leaving in the hand of the seller an earnest-penny.

But if that 's all you stand upon,
Here, strike me luck, it shall be done.
S. Butler, Hudibras, II. i. 540.

Striking the flars. See flar, 2.—Striking-up press. See press[1].—Struck jury. See jury.—To strike a balance, to compare the summations on both sides of an account, in order to ascertain the amount due by either party to the other.—To strike a center or centering, in arch. See centering[2].—To strike a docket. See docket.—To strike a lead. (a) In mining, to light on a lode or vein of metal. (b) To enter on any undertaking that proves successful.—To strike all of a heap. See heap.—To strike an answer (or other pleading), to strike it out as improper or insufficient. [Local, U. S.]—To strike down. (a) To prostrate by a blow; fell. (b) In fisheries, to head up and stow away barrels of, as fish.—To strike fire. See fire.—To strike from, to remove with or as with a blow or stroke: as, to strike a name from a list.

Among the Arabians they that were taken in adultery had their heads stricken from their bodies.
Homilies, Serm. against Adultery, p. 120.

To strike hands. See hand.—To strike off. (a) See def. 9. (b) (1) To cancel; deduct: as, to strike off the interest of a debt. (2) To separate or remove by a blow or stroke: as, to strike off what is superfluous or injurious.

Ffrom thense we entred in to the gardeyn, and visited the place wher our savyor was takyn and where Seynt Petir Stroke of Malcus eere.
Torkington, Diarie of Eng. Travell, p. 29.

(3) To print: as, to strike off a thousand copies of a book.—To strike oil. See oil.—To strike out. (a) To produce by collision, as by blows or strokes: as, to strike out sparks with steel.

My pride struck out new sparkles of her own.
Dryden, Hind and Panther, i. 75.

(b) See def. 9. (c) To plan quickly or for an emergency; devise; invent; contrive: as, to strike out a new plan of finance. (d) In base-ball, to put out, as the pitcher does the batter when the latter is unable in a certain number of trials to hit the ball: as, he struck out three men in succession.—To strike root, sail, soundings, tally. See the nouns.—To strike up. (a) To begin to play or sing: as, to strike up a tune.

Strike up our drums, to find this danger out.
Shak., K. John, v. 2. 179.

(b†) To send up; give out.

Let the court not be paved, for that striketh up a great heat in summer, and much cold in winter.
Bacon, Building (ed. 1887).

(c) To enter upon by mutual agreement; begin to cultivate: as, to strike up an acquaintance with somebody.

She [Mme. de Souza] charmed and delighted me, and we struck up an intimacy without further delay.
Mme. D'Arblay, Diary, IV. 174.

★strike (strīk), n. [< ME. strike, stric, strek, streek (= LG. strīek); < strike, v.] 1. A wooden implement with a straight edge for leveling a measure of grain, salt, etc., by striking off what is above the level of the top; a strickle.

Wing, cartnave and bushel, peck, strike ready [at] hand.
Tusser, Husbandly Furniture, st. i.

2. A piece of wood used in the manufacture of pottery, in brickmaking, etc., to remove superfluous clay from a mold.—3. A puddlers' stirrer; a rabble.—4†. A stanchion in a gate, palisade, railing, or the like.

Stowe says "there were nine tombs of alabaster and marble, invironed with strikes of iron, in the choir." See preface to the "Chronicle of the Grey Friars of London."
Piers Plowman's Crede (E. E. T. S.), Notes, p. 39.

5. In metal-working, a hook in a foundry to hoist the metal.—6. The compass-bearing of the line of intersection of an inclined bed or stratum with the horizontal plane. Strike is normal to dip.

The Devonian sandstones . . . are exposed in rugged cliffs slightly oblique to their line of strike, along a coast-line of ten miles in length, to the head of the bay [Gaspé].
Dawson, Geol. Hist. of Plants, p. 106.

7. An English dry measure, consisting regularly of two bushels. It was never in other than local use, and varied in different localities from half a bushel to four bushels.

He selleth all the malt or corn for the best, when there be but two strikes of the best in his sack.
Latimer, Misc. Sel.

Jailer. What dowry has she?
Daugh. Some two hundred bottles,
And twenty strike of oats; but he'll ne'er have her.
Fletcher (and another), Two Noble Kinsmen, v. 2.

How many strike of pease would feed a hog fat against Christide?
Marston, Antonio and Mellida, I., ii. 1.

8. A handful or bunch of flax, jute, or other fiber, either ready for heckling or after heckling; a strick.

This pardoner hadde heer as yelow as wex,
But smoothe it heng as doth a strike of flex.
Chaucer, Gen. Prol. to C. T., l. 676.

9. In sugar-making and -refining, the quantity of syrup emptied at one time into the coolers; also, the quantity of sugar boiled or crystallized at one time: as, to boil a strike; to run off a strike.

The strike is now done, air is admitted to the pan, and the contents are run off into the "mixer."
The Century, XXXV. 114.

10. In base-ball: (a) An unsuccessful attempt of the batter to hit the ball. (b) A ball so pitched as to pass over the home-plate, and considered by the umpire as one that the batter should have tried to strike.—11. In American bowling, a play by which one of the contestants knocks down all the pins with one bowl, entitling him to add to his score as many points as the number of the pins knocked down with the first two balls of his next play. Also called ten-strike. Compare spare[1], n., 2.—12. A concerted or general quitting of work by a body of men or women for the purpose of coercing their employer in some way, as when higher wages or shorter hours are demanded, or a reduction of wages is resisted; a general refusal to work as a coercive measure. Compare lockout.

Accounts at that time [1362] of strikes in the building-trade are particularly numerous.
English Gilds (E. E. T. S.), Int., p. cxliv.

There have been times and incidents when the strike was the only court of appeals for the workingman, and the evil lay in the abuse of them and not in the use of them.
Sci. Amer., N. S., LVII. 292.

13. Any unscrupulous attempt to extort money or to obtain other personal advantage by initiating an attack with the intention of being bought off, as by introducing a bill into a legislature, hostile to some moneyed interest, with the hope of being paid to let the matter drop. [Political slang, U. S.]—14. Full measure; especially, in brewing, full measure of malt: thus, ale of the first strike is that which has its full allowance of malt and is strong.

Three hogsheads of ale of the first strike.
Scott.

15. In coining, the whole amount struck at one time.—16. In type-founding, an imperfect matrix for type; the deeply sunken impression of the engraved character on a punch in a short and narrow bar of copper: so called because the punch is struck a hard blow with a hammer. Also known as unjustified matrix, or drive. See type-founding.

When the letter is perfect, it is driven into a piece of polished copper, called the drive or strike. This passes to the justifier, who makes the width and depth of the faces uniform throughout the fount.
Encyc. Brit., XXIII. 699.

17. A metal piece which is inserted in a door-jamb, and against which the latch strikes as the door closes. It is beveled to permit the easy closing and self-latching of the door. Also called striker-plate.

18. Same as stick[3], 10.—19. In soap-making: (a) The general crystalline appearance of hard soaps, which is characteristic of soaps which retain the normal amount of water, and in which the saponification and separation have been complete. (b) The proper and characteristic marbling of well-made mottled soaps.—By the strike, by measure not heaped up, but having what was above the level of the measure scraped off with a strike.—Strike of day, the dawn or break of day.

If I was to speak till strike o' day.
Dickens, Hard Times, ii. 4.

strike-a-light (strīk'ạ-līt″), n. A piece of flint trimmed into the shape of a gun-flint, but somewhat larger, used with pyrites or steel for procuring fire from the sparks. Such implements have been frequently found among prehistoric relics. They have been used from remote ages, and are still manufactured and sold for that purpose.

Another strike-a-light which I lately bought in a stall at Trèves is about 2 inches long by 1¾ broad, and is made from a flat flake, trimmed to a nearly square edge at the butt-end, and to a very flat arc at the point.
Evans, Ancient Stone Implements of Great Britain, p. 283.

strike-block (strīk'blok), n. In carp., a plane shorter than a jointer, used for shooting a short joint.

strike-fault (strīk'fâlt), n. In geol., a fault running in the same general direction as the strike of the strata in which it occurs.

strike-or-silent (strīk'ȯr-sī'lent), n. In horol., a piece which sets the striking-mechanism of a clock in or out of action. E. H. Knight.

strike-pan (strīk'pan), n. In sugar-manuf., same as teache or teache-pan.

strike-pay (strīk'pā), n. An allowance paid by a trades-union to men on strike.

In one memorable case, at least, a great employer . . . himself gave strike pay to his own men, when, under a sense of social duty, they left his works empty.
Nineteenth Century, XXVI. 722.

strike-plate (strīk'plāt), n. The keeper for a beveled latch-bolt, against which it strikes so as to snap shut automatically. Car-Builder's Dict.

★striker (strī'kėr), n. [< strike + -er[1].] 1. One who strikes, in any sense of the verb strike. Specifically—(a†) A robber.

I am joined with no foot-land rakers, no long-staff six-penny strikers.
Shak., 1 Hen. IV., ii. 1. 82.

(b) A workman who with others quits work in order to coerce their employer to accede to their demands.

The method employed by the Strikers in this country, during the past ten years, and more especially in their recent strikes, is most unreasonable, violent, as well as disastrous in its results.
N. A. Rev., CXLII. 602.

(c) One who seeks to effect a strike, in sense 13. [Political slang, U. S.]

If he can elect such a ticket even in Virginia alone, he will take the field after election as a striker, and will offer his electoral votes to whichever candidate will give the highest terms.
The Nation, Sept. 6, 1883, p. 200.

(d) In the United States army, a soldier detailed to act as an officer's servant. See strike, v. i., 19. (e†) A wencher.
Massinger. (f†) A harpooner.

Where-ever we come to an anchor, we always send out our strikers, and put our hooks and lines overboard to try for fish.
Dampier, Voyages, I. 118.

(g) In the hardware districts of England, a workman who manages the fire, heats the steel, and assists the forger. (h) An assistant or inferior shipwright. (i) A man employed to strike off the superfluous quantity of grain, salt, etc., from the top of a measure.

2. That which strikes. Specifically—(a) A species of tilt-hammer operated directly from the engine. (b) A hardened mold upon which a softened steel block is struck to receive a concave impression. (c) The hammer of a gun, the stroke of which fires the piece. (d) An automatic apparatus which regulates the descent, at the proper time and place, of the ruling-pens of a paper-ruling machine. (e) The lever which puts a machine into motion. [Eng.]

3. In ornith., a tern or sea-swallow. [Local, U. S.]—4. In the menhaden-fishery: (a) The man who manages the striker-boat. A vessel usually has two striker-boats, with one man in each; these row close to the school of fish, observe its course, signal the purse-crew to set the seine, and drive the fish in the desired direction with pebbles which they carry in the boats. (b) A green hand who works at low wages while learning the business, but is one of the crew of a vessel.

striker-arm (strī'kėr-ärm), n. A seat-arm. Car-Builder's Dict.

striker-boat (strī'kėr-bōt), n. In the menhaden-fishery, the striker's boat. See striker, 4 (a).

striker-out (strī'kėr-out'), n. In lawn-tennis, the player who receives, and if possible returns, the ball when first served.

It now becomes the duty of the adversary, called the striker-out, to return the ball by striking it with his racket in such a manner that it shall pass back over the net to the service side.
Encyc. Brit., XXIII. 179.

striker-plate (strī'kėr-plāt), n. Same as strike, 17.

★striking (strī'king), n. [Verbal n. of strike, v.] 1. The removal of the center upon which an arch has been built. See striking-plate.—2. The propagation of plants by cuttings or slips.

striking (strī'king), p. a. Standing out prominently and conspicuously, so as strongly to impress the eye or the mind; prominent; notable; impressive; remarkable; surprising: as, a striking resemblance; a striking remark.

The most striking characteristic of the poetry of Milton is the extreme remoteness of the associations by means of which it acts on the reader.
Macaulay, Milton.

striking-beam (strī'king-bēm), n. A cylindrical horse on which hides, when removed from the tanning-liquor, are placed. While drying they are struck or scraped from time to time.

strikingly (strī'king-li), adv. In a striking manner; in such a manner as to surprise or impress; forcibly; impressively.

The force of many strikingly poetic passages has been weakened or unperceived, because their origin was unknown, unexplored, or misunderstood.
T. Warton, Pref. to Milton's Smaller Poems.

strikingness (strī'king-nes), n. Striking character or quality.

striking-plate (strī'king-plāt), n. In carp., in a centering used in erecting an arch of masonry, a device for lowering or setting free the centering under the arch when completed. It consists of a compound wedge secured by keys. When the keys are driven out, the wedge slips backward, and causes the centering to fall.

striking-solution (strī'king-sō-lū″shon), n. A weak solution of silver cyanide, with a large proportion of free potassium cyanide, in which metals to be silver-plated are immersed for a few seconds to effect an instantaneous deposit of silver on the metal in order to insure a perfect coating in the silver-bath proper.

strikle†, striker†. Old spellings of strickle, strickler.

string (string), n. [< ME. string, streng, strynge, < AS. strenge = MD. strenghe, stringhe, D. streng, strenge, strenk (streng-), strank (strang-) = LG. strenge = OHG. strang, MHG. strānc, strange, G. strang = Icel. strengr = Dan. streng = Sw. sträng, a string, line, cord; perhaps < AS. strang, etc., strong (see strong); otherwise akin to L. stringere, draw tight, Gr. στραγγάλη, a halter, στραγγός, hard-twisted: see strain[1], stringent, strangle.] 1. A slender cord; a thick thread; a line; a twine; a narrow band, thong, or ribbon; also, anything which ties.

> I'll knit it up in silken strings,
> With twenty odd-conceited true-love knots.
> Shak., T. G. of V., ii. 7. 45.
>
> Queen Mary came tripping down the stair,
> Wi' the gold strings in her hair.
> Mary Hamilton (Child's Ballads, III. 123).
>
> Vouchsafe to be an azure knight,
> When on thy breast and sides Herculean
> He fix'd the star and string cerulean.
> Swift, Poetry.

Mrs. General Likens had her bonnet-strings untied; she took it off her head as she got out of the buggy.
W. M. Baker, New Timothy, p. 80.

2. A strip, as of leather, by which the covers of a book are held together.

Many of those that pretend to be great Rabbies in these studies have scarce saluted them from the strings and the titlepage, or, to give 'em more, have bin but the Ferrets and Moushunts of an Index.
Milton, Reformation in Eng., i.

3. The line or cord of a bow.

> The best bow that the yeman browthe
> Roben set on a stryng.
> Robin Hood and the Potter (Child's Ballads, V. 27).

4. In musical instruments, a tightly stretched cord or wire by the vibration of which tones are produced. The materials most used are gut, as in instruments of the lute and viol families, and brass or steel, as in the mandolin, the zither, and the pianoforte, though silk is also used. Silk strings are usually, and metal strings sometimes, wound with light silver wire to increase their weight; and such strings are often called silver strings. The pitch of the tone produced depends on the density, tension, and vibrating length of the string. The vibration is produced either by plucking or twanging with the finger, by a plectrum, or by a jack, as in the lute and harp families generally, and in the harpsichord; by the friction of a bow, as in the viol family; by a stream of air, as in the æolian harp; or by the blow of a hammer, as in the dulcimer and the pianoforte. The strings are named either by the letters of the tones to which they are tuned, or by numbers. The smallest string of several representatives of the lute and viol families is often called the chanterelle, because commonly used for the principal melody or cantus. The tuning of strings is effected usually by means of tuning-pins or -pegs, which in lutes and viols are placed in the head of the instrument, but in harps, zithers, and pianofortes in one side or rim of the frame. Not only has each instrument had a varying number of strings in different countries and at different periods, but the accordatura, or system of pitches, to which they are tuned has also varied. The vibrating length of the strings in instruments of the lute and viol families may be diminished, and the pitch of their tones raised, by pressing them with the fingers of the left hand against the fingerboard. The exact places for such shortening or "stopping" are sometimes marked by frets, as in the guitar and also in the zither. The modern harp is provided with a mechanism for raising the pitch of certain sets of strings one or two semitones by means of pedals.

> Of instrumentes of stringes in acord
> Herde I so pleye a ravyshing swetnesse.
> Chaucer, Parliament of Fowls, l. 197.
>
> Ye'll take a lock o' my yellow hair, . . .
> Ye'll make a string to your fiddle there.
> The Bonny Bows o' London (Child's Ballads, II. 362).
>
> There 's not a string attuned to mirth
> But has its chord in Melancholy.
> Hood, Melancholy.

5. pl. Stringed instruments, especially the stringed instruments of a band or orchestra taken collectively — that is, violins, violas, violoncellos, and double basses — in distinction from the wind and the percussives.

Praise him upon the strings and pipe.
Book of Common Prayer, Psalter, Ps. cl. 4.

6. Something resembling a string. (a) A tendril, or vegetable fiber; particularly, the tough substance that unites the two parts of the pericarp of leguminous plants: as, the strings of beans.

Duck-weed . . . putteth forth a little string into the water, far from the bottom. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 567.

(b) In mining, a thin seam or branch of a lode; a small vein; a fissure filled with mineral or metalliferous matter, but wanting in regularity and permanence. (c) A nerve or tendon of an animal body.

> Heart with strings of steel,
> Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe!
> Shak., Hamlet, iii. 3. 70.

7. A cord or thread on which anything is filed; a file; also, a set of things strung on a string or file: as, a string of beads; hence, any series of persons or things connected or following in succession; a series or succession of persons, animals, or things extending in a line.

Sir Harry hath what they call a string of stories, which he tells every Christmas. Steele, Guardian, No. 42.

No king or commonwealth either can be pleased to see a string of precious coast towns in the hands of a foreign power. E. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 291.

8. A drove or company of horses or steers; a stud. [Colloq.]

Going into the corral, and standing near the center, each of us picks out some one of his own string from among the animals that are trotting and running in a compact mass round the circle. T. Roosevelt, The Century, XXXV. 656.

9. In billiards: (a) A number of wooden buttons strung on a wire to keep the score or tally of the game. There is a string for each player or side, one white with every fifth button black, the other the converse of this, for convenience in counting the buttons to be moved along the wire for each run made by either player or side. (b) The score, tally, or number of points scored by either player or side at any stage of a game: as, he made a poor string at first, but won. (c) A stroke made by each player from the head of the table to the opposite cushion and back, to determine, by means of the resultant positions of the balls, who shall open the game. —10. In arch., a string-course. —11. In ship-building, the highest range of planks in a ship's ceiling, or that between the gunwale and the upper edge of the upper-deck ports. —12. In printing, a piece-compositor's aggregate of the proofs of types set by him, pasted on a long strip of paper. The amount of work done is determined by the measurement of this string. —13. The stringy albumen of an egg. See chalaza. —14. A hoax, or discredited story. [Printers' slang, Eng.] —A string of cash. See cash[3], 1. —Bass string. See bass[3]. —Close string. See close[2]. —Cut and mitered string, in stair-building, an outer string cut to miter with the end of the riser. —False string, in a musical instrument, an imperfect string, giving an uncertain or untrue sound. —Instrument of ten strings, in the Bible, a variety of nebel or psaltery. —Italian string. See Italian. —Open string, in musical instruments of the stringed group, a string that is not stopped or shortened by the finger or a mechanical stop, but is allowed to vibrate throughout its full length. —Order of the Yellow String. See order. —Plaited string work. See plaited. —Roman string. See Roman. —Rough string. See rough-string. —Silver string. See def. 4. —Soprano string. Same as chanterelle, 1. —Sympathetic string. See sympathetic. —The whip with six strings. See the Six Articles, under article. —To harp on one string. See harp. —To have two strings to one's bow. See bow[2].

★string (string), v.; pret. and pp. strung, ppr. stringing. [< string, n. As with ring[2], the strong forms of the principal parts conform to the supposed analogy of sing, sang, sung, etc.] I. trans. 1. To furnish with strings.

> Orpheus' lute was strung with poets' sinews.
> Shak., T. G. of V., iii. 2. 78.

2. To put in tune the strings of, as of a stringed instrument.

> Here the Muse so oft her harp has strung
> That not a mountain rears its head unsung.
> Addison, Letter from Italy.

3. To make tense; impart vigor to; tone. See high-strung.

> Toil strung the nerves and purified the blood.
> Dryden, Epistle to John Dryden, l. 89.
>
> Sylvia was too highly strung for banter.
> Mrs. Gaskell, Sylvia's Lovers, vii.

4. To fasten, suspend, or hang with a string: as, to string a parcel; to string up a dog. —5. To thread or file on a string: as, to string beads. —6. To prepare for use, as a bow, by bending it sufficiently to slip the bowstring into its notches, so that the string is tightly strained. —7. To extend in a string, series, or line.

Ships were strung for miles along the lower levee [of New Orleans], and steamboats above, all discharging or receiving cargo. W. T. Sherman, Memoirs, vi.

8. To deprive of strings; strip the strings from: as, to string beans. —9†. To carve (lampreys). Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 265.

II. intrans. 1. To stretch out into a string or strings when pulled; become stringy.

Let it [varnish] boil until it strings freely between the fingers. Workshop Receipts, 1st ser., p. 64.

2. To walk or move along in a string or disconnected line; straggle: as, they came stringing along. [Colloq.] —3. In billiards, to hit one's ball so that it will go the length of the table and back, to determine who shall open the game.

string-alphabet (string'al-fa-bet), n. An alphabet in which the letters are denoted by knots of various forms and combinations made in a string: used by the blind.

string-band (string'band), n. A band composed of stringed instruments, or the stringed instruments of such a band taken by themselves.

string-bark (string'bärk), n. Stringy-bark.

string-bean (string'bēn), n. A bean of which the green pods are used for food, prepared before cooking by stripping off the fibrous thread along their back. Varieties of the common kidney-bean, or French bean, are so treated.

string-block (string'blok), n. In pianoforte-making, the wooden block into which are driven the studs for holding the loops of the ends of the strings furthest from the tuning-pins.

string-board (string'bōrd), n. In carp., a board that supports any important part of a framework or structure; especially, a board which covers the ends of the steps in a wooden staircase. Also called string-piece or stringer.

string-course (string'kōrs), n. In arch., a narrow molding or a projecting course continued horizontally along the face of a building, frequently under windows. It is sometimes merely a flat band, more often molded, and sometimes richly carved.

String-course (sculptured), 13th century. (From triforium of Amiens Cathedral, France.)

stringed (stringd), a. [< string + -ed[2].] 1. Having strings; furnished with strings: as, a stringed instrument. —2. Produced by strings or stringed instruments.

> Divinely-warbled voice
> Answering the stringed noise.
> Milton, Nativity, l. 97.

3. Fastened with a string or strings; tied.

Bob took up the small stringed packet of books.
George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, iv. 3.

4. In her., furnished with a string of any sort, as a cord or ribbon.

stringency (strin'jen-si), n. [< stringen(t) + -cy.] Stringent character or condition. (a) Tightness; straitness: as, a stringency in the money-market. (b) Strictness; closeness; rigor: as, the stringency of the regulations was increased.

As the known exactness of the uniformity became greater, the stringency of the inference increased.
W. K. Clifford, Lectures, I. 156.

stringendo (strin-jen'dō). [It., ppr. of stringere, < L. stringere, draw tight, compress: see stringent.] In music, pressing or accelerating the tempo: usually with a crescendo. Also incalzando.

stringent (strin'jent), a. [< L. stringen(t-)s, ppr. of stringere, draw tight, compress, contract, touch, graze, stroke, etc.: see strain[1], strict, and cf. strike.] 1†. Tightening or binding; drawing tight. Thomson. —2. Straitened; tight, constrained; hampered by scarcity or lack of available funds: as, a stringent money-market. —3. Strict; close; rigorous; rigid; exacting; urgent: as, to make stringent regulations.

stringently (strin'jent-li), adv. In a stringent manner; with stringency; tightly; rigorously; strictly. Bailey.

stringentness (strin'jent-nes), n. Stringency.

stringer (string'ėr), n. [< string + -er[1].] 1. ★One who strings. (a) One who makes or furnishes strings for a bow. Nares. (b) The workman who fits a piano with strings. (c) One who arranges on a string: as, a bead- or pearl-stringer.

2. A device for attaching piano-strings to a ridge cast specially for that purpose on the plate, instead of winding them around tuning wrest-pins inserted in the wrest-pin plank. It is a small hooked steel bar with a screw-threaded shank that is passed through the ridge and then secured by a nut. The wire string is first passed through a hole in the hooked end of the stringer, and then looped once around the hook.

In tuning, the string is tightened by turning the nut on the shank of the stringer.

3. In railway engin., a longitudinal timber on which a rail is fastened, and which rests on transverse sleepers.—4. In ship-building, a longitudinal tie or consolidation of the framing in the interior of a vessel: particularly applied to iron ships. Stringers are of various forms, built up of plates and angle bars. —5. In carp.: (a) A horizontal timber connecting two posts in a framework. (b) Same as string-board.—6. A tie in a truss or a truss-bridge.—7†. A fornicator; a wencher. Beau. and Fl., Knight of Burning Pestle, i. 1.—8. A small stick or switch used to string fish on by the gills.

string-gage (string'gāj), n. A gage, like a wire-gage, for measuring the size of a string for a musical instrument.

string-halt (string'hâlt), n. A corruption of spring-halt.

stringiness (string'i-nes), n. Stringy character or condition; fibrousness. W. B. Carpenter, Micros., § 360.

stringing (string'ing), n. [Verbal n. of string, v.] 1. In silk-manuf., same as glossing.—2. pl. Straight or curved inlaid lines in buhl-work.

stringless (string'les), a. [< string + -less.] Without strings.

His tongue is now a stringless instrument.
Shak., Rich. II., ii. 1. 149.

stringman† (string'man), n. A musician who plays upon a stringed instrument.

Some use trumpetts, some shalmes, some small pipes, some are stringemen.
MSS. Hard. No. 610, in Collier's Eng. Dram. Poetry, I. 32.

string-minstrel (string'min″strel), n. A minstrel who accompanies himself on a stringed instrument. Strutt, Sports and Pastimes, p. 278.

Stringopidæ (string-gop'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stringops + -idæ.] Same as Strigopidæ.

Stringopinæ (string-gō-pī'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Stringops + -inæ.] Same as Strigopinæ.

Stringops, Stringopsis (string'gops, string-gop'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. στρίγξ (στριγγ-) (> L. strix, strig-), a screech-owl (< στρίζειν, cry, squeak). + ὤψ, face, eye.] Same as Strigops.

string-orchestra (string'ôr″kes-trą), n. A string-band.

string-organ (string'ôr″gan), n. A musical instrument with a keyboard, characterized by a graduated set of vibrators or free reeds, which are severally connected by rods with a corresponding set of wires or strings in such a way that the vibrations of the reeds are communicated to the appropriate strings. The tones thus secured are sweet and pure, combining some of the advantages of both the harmonium and the pianoforte.

string-pea (string'pē), n. See pea[1], 1.

string-piece (string'pēs), n. A name of various parts in constructions of wood. (a) That part of a flight of stairs which forms its ceiling or soffit. (b) Same as string-board. (c) A long piece of timber, especially one used to support a floor. (d) In a frame, a horizontal connecting-piece. (e) A heavy horizontal piece of squared timber carried along the edge of the front of a wharf or of cribwork, to hold the timbers in place, and strengthen the whole.

string-plate (string'plāt), n. In pianoforte-making, the metal plate which carries the string-block. It was originally made separate, but is now combined in a single casting with the entire frame.

stringwood (string'wûd), n. A small euphorbiaceous tree, Acalypha rubra, formerly of St. Helena, now extinct. It was a handsome tree, named from its pendent spikes of reddish male flowers.

stringy (string'i), a. [< string + -y[1].] 1. Consisting of strings or small threads; fibrous; filamentous: as, a stringy root.

Power by a thousand tough and stringy roots
Fixed to the people's pious nursery-faith.
Coleridge, tr. of Schiller's Piccolomini, iv. 4.

2. Ropy; viscid; gluey; that may be drawn into a thread.

They hoard up glue, whose clinging drops,
Like pitch or bird-lime, hang in stringy ropes.
Addison, tr. of Virgil's Georgics, iv.

3. Sinewy; wiry. [Colloq.]

A stringy little man of about fifty.
Jerrold, Men of Character, Job Pippins, iii.

4. Marked by thread-like flaws on the surface: as, stringy glass; stringy marble. Marble-worker, § 8.

stringy-bark (string'i-bärk), n. 1. One of a class of Australasian gum-trees (Eucalyptus) distinguished by a tenacious fibrous bark. The common stringy-bark is E. obliqua, abounding in Tasmania and southern Australia, in Victoria from its gregarious habit called messmate-tree (which see). A common stringy-bark of Victoria and New South Wales is E. macrorrhyncha, a smaller tree, the wood of which is used for various purposes. Other stringy-barks are E. capitellata, E. eugenioides, E. tetrodonta, E. microcorys (mostly known as tallow-wood), E. piperita (white stringy-bark), and E. amygdalina; the last two are also called peppermint-tree. Also called string-bark.

Split string-bark timber is the usual material for fences in Australia, when procurable. A. L. Gordon.

2. In Australia, a post and rail fence.

strinkle (string'kl), v. t. and i.; pret. and pp. strinkled, ppr. strinkling. [< ME. strinklen, strenklen, strenkelen, freq. of strenken, sprinkle; origin uncertain. The resemblance to sprinkle is appar. accidental; but the word may be a var. of sprinkle, perhaps due to initial conformation with strew.] To strew or sprinkle sparingly. [Old Eng. and Scotch.]

strinkling (string'kling), n. [Verbal n. of strinkle, v.] 1. The act of one who strinkles.—2. That which is strinkled; a small quantity.

Men whose brains were seasoned with some strinklings at least of madness and phrensy.
Dr. H. More, On Godliness, xiv. § 11. (Trench.)

★ striolate (strī'ō-lāt), a. [< NL. striolatus*, < striola*, dim. of L. stria, a furrow: see stria.] In bot., minutely striate.

striolet (strī'ō-let), n. [< NL. striola* (dim. of L. stria) + -et.] In entom., a short stria or impressed line. Kirby.

strip[1] (strip), v.; pret. and pp. stripped or stript, ppr. stripping. [(a) < ME. stripen, streepen, strepen, strupen (pret. strepte, strupte, pp. strept, i-struped), < AS. strȳpan*, strēpan*, in comp. be-strȳpan, rob, plunder, = MD. stroopen, rob, plunder, skin, strip, also bind, strain, etc., D. stroopen = MLG. strōpen, plunder, strip, = OHG. stroufen, MHG. stroufen, G. streifen, strip, skin, flay; (b) cf. D. strippen, strip (leaves), whip, = LG. strepen, strip (leaves), etc., = MHG. striefen, skin, flay. The two sets of forms (to either of which the ME. stripen, strepen could be referred) are more or less confused with each other, and with the forms of strip[2], stripe; but they appear to be orig. distinct. The two senses 'rob' or 'plunder' and 'skin' are not necessarily connected, though rob and reave supply a partial analogy.] I. trans. 1. To rob; plunder; despoil; deprive; divest; bereave: with of before the thing taken away: as, to strip a man of his possessions; to strip a tree of its fruit.

Wherefore labour they to strip their adversaries of such furniture as doth not help? Hooker, Eccles. Polity, ii. 7.

If such tricks . . . strip you out of your lieutenantry.
Shak., Othello, ii. 1. 173.

Like Thieves, when they have plundered and stript a man, leave him. Wycherley, Ep. Ded. to Plain Dealer.

2. To deprive of covering; remove the skin or outer covering of; skin; peel: with of before the thing removed: as, to strip a beast of its skin; to strip a tree of its bark.

The forward, backward falx, the mare, the turn, the trip,
When stript into their shirts, each other they invade Within a spacious ring. Drayton, Polyolbion, i. 244.

A simple view of the object, as it stands stripped of every relation, in all the nakedness and solitude of metaphysical abstraction. Burke, Rev. in France.

3. To uncover; unsheathe.

On, or strip your sword stark naked.
Shak., T. N., iii. 4. 274.

4. To unrig: as, to strip a ship.—5. To tear off the thread of: said of a screw or bolt: as, the screw was stripped.—6. To pull or tear off, as a covering or some adhering substance: as, to strip the skin from a beast; to strip the bark from a tree; to strip the clothes from a man's back: sometimes emphasized with off.

And he stripped off his clothes also. 1 Sam. xix. 24.

She stripp'd it from her arm.
Shak., Cymbeline, ii. 4. 101.

7. To milk dry; press all the milk out of: as, to strip a cow.—8. In fish-culture, to press or squeeze the ripe roe or milt out of (fishes). After the fishes are stripped the spawn of opposite sexes is mixed together; and after this artificial fecundation the eggs are hatched by artificial methods.

9. In agri., to pare off the surface of in strips, and turn over the strips upon the adjoining surface. Imp. Dict.—10†. To separate; put away: with from.

His . . . unkindness,
That stripp'd her from his benediction.
Shak., Lear, iv. 3. 45.

11. In tobacco-manuf., to separate (the wings of the tobacco-leaf) from the stems. E. H. Knight.—12. In carding, to clean (the teeth of the various cylinders and top flats) from short fibers. E. H. Knight.—13. In file-making, to cross-file and draw-file (a file-blank) in order to bring it to accurate form and to clean the surface preliminary to grinding and cutting.—14. In mining, to remove the overlying soil or detrital material from (any bed or mineral deposit which it is desired to open and work).—15. In gun-making, to turn (the exterior of a gun-barrel) in a lathe in such manner that its longitudinal axis shall coincide with the axis of the bore.—16†. To run past or beyond; outrun; outstrip. See outstrip.

Alate we ran the deer, and through the lawnds Stripp'd with our nags the lofty frolic bucks.
Greene, Friar Bacon and Friar Bungay.

=Syn. 2. To denude, lay bare.

II. intrans. 1. To take off the covering or clothes; uncover; undress.—2. To lose the thread, as a screw, or have the screw stripped off, as a screw-bolt.—3. To issue from a rifled gun without assuming the spiral turn: said of a projectile. Farrow.—4. To come off, as an outer covering (as bark); separate from an underlying surface.—5. To be stripped of milt or spawn. Compare I., 8.

★ strip[2] (strip), n. [Another form of stripe: see stripe. Strip is to stripe as bit to bite, smit to smite. It is commonly referred to strip[1], v.] 1. A narrow piece, comparatively long: as, a strip of cloth; a strip of territory.—2. An ornamental appendage to women's dress, formerly worn: it is spoken of as worn on the neck and breast.

When a plum'd fan may shade thy chalked face,
And lawny strips thy naked bosom grace.
Bp. Hall, Satires, IV. iv. 51.

A stomacher upon her breast so bare,
For strips an[d] gorget were not then the weare.
Dr. Smith, Penelope and Ulysses, l. 1658.

3. A stripling; a slip. George Eliot, Middlemarch, xlvi.—4. In joinery, a narrow piece of board nailed over a crack or joint between planks.—5. In mining, one of a series of troughs forming a labyrinth, or some similar arrangement, through which the ore flows as it comes from the stamps, and in which the particles are deposited in the order of their equivalence.

strip[3] (strip), n. [Sc. also strype, streape, dim. strypie; perhaps another use of strip[2]. Cf. strippet.] 1. A rill. [Scotch.]—2. Destruction of fences, buildings, timber, etc.; waste. [U. S.]

strip-armor (strip'är″mor), n. Armor, especially for the legs, used in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, and showing broad raised strips alternating with sunken bands.

stripe (strīp), n. [< ME. stripe (strīpe, prob. also strīpe, > E. strip[2]), < MD. strijpe, strepe, D. streep = MLG. stripe, LG. stripe, a stripe or strip, = MHG. G. streif = Dan. stribe (< D.), a stripe, strip; cf. strip[1], strip[2].] 1. A streak of a different color from that of the ground; a long narrow division of something of a different color from the ground: as, a stripe of red on a green ground; hence, any linear variation of color. Compare streak[2], stria, striga.—2. A narrow piece attached to something of a different color or texture: as, the red stripe on the leg of a soldier's trousers.—3. Generally, a strip or narrow piece.

The whole ground that is sown, to the sandy ascent of the mountains, is but a narrow stripe of three quarters of a mile broad. Bruce, Source of the Nile, I. 75.

4. A long narrow discolored mark made on flesh by the stroke of a lash or rod; a wale; hence, a stroke made with a lash, whip, rod, strap, or scourge.

Forty stripes he may give him, and not exceed.
Deut. xxv. 3.

5†. A blow; a stroke.

Euery one gyue but one suer stripe, & suerly ye iorney is ours. Hall, Chron., Rich. III., an. 3.

But, when he could not quite it, with one stripe
Her lions clawes he from her feete away did wipe.
Spenser, F. Q., V. xi. 27.

6. Distinctive color; particular kind or character; hence, distinguishing characteristic: as, a politician of the Republican stripe.

I shall go on: and first in differing stripe
The flood-god's speech thus tune an oaten pipe.
W. Browne, Britannia's Pastorals, i. 2.

Various poems are of a democratic, liberal stripe, inspired by the struggle then commencing over Europe.
Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 256.

Bengal stripe, a kind of cotton cloth woven with colored stripes; gingham.—Cirrus stripe, a long thin stripe of cirrus cloud, generally occurring in parallel rows which, by the effect of perspective, usually appear to be convergent. The motion of these stripes is usually either broadside forward, or oblique to their length.

Cirrus-stripes lie in regions of maximum pressure most often nearly perpendicular to the isobar.
Abercromby, Weather, p. 92.

Dobie's stripe. Same as Krause's membrane (which see, under membrane).—Spanish stripes. See Spanish.—Stars and stripes. See star[1].—To come to hand stripes†, to come to close quarters; fight hand to hand. Brende, tr. of Quintus Curtius, ix.

stripe (strīp), v. t.; pret. and pp. striped, ppr. striping. [< stripe, n.] 1. To make stripes upon; form with lines of different colors; variegate with stripes.—2. To strike; lash. [Rare.]—3†. To thrust.

He has striped his bright brown brand
Out through Clerk Saunders' fair bodye.
Clerk Saunders (Child's Ballads, II. 48).

★Droved and striped. See drove[3].

striped (strī′ped or strīpt), a. 1. Having stripes. See streaked. Striped and streaked are synonymous, but differ slightly as stripe and streak do, the former implying greater firmness, evenness, and regularity of the markings indicated: as, a striped zebra; streaked soap.—Striped-barked maple, striped dogwood. Same as striped maple.—Striped dormouse, function, jasper. See the nouns.—Striped grass. Same as ribbon-grass.—Striped maple, mullet, perch, snake, spinebelly, etc. See the nouns.—Striped muscle, striated muscle. See muscular tissue (with cut), under muscular.—Striped squirrel, the chipmunk.

striped-bass (strī′ped-bȧs), n. Roccus lineatus, the bass or rockfish. See cuts under bass and gill. [U. S.]

stripetail (strīp′tāl), n. A humming-bird of the genus Eupherusa, of which there are several species.

strip-leaf (strip′lēf), n. Tobacco from which the stalks have been removed before packing.

strip-lights (strip′līts), n. pl. In a theater, rows of lights fastened behind wings.

stripling (strip′ling), n. [Appar. < strip[2] + -ling[1].] A youth in the state of adolescence, or just passing from boyhood to manhood; a lad. Mandeville, Travels, p. 278.

And the king said, Enquire thou whose son the stripling is. 1 Sam. xvii. 56.

And now a stripling cherub he appears.
Milton, P. L., iii. 636.

★stripper (strip′ėr), n. [< strip[1] + -er[1].] One who strips, or an implement or machine used for stripping. Specifically—(a) In wool-carding: (1) A small card-roll the function of which is to remove or strip the fiber from another roll in a carding-machine. The fiber thus stripped off is delivered to some other carding-roll or worker. In some carding-machines a stripper is used to take the wool from the licker-in and deliver it to the breast-cylinder. (2) An automatic device for lifting the top cards or flats employed in some kinds of cotton-carding machines. Also called angle-stripper. (b) A machine for smoothing down old and worn-out files to make them ready for recutting; a file-stripper. (c) An implement used on osier-farms for stripping off willow-bark. One form is an annular scraper through which the willows or switches are drawn after starting the bark sufficiently to allow the wood to pass through the scraper and be grasped by a pair of nippers. The bark thus stripped off is used for medicinal purposes, and the peeled switches are used for baskets and other willow wares.

strippet† (strip′et), n. [< strip[3] + -et.] A small brook; a rivulet. Holinshed, Descrip. of Scotland, x.

★stripping (strip′ing), n. [Verbal n. of strip[1], v.] 1. That which is removed by stripping.

Light strippings from the fan-trees.
Browning, Paracelsus, iv.

2. pl. The last milk drawn from a cow, procured by a downward stripping action of the thumb and forefinger.—3. In fish-culture, the operation of pressing ripe spawn or milt out of the live fish.—4. In quarrying and mining, the act of removing the superficial detritus, soil, etc., preparatory to opening a mine or quarry, or to lay bare the surface for examination; also, the material thus removed.

stripping-knife (strip′ing-nīf), n. A knife for separating the blades of sorghum from the stalks to prepare them for grinding. E. H. Knight.

stripping-plate (strip′ing-plāt), n. A fixed plate attached to the frame of a roller, to scrape or strip off any adhering material, as in paint-grinding mills, clay-crushers, and in some rolling-mills for metals which adhere to rollers.

stripulose (strip′ū-lōs), a. In entom., covered with coarse, decumbent hairs, as the elytra of certain beetles.

stripy (strī′pi), a. Stripe-like; occurring in stripes; marked by streaks or stripes.

Strisores (strī-sō′rēz), n. pl. [NL.; origin obscure.] An artificial order or suborder of birds, including a number of picarian families. It was divided by Cabanis into Macrochires (the humming-birds, swifts, and goatsuckers) and Amphibolæ (the colies, touracous, and hoactzins). [Not in use.]

stritchel (strich′el), n. An assibilated form of strickle.

strive (strīv), v. i.; pret. strove, pp. striven (formerly also strived, Rom. xv. 20), ppr. striving. [< ME. striven, stryven, strifen (orig. a weak verb, pret. strived, afterward conformed to the analogy of strong verbs like drive, pret. drove, with pret. strof, strove, pp. striven), < OF. estriver = Pr. estribar, strive, prob. < OHG. strīban*, in deriv. weak verb, MHG. G. streben = D. streven = MLG. streven, LG. strewen = Sw. sträfva = Dan. stræbe, strive; cf. Icel. strīdha = Sw. strīda, strive: see stride, and cf. strife.] 1. To make strenuous effort; endeavor earnestly; labor hard; do one's endeavor; try earnestly and persistently: followed by an infinitive: as, he strove hard to win the prize; to strive to excel; to strive to pay one's way.

Strive to enter in at the strait gate. Luke xiii. 24.

I'll strive . . . to take a nap.
Shak., Rich. III., v. 3. 104.

When there is perfect sincerity—when each man is true to himself—when everyone strives to realize what he thinks the highest rectitude—then must all things prosper.
H. Spencer, Social Statics, p. 518.

2. To contend; struggle; battle; fight: followed by with, against, or for: as, to strive against fate; to strive for the truth.

First with thi bettir be waar for to stryue, Agens thi felaw noo quarel thou contryue.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 58.

While Iesvs stroue with Sathans strong Temptations.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, i. 1.

Against the Deity 'tis hard to strive.
Prior, Second Hymn of Callimachus.

Striving with love and hate, with life and death,
With hope that lies, and fear that threateneth.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, II. 151.

3. To vie; contend for preëminence: with with.

With the rose colour stroof hire hewe.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 180.

Nor that sweet grove
Of Daphne by Orontes, and the inspired Castalian spring, might with this Paradise
Of Eden strive. Milton, P. L., iv. 275.

4. To quarrel or contend with one another; be at variance one with another, or come to be so; be in contention, dispute, or altercation.

Do as adversaries do in law,
Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends.
Shak., T. of the S., i. 2. 279.

5. To oppose by contrariety of qualities: with with.

Now private pity strove with publick hate,
Reason with rage, and eloquence with fate.
Sir J. Denham, On the Earl of Strafford's Trial [and Death.

=Syn. 1. Undertake, Endeavor, etc. (see attempt); seek, aim, toil.—2. To compete, contest.—4. To dispute, wrangle.

strive (strīv), n. [< strive, v.] A striving; an effort; a strife. [Old Eng. and Scotch.]

striver (strī′vėr), n. [< strive + -er[1].] One who strives or contends; one who makes efforts of body or mind. Glanville.

striving (strī′ving), n. [Verbal n. of strive, v.] Strenuous or earnest effort; struggle; endeavor.

Failure after long perseverance is much grander than never to have a striving good enough to be called a failure. George Eliot, Middlemarch, xxii.

strivingly (strī′ving-li), adv. In a striving manner; with earnest or persistent efforts or struggles. Imp. Dict.

Strix (striks), n. [NL., < L. strix (strig-), < Gr. στριξ (στριγ-), a screech-owl, perhaps < στρίζειν*, equiv. to τρίζειν, creak, grate, croak.] A Linnean genus of owls. (a†) Containing all the Striges. (b) Restricted to the barn-owls: same as Aluco. See cut under barn-owl. (c) Restricted to the wood-owls, like Strix stridula, having the facial disk complete, circular, and no plumicorns. In this sense it is now commonly employed. The common barred owl of the United States is Strix nebulosa. See cut in preceding column.

Barred Owl (Strix nebulosa).

stroak†, stroaking†. Obsolete spellings of stroke[1], stroking.

stroam† (strōm), v. i. [Prob. a var. of stream (as soam[2] for seam[2]), perhaps associated with roam: see stream.] 1†. To wander about idly and vacantly.—2. To walk with long strides. [Prov. Eng.]

He, ejaculating blessings upon his parents, and calling for just vengeance upon himself, stroamed up and down the room. Mme. D'Arblay, Camilla, iii. 10. (Davies.) strob (strob), n. [< Gr. στρόβος, a twisting or whirling round, < στρέφειν, turn, twist. Cf. strobile, strophe.] The angular velocity of one radian per second.

strobic (strob′ik), a. [< strob + -ic.] Appearing to spin.—Strobic circles, a number of circles drawn concentrically which appear to spin round when they are moved about.

strobila (strō-bī′lä), n.; pl. strobilæ (-lē). [NL., < Gr. στροβίλη, a plug of lint like a pine-cone, cf. στρόβιλος, anything twisted, a pine-cone, etc.: see strobile.] In zoöl.: (a) In Hydrozoa, a stage in the development of a discophoran, supervening upon the scyphistoma or hydra-tuba stage by the development of ephyræ, and before these become detached from one another and from the stalk upon which they grow. See ephyra, 1, and scyphistoma. (b) In Vermes, a segmented tapeworm; the chain of zooids formed by a scolex and the proglottides which have successively budded from it. (c†) [cap.] [NL.] A supposed genus of acalephs, based on the strobiliform stage of certain hydrozoans. Sars, 1835. (d) [cap.] [NL.] In entom., a genus of lepidopterous insects. Sodoffsky, 1837.

Two Strobilæ or Strobilæ, a, b, of Cyanea capillata, resulting from fission of the hydræ tubæ of the scyphistoma stage. At a tentacles are developed at the base of the lower of the two ephyræ borne upon the stalk of the strobila.

strobilaceous (strob-i-lā′shius), a. [< strobile + -aceous.] 1. Resembling a strobile; strobiliform.—2. Bearing strobiles; strobiliferous.

strobilæ, n. Plural of strobila.

Strobilanthes (strob-i-lan′thēz), n. [NL. (Blume, 1825), so called from the inflorescence, usually cone-like when in bud; < Gr. στρόβιλος, a pine-cone, + ἄνθος, a flower.] A genus of plants, of the family Acanthaceæ, type of the tribe Strobilantheæ. It is characterized by flowers with acute linear calyx-lobes, a somewhat equally five-lobed corolla with a short or long and slender tube, stamens four and perfect or two perfect and two rudimentary, and two or perhaps rarely three ovules in each of the two ovary-cells. There are about 180 species, natives mostly of India, scantily represented in China, Japan, and Malaysia, with a few in Madagascar. They are herbs or shrubs, commonly erect, bearing opposite entire or toothed leaves, which are in a few species very unequal in the same pair. Their usually rather large and handsome flowers are often blue or purple, and form dense or interrupted spikes which are terminal or crowded in the axils, and are sometimes replaced by a panicle or cyme. The fruit is an oblong or linear capsule slightly contracted at the base. Several species are cultivated for ornament, sometimes under the name cone-head. S. flaccidifolius yields the room, or maigyee dye, of India, etc. See room[2], and cut under stoma, 2.

strobilate (strob′i-lāt), v. i.; pret. and pp. strobilated, ppr. strobilating. [< strobile + -ate[2].] To form or develop strobiles; be or become a strobile; effect strobilation.

strobilation (strob-i-lā′shon), n. [< strobilate + -ion.] 1. Formation or production of strobiles; metameric division of a scyphistoma or hydra tuba into medusæ.—2. Gemmation of the successive links or joints of a tapeworm; also, the transverse fission of various worms.

strobile (strob′il), n. [= F. strobile = G. strobel, a pine-cone, < LL. strobilus, a pine-cone, < Gr. στρόβιλος, anything twisted, a pine-cone, a top, sea-snail, whirlpool, twist or turn, etc., < στρέφειν, turn, twist, spin.] 1. In bot., a cone (which see, and cuts under Lepidostrobus and pericarp). Also strobilus.

With reference to fructification, the form of Lycopodites Milleri renders it certain that it must have borne strobiles at the ends of its branchlets, or some substitute for these, and not naked spore-cases like those of Psilophyton. Dawson, Geol. Hist. of Plants, p. 101.

2. In zoöl., a strobila. Quain, Med. Dict., p. 1587.

strobiliferous (strob-i-lif'e-rus), a. [< L. strobilus (see strobile, 2) + ferre = E. bear[1].] In zoöl., bearing a strobile or chain of zooids: as, the strobiliferous stage of an acaleph or a worm.

strobiliform (strō-bil'i-fôrm), a. [< L. strobilus (see strobile) + forma, form.] In bot. and zoöl., having the form or character of a strobile.

strobiline (strob'i-lin), a. [< Gr. στροβίλινος, of or like a pine-cone, < στρόβιλος, a pine-cone: see strobila.] Of or pertaining to a strobile or strobiles; strobiliform; strobilaceous.

strobilite† (strob'i-līt), n. [< Gr. στρόβιλος, a pine-cone, + -ite[2].] A fossil pine-cone, or something supposed to be the fruit of a coniferous tree.

strobilization (strob″i-li-zā'shọn), n. [< strobile + -ize + -ation.] Same as strobilation.

The second mode of reproduction [of Scyphistoma], the process of strobilization, begins later.
Claus, Zoöl. (trans.), p. 256.

strobiloid (strob'i-loid), a. [< Gr. στρόβιλος, a pine-cone, + εἶδος, form.] Like a strobile; strobiliform. as, strobiloid gemmation; strobiloid buds. Encyc. Brit.

strobilophagous (strob-i-lof'a-gus), a. [< NL. Strobilophaga (Vieillot, 1816), a genus of birds (the same as Pinicola, q. v.), < Gr. στρόβιλος, a pine-cone, + φαγεῖν, eat.] Feeding upon pine-cones, as a bird.

Strobilosaura (strō-bī-lō-sâ'rạ), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. στρόβιλος, a pine-cone, + σαῦρα, a lizard.] A former superfamily of Lacertilia, having a fleshy inextensile tongue, eyelids, developed limbs, and acrodont or pleurodont dentition. It included the families Agamidæ and Iguanidæ. Also Strobilosauria.

strobilosauran (strō-bī-lō-sâ'rạn), a. and n. [< Strobilosaura + -an.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the Strobilosaura; agamoid or iguanoid.

II. n. A member of the Strobilosaura.

Also strobilosaurian.

strobilure (strob'i-lūr), n. [< NL. Strobilurus.] A lizard of the genus Strobilurus.

Strobilurus (strob-i-lū'rus), n. [NL. (Wiegmann), < Gr. στρόβιλος, a pine-cone, + οὐρά, tail.] A genus of South American iguanoid lizards, having the tail ringed with spinose scales (whence the name). S. torquatus is the Brazilian strobilure.

strobilus (strō-bī'lus), n. Same as strobile, 1.

stroboscope (strob'ọ̈-skōp), n. [< Gr. στρόβος, a twisting or whirling round (< στρέφειν, turn, twist: see strobile), + σκοπεῖν, view.] An instrument used in the study of the periodic motion of a body, as one in rapid revolution or vibration, by illuminating it at frequent intervals (for example, by electric sparks or by a beam of light made intermittent by passing through a moving perforated plate), or again by viewing it through the openings of a revolving disk: also used as a toy. The phenakistoscope and zoëtrope represent one form of stroboscope.

stroboscopic (strob-ọ̈-skop'ik), a. [< stroboscope + -ic.] Pertaining to the stroboscope, to observations made with it, or to the physical principle involved in its use. Nature, XXXIX. 451.

strocalt, strocklet, stroclet, n. See strokle.

strode (strōd). Preterit of stride.

stroft. An obsolete form of the preterit of strive.

stroglet, v. i. A Middle English form of struggle.

stroit, v. t. See stroy.

stroil (stroil), n. [Also stroyl; origin obscure.] The couch- or quitch-grass, Agropyron repens: applied especially to the white and worm-like roots. See cut under quitch-grass. Britten and Holland. [Prov. Eng.]

strokalt, n. See strokle.

stroke[1] (strōk), n. [Formerly also stroak; < ✶ME. strook, strok, strak, < AS. strāc (= MHG. G. streich, a stroke), < strīcan (pret. strāc), go, pass along, etc.: see strike, v., and cf. strike, n., strake[2], streak[2], n.] 1. A sweeping movement of a sustained object; the moving of something held or supported through a limited course; in mech., one of a series of alternating continuous movements of something back and forth over or through the same line: as, the strokes of an oar; a stroke of a pen in writing; the strokes of a file, a saw, a piston-rod, or a pump-handle; the length of stroke of a pendulum.

A few strokes of his muscular arms, and he is reached by the launch and swings himself up into her bows.
St. Nicholas, XVII. 834.

In a stroke or two the canoes were away out in the middle of the Scheldt. R. L. Stevenson, Inland Voyage, p. 11.

2. In rowing, specifically—(a) The manner or style of moving the oars or making strokes; the handling of the oars: as, to set the stroke for the race; the stroke was very rapid or exhausting. (b) The guiding-stroke: as, to pull stroke in a race. (c) The rower who sets the stroke; the stroke-oar or strokesman.—3. A line or mark impressed by or as if by a sweeping movement; hence, a part of an impression of any kind appearing as if so made: as, the hair-strokes, curved strokes, or up-and-down strokes of a letter; fine or coarse strokes in an engraving. See cut under type.

Carracci's strength, Correggio's softer line,
Paulo's free stroke, and Titian's warmth divine.
Pope, To Mr. Jervas, l. 38.

4. A throb; a pulsation; a beat.

For twenty strokes of the blood, without a word,
Linger'd that other, staring after him.
Tennyson, Lancelot and Elaine.

5. In musical instruments with a keyboard, the range of motion of a key.—6. A striking of one body or mass upon another; a sudden impact of an object moved or hurled through space; a blow or concussion, especially one administered or effected by design or in some definite manner: as, a stroke of the fist or of a sword; the strokes of a hammer; the stroke of a bat, a cue, or a mallet against a ball (in various games).

He smote a-boute hym grete strokes bothe on the lefte syde and on the right side. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), i. 118.

How now! what noise? That spirit's possess'd with haste
That wounds the unresisting postern with these strokes.
Shak., M. for M., iv. 2. 92.

7. A sudden or special effect produced upon an object as if by a striking movement; a result or consequence of the action of some rapidly working or efficient agency or cause: as, a stroke of lightning; a stroke of paralysis (for which the word stroke is often used absolutely, both colloquially and by physicians); the stroke of fate or of death: used in the Bible especially of a divine chastisement or judgment.

Remove thy stroke away from me. Ps. xxxix. 10.

When I did speak of some distressful stroke
That my youth suffer'd. Shak., Othello, i. 3. 157.

She'll make you shrink, as I did, with a stroke
But of her eye, Tigranes.
Beau. and Fl., King and No King, i. 1.

A stroke of cruel sunshine on the cliff.
Tennyson, Princess, iv.

8. A sound of striking; a resonant concussion; a giving out of sounds by striking: as, the strokes of a bell or a hammer; the clock is on (that is, on the point of giving out) the stroke of twelve.

His hour's upon the stroke.
Beau. and Fl., Thierry and Theodoret, iii. 2.

9. An effective movement, action, or expression; an energetic touch, effort, or exertion; a piece or course of activity: as, a good stroke of business; he will not do a stroke of work; a bold stroke for liberty.

The boldest strokes of poetry, when they are managed artfully, are those which most delight the reader.
Dryden, State of Innocence, Pref.

I am heartily glad to hear Mr. Cook has given the finishing stroke to your fine chapel.
Dr. Plot, in Letters of Eminent Men, I. 74.

Christianity [is] the greatest and happiest stroke ever yet made for human perfection.
M. Arnold, Literature and Dogma, iv.

10. A trait; a feature; a characteristic.

In its main strokes, it accords with the Aristotelean philosophy. Parker, Platonic Philosophy, 2d ed., p. 42.

I have the highest idea of the spiritual and refined sentiments of this reverend gentleman, from this single stroke in his character. Sterne, Tristram Shandy, i. 10.

11. A feat; a thing successfully done; a coup.

To wake the soul by tender strokes of art.
Addison, Cato, Prol.

But the advance in double column against the combined fleets was a stroke of genius as affairs stood.
The Academy, June 28, 1890, p. 437.

12†. Capacity for doing anything; effective ability; skill in action or manipulation.

Neither can any man be entertained as a Soldier that has not a greater stroke than ordinary at eating.
Dampier, Voyages, II. i. 71.

13†. Moving or controlling power; influence; sway; ascendancy; standing; importance.

They . . . which otherwise have any stroke in the disposition of such preferments. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v. 81.

In this new state of government, Appius was the man that bare the greatest stroke; he ruled the rost and swaied all the rest. Holland, tr. of Livy (ed. 1600), p. 109.

A stroke above, a degree above; of somewhat higher grade or quality than. [Colloq.]

She was a stroke above the other girls. Dickens.

Indoor stroke. See outdoor, 3.—Split stroke. See split.—Stroke of the glottis. See glottis.—To keep stroke, in rowing, to move the oars in unison.

stroke[1] (strōk), v. t.; pret. and pp. stroked, ppr. stroking. [< stroke[1], n.] To act as stroke or strokesman to; handle the stroke-oar for or of. [Recent.]

The Yale crew have lost their stroke. . . . He stroked the university crew to victory in six races.
Harper's Weekly, XXXIII. 571.

stroke[2] (strōk), v. t.; pret. and pp. stroked, ppr. stroking. [Also dial. (Sc.) strake, straik; < ME. stroken, straken, < AS. strācian (= D. strijken = OHG. streichōn, MHG. G. streichen, also freq. streicheln), stroke, causal form of strīcan, etc., go, strike: see strike, and cf. stroke[1]. Cf. Sw. stryka, Dan. stryge, Icel. strjūka, stroke (see stroll).] 1. To pass the hands or an instrument over (something) lightly or with little pressure; rub, or rub down, with a gentle movement in a single direction: an action often performed for soothing or caressing a person or an animal, also for smoothing or polishing an object, etc., and sometimes as a curative process.

She straiked my head, and she kembed my hair.
Alison Gross (Child's Ballads, I. 168).

And then another pause; and then,
Stroking his beard, he said again.
Longfellow, Wayside Inn, Second Interlude.

2. Hence, figuratively, to soothe; flatter; pacify; encourage. [Now prov. Eng.]

Such smooth soft language as each line Might stroake an angry god, or stay Jove's thunder. Carew, To my Rival.

3. To affect in some way by a rubbing action.

What a slovenly little villian art thou!
Why dost thou not stroke up thy hair?
Beau. and Fl., Woman-Hater, v. 5.

The ancient Chinese were very proud of the Hair of their Heads, letting it grow very long, and stroking it back with their Hands curiously. Dampier, Voyages, I. 407.

4. In masonry, to work the face of (a stone) in such a manner as to produce a sort of fluted surface.—To stroke the wrong way (of the hair, expressed or implied), to go against the grain of; ruffle or annoy, as by opposition: from the irritating effect on an animal, especially a cat, of rubbing up the fur by stroking it in the direction opposite to the way it lies.

stroke[2] (strōk), n. [< stroke[2], v.] An act of stroking; a stroking caress.

His white-man'd steeds, that bow'd beneath the yoke,
He cheer'd to courage with a gentle stroke.
Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Metamorph., xii. 108.

stroke[3]†. An obsolete form of the preterit of strike.

stroke-gear (strōk'gēr), n. In machine-tools having a reciprocating cutter, that part of the gearing by which the forward and backward strokes of the tool-slide are effected—the return stroke being usually made with much greater velocity than the cutting stroke.

stroke-hole (strōk'hōl), n. In golf, a hole at which, in handicapping, a stroke is given.

stroke-oar (strōk'ōr), n. 1. The aftermost oar in a rowboat, to the strokes of which those of the other oars must be conformed.—2. The oarsman who handles the stroke-oar; the strokesman.

stroke-oarsman (strōk'ōrz'man), n. One who handles the stroke-oar. In a whale-boat the stroke-oarsman is usually the lightest man of the crew. Also called after-oarsman.

stroker (strō'kėr), n. [< stroke[2] + -er[1].] 1. One who strokes; formerly, one who practised stroking as a method of cure.

Cures worked by Greatrix the stroker.
Warburton, Works, X. xxvii.

2†. A soothing flatterer; a fawning sycophant. [Rare.]

What you please, Dame Polish,
My lady's stroker.
B. Jonson, Magnetick Lady, iv. 1.

3. In printing, a form of wood or bone paper-folder with which the layer-on or feeder strokes or brings forward separate sheets of paper to the grippers of a printing-machine. [Eng.]—Stroker in, in printing, the workman who strokes or combs separate sheets of paper to the grippers of a printing-machine. [Eng.]

strokesman (strōks'man), n.; pl. strokesmen (-men). [< stroke's, poss. of stroke, + man.] A stroke-oar or stroke.

stroking (strō'king), n. [Formerly also stroaking; verbal n. of stroke[2], v.] 1. The act of passing the hand over a surface.—2. pl. The last milk drawn from a cow, pressed out by gentle stroking; strippings. [Prov. Eng.]

The cook entertained me with choice bits, the dairy-maid with stroakings.
Smollett, Roderick Random, xl. (Davies.)

strokle†, n. [Also strocle, strockle, strokal, strocal; appar. a var., simulating stroke, of strickle.] A glassmakers' shovel with recurved edges, for handling sand and other materials. Blount, Glossographia, p. 615.

stroll (strōl), v. i. [Early mod. E. also strowl, stroule, stroyle; appar. contracted from a ME. form strouklen*, < MD. struyckelen, D. struikelen, stumble, = MHG. strūcheln, G. straucheln, stumble, G. dial. (Swiss) strolchen, rove, freq. of OHG. strūhhōn, MHG. strūchen, stumble; = Icel. strjūka, stroke, rub, brush, flog, etc., go off, stray, = Dan. stryge = Sw. stryka, stroke, stroll, ramble; cf. Sw. stryker, dial. strykel, a stroller. Akin to struggle, q. v., but prob. not to straggle, which, with strake[1], etc., belongs to AS. strīcan, ME. striken, go, proceed, wander, = G. streichen, go (> streicher, a stroller), etc.: see strike, strake[1], straggle, etc., struggle.] 1. To saunter from point to point on foot; walk leisurely as inclination directs; ramble, especially for some particular purpose or aim.

An elderly dame dwells in my neighborhood, . . . in whose odorous herb garden I love to stroll sometimes, gathering simples. Thoreau, Walden, p. 149.

There was something soothing, something pleasant, in thus strolling along the path by the flowing river. Mrs. Oliphant, Poor Gentleman, xxxix.

2. To rove from place to place; go about deviously as chance or opportunity offers; roam; wander; tramp: used especially of persons who lead a roaming life in search of occupation or subsistence.

In 1703, "3 strowling Gipsies are ordered down to Huntington to be Tryed for Robbing two Women." Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, II. 222.

He turned strolling player; but his face and figure were ill suited to the boards. Macaulay, Goldsmith.

3. To turn in different directions; veer or glance about; rove, as the eyes. [Rare.]

The am'rous Eyes thus always go
A-stroling for their Friends below.
Prior, Alma, ii.

=Syn. 1 and 2. Saunter, Wander, etc. See ramble, v.

stroll (strōl), n. [< stroll, v.] 1. A wandering along or about; a leisurely walk; a saunter.

Bright days, when a stroll is my afternoon wont,
And I meet all the people I do know or don't.
F. Locker, Piccadilly.

2†. A stroller.

We'll entertain no mountebanking stroll,
No piper, fiddler, tumbler through small hoops,
No ape-carrier, baboon-bearer.
Middleton and Rowley, Spanish Gypsy, ii. 1.

3. A narrow strip of land. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

stroller (strō'lėr), n. [< stroll + -er[1].] One who strolls; a wanderer; a straggler; a vagabond; especially, an itinerant performer.

When strolers durst presume to pick your purse.
Dryden, Fifth Prol. to Univ. of Oxford.

He had been stolen away when he was a child by a gipsy, and had rambled ever since with a gang of those strollers up and down several parts of Europe.
Addison, Sir Roger and the Gipsies.

We allow no strollers or vagrants here.
Scott, Heart of Mid-Lothian, xxxii.

strom[1]†, n. A Middle English form of stream.

strom[2] (strom), n. [Origin obscure.] An instrument to keep the malt in the vat. Bailey, 1731. [Prov. Eng.]

stroma (strō'mą), n.; pl. stromata (-mą-tą). [NL., < L. stroma, < Gr. στρῶμα (στρωματ-), a covering, a coverlet, < στρωννύναι, στορεννύναι, spread, spread out, strew: see strew, stratum.] 1. In anat.: The sustentacular tissue or substance of a part or organ, usually of connective tissue.—2. In bot.: (a) In fungi, a variously shaped more or less continuous layer of cellular tissue, in which perithecia or other organs of fructification are embedded. Sometimes called receptacle. See cut under ergot. (b) In vegetable histology, the solid matter remaining after all the fluid has been expressed from protoplasm. Goodale.—Cancer stroma, the interlacing connective-tissue framework containing the alveoli of cancer-cells.—Intertubular stroma, the connective-tissue framework which supports the tubules of the kidney, and which contains the blood-vessels, lymphatics, nerves, etc.—Stroma fibrin, fibrin formed from the stroma of the blood-corpuscles.—Stroma of red blood-corpuscles, that part of those corpuscles which remains after the hemoglobin is removed.—Stroma of the ovary, the connective tissue of the ovary. Formerly the ova were supposed to originate in this stroma. They are, however, derived from the investing cell-layer or germ-epithelium of the ovary, from which multitudinous cells, some of them to become ova, penetrate the stroma.

Stromateidæ (strō-ma-tē'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stromateus + -idæ.] A family of acanthopterygian fishes, typified by the genus Stromateus, related to the scombroids and carangoids. They have large dentigerous or sacciform gill-rakers on the last branchial arch, extending into the esophagus; a single long dorsal fin with a few spines in front; and the ventrals, when present, generally under the pectorals, but in the typical forms more or less reduced, or absent. They are small fishes of most warm seas, of about 6 genera and 25 species, divided into Stromateinæ and Centrolophinæ. Also Stromateina, as a division of Scombridæ.

stromateine (strō-mat'ē-in), a. and n. [< Stromateus + -ine[1].] I. a. Of, or having characters of, the Stromateidæ.

II. n. A fish of the family Stromateidæ.

stromateoid (strō-mat'ē-oid), a. and n. [< Stromateus + -oid.] Same as stromateine.

Stromateoides (strō-ma-tē-oi'dēz), n. [NL. (Bleeker, 1857), < Stromateus + Gr. εἶδος, form.] A genus of stromateoid fishes, with restricted branchial apertures. S. sinensis is the white and S. cinereus the gray pomfret. See cut under pomfret.

Stromateus (strō-mat'ē-us), n. [NL. (Linnæus, 1748), < Gr. στρωματεύς, a coverlet, a bag for bedclothes (in pl. patchwork), a kind of fish, < στρῶμα (στρωματ-), a coverlet or spread (in allusion to the color of the typical species, supposed to resemble that of a spread or carpet): see stroma.] The typical genus of the family Stromateidæ, in which the ventral fins are lost in the adult, the caudal peduncle is not keeled, and the gill-membranes are free from the isthmus. There are a number of species, of tropical to warm temperate seas. S. fiatola is found in the Mediterranean. S. (Poronotus) triacanthus, of the Atlantic coast of the United States, is variously called butter-fish, harvest-fish, and dollar-fish. (See cut under butter-fish.) A similar species is S. alepidotus (Peprilus paru); another is S. (Palometa) simillimus of the Californian coast, known in the markets of San Francisco as the pompano.

stromatic[1] (strō-mat'ik), a. [< stroma(t-) + -ic.] In anat., physiol., and bot., of the nature of a stroma; resembling a stroma; stromatous.

stromatic[2] (strō-mat'ik), a. [< Gr. Στρώματα, a false reading for Στρωματεῖς, i. e. 'patchwork,' 'miscellany,' the title of a work by Clement of Alexandria; pl. of στρωματεύς, a coverlet: see Stromateus.] Miscellaneous; composed of different kinds. [Rare.]

stromatiform (strō'mą-ti-fôrm), a. [< NL. stroma(t-), q. v., + L. forma, form.] In bot., having the form of a stroma.

Stromatopora (strō-mą-top'ō-rą), n. [NL. (De Blainville, 1830), < Gr. στρῶμα(τ-), a covering, + πόρος, pore.] 1. The typical genus of Stromatoporidæ.—2. [l. c.] A member of this genus.

Stromatoporidæ (strō-mą-tō-por'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stromatopora + -idæ.] A family of hydrocorallines, typified by the genus Stromatopora. They are all of Paleozoic age. Also Stromatoporoidea.

stromatoporoid (strō-mą-top'ō-roid), a. and n. [< Stromatopora + -oid.] I. a. Pertaining to the Stromatoporidæ, or having their characters.

II. n. A member of the Stromatoporidæ.

stromatous (strō'mą-tus), a. [< stroma(t-) + -ous.] 1. Of or pertaining to stroma.—2. In bot., bearing or producing a stroma.

stromb (strom), n. [< NL. Strombus.] A conch of the family Strombidæ, and especially of the genus Strombus; a wing-shell; a fountain-shell. The best-known stromb is S. gigas, whose delicate pink shell is used for cameo-cutting, and also ground up in the manufacture of some fine kinds of porcelain, for which purposes it is said that 300,000 were imported into England in one year from the Bahamas. Another well-known species is S. pugilis, so called from the red, as if bloody, mouth. See also cut under wing-shell.

A Wing-shell or Stromb (Strombus pugilis).

Strombidæ (strom'bi-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Strombus + -idæ.] A family of tænioglossate siphonostomatous pectinibranchiate gastropods, typified by the genus Strombus; the strombs or wing-shells. The animal has an elongate annulated muzzle. The eyes are highly developed, at the ends of thick elongated peduncles, from which the inner sides of the tentacles, when present, originate. The foot is compressed, rather small, and adapted for leaping. The shell is mostly obconic, with a rather short conic spire and an elongate and narrow aperture; a horny claw-like operculum, serrated along the outer margin, is generally developed. Numerous species live in tropical seas, and some of them attain a large size. The largest is Strombus gigas, the giant conch of the West Indies, much used for cameos, and also as an ornament, especially around fountains, whence it is known as the fountain-shell. The family is divided into Strombinæ and Seraphyinæ. See cuts under Rostellaria, scorpion-shell, and stromb.

Strombidium (strom-bid'i-um), n. [NL. (Claparède and Lachmann, 1859), < Strombus + Gr. dim. -ιδιον.] A genus of peritrichous ciliate infusorians, of the family Halteriidæ. These interesting animalcules inhabit both salt and fresh water, and, though there are no springing-hairs, they are noted for such activity and energy of movement that their examination is difficult. They are free-swimming, of globose or turbinate form, with eccentric terminal oral aperture associated with a spiral wreath of erect cirri; the nucleus and contractile vacuole are conspicuous. Numerous species are described.

strombiform (strom'bi-fôrm), a. [< NL. strombus + L. forma, form.] Shaped like a wing-shell; having the form of a stromb; belonging or related to the Strombidæ.

strombine (strom'bin), a. and n. [< Strombus + -ine[1].] I. a. Of, or having characters of, the Strombidæ; stromboid.

II. n. A stromboid; a gastropod of the family Strombidæ.

strombite (strom'bīt), n. [< stromb + -ite[2].] A fossil stromb, or some similar shell.

stromboid (strom'boid), a. and n. [< stromb + -oid.] I. a. Resembling a stromb; pertaining or related to the Strombidæ; strombiform.

II. n. A strombine or stromb.

Strombuliform Pods.
a. Of Medicago polymorpha. b. Of Medicago ciliaris. c. Of Medicago intexta.

strombuliform (strom'-bū-li-fôrm), a. [< NL. strombulus*, dim. of strombus*, a top (see Strombus), + L. forma, form.] 1. In geol., formed like a top.—2. In bot., twisted or coiled into the form of a screw or helix, as the legumes of the screw-bean, some species of Medicago, etc.

Strombus (strom'bus), n. [NL. (Linnæus, 1758), < L. strombus, a kind of spiral snail, < Gr. στρόμβος, a top, a pine-cone, a snail, anything twisted or whorled, < στρέφειν, twist, turn: see strobile.] The typical genus of Strombidæ, formerly conterminous with the family, now restricted to such species as the West Indian giant stromb, S. gigas; the wing-shells, fountain-shells, or strombs. They are active, predatory, and carnivorous marine shells, much used for ornamental purposes. Also called Gallus. See cut at stromb.

stromeyerine (strō'mī-ėr-in), n. [As stromeyer(ite) + -ine[2].] Same as stromeyerite.

stromeyerite (strō'mī-ėr-īt), n. [Named after Fr. Stromeyer, a German chemist and mineralogist (died 1835).] A sulphid of silver and copper occurring in crystals near chalcocite in form, also massive. It has a dark steel-gray color and metallic luster.

strommell†, n. An obsolete form of strammel.

strond†, n. An obsolete form of strand[1].

strong[1] (strông), a. [Sc. strang; < ME. strong, ★stronge, strang (compar. strenger, strengere), < AS. strang, strong (compar. strengra, strængra), strong, mighty, = OS. strang = MD. strenge, strengh, D. streng = MLG. LG. strenge = OHG. strang, strangi, strengi, MHG. strenge, G. streng, hard, rigid, severe, strict, = Icel. strangr = Sw. sträng = Dan. streng, strong; connections uncertain; perhaps related to string. Cf. L. stringere, draw tight (see stringent, strain[1], strict); Gr. στραγγός, tightly twisted, στραγγάλη, a halter, etc. (see strangle). No connection with stark[1]. Hence strength, strengthen, etc.] 1. Possessing, exerting, or imparting force or energy, physical or moral, in a general sense; powerful; forcible; effective; capable; able to do or to suffer.

Ther-fore worschip god, bothe olde and 3ong,
To be in body and soule yliche stronge.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 304.

What can be strong enough to resist those charms which neither innocency, nor wisdom, nor power are sufficient security against? Stillingfleet, Sermons, II. iii.

Know how sublime a thing it is
To suffer and be strong.
Longfellow, Light of Stars.

When a man is able to rise above himself, only then he becomes truly strong. J. F. Clarke, Self-Culture, p. 368.

2. Having vital force or capability; able to act effectively; endued with physical vigor; used absolutely, physically powerful; robust; muscular: as, a strong body; a strong hand or arm.

And he was a moche knyght, and a stronge oute of mesure. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 164.

Out of the eater came forth meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness. Judges xiv. 14.

Of two persons who have had, the one the education of a gentleman, the other that of a common sailor, the first may be the stronger, at the same time that the other is the hardier. Bentham, Introd. to Principles of Morals, vi. 9.

3. Having means for exerting or resisting force; provided with adequate instrumentalities; powerful in resources or in constituent parts: as, a strong king or kingdom; a strong army; a strong corporation or mercantile house.

Whan the kynge Brangore was come to Eastrangore, his stronge place, . . . he dide it stuffe with knyghtes and vitaile. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 247.

He grewe stronge, and in shorte space got to himselfe a greate name. Spenser, State of Ireland.

At last, nigh tir'd, a castle strong we fand,
The utmost border of my native land.
Fairfax, tr. of Tasso's Godfrey of Boulogne, iv. 55.

4. Having or consisting of a large number, absolutely or relatively; numerically forcible or well provided: usually implying also some special element of strength in some or all of the units composing the number: as, a strong detachment of troops; a strong political party.

Hym thoughte he was nat able for to speede,
For she was strong of freendes.
Chaucer, Doctor's Tale, l. 135.

5. Of specified numerical force; having so many constituent members: applied to armies, and sometimes to other bodies of men, or to animals.

First demand of him how many horse the duke is strong. Shak., All's Well, iv. 3. 149.

The rebels at Drumclog were eight or nine thousand strong. Swift, Mem. of Capt. Creichton.

6. Exerting or capable of characteristic force; powerful in the kind or mode of action implied; specifically, forceful or efficient: as, a strong painter or actor; a strong voice; strong eyes.

His mother was a witch, and one so strong
That could control the moon, make flows and ebbs.
Shak., Tempest, v. 1. 269.

I was stronger in prophecy than in criticism. Dryden.

A solitary shriek, the bubbling cry
Of some strong swimmer in his agony.
Byron, Don Juan, ii. 53.

7. Vigorous in exercise or operation; acting in a firm or determined manner; not feeble or vacillating: used of the mind or any of its faculties: as, a strong-minded person; a strong intellect, memory, judgment, etc.

Divert strong minds to the course of altering things. Shak., Sonnets, cxv.

8. Possessing moral or mental force; firm in character, knowledge, conviction, influence, or the like; not easily turned, resisted, or refuted: as, a strong candidate; a strong reasoner.

Pray that ye may be strong in honesty,
As in the use of arms.
Fletcher (and another), False One, iv. 3.

They were very diligent, plain, and serious; strong in Scripture, and bold in profession. Penn, Rise and Progress of Quakers, i.

He wants to show the party that he too can be a "Strong Man" on a pinch. The Nation, XXX. 1.

9. Marked by force or vigor of performance; done, executed, produced, or uttered energetically; effected by earnest action or effort; strenuous; stressful; urgent.

Anthony wered with strong besinesse
The Erle of Faborugh.
Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 2495.

When he had offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears. Heb. v. 7.

The ears of the people they have therefore filled with strong clamour. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, iv. 4.

10. Marked by force of action or movement; vigorously impelled or sent forth; impetuous; violent; vehement: as, a strong wind; strong tides; strong breathing.

If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft.
Shak., Lucrece, l. 835.

When they came to the great river, they were carried over by one Ludham, . . . the stream being very strong. Winthrop, in New England's Memorial, p. 170, note.

11. Firm in substance or texture; capable of resisting physical force; not weak; not easily broken, rent, or destroyed: said of material things.

His bones are as strong pieces of brass. Job xl. 18.

The graven flowers that wreathe the sword
Make not the blade less strong.
Whittier, My Psalm.

12. Solid.

Ye . . . are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat [solid food, R. V.]. Heb. v. 12.

13. Firmly fixed or constituted; having inherent force or validity; hard to affect or overcome; sound; stable; settled: as, a strong constitution or organization (of body, mind, government, etc.); strong arguments, reasons, or evidence; to take a strong hold, or get a strong advantage; a strong project.

In the fear of the Lord is strong confidence. Prov. xiv. 26.

Ye strong foundations of the earth. Micah vi. 2.

14. Vigorous or extreme in kind; specifically, distinct or exceptional; bold; striking; effective; forceful; conspicuous: as, strong invectives; a strong attraction.

And Merlyn, that full of stronge arte was, yede hem aboute, and cleped the kynge as they weren sette, and shewed hym the voyde place. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), i. 60.

On our ground of grief
Rise by day in strong relief
The prophecies of better things.
Whittier, Astræa at the Capitol.

15. Intense or thorough in quality; having a high degree of the proper specific character; not mild, weak, dull, insipid, or ineffective: as, strong drink; strong tea; a strong infusion; strong lights and shadows; a strong color.

So is it fulle of Dragounes, of Serpentes, and of other venymous Bestes that no man dar not passe, but zif it be strong Wyntre. Mandeville, Travels, p. 266.

This is strong physic, signior,
And never will agree with my weak body.
Fletcher (and another), Love's Cure, iii. 2.

By mixing such powders we are not to expect strong and full white, such as is that of paper.
Newton, Opticks, I. ii. 5.

16. Intense or intensified in degree; existing in great amount or force; forcibly impressive to feeling or sensation: used of either active or passive qualities: as, strong love or devotion; a strong flavor or scent.

Is it possible . . . you should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir Rowland's youngest son? Shak., As you Like it, i. 3. 28.

Nor was her heart so small
That one strong passion should engross it all.
Crabbe, Works, IV. 83.

17. Forcibly offensive in quality; repellent to sense or sensation; ill-tasting or ill-smelling; rank; rancid; tainted.

They say poor suitors have strong breaths; they shall know we have strong arms too. Shak., Cor., i. 1. 61.

18. In com., specifically, firm; favorable to gain; steadily good or advancing; active; profitable: as, a strong market; strong prices; to do a strong business.—19. In gram., inflected—(a) as a verb, by a change of the radical vowel instead of by regular syllabic addition: opposed to weak: thus, find (found), speak (spake or spoke, spoken), strike (struck, stricken), and swim (swam, swum) are strong verbs; (b) as a noun or an adjective, with fuller retention of older case-distinctions: thus, German Buch is called of strong declension, and Held of weak. Strong and weak are purely fanciful terms, introduced by J. Grimm; they belong properly to Germanic words alone, but are occasionally applied to similar phenomena in other languages also.

20. In photog., same as dense, 3.—Strong arm or hand, figuratively, great power or force; forcible or violent means; overpowering vigor; the force of arms: as, to overcome opposition with a strong arm; "a strong hand," Ex. vi. 1.

It was their meaning to take what they needed by strong-hand. Raleigh.

Strong box, a strongly made case or chest for the preservation of money and other things of great value in small compass.—Strong double refraction, in optics. See refraction, 1.—Strong drink, election, place. See the nouns.—Strong faints. See faint, 2.—Strong room, a fire-proof and burglar-proof apartment in which to keep valuables.—Strong water. (a) Distilled spirit of any sort: generally in the plural: as, a draught of strong waters.

In the time of our fast, two of our landmen pierced a rundlet of strong water, and stole some of it.
Winthrop, Hist. New England, I. 4.

(b) Aqua fortis, or some other strong biting acid.

Metals themselves do receive in readily strong-waters; and strong-waters do readily pierce into metals and stones; and . . . [some] strong-waters will touch upon gold, that will not touch upon silver. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 800.

=Syn. 2. Sturdy, Stout, etc. (see robust); hardy, sinewy.—3. Potent.—11. Tenacious, tough.—13. Impregnable.—14. Vivid.—15. Pungent, sharp.

strong[1] (strông), adv. [< ME. strong, stronge; < strong[1], a.] Strongly; very; exceedingly. [Obsolete except in the slang phrase below.]

I will to-morowe go to an Abbey, and feyne me stronge sike. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), i. 52.

To go or come it strong, to do a thing with energy and perseverance. [Slang.]

strong[2]†. An obsolete past participle of string. Spenser, Virgil's Gnat, l. 16.

strong-back (strông'bak), n. Naut.: (a) A piece of wood or iron over the windlass, to trice the chain up to when the windlass is to be used for any purpose. (b) A spar across boat-davits, to which the boat is secured at sea.

strongbark (strông'bärk), n. A tree or shrub of the boraginaceous genus Bourreria, which belongs to the West Indies and tropical America. B. Havanensis, one of the two species which extend into Florida, is a small tree or shrub with a hard, fine, and beautiful wood of a brown color streaked with orange; the larger trees, however, are hollow and defective.

strong-barred† (strông'bärd), a. Strongly barred; tightly fastened. Shak., K. John, ii. 1. 370.

strong-based† (strông'bāst), a. Strongly or firmly based. Shak., Tempest, v. 1. 46.

strong-besieged† (strông'bē-sējd″), a. Strongly besieged. Shak., Lucrece, l. 1429.

strong-bonded† (strông'bon″ded), a. Strongly bound or secured; made strongly binding. Shak., Lover's Complaint, l. 279. [Rare.]

strong-fixed† (strông'fikst), a. Strongly fixed; firmly established. Shak., 1 Hen. VI., ii. 5. 102.

stronghand† (strông'hand'), n. Violence; force; power: a contraction of the phrase by the strong hand. See strong arm or hand, under strong.

stronghold (strông'hōld), n. A fastness; a fort; a fortified place; a place or position of security: often used figuratively, and formerly as two words.

David took the strong hold of Zion. 2 Sam. v. 7.

strong-knit (strông'nit), a. Strongly or well knit; firmly joined or compacted.

For strokes received, and many blows repaid,
Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength.
Shak., 3 Hen. VI., ii. 3. 4.

strongle (strong'gl), n. A strongyle. T. S. Cobbold.

strongly (strông'li), adv. [< ME. strongly, strongely, strongliche, strangliche; < AS. stranglīce, strong, < stranglic, strong, < strang, strong: see strong[1] and -ly[2].] In a strong manner, in any sense of the word strong.

That Cyter [Cassay] is strongliche enhabyted with peple, in so moche that in on House men maken 10 Housholdes. Mandeville, Travels, p. 209.

Fly, fly; delay
Doth oft the strongliest founded Plots betray.
J. Beaumont, Psyche, l. 44.

strongman's-weed (strông'manz-wēd), n. See Petiveria.

strong-minded (strông'mīn″ded), a. 1. Having a strong or vigorous mind.—2. Not in accordance with the female character or manners; unfeminine: applied ironically to women claiming the privileges and opportunities of men.

strong-mindedness (strông'mīn″ded-nes), n. The character or quality of being strong-minded, especially as used of women.

strong-tempered† (strông'tem″pėrd), a. Made strong by tempering; strongly tempered. Shak., Venus and Adonis, l. 111.

strongylate (stron'ji-lāt), a. [< strongyle + -ate[1].] Having the character of a strongyle, as a sponge-spicule; simply spicular, with blunt ends. Sollas.

strongyle (stron'jil), n. [< NL. strongylus (see Strongylus), < Gr. στρογγύλος, round, spherical, < *στράγγειν, draw tight: see strangle.] 1. A spicule of the monaxon biradiate type, with each end rounded off; a strongylate sponge-spicule. It is simply a rhabdus whose two ends are blunt instead of sharp. A strongyle blunt at one end and sharp at the other becomes a strongyloxea. Sollas.

2. In Vermes, a nematoid or threadworm of the genus Strongylus in a broad sense; a strongylid. There are many species. See Strongylidæ.

Strongylia (stron-jil'i-ą), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. στρογγύλος, round, spherical: see strongyle.] A suborder of chilognath myriapods, with manducatory mouth, and sexual organs opening in the anterior part of the body. It includes the families Polyxenidæ, Polydesmidæ, Iulidæ, and Lysiopetalidæ. H. C. Wood, 1865.

strongylid (stron'ji-lid), a. and n. Same as strongyloid.

Strongylidæ (stron-jil'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Strongylus + -idæ.] A family of endoparasitic nematoid worms, typified by the genus Strongylus, and containing about 10 other genera. They are formidable parasites, sometimes attaining a length of 3 feet, though usually much smaller than this. They are cylindrical, and more or less elongated and filiform; the mouth is oval, circular, or triangular, and armed or unarmed; and the tail of the male is furnished with a bursa or pouch, or a pair of membranous lobes, and usually a pair of protruding spicules. The female is commonly larger than the male. Strongylus bronchialis is the lung-strongle of man: the female is an inch long, the male half that size. S. armatus infests the horse; S. micrurus and S. contortus are found in ruminants, as cattle and sheep. Eustrongylus gigas is the giant strongyle of the kidney, the largest known endoparasite of this kind, the male being about a foot long, the female a yard or more. Strongylus quadridentatus or Sclerostoma duodenale infests the human intestine, and a similar strongyle, Syngamus trachealis, causes the gapes in poultry, occurring in great numbers in the air-passages.

Strongylocentrotus (stron″ji-lō-sen-trō'tus), n. [NL. (Brandt), < Gr. στρογγύλος, round, spherical, + κεντρωτός, < κέντρον, point, center: see center[1].] A genus of regular sea-urchins, Common New England Sea-urchin (Strongylocentrotus drobachiensis).

of the family Echinidæ. One of the commonest and best-known sea-urchins of the Atlantic coast of the United States is S. drobachiensis.

strongyloid (stron'ji-loid), a. and n. [< strongyle + -oid.] I. a. Like a strongyle; related to the genus Strongylus; belonging to the Strongylidæ.

II. n. A strongyle, or some similar nematoid.

strongyloxea (stron-ji-lok'sē-ä), n.; pl. strongyloxeæ (-ē). [NL., < Gr. στρογγύλος, round, + ὀξύς, sharp.] A strongyle blunt at one end and sharp at the other; a strongyloxeate sponge-spicule. Encyc. Brit., XXII. 417.

strongyloxeate (stron-ji-lok'sē-āt), a. [As strongyloxea + -ate[1].] Blunt at one end and sharp at the other, as a sponge-spicule of the rhabdus type; having the character of a strongyloxea. Sollas.

Strongylus (stron'ji-lus), n. [NL., < Gr. στρογγύλος, round, spherical, < στράγγειν*, draw tight, squeeze: see strangle.] 1. The typical genus of the family Strongylidæ. Müller, 1780.—2. [l. c.; pl. strongyli (-lī).] In sponges, a strongyle.

strontia (stron'shi-ä), n. [NL. (Klaproth), < strontium, q. v.] The monoxid of strontium, SrO, an alkaline earth which when pure is an infusible grayish-white powder having an acrid burning taste. It is soluble in water with evolution of heat, slaking into a hydroxid, $Sr(OH)_2$, which is quite soluble and deposits from its solution crystals of the hydrate containing eight molecules of water of crystallization. The hydroxid has a strong alkaline reaction, and is more caustic than lime, but less so than the alkalis. Strontia does not occur native, but is prepared by igniting the carbonate, the mineral strontianite.

strontian (stron'shi-an), n. and a. [< strontium + -an.] I. n. Native strontium carbonate; strontianite; hence, also, strontia, and sometimes strontium. [Indefinite and rare.]

II. a. Pertaining to or containing strontia or strontium.—Strontian yellow, a color formed by adding potassium chromate to a solution of a strontium salt.

strontianiferous (stron″shi-a-nif'e-rus), a. [< strontian + -i-ferous.] Containing strontian. Philos. Mag., 5th ser., XXV. 238.

strontianite (stron'shi-an-īt), n. [< Strontian + -ite[2].] Native strontium carbonate, a mineral that occurs massive, fibrous, stellated, and rarely in orthorhombic crystals resembling those of aragonite in form. It varies in color from white to yellow and pale green. It was first discovered in the lead-mines of Strontian, in Argyllshire, Scotland.

strontic (stron'tik), a. [< strontia + -ic.] Same as strontitic.

strontites (stron-tī'tēz), n. [NL., < stronti(um) + -ites.] Same as strontia: so named by Dr. Hope, who first obtained this earth from strontianite, or native carbonate of strontium.

strontitic (stron-tit'ik), a. [< NL. strontites + -ic.] Pertaining to or derived from strontia or strontium.

strontium (stron'shi-um), n. [NL., < Strontian, in Argyllshire, Scotland.] Chemical symbol, Sr; atomic weight, 87.62; specific gravity, 2.54. A pale yellow metal, less lustrous than barium, malleable, and fusible at a red heat. When heated in air, it burns with a bright flame to the oxid. It decomposes water at ordinary temperatures, evolving hydrogen, and uniting with the oxygen of the water to form the hydroxid. It does not occur native. The chief strontium minerals are the carbonate (strontianite) and the sulphate (celestite). Strontium also occurs as a silicate in the mineral brewsterite. It has been detected in the waters of various mineral springs, as well as in sea-water, and in the ashes of some marine plants. Salts of strontium are chiefly used in pyrotechny (imparting an intense red color to flames), and in sugar-refining.

strook† (strůk). An old preterit of strike. Pope, Iliad, xxi. 498.

stroot (strůt), v. An obsolete or dialectal form of strut[1].

strop (strop), n. [The older and more correct form of strap; < ME. strop, strope, < AS. stropp (= D. strop, etc.), < L. struppus, struppus, a strap: see strap.] 1. Same as strap. Specifically—2. A strap or strip of leather, thick canvas, or other flexible material, suitably prepared for smoothing the edge of a razor drawn over it while it is attached by one end and held in the hand by the other; hence also, by extension, a two-sided or four-sided piece of wood, with a handle and a casing, having strips of leather of differing surfaces affixed to two sides, and the two other sides, when (as more commonly) present, covered with coarser and finer emery or other abrasive powder for use in honing a razor.—3. Naut., same as strap, 1 (a).—4. In rope-making, a rope with an eye at each end, used in twisting strands.

strop (strop), v. t.; pret. and pp. stropped, ppr. stropping. [< strop, n.] To sharpen on or as if on a strop or strap.

Scarce are the gray-haired sires who strop their razors on the family Bible, and doze in the chimney-corner.
C. D. Warner, Backlog Studies, p. 2.

strope (strōp), n. A dialectal form of strap.

strophanthin (strō-fan'thin), n. [< Strophanthus + -in[2].] An active poisonous principle, said to be neither an alkaloid nor a glucoside, found in the seeds of Strophanthus hispidus.

Strophanthus (strō-fan'thus), n. [NL. (A. P. de Candolle, 1802), so called from the twisted and tailed lobes of the corolla; < Gr. στρόφος, a twisted band, a cord (< στρέφειν, turn, twist), + ἄνθος, flower.] A genus of dicotyledonous sympetalous plants, of the family Apocynaceæ, tribe Echitideæ. It is characterized by a glandular calyx; a funnel-shaped corolla with five tailed lobes and an ample throat, bearing about ten scales within, and including the long taper-pointed anthers; and an ovary of two distinct carpels, ripening into divergent follicles with seeds tailed at one end and extended at the other into a long plumose beak. There are about 25 species, natives of Asia and tropical Africa, with one, S. Capensis, in South Africa. They are small trees or shrubs or often climbers, either smooth or hairy, with opposite feather-veined leaves, and terminal cymes of handsome flowers which are either white, yellowish, orange, red, or purple. The seeds of several species or varieties in Africa yield arrow-poison: in western Africa S. hispidus affords the inée poison (see poison of Pahonias, under poison), in eastern Africa S. Kombe the kombe poison, and some species between Zanzibar and Somali-land the wanika poison. But S. Kombe is suspected to be a variety of S. hispidus, and the third species is probably the same. Since 1878 these seeds have excited great medical interest as a medium for the treatment of heart-disease, but their investigation is not complete. (See strophanthin.) Several species are cultivated under the name twisted-flower.

strophe (strō'fē), n. [< NL. strophe, < L. stropha, < Gr. στροφή, a turning round, a recurring metrical system, the movement of a chorus while turning in one direction in the dance, the accompanying rhythmical (musical and metrical) composition, < στρέφειν, turn, twist.] 1. In anc. pros.: (a) A system the metrical form of which is repeated once or oftener in the course of a poem; also, a stanza in modern poetry. In a narrower sense—(b) The former of two metrically corresponding systems, as distinguished from the latter or antistrophe. (c) The fourth part of the parabasis and first part of the epirrhematic syzygy. It is hymnic in character, as opposed to the scoptic tone of the epirrhema.—2. In bot., one of the spirals formed in phyllotaxy. [Rare or obsolete.]—Asclepiadean strophe. See Asclepiadean.

strophic (strof'ik), a. [< Gr. στροφικός, of or pertaining to a strophe, < στροφή, a strophe: see strophe.] Of or pertaining to a strophe or strophes; constituting strophes; consisting of strophes: as, strophic composition; strophic poems.

strophical (strof'i-kal), a. [< strophic + -al.] Same as strophic. Athenæum, No. 3300, p. 123.

strophiolate (strof'i-ō-lāt), a. [< strophiole + -ate[1].] In bot., bearing or furnished with a strophiole or something that resembles it.

strophiolated (strof'i-ō-lā-ted), a. [< strophiolate + -ed[2].] Same as strophiolate.

strophiole (strof'i-ōl), n. [< L. strophiolum, a small wreath or chaplet, dim. of strophium, < Gr. στρόφιον, a band, a breast-band, dim. of στρόφος, a twisted band, a braid, a cord, < στρέφειν, twist, turn.] In bot., an appendage produced from the hilum of certain seeds, of the same origin as a true aril, but less developed. Sometimes used interchangeably with caruncle, from which it clearly differs.

strophoid (strof'oid), n. [< F. strophoïde, < Gr. στρόφος, a twisted band, a cord.] 1. A nodal plane cubic curve which is the locus of a focus of a conic whose directrix and two tangents are given.—2. A curve which is the locus of intersections of two lines rotating uniformly with commensurable velocities. See also substrophoid.—Right strophoid, a strophoid symmetrical with respect to the line through the two centers of rotation.

Strophoid.

Strophostyles (strof-ō-stī'lēz), n. [NL. (Elliott, 1824), so called from the incurved style; < Gr. στρόφος, a twisted band, a cord, + στῦλος, a pillar.] A genus of leguminous plants, of the tribe Phaseoleæ. It is distinguished from the related genus Phaseolus, in which it is included by some authors, by capitate flowers with the keel and included style and stamens incurved but not spirally coiled, and followed by a commonly terete and straight pod with its scurfy or smooth seeds quadrate or oblong, not reniform. There are about 6 species, all natives of North America, including Mexico and the West Indies. Four species occur in the United States. They are tangled vines with prostrate or climbing stems, usually retrorsely hairy, bearing pinnate leaves of three leaflets, and usually long-stalked purplish clusters of a few sessile flowers. Two species, known as wild bean, both called Phaseolus helvolus by various authors, extend along the Atlantic coast northward to Long Island or farther, of which S. umbellata is a slender twiner of sandy fields, and S. helvola a commonly trailing plant extending west to South Dakota and to Texas. In Missouri on river-bottoms a high-climbing species, S. Missouriensis, sometimes reaches 30 feet. Another species, S. pauciflora, occurs in the southern and western United States. See Phaseolus.

strophulus (strof'ū-lus), n. [NL., dim. of strophus*, < Gr. στρόφος, a twisted band, a cord: see strophiole.] A papular eruption upon the skin, peculiar to infants, exhibiting a variety of forms, known popularly as red-gum, white-gum, tooth-rash, etc.

strossers† (stros'ėrz), n. [A var. of trossers, which is a variant of trousers: see trouscrs.] Same as trossers.

You rode like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off, and in your strait strossers. Shak., Hen. V., iii. 7. 57.

Sets his son a-horseback in cloth-of-gold breeches, while he himself goes to the devil a-foot in a pair of old strossers!
Middleton, No Wit Like a Woman's, ii. 1.

stroud[1] (stroud), n. [Also strowd; origin obscure.] A senseless or silly song. Jamieson. [Scotch.]

stroud[2] (stroud), n. [Also strowd; origin obscure.] 1. Same as strouding.—2. A blanket made of strouding.

Be pleased to give to the son of the Piankasha king these two strowds to clothe him.
Journal of Capt. Treat (1752), p. 52. (Bartlett.) strouding (strou'ding), n. [< stroud[1] + -ing[1].] Coarse warm cloth; a kind of blanketing used in trading with North American Indians.

Hazelnuts enough to barter at the nearest store for a few yards of blue strouding such as the Indians use.
The Century, XXXIII. 83.

stroup (stroup), n. [Also stroop; < ME. stroupe, strowpe, < Sw. strupe, the throat, gullet, = Norw. strupe, the throat, gullet, an orifice, = Dan. strube, the throat, gullet; cf. Icel. strjūpi, the trunk of the human body with the head cut off.] 1. The trachea or windpipe. [Obsolete and prov. Eng.]

He smote him in the helm, bakward he bare his stroupe.
Langtoft's Chronicle, p. 190. (Halliwell.)

2. A spout (of a tea-kettle, etc.). [Scotch.]

strout, v. An obsolete or provincial variant of strut[1]. Bacon.

strove (strōv). Preterit of strive.

strow (strō), v. t.; pret. strowed, pp. strowed or strown, ppr. strowing. An archaic form of strew.

strow†, a. [Cf. strow, strew.] Loose; scattered. [Rare and dubious.]

Nay, where the grass,
Too strow for fodder, and too rank for food,
Would generate more fatal maladies.
Lady Alimony, D 4 b. (Nares.)

strowd[1] (stroud), n. See stroud[1].

strowd[2], n. See stroud[2].

strowl†, v. i. An old spelling of stroll.

strown (strōn). A past participle of strow.

strowpe†, n. See stroup.

stroy†, v. t. [ME. stroyen, by apheresis from destroyen: see destroy.] To destroy. Middleton.

stroy†, n. [ME., < stroy, v.] Destruction.

stroyall† (stroi'âl), n. [< stroy, v., + obj. all.] One who destroys or wastes recklessly; a waster.

A giddy brain master, and stroyall his knave, Brings ruling to ruin, and thrift to her grave.
Tusser, Good Husbandly Lessons.

stroyer† (stroi'ėr), n. [< ME. stroyere, by apheresis from destroyer.] A destroyer.

The drake, stroyere of his owene kynde.
Chaucer, Parliament of Fowls, l. 360.

stroyl†, n. See stroil.

strub (strub), v. t. and i.; pret. and pp. strubbed, ppr. strubbing. [A dial. var. of strup*, var. of strip.] To rob, or practise robbery; strip of something: as, to strub a bird's nest. [Old and prov. Eng.]

Robert Coad . . . was convicted of "being a night-walker, and pilfering and strubbing in the night-time."
A. H. A. Hamilton, Quarter Sessions, p. 220.

★struck (struk). Preterit and past participle of strike.

strucken (struk'n). An old or dialectal past participle of strike.

★structural (struk'tū-ral), a. [< structure + -al.] 1. Of or pertaining to structure; constructional.

The structural differences which separate Man from the Gorilla and Chimpanzee.
Huxley, Man's Place in Nature, p. 123.

2. Concerned with structure or construction; constructive. [Rare.]

Chaucer . . . had a structural faculty which distinguishes him from all other English poets, his contemporaries.
Lowell, Study Windows, p. 254.

3. In biol.: (a) Of or pertaining to structure; morphological: as, structural characters; structural peculiarities. (b) Possessing or characterized by structure; structured; organized. —Structural botany. See botany (a).—Structural disease, a disease involving visible (gross or microscopic) changes in the tissues affected. Also called organic and contrasted with functional disease.—Structural geology, that branch of geology which has to do with the position and arrangement of the materials composing the crust of the earth, from the point of view of their composition, mode of aggregation, and relations of position, as determined by physical conditions, without special reference to paleontological characters. Nearly the same as stratigraphical geology, or stratigraphy. Also called geotectonic geology.

structuralization (struk″tū-ral-i-zā'shon), n. [< structuralize + -ation.] A making or keeping structural; the act of bringing into or maintaining in structural form or relation. Also spelled structuralisation. [Rare.]

There is the materialisation of motives as the basis of future function, the structuralisation of simple function as the step of an advance to a higher function.
Maudsley, Body and Will, p. 30.

structurally (struk'tū-ral-i), adv. In a ★structural manner; with regard to structure.

structure (struk'tūr), n. [< F. structure = Sp. Pg. estructura = It. struttura, < L. structura, a fitting together, adjustment, building, erection, a building, edifice, structure, < struere, pp. structus, pile up, arrange, assemble, build. Cf. construct, instruct, destroy, etc.] 1. The act of building or constructing; a building up; edification. [Obsolete or rare.]

This doon, the sydes make up with structure,
And footes VIII it hold in latitude.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 176.

His son builds on, and never is content
Till the last farthing is in structure spent.
J. Dryden, Jr., tr. of Juvenal's Satires, xiv. 116.

2. That which is built or constructed; an edifice or a building of any kind; in the widest sense, any production or piece of work artificially built up, or composed of parts joined together in some definite manner; any construction.

There stands a structure of majestic frame.
Pope, R. of the L., iii. 3.

The vaulted polygonal chapter-house is a structure peculiar to England.
C. H. Moore, Gothic Architecture, p. 168.

3. An organic form; the combination of parts in any natural production; an organization of parts or elements.

A structure which has been developed through long-continued selection. Darwin, Origin of Species, p. 131.

There can be no knowledge of function without a knowledge of some structure as performing function.
H. Spencer, Prin. of Biol., § 265.

4. Mode of building, construction, or organization; arrangement of parts, elements, or constituents; form; make: used of both natural and artificial productions.

Thy House, whose stately Structure so much cost.
Congreve, Imit. of Horace, II. xiv. 3.

The antistrophic structure [of Æschylus's odes] being perhaps a concession to fashion.
Quarterly Rev., CLXII. 174.

Specifically—(a) In biol., manner or mode of organization; construction and arrangement of tissues, parts, or organs as components of a whole organism; structural or organic morphology; organization: as, animal or vegetable structure; the structure of an animal or a plant; the structure of the brain, of a coral, etc.

Though structure up to a certain point [in the animal organism] is requisite for growth, structure beyond that point impedes growth. H. Spencer, Study of Sociol., p. 64.

(b) In geol., various characteristic features, considered collectively, of rocks and of rock-forming minerals, which features differ much in their nature and origin. Stratification, jointing, cleavage, and foliation are among the principal structural peculiarities of rock-masses, which are chiefly to be studied in the field. Some geologists would limit the term structure to petrographic phenomena of this kind, which have been designated as macroscopic rock-structures. The minuter structural details of rocks and their components are in part included under the name structure, and in part under that of texture. Thus, a rock may have a crystalline, granular, spherulitic, perlitic, etc., structure, or a flinty, earthy, glassy, etc., texture. But the usages of geologists differ in the employment of terms of this kind, and there can be no precise limit drawn separating textures from structures. In general, however, the structural peculiarities of a rock are those which specially interest the geologist; the textural belong more properly to the petrographer. Microstructures, or those details of structure belonging to the constituents of rocks which are in general not to be satisfactorily studied without the aid of the microscope, are peculiarly the field of observation of the petrographer. For macrostructures, see breccia, cleat[3], cleavage, 3, concretionary, fragmentary, foliation, 6, joint, 2, schist, slate[2] and slaty, and stratification; for microstructures and textures, see amygdaloidal, cryptocrystalline, crystalline, felsophyre, globulite, granitoid, granophyre and granophyric, holocrystalline, massive, 5, microcrystalline, microlith and microlithic, ocellar, pegmatitic, perlitic, porphyritic, scoriaceous, spherulitic, trachytic, vesicular, vitreous, and vitrophyre.

Viewed broadly, there are two leading types of structure among rocks—crystalline or massive, and fragmental.
A. Geikie, in Encyc. Brit., X. 229.

Banded, columnar, concentric, epidermal, fibrous, fluidal structure. See the adjectives.—Centric structure. See ocellar structure, under ocellar.—Flow-and-plunge structure. See flow[1].—Fluxion-structure. Same as fluidal structure.—Globulitic structure, a structure characterized by the predominance of those minute drop-like bodies called by Vogelsang globulites, which are the earliest and simplest forms of the devitrification process in a glassy component of a rock.—Granitoid structure, the structure of granite; a holocrystalline structure.—Tabular structure. See tabular.

structure (struk'tūr), v. t.; pret. and pp. structured, ppr. structuring. [< structure, n.] To form into a structure; organize the parts or elements of in structural form. [Rare.]

What degree of likeness can we find between a man and a mountain? . . . the one has little internal structure, and that irregular, the other is elaborately structured internally in a definite way.
H. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 186.

structureless (struk'tūr-les), a. [< structure + -less.] Without structure; devoid of distinct parts; unorganized; unformed; hence, lacking arrangement; informal; specifically, in biol., having no distinction of parts or organs; not histologically differentiated; not forming or formed into a tissue; homogeneous; amorphous.

structurely (struk'tūr-li), adv. [< structure + -ly[2].] In structure or formation; by construction. [Rare.]

These aggregates of the lowest order, each formed of physiological units united into a group that is structurely single. H. Spencer, Prin. of Biol., § 181.

structurist (struk'tūr-ist), n. [< structure + -ist.] One who makes structures; a builder. [Rare.]

struggle (strug'l), v. i.; pret. and pp. struggled, ppr. struggling. [Early mod. E. also stroggell, strogell; < ME. struglen, stroglen, strogelen; perhaps a weakened form of strokelen*, which may be a var. of stroukelen*, the supposed ME. orig. of E. stroll, < MD. struyckelen, D. struikelen = LG. strükeln = MHG. strücheln, G. straucheln, stumble: see stroll.] To put forth violent effort, as in an emergency or as a result of intense excitation; act or strive strenuously against some antagonistic force or influence; be engaged in an earnest effort or conflict; labor or contend urgently, as for some object: used chiefly of persons, but also, figuratively, of things.

Everie Merchant, viewing their limbs and wounds, caused other slaves to struggle with them, to trie their strength.
Capt. John Smith, True Travels, I. 29.

How nature and his honour struggle in him!
Beau. and Fl., Knight of Malta, ii. 5.

A brave man struggling in the storms of fate,
And greatly falling with a falling state!
Addison, Cato, Prol.

So saying, he took the boy, that cried aloud
And struggled hard. Tennyson, Dora.

The light struggled in through windows of oiled paper, but they read the word of God by it.
Emerson, Hist. Discourse at Concord.

So on and on I struggled, thro' the thick bushes and over logs. Grace Greenwood, Recollections of Childhood, p. 28.

=Syn. Strive, etc. (see attempt); toil.

struggle (strug'l), n. [< struggle, v.] A violent effort; a strenuous or straining exertion; a strenuous endeavor to accomplish, avoid, or escape something; a contest with some opposing force: as, a struggle to get free; the struggle of death; a struggle with poverty.

With great hurry and struggle [he] endeavoured to clap the cover on again. Bacon, Physical Fables, ii.

The long and fierce struggle between the Crown and the Barons had terminated. Macaulay, Hallam's Const. Hist.

=Syn. Endeavor, Effort, Exertion, Pains, Labor, Struggle. See strife. The above are in the order of strength.

struggler (strug'lėr), n. [< struggle + -er[1].] One who or that which struggles; one who strives or contends with violent effort.

struldbrug (struld'brug), n. [A made name.] In Swift's "Gulliver's Travels" ("Voyage to Laputa"), one of a small class of immortals or deathless persons in "Luggnagg," born with an indicative sign in the forehead, who after fourscore live on at public expense in the imbecility of extreme age.

strull (strul), n. [Origin obscure; cf. E. dial. stroil, strength, agility; cf. strut[2], a brace.] A bar so placed as to resist weight. Loudon.

strum (strum), v.; pret. and pp. strummed, ppr. strumming. [Prob. a var. of thrum with intensive prefix s (as in splash, plash, etc.): see thrum, drum.] I. intrans. To play unskilfully, or in a vulgar, noisy manner, on a stringed musical instrument of the lute or harp kind, as a guitar, banjo, or zither, or (by extension) on a pianoforte; thrum.

"Ah, there is Fred beginning to strum! I must go and hinder him from jarring all your nerves," said Rosamond. . . . Fred, having opened the piano, . . . was parenthetically performing "Cherry Ripe!" with one hand.
George Eliot, Middlemarch, xvi.

II. trans. 1. To play upon carelessly or unskilfully, as a stringed instrument; produce by rough manipulation of musical chords.—2. To produce a specified effect upon by strumming on a musical instrument.

To be stuck down to an old spinet to strum my father to sleep. Sheridan, School for Scandal, ii. 1.

strum (strum), n. [< strum, v.] A strumming; a careless or discordant performance on a stringed instrument.

We heard the occasional strum of a guitar.
The Century, XXXIX. 487.

★struma (strö'mä), n.; pl. strumæ (-mē). [NL., < L. struma, a scrofulous tumor, < struere, pile up, build: see structure.] 1. In pathol.: (a) Scrofula. (b) Goiter.—2. In bot., a cushion-like swelling or dilatation of or on an organ, as that at the extremity of the petiole of many leaves, or at one side of the base of the capsule in many mosses.

strumatic (strö-mat'ik), a. [< LL. strumaticus, pertaining to struma, < L. struma, struma: see struma.] Same as strumose.

strumiferous (strö-mif'e-rus), a. [< NL. struma, q. v., + L. ferre = E. bear[1].] In bot., bearing strumæ; strumose.

strumiform (strö'mi-fôrm), a. [< NL. struma + L. forma, form.] In bot., having the form or appearance of a struma.

strummer (strum'ėr), n. [< strum + -er[1].] One who strums; a careless or unskilful player on a stringed instrument. W. Black, House-boat, vi.

strumose, strumous (strö'mōs, -mus), a. [= OF. strumeus, estrumeux, < L. strumosus, characterized by the presence of struma, or of strumæ, < struma, struma: see struma.] 1. Scrofulous; of, pertaining to, resembling, or affected with struma.—2. In bot., bearing strumæ.

strumousness (strö'mus-nes), n. The state or character of being strumose or strumous.

strumpet (strum'pet), n. [< ME. strumpet, strompet, strumpett; origin unknown; perhaps orig. stropete* or strupete*, < OF. strupete*, vernacularly strupee*, < L. stuprata, fem. pp. of stuprare, debauch; cf. OF. strupe, stupre, debauchery, concubinage, < L. stuprum, debauchery, > stuprare (> It. strupare, stuprare = Sp. estrupar = Sp. Pg. estuprar), debauch; cf. Gr. στυφελίζειν, maltreat (see stuprum, stuprate). Cf. Ir. Gael. striopach, strumpet. The E. dial. strum, strumpet, is prob. an abbr. of strumpet.] A prostitute; a harlot; a bold, lascivious woman: also used adjectively.

Shamelesse strumpets, whose vncurbèd swing
Many poore soules vnto confusion bring.
Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 88.

The scarfed bark puts from her native bay,
Hugg'd and embraced by the strumpet wind.
Shak., M. of V., ii. 6. 16.

strumpet (strum'pet), v. t. [< strumpet, n.] 1. To make a strumpet of; bring to the condition of a strumpet. Shak., C. of E., ii. 2. 146. [Rare.] —2. To call or treat as a strumpet; give an ill name to; slander scurrilously.

With his untrue reports strumpet your fame.
Massinger.

strumstrum† (strum'strum), n. [Imitative reduplication of strum. Cf. tom-tom.] A rude musical instrument with strings. See the quotation.

The Strumstrum is made somewhat like a Cittern; most of those that the Indians use are made of a large Goad cut in the midst, and a thin board laid over the hollow, and which is fastened to the sides; this serves for the belly, over which the strings are placed. Dampier, Voyages, I. 127.

strumulose (strö′mū-lōs), a. [Dim. of strumose.] In bot., furnished with a small struma.

strung (strung). Preterit and past participle of string.

strunt[1] (strunt), v. i. [Prob. a nasalized form of strut.] To walk sturdily; walk with state; strut. [North. Eng. and Scotch.]

strunt[2] (strunt), n. [Origin obscure.] A bird's tail; also, the tail of any animal. Halliwell. [North. Eng.]

strunt[3] (strunt), n. [Origin obscure.] 1. Spirituous liquor, or a drink partly consisting of such liquor.

Syne wi' a social glass o' strunt
They parted aff careerin'.
Burns, Halloween.

2. A sullen fit; a pet. Ramsay. [Scotch in both uses.]

strut[1] (strut), v.; pret. and pp. strutted, ppr. strutting. [Early mod. E. or dial. also strout, stroot; < ME. strouten, strowten, struten, < Dan. strutte, strut, = Sw. strutta, walk with a jolting step, = MHG. G. strotzen, swell, strut; cf. MHG. strūz, G. strauss, a fight, contention, MHG. striuzen, contend, struggle. See strut[2], n., and cf. strunt[1].] I. intrans. 1†. To swell; protuberate; bulge or spread out.

Crul was his heer and as the gold it shoon,
And strouted as a fanne, large and brode.
Chaucer, Miller's Tale, l. 129.

The mizens strooted with the gale.
Chapman, Iliad, i. 464.

The bellying canvas strutted with the gale. Dryden.

2. To stand or walk stiffly with the tail erect and spread, as the peacock, the turkey, and various other birds. It is characteristic of the male in the breeding-season. See showing-off, 2, and cuts under peafowl and turkey.

3. To walk with a pompous gait and erect head, as from pride or affected dignity.

Does he not hold up his head, . . . and strut in his gait?
Shak., M. W. of W., i. 4. 31.

Meanly to sneak out of difficulties into which they had proudly strutted. Burke, American Taxation.

II.† trans. 1. To cause to swell; enlarge; give more importance to.

I will make a brief list of the particulars themselves in an historical truth noways strouted nor made greater by language. Bacon, War with Spain.

2. To protrude; cause to bulge.

Or else [the lands] lifting vp themselues in Hills, knitting their furrowed browes, and strouting out their goggle eyes to watch their treasure, which they keep imprisoned in their stonie walls. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 829.

★strut[1] (strut), n. [< ME. strut, strout, strot: see strut[1], v.] 1. A proud step or walk, with the head erect; affected dignity in walking.

Stynst of thy strot & fyne to flyte, & sech hys blythe ful sweste & swythe.
Alliterative Poems (ed. Morris), i. 353.

2. Stubbornness; obstinacy. [Prov. Eng.]—3†. Dispute; contention; strife. Havelok, l. 1039.

strut[1]†, p. a. [Contr. pp. of strut[1], v.] Swelling out; protuberant; bulging.

He beginneth now to return with his belly strut and full.
Holland, tr. of Ammianus Marcellinus, p. 213. (Trench.)

★strut[2] (strut), n. [Cf. Icel. strūtr, a hood jutting out like a horn, = Norw. strut, a spout, nozle, = Sw. strut, a paper cornet; cf. LG. strutt, stiff, rigid; from the root of strut[1]: see strut[1], v.] A brace or support for the reception of direct thrust, pressure, or weight in construction; any piece of wood or iron, or other member of a structure, designed to support a part or parts by pressure in the direction of its length. Struts may be either upright, diagonal, or horizontal. The struts of a roof extend obliquely from a rafter to a king-post or queen-post. Diagonal struts are also used between joists, in gates, etc. Also called stretching-piece. See cuts under roof, queen-post, and floor.

strut[2] (strut), v. t.; pret. and pp. strutted, ppr. strutting. [< strut[2], n.] To brace or support by a strut or struts, in construction of any kind; hold in place or strengthen by an upright, diagonal, or transverse support.

strut-beam† (strut′bēm), n. A collar-beam.

struthian (strö′thi-an), a. [< Struthio + -an.] Same as struthious.

Struthidea (strö-thid′ē-ä), n. [NL. (J. Gould, 1836), < Gr. στρουθός, a small bird, a sparrow, + εἶδος, form.] An Australian genus of jay-like birds, belonging to the family Corvidæ, having the wings short, the tail moderately long and graduated, the nostrils exposed, and the bill stout and conical. The only species is S. cinerea, 12½ inches long, gray with black bill, feet, and tail, and white eyes. Also called Brachystoma and Brachyprorus.

Struthidea cinerea.

struthiiform (strö′thi-i-fôrm), a. Same as struthioniform.

Struthio (strö′thi-ō), n. [NL. (Brisson, 1760; Linnæus, 1766), < L. struthio, < Gr. στρουθίων, the ostrich, < στρουθός, a sparrow, ὁ μέγας στρουθός, 'the big sparrow,' the ostrich: see ostrich.] The only genus of Struthionidæ, having but two toes, and so many other important structural characters that in some systems it is made the sole representative of an order Struthiones. S. camelus, the African ostrich, is the most northern species; there are also S. meridionalis, S. australis of South Africa, and S. molybdophanes of Somaliland. The genus formerly included some other struthious birds, as the American ostriches, now called Rhea. See cut under ostrich.

Struthiocamelus (strö″thi-ō-ka-mē′lus), n. [NL., < L. struthiocamelus, for struthocamelus*, < Gr. στρουθοκάμηλος, the ostrich, < στρουθός, sparrow, + κάμηλος, camel: see camel.] Same as Struthio.

struthioid (strö′thi-oid), a. [< Gr. στρουθίων, the ostrich, + εἶδος, form.] Ostrich-like; struthious to any extent; especially, struthious in the narrowest sense.

Struthiolaria (strö″thi-ō-lā-ri′ä), n. [NL. (Lamarck, 1812).] In conch., a genus of gastropods, typical of the family Struthiolariidæ: so called because the lip of the shell has been compared to the foot of an ostrich.

Struthiolariidæ (strö″thi-ō-lā-rī′i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Struthiolaria + -idæ.] A family of tænioglossate gastropods, typified by the genus Struthiolaria. The animal has slender tentacles with eyes at their external bases, an oval foot, and a characteristic dentition (the central tooth being squarish, the lateral wide, five marginal teeth falciform, and the supplementary ones very narrow). The shell is buccinoform with oval subcanaliculate aperture. The living species are confined to the southern Pacific.

Struthiolaria stramínea.

struthiolarioid (strö″thi-ō-lā′ri-oid), a. Of, or having characteristics of, the Struthiolariidæ.

Struthiones (strö-thi-ō′-nēz), n. pl. [NL., pl. of Struthio, q. v.] 1. The ostriches in a broad sense; the struthious or ratite birds. See Ratitæ, and cuts under cassowary, Dromæus, emu, ostrich, and Rhea.—2. An ordinal group restricted to the genus Struthio. A. Newton.

Struthionidæ (strö-thi-on′i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Struthio(n-) + -idæ.] The ostrich family, variously restricted. (a†) Containing the genera Struthio, Rhea, Casuarius, and Dromæus, and divided into Struthioninæ and Casuariinæ: same as Struthiones, 1. (b) Containing the genera Struthio and Rhea. Same as Struthioninæ (a). (c) Containing only the genus Struthio, or the two-toed African ostriches alone. The differences between these ostriches and all other birds is about as great as those usually held to characterize orders in ornithology. The digits are only two, the hallux and inner digit being aborted, leaving the third and fourth digits with the usual ratio of phalanges (4, 5), and there are corresponding modifications of the lower end of the metatarsus. The leg-bones are greatly elongated, and there is a pubic symphysis. The fore limb is reduced, with the antebrachium not half so long as the humerus; and the manus has three digits, two of which bear claws. The wings are useless for flight. There are thirty-five precaudal vertebræ, and the bodies of the sacral vertebræ ankylose with the fore ends of the pubes and ischia. The sternum is doubly notched on each side behind. There are important cranial and especially palatal characters. The plumage is not aftershafted.

struthioniform (strö-thi-on′i-fôrm), a. [Also irreg. struthiiform; < NL. struthioniformis, < L. struthio(n-), an ostrich, + forma, form.] Resembling an ostrich in the sense of being dromæognathous, as a tinamou; of or pertaining to the Struthioniformes.

Struthioniformes (strö-thi-on-i-fôr′mēz), n. pl. [NL., pl. of struthioniformis: see struthioniform.] In ornith., in Sundevall's system of classification, a cohort of Gallinæ, composed of the South American tinamous, or Crypturi, and coextensive with the Dromæognathæ of Huxley: so called from their resemblance in some respects (notably palatal structure) to struthious birds.

Struthioninæ (strö″thi-ō-nī′nē), n. pl. [NL., < Struthio(n-) + -inæ.] The ostriches, variously restricted. (a) A subfamily of Struthionidæ (a), containing the genera Struthio and Rhea, or the African and American ostriches, thus contrasted with Casuariinæ the cassowaries and emus. (b) A subfamily of Struthionidæ (b): contrasted with Rheinæ. (c) The only subfamily of Struthionidæ (c), conterminous therewith.

struthionine (strö′thi-ō-nin), a. [< NL. struthioninus, < L. struthio(n-), an ostrich: see Struthio.] Resembling or related to an ostrich more or less closely; in a narrow sense, of or pertaining to the Struthioninæ; in a wide sense, struthious; ratite.

struthious (strö′thi-us), a. [< NL. Struthio + -ous.] Ostrich-like; resembling or related to the ostriches; struthiiform; ratite.

strutter (strut′ėr), n. [< strut[1] + -er[1].] One who struts; a pompous fellow. Imp. Dict.

strutting (strut′ing), n. [Verbal n. of strut[2], v.] In carp., diagonal braces between joists, to prevent side deflection.

strutting-beam† (strut′ing-bēm), n. A collar-beam.

struttingly (strut′ing-li), adv. In a strutting manner; with a proud step; boastingly.

strutting-piece (strut′ing-pēs), n. Same as bridging.

struvite (strö′vīt), n. [Named after Struve, a Russian statesman.] A hydrous phosphate of ammonium and magnesium, often occurring in connection with guano-deposits. It is found in orthorhombic crystals, often hemimorphic, and has a white or pale-yellow color and vitreous luster.

struy†, v. t. A Middle English form of stroy.

stry (strī), v. t.; pret. and pp. stried, ppr. strying. An obsolete or dialectal form of stroy.

strychnia (strik′ni-ä), n. [NL., < Strychnos, q. v.] Same as strychnine.

strychnic (strik′nik), a. [< NL. strychnia + -ic.] Of, pertaining to, obtained from, or including strychnine: as, strychnic acid.

strychnina (strik-nī′nä), n. A form of strychnia.

strychnine, strychnin (strik′nin), n. [< NL. Strychnos + -ine[2], -in[2].] A vegetable alkaloid ($C_{21}H_{22}N_2O_2$), the sole active principle of Strychnos Tieute, the most active of the Java poisons, and one of the active principles of S. Ignatii, S. Nux-vomica, S. colubrina, etc. It is usually obtained from the seeds of S. Nux-vomica. It is colorless, inodorous, crystalline, unalterable by exposure to the air, and extremely bitter. It is little soluble, requiring 7,000 parts of water for solution. It dissolves in hot alcohol, although sparingly, if the alcohol be pure and not diluted. It forms crystallizable salts, which are intensely bitter. Strychnine and its salts, especially the latter from their solubility, are most energetic poisons. They produce tetanic spasms, but are used in medicine especially in conditions of exhaustion and certain forms of paralysis. See cut under nux vomica.—Hall's solution of strychnine. See solution.

strychninism (strik′ni-nizm), n. [< strychnine + -ism.] The condition produced by an excessive dose of strychnine.

strychnism (strik′nizm), n. [< strychnia + -ism.] The hyperexcitable state of the spinal cord produced by strychnine.

strychnized (strik′nizd), a. Brought under the influence of strychnine.

Strychnos (strik′nos), n. [NL. (Linnæus, 1735), < L. strychnos, < Gr. στρύχνος or τρύχνος, a plant of the nightshade kind.] A genus of dicotyledonous sympetalous plants, of the family Spigeliaceæ, type of the tribe Strychneæ. It is characterized by flowers with valvate corolla-lobes, and a usually two-celled ovary which becomes in fruit an indehiscent berry, commonly globose and pulpy with a hardened rind. About 65 species have been described, widely scattered through tropical regions. They are trees or shrubs, often vines climbing high by stiff hooked and recurved tendrils, in a few species armed with straight spines. They have opposite membranous or coriaceous three- to five-nerved leaves, and small or rather long salver-shaped flowers in terminal or axillary cymes, usually white and densely aggregated. Many species yield powerful poisons, sometimes of great medicinal value. For species yielding strychnine, see strychnine; for S. Nux-vomica, see also nux vomica, brucine, and Angostura bark (under bark[2]); for S. Tieute, chettik; for S. colubrina, snakewood, 1; for S. Ignatii, St. Ignatius' beans, under bean[1]. For S. toxifera, see curari; for S. Pseudo-quina, copalche, 2; for S. potatorum (also called water-filter nut), see clearing-nut. The root of West African species is used in ordeals. Although the seeds are usually poisonous, the fruit of several species, as in India of S. potatorum, in Java of S. Tieute, and in Egypt and Senegal of S. innocua, contains a pulp which is an article of food. S. psilosperma, the Queensland strychnine-tree, is an evergreen shrubby climber, sometimes cultivated.

strynet, v. t. An obsolete variant of strain[1].

stuardt, stuart, n. Old spellings of steward.

Stuartia (stū-är'ti-ạ), n. [NL., named after John Stuart, Marquis of Bute, a patron of botany.] 1. An inadmissible emendation of Stewartia (Linnæus, 1741), a genus of plants of the family Theaceæ. It is characterized by flowers with nearly equal sepals, and an ovary which contains two ascending ovules in each of its five cells, and ripens into a loculicidal and somewhat woody capsule with lenticular seeds, little albumen, and a straight embryo with a slender inferior radicle. There are 6 species, natives of North America and Japan. They are shrubs with membranous deciduous leaves, and short-peduncled flowers solitary in the axils, often large and showy, each usually of five imbricated petals, and numerous stamens with versatile anthers. Two handsome white-flowered species, from the mountains of Virginia, Kentucky, and southward, are sometimes cultivated under the name of stuartia—Stewartia Malachodendron with a single style, and S. pentagyna with five styles and larger leaves. S. Pseudo-camellia, from Japan, is also in cultivation.

★2. [l. c.] A shrub of this genus.

stub (stub), n. [< ME. stub, stubbe, < AS. styb = D. stobbe = LG. stubbe = Icel. stubbi, stobbi, also stubbr = Norw. stubbe, stubb = Sw. stubbe, stubb = Dan. stub, a stump, stub. Cf. Gael. stob, a stake, stub, Lith. stebas, an upright pillar, mast, L. stipes, a post, Gr. στύπος, a stump, Skt. stambha, a post, √ stambh, make firm, set fast. Cf. stump and stubble.] 1. The end of a fallen tree, shrub, or plant remaining in the ground; a stump; now, especially, a short stump or projecting root of inconspicuous size.

Here stands a drie stub of some tree, a cubite from the ground. Chapman, Iliad, xxiii. 305.

2. A projection like a stump; a piece or part of something sticking out: as, a dog with only a stub of a tail; the stub of a broken tooth.

The horn [of the buffalo] at three months is about 1 inch in length, and is a mere little black stub.
W. T. Hornaday, Smithsonian Report (1887), ii. 397.

3. A short remaining piece of something; a terminal remnant: as, the stub of a pencil or of a cigar; a stub of candle.—4. A worn horseshoe-nail; a stub-nail; specifically, in the plural, nails, or bits of iron of the quality of old horse-shoe-nails, used as material for gun-barrels or other articles requiring great toughness.

Every blacksmith's shop rung with the rhythmical clang of busy hammers, beating out old iron, such as horse-shoes, nails, or stubs, into the great harpoons.
Mrs. Gaskell, Sylvia's Lovers, xvi.

5. Something truncated, resembling a small stump, or constituting a terminal remnant. (a) A blunt-pointed pen; a stub-pen. (b) A stationary stud in a lock, which acts as a detent for the tumblers when their slots are in engagement with it. (c) A short file adapted to working in and around depressions that cannot be reached by an ordinary file. (d) The unsawed butt-end of a plank. See stub-shot, 1.

6. The inner end of one of the duplicate numbered blanks in a check-book or the like, which is left in the book with a memorandum corresponding to the check or other blank which is filled out and detached; counterfoil.—7†. Figuratively, a block: a blockhead.

Our dullest and laziest youth, our stocks and stubs.
Milton, Education.

Stub damascus. See damascus.

stub (stub), v. t.; pret. and pp. stubbed, ppr. stubbing. [= Sw. stubba = Dan. stubbe, cut short, dock, curtail; from the noun.] 1. To grub up by the roots; pull or raise the stub of; pull or raise as a stub: as, to stub a tree; to stub up roots.

The other tree was griev'd,
Grew scrubbed, died a-top, was stunted;
So the next parson stubb'd and burnt it.
Swift, Baucis and Philemon.

2. To clear of stubs; grub up stubs or roots from, as land.

Nobbut a bit on it's left, an' I meän'd to 'a stubb'd it at fall. Tennyson, Northern Farmer (Old Style).

A large fenced-in field, well stubbed, on which the manure from the cattle is spread.
Harper's Mag., LXXVIII. 424.

3. To make a stub of; cut to a stub; give a truncated or stubbed appearance to; truncate: as, to stub off a post or a quill pen.—4. To ruin by extravagance. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]—5. To strike against something projecting from a surface; stump: as, to stub one's foot. [U. S.]

stubbed (stub'ed or stubd), a. [< stub + -ed[2].] 1. Resembling a stub; short and blunt; truncated.

Hang upon our stubbed horns
Garlands, ribands, and fine posies.
B. Jonson, Masque of Oberon.

2. Rough with roots and stumps; stubby.

Then came a bit of stubbed ground, once a wood.
Browning, Childe Roland.

3. Blunt or rugged in character; not delicate or sensitive; hardy.

The hardness of stubbed vulgar constitutions renders them insensible of a thousand things that fret and gall those delicate people. Ep. Berkeley, Siris, § 105.

stubbedness (stub'ed-nes), n. Bluntness; obtuseness.

stubbiness (stub'i-nes), n. 1. The state of ★being stubby.—2. Same as stubbedness.

stubble (stub'l), n. [Also dial. stopple; < ME. stubble, stubbel, stubbyl, stobil, stobul, stouple, < OF. stuble, estuble, estoble, estouble, estoule, estoulle, esteule, F. étouble, éteule = Pr. estobla = It. stoppia = MD. D. stoppel = LG. stoppele, stoppel = OHG. stupfila, MHG. stupfel, G. stoppel, stubble; all appar. < L. stipula, dim. of stipes, a stalk, etc.: see stipule. The word has been confused in ML., etc., with L. stuppa, stupa, stipa, tow, and in E. with stub.] 1. The lower ends of grain-stalks, collectively, left standing in the ground when the crop is cut; the covering of a harvested field of grain.

They turned in their stubble to sow another croppe of wheate in the same place. Coryat, Crudities, I. 151.

2. Something resembling or analogous to stubble, especially a short rough beard, or the short hair on a cropped head. See stubbly.

stubbled (stub'ld), a. [< stubble + -ed[2].] 1. Covered with stubble; stubbly.

A crow was strutting o'er the stubbled plain,
Just as a lark, descending, clos'd his strain.
Gay, To the Right Hon. Paul Methuen.

2†. Stubbed.

stubble-field (stub'l-fēld), n. A field covered with stubble; a piece of ground from which grain has been cut.

stubble-goose (stub'l-gös), n. [< ME. stubbel-goos; < stubble + goose.] 1. The graylag goose, Anser cinereus. Also called harvest-goose.

Of many a pilgrym hastow Crystes curs,
For of thy percely yet they fare the wors
That they han eten with thy stubbel goos.
Chaucer, Prol. to Cook's Tale, l. 27.

2. See the quotation, and compare green-goose.

So stubble-geese at Michaelmas are seen Upon the spit; next May produces green.
W. King, Art of Cookery, l. 77.

stubble-land (stub'l-land), n. Land covered with stubble; a stubble-field. Shak., 1 Hen. IV., i. 3. 35.

stubble-plow (stub'l-plou), n. A plow adapted to stubble land; a pulverizing plow.

stubble-rake (stub'l-rāk), n. A rake for gleaning a reaped field.

stubble-turner (stub'l-tėr″nėr), n. A wing attachment to a plow to turn down stubble, etc., in advance of the plowshare.

stubbly (stub'li), a. [< stubble + -y[1].] 1. Covered with stubble; stubbled.

He . . . rubbed his stubbly chin with a sort of bewildered thoughtfulness. Harper's Mag., LXXX. 357.

2. Resembling stubble; short and stiff.

A young man of aggressive manners, whose stubbly black hair stood out from his head. The Century, XXXVII. 600.

stub-book (stub'bůk), n. A book containing only stubs, and serving as a record of the checks or other papers detached from them.

The filed stub-books of stamps, now occupying a very large and rapidly increasing space in the files rooms.
Rep. of Sec. of Treasury, 1886, p. 700.

stubborn (stub'ọrn), a. [Early mod. E. also stubburne, stoburne; < ME. stoburn, stoburne, styburne, stiburn, stiborn, stibourne; prob. orig. stybor,* stibor* (the final n being due to misdividing of the derived noun stybornesse taken as stybornnesse* (E. stubbornness), or a mere addition as in bittern[1], slattern), appar. < AS. styb, a stump, stub, + adj. formative -or as in AS. bitor, E. bitter, etc.] 1†. Sturdy; stout; strong.

I was yong and ful of ragerye,
Stibourne and strong and joly as a pye.
Chaucer, Prol. to Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 456.

2. Fixed or set in opinion or purpose; obstinately determined; inflexibly resolute; not to be moved by persuasion; unyielding.

The queen is obstinate,
Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be tried by't.
Shak., Hen. VIII., ii. 4. 122.

Some of them, for their stubborn refusing the Grace he had offered them, were adjudged to Death, and the rest fined. Baker, Chronicles, p. 172.

3. Persistently obdurate; obtuse to reason or right; obstinately perverse. [This sense depends upon the connection, and is not always clearly distinguishable from the preceding, since what is justifiable or natural persistence from one point of view may be sheer perversity from another.]

And he that holdithe a quarel agayn right,
Holdyng his purpos stiburn ageyn reason.
Lydgate, Order of Fools.

They ceased not from their own doings, nor from their stubborn way. Judges ii. 19.

Sirrah, thou art said to have a stubborn soul,
That apprehends no further than this world.
Shak., M. for M., v. 1. 485.

From the necessity of bowing down the stubborn neck of their pride and ambition to the yoke of moderation and virtue. Burke, Rev. in France.

4. Persistently pursued or practised; obstinately maintained; not readily abandoned or relinquished.

Stubborn attention, and more than common application.
Locke.

Proud as he is, that iron heart retains
Its stubborn purpose, and his friends disdains.
Pope, Iliad, ix. 742.

Stout were their hearts, and stubborn was their strife.
Scott, The Poacher.

5. Difficult of treatment or management; hard to deal with or handle; not easily manipulated; refractory; tough; unyielding; stiff.

Facts are stubborn things. Proverbial saying.

In hissing flames huge silver bars are roll'd,
And stubborn brass, and tin, and solid gold.
Pope, Iliad, xviii. 546.

While round them stubborn thorns and furze increase,
And creeping briars. Dyer, Fleece, i. 107.

Not Hope herself, with all her flattering art,
Can cure this stubborn sickness of the heart.
Crabbe, Works, I. 140.

Stubborn marble is that which, on account of its excessive hardness, is very difficult to work, and is apt to fly off in splinters. Marble Worker, § 35.

6†. Harsh; rough; rude; coarse in texture or quality.

Like strict men of order,
They do correct their bodies with a bench
Or a poor stubborn table.
Beau. and Fl., Scornful Lady, iv. 2.

Their Cloth [made from bark] . . . is stubborn when new, wears out soon. Dampier, Voyages, I. 315.

If Hector's Spouse was clad in stubborn Stuff,
A Soldier's Wife became it well enough.
Congreve, tr. of Ovid's Art of Love.

=Syn. 2 and 3. Refractory, Intractable, etc. (see obstinate); wilful, headstrong, unruly, inflexible, obdurate, ungovernable, indocile, mulish.

stubborn (stub'ọrn), v. t. [< stubborn, a.] To make stubborn; render stiff, unyielding, enduring, or the like. [Rare.]

Slaty ridge
Stubborn'd with iron. Keats, Hyperion, ii.

stubbornly (stub'ọrn-li), adv. In a stubborn manner; inflexibly; obstinately.

stubbornness (stub'ọrn-nes), n. [Early mod. E. stubbernesse; < ME. styburnesse, stibornesse, etc.: see stubborn.] The state or character of being inflexible or stubborn; obstinate persistence, obduracy, or refractoriness.

stubborn-shafted (stub'ọrn-shaf″ted), a. Having a stiff or unyielding shaft or trunk. [Rare.]

Before a gloom of stubborn-shafted oaks,
Three . . . horsemen waiting.
Tennyson, Geraint.

stubby (stub'i), a. [< stub + -y[1].] 1. Abounding with stubs.—2. Short, thick, and stiff; stubbed: as, stubby bristles; stubby fingers.

stub-damask (stub'dam″ask), n. A kind of damaskeened iron made of stubs, used for shotgun barrels. See stub-twist.

Stub damask is made from the same materials as stub twist, but the rods after the first drawing are subjected to a high degree of torsion, and two or three of them are then welded laterally to form the ribbon.
Amer. Cyc., VII. 356.

stub-end (stub'end'), n. In mach., the enlarged rectangular end or prism of a pitman or connecting-rod, over which the strap of a strap-joint passes, forming with the end of the prism a rectangular inclosure which holds the brasses or boxes fitted to a crank-wrist or to a cross-head pin. Compare strap-joint.

The keyway is in the butt or stub end of the rod.
Joshua Rose, Practical Machinist, p. 403.

stub-feather (stub'feтн″ėr), n. One of the short feathers left on a fowl after it has been plucked; a pin-feather. Halliwell.

stub-iron (stub'ī″ėrn), n. Iron formed from stubs, used principally for making fine gun-barrels.

stub-mortise (stub′môr″tis), n. A mortise which does not pass through the entire thickness of the timber in which it is made.

stub-nail (stub′nāl), n. An old or worn horseshoe-nail; any short and thick nail; a stub.

stub-pen (stub′pen), n. A pen having a blunt or truncated nib, usually short and broad.

stub-short (stub′shôrt), n. Same as stub-shot, 1.

stub-shot (stub′shot), n. 1. In a saw-mill, the butt or unsawed part at the end of a plank, separated from the log. Also called stub-short. —2. In turning, the unworked part on a piece turned in a lathe, where it is secured to the center. It is removed when the work is finished.

stub-tenon (stub′ten″ọn), n. In carp., a short tenon, as at the end of an upright. E. H. Knight.

stub-twist (stub′twist), n. A material for fine shot-gun barrels, as those of fowling-pieces, wrought from stubs, and brought into form by twisting or coiling round a mandrel or by welding; also, a gun-barrel made of this material.

stubwort (stub′wėrt), n. The wood-sorrel, Oxalis Acetosella: so called from its growing about stubs or stumps. [Prov. Eng.]

stucco (stuk′ō), n. [Formerly also stuck, < F. stuc = Sp. estuco = Pg. estuque = D. stuc = G. Sw. stuck = Dan. stuk; < It. stucco, stucco, < OHG. stucchi, MHG. stücke, G. stück, a piece, a patch, = D. stuk = OS. stukki = AS. stycce = Icel. stykki, a piece; connected with stock[1].] 1. Plaster or cement, of varying degrees of fineness, used as a coating for walls, either internally or externally, and for the production of ornamental effects and figures. Stucco for decorative purposes, as the cornices and moldings of rooms and the enrichment of ceilings, usually consists of slaked lime, chalk, and pulverized white marble, tempered in water, or of calcined gypsum or plaster of Paris mixed with glue, and sometimes also gelatin or gum arabic, in a hot solution. The stucco employed for external purposes is of a coarser kind, and variously prepared, the different sorts being generally distinguished by the name of cements. Some of these take a surface and polish almost equal to those of the finest marble. The stucco used for the third coat of three-coat plaster consists of fine lime and sand. In a species called bastard stucco a small quantity of hair is used. Rough stucco is merely floated and brushed with water, but the best kind is troweled.

2. Work made of stucco. The ornamenting of cornices, etc., with garlands, festoons, fruits, and figures in stucco was carried to great elaboration by the ancient Romans, and by the Italians under Raphael's guidance in the sixteenth century.

stucco (stuk′ō), v. t. [< stucco, n.] To apply stucco to; cover with stucco or fine plaster.

stuccoer (stuk′ō-ėr), n. [< stucco + -er[1].] One who stuccoes; one who applies stucco to walls, etc.; one who works or deals in stucco.

stucco-work (stuk′ō-wėrk), n. Ornamental work composed of stucco.

stuck[1] (stuk). Preterit and past participle of stick[1] and stick[2].

stuck[2]† (stuk), n. [A var. of stock[2]. Cf. tuck[2].] A thrust.

stuck[3] (stuk), n. and v. A dialectal variant of stook.

stuck[4]† (stuk), n. [< F. stuc, < It. stucco, stucco: see stucco.] Stucco. Imp. Dict.

stuck-in† (stuk′in), n. The stoccade.

I had a pass with him, rapier, scabbard, and all, and he gives me the stuck in with such a mortal motion that it is inevitable. Shak., T. N., iii. 4. 303.

stuckle (stuk′l), n. [Dim. of stuck[3], stook.] A number of sheaves set together in a field; a stook. [Prov. Eng.]

stuckling (stuk′ling), n. [Origin obscure.] A thin apple pasty; a fritter. [Prov. Eng.]

stuck-up (stuk′up′), a. and n. I. a. Offensively proud or conceited; puffed up; consequential. [Colloq.]

He [the true gentleman] is never stuck-up, nor looks down upon others because they have not titles, honors, or social position equal to his own.
W. Matthews, Getting on in the World, p. 144.

II. n. Same as strap-oyster. E. Ingersoll.

stud[1] (stud), n. [Early mod. E. also studde; < ME. stode, < AS. studu, stuthu, a post, = Icel. stodh = Sw. stöd, a post, = Dan. stöd, stub, stump, = MHG. G. stütze, a prop, support; cf. Skt. sthūna, a post. Cf. stooth, a doublet of stud[1]. Hence ult. studdle.] 1. A post; an upright prop or support; specifically, one of the small beams or scantlings in a building, of the height of a single story, which, with the laths nailed upon them, form the walls of the different rooms. See cut under siding.

It is a gross mistake in architecture to think that every small stud bears the main stress and burthen of the building, which lies indeed upon the principal timbers.
Jer. Taylor (?), Artif. Handsomeness, p. 11. (Latham.)

2†. The stem, trunk, or stock of a tree or shrub.

Seest not thilke same Hawthorne studde,
How bragly it beginnes to budde,
And utter his tender head?
Spenser, Shep. Cal., March.

3. A transverse piece of cast-iron inserted in each link of a chain cable to prop the sides apart and strengthen it. See cut under chain. —4. A nail, boss, knob, or protuberance affixed to a surface, especially as an ornament.

Crystal and myrrhine cups, emboss'd with gems
And studs of pearl. Milton, P. R., iv. 120.

The armour of the legs consists of a chausson of chain-mail, and chausses lacing behind, which appear to be formed of studs rivetted on cloth or leather.
J. Hewitt, Ancient Armour, I. p. xvii.

5. A piece in the form of a boss or knob for use as a button or fastener, or in some other way. A stud for a bolt is a rounded nut to be screwed on to the projecting end. A stud for lacing is a button set in an eyelet-hole and having an ear round which the lace is passed. A shirt-stud is an ornamental button commonly with a tang or a spire by which it can be inserted in and removed from an eyelet-hole or small buttonhole in the front of the shirt.

The grate which (shut) the day out-barres,
Those golden studdes which naile the starres.
Dekker, Londons Tempe (Works, IV. 122).

The stud itself, called the anvil, is connected to the sending battery, and the other pole of this battery is to earth. R. S. Culley, Pract. Teleg., p. 269.

The mantle, which falls over the back of the figure and is not gathered up at the arms, is secured by a cordon attached to two lozenge-shaped studs. Encyc. Brit., VI. 469.

Shirt-stud abscess, an abscess with a superficial and a deep cavity, connected by a short sinus.

stud[1] (stud), v. t.; pret. and pp. studded, ppr. studding. [< stud[1], n. Cf. Icel. stydja, prop, steady.] 1. To furnish with or support by studs, or upright props.

Is it a wholesome place to live in, with its black shingles, and the green moss that shows how damp they are? its dark, low-studded rooms? Hawthorne, Seven Gables, xii.

2. To set with or as with studs.

Thy horses shall be trapp'd,
Their harness studded all with gold and pearl.
Shak., T. of the S., Ind., ii. 44.

3. To set with protuberant objects of any kind; scatter over with separate things rising above the surface: as, a bay studded with islands.

A fine lawn sloped away from it, studded with clumps of trees. Irving, Sketch-Book, p. 30.

4. To lie scattered over the surface of; be spread prominently about in.

The turf around our pavilion fairly blazes with the splendor of the yellow daisies and crimson poppies that stud it. B. Taylor, Lands of the Saracen, p. 22.

Studded armor, armor composed of leather, cloth in several thicknesses, or the like, through which are driven metal rivets with large heads, forming studs or bosses.

stud[2] (stud), n. [< ME. stood, stod, < AS. stōd, a stud, = OHG. stuot, stuat, stuota, a stud, MHG. stuot, stūt, a stud, a breeding mare, G. stute, a breeding mare (gestüt, a stud), = Icel. stōdh = Dan. stod, a stud, = Sw. sto, a mare. Cf. Russ. stado, a herd or drove, Lith. stodas, a drove of horses. Cf. steed.] 1. A number of horses kept for any purpose, especially for breeding or sporting.

He keeps the stud (which is to be diminished) because he thinks he ought to support the turf.
Greville, Memoirs, July 18, 1830.

2. The place where a stud is kept, especially for breeding; a stud-farm.

In the studs of persons of quality in Ireland, where care is taken, . . . we see horses bred of excellent shape.
Sir W. Temple, Advancement of Trade in Ireland.

3. A stallion, especially one kept for service in breeding; a stud-horse. [Colloq.] —4. Dogs kept for breeding; a kennel. [U. S.] —In the stud, kept for breeding, as a horse or dog.

stud[3]†, studet†, n. Middle English forms of stead.

stud-bolt (stud′bōlt), n. A bolt with a thread at each end, to be screwed into a fixed part at one end and have a nut screwed on it at the other.

stud-book (stud′bůk), n. The genealogical register of a stud, especially of horses; a book giving the pedigree of noted or thoroughbred animals, especially horses.

studdery† (stud′ėr-i), n. [< stud[2] + -ery.] A place for keeping a stud of horses. Harrison, Descrip. of Eng., iii. 1 (Holinshed's Chron., I.).

studding (stud′ing), n. [Verbal n. of stud[1], v.] In carp., studs or joists collectively, or material for studs or joists.

studdingsail (stud′ing-sāl; pron. by sailors stun′sl), n. [< studding, verbal n. of stud[1], support, + sail; or else altered from steadying-sail.*] A sail set beyond the leeches of some of the principal squaresails during a fair wind, very seldom used. Lower studdingsails, either square or three-cornered, are set outside of the leeches of the foresail. Topmast- and topgallant-studdingsails are set outside of the topsail and topgallantsail. They are spread at the head by small yards and at the foot by booms which slide out from the yardarms. Also called steering-sail. See cuts under ringtail[2] and ship.—Studdingsail-booms, long poles which slide out and in through boom-irons on the yards. See cut under ship.

studdle (stud′l), n. [< ME. studdyll, studdul, stodul, stedulle, < Icel. studhill, a prop, stay, upright, stud, dim. of stodh (= AS. studu, etc.), a prop: see stud[1].] 1†. A prop or bar about a loom. Prompt. Parv., p. 481.—2. One of the vertical timbers which support the setts in the timbering of a mining-shaft.

studet†, n. See stud[3].

student (stū′dent), n. [= F. étudiant = Pr. estudian = Sp. estudiante = Pg. estudante = It. studiante, studiente, studente = D. G. Sw. Dan. student, a student, < L. studen(t-)s, ppr. of studere, be eager, zealous, or diligent, apply one's self, study; perhaps (with alteration of sp- to st-) = Gr. σπεύδειν, be eager, hasten. Hence also study, studious, etc.] 1. A studious person; one who practises studying or investigation; one given to the study of books or the acquisition of knowledge: as, a student of science or of nature.

Keep a gamester from the dice, and a good student from his book, and it is wonderful.
Shak., M. W. of W., iii. 1. 88.

2. A person who is engaged in a course of study, either general or special; one who studies, especially with a view to education of a higher kind; an advanced scholar or pupil: as, an academical or college student; a student of theology, law, medicine, or art.

A greater degree of gentility is affixed to the character of a student in England than elsewhere.
Goldsmith, English Clergy.

Student or students' lamp. See lamp[1].

student-parsnip (stū′dent-pärs″nip), n. See parsnip.

studentry (stū′dent-ri), n. [< student + -ry.] Students collectively; a body of students. Kingsley, Hypatia. [Rare.]

studentship (stū′dent-ship), n. [< student + -ship.] 1. The state of being a student. [Rare.] —2. An endowment or foundation for a student; a provision for the maintenance of a person in a course of study.

She [George Eliot] . . . founded to his memory the "George Henry Lewes studentship."
Dict. Nat. Biog., XIII. 221.

studerite (stö′dėr-īt), n. [Named after Bernhard Studer, a Swiss geologist (1794–1887).] A mineral from the canton of Valais in Switzerland, closely related to tetrahedrite.

stud-farm (stud′färm), n. A tract of land devoted to the breeding and rearing of horses.

studfish (stud′fish), n. A kind of killifish, Fundulus catenatus, 6 or 7 inches long, locally abundant in the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers. It is one of the largest and handsomest of the cyprinodonts. A related species is the spotted studfish, F. stellifer, of the Alabama river. These represent a section of the genus with the dorsal fin beginning nearly above the anal.

Studfish (Fundulus catenatus).

stud-flower (stud′flou″ėr), n. A name proposed by Meehan for the plant Helonias bullata, translating the specific name.

stud-groom (stud′grōm), n. A groom (generally the head groom) of a stud. Nineteenth Century, XXVI. 782.

stud-horse (stud′hôrs), n. [< ME. stodhors*, < AS. stōdhors (= Icel. stōdhhross), < stōd, stud, + hors, horse.] A horse kept in the stud for breeding purposes; a stallion.

studied (stud′id), p. a. 1. Informed or qualified by study; instructed; versed; learned.

The natural man, . . . be he never so great a philosopher, never so well seen in the law, never so sore studied in the Scripture, . . . yet he cannot understand the things of the Spirit of God.
Tyndale, Ans. to Sir T. More, etc. (Parker Soc., 1850), p. 6.

2. Studiously contrived or thought out; premeditated; deliberate: as, a studied insult.

The flattering senate
Decrees him divine honours, and to cross it
Were death with studied torments.
Massinger, Roman Actor, i. 1.

studiedly (stud'id-li), adv. In a studied manner; with study or deliberation; deliberately. Life of Mede, prefixed to his Works, p. 39. (Latham.) studier (stud'i-ėr), n. [< study[1] + -er[1].] One who studies; an examiner or investigator. Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice, ix.

studio (stū'di-ō), n. [< It. studio, a study: see study.] A room especially arranged for painting, drawing, photographing, or other art-work. It is usually fitted with windows for securing a pure skylight, or light free from cross-reflections, and is so placed, when possible, as to receive light from the north side.

studious (stū'di-us), a. [= F. studieux = Sp. Pg. estudioso = It. studioso, < L. studiosus, eager, assiduous, < studium, eagerness, zeal, study: see study[1].] 1. Given to study or learning; inclined to learn or investigate; seeking knowledge from books, inquiry, meditation, or by other means: as, a studious pupil or investigator; a studious reasoner.

Let the studious of these things search them in their proper Authors. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 319.

2. Exercising study or careful consideration; attentively mindful or considerate; thoughtful; heedful; intent; assiduous.

I am studious to keep the ancient terms.
Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii. 157.

One at least studious of deserving well.
B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, v. 3.

3. Manifesting study or deliberation; planned; studied.

But yet be wary in thy studious care.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., ii. 5. 97.

4. Devoted to or used for the purposes of study; serving as a place of study or contemplation. [Rare.]

Some to the wars, to try their fortune there; . . .
Some to the studious universities.
Shak., T. G. of V., i. 3. 10.

But let my due feet never fail
To walk the studious cloisters pale.
Milton, Il Penseroso, l. 156.

=Syn. 1. Studious, Scholarly. Studious represents a fact in conduct; scholarly, a fact in taste or predilection, or a similar result; as, he was very studious, but not really of scholarly instincts, nor likely ever to produce a scholarly treatise.

studiously (stū'di-us-li), adv. In a studious manner; with reference to study or learning; as a student; in a studied manner; with studious consideration or care; studiedly; heedfully; deliberately: as, to be studiously inclined; to investigate a subject studiously.

studiousness (stū'di-us-nes), n. The character of being studious; diligence in study; addictedness to books or investigation.

Studite (stū'dīt), n. [< LGr. Στουδίτης, < Στουδίος, Studius, a Roman who built a monastery (thence known as the Studium) for the order.] A member of the order of Acœmeti. The most famous of the order was St. Theodore the Studite (died 826), confessor against the Iconoclasts and hymnographer.

studwork (stud'wėrk), n. [< stud[1] + work.] 1. Brickwork interspaced with studs; construction with alternating bricks and studs.—2. That which is made or held by means of studs, especially in armor; brigandine-work, jazerant-work, or other process for producing garments of fence by means of ordinary textile fabrics or leather set with studs. See cut under brigandine.

study[1] (stud'i), n.; pl. studies (-iz). [Early mod. E. also studie; < ME. study, stody, studye, studie, < OF. estudie, estude, F. étude = Sp. estudio = Pg. estudo = It. studio, < L. studium, eagerness, zeal, exertion, study, < studere, be eager, zealous, or diligent, study: see student.] 1. Eagerness; earnestness; zeal. [Obsolete or archaic.]

They do thereby [by the burning of the books] better declare the study of their godliness.
Calvin, on Acts xix. 19, p. 189 (Calvin Trans. Soc.).

2. Zealous endeavor; studied effort, aim, or purpose; deliberate contrivance or intention.

Men's study is set rather to take gifts, and to get of other men's goods, than to give any of their own.
Latimer, 2d Sermon bef. Edw. VI., 1550.

It is my study
To seem despiteful and ungentle to you.
Shak., As you Like it, v. 2. 85.

As touching your Graces diligence and singulier good studie and means for the eyde of thEmperors affayres.
R. Sampson, To Wolsey (Ellis's Hist. Letters, 3d ser., I. 354).

This is a cruelty beyond man's study.
Fletcher, Beggars' Bush, iv. 6.

3. The mental effort of understanding, appreciating, and assimilating anything, especially a book; the earnest and protracted examination of a question, by reflection, collection and scrutiny of evidence, and otherwise; the pursuit of learning.

In continuall studie and contemplation.
Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 4.

When the mind with great earnestness, and of choice, fixes its view on any idea, considers it on all sides, and will not be called off by the ordinary solicitation of other ideas, it is that we call intension or study.
Locke, Human Understanding, II. xix. 1.

4. An exercise in learning or the pursuit of knowledge; an act or course of intellectual acquisition, as by memorizing words, facts, or principles: as, the actor's study was very rapid; also, an effort to gain an understanding of something; a particular course of learning, inquiry, or investigation: as, to pursue the study of physics or of a language; to make a study of trade, of a case at law, or of a man's life or character.

The chiefe citie is Hamsa, sometime called Tarsus, famous for the studies of learning, herein (saith Strabo) surmounting both Athens and Alexandria.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 334.

His [Calvin's] bringing up was in the study of the civil law. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, Pref., ii.

5. That which is studied or to be studied; a branch of learning; a subject of acquired or desired knowledge; a matter for investigation or meditation.

Studies serve for delight, for ornament, and for ability.
Bacon, Studies (ed. 1887).

The proper study of mankind is man.
Pope, Essay on Man, ii. 2.

'Twas, in truth, a study,
To mark his spirit, alternating between
A decent and professional gravity
And an irreverent mirthfulness.
Whittier, Bridal of Pennacook, Int.

Personally I think that Shakespeare is almost the easiest study; perhaps because of my being accustomed as a boy to see Shakespeare's plays.
Lester Wallack, Scribner's Mag., IV. 720.

6. A state of mental inquiry or cogitation; debate or counsel with one's self; deep meditation; a muse; a quandary.

Pandarus, that in a stodye stod,
Er he was war, she tok hym by the hood.
Chaucer, Troilus, ii. 1180.

I haf gret stody til I haf tydings fro 3ow.
Paston Letters, I. 78.

The king of Castile, herewith a little confused, and in a studie, said, That can I doe with my honour.
Bacon, Hist. Hen. VII., p. 224.

7. Theat., one who studies or learns; a studier; specifically, a memorizer of a part for the theater; an actor as a memorizer.

I've got a part of twelve lengths here which I must be up in to-morrow night, and I haven't had time to look at it yet. I'm a confounded quick study, that's one comfort.
Dickens, Nicholas Nickleby, xxiii.

8. In music, a composition, usually instrumental, having something of the instructive and gymnastic purpose of an exercise combined with a certain amount of artistic value; an étude. An elaborate work of this class, combining great technical difficulty with decided artistic interest, is often called a concert study.

9. Something done as an exercise in learning, or in special study or observation; specifically, in art, a sketch or performance executed as an educational exercise, as a memorandum or record of observations or effects, or as a guide for a finished production: as, the story is a study of morbid passion; a study of a head for a painting.—10. A room in a dwelling-house or other building set apart for private study, reading, writing, or any similar occupation; by extension, the private room or office of the master of a house, however it may be used.

Get me a taper in my study, Lucius.
Shak., J. C., ii. 1. 7.

There is a gold wand,
Stands in King Cornwalls study windowe.
Ballad of King Arthur (Child's Ballads, I. 242).

Academy study. See academy.—Brown study. See brown.=Syn. 3. Research, inquiry, investigation.—6. Reflection.

study[1] (stud'i), v.; pret. and pp. studied, ppr. studying. [< ME. studyen, stodyen, < OF. estudier, F. étudier = Sp. estudiar = Pg. estudar = It. studiare, < ML. studiare, study, < L. studium, eagerness, zeal, study: see study[1], n.] I. intrans. 1. To exercise the mind in learning; apply one's self to the acquisition of knowledge; acquire knowledge and mental training, as by memorizing words, facts, or principles.

So much, dear liege, I have already sworn:
That is, to live and study here three years.
Shak., L. L. L., i. 1. 35.

2. To exercise the mind in considering or contriving; deliberate upon or about something; ponder.

Al this maketh me on meteles to studie,
And how the preest preuede no pardon to Do-wel.
Piers Plowman (C), x. 317.

I found a moral first, and then studied for a fable.
Swift.

3. To muse; meditate; cogitate; reflect; revolve thoughts or ideas: used absolutely. [Archaic or colloq.]

Which made the butchers of Nottingham
To study as they did stand,
Saying, "Surely he is some prodigal."
Robin Hood and the Butcher (Child's Ballads, V. 35).

Brer Fox, he come up, en dar lay Brer Rabbit, periently cole en stiff. Brer Fox he look at Brer Rabbit, en he sorter study. J. C. Harris, Uncle Remus, xv.

4. To endeavor studiously or thoughtfully; use studied or careful efforts; be diligent or zealous; plan; contrive: as, to study for peace or for the general good.

With that he departed from his moder and yede into a chamber, and be-gan to stodye howe he myght spede to go to the kynge Arthur. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 178.

Study [give diligence, R. V.] to shew thyself approved unto God. 2 Tim. ii. 15.

5. To prosecute a regular course of study, as that prescribed to prepare one for the exercise of a profession: as, to study for the bar, or for the church or ministry.—To study up, to make a special study; bring up or refresh one's knowledge by study. [Colloq.]

II. trans. 1. To seek to learn by memorizing the facts, principles, or words of; apply the mind to learning; store in the memory, either generally or verbatim: as, to study a book, a language, history, etc.; to study a part in a play or a piece for recitation.

Kath. Where did you study all this goodly speech?
Pet. It is extempore, from my mother-wit.
Shak., T. of the S., ii. 1. 264.

2. To seek to ascertain or to learn the particulars of, as by observation or inquiry; make a study of; inquire into; investigate: as, to study a man's character or the customs of society; to study the geology of a region, or a case of disease.

I'll . . . entertain some score or two of tailors,
To study fashions to adorn my body.
Shak., Rich. III., i. 2. 258.

3. To consider in detail; deliberate upon; think out: as, to study the best way of doing something; to study a discourse or a compliment.

I will still study some revenge past this.
B. Jonson, Sad Shepherd, i. 2.

4. To regard attentively or discriminatingly; consider as to requirements, character, quality, use, effect, or the like; pay distinguishing attention to: as, to study one's own interests; to study the effect of one's actions; to study a person; to study a drapery or a model in art.—5. To look at musingly, as in a brown study.

He was studying the toe of his foot, visible through a rift in his well-worn brogan. The Century, XXXVIII. 85.

6. To apply the mind to learning (a specific science or branch of science), especially with the object of preparing for the exercise of a profession: as, the one is studying medicine, the other theology.—7†. To subject to study; carry through a course of learning; educate; instruct.

The State of Avignion, . . . being visited with such of the French Preachers as had been studied at Geneva, the people generally became inclined unto Calvin's doctrines.
Heylin, Hist. Presbyterians, p. 54. (Davies.)

To study out. (a) To find out by study or consideration; get at the bottom of; unravel: as, to study out a person's meaning; he has studied out the mystery. (b) To think out deliberately; arrange definitely in the mind; determine the details of: as, I have studied out a plan; to study out a set of rules.—To study up. (a) To learn by special study or investigation; get up a knowledge of, as for a particular purpose or occasion: as, to study up a law-case, or a subject for an examination; to study up routes of travel. (b) To seek or get a knowledge of by observation or consideration; observe or reflect upon critically; make up one's mind about: as, to study up a person or a man's character; to study up arguments or reasons. =Syn. 2. To scrutinize, search into.—3. To reflect upon, meditate, ponder.—4. To contemplate.

study[2] (stud'i), n.; pl. studies (-iz). Another spelling of stiddy[1], a variant of stithy. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

stufa (stö'fä), n.; It. pl. stufe (-fe), E. stufas (-fäz). [It.] A jet of steam issuing from a fissure of the earth in volcanic regions.

In many volcanic regions jets of steam, called by the Italians stufas, issue from fissures at a temperature high above the boiling-point.
Lyell, Prin. of Geol. (11th ed.), i. 391.

stuff (stuf), n. and a. [Early mod. E. stuffe; < ME. stuf, stuff, stuffe (= D. LG. Dan. stof = G. Sw. stoff; ML. estoffa), < OF. estoffe, F. étoffe = Sp. Pg. estofa, quilted stuff, = It. stoffa, < L. stuppa (ML. prob. also Germanized stupfa*, stuffa), earlier stupa, the coarse part of flax, hards, tow: see stupe[1]. Cf. stop. The sense of the L. word is better preserved in the verb stuff, cram: see stuff, stop, v.] I. n. 1. Substance or material in some definite state, form, or situation; any particular kind, mass, or aggregation of matter or things; material in some distinct or limited sense, whether raw, or wrought or to be wrought into form.

Of suche a stuffe as easy is to fynde
Is best to bilde.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 15.

The wit and mind of man, if it work upon matter, . . . worketh according to the stuff.
Bacon, Advancement of Learning, i. 44.

The breccia, too, is quite comparable to moraine stuff.
J. Geikie, Geol. Sketches, ii. 4.

The stiff upstanding of fine young stuff, hazel, ash, and so on, tapering straight as a fishing-rod, and knobbing out on either side with scarcely controllable bulges.
R. D. Blackmore, Cripps, the Carrier, xxiv.

2. Incorporeal or psychical substance of some special kind; that which arises from or constitutes mind, character, or quality; any immaterial effluence, influence, principle, or essence. See mind-stuff.

Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience
To do no contrived murder. Shak., Othello, i. 2. 2.

As soon as my soul enters into heaven, I shall be able to say to the angels, I am of the same stuff as you, spirit and spirit.
Donne, Sermons, xii.

Do not squander time; for that is the stuff which life is made of.
Franklin, Way to Wealth, § 1.

The spirit of Ximenes was of too stern a stuff to be so easily extinguished by the breath of royal displeasure.
Prescott, Ferd. and Isa., ii. 25.

3. Goods; possessions in a general sense; baggage: now chiefly in the phrase household stuff.

Assemblit were sone the same in the fight,
And restorit full stithly the stuff of the Grekes.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 5775.

I will not stay to-night for all the town;
Therefore away, to get our stuff aboard.
Shak., C. of E., iv. 4. 162.

I have good household stuff, though I say it, both brass and pewter, linens and woollens. Steele, Spectator, No. 324.

4. Something made up, or prepared or designed, for some specific use. (a) Woven material; a textile fabric of any kind; specifically, a woolen fabric.

At my little mercer's in Lumbard Street, . . . and there cheapened some stuffs to hang my room.
Pepys, Diary, II. 434.

(b) A preparation of any kind to be swallowed, as food, drink, or medicine.

I . . . did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease
The present power of life.
Shak., Cymbeline, v. 5. 255.

(c) Ready money; cash; means in general. [Colloq.]

But has she got the stuff, Mr. Fag? is she rich, hey?
Sheridan, The Rivals, i. 1.

(d) A preparation or composition for use in some industrial process or operation. Among the many things technically known as stuff in this sense are (1) ground paper-stock ready for use, the material before the final preparation being called half-stock; (2) the composition of tallow with various oils, wax, etc. (also called dubbing), used in a hot state by curriers to fill the pores of leather; (3) the similar composition of turpentine, tallow, etc., with which the masts, sides, and other parts of wooden ships are smeared for preservation; (4) the mixture of alum and salt used by bakers for whitening bread. For others, see phrases below.

5. Unwrought matter; raw material to be worked over, or to be used in making or producing something: as, bread*stuffs* (see bread-stuff); food*stuff*; rough stuff (for carpenters' use); the vein-stuff of mines.

The stuff, i. e., the mixed ore, veinstone, and country rock, having been cleansed, it is now possible to make a separation by hand.
Encyc. Brit., XVI. 463.

6. Refuse or useless material; that which is to be rejected or cast aside; in mining, attle or rubbish. Hence—7. Intellectual trash or rubbish; foolish or irrational expression; fustian; twaddle: often in the exclamatory phrase stuff and nonsense!

A Deal of such Stuff they sung to the deaf Ocean.
N. Bailey, tr. of Colloquies of Erasmus, I. 278.

8†. Supply or amount of something; stock; provision; quantity; extent; vigor.

That they leve resonable stuff [of fuel] upon the bak fro spryng to spryng, to serue the pouere people of penyworthes and halfpeny worthez in the neep sesons.
English Gilds (E. E. T. S.), p. 425.

I have but easy stuffe of money withinne me, for so meche as the seison of the yer is not yet growen.
Paston Letters, I. 61.

Clear stuff, in carp., boards free from imperfections such as knots, wind-shakes, and ring-hearts.—Coarse stuff, in building, a mixture of lime and hair used in the first coat and floating of plastering.—Fine, free, inch stuff. See the qualifying words.—Gaged stuff. Same as gage-stuff.—Quarter stuff, in carp. See quarter-stuff.—Red stuff, a watchmakers' name for crocus, or oxid-of-iron powder.—Small stuff (naut.). See small.—The real stuff. See real[1].—Touching-stuff, in aquatint engraving, a composition of the ashes of cork, ivory-black, and gall with treacle, made into a ball, and used with water for touching up the dark parts of the plate.—White stuff, a gilders' composition, formed of size and whiting, used in forming a surface over wood that is to be gilded.

II. a. Made of stuff, especially of light woolen fabric.—Stuff gown, a gown made of stuff, as distinguished from one of finer material, as silk; especially, in legal phraseology, the gown of a junior barrister; hence, in England, a junior barrister, or one under the rank of king's counsel.

There she sat, . . . in her brown stuff gown, her check apron, white handkerchief, and cap.
Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xvi.

Stuff hat, a hat made in imitation of beaver, the fur of various animals being applied to a foundation which is rendered water-proof by the application of varnish.

stuff (stuf), v. [Early mod. E. also stuffe; < ME. stuffen; from the noun.] I. trans. 1. To fill with any kind of stuff or loose material; cram full; load to excess; crowd with something: as, to stuff the ears with cotton.

If you will go, I will stuff your purses full of crowns.
Shak., 1 Hen. IV., i. 2. 146.

2. Specifically, to fill with stuffing or packing; cram the cavity of with material suitable for the special use or occasion: as, to stuff a cushion or a bedtick; to stuff a turkey or a leg of veal for roasting.—3. To cause to appear stuffed; puff or swell out; distend. [Rare.]

Lest the gods for sin
Should with a swelling dropsy stuff thy skin.
Dryden, tr. of Persius's Satires, v. 273.

4. To fill the prepared skin of (an animal), for the purpose of restoring and preserving its natural form and appearance: the process includes wiring and mounting. See taxidermy and stuffing, n., 3.

A few stuffed animals (as the Rector was fond of natural history) added to the impressive character of the apartment.
Scott, Heart of Mid-Lothian, xxx.i.

5. Figuratively, to fill, cram, or crowd with something of an immaterial nature: as, to stuff a poem with mawkish sentiment.

Well stuffed with all maner of goodnesse.
Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 6378.

You have a learned head, stuff it with libraries.
Fletcher, Spanish Curate, iv. 5.

6. To use as stuffing or filling; dispose of by crowding, cramming, or packing.

Put them [roses] into . . . a glass with a narrow mouth, stuffing them close together.
Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 365.

A woman was busy making a clearance of such articles as she could stuff away in corners and behind chairs.
Chambers's Jour., LV. 42.

7. To constitute a filling for; be crowded into; occupy so as to fill completely.

With inward arms the dire machine they load,
And iron bowels stuff the dark abode.
Dryden, Æneid, ii. 26.

8. To apply stuff to; treat with stuff, in some technical sense. See stuff, n., 4 (d) (2).

Ordinarily the hand process of stuffing leather is accomplished after rolling the sides into bundles with the grain side in, and softening them by treating or beating.
C. T. Davis, Leather, p. 409.

9†. To stock or supply; provide with a quota or outfit; furnish; replenish.

He stuffed alle castelle
Wyth armyre & vytelle.
Arthur (ed. Furnivall), l. 549.

Stithe shippes & stoure stuffet with vitell,
All full vpon flote with fyne pepull in.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 2748.

The same nyght I cam to Placiencia or Plesaunce; ther I stuffed me wt wyne and bred and other caseles as me thowght necessary for me at that tyme.
Torkington, Diarie of Eng. Travell, p. 5.

10. To deceive with humorous intent; gull. [Colloq.]—To stuff a ballot-box, to thrust into a ballot-box surreptitiously fraudulent ballots, or any ballots which have not actually been cast by legal voters. [U. S.]—To stuff out, to fill, round, or puff out; swell to the full; distend; expand.

Stuffe out his vacant garments with his form.
Shak., K. John, iii. 4. 97.

II. intrans. To eat greedily; play the glutton.

He longed to lay him down upon the shelly bed, and stuff; He had often eaten oysters, but had never had enough.
W. S. Gilbert, Etiquette.

stuff-chest (stuf'chest), n. In paper-manuf., a vat in which the pulp is mixed preparatory to molding.

stuffed (stuft), p. a. 1. Filled with or as with stuffing.—2. Having the nose obstructed, as during a cold.

I am stuffed, cousin; I cannot smell.
Shak., Much Ado, iii. 4. 64.

3. In bot., filled with a cottony web or spongy mass which is distinct from the walls: said of stems of fungi.

stuff-engine (stuf'en″jin), n. In paper-manuf., a pulp-grinder.

stuffer (stuf'ėr), n. [< stuff + -er[1].] 1. One who stuffs, or does anything called stuffing: as, a bird-stuffer; a ballot-box stuffer.—2. That which stuffs; specifically, a machine or an instrument for performing any stuffing operation: as, a sausage-stuffer; a stuffer for horse-collars.

They [tomatoes] fall into the hopper, and are fed by the stuffer, a cylinder worked by a treadle, into the can.
Workshop Receipts, 2d ser., p. 445.

stuff-gownsman (stuf'gounz″man), n. A junior barrister; a stuff gown. See stuff, a.

stuffiness (stuf'i-nes), n. 1. The state or property of being stuffy, close, or musty: as, the stuffiness of a room.—2. The condition of being stuffed, or stuffed up, as by a cold. [Rare.]

As soon as one [cold] has departed with the usual final stage of stuffiness, another presents itself.
George Eliot, in Cross, II. xii.

★stuffing (stuf'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stuff, v.] 1. The material used for filling a cushion, a mattress, a horse-collar, the skin of a bird or other animal, etc.

Your titles are not writ on posts,
Or hollow statues which the best men are,
Without Promethean stuffings reached from heaven!
B. Jonson, Poetaster, v. 1.

2. In cookery, seasoned or flavored material, such as bread-crumbs, chestnuts, mashed potatoes, or oysters, used for filling the body of a fowl, or the hollow from which a bone has been taken in a joint of meat, before cooking, to keep the whole in shape, and to impart flavor.

Ridley, a little of the stuffing. It 'll make your hair curl.
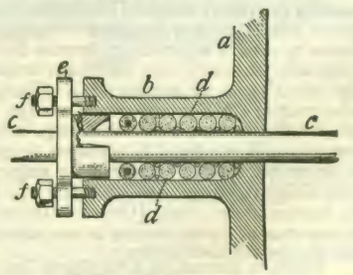
Thackeray, Philip, xvi.

Geese and ducks to be freighted hereafter with savoury stuffing.
Lemon, Wait for the End, I. 14.

3. The art or operation of filling and mounting the skin of an animal; taxidermy. Two main methods of stuffing are distinguished as soft and hard. In the former the skin is wired, or otherwise fixed on an internal framework, and cotton or tow is introduced bit by bit, till the desired form is secured. In the latter a solid mass of tow, shaped like the animal, is introduced within the skin, which is then molded upon this artificial body. Hard stuffing is usually practised upon birds.

4. A filling of indifferent or superfluous material for the sake of extension, as in a book; padding.



If these topics be insufficient habitually to supply what compositors call the requisite stuffing, . . . recourse is to be had to reviews.
W. Taylor, in Robberds's Memoir, I. 425. (Davies.)

5. A mixture of fish-oil and tallow rubbed into leather to soften it and render it supple and water-proof. E. H. Knight.

The leather to receive grease or stuffing is usually placed in a rotating drum or wheel. C. T. Davis, Leather, p. 410.

6. The wooden wedges or folds of paper used to wedge the plates of a comb-cutter's saw into the two grooves in the stock.—Rough stuffing, a composition of yellow ocher, white lead, varnish, and japan, used as a groundwork in painting carriages.

stuffing-box (stuf'ing-boks), n. In mach., a contrivance for securing a steam-, air-, or water-tight joint when it is required to pass a movable rod out of a vessel or into it. It consists of a close box cast round the hole through which the rod passes, in which is laid, around the rod and in contact a, cylinder-head; b, box cast integrally with the head a; c, piston-rod; d, d, packing wound about the rod; e, follower for compressing the packing; f, f, bolts and nuts for forcing the follower against the packing.

Stuffing-box in Steam-engine.

with it, a quantity of hemp or India-rubber or metallic ring packing. This packing is lubricated with oily matter, and a gland or flanged cylinder is then placed on the top of it and pressed down by screws, so as to squeeze the packing into every crevice. The stuffing-box is used in steam-engines, in pumps, on the shaft of a screw steamer where it passes through the stern, etc. Also called packing-box.—Lantern stuffing-box, a long stuffing-box with tightening-bolts, used in some marine engines.

stuffing-brush (stuf'ing-brush), n. A stiff brush for rubbing stuffing into leather.

stuffing-machine (stuf'ing-ma-shēn″), n. In tanning and currying, a machine for working stuffing into leather.

stuffing-wheel (stuf'ing-hwēl), n. In tanning, a stuffing-machine in which leather is worked with stuffing in a revolving hollow drum, the heat being variously applied by a steam-jacket, an internal steam-coil, or (now rarely) by direct admission of steam into the drum.

stuffy (stuf'i), a. [< stuff + -y[1].] 1. Close, as if from being stuffed and unaired; musty from closeness; oppressive to the head or lungs.

The huts let in the frost in winter and the heat in summer, and were at once stuffy and draughty.
Mrs. J. H. Ewing, Short Life, ii.

2. Stuffed out; fat: said of a person. [Prov. Eng.]—3. Affected as if by stuffing; muffled: said of the voice or speech.

Why, this was Mrs. Vangilt herself; her own stuffy voice, interspersed with the familiar coughs and gasps Harper's Mag., LXXIX. 548.

4. Made of good stuff; stout; resolute; mettlesome. [Scotch.]—5. Angry; sulky; obstinate. R. Kipling, Stalky and Co., p. 86. [Colloq.]

stuggy (stug'i), a. [A dial. var. of stogy, stocky.] Stocky; thick-set; stout. [Devonshire, Eng.]

We are of a thickset breed. . . . Like enough, we could meet them, man for man, . . . and show them what a cross-buttock means, because we are so stuggy.
R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, v.

stuke†, n. An old spelling of stuck[4].

stull[1] (stul), n. [Prob. < G. stolle, < MHG. stolle, OHG. stollo, a support, prop, post. Cf. stool, stulm.] In mining, a heavy timber secured in an excavation, and especially in the stopes. On the stulls rests the lagging, and they together form the support for the attle, or deads, which is left in the mine partly to keep the excavation from falling together and partly to avoid the expense of raising worthless rock.

stull[2] (stul), n. [Origin obscure.] A luncheon; also, a large piece of bread, cheese, or other eatable. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

stulp† (stulp), n. [E. dial. also stolp, stoup, stoop[4]; early mod. E. stoulpe; < ME. stulpe, stolpe, < Icel. stölpi = Sw. Dan. stolpe = MD. stolpe, a post, pillar. Cf. stull[1].] A short stout post of wood or stone set in the ground for any purpose.

But III foote high on stulpes must ther be A floor for hem.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 39.

stultification (stul[/]ti-fi-kā'shon), n. [< LL. stultificare, turn into foolishness (see stultify), + -ation.] The act of stultifying, or the state of being stultified. Imp. Dict.

stultifier (stul'ti-fī-ėr), n. [< stultify + -er[1].] One who or that which stultifies.

stultify (stul'ti-fī), v. t.; pret. and pp. stultified, ppr. stultifying. [< LL. stultificare, turn into foolishness, < L. stultus, foolish, silly, + facere, make.] 1. To make or cause to appear foolish; reduce to foolishness or absurdity: used of persons or things.

We stick at technical difficulties. I think there never was a people so choked and stultified by forms.
Emerson, Affairs in Kansas.

Mythologists . . . contrived . . . to stultify the mythology they professed to explain.
E. B. Tylor, Prim. Culture, I. 252.

2. To look upon as a fool; regard as foolish. [Rare.]

The modern sciolist stultifies all understandings but his own, and that which he regards as his own.
Hazlitt. (Imp. Dict.)

To stultify one's self. (a) To deny, directly or by implication, what one has already asserted; expose one's self to the charge of self-contradiction. (b) In law, to allege one's own insanity.

stultiloquence (stul-til'ō-kwens), n. [< L. stultiloquentia, foolish talk, babbling, < stultiloquen(t-)s, equiv. to stultiloquus, talking foolishly: see stultiloquent.] Foolish or stupid talk; senseless babble. Bailey, 1731.

stultiloquent (stul-til'ō-kwent), a. [< L. stultiloquen(t-)s*, equiv. to stultiloquus, talking foolishly, < stultus, foolish, + loquen(t-)s, ppr. of loqui, talk, speak.] Given to stultiloquence, or foolish talk. Imp. Dict.

stultiloquently (stul-til'ō-kwent-li), adv. In a stultiloquent manner; with foolish talk.

stultiloquy (stul-til'ō-kwi), n. [< L. stultiloquium, foolish talking, < stultiloquus, talking foolishly: see stultiloquent.] Foolish talk; silly babbling. [Rare.]

What they call facetiousness and pleasant wit is indeed to all wise persons a mere stultiloquy, or talking like a fool. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 741.

stulty†, a. [< L. stultus, foolish.] Foolish; stupid.

Shall fire ben blamed for it brend a foole naturally by his own stulty wit in stering?
Testament of Love, ii. (Richardson.)

stum (stum), n. [Also dial. stoom; < D. stom, unfermented wine, must, < stom, mute, quiet, = OS. stum = MLG. stum, LG. stumm = OHG. MHG. stum, G. stumm = Sw. Dan. stum, dumb, mute; akin to stem[3], v., stammer. Cf. F. vin muet, 'mute wine.'] Unfermented or partly fermented grape-juice. Specifically—(a) Must which has not yet begun to ferment. (b) Must the fermentation of which has been checked by some ingredient mixed with it.

Let our wines without mixture or stum be all fine,
Or call up the master, and break his dull noddle.
B. Jonson, Leges Convivales, v.

stum (stum), v. t.; pret. and pp. stummed, ppr. stumming. [Also stoom; < D. stommen; from the noun: see stum, n.] 1. To prevent from fermenting; operate upon (wine) in a manner to prevent after-fermentation in casks. A common method is, before filling them, to burn sulphur in the casks with the bung-holes stopped. The sulphur is coated upon a linen rag, lighted, and then dropped in through the bung-hole, which is thereupon immediately closed. The wood of the cask is thus saturated with sulphur dioxid, which destroys all the germs of fermentation contained in it, and when the wine is put in a minute portion of the sulphur dioxid is dissolved in the liquor. Sodium sulphite added to wine in small quantity produces a similar result. Salicylic acid in minute quantity also prevents after-fermentation. A few drops of oil of mustard or a little mustard-seed dropped into wine will also stum it.

When you with High-Dutch Heeren dine, Expect false Latin and stum'd Wine.
Prior, Upon a Passage in Scaligeriana.

We stum our wines to renew their spirits.
Sir J. Floyer.

2. To fume with sulphur or brimstone, as a cask. [Prov. Eng.]

stumble (stum'bl), v.; pret. and pp. stumbled, ppr. stumbling. [< ME. stumblen, stomblen, stumlen, stummelen, stomelen, stomelin = MD. stomelen, D. stommelen, stumble, = OHG. stumbalōn, bustle, = Sw. dial. stambla, stammla, stomla = Norw. stumbla, stumble, falter; a var. of stummer, q. v., and ult. of stammer. Cf. stump.] I. intrans. 1. To slip or trip in moving on the feet; make a false step; strike the foot, or miss footing, so as to stagger or fall.

He made the kynge Rion for to stomble, that was sory for his brasen malle that he hadde so loste.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 339.

If my horse had happened to stumble, he had fallen downe with me. Coryat, Crudities, I. 89.

Stumbling at every obstacle . . . left in the path, he at last . . . attained a terrace extending in front of the Place of Fairladies. Scott, Redgauntlet, ch. xv.

2. To move or act unsteadily or in a staggering manner; trip in doing or saying anything; make false steps or blunders, as from confusion or inattention: as, to stumble through a performance.

Fray Inocencio, who was terribly frightened at speaking to so great a personage, grew pale and stumbled in his speech. The Century, XXXVIII. 351.

3. To take a false step or be staggered mentally or morally; trip, as against a stumbling-block; find an occasion of offense; be offended or tempted.

He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him. 1 John ii. 10.

This Article of God's sending his Son into the World, which they seem most to stumble at.
Stillingfleet, Sermons, III. ix.

4. To come accidentally or unexpectedly; chance; happen; light: with on or upon.

Chance sometimes, in experimenting, maketh us to stumble upon somewhat which is new.
Bacon, Praise of Knowledge (ed. 1887).

On what evil day
Has he then stumbled?
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I. 415.

II. trans. 1. To cause to stumble; cause to trip; stagger; trip up.

False and dazzling fires to stumble men.
Milton, Divorce, ii. 3.

2. To puzzle; perplex; embarrass; nonplus; confound. [Archaic.]

One thing more stumbles me in the very foundation of this hypothesis. Locke.

We do not wonder he [President Edwards] was stumbled with this difficulty, for it is simply fatal to his theory.
Bibliotheca Sacra, XLV. 616.

stumble (stum'bl), n. [< stumble, v.] 1. The act of stumbling; a trip in walking or running.

He would have tripped at the upward step. . . . Then he apologized for his little stumble.
Trollope, Last Chron. of Barset, xlix.

2. A blunder; a failure; a false step.

One stumble is enough to deface the character of an honourable life. Sir R. L'Estrange.

stumbler (stum'blėr), n. [< ME. stumlere, stomelare; < stumble + -er[1].] One who stumbles, in any sense. G. Herbert, Church Porch.

stumbling-block (stum'bling-blok), n. Any cause of stumbling or failing; that which presents itself as a difficulty in one's way; a hindrance or obstruction, physically or morally; an offense or temptation.

We preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling-block, and unto the Greeks foolishness. 1 Cor. i. 23.

Indeed this [coasting trade-wind] was the great stumbling block that we met with in running from the Gallapagos Islands for the Island Cocos.
Dampier, Voyages, II. iii. 15.

stumblingly (stum'bling-li), adv. In a stumbling or blundering manner.

I . . . marvel . . . that wee in this cleare age make so stumblingly after him [Chaucer].
Sir P. Sidney, Apol. for Poetrie, p. 62.

stumbling-stone (stum'bling-stōn), n. Same as stumbling-block.

This stumblingstone we hope to take away.
T. Burnet, Theory of the Earth.

stumbly (stum'bli), a. [< stumble + -y[1].] Liable to stumble; given to stumbling. [Rare.]

The miserable horses of the peasants are awfully slow and very stumbly. The Century, XL. 570.

stummel (stum'el), n. The short part of a tobacco-pipe, consisting of the pipe-bowl and a short section of the stem or a socket for the attachment of a stem or mouthpiece. Heyl, U. S. Import Duties (1889), iii. 95.

stummer (stum'ėr), v. i. [< ME. stomeren = Icel. Norw. stumra = Dan. stumre, stumble; cf. stumble and stammer.] To stumble. [Prov. Eng.]

★stump (stump), n. and a. [Early mod. E. also stompe; < ME. stumpe, stompe = MD. stompe, D. stomp = OHG. stumph, MHG. G. stumpf = Icel. stumpr = Dan. Sw. stump, a stump, = Lith. stambras, a stump; Skt. stambha, a post, stem. Cf. stub.] I. n. 1. The truncated lower end of a tree or large shrub; the part of a vegetable trunk or stem of some size left rooted in the ground when the main part falls or is cut down; after eradication, the stub with the attached roots; used absolutely, the stub of a tree: as, the stump of an oak; cabbage-stumps; to clear a field of stumps.

Their courtly figures, seated on the stump
Of an old yew, their favorite resting-place.
Wordsworth, Excursion, vi.

They disposed themselves variously on stumps and boulders, and sat expectant. Bret Harte, Tennessee's Partner.

2. A truncated part of anything extended in length; that part which remains after the main or more important part has been removed; a stub: as, the stump of a limb; the stump of a tooth; a cigar-stump.

The stumpe of Dagon, whose head and hands were cut off by his fall. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 80.

A Gauntlet of hot Oil was clapped upon the stump [of an amputated arm], to stanch the Blood.
Howell, Letters, I. i. 18.

3. pl. Legs: as, to stir one's stumps. [Colloq.]

How should we bustle forward? give some counsel
How to bestir our stumps in these cross ways.
B. Jonson, Tale of a Tub, iii. 1.

4. A post. [Prov. Eng.]—5. One of the three posts constituting a wicket in the game of cricket. They are called respectively the leg-stump (next to which the batsman stands), middle stump, and off-stump. Their lower ends are pointed so as to be easily driven into the ground; the height at which they stand when fixed is 27 inches, and the width of the three, including the space between them, 8 inches. The top of each stump is grooved, and in the grooves the two small pieces of wood called bails, each 4 inches long, are laid from stump to stump.

6. A rubbing instrument used for toning the lights and shades of crayon- or charcoal-drawings, and sometimes for softening or broadening the lines of pencil-drawings and for applying solid tints with powdered colors. It is a short thick roll of paper or soft leather, or a bar of india-rubber, pointed at both ends.—7. In a lock, a projection on which a dog, fence, or tumbler rests. Sometimes it is introduced to prevent the improper retraction of the bolt, and sometimes to guide a moving part.—8. A place or an occasion of popular political oratory; a political rostrum or platform; hence, partizan public speaking; popular advocacy of a cause: as, to take the stump, or go on the stump, for a candidate. This meaning of the word arose from the frequent early use in the United States of a tree-stump as a rostrum in open-air political meetings. It does not necessarily convey a derogatory implication.

Superficial politicians on the stump still talk of the Gladstonian policy of 1886 as if it existed in 1889.
Nineteenth Century, XXVI. 748.

9. In coal-mining, a small pillar of coal left between the gangway or airway and the breasts to protect these passages; any small pillar. Penn. Surv. Gloss.—10. A blunted sound: a sound which seems to be suddenly cut off or stopped; a thud. [Rare.]

Far up the valley the distant stump of a musket-shot reaches our ears. The Century, XXXVIII. 399.

11. A challenge or defiance to do something considered impracticable, very difficult, or very daring—that is, something to stump the person attempting it. [Colloq., U. S.]

The reason for this little freak was a stump on the part of some musicians, because . . . it was not supposed he could handle a baton. He did it. Elect. Rev. (Amer.), XIV. 4.

12. In entom., a very short vein or nervure of the wing, arising from another vein, and suddenly ending without emitting branches.—13. Of worms, a foot-stump. See parapodium, 1.—To start a vessel from the stump. See start[1].—Up a stump, stumped; nonplussed; "up a tree."

II. a. 1. Stumped; stumpy; truncated; like a stump or stub: as, a dog with a stump tail.

A heavie stompe leg of wood to go withall. Ascham, The Scholemaster, p. 127.

2. Of or pertaining to the stump in the political sense: as, a stump speech or speaker; stump eloquence.

The florid eloquence of his [Lincoln's] stump speeches. The Century, XXXIX. 575.

Stump tracery, in arch., a name for a late German variety of interpenetrating medieval Pointed tracery, in which the molded bar is represented as contorted and passing through itself at intervals, and cut off short so as to form a stump after every such interpenetration.

stump (stump), v. [Also stomp; < stump, n.] I. trans. 1. To truncate; lop; reduce to a stump.

Around the stumped top soft mosse did grow. Dr. H. More, Psychozoia, ii. 59.

2. To strike unexpectedly and sharply, as the foot or toes, against something fixed; stub: as, to stump one's toe against a stone. [Colloq.]—3. To bring to a halt by obstacle or impediment; block the course of; stall; foil: of American origin, from the obstruction to vehicles offered by stumps left in a cleared tract without a road. [Colloq.]

Be inventive. Cultivate the creative side of your brain. Don't be stumped. Sci. Amer., N. S., LVIII. 337.

Uncle Sam himself confesses that he can do everything but enjoy himself. That, he admits, stumps him. Harper's Mag., LXXVIII. 977.

Hence—4. To challenge or dare to do something difficult, dangerous, or adventurous. [Colloq., U. S.]

In some games . . . younger children are commanded, or older ones stumped or dared, to do dangerous things, like walking a picket fence or a high roof. Amer. Jour. Psychol., III. 66.

5. To make stump speeches in or to; canvass or address with stump oratory: as, to stump a county or a constituency. [Colloq.]—6. In cricket: (a) To knock down a stump or the stumps of.

A herd of boys with clamour bowl'd,
And stump'd the wicket. Tennyson, Princess, Prol.

(b) To put (a batsman) out by knocking down his wicket with the ball when, in an attempt to hit the ball, he has gone off the ground allotted to him: sometimes with out: as, he was stumped, or stumped out. Hence—7. To defeat; impoverish; ruin.

Don't you know our history?—haven't you heard, my dear fellow, we are stumped? T. Hook, Gilbert Gurney, xiv.

[He] had shrunk his "weak means," and was stump'd and "hard up." Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, II. 47.

8. To pay on the spot; plank down; hand over: generally with up. [Slang.]

My trusty old crony,
Do stump up three thousand once more as a loan. Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, II. 48.

How much is the captain going to stump up? R. D. Blackmore, Christowell, I. xxiii.

9. In art, to use a stump upon; tone or modify by the application of a stump: as, to stump a crayon- or charcoal-drawing.—10. In hat-making, to stretch out (a felted wool hat) after the operation of washing, and prior to drying.

II. intrans. 1. To walk stiffly, heavily, or noisily, as if on stumps or wooden legs.

He rose from his seat, stumped across the room. Scott, Heart of Mid-Lothian, xii.

The guard picks him off the coach-top and sets him on his legs, and they stump off into the bar. T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Rugby, i. 4.

2. To make stump speeches; conduct electioneering by public speaking; make harangues from the stump. See stump, n., 8. [Colloq.]

There will be a severe contest between the Conservatives, who are stumping vigorously, and Mr. —— and the Republicans. The Nation, VI. 242.

To stump it. (a) To take to flight; run off. [Slang.]

Stump it, my cove; that's a Bow-street runner. Bulwer, Night and Morning, ii. 2.

★(b) To travel about making stump speeches. [Colloq.]

stumpage (stum'pāj), n. [< stump + -age.] 1. Standing timber; timber-trees collectively, as in a particular tract of forest, with reference to their value for cutting or stumping, independently of that of the land. [U. S.]

No forest lands are to be sold, but the stumpage on them may be disposed of in the discretion of the commissioner of forests. Sci. Amer., N. S., LVIII. 98.

2. A tax levied in some of the United States on the amount and value of timber cut for commercial purposes.

★stumper (stum'pėr), n. [< stump + -er[1].] One who or that which stumps, in any sense.

"How many legs has a caterpillar got?" I need hardly add that the question was a stumper to the good bishop. N. and Q., 7th ser., XI. 117.

stump-extractor (stump'eks-trak'tor), n. 1. A tool or appliance for removing the stumps of trees in clearing woodland. They range from a simple hand-lever and cant-hook to frames and tripods or strong four-wheel carriages bearing a screw, toggle-joint, tackle, or windlass operated by hand- or horse-power. Also called stump-puller.

2. A dental instrument for extracting the stumps of teeth.

stumpiness (stum'pi-nes), n. The state or condition of being stumpy.

stump-joint (stump'joint), n. A form of joint in which the ends or stumps of the parts joined rest against each other when in line, and permit movement in but one direction, as the joint of the common carpenters' rule. See cut under rule-joint.

stump-puller (stump'půl'ėr), n. Same as stump-extractor, 1.

stump-tailed (stump'tāld), a. Having a short stumpy tail; bobtailed; curtal.

stump-tree (stump'trē), n. The Kentucky coffee-tree, Gymnocladus dioica: so called from its lack of small branches. See cut under Gymnocladus.

stumpy (stum'pi), a. [< stump + -y[1]. Cf. stubby.] 1. Abounding with stumps of trees.

We were shaving stumpy shores, like that at the foot of Madrid bend. S. L. Clemens, Life on the Mississippi, p. 134.

2. Having the character or appearance of a stump; short and thick; stubby; stocky.

A pair of stumpy bow-legs supported his squat, unwieldy figure. Poe, King Pest.

A thick-set, stumpy old copy of Richard Baxter's "Holy Commonwealth." J. T. Fields, Underbrush, p. 15.

stumpy (stum'pi), n. [< stump, v. t., 8.] Ready money; cash. [Slang.]

Down with the stumpy; a tizzy for a pot of half-and-half. Kingsley, Alton Locke, ii. (Davies.)

★stun[1] (stun), v. t.; pret. and pp. stunned, ppr. stunning. [< ME. stonien, stownien, < AS. stunian, make a din; cf. Icel. stynja, Sw. stöna, Dan. stönne, D. stenen (> G. stöhnen), groan (Icel. stynr, etc., a groan); AS. pret. ā-sten for ā-stæn*, implying an orig. strong verb stenan*; OBulg. stenja, Russ. stenatĭ, Lith. steneti, Gr. στένειν, groan; Skt. √ stan, sound, thunder. Hence the dial. or obs. var. stound[3]; also in comp. astun, astound, astony, astonish, etc., with variations due in part to confusion with other words: see the words cited.] 1. To strike the ears of rudely, as it were by blows of sound; shock the hearing or the sense of; stupefy or bewilder by distracting noise.

We were stunned with these confused noises. Addison, Tatler, No. 254.

Tho' Shouts of Thunder loud afflict the Air, Stun the Birds now releas'd, and shake the Ivy'ry Chair. Prior, Solomon, iii.

2. To strike with stupor physically, as by a blow or violence of any kind; deprive of consciousness or strength.

So was he stound with stroke of her huge taile. Spenser, F. Q., V. xi. 29.

The giddy ship betwixt the winds and tides,
Forc'd back and forwards, in a circle rides,
Stunn'd with the different blows. Dryden, Cym. and Iph., l. 341.

3. To benumb; stupefy; deaden.

That she [the cramp-fish] not onely stayes them in the Deep,
But stuns their sense, and luls them fast a-sleep. Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, i. 5.

The assailants, . . . stunned by the furious, unexpected, and multiplied nature of the resistance offered, could hardly stand to their arms. Scott, Quentin Durward, xxxvi.

The little weak infant soul, which had just awakened in her, had been crushed and stunned in its very birthhour. Kingsley, Hypatia, xxviii.

4. To strike with astonishment; astound; amaze.

At the sight, therefore, of this River the Pilgrims were much stunned. Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, i.

The multitude, unacquainted with the best models, are captivated by whatever stuns and dazzles them. Macaulay, Madame D'Arblay.

★stun[1] (stun), n. [< stun[1], v. Cf. stound[2].] A stroke; a shock; a stupefying blow, whether physical or mental; a stunning effect.

With such a stun
Came the amazement that, absorb'd in it,
He saw not fiercer wonders. Keats, Endymion, ii.

The electrical stun is a stun too quickly applied to be painful. Sci. Amer., N. S., LXIII. 200.

stun[2] (stun), n. [Origin obscure.] In marble-working, one of the deep marks made by coarse particles of sand getting between the saw-blade and the side of the kerf. O. Byrne.

stundt†, n. See stound[1].

stung (stung). Preterit and past participle of sting[1].

stunk (stungk). Preterit and past participle of stink.

stunner (stun'ėr), n. [< stun[1] + -er[1].] One who or that which stuns, or excites astonishment; a person, an action, or a thing that astounds or amazes. [Colloq.]

I am busy working a cap for you, dear aunty, . . . and I think when finished [it] will be quite a stunner. E. B. Ramsay, Scottish Life and Character, iv.

stunning (stun'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stun[1], v.] The act or condition expressed by the verb stun; stupefaction.

They [symptoms of pathological collapse] appear in succession, and run from a condition of stunning or partial torpor into a state of general insensibility. J. M. Carnochan, Operative Surgery, p. 98.

stunning (stun'ing), p. a. [Ppr. of stun[1], v.] Very striking; astonishing, especially by fine quality or appearance; of a most admirable or wonderful kind. [Colloq.]

He heard another say that he would tell them of a stunning workhouse for a good supper and breakfast. Ribton-Turner, Vagrants and Vagrancy, p. 294.

What a stunning tap, Tom! You are a wunner for bottling the swipes. T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Rugby, ii. 3.

stunningly (stun'ing-li), adv. In a stunning manner; so as to produce a stunning effect. [Chiefly colloq.]

Gale, . . . visible by the tossing boughs, stunningly audible. The Century, XXVII. 36.

stunsail (stun'sl), n. A nautical contraction of studdingsail.

stunt (stunt), a. [< ME. stunt, < AS. stunt, dull, obtuse, stupid, = Icel. stuttr (for stuntr*) = OSw. stunt = Norw. stutt, short, stunted.] 1†. Dull; obtuse; stupid; foolish. Ormulum, l. 3714.—2. Fierce; angry. [Prov. Eng.]

stunt (stunt), v. t. [< ME. stunten; < stunt, a. Cf. stint, a var. of stunt, v.; cf. also stut[2].] 1. To make a fool of. [Prov. Eng.]—2. To check; cramp; hinder; stint: used of growth or progress.

Oligarchy, wherever it has existed, has always stunted the growth of genius. Macaulay, Mitford's Hist. Greece.

3. To check the growth or development of: hinder the increase or progress of; cramp; dwarf: as, to stunt a child by hard usage.

The hardy sect grew up and flourished in spite of everything that seemed likely to stunt it. Macaulay, Nugent's Hampden.

★stunt (stunt), n. [< stunt, v.] 1. An animal which has been prevented from attaining its proper growth; a stunted creature; specifically, a whale of two years, which, having been weaned, is lean, and yields but little blubber.—2. A check in growth; a partial or complete arrest of development or progress.

Are not our educations commonly like a pile of books laid over a plant in a pot? The compressed nature struggles through at every crevice, but can never get the cramp and stunt out of it. Lowell, Fireside Travels, p. 137.

stunted (stun'ted), p. a. Checked in growth; undeveloped; dwarfed.

Where stunted birches hid the rill. Scott, Marmion, iii. 1.

There is a seed of the future in each of us, which we can unfold if we please, or leave to be forever only a stunted, half-grown stalk. J. F. Clarke, Self-Culture, p. 40.

I lived for years a stunted sunless life. Tennyson, Aylmer's Field.

stuntedness (stun'ted-nes), n. The state of being stunted.

stuntiness† (stun'ti-nes), n. Same as stuntedness. Cheyne, Philos. Conjectures. [Rare.]

stuntness (stunt'nes), n. [Prop. stuntedness.] Stunted brevity; shortness. [Rare.]

Short sentences are prevalent in our language, as long ones are in German. In all things we incline to curtness and stuntness. J. Earle.

stupa[1] (stū′pä), n.; pl. stupæ (-pē). [L.: see stupe[1].] 1. Same as stupe[1].—2. In bot., tufted or matted filamentous matter like tow.

stupa[2] (stō′pä), n. [< Skt. stūpa (> Hind. top, > E. tope: see tope), a mount, mound, accumulation.] In Buddhist arch., one of a class of dome-like edifices erected in honor of some event, or as a monument to mark a sacred spot. The sense is sometimes extended to include the dagoba, or shrine containing a relic of Buddha (see dagoba). Also called tope. See Buddhist architecture (b), under Buddhist.

stupe[1] (stūp). n. [< L. stupa, stuppa, < Gr. στύππη, the coarse part of flax, tow. Cf. stuff, stop.] 1. A pledget of tow, flannel, or similar material, used as a dressing in treating a wound.

The several stupes and dressings being skilfully applied, the children were ordered to their respective beds.
Brooke, Fool of Quality, iii.

2. Flannel or other cloth wrung out of hot water and applied as a fomentation. It may be sprinkled with some active substance, as turpentine.

Turpentine stupes applied over the chest.
J. M. Carnochan, Operative Surgery, p. 160.

stupe[1] (stūp), v. t.; pret. and pp. stuped, ppr. stuping. [< stupe[1], n.] To apply a stupe to; foment. Wiseman, Surgery.

stupe[2] (stūp), n. [An abbr. of stupid.] A stupid person. [Colloq.]

Was ever such a poor stupe!
Bickerstaff, Love in a Village, ii. 2.

stupefacient (stū-pē-fā′shient), a. and n. [< L. stupefacien(t-)s, ppr. of stupefacere, make stupid or senseless: see stupefy.] I. a. Having a stupefying power.

II. n. A medicine which produces stupor or insensibility; a narcotic.

stupefaction (stū-pē-fak′shọn), n. [= F. stupéfaction = Sp. estupefacción = Pg. estupefacção = It. stupefazione, < L. stupefacere, stupefy: see stupefy.] 1. The act of stupefying, or the state of being stupefied.—2. A stolid or senseless state; torpor; insensibility; stupidity.

Resistance of the dictates of conscience brings a hardness and stupefaction upon it. South.

Stupefaction is not resignation; and it is stupefaction to remain in ignorance. George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, v. 3.

stupefactive (stū-pē-fak′tiv), a. and n. [=OF. stupefactif, F. stupéfactif = Sp. Pg. estupefactivo = It. stupefattivo, < ML. stupefactivus, serving to stupefy, < L. stupefactus, pp. of stupefacere, stupefy: see stupefy.] I. a. Causing insensibility; deadening or blunting the sense of feeling or the understanding; stupefacient.

II. n. That which stupefies; specifically, a medicine that produces stupor; a stupefacient. [Rare.]

The operation of opium and stupefactives upon the spirits of living creatures. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 74.

stupefiedness (stū′pē-fīd-nes), n. The state of being stupefied; stupefaction; insensibility.

We know that insensibility of pain may as well proceed from the deadness and stupifiedness of the part as from a perfect and unmolested health. Boyle, Works, VI. 6.

stupefier (stū′pē-fī-ėr), n. [< stupefy + -er[1].] One who or that which stupefies, or makes insensible or stupid.

stupefy (stū′pē-fī), v.; pret. and pp. stupefied, ppr stupefying. [Formerly also stupify; = F. stupéfier (< L. as if stupeficare*), equiv. to It. stupefare, < L. stupefacere, make senseless, deaden, benumb, stupefy, < stupere, be struck senseless, + facere, make (see -fy).] I. trans. 1. To make stupid or torpid; blunt the faculties of; deprive of sensibility by any means; make dull or dead to external influences: as, to be stupefied by a blow on the head, by strong drink, or by grief.

The dead-numbing night-shade,
The stupefying hemlock, adder's tongue,
And martagan. B. Jonson, Sad Shepherd, ii. 2.

His anxiety stupefied instead of quickening his senses.
Mrs. Oliphant, Poor Gentleman, xlv.

2†. To deprive of mobility: said of a substance or material.

This stupifieth the quicksilver that it runneth no more.
Bacon, Physiol. Remains, Compounding of Metals.

II. intrans. To become stupid or torpid; lose interest or sensibility; grow dull. [Rare.]

I which live in the country without stupifying am not in darkness, but in shadow. Donne, Letters, iv.

stupend† (stū-pend′), a. [= Sp. Pg. estupendo = It. stupendo, < L. stupendus, astonishing: see stupendous.] Stupendous.

The Romans had their public baths very sumptuous and stupend. Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 285.

stupendious† (stū-pen′di-us), a. [An erroneous form for stupendous.] Stupendous.

There was not one Almighty to begin
The great stupendious Worke.
Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 19.

stupendiously† (stū-pen′di-us-li), adv. Stupendously. Sandys, Paraph. upon Lamentations.

stupendly† (stū-pend′li), adv. Stupendously; amazingly.

The Britons are so stupendly superstitious in their ceremonies that they go beyond those Persians.
Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 599.

stupendous (stū-pen′dus), a. [< L. stupendus, amazing, astonishing, fut. part. pass. of stupere, be stunned or astonished: see stupid.] Causing stupor or astonishment; astounding; amazing; specifically, astonishing from greatness in extent or degree; of wonderful magnitude; immense; prodigious: as, a stupendous work of nature or art; a stupendous blunder.

All are but parts of one stupendous whole.
Pope, Essay on Man, i. 267.

Like reptiles in a corner of some stupendous palace, we peep from our holes.
Goldsmith, Citizen of the World, xxii.

How stupendous a mystery is the incarnation and sufferings of the Son of God!
J. H. Newman, Parochial Sermons, i. 209.

stupendously (stū-pen′dus-li), adv. In a stupendous manner.

stupendousness (stū-pen′dus-nes), n. The character or state of being stupendous. Bailey, 1727.

stupent (stū′pent), a. [< L. stupen(t-)s, ppr. of stupere, be struck senseless, be stunned or astonished.] Struck with stupor; stunned; dumfounded; aghast. [Rare.]

We will say mournfully, in the presence of Heaven and Earth, that we stand speechless, stupent, and know not what to say! Carlyle. (Imp. Dict.) stupeous (stū′pē-us), a. [< L. stupa, stuppa, tow: see stupe[1].] In entom., covered with long, loose scales, like tow, as the palpi of some lepidopterous insects; stupose.

stupid (stū′pid), a. and n. [= F. stupide = Sp. estúpido = Pg. estupido = It. stupido, < L. stupidus, struck senseless, amazed, confounded, stupid, stolid, < stupere, be amazed or confounded, be struck senseless: see stupent.] I. a. 1. In a state of stupor; having the faculties deadened or dulled; stupefied, either permanently or temporarily; benumbed.

Is he not stupid
With age and altering rheums?
Shak., W. T., iv. 4. 409.

One cannot weep, his fears congeal his grief;
But, stupid, with dry eyes expects his fate.
Dryden, Ceyx and Alcyone, l. 179.

2. Lacking ordinary activity of mind; dull in ideas or expression; slow-witted; obtuse; crass.

A man who cannot write with wit on a proper subject is dull and stupid. Addison, Spectator, No. 291.

A stupid preacher of unrighteousness, who would constantly make them yawn. Whipple, Memoir of Starr King.

3. Characterized by mental dullness or inanity; witless; senseless; foolish; inane: as, a stupid joke; a stupid book; stupid fears.

Observe what loads of stupid rhymes Oppress us in corrupted times. Swift.

=Syn. 1. Heavy, dull, drowsy, lethargic, comatose, torpid.—2. Muddy-brained, muddled.—3. Silly, Foolish, etc. (see absurd); flat, tame, humdrum, pointless, prosaic. See list under foolish.

II. n. A stupid or humdrum person; a blockhead; a dunce. [Colloq.]

Tom . . . inconsiderately laughed when her houses [of cards] fell, and told her she was "a stupid."
George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, i. 9.

stupiditarian (stū-pid-i-tā′ri-an), n. [< stupidity + -arian.] A person characterized by stupidity; one who thinks or acts stupidly; a dullard. [Rare.]

How often do history and the newspapers exhibit to us the spectacle of a heavy-headed stupiditarian in official station, veiling the sheerest incompetency in a mysterious sublimity of carriage! Whipple, Lit. and Life, p. 143.

stupidity (stū-pid′i-ti), n. [= F. stupidité = It. stupidità, < L. stupidita(t-)s, senselessness, dullness, < stupidus, senseless, stupid: see stupid.] 1. A state of stupor or stupefaction; torpidity of feeling or of mind. [Rare.]

A stupidity
Past admiration strikes me, joined with fear.
Chapman.

2. The character or quality of being stupid; extreme dullness of perception or understanding; inanity; crass ignorance.

The mind ought not to be reduced to stupidity, but to retain pleasure. Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii.

A consideration of the fat stupidity and gross ignorance concerning what imports men most to know
Burke, Rev. in France.

For getting a fine flourishing growth of stupidity there is nothing like pouring out on a mind a good amount of subjects in which it feels no interest.
George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, v. 2.

=Syn. See stupid.

stupidly (stū′pid-li), adv. In a stupid manner or degree; so as to be or appear stupid, dazed, or foolish; with stupidity: as, stupidly drunk; to be stupidly cautious; to speak stupidly.

stupidness (stū′pid-nes), n. The quality of being stupid; stupidity. [Rare.]

stupifiedness†, stupify†, etc. Erroneous spellings of stupefiedness, etc.

stupor (stū′pọr), n. [= F. stupeur = Sp. Pg. estupor = It. stupore, < L. stupor, insensibility, numbness, dullness, < stupere, be struck senseless, be amazed or confounded: see stupent, stupid.] 1. Suspension or great diminution of sensibility; a state in which the faculties are deadened or dazed; torpidity of feeling.

The first flashing of the candles upon that canvas had seemed to dissipate the dreamy stupor which was stealing over my senses. Poe, Tales, I. 367.

The injured person is . . . in a condition between stupor and insensibility, with other signs of general prostration. J. M. Carnochan, Operative Surgery, p. 414.

2. Intellectual insensibility; dullness of perception or understanding; mental or moral numbness.

Our Church stands haltered, dumb, like a dumb ox; lowing only for provender (of tithes); content if it can have that; or, with dumb stupor, expecting its further doom. Carlyle, French Rev., I. ii. 3.

Anergic stupor. Same as stuporous insanity (which see, under stuporous).

stuporous (stū′pọr-us), a. [< stupor + -ous.] Characterized by stupor; having stupor as a conspicuous symptom. [Recent.]—Stuporous insanity, a psychoneurosis, usually of young adults, characterized by extreme apathy and dementia, ensuing usually on conditions of exhaustion from shock or otherwise, and generally issuing in recovery after a few weeks or months. Also called acute dementia, primary dementia, primary curable dementia, and anergic stupor.

Stuporous insanity being a recoverable form, dementia would more properly include cases of traumatism resembling it. Alien. and Neurol., IX. 458.

stupose (stū′pōs), a. [< L. stupa, stuppa, tow (see stupe[1]), + -ose.] In bot. and zoöl., bearing tufts or mats of long hairs; composed of matted filaments like tow. Compare stupeous.

stuprate (stū′prāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. stuprated, ppr. stuprating. [< L. stupratus, pp. of stuprare (> It. stuprare = Sp. Pg. estuprar), defile, debauch, < stuprum, defilement, dishonor.] To debauch; ravish.

stupration (stū-prā′shọn), n. [< L. as if stuprātio*(n-), < stuprare, defile, debauch: see stuprate.] Violation of chastity by force; rape.

stuprum (stū′prum), n. [NL., < L. stuprum, defilement, dishonor.] 1. Stupration.—2. In civil law, any union of the sexes forbidden by morality.

stupulose (stū′pū-lōs), a. [Dim. of stupose.] In entom., covered with short, fine, decumbent hairs; finely stupose.

sturdied (stėr′did), a. [< sturdy[2] + -ed[2].] Affected with the disease called sturdy.

I caught every sturdied sheep that I could lay my hands upon. Hogg, The Shepherd's Guide, p. 58.

sturdily (stėr′di-li), adv. In a sturdy manner; stoutly; lustily.

His refusal was too long and sturdily maintained to be reconciled with affectation or insincerity.
Prescott, Ferd. and Isa., ii. 5.

sturdiness (stėr′di-nes), n. [< ME. sturdinesse, sturdynesse; < sturdy[1] + -ness.] The state or property of being sturdy. (a) Obstinacy; contumacy. (b) Stoutness; lustiness; vigor.

sturdy[1] (stėr′di), a. [< ME. sturdy, sturdi, stordy, stordi, stowrdi, < OF. estordi, estourdi, stunned, amazed, stupefied, rash, heedless, careless, pp. of estordir, estourdir, F. étourdir = OSp. estordecir, estordecer = It. stordire, stun, amaze, stupefy; origin uncertain; perhaps < LL. as if extorpidire*, benumb, render senseless or torpid, < L. ex-, out, + torpidus, dull: see torpid.] 1. Obdurately set or determined; doggedly obstinate; stubborn; sulky: used of persons. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

Y was ful sturdy, & thou ful myelde;
Thesu, lord, y knowe weel it.
Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 35.

Come, gentlemen, leave pitying and moaning of her,
And praising of her virtues and her whimwhams;
It makes her proud and sturdy. Fletcher, Pilgrim, i. 1.

2. Having great force or endurance; strong in attack or resistance; vigorous; hardy; stout; lusty; robust: as, a sturdy opponent; sturdy pioneers; sturdy legs; a sturdy tree.

So trete a stordy wyne that it shal smyle,
And of a rough drinker be clere and best.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 201.

Some beat them coates of brasse, or sturdy breastplate hard they driue,
And some their gauntlets gilde, or bootes with siluer nesh contriue. Phaer, Æneid, vii.

But they so belabour'd him, being sturdy men at arms, that they made him make a retreat.
Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, ii.

How bow'd the woods beneath their sturdy stroke!
Gray, Elegy, l. 28.

Three young sturdy children, brown as berries.
Dickens, Old Curiosity Shop, xv.

3. Firmly fixed or settled; resolute; unyielding; hard to overcome: used of things.

The King declareth him the cas
With sterne loke and stordy chere.
Gower, Conf. Amant., viii.

Nothing, as it seemeth, more preuailing or fit to redresse and edifie the cruell and sturdie courage of man then it [music]. Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 4.

There are, as in philosophy, so in divinity, sturdy doubts.
Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, i. 19.

A nation proud of its sturdy justice and plain good sense. Macaulay, Hallam's Const. Hist.

Sturdy beggar, in old Eng. law, an able-bodied beggar; one who lives by begging while capable of earning his livelihood.

Those that were Vagabonds and sturdy Beggars they were to carry to Bridewel.
Strype, Order of City of London, 1569 (quoted in Ribton-[Turner's Vagrants and Vagrancy, p. 104).

= Syn. 2. Stout, Stalwart, etc. (see robust), brawny, sinewy, muscular, firm.

sturdy[2] (stėr'di), n. [Cf. Gael. stuird, stuirdean, vertigo, a disease of sheep (< E.); < OF. estordie, giddiness, < estordi, stunned, stupefied: see sturdy[1].] A disease of sheep caused by the presence in the brain of the cœnurus, or cystic larval form of the dog's tapeworm, Tænia cœnurus. The cysts vary in size from that of a pea to that of a pigeon's egg. The disease is marked by lack or loss of coordination in muscular action, evinced in a disposition to stagger, move sidewise, or sit on the rump, and also by stupor. Sturdy generally attacks sheep under two years old, and is rarely cured, since puncturing or trephining gives but temporary relief. Also called gid and staggers.

sture, n. A Scotch form of stour[3].

sturgeon (stėr'jon), n. [< ME. sturjoun, sturgiun, < AF. sturjoun, OF. esturgeon, later estourgeon, F. esturgeon = Sp. esturión = Pg. esturião = It. storione, < ML. sturio(n-), sturgio(n-), < OHG. sturjo, sturo, MHG. sture, stur, stür, G. stör = D. steur = Sw. Dan. stör = Icel. styrja = AS. styria, stiriga, a sturgeon; prob. lit. 'a stirrer' (so called, it has been conjectured, because it stirs up mud by floundering at the bottom of the water), < OHG. stören, MHG. stæren, G. stören, etc., stir: see stir[1].] A chondroganoid fish of the order Chondrostei and family Acipenseridæ (see the technical names). There are 2 leading genera, Acipenser and Scaphirhynchus, or ordinary and shovel-nosed sturgeons. Of the latter there are 4 species, confined to the fresh waters of the United States and some parts of Asia, as S. platyrhynchus of the former country, 5 feet long. (See cut under shovelhead.) The common sturgeon of the Atlantic, anadromous in Europe and North America, is A. sturio. Another, of the Atlantic coast of the United States, is the short-nosed sturgeon, A. brevirostris. The small or Ruthenian sturgeon, or sterlet, of some European waters is A. ruthenus. (See sterlet, with cut.) The great white sturgeon, beluga, or huso of Pontocaspian waters, is A. huso; this is the largest known, 12 or 15 feet or more in length, weighing 1,000 pounds or more, and an important source of isinglass and of caviar. The white sturgeon of the Columbia and Sacramento rivers is A. transmontanus, an important food-fish, of from 300 to 600 pounds weight. The green sturgeon of the same waters is A. medirostris supposed to be unfit for food. An isolated and very distinct species, land-locked in fresh waters of the United States, is A.

Common Sturgeon (Acipenser sturio).

Lake-sturgeon (Acipenser rubicundus).

rubicundus, variously known as the red, black, stone-, rock-, lake-, and Ohio sturgeon; it reaches a length of 6 feet, and a weight of from 50 to 100 pounds. Nearly all the sturgeons are the objects of important fisheries, for their flesh, for various uses of their bony plated skins, and as sources of isinglass and caviar. Sturgeons rank with whales as regal or royal fishes (see regal). See also cut under Acipenser. —Russian sturgeon, the beluga.—Spoon-billed sturgeons, the Polyodontidæ. See cuts under paddle-fish, Psephurus, and Spatularia.

Sturiones (stū-ri-ō'nēz), n. pl. [NL., pl. of ML. sturio, sturgeon: see sturgeon.] 1. In Cuvier's system of classification, the first order of chondropterygious fishes: same as Chondrostei, 2. See cuts under paddle-fish, Psephurus, Spatularia, sterlet, and sturgeon.—2. Same as Acipenseridæ. Bonaparte, 1837.

sturionian (stū-ri-ō'ni-an), a. and n. [< NL. Sturion-es + -ian.] I. a. Pertaining to the sturgeons, or having their characters; acipenserine.

II. n. A sturgeon; an acipenserid.

sturionidian (stū-ri-ō-nid'i-an), n. [< Sturion-es + -id- + -ian.] A fish of the order Chondrostei; a sturgeon-like fish. Sir J. Richardson.

sturionine (stū'ri-ō-nin), a. and n. [< Sturion-es + -ine[1].] Same as sturionian.

sturk, n. See stirk.

Sturmian (stėr'mi-an), a. [< Sturm (see def.) + -ian.] Of or pertaining to the French mathematician J. C. F. Sturm (1803–55).—Sturmian function, one of the series of remainders obtained in the process of finding the greatest measure of an integral function and its derivative, provided the sign of each is changed as we proceed.

Sturnella (stėr-nel'ą), n. [NL. (Vieillot, 1816), < Sturnus + dim. -ella.] A remarkable genus of Icteridæ, typical of the subfamily Sturnellinæ, containing the American meadow-starlings or so-called field-larks. The bill is of peculiar shape, longer than the head, with straight outlines, abruptly angulated commissure, and flattened culmen extending on the forehead. The feet are large and strong, reaching beyond the tail when outstretched, eminently fitted for terrestrial locomotion. The wings are short and rounded, and the tail is very short, with stiffish narrow acute feathers. The coronal feathers are bristle-tipped; and the plumage is much variegated, the under parts being yellow with a black horseshoe on the breast.

Western Field-lark (Sturnella neglecta).

There is one species with several geographical races, or several species, inhabiting Mexico, Central America, and most parts of North America and the West Indies. S. magna is the common meadow-lark of the eastern United States, and S. neglecta is characteristic of the western prairies. The genus formerly included those related South American birds in which the yellow is replaced by red, now called Trupial's or Pezites. Also called Pedopsaris. See also cut under meadow-lark.

Sturnellinæ (stėr-ne-lī'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Sturnella + -inæ.] A subfamily of Icteridæ, represented by the genera Sturnella and Trupialis. Coues, 1884.

sturnelline (stėr'ne-lin), a. Of or pertaining to the genus Sturnella or the subfamily Sturnellinæ.

Sturnia (stėr'ni-ą), n. [NL. (Lesson, 1847), < L. sturnus, starling: see Sturnus.] A genus of Oriental starlings. The species, of which there are few, range from eastern Siberia and Japan through China to Burma, the Philippines, Moluccas, etc. The type is S. sinensis, the kink of early French ornithologists (kink oriole of Latham, 1783), with many New Latin synonyms; its plumage is much varied with glossy blackish, greenish, and purplish, and different shades of gray, buff, isabel, and salmon-color; the bill is blue and the eyes are white; the length is about 8 inches. This bird is chiefly Chinese, but is wide-ranging. S. sturnina (the dominican thrush of Latham, with a host of synonyms) extends from Siberia and northern China through the Malay peninsula, etc. A third species is S. violacea, with fifteen or more different Latin names and a few English ones; this is especially Japanese, but migrates in winter to the Philippines, the Moluccas, Borneo, and Celebes.

Sturnidæ (stėr'ni-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Sturnus + -idæ.] A family of oscine passerine birds, typified by the genus Sturnus; the Old World starlings. They have ten primaries, of which the first is short or spurious; the wings are lengthened or moderate; the frontal antiæ extend into the nasal fossæ; there are no rictal vibrissæ; and the bill is attypically conicacute, with blunt, rounded, or flattened culmen, ascending gonys, and angulated commissure. The plumage is mostly of metallic or iridescent hues, sometimes splendidly lustrous or beautifully variegated, or both. The family is a large one, widely diffused in the Old World, excepting in Australia, and entirely absent from America. Both its limits and its subdivisions vary with different writers. See cuts under Buphaga, Eulabes, Pastor, starling[1], and Temenuchus.

sturniform (stėr'ni-fôrm), a. [< L. sturnus, a starling, + forma, form.] Having the form or technical characters of the starlings; sturnoid; of or pertaining to the Sturniformes.

Sturniformes (stėr-ni-fôr'mēz), n. pl. [NL.: see sturniform.] A superfamily of sturnoid passerine birds, composed of 4 families; the sturnoid Passeres.

Sturninæ (stėr-nī'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Sturnus + -inæ.] A subfamily of Sturnidæ, containing the typical starlings, represented by the genus Sturnus and related forms. In some systems the Sturninæ correspond to the Sturnidæ divested of certain genera referred to other families, as Buphagidæ and Paradiseidæ, and are represented in this sense by about 28 genera and 126 species; in others the term is used in a much more restricted sense. See cut under starling.

sturnoid (stėr'noid), a. [< Sturnus + -oid.] Of or pertaining to the family Sturnidæ.—Sturnoid Passeres, one of four groups or series in which A. R. Wallace (Ibis, 1874, pp. 406–416) distributed the normal oscine passerine birds, the others being the typical or turdoid, the tanagroid, and the formicarioid Passeres. They are otherwise called Sturniformes, and include the starling group, a characteristic feature of which is the possession of ten primaries, of which the first is spurious. See cuts under starling[1], Pastor, Scissirostrum, Eulabes, Temenuchus, and Buphaga.

Sturnopastor (stėr-nō-pas'tor), n. [NL. (Hodgson, 1843, as Sternopastor), < Sturnus + Pastor, q. v.] A genus of starlings with bare circumorbital spaces and comparatively rounded wings. There are several species, as S. contra of India, S. superciliaris of Burma, S. jalla and S. melanoptera of Java.

Sturnus (stėr'nus), n. [NL. (Brisson, 1760; Linnæus, 1766), < L. sturnus, a starling: see stare[2] and starn[2].] The representative genus of Sturninæ, formerly employed with latitude, now closely restricted to such forms as the common stare or starling, S. vulgaris. The plumage is metallic and iridescent, with distinctly outlined individual feathers. The feet are short and typically oscine. The tail is about half as long as the wings, emarginate, with twelve rectrices. The wings are pointed by the second and third primaries, the first being spurious and very small. The bill is not bristled; feathers fill the interramal space, and extend into the nasal fossæ; there is a nasal scale, and the tomial edges of the bill are dilated; the commissure is angulated, and the culmen and gonys are both nearly straight; the culmen extends on the forehead, parting well-marked antiæ. See cut under starling.

sturt[1] (stėrt), v. [An obs. or dial. var. of stert[1], start[1].] I. trans. To vex; trouble. Burns. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

II. intrans. To start from fright; be afraid. Burns, Halloween. [Scotch.]

sturt[2] (stėrt), n. [Also dial. transposed strut; < sturt[1], v.] 1. Trouble; disturbance; vexation; wrath; heat of temper. [Scotch.]

Scotland has cause to mak great sturt
For laiming o the Laird of Mow.
Raid of the Reidswire (Child's Ballads, VI. 137).

2. In Eng. mining, an extraordinary profit made by a tributer by taking at a high tribute a "pitch" which happens to cut an unexpectedly large body of ore, so that his profit is correspondingly great. [Cornwall, Eng.]

sturtion (stėr'shon), n. A corruption of nasturtium. See nasturtium, 2.

Sturt's desert-pea. See pea[1].

stut[1] (stut), v. i. [Early mod. E. stutte, < ME. stoten, stutter; = D. stooten, stutter, = OHG. stōzan, MHG. stōzen, G. stossen, push, strike against, = Icel. stauta, beat, strike, also stutter, = Sw. stöta = Dan. stöde, strike against, = Goth. stautan, strike: see stot[2]. Hence stutter[1].] 1. To stutter. [Old and prov. Eng.]

To stut or stammer is a foule crime.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 348.

Nay, he hath Albano's imperfection too,
And stuttes when he is vehemently mov'd.
Marston, What you Will, i. 1.

2. To stagger.

Stut, to stagger in speaking or going.
Baret, Alvearie, 1580.

stut[2]†, v. [< ME. stutten, stitten, < Icel. stytta, make short, < stuttr, short: see stunt, a., and cf. stunt, v., stent, v.] I. trans. To cut short; cause to cease. Ancren Riwle, p. 72, note f.

II. intrans. To cease; stop. Seinte Marherete (E. E. T. S.), p. 6.

stut[3] (stut), n. A variant of stout[2].

stutter[1] (stut'ėr), v. [< ME. stoteren* = D. stotteren = MLG. stoteren, LG. stötern, stöttern (> G. stottern) = Sw. dial. stutra, stutter; freq. of stut.] I. intrans. To speak with a marked stammer; utter words with frequent breaks and repetitions of parts, either habitually or under special excitement.

The stuttering declamation of the isolated Hibernian.
Charlotte Brontë, Shirley, i.

= Syn. Falter, etc. See stammer.

II. trans. To utter with breaks and repetitions of parts of words; say disjointedly.

Red and angry, scarce
Able to stutter out his wrath in words.
Browning, Ring and Book, II. 22.

stutter[1] (stut'ėr), n. [< stutter[1], v.] A marked stammer; broken and hesitating utterance of words.

stutter[2]† (stut'ėr), n. [< stut + -er[1].] One who stuts or stutters; a stutterer.

Many stutters (we find) are choleric men.
Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 386.

stutterer (stut'ėr-ėr), n. [< stutter[1] + -er[1].] One who stutters; a stammerer.

His words were never many, as being so extreme a stutterer that he would sometimes hold his tongue out of his mouth a good while before he could speak so much as one word. Lord Herbert of Cherbury, Life (ed. Howells), p. 129.

★stuttering (stut'ėr-ing), n. [Verbal n. of stutter[1], v.] A hesitation in speaking, in which there is a spasmodic and uncontrollable reiteration of the same syllable. See stammering.

stutteringly (stut'ėr-ing-li), adv. In a stuttering manner; with stammering.

stuwe†, n. and v. An obsolete form of stew[1], stew[2].

sty[1]† (stī), v. i. [< ME. stien, styen, steyen, stighen, stigen, < AS. stīgan = OS. stīgan = OFries. stiga = D. stijgen = MLG. LG. stigen = OHG. stīgan, MHG. stigen, G. steigen = Icel. stīga = Sw. stiga = Dan. stige = Goth. steigan, rise, ascend, mount; in comp. AS. āstīgan, rise, move up, or, with an appropriate adverb, move down, descend; = Gr. στείχειν, go, walk, march, go in line (see stich), = L. √ stigh in vestigium, footprint, vestige (see vestige), = OBulg. stignanti, haste, Skt. √ stigh, mount. From this root are ult. E. sty[1], n., sty[2], sty[3], stile[1], stair.] 1. To go upward; mount; ascend; s ar.

Tak thanne this drawht, and whan thou art wel refreshed and refect, thow shal be moore stydefast to stye into heyere questyouns. Chaucer, Boëthius, iv. prose 6.

That was Ambition, rash desire to sty,
And every linck thereof a step of dignity.
Spenser, F. Q., II. vii. 46.

2. To mount (upon a horse).

Stiden vpon stithe horse stird to the Cité,
And wenton in wightly tho worthy hom seluon.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 4948.

3. To aspire.

'T had been in vaine;
Shee onely sties to such as haue no braine.
Heywood, Dialogues (Works, ed. Pearson, 1874, VI. 122).

sty[1] (stī), n. [(a) < ME. sty, stye, stie, stiz, stih, < AS. stīg = MD. stijghe = OHG. stīg, stīc, MHG. stīc, G. steig = Icel. stigr, stigr = Sw. stig = Dan. sti, a path, footway; (b) < ME. sty, stie, a step, ladder, = OHG. stiga, MHG. stīge, a path, step, ladder; also MD. steghe, steegh, D. steeg, a path, lane, = MLG. stege, a path, ascent, also a step, = OHG. stiega, MHG. stiege, a rise, ascent, step, stair, staircase, = Icel. stigi, stegi = Dan. stige, a step, ladder; (c) cf. OHG. steg, MHG. stec, G. steg, a path, bridge (the forms, of three or four orig. diff. types, being more or less confused with one another, and wavering between the long and short vowel); related to sty[2], stile[1], stair, etc., all ult. from the verb sty[1].] 1†. An ascent; an ascending lane or path; any narrow pathway or course.

Themperour on his stif stede a sty forth thanne takes.
William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 212.

The scheref made to seke [caused to search] Notyngham, Bothe be strete and stye.
Robin Hood and the Monk (Child's Ballads, V. 14).

2†. A step upward; a stair.

And sties also are ordande thore [there],
With stalworthe steeles as mystir wore [need were],
Bothe some schorte and some lang.
York Plays, p. 340.

3. A ladder. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

sty[2] (stī), n.; pl. sties (stīz). [Early mod. E. also stye, stie; < ME. stie, stye, < AS. stīgu, stīgo, a pen for cattle, = MD. stijghe = OHG. stīga, MHG. stīge, a pen for small cattle, a sow's litter, G. steige, steig, pen, chicken-coop (schweinesteige, swine-sty), = Icel. stīa = OSw. stiga, stia, Sw. stia, dial. sti, steg = Dan. sti, pen for swine, goats, sheep, etc.; from the root of sty[1], AS. stīgan, rise, orig. go: see sty[1]. The connection of thought is not clear; cf. Gr. στοῖχος, a row, file of soldiers, also a row of poles with hunting-nets into which game was driven (i. e., a pen).] 1. A pen or inclosure for swine; a pigsty.

Her [their] cotes make beforne
Under sum porche, and parte hem so betwene
That every stye a moder [sow with litter] wol sustene.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 99.

Hence — 2. A filthy hovel or place; any place of mean living or bestial debauchery.

To roll with pleasure in a sensual stye.
Milton, Comus, l. 77.

The painted booth and sordid sties of vice and luxury.
Burke, Rev. in France.

sty[2] (stī), v.; pret. and pp. stied, ppr. stying. [< sty[2], n.] I. intrans. To occupy a sty or hovel; live in a sty.

What miry wallowers the generality of men of our class are in themselves, and constantly trough and sty with!
Richardson, Clarissa Harlowe, V. cxx.

II. trans. To lodge in a sty or hovel; pen up.

Here you sty me
In this hard rock. Shak., Tempest, i. 2. 343.

sty[3] (stī), n.; pl. sties (stīz). [In three distinct forms: (a) Sty, also stye, and formerly stie, a reduction of the earlier styen, styan (see (b)), or directly parallel with MD. stiighe, LG. stige, stieg, Norw. stigje, stig, sti, a sty (cf. stigköyna, a sty, < stig + köyna, a pustule). (b) Styen, styan, early mod. E. also stian, < ME. styand, styend, < AS. stīgend, a sty, lit. 'riser,' < stīgende, ppr. of stīgan, rise: see sty[1], v. (c) Styany, stiony, early mod. E. styanie, styony, styonie, < ME. styanye, a sty, supposed to stand for styand ye*, lit. 'rising eye': styand, ppr. of styen, rise; ye, eye: see sty[1], v., and eye[1], n. But there is no evidence of the ME. styand ye*, nor of the alleged AS. stīgend éage* assumed by Skeat; a sty is not a 'rising eye' at all, and the AS. phrase, if used, would be stīgende cáge*, as an AS. ppr. invariably retains its final e except when used as a noun.] A circumscribed inflammatory swelling of the edge of the eyelid, like a small boil; hordeolum. Also spelled stye.

There is a sty grown o'er the eye o' th' Bull,
Which will go near to blind the constellation.
Fletcher (and another), Elder Brother, ii. 4.

styan (stī'an), n. [Also styen, early mod. E. stian, etc.: see sty[3] (b).] Same as sty[3]. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

A soveraigne liniment for the stian or any other hard swellings in the eyelids. Holland, tr. of Pliny, xxviii. 11.

I knew that a styan . . . upon the eyelid could be easily reduced. De Quincey, Autob. Sketches, ii.

styany†, n. [Also stiony, early mod. E. styanie, styony, etc.: see sty[3] (c).] Same as sty[3].

Styanye (or a perle) yn the eye, egilopa.
Prompt. Parv., p. 475.

Styony, disease growyng within the eyelidde, sycosis.
Huloet.

Obverse. Reverse.
Styca of Redwulf, King of Northumbria, A. D. 844. — British Museum. (Size of original.)

styca (stī'kä, AS. pron. stük'ä), n. [AS. styca.] A small copper coin of the Anglo-Saxon period, current in the kingdom of Northumbria in the seventh, eighth, and ninth centuries, and weighing about eighteen or nineteen grains.

stye[1]†, n. An old spelling of sty[1], sty[2].

stye[2] (stī), n. Same as sty[3].

Stygia (stij'i-ä), n. [NL., < L. Stygius, < Gr. Στύγιος, pertaining to the Styx: see Styx.] In entom.: (a) In Lepidoptera, a genus of moths, of the family Psychidæ. Latreille. (b) In Diptera, a genus of tanystomine flies, of the family Bombyliidæ, not having the antennæ wide apart at the base. Also called Lomatia and Stygides. Meigen.

Stygial (stij'i-al), a. [< L. Stygius (see Stygian) + -al.] Same as Stygian. [Rare.]

Stygian (stij'i-an), a. [< L. Stygius, < Gr. Στύγιος, pertaining to the Styx, < Στύξ (Στυγ-), a river of the lower world, also applied to a fatally cold fountain, a piercing chill, hatred, < στυγεῖν, hate, abhor.] 1. Pertaining to the Styx, a river, according to the ancient myth, flowing around the lower world, the waters of which were used as a symbol in the most binding oaths of the gods.

From what Part of the World came you? For here was a melancholy Report that you had taken a Voyage to the Stygian Shades.
N. Bailey, tr. of Colloquies of Erasmus, II. 2.

Hence — 2. Infernal; hellish: as, Stygian vapors; a Stygian pool.

At that so sudden blaze, the Stygian throng Bent their aspect. Milton, P. L., x. 453.

Stygogenes (stī-goj'e-nēz), n. [NL. (Günther, 1864), < Gr. Στύξ (Στυγ-), a river of the lower world, + -γενής, produced.] In ichth., a genus of catfishes, of the family Argiidæ, found in the Andean waters: so named from the popular notion that the typical species lives in subterranean waters of active volcanoes. Also called Cyclopium.

stylagalmaic (stī"la-gal-mā'ik), a. and n. [Irreg. < Gr. στῦλος, a pillar, + ἄγαλμα, a statue: see agalma.] In arch., noting a caryatid, or a figure performing the office of a column: as, stylagalmaic images. See cut under caryatid.

stylamblys (stī-lam'blis), n. [NL., < Gr. στῦλος, a pillar, + ἀμβλύς, blunt, dulled.] A small blunt process of the inner branch of a pleopod of some crustaceans. C. Spence Bate.

stylar (stī'lär), a. [Also stilar; < style[1] + -ar[3].] Of or pertaining to a style; having the character of or resembling a style for writing.

Stylaria (stī-lā'ri-ä), n. [NL. (Lamarck, 1816), < Gr. στῦλος, a pillar, + -aria.] A genus of annelids: same as Nais, 1.

Stylaster (stī-las'tėr), n. [NL. (J. E. Gray, 1831), < Gr. στῦλος, a pillar, + ἀστήρ, a star.] 1. The typical genus of Stylasteridæ. It was formerly considered actinozoan, and placed in the family Oculinidæ; it is now known to be hydrozoan, and closely related to Millepora.

Stylaster duchassaingi.

2. [l. c.] Any polyp of the family Stylasteridæ. The numerous species are delicate calcareous corals, usually pink, and most nearly related to the millepores.

Stylasteridæ (stī-las-ter'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stylaster + -idæ.] A family of the order Hydrocorallinæ, or coralligenous hydromedusans, typified by the genus Stylaster, related to the Milleporidæ, and with the millepores forming the order. Stylasteridæ differ from Milleporidæ in having a calcified axial style at the base of an ampulla or dilated section of each gasterozooid, and in the more complicated cyclosystems the massive hydrosome contains tubes which possess pseudosepta formed by the regular position of the tentacular zooids; the alimentary zooids have from four to twelve tentacles. The stylasters abound in tropical seas, where they contribute to the formation of coral reefs.

stylate[1] (stī'lāt), a. [< NL. stylatus*, prop. stilatus*, < L. stilus, a stake, point, style: see style[1].] In zoöl.: (a) Having a style or stylet; styliferous. (b) Pen-like or peg-like; styloid; styliform.

stylate[2] (stī'lāt), a. [< NL. stylatus*, < stylus, a style (of a flower), < Gr. στῦλος, a pillar: see style[2].] In bot., having a persistent style. Lindley.

★style[1] (stīl), n. [Formerly also, and prop., stile; also in def. 1, as L., stylus, prop. stilus; < OF. style, stile, F. style = Sp. Pg. estilo = It. stilo, < L. stilus, in ML. also, improp., stylus, a stake, pale, a pointed instrument used about plants, the stem or stalk of a plant, and esp. for scribing on a waxen tablet, hence writing, manner of writing, mode of expression in writing or speech, style; perhaps earlier with long vowel, stīlus, for orig. stiglus*, < √ stig in stinguere = Gr. στίζειν, pierce, stick, puncture (see stick[1], stigma); otherwise akin to OHG. MHG. stil, G. stiel, a handle, etc., AS. stæl, stel, E. stale, steal, a handle: see stale[2]. The word is prop. written stile; the spelling style is in simulation of the Gr. στῦλος, a pillar, which is not connected (see style[2]).] 1. An iron instrument, in the form of a bodkin tapering to a point at one end, used, in one of the methods of writing practised in ancient and medieval times, for scratching the letters into a waxed tablet, the other end being blunt for rubbing out writing and smoothing the tablet; figuratively, any writing-instrument.

But this my style no living man shall touch,
If first I be not forced by base reproach;
But like a sheathed sword it shall defend
My innocent life. B. Jonson, Poetaster, v. 1.

Some wrought in Silks, some writ in tender Barks;
Some the sharp Stile in waxen Tables marks.
Cowley, Davideis, i.

2. Something similar in form to the instrument above described, or in some respect suggestive of it. (a) A pointed or needle-like tool, implement, or attachment, as the marking-point in the telegraph or phonograph, a graver, or an etching-needle. (b) In zoöl. and anat., a small, slender, pointed process or part; a styloid or styliform part or organ; a stylet; of spongespicules, a stylus. Specifically, in entom.: (1) Same as stylet, 3. (2) The bristle or seta of the antenna of a dipter; a stylus. See cuts under Gordius and Rhynchocœla.

3. Mode of expression in writing or speaking; characteristic diction; a particular method of expressing thought by selection or collocation of words, distinct in some respect from other methods, as determined by nationality, period, literary form, individuality, etc.; in an absolute sense, appropriate or suitable diction; conformity to an approved literary standard: as, the style of Shakspere or of Dickens; antiquated or modern style; didactic, poetic, or forensic style; a pedantic style; a nervous style; a cynical style.

Stile is a constant & continuall phrase or tenour of speaking and writing, extending to the whole tale or processe of the poeme or historie, and not properly to any peece or member of a tale.
Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 123.

Proper words in proper places make the true definition of a style. Swift.

Jeffreys spoke against the motion in the coarse and savage style of which he was a master.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vi.

If thought is the gold, style is the stamp which makes it current, and says under what king it was issued.
Dr. J. Brown, Spare Hours, 3d ser., p. 277.

4. Distinctive manner of external presentation; particular mode or form (within more or less variable limits) of construction or execution in any art or employment; the specific or characteristic formation or arrangement of anything. In this sense the applications of the word style are coextensive with the whole range of productive activity. Styles in the arts are designated according to subject, treatment, origin, school, period, etc.: as, in painting, the landscape, genre, or historical style; the style of Titian or of Rubens; the Preraphaelite or the Impressionist style; in architecture, the Greek, medieval, and Renaissance styles, the Pointed or the Perpendicular style; the Louis-Quatorze or the Eastlake style of furniture; the Florentine style of wood-carving; carpets and rugs in the Persian style; styles in dress.

I don't know in what style I should dress such a figure and countenance, to make anything of them.
Cooper, Lionel Lincoln, iii.

It [a bed-chamber] is fitted up in the style of Louis XVI.
Thackeray, Newcomes, xlvi.

Monteverde, Claudio (1568–1643), the inventor of the "free style" of musical composition, was born at Cremona in 1568. Encyc. Brit., XVI. 785.

5. Particular mode of action or manifestation; physical or mental procedure; manner; way: as, styles of rowing, riding, or walking; styles of acting, singing, or bowing.—6. Mode, as of living or of appearing; distinctive or characteristic manner or fashion, with reference to appearance, bearing, social relations, etc.; in absolute use, an approved or prevalent mode; superior manner; noticeable elegance; the fashion: as, to live in style; style of deportment or of dress.

There are some very homely women who have a style that amounts to something like beauty.
H. B. Stowe, Oldtown, p. 68.

That otherwise impalpable quality which women call style. Howells, Indian Summer, ii.

7. Hence, in general, fine appearance; dashing character; spirited appearance: as, a horse that shows style.—8. Mode of designation or address; a qualifying appellation or title; an epithet distinctive of rank, office, character, or quality.

With one voice, sir,
The citizens salute you with the style
Of King of Naples.
Fletcher, Double Marriage, v. 4.

Give unto God his due, his reverend style.
Middleton, Solomon Paraphrased, i.

9. In chron., a mode of reckoning time with regard to the Julian and Gregorian calendars. See calendar. Style is Old or New. The Old Style (abbreviated O. S.) is the reckoning of time according to the Julian calendar, the numbering of the years being that of the Christian era. In this reckoning the years have 365 days, except those whose numbers are divisible by 4, which have 366 days. The extra day is inserted in February, and is considered to be that following the 23d of that month. For ecclesiastical reasons, the calendar was reformed by Pope Gregory XIII., by adding 10 days to the date after October 4th, 1582, and thereafter making no years whose numbers end with two ciphers leap-years except those whose significant figures are divisible by 4. The year in New Style always begins with January 1st, but in Old Style there was some diversity of practice. The Gregorian year accords closely with the tropical year; but otherwise its advantages are merely ecclesiastical and theoretical. This mode of correcting the calendar has been adopted at different times by almost all civilized nations except Russia and other countries where the Greek Church is predominant, which still adhere to the Old Style. In England the Gregorian or New Style (abbreviated N. S.) was adopted by act of Parliament in 1751, and as one of the years concluding a century in which the additional or intercalary day was to be omitted (the year 1700) had elapsed since the correction by Pope Gregory, it was necessary to omit 11 instead of 10 days in the current year. Accordingly, 11 days in September, 1752, were retrenched, and the 3d day was reckoned the 14th. The difference between the Old and New Styles is now 13 days. —Attic style. See Attic[1].—Concertante, Corinthian, crystalline, cushion, discharge style. See the qualifying words.—Early English style, a modern factitious style of furniture and decoration, in which some elements of the decoration of the middle ages were used mingled with others. It was characterized by a free use of black and gold, and by designs in color in hard flat patterns of one color relieved upon another.—Florid style of medieval architecture. See florid.—Garancin style. Same as madder style.—Geometric style. See geometric.—Jesuit style, in arch. See baroque, 2.—Juridical styles, in Scots law, the particular forms of expression and arrangement necessary to be observed in formal deeds and instruments.—Lacrymal style, a short wire worn in a lacrymal duct in treatment of obstruction of this duct.—Lapidary, madder, monodic, occipital style. See the qualifying words.—Palestrina style, in music, the style of church music. Compare a cappella.—Perpendicular style. See perpendicular.—Queen Anne style. See queen[1].—Rainbow, Renaissance, resist, etc., style. See the qualifying words.—Style of a court, the practice observed by any court in its way of proceeding. =Syn. 3. Diction, Phraseology, etc. (See diction.) Invention, Style, Amplification, in rhetoric. See invention.—8. Appellation, etc. See name[1].

style[1] (stīl), v. t.; pret. and pp. styled, ppr. styling. [Formerly also, and prop., stile; < style[1], n.] 1†. To record with or as with a style; give literary form to; write.

Poesy is nothing else but Feigned History, which may be styled as well in prose as in verse.
Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii.

2. To give or accord the style or designation of; entitle; denominate; call.

He is also stiled the God of the rural inhabitants.
Bacon, Fable of Pan.

Upon this Title the Kings of England were styled Kings of Jerusalem a long time after. Baker, Chronicles, p. 63.

Declared the Deceased
Had styled him "a Beast."
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 64.

★style[2] (stīl), n. [Formerly also stile (in sense 1); < NL. stylus, a style of a plant, < ML. stylus, also improp. stilus, a pillar, < Gr. στῦλος, a pillar, column, also a post, pale; not connected with L. stilus, improp. written stylus, a stake, pale, a pointed instrument, etc., with which the word has been associated, so that the E. style[1] and style[2] are now commonly confused.] 1. A pillar; a column. See style[1].—2. The pin or gnomon of a sun-dial, which marks the time by its shadow, or any fixed pointer serving a similar purpose. See cut under sun-dial.

Then turne the globe vntyll the style that sheweth the houre be coomme to the houre in the whiche yowe sowght the vnknowen place of the moone.
R. Eden, tr. of Gemma Phrysius (First Books on America, [ed. Arber, p. 389).

3. In bot., a narrowed extension of the ovary, which, when present, supports the stigma. It is usually slender, and in that case of varying length, often elongated, as in honeysuckle, fuchsia, and in an extreme case Indian corn (forming its "silk"); sometimes it is thick and short, as in squash, grape-vine, etc.; sometimes wholly wanting, leaving the stigma sessile. Morphologically it is the attenuated tip of the carpel, hence equaling the carpels in number, except when, as in many compound pistils, the styles are consolidated. It is said to be simple when undivided, even if formed by the union of several. When cleft or slit it is bifid, trifid, etc.; when more deeply separated it is bipartite, tripartite, etc. According to the conformation of the carpel, the style may be terminal, rising from its summit, as is typically the case, or lateral, as in strawberry and cinquefoil, or basal, as in comfrey and salvia—the carpel being in these last cases more or less bent over. In position it may be erect, ascending, declinate, recurved, etc.; in form it may be filiform, subulate, trigonal, claviform, petaloid, etc. In relation to the corolla or calyx it may be included or exserted. A style may be persistent, but is commonly caducous, falling soon after fecundation. The function of the style is to present the stigma in a position advantageously to receive the pollen, and to form a medium for its communication to the ovules; accordingly, it has the structure of a tube filled or lined with a conductive tissue of the same nature as that which composes the stigma. See pistil, ovary, pollen-tube, and stigma.

Campanula sp.
a, style; b, stigma.

style[3]†, n. An obsolete spelling of stile[1].

style-branch (stīl'brânch), n. In bot., a branch or division of the style. In the Compositæ the character of the style-branch is of important systematic value.

style-curve (stīl'kėrv), n. A curve constructed to exhibit the peculiarities of style or composition of an author. It may be drawn so that the abscissæ represent the number of letters in a word, while the corresponding ordinates show the relative frequency of the occurrence of such words, or other characteristics may be selected. Experiments seem to prove that, when a sufficiently extensive analysis is made in this manner, every writer will be found to be represented by a curve peculiar to himself. Science, XIII. 92.

★stylet (stī'let), n. [< OF. stylet, < It. stiletto, a pointed instrument, dagger, dim. of stilo, a pointed instrument: see style[1], and cf. stiletto.] 1. A slender pointed instrument; a stiletto.

"Come, Paul!" she reiterated, her eye grazing me with its hard ray like a steel stylet.
Charlotte Brontë, Villette, xli.

2. In surg., the perforator of a trocar; the stiffening wire or rod in a flexible catheter; sometimes, a probe. Also stilette.—3. In zoöl., a little style; also, a style; specifically, in entom., one of the second of the three pairs of rhabdites or appendages of the abdominal sternites entering into the formation of the ovipositor. See cut under Arctisca.

styletiform (stī'let-i-fôrm), a. [< stylet + L. forma, form.] Shaped like a stylet; styloid.

stylewort (stīl'wėrt), n. A plant of the genus Candollea; more broadly, a plant of the family Candolleaceæ. See Stylidium and Stylidiaceæ.

Stylidiaceæ (stī-lid-i-ā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Lindley, 1836), < Stylidium + -aceæ.] A now discarded name for the Candolleaceæ, a family of dicotyledonous sympetalous plants of the order Campanulales, based on the untenable genus name Stylidium of Swartz. It is characterized by flowers usually with an irregular calyx and corolla each with five lobes, two stamens united into a column with the style, and a two-celled ovary with numerous ovules. It contains about 105 species, belonging to 3 genera, of which Candollea is the type, mostly Australian herbs, a few in tropical Asia, New Zealand, and antarctic America. They are herbs or rarely somewhat shrubby plants with radical scattered or seemingly whorled leaves, which are entire and usually narrow or small. Their flowers form terminal racemes or panicles, usually primarily centripetal in development and secondarily centrifugal.

Stylidium (stī-lid'i-um), n. [NL., so named from the stamen-column; < Gr. στῦλος, a pillar, column, + dim. -ιδιον.] A name given by Swartz in 1807 to Candollea, a genus of dicotyledonous sympetalous plants, type of the family Candolleaceæ. It is characterized by flowers with the fifth lobe of the irregular corolla very different from the others, forming a small or narrow curving lip, and by the long recurved or replicate and usually elastic stamen-column. The 85 species are all Australian but 3, which are natives of Asia, principally of India. Many species are cultivated under glass, under the name of style-wort, for their rose-colored flowers: see also hair-trigger-flower. The name Stylidium was earlier (Loureiro, 1790) applied to species of tropical cornaceous trees and shrubs which are now referred to Alangium. They are sometimes cultivated under glass for their yellow flowers.

Candollea laricifolia.
a, a flower; b, longitudinal section of flower; c, transverse section of fruit.

styliferous[1] (stī-lif'e-rus), a. [< L. stylus, prop. stilus, a pointed instrument (see style[1]), + ferre = E. bear[1].] In zoöl. and anat., having a style or styloid process; stylate.

styliferous[2] (stī-lif'e-rus), a. [< NL. stylus, a style (see style[2]), + L. ferre = E. bear[1].] In bot., style-bearing; bearing one or more styles.

styliform (stī'li-fôrm), a. [< L. stylus, prop. stilus, a pointed instrument, + forma, form, shape: see form.] Having the shape of a style; resembling a pen, pin, or peg; styloid.

styline (stī'lin), a. [< style[2] + -ine[1].] In bot., of or pertaining to the style.

styliscus† (stī-lis'kus), n.; pl. stylisci (-ī). [NL. (Lindley), < Gr. στυλίσκος, dim. of στῦλος, a pillar, a shaft: see style[2].] In bot., the loose tissue through which the pollen-tube passes from the stigma of a plant to the ovary.

stylish (stī'lish), a. [< style[1] + -ish[1].] Having style in aspect or quality; conformable or conforming to approved style or taste; strikingly elegant; fashionable; showy: as, stylish dress or manners; a stylish woman; a stylish house.

stylishly (stī'lish-li), adv. In a stylish manner; fashionably; showily.

stylishness (stī'lish-nes), n. The state or property of being stylish, fashionable, or showy; showiness: as, stylishness of dress or of an equipage. Jane Austen, Northanger Abbey, viii.

stylist (stī'list), n. [< style[1] + -ist.] A writer or speaker distinguished for excellence or individuality of style; one who cultivates, or is a master or critic of, literary style.

Exquisite style, without the frigidity and the over-correctness which the more deliberate stylists frequently display. G. Saintsbury, Hist. Elizabethan Literature, x.

stylistic (stī-lis'tik). a. and n. [< stylist + -ic.] I. a. Of or relating to style.

Nor has accuracy been sacrificed to stylistic requirements. Athenæum, No. 3044, p. 292.

II. n. 1. The art of forming a good style in writing. Also used in the plural.—2. A treatise on style. [Rare.]

stylistically (stī-lis'ti-kạl-i), adv. In a stylistic relation; with respect to style. Classical Rev., III. 87.

stylite (stī'līt), n. [< LGr. στυλίτης, of or pertaining to a pillar, a pillar-saint, < στῦλος, a pillar: see style[2].] In eccles. hist., one of a class of solitary ascetics who passed the greater part of their lives unsheltered on the top of high columns or pillars. This mode of mortification was practised among the monks of the East from the fifth to the eleventh century. The most celebrated was St. Simeon the Stylite, who lived in the fifth century. Also called pillar-saint.

stylobate (stī'lō-bāt), n. [= F. stylobate, < Gr. στυλοβάτης, the base of a pillar, < στῦλος, a pillar, + βαίνειν, go, advance.] In arch., a continuous basement upon which columns are placed to raise them above the level of the ground or a floor; particularly, the uppermost step of the stereobate of a columnar building, upon which rests an entire range of columns. It is distinguished from a pedestal, which, when it occurs in this use, supports only a single column. See cuts under base and stereobate.

stylocerite (stī-los'ẹ-rīt), n. [< L. stylus, prop. stilus, a pointed instrument (see style[1]), + Gr. κέρας, horn, + -ite[2].] A style or spine on the outer side of the first joint of the antennule of some crustaceans. C. Spence Bate.

styloglossal (stī-lō-glos'ạl), a. and n. [< styloglossus + -al.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the styloid process and the tongue.

II. n. The styloglossus.

styloglossus (stī-lō-glos'us), n.; pl. styloglossi (-ī). [NL., < E. stylo(id) + Gr. γλῶσσα, tongue.] A slender muscle arising from the styloid process and inserted into the side of the tongue.

stylogonidium (stī″lō-gō-nid'i-um), n.; pl. stylogonidia (-ạ). [< L. stylus, prop. stilus, a pointed instrument (see style[1]), + NL. gonidium, q. v.] In bot., a gonidium formed by abstriction on the ends of special hyphæ. Phillips, Brit. Discomycetes. [Little used.]

stylograph (stī'lō-grȧf), n. [< L. stylus, prop. stilus, a style (see style[1]), + Gr. γράφειν, write.] A stylographic pen. Elect. Rev. (Eng.), XXVI. 68.

stylographic (stī-lō-graf'ik), a. [As stylograph-y + -ic.] Of or pertaining to stylography or a stylograph; characterized by or adapted to the use of a style: as, stylographic cards; a stylographic pencil; stylographic ink.—Stylographic pen. See pen[2].

stylographical (stī-lō-graf'i-kạl), a. [< stylographic + -al.] Same as stylographic.

stylographically (stī-lō-graf'i-kạl-i), adv. In a stylographic manner; by means of a style for writing or engraving.

stylography (stī-log'rạ-fi), n. [< L. stylus, prop. stilus, a style (see style[1]), + Gr. -γραφία, < γράφειν, write.] The art of tracing or the act of writing with a style; specifically, a method of drawing and engraving with a style on cards or tablets.

stylohyal (stī-lō-hī'ạl), n. [< stylo(id) + hy(oid) + -al.] In zoöl. and anat., one of the bones of the hyoidean arch, near the proximal extremity of that arch, being or representing an infrastapedial element. In some vertebrates below mammals it is a part or division of the columellar stapes; in mammals it is the first bone of the hyoidean arch outside of the ear; in man it is normally ankylosed with the temporal bone, constituting the styloid process of that bone, and is connected only by a ligament (the stylohyoid ligament: see epihyal) with the lesser cornu of the hyoid. See stylohyoid, and cuts under Petromyzon, skull, and hyoid.

stylohyoid (stī-lō-hī'oid), a. and n. [< stylo(id) + hyoid.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the stylohyal, or styloid process of the temporal bone, and the hyoid bone.—Stylohyoid ligament. See epihyal and ligament, and cut under skull.—Stylohyoid muscle, a slender muscle extending from the styloid process of the temporal bone to the hyoid bone; the stylohyoideus. See II.—Stylohyoid nerve, that branch of the facial nerve which goes to the stylohyoid muscle.

II. n. The stylohyoid muscle. See cuts under skull and muscle[1].

stylohyoidean (stī″lō-hī-oi'dē-an), a. [< stylohyoid + -e-an.] Same as stylohyoid.

stylohyoideus (stī″lō-hī-oi'dē-us), n.; pl. stylohyoidei (-ī). [NL.: see stylohyoid.] The stylohyoid muscle. See stylohyoid, n.

styloid (stī'loid), a. [< L. stylus, prop. stilus, a style (see style[1]), + Gr. εἶδος, form.] Having some resemblance to a style or pen; like or likened to a style; styliform or stylate: an anatomical term applied to several processes of bone, generally slenderer than those called spines or spinous processes.—Styloid cornua, the epihyals; the lesser cornua of the hyoid bone: so called because of their attachment to the stylohyoid ligament.—Styloid process. See process, and cuts under skull and forearm.

stylolite (stī'lō-līt), n. [< Gr. στῦλος, a pillar (see style[2]), + λίθος, stone.] A peculiar form of jointed or columnar structure occasionally seen in beds of limestone, uniting the adjoining surfaces of two layers of the rock, and usually from half an inch to 3 or 4 inches in length. Stylolites were at first considered to be fossil corals, and called lignilites, and later epsomites, it being supposed that they had been formed by the crystallization of sulphate of magnesia. Stylolite is the name now most generally adopted for them, and it is believed that they are due to pressure of the superincumbent rock, which the stylolite has been able to resist to a certain extent because protected by a shell, or some other organic body, which would not admit of the sinking of the material immediately under it as rapidly as did the adjacent rock under the compression of the overlying material, the part thus protected forming a columnar individual mass with slightly striated surface.

stylomastoid (stī-lō-mas'toid), a. [< stylo(id) + mastoid.] In anat., common to the styloid process and the mastoid division of the temporal bone.—Stylomastoid artery, a branch of the posterior auricular artery, which enters the stylomastoid foramen to supply parts of the inner ear.—Stylomastoid foramen. See foramen, and cuts under Felidæ and skull.—Stylomastoid vein, a small vein emptying into the posterior auricular vein.

stylomaxillary (stī-lō-mak'si-lạ-ri), a. [< stylo(id) + maxillary.] Of or pertaining to the styloid process of the temporal bone and the inframaxillary, or lower jaw-bone.—Stylomaxillary ligament, a thin band of ligamentous fibers passing from near the tip of the styloid process to the angle and posterior border of the ramus of the mandible.

stylometer (stī-lom'e-tėr), n. [< Gr. στῦλος, pillar, column, + μέτρον, measure.] An instrument for measuring columns.

Stylommatophora (stī-lom-ạ-tof'ọ-rạ), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of stylommatophorus: see stylommatophorous.] A suborder or other prime division of pulmonate gastropods, having the eyes borne on the ends of the tentacles: opposed to Basommatophora. It includes the terrestrial pulmonates, as land-snails and slugs. Geophila and Nephropneusta are synonyms.

stylommatophorous (stī-lom-ạ-tof'ọ-rus), a. [< NL. stylommatophorus, < Gr. στῦλος, a pillar, + ὄμμα(τ-), an eye, + -φόρος, < φέρειν = E. bear[1].] Having eyes at the top of a style, horn, or tentacle, as a snail; of or pertaining to the Stylommatophora.

stylommatous (stī-lom'ạ-tus), a. [< Gr. στῦλος, a pillar, + ὄμμα(τ-), an eye.] Same as stylommatophorous.

stylopharyngeal (stī-lō-fā-rin'jē-ạl), a. and n. [< stylopharyngeus + -al.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the styloid process and the pharynx.

II. n. The stylopharyngeus.

stylopharyngeus (stī″lō-far-in-jē'us), n.; pl. stylopharyngei (-ī). [NL., < L. stylus, prop. stilus, a style, + Gr. φάρυγξ (φάρυγγ-), the throat.] A long slender muscle, spreading out below, arising from the base of the styloid process of the temporal bone, and inserted partly into the constrictor muscles of the pharynx, and partly into the posterior border of the thyroid cartilage: it is innervated by the glossopharyngeus.

Stylophorum (stī-lof'ọ-rum), n. [NL. (Nuttall, 1818), so called from the conspicuous style; < Gr. στῦλος, a pillar (see style[2]), + φέρειν = E. bear[1].] A genus of plants, of the family Papaveraceæ and the tribe Chelidonieæ. It is characterized by flowers with two sepals, four petals, and a distinct style which bears from two to four erect lobes, and is persistent with the placentæ after the fall of the valves and scrobiculate seeds from the ovoid, oblong, or linear, and commonly stalked capsule. There are 4 species, 1 in North America, the others in the Himalayas, Manchuria, and Japan. They are herbs with a perennial rootstock and a yellow juice, bearing a few lobed or dissected tender stem-leaves, and usually others which are pinnatifid and radical. The yellow or red flowers are borne on long peduncles which are nodding in the bud. S. diphyllum is the celandine poppy or yellow poppy of the central United States, formerly classed under Meconopsis. Its light-green leaves resemble those of the celandine, and, like it, contain a yellow juice.

Stylopidæ (stī-lop'i-dē), n. pl. [NL. (Kirby, 1813), < Stylops + -idæ.] An aberrant group of insects, formerly considered as forming a distinct order, Strepsiptera or Rhipiptera, or ranked as a family of heteromerous beetles, typified by the anomalous genus Stylops. In the males, which are capable of flight, the mouth-parts are atrophied, except the mandibles and one pair of palpi; the prothorax and mesothorax are very short; the elytra are reduced to simple club-shaped appendages (pseudelytra), while the hind wings are well developed, the metathorax being remarkably large and long, and the abdomen small. The females are wingless and worm-like, with a flattened triangular head, and live in the abdomen of certain bees and wasps, though the members of some genera parasitize ants and some homopterous insects, such as leaf-hoppers. They are viviparous, giving birth to hundreds of minute young, of very primitive form, with bulbous feet, slender hairy body ending in two long styles, and intestine ending as a closed sac. Stylops and Xenos are genera represented in North America. S. childreni lives in certain bees, and X. pecki in a common wasp (Polistes metricus). See cut under Stylops.

Stylopidæ.—Stylops aterrima, adult winged male. (Cross shows natural size.)

stylopized (stī'lō-pīzd), a. [< stylops + -ize + -ed[2].] Penetrated by a stylops; serving as the host of the parasitic stylops.

stylopod (stī'lō-pod), n. [< NL. stylopodium, < Gr. στῦλος, a pillar (see style[2]), + πούς (ποδ-) = E. foot.] In bot., same as stylopodium.

stylopodium (stī-lō-pō'di-um), n.; pl. stylopodia (-ạ). [NL.: see stylopod.] In bot., one of the double fleshy disks from which the styles in umbelliferous plants arise.

Stylops (stī'lops), n. [NL. (Kirby, 1802), < Gr. στῦλος, a pillar (see style[2]), + ὤψ, eye, face.] 1. A genus of insects, type of the order Rhipiptera or Strepsiptera, and of the family Stylopidæ.—2. [l. c.] An insect of this genus; a rhipipter or strepsipter.

1. Stylops aterrima, adult female, with two nearly hatched eggs, C, D, in B, the abdomen; A, ventral surface of thorax of three segments 1, 2, 3; a, mandibles; b, mouth. 2. Stylops aterrima, newly born larva, on a hair of a bee (Andrena trimerana). (All highly magnified.)

Stylosanthes (stī-lō-san'thēz), n. [NL. (Swartz, 1788), so called from the stalk-like calyx-tube; irreg. < Gr. στῦλος, a pillar (see style[2]), + ἄνθος, flower.] A genus of leguminous plants, of the tribe Hedysareæ, type of the subtribe Stylosantheæ. It is characterized by pinnate leaves of three leaflets, and an oblong or globose and usually densely flowered spike, a long stalk-like calyx-tube, and stamens united into a closed tube with their anthers alternately oblong and basifixed and shorter and versatile. There are about 25 species, of which 4 or 5 are natives of Africa or Asia, 3 are North American, and the others are South American and mainly Brazilian. They are commonly viscous herbs with yellow flowers in dense terminal spikes or heads, rarely scattered or axillary. S. biflora of the United States, the pencil-flower of southern pine-barrens, extends north to Long Island and Indiana. S. hamata is known in the West Indies as trefoil.

stylospore (stī'lō-spōr), n. [< Gr. στῦλος, a pillar (see style[2]), + σπορά, seed: see spore.] In bot., a stalked spore, developed by abstriction from the top of a fertile hypha or sterigma, and produced either in a special receptacle, as a pycnidium, or unineloped, as in the Hyphomycetes. See pycnidium, 1, macrostylospore. Also called pycnidiospore, pycnogonidium.

stylosporous (stī-los'pọ-rus), a. [< stylospore + -ous.] In bot., of the nature of a stylospore; resembling or bearing a stylospore.

stylostegium (stī-lō-stē'ji-um), n.; pl. stylostegia (-ạ). [NL., < Gr. στῦλος, a pillar (see style[2]), + στέγος, cover.] In bot., the peculiar orbicular corona which covers the style in Stapelia and similar asclepiads.

stylostemon† (stī-lō-stē'mon), n. [NL., < Gr. στῦλος, a pillar, + στήμων, taken as 'stamen' (see stamen[1]).] In bot., an epigynous stamen.

stylotypite (stī'lō-tī-pīt), n. [< Gr. στῦλος, a pillar (see style[2]), + τύπος, impression, + -ite[2].] A sulphid of antimony, copper, iron, and silver, from Copiapo, Chili: it is closely related to bournonite.

stylus (stī'lus), n.; pl. styli (-lī). [NL., < L. stylus, prop. stilus, a pointed instrument: see style[1].] 1. A sponge-spicule of the monaxon uniradiate type, sharp at one end and not at the other. It is regarded as an oxea one of whose rays is suppressed.—2. In entom., a style or stylet.

styme, n. See stime.

stymie (stī'mi), n. [Origin obscure; perhaps connected with styme, stime, a glimpse, a transitory glance.] In golf-playing, a position in which a player has to putt for the hole with his opponent's ball directly in the line of his approach.

Stymphalian (stim-fā'li-an), a. [< L. Stymphalius, < Gr. Στυμφάλιος, < Στύμφαλος, Stymphalus (see def.).] Of or pertaining to Stymphalus (the ancient name of a small deep valley, a lake, a river, and a town in Arcadia, Greece).—Stymphalian birds, in Gr. fable, a flock of noisome, voracious, and destructive birds, with brazen or iron claws, wings, and beaks, which infested Stymphalus. The killing or expulsion of these birds was the sixth labor of Hercules.

> A sort of dangerous fowl [critics], who have a perverse inclination to plunder the best branches of the tree of knowledge, like those Stymphalian birds that eat up the fruit.
> Swift, Tale of a Tub, iii.

★styptic (stip'tik), a. and n. [Formerly also stiptic, stiptik; < ME. stiptik, < OF. (and F.) styptique = Sp. estíptico = Pg. estitico = It. stitico, < L. stypticus, < Gr. στυπτικός, astringent, < στύφειν, contract, draw together, be astringent.]

I. a. 1†. Astringent; constrictive; binding.

> Take hede that slippery meats be not fyrste eaten, nor that stiptik nor restraining meates be taken at the begynning, as quynces, peares, and medlars.
> Sir T. Elyot, Castle of Health, fol. 45.

2. Having the quality of checking hemorrhage or bleeding; stanching.

> Then in his hands a bitter root he bruis'd;
> The wound he wash'd, the styptic juice infus'd.
> Pope, Iliad, xi. 983.

Styptic collodion, a compound of collodion 100 parts, carbolic acid 10 parts, pure tannin 5 parts, and benzoic acid 3 parts. Also called styptic colloid.—Styptic powder. See powder.

II. n. 1†. An astringent; something causing constriction or constraint.

> Mankind is infinitely beholden to this noble styptick, that could produce such wonderful effects so suddenly.
> Steele, Lying Lover, v. 1.

2. A substance employed to check a flow of blood by application to the bleeding orifice or surface.

> This wyne alle medycyne is take unto > Ther stiptik stont [stop] ejectyng bloode, and wo
> Of wombe or of stomak this wol declyne.
> Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 102.

Cotton-wool styptic, cotton-wool soaked in tincture of perchlorid of iron.

styptical (stip'ti-kal), a. [< styptic + -al.] Same as styptic.

styptic-bur (stip'tik-bėr), n. See Priva.

stypticite (stip'ti-sīt), n. [G. stipticit; < Gr. στυπτικός: see styptic.] Fiboferrite.

stypticity (stip-tis'i-ti), n. [< styptic + -i-ty.] The property of being styptic; astringency.

> Catharticks of mercurials precipitate the viscidities by their stypticity, and mix with all animal acids.
> Sir J. Floyer.

styptic-weed (stip'tik-wēd), n. The western cassia, Cassia occidentalis, a tall herb of tropical America and the southern United States. Its seeds from their use, are called negro or Mogdad coffee, though they do not contain caffein; its root is said to be diuretic; and its leaves are used as a dressing for slight wounds (whence the name). Also stinking-weed, stinking-wood.

Styracaceæ (stī-rā-kā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Alphonse de Candolle, 1844), < Styrax (-ac-) + -aceæ.] A family of dicotyledonous sympetalous plants, belonging to the order Diospyrales, of which Styrax is the type and most important genus. It is characterized by flowers which usually have ten or more stamens attached to a five-lobed corolla, and an ovary which is inferior, half inferior, or fixed by a broad base, and contains a solitary ovule or few in each cell. The embryo, with its doubtful radicle, also differs from that of the allied families, the Sapotaceæ and Diospyraceæ, in which it is respectively inferior and superior. The family includes about 75 species, belonging to 8 genera, of which one is Mohrodendron of North America and Asia, 3 are small South American genera, and there are two Asiatic genera. They are smooth, hairy, or scurfy trees or shrubs, with alternate entire or serrate membranous or coriaceous feather-veined leaves. Their flowers are usually white and racemed, rarely reddish, and sometimes cymose or fascicled. See Halesia, Styrax, and storax. The name has been frequently written Styraceæ.

styracin, styracine (stir'a-sin), n. [< NL. Styrax (-ac-) + -in[2], -ine[2].] An ester ($C_{18}H_{16}O_2$) of cinnamic acid, which is the chief constituent of storax. It forms odorless and tasteless crystals, which have the properties of a resin.

Styrax (stī'raks), n. [NL. (Tournefort, 1700), so named because producing a gum; < L. styrax, storax, < Gr. στύραξ, the gum storax, also the tree producing it: see storax.] A genus of dicotyledonous plants, type of the order Styraceæ. It is characterized by flowers with five partly united or separate petals, ten stamens in one row with linear or rarely oblong anthers, and a three-celled or afterward one-celled ovary with the ovules usually few and erect or pendulous. The fruit is seated upon the calyx and is globose or oblong, dry or drupaceous, indehiscent or three-valved, and nearly filled by the usually solitary seed. There are over 60 species, widely scattered through warm regions of Asia and America, a few also natives of temperate parts of Asia and southern Europe, but none found in Africa or Australia. They are shrubs or trees, usually scurfy or covered with stellate hairs, and bearing entire or slightly serrate leaves, and usually white flowers in pendulous racemes. Several species are cultivated for ornament; S. Japonica, recently introduced into gardens, is known from its feathery white blossoms as snowflake - flower. Others yield valuable gums, especially S. Benzoin (see benzoin) and S. officinalis (see storax). S. punctata, a Central American tree, yields a gum which is used as frankincense, and is obtained on removing the external wood from trees which have been cut for several years. S. grandifolia, S. Americana, and S. pulverulenta, known as American storax, occur in the United States from Virginia southward, with one species in Texas and one in California.

Styrax Benzoin. a, a flower.

Styrian (stir'i-an), a. and n. [< Styria (see def.) + -an.] I. a. Of or pertaining to Styria, a crownland and duchy of the Austrian empire, lying south of Upper and Lower Austria, and west of Hungary.

II. n. One of the people of Styria.

styrol (stī'rol), n. [< L. styr(ax) + -ol.] A colorless strongly refractive liquid (C_8H_8), with an odor like that of benzene, obtained by heating styracin with calcium hydroxid. Also called cinnamene.

styrolene (stī'rō-lēn), n. [< styrol + -ene.] Same as styrol.

styrone (stī'rōn), n. [< styr(ax) + -one.] Cinnamyl alcohol ($C_9H_{10}O$), a crystalline solid with a fragrant odor, obtained by treating styracin with caustic potash. It is slightly soluble in water, and volatile at high temperatures.

stythe[1]†, n. [An irreg. var. of sty[2].] A sty.

> O out of my stythe I [a maiden transformed to a beast] winna rise . . .
> Till Kempion, the Kingis son,
> Cum to the crag, and thrice kiss me.
> Kempion (Child's Ballads, I. 140).
>
> And, at last, into the very swine's stythe,
> The Queen brought forth a son.
> Fause Foodrage (Child's Ballads, III. 43).

stythe[2] (stīth), n. [More prop. stithe; cf. E. dial. stithe, stifling; prob. a var. of stive, after stithe, stith, strong: see stith.] Choke-damp; after-damp; black-damp; the mixture of gases left after an explosion of fire-damp, and consisting chiefly of carbonic-acid gas; also, more rarely, this gas accumulated in perceptible quantity in any part of a coal-mine, whether arising from respiration of men or animals, from the use of gunpowder, or from the burning of lamps or candles. [Lancashire, Eng., coal-field.]

> Shallow and badly ventilated mines produce stythe.
> Gresley.

stywardt, n. A Middle English form of steward.

Styx (stiks), n. [< L. Styx, < Gr. Στύξ (Στυγ-), a river of the infernal regions, lit. 'the Hateful,' < στυγεῖν, hate, abominate.] 1. In Gr. myth., a river of the lower world.—2. [NL.] In zoöl., a genus of butterflies, of the subfamily Pierinæ. Staudinger, 1876.

Suabian, a. and n. Same as Swabian.

suability (sū-a-bil'i-ti), n. [< suable + -i-ty.] Liability to be sued; the state of being suable, or subject by law to civil process.

suable (sū'a-bl), a. [< sue[1] + -able.] Capable of being or liable to be sued; subject by law to civil process.

suadet (swād), v. t. [< OF. suader = Sp. suadir = It. suadere, < L. suadere, advise, urge, persuade: see suasion, and cf. dissuade, persuade.] To persuade.

suadiblet (swā'di-bl), a. [< suade + -ible.] Same as suasible.

Suæda (sū-ē'dä), n. [NL., from an Ar. name.] A name given by Forskål in 1775 to Dondia, a genus of dicotyledonous apetalous plants, of the family Chenopodiaceæ. It is characterized by fleshy linear leaves, and flowers with a five-lobed persistent perianth from which the inclosed utricle is nearly or quite free. There are about 50 species, natives of seashores and salt deserts. They are erect or prostrate herbs or shrubs, green or glaucous, and either simple or diffusely branched. Their leaves are usually terete and entire, and their flowers small and nearly or quite sessile in the axils. Dondia linearis is a small sea-coast plant of the Atlantic coast from North Carolina to Florida; 6 or 7 other species occur westward. D. fruticosa, known as sea-rosemary, shrubby goosefoot, or white glasswort, an erect branching evergreen common in the Mediterranean region, is one of the plants formerly burned to produce barilla. For D. maritima, also called sea-goosefoot, see blite[2].

Suædeæ (sū-ē'dē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Moquin, 1852), < Suæda + -eæ.] A tribe of dicotyledonous apetalous plants, of the family Chenopodiaceæ, based on Suæda of Forskål, which is a homonym of Dondia. The tribal name is therefore invalid under the rules. It includes five genera, four of which are monotypic and occur in saline regions in Persia and central Asia; for the other, Dondia, the type, see Suæda.

suaget, swaget (swāj), v. [< ME. swagen; by apheresis from assuage.] I. trans. To make quiet; soothe; assuage.

> Ffayne were tho freikes and the folke all.
> And swiftly thai swere, swagit there herttes,
> To be lell to the lord all his lyf tyme.
> Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 13643.
>
> Nor wanting power to mitigate and 'suage
> With solemn touches troubled thoughts.
> Milton, P. L., i. 556.

II. intrans. To become quiet; abate.

> These yoies seuyn
> Shalle neuer swage nor sesse
> But euermore endure and encresse.
> Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 146.
>
> Soone after mydnyght the grete tempest byganne to swage and wex lasse.
> Sir R. Guylforde, Pylgrymage, p. 73.

suant[1] (sū'ant), a. [Also suent, formerly sewant, sewent; < OF. suant, ppr. of suivre, etc., follow: see sue, sequent.] 1. Following; sequent; pursuant. Halliwell (under suent).—2. Smooth; even.

> The Middlesex Cattle Show goes off here with éclat annually, as if all the joints of the agricultural machine were suent.
> Thoreau, Walden, p. 87.

[Prov. Eng. and New Eng. in both senses.]

suant[2] (sū'ant), n. [Formerly also sewant; origin uncertain.] The plaice. Halliwell (under sewant). [Prov. Eng.]

> Behold some others rangèd all along
> To take the sewant, yea, the flounder sweet.
> J. Dennys (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 171).
>
> The shad that in the springtime cometh in;
> The suant swift, that is not set by least.
> J. Dennys (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 175).

suantly (sū'ant-li), adv. Evenly; smoothly; regularly. Also suently. [Prov. New Eng.]

suarrow (sō-ar'ō), n. A variant of souari.

suasible (swā'si-bl), a. [= Sp. suasible = It. suasibile, < L. suadere, pp. suasus, advise, urge: see suade, suasion. Cf. suadible.] Same as persuasible. Bailey, 1731. [Rare.]

suasion (swā'zhon), n. [< ME. suacyon, < OF. suasion = It. suasione, < L. suasio(n-), an advising, a counseling, exhortation, < suadere, pp. suasus, advise, counsel, urge, persuade (cf. LL. suadus, persuasive, L. Suada, the goddess of persuasion), < suavis, orig. suadvis*, pleasant, sweet: see suave, sweet.] The act or effort of persuading; the use of persuasive means or efforts: now chiefly in the phrase moral suasion.

> The suacyon of swetenesse rethoryen.
> Chaucer, Boëthius, ii. prose 1.
>
> Thei had, by the subtill suasion of the deuill, broken the thirde commaundement in tasting of the forboden fruyte.
> Sir T. More, Works, p. 157.
>
> She did not dare to come down the path to shake her, and moral suasion at the distance of sixty or seventy feet is very ineffective. T. C. Crawford, English Life, p. 184.

suasive (swā'siv), a. [< OF. suasif = Sp. It. suasivo, < L. suadere, pp. suasus, advise, urge: see suade, suasion.] Having power to persuade; persuasive. [Archaic and poetical.]

> Its [justice's] command over them was but suasive and political.
> South, Sermons, I. ii.

suasively (swā'siv-li), adv. So as to persuade.

> Let a true tale . . . be suasively told them.
> Carlyle, French Rev., I. iii. 2.

suasory† (swā′sō-ri), a. [= OF. suasoire = Sp. Pg. It. suasorio, < L. suasorius, of or pertaining to advice or persuasion, < suasor, one who advises or persuades, < suadere, advise, persuade: see suade, suasion.] Tending to persuade; persuasive.

A Suasory or Enticing Temptation.
Bp. Hopkins, Expos. of the Lord's Prayer, Works, I. 140.

suave (swāv or swäv), a. [< F. suave = Sp. Pg. suave = It. soave, < L. suavis, orig. suadvis* = Gr. ἡδύς, sweet, agreeable, = AS. swēte, E. sweet: see sweet. Cf. suade, suasion, etc.] Soothingly agreeable; pleasant; mollifying; bland: used of persons or things: as, a suave diplomatist; suave politeness.

Mr. Hall, . . . to whom the husky oat-cake was, from custom, suave as manna, seemed in his best spirits.
Charlotte Brontë, Shirley, xxvi.

What gentle, suave, courteous tones!
Mrs. H. Jackson, Ramona, i.

suavely (swāv'- or swäv'li), adv. In a suave or soothing manner; blandly: as, to speak suavely.

suavify† (swav'i-fī), v. t. [< L. suavis, sweet, + facere, make (see -fy).] To make affable. Imp. Dict.

suaviloquent† (swā-vil'ō-kwent), a. [< LL. suaviloquen(t-)s, speaking sweetly, < L. suavis, sweet, + loquen(t-)s, ppr. of loqui, speak.] Speaking suavely or blandly; using soothing or agreeable speech. Bailey, 1727.

suaviloquy† (swā-vil'ō-kwi), n. [< LL. suaviloquium, sweet speaking, < L. suaviloquus, speaking sweetly, < suavis, sweet, + loqui, speak.] Sweetness of speech. Compare suaviloquent.

suavity (swav'i-ti), n. [< F. suavité = Sp. suavidad = Pg. suavidade = It. suavità, soavità, < L. suavita(t-)s, sweetness, pleasantness, < suavis, sweet, pleasant: see suave.] 1. Pleasant or soothing quality or manner; agreeableness; blandness: as, suavity of manner or address.

Our own people . . . greatly lack suavity, and show a comparative inattention to minor civilities.
H. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 431.

The worst that can be said of it [Perugino's style] is that its suavity inclines to mawkishness, and that its quietism borders upon sleepiness.
J. A. Symonds, Italy and Greece, p. 75.

Hence—2. Pl. suavities (-tiz). That which is suave, bland, or soothing.

The elegances and suavities of life die out one by one as we sink through the social scale.
O. W. Holmes, Professor, vi.

3†. Sweetness to the senses; a mild or agreeable quality. Johnson.

She [Rachel] desired them [the mandrakes] for rarity, pulchritude, or suavity. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., vii. 7.

=Syn. 1. Urbanity, amenity, civility, courtesy.

sub-, [ME. sub- = OF. sub-, sou-, F. sub-, sou- = Pr. sub- = Sp. Pg. It. sub-, < L. sub, prep. with abl., under, before, near; of time, toward, up to, just after; in comp., under (of place), secretly (of action); the b remains in comp. unchanged, except before c, f, g, p, where it is usually, and before m and r, where it is often assimilated (suc-, suf-, sug-, sup-, sum-, sur-); also in another form subs, in comp. sus-, as in suscipere, undertake, sustinere, sustain, etc., reduced to su- before a radical s, as in suspicere, look under, suspirare, suspire; prob. = Gr. ὑπό, under (see hypo-), with initial s- as in super- = Gr ὑπέρ (see super-, hyper-): see up and over. Cf. subter-.] A prefix of Latin origin, meaning 'under, below, beneath,' or 'from under.' (a) It occurs in its literal sense in many words, verbs, adjectives, and nouns, taken from the Latin, as in subjacent, underlying, subscribe, underwrite, subside, sit down, submerge, plunge down, etc., the literal sense being in many cases not felt in English, as in subject, subjoin, subtract, etc. (b) It also expresses an inferior or subordinate part or degree, as in subdivide, especially with adjectives, where it is equivalent to the English -ish[1], meaning 'somewhat, rather,' as in subacid, sourish, subdulcid, sweetish, etc., being in these greatly extended in modern use, as an accepted English formative, applicable not only to adjectives of Latin origin, especially in scientific use, as in subalate, subcordate, subdivine, etc., but to words of other origin, as subhornblendic. (c) It is also freely used with nouns denoting an agent or a division, to denote an inferior or subordinate agent or division, as in subdeacon, subprior, subgenus, subspecies, etc., not only with Latin but with nouns of other origin, as in subreader, submarshal, subfreshman, etc., where it is equivalent to under- or deputy, and is usually written with a hyphen. (d) In many cases, especially where it has been assimilated, as in suc-, suf-, sug-, sup-, sum-, sur-, the force of the prefix is not felt in English, and the word is to English apprehension a primitive, as in succor, suffer, suggest, support, summon, surrender, etc. In technical use sub- denotes—(e) In zoöl. and anat.: (1) Inferiority in kind, quality, character, degree, extent, and the like. It is prefixed almost at will to adjectives admitting of comparison, and in its various applications may be rendered by 'less than, not quite, not exactly, somewhat, nearly, hardly, almost,' etc.; it often has the diminishing or depreciating force of the suffix -ish[1]; it is sometimes prefixed, like about, merely to avoid committal to more precise or exact statement, but in a few cases implies unlikeness amounting to oppositeness and so to negation of some character or attribute, with the meaning nearly of quasi- or pseudo-. A particular case indicates taxonomic inferiority, or subordination in classificatory grade, of any group from subkingdom to subvariety: it is the sense (c) above noted, and the same as the botanical sense (2) below. (2) Inferiority in place or position; lowness of relative location. This sense is more definite, and the meaning of 'lower than' may usually be rendered by 'under, underneath, beneath, below,' sometimes by 'on the under side of.' This sub- is synonymous with infra- or infero-, and with hypo-, and is the opposite of supra- or super-, hyper-, and sometimes epi-. (f) In bot., (1) with adjectives, literal position beneath, as in subcortical, subhymenial, subepidermal, subpetiolar, etc.; (2) with classificatory terms, a systematic grade next lower than that of the stem-word, as in suborder, subgenus, subspecies; (3) with adjectives and adverbs, an inferior degree or extent, 'somewhat, to some extent, imperfectly,' as in subangulose, subascending, subcaudate, subconnate, etc. (g) In chem., the fact that the member of the compound with which it is connected is in relative minimum: thus, subacetate of lead is a compound of lead and acetic acid which is capable of combining with more acetic acid radicals, but not with more lead. [As sub- in most of the uses noted above is now established as an English formative, it is to be treated, like under- in similar cases, as applicable in modern use in any instance where it may be wanted; and of the modern compounds so formed only the principal ones are entered below, usually without further etymological note. Many of the adjectives have two meanings, the mode of formation differing accordingly: thus, subabdominal, 'situated under the abdomen,' is formed < L. sub, under, + abdomen (abdomin-), abdomen, + -al; while subabdominal, 'not quite abdominal,' is < sub- + abdominal. For the full etymology of these words, when not given below, see sub- and the other member of the compound. The less familiar compounds with sub- are often written with a hyphen; it is here uniformly omitted.]

sub (sub), n. [Contr. of subaltern or subordinate.] A subaltern; a subordinate. [Colloq.]

"Ah, when we were subs together in camp in 1803, what a lively fellow Charley Baynes was!" his comrade, Colonel Bunch, would say. Thackeray, Philip, xxvi.

suba, n. See subah.

subabdominal (sub-ab-dom'i-nal), a. [= F. subabdominal; as sub- + abdominal.] 1. Situated below or beneath the abdomen: as, the subabdominal appendages of a crustacean.—2. Not quite abdominal in position, as the ventral fins of a fish.

subacetate (sub-as'e-tāt), n. A basic acetate—that is, one in which there is an excess of the base or metallic oxid beyond that amount which reacts with the acid to form a normal salt: as, subacetate of lead; subacetate of copper (verdigris).

subacid (sub-as'id), a. and n. [= Sp. subácido = It. subacido, < L. subacidus, somewhat sour, < sub, under, + acidus, sour: see acid.] I. a. 1. Moderately acid or sour: as, a subacid juice. Arbuthnot.—2. Hence, noting words or a temperament verging on acidity or somewhat biting.

A little subacid kind of drollish impatience in his nature.
Sterne, Tristram Shandy, viii. 26.

II. n. A substance moderately acid.

subacidity (sub-a-sid'i-ti), n. The state of being subacid; also, that which is slightly acid or acrid.

A theologic subacidity. The Atlantic, LXVII. 411.

subacidulous (sub-a-sid'ū-lus), a. Moderately acidulous.

Tasting a thimbleful of rich Canary, honeyed Cyprus, or subacidulous Hock. Lowell, Study Windows, p. 291.

subacrid (sub-ak'rid), a. Moderately acrid, sharp, or pungent. Sir J. Floyer.

subacromial (sub-a-krō'mi-al), a. [< L. sub, under, + NL. acromion: see acromial.] Situated below the acromion: as, a subacromial bursa.

subact† (sub-akt'), v. t. [< L. subactus, pp. of subigere, bring under, subdue, < sub, under, + agere, lead, bring: see act.] To reduce; subdue; subject. Evelyn, True Religion, II. 375.

subact† (sub-akt'), a. [ME., < L. subactus, pp.: see the verb.] Reduced; subdued.

In Novemb'r and Marche her brannches sette
In dounged lande subact.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 122.

subaction† (sub-ak'shon), n. [< L. subactio(n-), a working through or up, preparation: see subact.] 1. The act of reducing, or the state of being reduced; reduction. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 838.—2. A substance reduced.

subacuminate (sub-a-kū'mi-nāt), a. Somewhat acuminate.

subacute (sub-a-kūt'), a. Noting a condition just below that of acuteness, in any sense.

subacutely (sub-a-kūt'li), adv. In a subacute manner.

subaërial (sub-ā-ē'ri-al), a. In geol., formed, produced, or deposited in the open air, and not beneath the sea, or under water, or below the surface; not submarine or subterranean: thus, subaërial denudation or erosion. See æolian[1], 2.

subagency (sub-ā'jen-si), n. A delegated agency.

subagent (sub-ā'jent), n. In law, the agent of an agent.

subah (sö'bä), n. [Also suba, soubah; < Pers. Hind. sūbah, a province.] 1. A division or province of the Mogul empire. Yule and Burnell.—2. An abbreviation of subahdar.

subahdar (sö-bä-där'), n. [Also soubahdar, soubadar; < Pers. Hind. sūbahdār, < sūbah, a province, + -dār, holding, keeping.] 1. Originally, a lord of a subah or province; hence, a local commandant or chief officer.—2. The chief native officer of a company of sepoys. Yule and Burnell.

subaid (sub-ād'), v. t. To give secret or private aid to. Daniel. [Rare.]

subalmoner (sub-al'mon-ėr), n. A subordinate almoner. Wood.

subalpine (sub-al'pin), a. [= F. subalpin = Pg. subalpino, < L. subalpinus, lying near the Alps, < sub, under, + Alpinus, Alpine: see alpine.] 1. Living or growing on mountains at an elevation next below the height called alpine.—2. Lower Alpine: applied to that part or zone of the Alps which lies between the so-called "highland" zone and the "Alpine" zone proper. It extends between the elevations of 4,000 and 5,500 feet approximately, and is especially characterized by the presence of coniferous trees, chiefly firs, which cover a large part of its surface. Large timber-trees rarely reach much above its upper border. Below the subalpine zone is the highland or mountain zone, the region of deciduous trees, and above it the Alpine, which, as this term is generally used, embraces the region extending between the upper limit of trees and the first appearance of permanent snow. Still higher up is the glacial region, comprehending all that part of the Alps which rises above the limit of perpetual snow. The terms alpine and subalpine are sometimes applied to other mountain-chains than the Alps, with signification more or less vaguely accordant with their application to that chain.

subaltern (sub'al-tėrn or su-bâl'tėrn, the former always in the logical sense), a. and n. [< F. subalterne = Sp. Pg. It. subalterno, < ML. subalternus, subaltern, < L. sub, under, + alternus, one after the other, alternate: see altern.] I. a. Having an inferior or subordinate position; subordinate; specifically (milit.), holding the rank of a junior officer usually below the rank of captain.

To this system of religion were tagged several subaltern doctrines. Swift, Tale of a Tub, ii.

Subaltern genus, opposition, proposition, etc. See the nouns.

II. n. A subaltern officer; a subordinate.

subalternant (sub-al-tėr'nant), a. and n. [= Sp. It. subalternante; as subaltern + -ant.] I. a. In logic, universal, as opposed to particular.

II. n. A universal.

subalternate (sub-al-tėr'nāt), a. and n. [< subaltern + -ate[1].] I. a. 1. Successive; succeeding by turns. Imp. Dict.—2. Subordinate, subaltern; inferior. Canon Tooker.

II. n. In logic, a particular, as opposed to a universal.

subalternating (sub-al-tėr'nā-ting), a. Succeeding by turns; successive. Imp. Dict.

subalternation (sub-al-tėr-nā'shon), n. [= Pg. subalternação; as subalternate + -ion.] 1. The state of inferiority or subjection; the state of being subalternate; succession by turns. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v. 73.—2. In logic, an immediate inference from a universal to a particular under it: as, every griffin breathes fire; therefore, some animals breathe fire. Some logicians do not admit the validity of this inference.

subanal (sub-ā'nal), a. [< L. sub, under, + anus, anus: see anal.] Situated under the anus: specifically noting a plate or other formation in echinoderms. Quart. Jour. Geol. Soc., XLV. 644.

subancestral (sub-an-ses'tral), a. Of collateral ancestry or derivation; not in the direct line of descent. Proc. U. S. Nat. Mus., XI. 588.

subanconeal (sub-ang-kō'nē-al), a. [< L. sub, under, + NL. anconeus: see anconeal.] Situated underneath the anconeus.

subanconeus (sub-ang-kō-nē'us), n.; pl. subanconei (-ī). [NL., < L. sub, under, + NL. anconeus, q. v.] A small muscle of the back of the elbow, arising from the humerus just above the olecranon fossa, and inserted into the capsular ligament of the elbow-joint. It resembles the subcruræus of the knee.

subandean (sub-an'dē-an), a. [< sub- + Andes: see Andean.] In zoögeog., subjacent with reference to certain parts of the Andes, and nowhere attaining an altitude so great as that of the highest Andean mountains: specifying a certain faunal area. (See below.)—Subandean subregion, in zoögeog., one of four subregions into which the continent of South America (with the islands appertaining thereto) has been divided by A. Newton. It includes a not well defined northerly section of the continent, with the islands of Tobago, Trinidad, and the Galapagos, and takes in all the South American countries that do not belong to the Amazonian, Brazilian, or Patagonian subregion. The Subandean subregion includes what has also been called the Columbian (or Colombian), but is more extensive. It is recognized upon ornithological grounds, and said to possess 72 peculiar genera of birds. Encyc. Brit., III. 744.

subangled (sub-ang'gld), a. Same as subangular.—Subangled wave. See wave.

subangular (sub-ang'gū-lär), a. Slightly angular; bluntly angulated. Huxley, Physiography, p. 278.

subangulate, subangulated (sub-ang'gū-lāt, -lā-ted), a. Somewhat angled or sharp.

subantichrist (sub-an'ti-krīst), n. A person or power partially antagonistic to Christ; a lesser antichrist. Milton, Church-Government, i. 6. [Rare.]

subapennine (sub-ap'e-nīn), a. [= F. subapennin, < L. sub, under, + Apenninus, Apennine: see Apennine.] Being at the base or foot of the Apennines.—Subapennine series, in geol., a series of rocks of Pliocene age, developed in Italy on the flanks of the Apennines, and also in Sicily. In the Ligurian region the Pliocene has been divided into Messinian, Astian, and Villafranchian; in Sicily, into Zanclean, Plaisancian, and Astian. In the last region these rocks rise to an elevation of 4,000 feet above the sea-level, and are replete with well-preserved forms of organic life now living in the Mediterranean.

subapical (sub-ap'i-kal), a. [< L. sub, under, + apex, point: see apical.] Situated below the apex.

subaponeurotic (sub-ap″ō-nū-rot'ik), a. [< L. sub, under, + NL. aponeurosis: see aponeurotic.] Situated beneath an aponeurosis.

subapostolic (sub-ap-ŏs-tol'ik), a. Of, pertaining to, or constituting the period succeeding that of the apostles: as, subapostolic literature. Encyc. Brit., XI. 854.

subappressed (sub-a-prest'), a. In entom., partly appressed: as, subappressed hairs.

subaquatic (sub-a-kwat'ik), a. 1. Not entirely aquatic, as a wading bird.—2. [= F. subaquatique.] Situated or formed in or below the surface of the water; subaqueous.

subaqueous (sub-ā'kwē-us), a. [= It. subaqueo; as L. sub, under, + E. aqueous.] Situated, formed, or living under water; subaquatic.

subarachnoid (sub-a-rak'noid), a. 1. Situated beneath the arachnoid—that is, between that membrane and the pia mater: as, the subarachnoid space.—2†. Subdural.—Subarachnoid fluid, the cerebrospinal fluid.—Subarachnoid space, the space between the arachnoid membrane and the pia mater.

subarachnoidal, subarachnoidean (sub-ar-ak-noi'dal, -dē-an), a. Same as subarachnoid. H. Gray, Anat. (ed. 1887), p. 653.

subarborescent (sub-är-bŏ-res'ent), a. Having a somewhat tree-like aspect.

subarctic (sub-ärk'tik), a. Nearly arctic; existing or occurring a little south of the arctic circle: as, a subarctic region or fauna; subarctic animals or plants; a subarctic climate.

subarcuate (sub-är'kū-āt), a. Somewhat bent or bowed; slightly arcuated.

subarcuated (sub-är'kū-ā-ted), a. Same as subarcuate.

subareolar (sub-a-rē'ŏ-lär), a. Situated beneath the mammary areola.—Subareolar abscess, a furuncular subcutaneous abscess of the areola of the nipple.

subarmor (sub'är″mor), n. A piece of armor worn beneath the visible outer defense. J. Hewitt, Anc. Armour, II. 132.

subarrhation (sub-a-rā'shon), n. [< ML. subarratio(n-)*, < subarrare, betroth, < L. sub, under, + arrha, earnest-money, a pledge: see arrha.] The ancient custom or rite of betrothing by the bestowal, on the part of the man, of marriage gifts or tokens, as money, rings, or other objects, upon the woman. Also subarration.

> The prayer which follows . . . takes the place of a long form of blessing which followed the subarrhation in the ancient office.
>
> Blunt, Annotated Book of Common Prayer, p. 455.

subastragalar (sub-as-trag'a-lär), a. Situated beneath the astragalus.—Subastragalar amputation, amputation of most of the foot, leaving only the astragalus.

subastragaloid (sub-as-trag'a-loid), a. Situated beneath or below the astragalus.

subastral (sub-as'tral), a. [< L. sub, under, + astrum, a star: see astral.] Situated beneath the stars or heavens; terrestrial.

subaud (sub-âd'), v. t. [< L. subaudire, supply a word omitted, hear a little, < sub, under, + audire, hear: see audient.] To supply mentally, as a word or an ellipsis. Imp. Dict. [Rare.]

subaudition (sub-â-dish'on), n. [< L. subauditio(n-), the supplying of a word omitted, < subaudire, supply a word omitted: see subaud.] The act of understanding something not expressed; that which is understood or implied from that which is expressed; understood meaning. Horne Tooke.

subaural (sub-â'ral), a. Situated beneath or below the ear.

subaxillar (sub-ak'si-lär), a. and n. Same as subaxillary.

subaxillary (sub-ak'si-lā-ri), a. and n. I. a. 1. In zoöl.: (a) Situated beneath the axilla or armpit. (b) Specifically, in ornith., same as axillary: as, "subaxillary feathers," Pennant.—2. In bot., placed under an axil, or angle formed by the branch of a plant with the stem, or by a leaf with the branch.—Subaxillary region. See region.

II. n.; pl. subaxillaries (-riz). In ornith., same as axillar or axillary.

subbass (sub'bās), n. In organ-building, a pedal stop resembling either the open or the stopped diapason, and of 16- or 32-feet tone. Also called subbourdon.

subblush (sub-blush'), v. i. To blush slightly. [Rare.]

> Raising up her eyes, sub-blushing as she did it.
>
> Sterne, Tristram Shandy, ix. 25.

subbourdon (sub-bör'don), n. Same as subbass.

subbrachial (sub-brā'ki-al), a. and n. Same as subbrachiate.

subbrachiate (sub-brā'ki-āt), a. and n. I. a. Situated under the pectorals, as the ventral fins; having the ventrals under the pectorals, as a fish.

II. n. A subbrachiate fish. See Subbrachiati.

Subbrachiati (sub-brak-i-ā'tī), n. pl. An order of malacopterygian fishes, containing those which are subbrachiate: contrasted with Apodes and Abdominales. See under Malacopterygii.

subbrachycephalic (sub-brak″i-se-fal'ik or -sef'a-lik), a. Nearly but not quite brachycephalic; somewhat short-headed; having a cephalic index of 80.01 to 83.33 (Broca). Nature, XLI. 357.

subbranch (sub'bränch), n. 1. A subdivision of a branch, in any sense of that word. W. S. Jevons, Money and the Mechanism of Exchange, p. 258.—2. Specifically, in zoölogical classification, a prime division of a branch or phylum; a subphylum.

subbranchial (sub-brang'ki-al), a. Situated under the gills.

subbreed (sub'brēd), n. A recognizable strain or marked subdivision of a breed; an incipient artificial race or stock. Darwin.

subbrigadier (sub'brig-a-dēr'), n. An officer in the Horse Guards who ranks as cornet. [Eng.]

subcalcareous (sub-kal-kā'rē-us), a. Somewhat calcareous.

subcalcarine (sub-kal'ka-rin), a. Situated below the calcar, as of a bird, or below the calcarine fissure of the brain.

subcaliber (sub-kal'i-bėr), a. Of less caliber: said of a projectile as compared with the bore of the gun. See subcaliber projectile, under projectile.

subcantor (sub-kan'tor), n. In music, same as succentor, 1.

subcapsular (sub-kap'sū-lär), a. Situated under a capsule; being in the cavity of a capsule. Lancet, 1889, I. 787.—Subcapsular epithelium, an epithelioid lining of the inside of the capsule of a spinal ganglion.

Subcarboniferous (sub-kär-bo-nif'e-rus), n. and a. In geol., a name given by some geologists to the mountain-limestone division of the Carboniferous series, or that part of the series which lies beneath the millstone-grit. See carboniferous.

subcartilaginous (sub-kär-ti-laj'i-nus), a. 1. Situated below or beneath cartilage; lying under the costal cartilages; hypochondrial.—2. Partly or incompletely cartilaginous.

subcaudal (sub-kâ'dal), a. and n. I. a. 1. Situated under the tail; placed on the under side of the tail: as, subcaudal chevron-bones; the subcaudal scutes, or urosteges, of a snake.—2. Not quite caudal or terminal; situated near the tail or tail-end; subterminal.—Subcaudal pouch, a pocket or recess beneath the root of the tail of the badger, above the anus, into which empty the secretions of certain subcaudal glands distinct from the ordinary anal or perineal glands of other Mustelidæ.

II. n. That which is subcaudal; specifically, in herpet., a urostege; one of the special scutes upon the under side of the tail of a serpent.

subcaudate (sub-kâ'dāt), a. 1. In entom., having an imperfect tail-like process: as, butterflies with subcaudate wings.—2. In bot. See sub- (f) 3.

subcelestial (sub-sē-les'tial), a. Being beneath the heavens.

> The superlunary but subcelestial world.
>
> Harvey, Irenæus, p. xcvii.

subcellar (sub'sel″ar), n. A cellar beneath another cellar.

subcentral (sub-sen'tral), a. 1. Being under the center.—2. Nearly central; a little eccentric.

subcentrally (sub-sen'tral-i), adv. 1. Under the center.—2. Nearly centrally.

subcerebral (sub-ser'ē-bral), a. Below the cerebrum; specifically, below the supposed seat of consciousness, or not dependent on volition: said of involuntary or reflex action in which the spinal cord, but not the brain, is concerned.

subchanter (sub'chan″tėr), n. In music, same as subcantor, succentor, 1.

subchela (sub-kē'la), n.; pl. subchelæ (-lē). The hooked end of an appendage which bends down upon the joint to which it is articulated, but has no other movable claw to oppose it and thus make a nipper or chela.

subchelate (sub-kē'lāt), a. Of the nature of or provided with a subchela. Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 327.

subcheliform (sub-kē'li-fôrm), a. Subchelate. Eng. Cyc. Nat. Hist. (1855), III. 87.

subchlorid, subchloride (sub'klō″rid), n. That one of two compounds of an element with chlorin which contains the smaller proportion of chlorin. $HgCl_2$ is chlorid of mercury; HgCl or Hg_2Cl_2 is subchlorid of mercury.

subchondral (sub-kon'dral), a. Lying underneath cartilage; subcartilaginous: as, subchondral osseous tissue.

subchordal (sub-kôr'dal), a. Situated beneath the chorda dorsalis, or notochord, of a vertebrate. Compare parachordal.

subchoroid (sub-kō'roid), a. Same as subchoroidal.

subchoroidal (sub-kō-roi'dal), a. Situated beneath the choroid tunic of the eye.—Subchoroidal dropsy, morbid accumulation of fluid between the adherent choroid sclerotic and the retina.

subcinctorium (sub-singk-tō'ri-um), n.; pl. subcinctoria (-ä). See succinctorium.

subclass (sub'klas), n. A prime subdivision of a class; in zoöl. and bot., a division or group of a grade between the class and the order, or between the class and the superorder.

subclavate (sub-klā'vāt), a. Somewhat clavate; slightly enlarged toward the end.—Subclavate antennæ, in entom., antennæ in which the outer joints are somewhat larger than the basal ones, but without forming a distinct club.

subclavian (sub-klā'vi-an), a. and n. [< L. sub, under, + clavis, a key: see clavis, and cf. clavicle.] I. a. 1. Lying or extending under, beneath, or below the clavicle or collar-bone; subclavicular.—2. Pertaining to the subclavian artery or vein: as, the subclavian triangle or groove.—Subclavian artery, the principal artery of the root of the neck, arising on the right side from the innominate artery and on the left from the arch of the aorta, and ending in the axillary artery; the beginning or main trunk of the arterial system of the fore limb. See cuts under lung and embryo.—Subclavian groove. (a) A shallow depression on the surface of the first rib, denoting the situation of a subclavian vessel. There are two of them, separated by a tubercle, respectively in front of and behind the insertion of the anterior scalene muscle—the former for the subclavian vein, the latter for the subclavian artery. (b) A groove on the under side of the clavicle, for the insertion of the subclavius.—Subclavian muscle, the subclavius.—Subclavian nerve, the motor nerve of the subclavius muscle, arising from the fifth cervical nerve at its junction with the sixth.—Subclavian triangle. See triangle.—Subclavian vein, the continuation of the axillary vein from the lower border of the first rib to the sternoclavicular articulation, where the vessel ends by joining the internal jugular to form the innominate vein. See cut under lung.

II. n. A subclavian artery, vein, nerve, or muscle.

subclavicular (sub-klā-vik'ū-lär), a. Situated below the clavicle; infraclavicular; subclavian.—Subclavicular aneurism, an aneurism of the axillary artery situated too high to be ligated below the clavicle.—Subclavicular fossa, the surface depression below the outer end of the clavicle.—Subclavicular region. Same as infraclavicular region (which see, under infraclavicular).

subclavius (sub-klā'vi-us), n.; pl. subclavii (-ī). [NL.: see subclavian.] A muscle passing from the first rib to the under surface of the clavicle or collar-bone.—Subclavius posticus. Same as sternochondroscapularis.

Subcoccinella (sub-kok-si-nel′ạ), n. [NL., < sub- + Coccinella.] A genus of ladybirds or coccinellids based by Huber (1841) upon the widespread S. 24-punctata. Also called Lasia.

subcollateral (sub-kọ-lat′ẹ-ral), a. Situated below the collateral fissure of the brain.

subcommission (sub′kọ-mish″ọn), n. An undercommission; a division of a commission.

subcommissioner (sub′kọ-mish″ọn-ėr), n. A subordinate commissioner.

subcommittee (sub′kọ-mit″ẹ̄), n. An under committee; a part or division of a committee.

subconcave (sub-kon′kāv), a. Slightly concave.

subconcealed† (sub-kọn-sēld′), a. Hidden underneath. Roger North, Examen, p. 430. (Davies.) subconchoidal (sub-kong-koi′dạl), a. Imperfectly conchoidal; having an imperfectly conchoidal fracture.

subconical (sub-kon′i-kal), a. Somewhat or not quite conical; conoidal.

subconjunctival (sub-kon-jungk-tī′val), a. Situated beneath the conjunctiva.

subconnate (sub-kon′āt), a. In entom., partially connate; divided by an indistinct or partial suture.

subconscious (sub-kon′shus), a. 1. Obscurely or feebly conscious; of or pertaining to subconsciousness.—2. Being or occurring in the mind, but not in consciousness.

subconsciously (sub-kon′shus-li), adv. In a subconscious manner; with faint consciousness; without consciousness.

subconsciousness (sub-kon′shus-nes), n. 1. A form or state of consciousness in which there is little strength or distinctness of perception or mental action in general.—2. Mental processes indiscoverable by introspection, conceived as taking place without consciousness.

The hypothesis of unconscious mental modifications, as it has been unfortunately termed — the hypothesis of subconsciousness, as we may style it to avoid this contradiction in terms. J. Ward, Encyc. Brit., XX. 47.

subconstellation (sub′kon-ste-lā″shōn), n. A subordinate or secondary constellation.

subcontiguous (sub-kọn-tig′ū-us), a. Almost touching; very slightly separated: as, subcontiguous coxæ.

subcontinuous (sub-kọn-tin′ū-us), a. Almost continuous: noting a line or mark which has but slight breaks or interruptions.

subcontract (sub′kon″trakt), n. A contract under a previous contract.

subcontract (sub-kọn-trakt′), v. i. To make a contract under a previous contract. Lancet, 1889, I. 498.

subcontracted (sub-kọn-trak′ted), a. 1. Contracted under a former contract; betrothed for the second time. Shak., Lear, v. 3. 86.—2. In entom., slightly narrowed: noting wing-cells.

subcontractor (sub′kọn-trak″tọr), n. One who takes a part or the whole of a contract from the principal contractor.

subcontrariety (sub′kon-trạ-rī′ẹ-ti), n.; pl. subcontrarieties (-tiz). In logic, the relation between a particular affirmative and a particular negative proposition in the same terms; also, the inference from one to the other.

subcontrary (sub-kon′trā-ri), a. and n. I. a. Contrary in an inferior degree. (a) In geom., it denotes the relative position of two similar triangles of which one of the pairs of homologous angles coincide while the including sides are interchanged. Thus, in the cut the triangles ACB, ECD are subcontrary. (b) In logic the term is applied (1) to the particular affirmative proposition and the particular negative proposition, with relation to the universal affirmative proposition and the universal negative proposition above them, which have the same subject and predicate: thus, "some man is mortal" and "some man is not mortal" are subcontrary propositions, with relation to "every man is mortal" and "no man is mortal," which are contraries; (2) to the relation between two attributes which coexist in the same substance, yet in such a way that the more there is of one the less there is of the other.—Subcontrary section, one of the circular sections of a quadric cone in its relation to another circular section not parallel to it.

II. n.; pl. subcontraries (-riz). In logic, a subcontrary proposition.

subconvex (sub-kon′veks), a. Somewhat rounded or convex.

subcoracoid (sub-kor′ạ-koid), a. Situated or occurring below the coracoid process.

subcordate (sub-kôr′dāt), a. Nearly heart-shaped.

subcordiform (sub-kôr′di-fôrm), a. Same as subcordate.

subcorneous (sub-kôr′nē-us), a. 1. Somewhat horny; partly or partially converted into horn.—2. Placed beneath a layer of corneous structure; situated under or within a horn, nail, claw, or the like: as, the subcorneous frontal processes of a ruminant.

subcortical (sub-kôr′ti-kal), a. Situated beneath the cortex. (a) Situated beneath the cerebral cortex. (b) Situated beneath the cortex of a sponge. (c) Situated or living beneath the cortex or bark of a tree.

subcosta (sub-kos′tạ), n.; pl. subcostæ (-tē). The subcostal vein or nervure of the wing of some insects; the first vein behind the costa. See cut under costal.

subcostal (sub-kos′tal), a. and n. I. a. 1. In anat. and zoöl.: (a) Situated below a rib; extending from one rib to a succeeding one; infracostal: specifically noting the muscles called subcostales. (b) Lying along the under side or edge of a rib: as, a subcostal groove for an artery. (c) Placed under or within the ribs or costal cartilages collectively; hypochondrial; subcartilaginous.—2. In entom., situated near, but not at or on, the costa: specifically noting the subcostal.—Subcostal angle, the angle which the costal border of one side forms with that of the other at the lower end of the sternum.—Subcostal cells, in entom., cells between the costal and subcostal veins: they are generally numbered from the base outward.—Subcostal vein or nervure, in entom., a strong longitudinal vein behind the costal vein and more or less parallel to the costal edge: in the Lepidoptera it forms the anterior edge of the large dorsal cell, and exteriorly it is divided into a number of branches, called subcostal veinlets or nervules, and numbered from before backward. Sometimes called postcostal vein or nervure. See cut under costal.

II. n. 1. In zoöl. and anat.: (a) A subcostal or infracostal muscle. See subcostalis. (b) A subcostal artery, vein, or nerve, running along the groove in the lower border of a rib; an intercostal.—2. In entom., a subcostal vein or nervure; the subcosta.

subcostalis (sub-kos-tā′lis), n.; pl. subcostales (-lēz). In anat., a subcostal or infracostal muscle; any one of several muscles which extend from the lower border or inner surface of a rib to the first, second, or third succeeding rib.

subcranial (sub-krā′ni-al), a. 1. Situated beneath the skull, in general.—2. Situated below the cranial axis or cranium proper—that is, in man, in front of the brain-case: as, the subcranial visceral arches of the embryo.

subcrenate (sub-krē′nāt), a. Obscurely or irregularly scalloped.

subcrepitant (sub-krep′i-tạnt), a. Approaching in character the crepitant râle. See râle. Therapeutic Gaz., IX. 8.

subcrepitation (sub-krep-i-tā′shọn), n. The noise of subcrepitant râles.

subcrescentic (sub-kre-sen′tik), a. Irregularly or imperfectly crescentic.

subcruræus (sub-krọ̄-rē′us), n.; pl. subcruræi (-i). A small muscle arising from the fore part of the femur, beneath the cruræus, and inserted into the synovial pouch of the knee. Also called subcruralis, subfemoralis, and articularis genu.

subcrureal (sub-krö′rẹ̄-al), a. Lying under or beneath the cruræus, as a muscle: specifying the subcruræus.

subcrystalline (sub-kris′tạ-lin), a. Imperfectly crystalline.

subcultrate (sub-kul′trāt), a. Somewhat cultriform; like a colter in being curved along one edge and straight along the other. Also subcultrated.

subculture (sub-kul′tūr), n. In bacteriology, a culture derived from a previous culture.

subcutaneous (sub-kū-tā′nẹ̄-us), a. 1. Situated beneath the skin, in general; subdermal; lying in the true skin or cutis, under the cuticle; subcuticular; placed or performed under the skin; hypodermic: as, a subcutaneous injection.—2. Fitted for use under the skin; hypodermic: as, a subcutaneous syringe; a subcutaneous saw.—3. Living under the skin; burrowing in the skin: as, a subcutaneous parasitic insect.—Subcutaneous feeding, a mode of artificial feeding by means of large hypodermic injections of nutrient substances.—Subcutaneous fracture, simple fracture.—Subcutaneous method, the mode or manner of performing surgical operations, as tenotomy, osteotomy, etc., with the smallest possible opening through the skin.

subcutaneously (sub-kū-tā′nẹ̄-us-li), adv. In a subcutaneous manner, in any sense; hypodermically.

subcuticular (sub-kū-tik′ū-lạr), a. Situated under the cuticle or scarf-skin; subepidermic; cutaneous; dermal.

subcutis (sub′kū″tis), n. [NL., < L. sub, under, + cutis, skin.] The deeper part of the cutis, corium, or true skin, sometimes distinguished from the rest. Haeckel.

subcylindric, subcylindrical (sub-si-lin′drik, -dri-kal), a. Nearly or somewhat cylindrical.

subdatary (sub′dā″tạ-ri), n. The head of the officials under the datary or prodatary. See datary[1].

subdeacon (sub′dē″kn), n. [< ME. suddekene, sudekene = OF. sodekene, also soudiacre = Sp. subdiácono = Pg. subdiacono = It. suddiacono, < LL. subdiaconus, < L. sub, under, + LL. diaconus, a deacon: see deacon.] A member of the ecclesiastical order next below that of deacon. Subdeacons are first mentioned in the third century. They assisted the deacons, and kept order at the doors of the church. In the Western Church the duty of the subdeacon is to prepare the holy vessels and the bread, wine, and water for the eucharist, to pour the water into the chalice, and, since the seventh or eighth century, to read the epistle—a duty previously, as still in the East, assigned to the reader. In the Greek Church the subdeacon prepares the holy vessels, and guards the gates of the bema during liturgy. In the Greek Church the subdiaconate has always been one of the minor orders. In the Western Church it became one of the major or holy orders in the twelfth century. The bishop, priest, or other cleric who acts as second or subordinate assistant at the eucharist is called the subdeacon, and the term is used in this sense in the Anglican Church also, although that church has no longer an order of subdeacons. See epistler.

subdeaconry (sub′dē″kn-ri), n. [< subdeacon + -ry.] Same as subdeaconship.

subdeaconship (sub′dē″kn-ship), n. The order or office of subdeacon; the subdiaconate.

subdean (sub′dēn), n. [< ME. suddene, sodene, also southdene, < OF. soudeien, sousdoyen,* < ML. subdecanus, subdean, < L. sub, under, + decanus, dean: see dean[2].] A vice-dean; a dean's substitute or vicegerent.

Secutours and sodenes. Piers Plowman (C), xvii. 277.

subdeanery (sub′dē″nėr-i), n. [< subdean + -ery.] The office or rank of subdean.

subdecanal (sub-dek′ạ-nal), a. [< ML. subdecanus, subdean, + -al.] Relating to a subdean or his office.

subdecimal (sub-des′i-mal), a. Derived by division by a multiple of ten.

subdecuple (sub-dek′ū-pl), a. Containing one part of ten (Johnson); having the ratio 1:10.

subdelegate (sub′del″ẹ̄-gāt), n. A subordinate delegate.

subdelegate (sub-del′ẹ̄-gāt), v. t. To appoint to act as subdelegate or under another.

subdelirium (sub-dẹ̄-lir′i-um), n. Mild delirium with lucid intervals.

subdeltoidal (sub-del-toi′dal), a. Approaching in shape the Greek letter Δ. Also subdeltoid.

subdentate (sub-den′tāt), a. 1. Imperfectly dentate; having indistinct teeth; denticulate.—2. Of cetaceans, having teeth in the lower jaw only: the opposite of superdentate. Dewhurst, 1834. [Rare.]

subdentated (sub-den′tā-ted), a. Same as subdentate, 1.

subdented (sub-den′ted), a. Indented beneath. Imp. Dict.

subdepressed (sub-dẹ̄-prest′), a. Somewhat depressed or flattened.

subderisious† (sub-der-i-sō′ri-us), a. [< L. sub, under, + derisorius, serving for laughter, ridiculous: see derisory.] Ridiculing with moderation or delicacy. Dr. H. More.

subderivative (sub-dẹ̄-riv′ạ-tiv), n. A word following another in immediate grammatical derivation, or a word derived from a derivative and not directly from the root. [Rare.]

subdermal (sub-dėr′mal), a. Beneath the skin; hypodermal; subcutaneous.

subdeterminant (sub-dẹ̄-tėr′mi-nant), n. In math., a determinant from a symmetrically taken part of a matrix.

subdiaconate (sub-dī-ak′ọ̄-nāt), n. [< ML. subdiaconatus,* < LL. subdiaconus, subdeacon: see subdeacon.] The office or order of subdeacon.

subdial (sub′di-al), a. [= OF. subdial, < L. subdialis, subdivalis, that is in the open air, < sub, under, + divum, the sky, the open air, akin to dies, day, Skt. dyu, the sky: see deity, dial.] Of or pertaining to the open air; being under the open sky. Imp. Dict. [Rare.]

The Athenian Heliastick or Subdial Court was rural, and for the most part kept in the open aire. N. Bacon, iv. 15.

subdialect (sub′dī″ạ-lekt), n. An inferior dialect; a subordinate or less important or prominent dialect.

subdiapente† (sub-dī-ạ-pen′tē), n. In medieval music, an interval of a fifth below a given tone.

subdiatessaron† (sub-dī-a-tes'a-ron), n. In medieval music, an interval of a fourth below a given tone.

subdichotomy (sub-dī-kot'ō-mi), n. A subordinate or inferior dichotomy, or division into pairs; a subdivision. Milton, Areopagitica, p. 53.

subdistinction (sub'dis-tingk″shon), n. A subordinate distinction. Sir M. Hale.

subdistrict (sub'dis″trikt), n. A part or division of a district.

subdititious (sub-di-tish'us), a. [< L. subditius, subditicius, substituted, suppositious, < subdere, put or set under, < sub, under, + dare*, put.] Put secretly in the place of something else; foisted in. Imp. Dict. [Rare.]

subdiversify (sub-di-vėr'si-fī), v. t. To diversify again what is already diversified. Sir M. Hale. [Rare.]

subdivide (sub-di-vīd'), v.; pret. and pp. subdivided, ppr. subdividing. [= Sp. Pg. subdividir = It. subdividere, < LL. subdividere, subdivide, < L. sub, under, + dividere, divide: see divide.]

I. trans. To redivide after a first division.

> The progenies of Cham and Japhet swarmed into colonies, and those colonies were subdivided into many others. Dryden.

II. intrans. 1. To separate into subdivisions.

> Amongst some men a sect is sufficiently thought to be reproved if it subdivides and breaks into little fractions, or changes its own opinions. Jer. Taylor, Works, VI. 125.

2. To become separated. [Rare.]

> When Brutus and Cassius were overthrown, then soon after Antonius and Octavius brake and subdivided. Bacon, Faction (ed. 1887).

subdivisible (sub-di-viz'i-bl), a. Susceptible of subdivision.

subdivision (sub-di-vizh'ọn), n. [= F. subdivision = Sp. subdivisión = Pg. subdivisão, < LL. subdivisio(n-), < subdividere, subdivide: see subdivide.] 1. The act of redividing, or separating into smaller parts.

> When any of the parts of an idea are yet farther divided in order to a clear explication of the whole, this is called a subdivision. Watts, Logic, I. vi. § 8.

2. A minor division; a part of a part; specifically, in zoöl. and bot., a minor division of a group; a subsection: as, subdivisions of a genus.

> In the Decimal Table the subdivisions of the Cubit, viz. the Span, Palm, and Digit, are deduced . . . from the shorter Cubit. Arbuthnot, Ancient Coins, p. 73.

subdivisional (sub-di-vizh'ọn-al), a. [< subdivision + -al.] Of or pertaining to subdivision or a subdivision: as, a subdivisional name. Quart. Jour. Geol. Soc., XLV. ii. 62.

subdivisive (sub-di-vī'siv), a. [< LL. subdivisivus, < subdividere, subdivide: see subdivide.] Arising from subdivision.

> When a whole is divided into parts, these parts may, either all or some, be themselves still connected multiplicities; and, if these are again divided, there results a subdivision the several parts of which are called the subdivisive members. Sir W. Hamilton, Logic, Lect. xxv.

subdolichocephalic (sub-dol″i-kō-sef'a-lik or -se-fal'ik), a. In craniom., having a cephalic index ranging between 75.01 and 77.77 in Broca's classification.

subdolous† (sub'dō-lus), a. [< LL. subdolosus, < L. subdolus, somewhat crafty or deceitful, < sub, under, + dolus, artifice, guile: see dole[3].] Somewhat crafty; sly; cunning; artful; deceitful. Howell, Letters, I. vi. 14.

subdolously† (sub'dō-lus-li), adv. In a subdolous manner; slyly; artfully. Evelyn, To Pepys, Dec. 5, 1681.

subdolousness† (sub'dō-lus-nes), n. The state of being subdolous. Baker, Chronicles, p. 382.

subdominant (sub-dom'i-nant), n. In music, the tone next below the dominant in a scale; the fourth, as D in the scale of A: also used adjectively. See diagram under circle.

subdorsal (sub-dôr'sal), a. In entom., situated on the side of the upper or dorsal surface of the body: as, subdorsal striæ.

subdouble (sub-dub'l), a. Being in the ratio of 1 to 2.

subduable (sub-dū'a-bl), a. [< subdue + -able.] Capable of being subdued; conquerable. Imp. Dict.

subdual (sub-dū'al), n. [< subdue + -al.] The act of subduing. Warburton, Works (ed. Hurd), VII. 329.

subduce (sub-dūs'), v. t.; pret. and pp. subduced, ppr. subducing. [< L. subducere, pp. subductus, draw from under, lift up, haul up, take away, < sub, under, + ducere, lead, bring: see duct. Cf. subduct, subdue.] 1. To withdraw; take away; draw or lift up.

> It shall be expedient for such as intend to exercise prayer . . . to subduce and convey themselves from the company of the worldly people. Becon, Early Works, p. 130.

2. To subtract arithmetically.

> If, out of that supposed infinite multitude of antecedent generation, we should . . . subduce ten, . . . the residue must needs be less by ten than it was before that subduction. Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 10.

subduct (sub-dukt'), v. t. [< L. subductus, pp. of subducere, draw from under, take away: see subduce.] Same as subduce, 1.

> He . . . established himself upon the rug, . . . subducting his coat-tails one under each arm. Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 32.

subduction (sub-duk'shon), n. [< L. subductio(n-), a hauling ashore (of a ship), a taking away, < subducere, pp. subductus, haul up, take away: see subduce.] 1. The act of subducting, taking away, or withdrawing. Bp. Hall, Occasional Meditations, § 66.—2. Arithmetical subtraction. Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 10.

subdue (sub-dū'), v. t.; pret. and pp. subdued, ppr. subduing. [< ME. subduen, first in pp. subdued*, sudued, sodued, sodewed, < AF. subdut, < ML. type subdutus*, for L. subditus, pp. of subdere, put under: see subdititious.] 1. To conquer and bring into permanent subjection; reduce under dominion.

> John of Gaunt,
> Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain.
> Shak., 3 Hen. VI., iii. 3. 82.
>
> Rome learning arts from Greece whom she subdued.
> Pope, Prol. to Addison's Cato, l. 40.

2. To overpower by superior force; gain the victory over; bring under; vanquish; crush.

> Tugg'd for life, and was by strength subdued.
> Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iii. 2. 173.
>
> Lay hold upon him; if he do resist,
> Subdue him at his peril. Shak., Othello, i. 2. 81.
>
> Think of thy woman's nature, subdued in hopeless thrall.
> Whittier, Cassandra Southwick.

3. To prevail over by some mild or softening influence; influence by association; assimilate; overcome, as by kindness, persuasion, entreaty, or other mild means; gain complete sway over; melt.

> My nature is subdued
> To what it works in, like the dyer's hand.
> Shak., Sonnets, cxi.
>
> If aught
> Therein enjoy'd were worthy to subdue
> The soul of man. Milton, P. L., viii. 584.
>
> Claspt hands and that petitionary grace
> Of sweet seventeen subdued me ere she spoke.
> Tennyson, The Brook.

4. To bring down; reduce.

> Nothing could have subdued nature
> To such a lowness but his unkind daughters.
> Shak., Lear, iii. 4. 72.

5. To tone down; soften; make less striking or harsh, as in sound, illumination, or color: in this sense generally in the past participle: as, subdued colors; a subdued light.

> The voices of the disputants fell, and the conversation was carried on thenceforth in a more subdued tone. Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 17.

6. To improve by cultivation; make mellow; break, as land.

> In proportion as the soil is brought into cultivation, or subdued, to use the local phrase, the consumers will become more numerous, and their means more extensive. B. Hall, Travels in N. A., I. 86.

=Syn. 1 and 2. Vanquish, Subjugate, etc. (see conquer), crush, quell.—3. To soften.

subduet† (sub-dū'), n. [ME., < subdue, v.] Subjugation; conquest. Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 5.

subduement (sub-dū'ment), n. [< subdue + -ment.] Subdual; conquest. Shak., T. and C., iv. 5. 187.

subduer (sub-dū'ėr), n. [< subdue + -er[1].] One who or that which subdues; one who conquers and brings into subjection; a conqueror; a tamer.

subdulcid† (sub-dul'sid), a. [< L. subdulcis, sweetish (< sub, under, + dulcis, sweet), + -id[1].] Somewhat sweet; sweetish. Evelyn, Acetaria (ed. 1706), p. 154. [Rare.]

subduple (sub'dū-pl), a. [< L. sub, under, + duplus, double.] Having the ratio of 1 to 2.—Subduple ratio, in math. See duple.

subduplicate (sub-dū'pli-kāt), a. In math., expressed by the square root: as, the subduplicate ratio of two quantities—that is, the ratio of their square roots. Thus, the subduplicate ratio of a to b is the ratio of $\sqrt{a}$ to $\sqrt{b}$, or it is the ratio whose duplicate is that of a to b.

subdural (sub-dū'ral), a. Situated beneath the dura mater, between the dura mater and the arachnoid.—Subdural space, the interval between the dura mater and the arachnoid, formerly called the cavity of the arachnoid, when the latter membrane was supposed to be reflected continuously from the outer surface of the pia mater to the inner surface of the dura mater.

subectodermal (sub-ek-tō-dėr'mal), a. Situated underneath the ectoderm. Jour. Micros. Sci., XXVIII. 381.

subedit (sub-ed'it), v. t. To edit under the supervision of another. Thackeray, Philip, xlii.

subeditor (sub'ed″i-tọr), n. An assistant or subordinate editor; one who subedits.

subeditorial (sub-ed-i-tō'ri-al), a. Of or pertaining to a subeditor. Athenæum, No. 3238, p. 653.

subeditorship (sub'ed″i-tọr-ship), n. [< subeditor + -ship.] The office or charge of a subeditor. Thackeray, Philip, xxx.

subelaphine (sub-el'a-fin), a. Resembling the red-deer, Cervus elaphus, as in the structure of the antlers, but having the brow-tine simple, not reduplicated, as in the genera Dama and Pseudaxis: correlated with elaphine.

subelliptic (sub-e-lip'tik), a. Somewhat elongate-ovate; between ovate and elliptic or oblong and elliptic.

subelliptical (sub-e-lip'ti-kal), n. Same as subelliptic.

subemarginate (sub-ē-mär'ji-nāt), a. Slightly emarginate.

subendocardial (sub-en-dō-kär'di-al), a. Lying or occurring beneath the endocardium.—Subendocardial tissue, the substance of the heart immediately underneath the endocardium.

subendothelial (sub-en-dō-thē'li-al), a. Lying or occurring beneath the endothelium.

subentitle (sub-en-tī'tl), v. t. To give a subordinate title to. The Academy, Jan. 4, 1890, p. 7.

subepidermal (sub-ep-i-dėr'mal), a. Lying or occurring beneath the epidermis, in any sense.

subepithelial (sub-ep-i-thē'li-al), a. Lying or occurring beneath the epithelium.—Subepithelial endothelium, Beboves's name for an almost continuous layer of connective-tissue cells between the mucous membrane and the epithelium of the bronchi, bladder, and intestine.—Subepithelial plexus. See plexus.

subequal (sub-ē'kwal), a. 1. Nearly equal.—2. Related as several numbers of which no one is as large as the sum of the rest.

subequilateral (sub-ē-kwi-lat'ẹ-ral), a. Nearly equilateral, as a bivalve shell.

subequivalve (sub-ē'kwi-valv), a. Nearly equivalve, as a bivalve shell.

suber (sū'bėr), n. [NL., < L. suber, cork, the cork-oak.] In bot., same as cork[1], 3.

suberate (sū'bẹ-rāt), n. [< suber-ic + -ate[1].] A salt ($C_8H_{12}M_2O_4$) of suberic acid.

suberect (sub-ẹ-rekt'), a. Nearly erect.

subereous (sū-bē'rẹ-us), a. [< L. subereus, of cork, pertaining to the cork-oak, < suber, cork, the cork-oak.] Corky; suberose; in entom., specifying a soft elastic substance, somewhat like cork, found in the mature galls of some cynipidous insects.

suberic (sū-ber'ik), a. [< L. suber, cork, the cork-oak, + -ic.] Of or pertaining to cork; subereous.—Suberic acid, $C_8H_{14}O_4$, a dibasic acid which forms small granular crystals very soluble in boiling water, in alcohol, and in ether; it fuses at 140° C. and sublimes in acicular crystals. It is prepared by treating rasped cork with nitric acid. It is also produced when nitric acid acts on stearic, palmitic, or oleic acid, and other fatty bodies.

suberiferous (sū-bẹ-rif'ẹ-rus), a. [< suber(in) + L. ferre = E. bear[1].] In bot., bearing or producing suberin.

suberification (sū-bẹ-rif-i-kā'shọn), n. [< L. suber, cork, + -ficatiō(n-), < facere, make.] In bot., same as suberization.

suberin, suberine (sū'bẹ-rin), n. [< L. suber, cork, the cork-oak, + -in[2], -ine[2].] The cellular tissue of cork after the various soluble matters have been removed. It is allied to cellulose. See cork[1], 2.

suberization (sū″bẹ-ri-zā'shọn), n. [< suberize + -ation.] In bot., the transformation of a membrane or cell-wall into suberin or cork.

suberize (sū'bẹ-rīz), v. t.; pret. and pp. suberized, ppr. suberizing. [< L. suber, cork, + -ize.] In bot., to render corky, as a cell-wall.

suberoded (sub-ẹ-rō'ded), a. Same as suberose[1].

suberose[1] (sub-ẹ-rōs'), a. [< L. sub, under, + erosus, pp. of erodere, gnaw off or away, consume: see erode.] In bot., slightly erose; appearing as if a little eaten or gnawed on the margin.

suberose[2], suberous (sū'bẹ-rōs, -rus), a. [< L. suber, cork, the cork-oak, + -ose, -ous.] Same as subereous, suberic.

subesophageal, subœsophageal (sub-ē-sō-faj'-ē-ạl), a. Situated below or beneath the esophagus or gullet; in Arthropoda, specifying certain nervous ganglia which lie underneath (ventrad of) the esophagus. Also infra-esophageal.—Subesophageal ganglion. See ganglion.

subfactor (sub'fak*′*tọr), n. An under factor or agent. Scott, Heart of Mid-Lothian, xli.

subfactorial (sub-fak-tō'ri-ạl), n. One of a series of numbers calculated as follows. Starting with 1, multiply it by 1 and subtract 1, getting 0, which is called subfactorial one; multiply this by 2 and add 1, getting 1, which is called subfactorial two; multiply this by 3 and subtract 1, getting 2, which is called subfactorial three; multiply this by 4 and add 1, getting 9, which is called subfactorial four. This is carried on indefinitely.

subfalcial (sub-fal'si-ạl), a. Running along the under edge of the falx cerebri: as, "a subfalcial sinus," Buck's Handbook of Med. Sciences, VIII. 121.

subfalciform (sub-fal'si-fôrm), a. Somewhat falciform. Günther.

subfamily (sub'fam*′*i-li), n. In zoöl., the first subdivision of a family, containing several genera or only one genus. A subfamily may be introduced formally between the genus and the family when there is no other subdivision. Then the only subfamily of a family is conterminous with the higher group. Subfamilies are now regularly indicated by the termination -inæ: as, family Felidæ, subfamily Felinæ. That subfamily which takes the name of the family with a different termination is usually regarded as the typical subdivision of the family.

subfascial (sub-fash'i-ạl), a. Situated below any fascia.

subfebrile (sub-fē'bril), a. Somewhat but not decidedly febrile.

subfemoralis (sub-fem-ō-rā'lis), n.; pl. subfemorales (-lēz). Same as subcruræus.

subfeu (sub-fū'), v. t. [< sub- + feu, after ML. subfeodare: see sub- and feud[2], feoff.] To make subinfeudation of: said of a vassal who vests lands held by him as such in a subvassal.

> It was . . . impossible to subfeu the burgh lands.
> Encyc. Brit., IV. 63.

subfeudation (sub-fū-dā'shọn), n. [< ML. subfeodatio(n-)*, < subfeodare, subfeu: see subfeu.] Same as subinfeudation.

> It seems most probable that this practice, which is called sub-feudation or sub-infeudation, began while the feud was only for life. Brougham.

subfeudatory (sub-fū'dā-tō-ri), n.; pl. subfeudatories (-riz). [< sub- + feudatory. Cf. ML. subfeodatarius.] An inferior tenant who held a feud from a feudatory of the crown or other superior.

subflavor (sub'flā*′*vọr), n. A subordinate flavor; a secondary flavor.

subflavous (sub-flā'vus), a. [< L. sub, under, + flavus, yellow: see flavous.] Yellowish.—Subflavous ligament, a short ligament of yellow elastic tissue interposed between the laminæ of the vertebræ.

subflora (sub'flō rạ), n. [NL., < sub- + flora.] A more local flora included in a territorially broader one.

subfluvial (sub-flö'vi-ạl), a. [< L. sub, under, + fluvius, stream: see fluvial.] Situated under a river or stream.

> The sub-fluvial avenue [Thames tunnel].
> Hawthorne, Our Old Home, p. 285.

subfoliar (sub-fō'li-ạr), a. [< subfolium + -ar[3].] Having the character of a subfolium. B. G. Wilder.

subfolium (sub'fō*′*li-um), n.; pl. subfolia (-ạ). A small or secondary folium, as of the cerebellum. Buck's Handbook of Med. Sciences, VIII. 127.

subform (sub'fôrm), n. A secondary form. Jour. Micros. Sci., XXX. 195.

subfornical (sub-fôr'ni-kạl), a. Situated beneath the fornix of the brain.

subfossil (sub-fos'il), a. Partly fossilized; imperfectly petrified.

subfossilized (sub-fos'il-īzd), a. Same as subfossil.

subfossorial (sub-fo-sō'ri-ạl), a. In entom., adapted in some measure for digging: said of the legs when they approach the fossorial type.

subfrontal (sub-fron'tạl), a. Situated under the front, face, or fore end; subterminal in front.—Subfrontal area, of Limulus, a smooth flattened space on the ventral surface of the cephalic shield anteriorly. See Limulus (with cut).—Subfrontal fold, of trilobites, an inferior inflection of the limb or marginal area of the cephalic shield.

subfulcrum (sub'ful*′*krum), n.; pl. subfulcra (-krạ). In entom., a rarely differentiated labial sclerite between the mentum and the palpiger (the latter in some systems being called the fulcrum). It occurs in certain carabid and scarabæid larvæ.

subfumigation (sub-fū-mi-gā'shọn), n. Same as suffumigation.

subfusc, a. See subfusk.

subfuscous (sub-fus'kus), a. [< L. subfuscus: see subfusk.] Same as subfusk.

subfusiform (sub-fū'si-fôrm), a. More or less nearly fusiform or spindle-shaped.

subfusk, subfusc (sub-fusk'), a. [< L. subfuscus, suffuscus, somewhat brown: see sub- and fuscous.] Duskish; moderately dark; brownish; tawny; lacking in color.

> O'er whose quiescent walls
> Arachne's unmolested care has drawn > Curtains subfusk. Shenstone, Economy, iii.

> The University statute requiring the wearing only of black or subfusc clothing. Dickens, Dict. of Oxford, p. 66.

subgalea (sub-gā'lē-ạ), n.; pl. subgaleæ (-ē). [NL., < L. sub, under, + NL. galea.] One of the sclerites of the typical maxilla of insects. It usually articulates with the stipes and bears the galea. In many beetles it is united with the lacinia. See cut under galea.

subganoid (sub-gan'oid), a. Having a somewhat ganoid character: as, a subganoid scale.

subgelatinous (sub-je-lat'i-nus), a. Imperfectly or partially gelatinous.

subgenera, n. Plural of subgenus.

subgeneric (sub-jē-ner'ik), a. Of or pertaining to a subgenus; having the rank, grade, or value of a subgenus.

subgenerical (sub-jē-ner'i-kạl), a. Same as subgeneric.

subgenerically (sub-jē-ner'i-kạl-i), adv. So as to be subgeneric; as a subgenus.

subgeniculate (sub-jē-nik'ū-lāt), a. Imperfectly geniculate or elbowed.

subgenital (sub-jen'i-tạl), a. Situated beneath the genitalia: specifically noting certain pits or pouches of jellyfishes, as the rhizostomous or monostomous discomedusans.

subgenus (sub'jē*′*nus), n.; pl. subgenera (-jen*′*ē-rạ). [NL., < L. sub, under, + genus, kind: see genus.] A subordinate genus; a section or subdivision of a genus higher than a species. Since there is no fixed definition of a genus, there can be none of a subgenus; and thousands of groups in zoölogy formerly regarded as subgenera, or disregarded entirely, are now named and held to be genera. Though there is theoretically or technically a difference, it is ignored in practice; since a name, whether given as that of a genus or of a subgenus, is a generic name. The case is somewhat different in practice from that of the names of families and subfamilies, whose difference in termination preserves a formal distinction, and from that of the names of all supergeneric groups, because none of these enter into the technical binomial designation of a given animal or plant. Thus, the name Lynx may have been given to a subdivision of the genus Felis, and be thus a subgeneric name; but a cat of this kind, as the bay lynx, would be known by the alternative names Felis rufus and Lynx rufus, according to the difference of expert opinion in the case; or, as a compromise, the subgeneric term would be formally introduced in parentheses between the generic and the specific name, as Felis (Lynx) rufus. In botany a subgenus is a section of a genus so strongly marked as to have plausible claims to be itself an independent genus.

subget†, a. and n. A Middle English form of subject.

subglabrous (sub-glā'brus), a. In entom., almost devoid of hairs or other like covering.

subglacial (sub-glā'shi-ạl), a. Situated or occurring beneath or under a glacier: as, a subglacial stream.

subglenoid (sub-glē'noid), a. Lying or occurring immediately below the glenoid fossa.

subglobose (sub-glō'bōs), a. Nearly globose; subspherical; spheroidal.

subglobular (sub-glob'ū-lạr), a. Nearly globular.

subglobulose (sub-glob'ū-lōs), a. Somewhat globulose.

subglossal (sub-glos'ạl), a. Same as hypoglossal or sublingual.

subglottic (sub-glot'ik), a. Situated under the glottis, or beneath the true vocal cords of the larynx.

subglumaceous (sub-glö-mā'shius), a. Somewhat glumaceous.

subgrade (sub'grād), n. A grade of the second rank in zoölogical classification; a prime division of a grade: used like subclass, suborder, etc. See grade[1], 3.

Subgrallatores (sub-gral-ā-tō'rēz), n. pl. [NL., < L. sub, under, + NL. Grallatores, q. v.] In ornith., in Sundevall's system, a cohort of Gallinæ, composed of the genera Thinocorus, Attagis, and Chionis. [Not in use.]

subgrallatorial (sub-gral-ā-tō'ri-ạl), a. Imperfectly grallatorial; exhibiting imperfectly the characters of the grallatorial birds.

subgranular (sub-gran'ū-lạr), a. Somewhat granular.

subgroup (sub'gröp), n. 1. Any subordinate group in classification; a subdivision of a group; especially, a division the name of which begins with sub-, as subfamily or subgenus.—2. A mathematical group forming part of another group.

subgular (sub-gū'lạr), a. Situated under the throat, or on the under side of the throat; subjugular.

subhastation (sub-has-tā'shọn), n. [= F. subhastation = Sp. subastación = It. subastazione, < LL. subhastatio(n-), a sale by public auction, < subhastare, pp. subhastatus, sell at public auction, lit. 'bring under the spear' (in allusion to the Roman practice of planting a spear on the spot where a public sale was to take place), < L. sub, under, + hasta, a spear, a lance.] A public sale of property to the highest bidder; a sale by auction. Bp. Burnet, Letters from Switzerland, p. 9.

subhead (sub'hed), n. A subordinate head or title; a subdivision of a heading. See head, 13.

subheading (sub'hed*′*ing), n. Same as subhead.

subhepatic (sub-hē-pat'ik), a. In anat. and zoöl.: (a) Of doubtful or disputed hepatic character, as a glandular tissue of some invertebrates, which resembles that of the liver. (b) Lying under the liver, on the ventral side of hepatic lobules; sublobular, as ramifications of the portal vein in the liver. (c) Situated beneath the hepatic region: specifically applied to an anterolateral division of the ventral surface of the carapace in brachyurous crustaceans. See Brachyura (with cut).

subhexagonal (sub-hek-sag'ō-nạl), a. Six-sided, but not forming a regular hexagon.

Sub-Himalayan (sub-him-ä'lā-yạn), a. Related to or forming the whole or a part of the Sub-Himalayas, the designation adopted by the Geological Survey of India for a fringe or belt of hills extending along the southern edge of the Himalayan chain almost uninterruptedly for a distance of 1,500 miles, and composed of Tertiary rocks.

> By abrupt difference of elevation and by contour, the Sub-Himalayan hills are everywhere easily distinguishable from the much higher mountains to the north of them. Geol. of India, ii. 521.

Sub-Himalayan system, in geol., the name adopted by the Geological Survey of India for the system of rocks forming the Sub-Himalayan division of the Himalayas. It is divided into two series—the Siwalik (subdivided into three subgroups, the Upper, Middle, and Lower or Náhan) and the Sirmúr (also with three subgroups, the Upper or Kasauli, the Middle or Dagshai, and the Lower or Subáthu). See Siwalik.

subhuman (sub-hū'mạn), a. Under or beneath the human; next below the human.

> Pretended superhuman birth and origin, . . . lives and characters more decidedly subhuman than those of common men. E. H. Sears, The Fourth Gospel, p. 230.

subhumeral (sub-hū'mẹ-rạl), a. Situated below the humerus.

subhumerate† (sub-hū'mẹ-rāt), v. t. [< L. sub, under, + humerus, prop. umerus, shoulder, + -ate[2].] To take or bear on one's shoulders. Feltham, Resolves, i. 82.

subhyaloid (sub-hī'ạ-loid), a. Situated beneath (on the attached side of) the hyaloid membrane of the eyeball.

subhymenial (sub-hī-mē'ni-ạl), a. In bot., lying under or just below the hymenium.—Subhymenial layer, a stratum of hyphal tissue under the hymenium in some fungi: the hypothecium, and sometimes another layer still further below. See cuts under apothecium and ascus.

subhyoid (sub-hī'oid), a. 1. Situated below the hyoid bone, as of man.—2. Coming next in order after the hyoid arch from before backward; specifically, noting the second postoral visceral arch of the vertebrate embryo.

subhyoidean (sub-hī-oi'dē-ạn), a. Same as subhyoid.

subicteric (sub-ik-ter'ik), a. Somewhat but not distinctly icteric.

subiculum (sū-bik'ū-lum), n. [NL., dim. of subex (subic-), in pl. subices, a layer, < subicere, throw under: see subject.] 1. The uncus.—2. In bot., a matted mycelium or modified substratum upon which the fructifications of certain fungi are borne.

subiliac (sub-il'i-ak), a. 1. Pertaining to the subilium.—2. Situated below the ilium.

subilium (sub'il*′*i-um), n.; pl. subilia (-ạ). [NL., < L. sub, under, + NL. ilium, q. v.] An inferior section of the ilium, supposed to correspond to the subscapula.

subimaginal (sub-i-maj′i-nal), a. [< subimago (-imagin-) + -al.] Having the character of a subimago; not quite perfect or imaginal, as an insect; pseudimaginal.

subimaginary (sub-i-maj′i-nā-ri), a. Imaginary in a reduced sense.—Subimaginary transformation, a linear transformation defined by equations between two sets of variables, which equations are imaginary, but the transformation being such that a real linear function may in that way be transformed into a real function.

subimago (sub′i-mā″gō), n.; pl. subimagos or subimagines (sub′i-mā″gōz or -maj″i-nēz). [NL., < L. sub, under, + imago, image: see imago.] An imperfect or incompleted winged stage in certain ephemerids (May-flies) and certain chrysopids, succeeding the pupa, and preceding the imago. Also pseudimago. The insect in this stage is active, and resembles the imago, but has to shed another skin. This stage occurs as a rule in the Ephemeridæ of the Pseudoneuroptera, and Riley has recorded it in Chrysopa of the Neuroptera.

subimpressed (sub-im-prest′), a. In entom., slightly impressed; having indistinct impressions.

subincomplete (sub-in-kom-plēt′), a. In entom., noting that metamorphosis of an insect in which the active larva and pupa resemble the imago, the pupa having rudimentary wings, as in the grasshoppers.

subincusation† (sub-in-kū-zā′shon), n. [< L. sub, under, + incusatio(n-), accusation, < incusare, accuse, bring a complaint against, < in, on, against, + causa, a cause, suit: see cause. Cf. accuse.] An implied charge or accusation.

But all this cannot deliver thee [Mary] from the just blame of this bold subincusation: Lord, dost thou not care? Bp. Hall, Contemplations, Mary and Martha.

subindicate (sub-in′di-kāt), v. t. To indicate secondarily; indicate in a less degree.

subindication (sub-in-di-kā′shon), n. The act of indicating secondarily; a slight indication. Barrow.

subindicative (sub-in-dik′a-tiv), a. Partially or secondarily indicative. Lamb, Some of the Old Actors. ★ subindividual† (sub-in-di-vid′ū-al), n. A division of that which is individual.

An individual cannot branch itself into subindividuals. Milton, On Def. of Humb. Remonst., § 13.

subinduce† (sub-in-dūs′), v. t. To insinuate; suggest; offer or bring into consideration imperfectly or indirectly. Sir E. Dering, Speeches in Parliament, p. 114.

subinfer† (sub-in-fėr′), v. t. To infer or deduce from an inference already made. Bp. Hall, Resol. for Religion.

subinfeudation (sub-in-fū-dā′shon), n. [< OF. subinfeudation, < L. sub, under, + ML. infeudatio(n-), infeudation: see infeudation.] 1. The process, in feudal tenure, where the stipendiary or feudatory, considering himself as substantially the owner, began to imitate the example of his sovereign by carving out portions of the benefice or feud, to be held of himself by some other person, on terms and conditions similar to those of the original grant: a continued chain of successive dependencies was thus established, connecting each stipendiary, or vassal as he was termed, with his immediate superior or lord. H. Stephen. See Statute of Quia Emptores, under statute.

The widow is immediate tenant to the heir, by a kind of subinfeudation or under tenancy. Blackstone, Com., II. viii.

2. The fief or tenancy thus established.

These smaller fiefs were called subinfeudations, and were, in fact, mere miniatures of the larger fiefs. Stillé, Stud. Med. Hist., p. 137.

Also subfeudation.

subinfeudatory (sub-in-fū′dā-tō-ri), n.; pl. subinfeudatories (-riz). One who holds by subinfeudation.

At the time of the Conquest the manor was granted to Walter d'Eincourt, and in the 12th century it was divided among the three daughters of his subinfeudatory Paganus. Encyc. Brit., XX. 298.

subinflammation (sub-in-fla-mā′shon), n. Incipient or undeveloped inflammation.

subinflammatory (sub-in-flam′a-tō-ri), a. Pertaining to or of the nature of a slight and indistinct degree of inflammation.

subingression† (sub-in-gresh′on), n. The penetration by one body of the substance of another body.

An eminent naturalist hath taught that, when the air is sucked out of a body, the violence wherewith it is wont to rush into it again proceeds mainly from this, that the pressure of the ambient air is strengthened upon the accession of the air sucked out, which, to make itself room, forceth the neighboring air to a violent subingression of its parts. Boyle, New Experiments Touching the Spring of the Air, [Exp. iii.

subinspector (sub′in-spek″tor), n. A subordinate or assistant inspector.

subinspectorship (sub′in-spek″tor-ship), n. [< subinspector + -ship.] The office or jurisdiction of a subinspector.

subintestinal (sub-in-tes′ti-nal), a. Situated beneath the intestine.

subintroduce† (sub-in-trō-dūs′), v. t. To introduce in a subordinate or secondary manner.

Although presbyters join not in the consecration of a bishop, yet of a presbyter they do; but this is only by a positive subintroduced constitution, first made in a provincial of Africa. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), II. 198.

subinvariant (sub-in-vā′ri-ant), n. Any rational integral function, ϕ, of the letters $a, b, c, \ldots$, which satisfies the partial differential equation $(aD_b + 2bD_c + 3cD_d + \cdots)\phi = 0$.

subinvoluted (sub-in′vō-lū-ted), a. Exhibiting incomplete involution. Medical News, L. 394.

subinvolution (sub-in-vō-lū′shon), n. Incomplete involution. Barnes, Diseases of Women, xxxviii.

subitaneous† (sub-i-tā′nē-us), a. [< L. subitaneus, sudden, < subitus, sudden, unexpected: see sudden.] Sudden; hasty.

subitaneousness† (sub-i-tā′nē-us-nes), n. Suddenness; hastiness.

subitany† (sub′i-tā-ni), a. [< L. subitaneus, sudden: see subitaneous.] Sudden; hasty.

subito (sō′bi-tō), adv. [It., < L. subito, suddenly, abl. sing. neut. of subitus, sudden: see subitaneous, sudden.] In music, suddenly; quickly: as, volti subito (V. S.), turn (the leaf) quickly. ★ subj. An abbreviation of subjunctive.

subjacency (sub-jā′sen-si), n. [< subjacen(t) + -cy.] The state of being subjacent.

subjacent (sub-jā′sent), a. and n. [= F. subjacent = Pg. subjacente, < L. subjacen(t-)s, ppr. of subjacere, lie under or near or adjoin anything, < sub, under, + jacēre, lie: see jacent. Cf. adjacent.] I. a. 1. Lying under or below: in geol., applied to rocks, beds, or strata, considered with reference to their position beneath other overlying formations.—2. Being in a lower situation, though not necessarily directly beneath.

Betweene some breaches of the clouds we could see landskips and villages of the subjacent country. Evelyn, Diary, Nov. 2, 1644.

3. In alg., following below the line of the main characters: as, a subjacent letter, as the n in m_n.

II. n. In logic, the converting proposition or consequent of a conversion. ★ subject (sub′jekt), a. and n. [Now altered to suit the orig. L. form; < ME. subget, sugget, suget, soget, < OF. suget, soget, sougiet, sujet, suject, later subject, F. sujet = Sp. sujeto, subjeto = Pg. sujeito = It. suggetto, soggetto, subject, as a noun (= G. subjekt), a subject (person or thing), < L. subjectus, lying under or near, adjacent, also subject, exposed, as a noun, subjectus, m., a subject, an inferior, subjectum, neut., the subject of a proposition, prop. pp. of subjicere, subicere, pp. subjectus, throw, lay, place, or bind under, subject, < sub, under, + jacĕre, throw: see jet[1]. Cf. subjacent. Cf. abject, object, project.] I. a. 1. Placed or situated under or beneath.

Long he them bore above the subject plaine. Spenser, F. Q., I. xi. 19.

2. Being under the power or dominion of another.

For there nys God in heven or helle, iwis,
But he hath been right soget unto Love.
Court of Love, l. 93.

Though in name an independent kingdom, she [Scotland] was during more than a century really treated, in many respects, as a subject province. Macaulay, Hist. Eng., i.

3. Exposed; liable, from extraneous or inherent causes; prone: with to: as, a country subject to extreme heat or cold; a person subject to attacks of fever.

Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds. Shak., 2 Hen. IV., iv. 4. 54.

My Lord, you are a great Prince, and all Eyes are upon your Actions; this makes you more subject to Envy. Howell, Letters, I. iv. 18.

A little knowledge is subject to make men headstrong, insolent, and untractable. Bp. Sprat, Hist. Royal Soc., p. 429.

Hence—4. Exposed or liable, as to what may confirm or modify: with to: as, subject to your approval; subject to correction.—5. Submissive; obedient. Tit. iii. 1.

No man was ever bidd be subject to the Church of Corinth, Rome, or Asia, but to the Church without addition, as it held faithfull to the rules of Scripture. Milton, Eikonoklastes, xxvii.

Unless Love held them subject to the Will
That gave them being, they would cease to be.
Bryant, Order of Nature.

=Syn. 2. Subordinate, subservient, inferior.—3. Apt, Likely, etc. See apt.

II. n. 1. One who is placed under the authority, dominion, or controlling influence of another; specifically, one who owes allegiance to a sovereign and is governed by his laws; one who lives under the protection of, and owes allegiance to, a government.

And he leet make an Ymage in the lyknesse of his Fadre, and constreyned alle his Subyettes for to worschipe it. Mandeville, Travels, p. 41.

Tell his majesty
I am a subject, and I do confess
I serve a gracious prince.
Fletcher (and another), Noble Gentleman, ii. 1.

2. A person or thing regarded as the recipient of certain treatment; one who or that which is exposed or liable to something specified.

Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagems
Upon so soft a subject as myself!
Shak., R. and J., iii. 5. 212.

There is not a fairer subject for contempt and ridicule than a knave become the dupe of his own art. Sheridan, The Duenna, iii. 7.

The town bear [of Congleton] having died, it was ordered that certain monies . . . should be placed at the disposal of the bearward, to enable him to provide a new subject. Municip. Corp. Report, 1835, p. 2652.

Specifically—(a) A dead body used for dissection. (b) One who is peculiarly sensitive to psychological experimentation; a sensitive.

The monotonous ticking of a watch held to the ear will throw the nervous system of a sensitive subject into an abnormal state. Proc. Soc. Psych. Research, I. 251.

3. One who or that which is the cause or occasion of something.

I am the unhappy subject of these quarrels.
Shak., M. of V., v. 1. 238.

Hear her, ye noble Romans! 'tis a woman;
A subject not for swords, but pity.
Fletcher, Valentinian, v. 8.

4. That on which any mental operation is performed; that which is thought, spoken, or treated of: as, a subject of discussion or negotiation; a subject for a sermon or a song; the subject of a story.

The matter or subiect of Poesie . . . to myne intent is what soeuer wittie and delicate conceit of man meet or worthy to be put in written verse, for any necessary vse of the present time, or good instruction of the posteritie. Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 18.

O, sure I am, the wits of former days
To subjects worse have given admiring praise.
Shak., Sonnets, lix.

This subject for heroic song Pleased me. Milton, P. L., ix. 25.

But this, no more the subject of debate,
Is past, forgotten, and resign'd to fate.
Pope, Iliad, xix. 67.

5. In gram., that of which anything is affirmed; the nominative of a verb, without or with modifiers; the member or part of a sentence signifying that of which predication is made. A subject may be simple or compound; it may be a noun, or anything used with the value of a noun, whether word or phrase or clause: thus, that he has gone is true. A logical subject is one having the character of a subject according to the true meaning of the sentence; a grammatical subject is one having that character formally only: thus, in it is good to be here, it is the grammatical and to be here is the logical subject.

6. In logic, that term of a proposition of which the other is affirmed or denied. Thus, in the proposition "Plato was a philosopher," Plato is the logical subject, philosopher being its predicate, or that which is affirmed of the subject. Also, in the proposition "No man living on earth can be completely happy," man living on earth is the subject, and completely happy is the predicate, or that which is denied of the subject.

7. In metaph.: (a) A real thing to which given characters relate and in which they are said to inhere.

That which manifests its qualities—in other words, that in which the appearing causes inhere, that to which they belong—is called their subject, or substance, or substratum. Sir W. Hamilton, Metaphysics, viii.

(b) In Kantian and modern philosophy, the self or ego to which in all thought all mental representations are attributed (according to Kant); also, a real (hypothetical) thing in which mental phenomena are supposed to inhere. The word is commonly used by those psychologists who teach that the immediate consciousness of self (the subject) is an aspect or inseparable accompaniment of an immediate perception of an external object. The doctrine is that perception involves a sense of action and reaction (self and not-self). To this is often joined another proposition, that there is no mode of consciousness in which the opposition of subject and object does not appear. [Expressions very close to this meaning are to be found in pre-Kantian writers (see Leibnitz, Remarques sur le livre de M. King, § 20), but the word is in such passages used relatively, as in def. 6.]

In the first syllogism of transcendental psychology reason imposes upon us an apparent knowledge only, by representing the constant logical subject of thought as the knowledge of the real subject in which that knowledge inheres. Of that subject, however, we have not, and cannot have, the slightest knowledge, because consciousness is that which alone changes representations into thoughts, and in which, therefore, as the transcendental subject, all our perceptions must be found. Beside this logical meaning of the I, we have no knowledge of the subject in itself which forms the substratum and foundation of it and of all our thoughts.

Kant, Critique of Pure Reason, tr. by Müller (Centenary ed.), II. 305.

The particular modes in which I now feel, desire, and think arise out of the modes in which I have previously done so; but the common characteristic of all these has been that in them a subject was conscious of itself as its own object, and thus self-determined.

T. H. Green, Prolegomena to Ethics, § 102.

The subject can be conscious of itself only in relation to an object which it at once excludes and determines.

E. Caird, Philos. of Kant, p. 348, note.

8. In music: (a) In general, the theme or melodic phrase on which a work or movement is based, consisting of few or many tones variously combined and treated; a motive. When two or more principal subjects are used, they are often known as first, second, etc. (b) In contrapuntal works, the theme given out at the beginning, to which (in fugue and canon) the answer responds, and with which the counter-subject is combined which is taken as the basis for thematic development, for imitation, etc. In a fugue, the subject is also called antecedent, dux, proposta, etc.; in a canon, guida; and in freer contrapuntal music, cantus firmus or canto fermo.

9. In the fine arts, the plan or general view chosen by an artist; the design of a composition or picture; the scheme or idea of a work of art: as, a historical subject; a genre subject; a marine subject, a pastoral subject.—10. In decorative art, a pictorial representation of human figures or animals; a picture representing action and incident.

Vases painted with subjects after Watteau.

Soc. Arts Report, Exhib. 1867.

Diminished subject. See diminished.—First subject. See first[1].—Intervening subject. See intervene.—Inversion of subjects. See inversion.—Mixed subjects of property. See mixed[1].—Subject of inhesion, a thing in which characters inhere.—Subject of predication, the subject of a proposition.—Subject of relation, that one of the correlates to which the others are referred as secondary; the relate.—To be in a subject, to be related to any thing somewhat as a predicate is related to its subject; to exist by virtue of that subject of which the attribute which is in the subject does not form a part.

=Syn. 4. Subject, Theme, Topic, Point, Thesis. The first three of these words are often popularly used as exactly synonymous. Daniel Webster puts within a few lines of each other the two following sentences: [If an American Thucydides should arise,] "may his theme not be a Peloponnesian war," and [American history] "will furnish no topic for a Gibbon." Yet, strictly in rhetoric, and more often in general use, subject is the broad word for anything written or spoken about, while theme is the word for the exact and generally narrower statement of the subject. A topic is a still narrower subject; there may be several interesting topics suggested under a single subject. A point is by its primary meaning the smallest possible subdivision under a subject. Thesis is a technical word for a subject which takes the form of an exact proposition or assertion which is to be proved: as, Luther fastened his ninety-five theses to the church-door. The paper in which the proof of a thesis is attempted is also called a thesis. A student's composition is often called a theme. The meaning of the other words is not extended to the written or spoken discourse. See proposition.

subject (sub-jekt'), v. [Now altered to suit the orig. L. form; < ME. sugetten, < OF. sujeter* = Sp. subjectar, subjetar, sujetar = Pg. sujeitar = It. suggettare, soggettare, subject, < ML. subjectare, subject, freq. of L. subjicere, subicere, throw under: see subject, a. and n.] I. trans. 1. To put, lay, or spread under; make subjacent.

In one short view subjected to our eye, Gods, Emperors, Heroes, Sages, Beauties lie.

Pope, To Addison, l. 33.

The lands that lie
Subjected to the Heliconian ridge.

Tennyson, Tiresias.

2. To expose; make liable or obnoxious: with to: as, credulity subjects one to impositions.

Subject himself to anarchy within,
Or lawless passions in him, which he serves.

Milton, P. R., ii. 471.

If the vessels yield, it subjects the person to all the inconveniences of an erroneous circulation. Arbuthnot.

3. To submit; make accountable, subservient, or the like; cause to undergo; expose, as in chemical or other operations: with to: as, to subject clay to a white heat.

Subjected to his service angel-wings.

Milton, P. L., ix. 155.

God is not bound to subject his ways of operation to the scrutiny of our thoughts. Locke.

Church discipline [in Germany] was subjected to State approval; and a power of expelling rebellious clergy from the country was established.

H. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 559.

No gas is "atomic" in the chemist's sense, except when subjected to the action of electricity, or, in the case of hydrogen, to a high temperature.

J. N. Lockyer, Spect. Anal., p. 144.

4. To bring under power, dominion, or sway; subdue; subordinate.

High Ioue permits the sunne to cast his beames,
And the moyst cloudes to drop downe plenteous streames,
Alike vpon the just & reprobate;
Yet are not both subjected by one fate?

Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 6.

Neither God nor the Lawes have subjected us to his will, nor sett his reason to be our Sovran above Law.

Milton, Eikonoklastes, xi.

II.† intrans. To be or become subject.

When men freely subject to any lust as a new master.

T. Brooks, Works, II. 242.

subjectable (sub-jek'ta-bl), a. [< subject + -able.] To be subjected or submitted. [Rare.]

It was propounded to these fathers confessors as a thing not subjectable to their penitential judicature.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), II. 106.

subjectdom (sub'jekt-dum), n. [< subject + -dom.] The state or condition of being a subject.

No clue to its nationality, except in the political sense of subjectdom, therefore is available.

Greenwell, British Barrows, p. 608. (Encyc. Dict.) subjection (sub-jek'shon), n. [< ME. subjectioun, subjeccion, subjeccioun, < OF. (and F.) subjection = Sp. sujeción = Pg. sujeição, sogeição = It. suggezione, soggezione, < L. subjectio(n-), a placing under, substitution, reducing to obedience, subjection, < subjicere, subicere, throw under, subject: see subject, v.] 1. The act of subjecting or subduing; the act of vanquishing and bringing under the dominion of another.

The prophesie seith that the grete dragon shall come fro Rome that wolde distroie the reame of the grete Breteyne and put it in his subieccion.

Merlin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 433.

King Arthur . . . sailed with his fleet into Island, and brought it and the people thereof vnder his subiection.

Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 1.

After the conquest of the kingdom, and subjection of the rebels, enquiry was made who they were that, fighting against the king, had saved themselves by flight.

Sir M. Hale.

2. The state of being in the power or under the control or domination of another; service.

Thei that marchen upon zou schulle ben undre zoure Subiecciouu, as zee han ben undre hires.

Mandeville, Travels, p. 225.

Both in subjection now
To sensual appetite. Milton, P. L., ix. 1128.

A lofty mind,
By philosophic discipline prepared
For calm subjection to acknowledged law.

Wordsworth, Excursion, iii.

3. In logic, the act of attaching a subject to a predicate: corresponding to predication.

★subjective (sub-jek'tiv), a. [= F. subjectif = Sp. subjetivo = G. subjektiv, < L. subjectivus, of or pertaining to a subject, < subjectum, a subject: see subject, n.] 1. Relating to or of the nature of a subject, as opposed to an object. In the older writers subjective is nearly synonymous with real, and still more closely so with the common modern meaning of objective. By Kant, following some of his earlier contemporaries, the word was restricted to the subject of thought, or the ego. See objective.

Certainty, according to the schools, is distinguished into objective and subjective. Objective certainty is when the proposition is certainly true in itself, and subjective when we are certain of the truth of it. The one is in things, the other is in our minds. Watts, Logic, II. ii. § 8.

The words subjective and objective are getting into general use now.

E. Fitzgerald, Letter, Mar. 21, 1841 (in Lit. Remains, I. 71).

The uncivilized or semi-civilized man is wholly unable to think of the maniac's visions as subjective illusions.

H. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 124.

All knowledge on its subjective side is belief.

J. Sully, Outlines of Psychol., p. 434.

2. In literature and art, noting a production characterized by the prominence given to the individuality of the author or artist: as, the subjective school of painting; also, relating to such individuality. The writings of Shelley and Byron are essentially subjective, while the novels of Scott are objective.

They [the Iliad and Odyssey] are so purely objective that they seem projected, as it were, into this visible diurnal sphere with hardly a subjective trace adhering to them, and are silent as the stars concerning their own genesis and mutual relation. W. D. Geddes.

I am disposed to consider the Sonnets from the Portuguese as . . . a portion of the finest subjective poetry in our literature. Stedman. Vict. Poets, p. 137.

3. Relating to a subject in a political sense; submissive; obedient. [A rare and irregular use.]

What eye can look, through clear love's spectacle,
On virtue's majesty that shines in beauty,
But, as to nature's divin'st miracle,
Performs not to it all subjective duty?

Sir J. Davies, Witte's Pilgrimage, sig. D. 2. (Latham.)

Which sadly when they saw
How those had sped before, with most subjective awe
Submit them to his sword. Drayton, Polyolbion, xi. 376.

Subjective certainty. See certainty.—Subjective colors. Same as accidental colors (which see, under accidental).—Subjective doubt, end, ens. See the nouns.—Subjective idealism. Same as Fichtean idealism (which see, under idealism).—Subjective method, power, reason, etc. See the nouns.—Subjective part. See extension, 5.—Subjective perspective, a method of representation which looks right, though it is geometrically false. This method is, in fact, usually practised by painters who greatly exaggerate certain effects of perspective, as if the picture were intended to be seen from a point of view much nearer than that usually chosen by the spectator, and are then obliged to modify certain consequences of this exaggeration.—Subjective sensation, a sensation which is not caused by an object outside of the body.—Subjective symptoms, in pathol., symptoms, as sensations, appreciable by the patient, but not discernible by another observer.

subjectively (sub-jek'tiv-li), adv. In a subjective manner; in relation to the subject; as existing in a subject or mind.

I do not see how we can successfully guard against the danger of considering as both objectively and subjectively evident things which, in fact, are only subjectively evident. Mivart, Nature and Thought, p. 58.

subjectiveness (sub-jek'tiv-nes), n. The state of being subjective; subjectivity.

subjectivism (sub-jek'tiv-izm), n. [< subjective + -ism.] 1. The doctrine that we can immediately know only what is present to consciousness. Those who adhere to this opinion either regard it as axiomatical, or fortify it by arguments analogous to those by which Zeno sought to prove that a particle can have only position, and not velocity, at any instant—arguments which appear, upon logical analysis, to beg the question. Those who oppose the opinion maintain that it would lead to the absurd corollary that there can be no cognition whatever, not even of a problematical or interrogatory kind, concerning anything but the immediate present.

The philosophical principle of subjectivism.

Ueberweg, Hist. Philosophy (trans. by Morris), I.

2. The doctrine, sometimes termed relativism, that "man is the measure of things"—that is, that the truth is nothing but each man's settled opinion, there being no objective criterion of truth at all. This is an opinion held by some English philosophers, as well as by Protagoras in antiquity. It is a modification of subjectivism in sense 1, above.

3. Same as subjectivity, 3.

subjectivist (sub-jek'tiv-ist), n. and a. [< subjective + -ist.] I. n. In metaph., one who holds the doctrine or doctrines of subjectivism.

II. a. Same as subjectivistic.—Subjectivist logic. See logic.

subjectivistic (sub-jek-ti-vis'tik), a. [< subjectivist + -ic.] Pertaining to or characterized by subjectivism.

subjectivistically (sub-jek-ti-vis'ti-kal-i), adv. With subjectivistic reasoning; from the point of view of subjectivism.

subjectivity (sub-jek-tiv'i-ti), n. [= F. subjectivité = G. subjektivität, < NL. subjectivita(t-)s, < L. subjectivus, subjective: see subjective.] 1. The absence of objective reality; illusiveness; the character of arising within the mind, as, for example, the sensation of a color does.

We must, in the first place, remember that analysis and subjectivity on the one hand, and synthesis and objectivity on the other hand, go together in Kant's mind.

E. Caird, Philos. of Kant, p. 413.

Belief in the subjectivity of time, space, and other forms of thought inevitably involves Agnosticism.

J. Martineau, Mind, XIII. 596.

2. The private, arbitrary, and limited element of self; that which is peculiar to an individual mind: as, the subjectivity of Byron or Shelley.

There are two ways of looking at subjectivity. We may understand by it, in the first place, only the natural and finite subjectivity, with its contingent and arbitrary content of particular interests and inclinations. . . . In this sense of subjectivity, we cannot help admiring the tranquil resignation of the ancients to destiny, and feeling that it is a much higher and worthier mood than that of the moderns, who obstinately pursue their subjective aims, and when they find themselves constrained to give up the hope of reaching them, console themselves with the prospect of a reward in some shape or other. But the term subjectivity is not to be confined merely to the bad and finite kind of it which is contradistinguished from the fact. In its truth subjectivity is immanent in the fact, and as a subjectivity thus infinite is the very truth of the fact. . . . Christianity, we know, teaches that God wishes all men to be saved. That teaching declares that subjectivity has an infinite value.

Hegel, Henning's notes of his lectures, tr. in Wallace's [Logic of Hegel, § 147.

It is surely subjectivity and interiority which are the notions latest acquired by the human mind.

W. James, Prin. of Psychology, II. 43.

subjectivize (sub-jek'ti-vīz), v. [< subjective + -ize.] To render subjective; to bring into the perceptive mind.

subjectless (sub'jekt-les), a. [< subject + -less.] Having no subject or subjects.

The subject without the king can do nothing; the subjectless king can do something. Carlyle.

subject-matter (sub'jekt-mat″ėr), n. The subject or matter presented for consideration in some written or oral statement or discussion.

It [a catalogue] is disposed according to the Subject Matter of the Books, as the Libles and Expositors, Historians, Philosophers, &c. Lister, Journey to Paris, p. 107.

subjectness (sub'jekt-nes), n. The state or condition of being subject; subjection. [Rare.]

subject-notion (sub'jekt-nō″shon), n. A concept or notion the subject of a judgment.

subject-object (sub'jekt-ob″jekt), n. The immediate object of cognition, or the thought itself, as distinguished from the object-object, or unknown real object. [In Kantian terminology, the Gegenstand, as distinguished from the Objekt.] subjectship (sub'jekt-ship), n. [< subject + -ship.] The state of being subject or a subject. [Rare.]

The subjectship, being the very relation in which the creature stands to the Creator as his lawgiver, ruler, and judge. Candlish, The Fatherhood of God, I. 54.

subjecture (sub-jek'tūr), n. [< subject + -ure.] The state of being subject; subjection. [Rare.]

subjee (sub'jē), n. [Hind. sabzī, the larger leaves and capsules of the hemp-plant, also greenness, greens, < sabza, greenness, verdure, the hemp-plant.] The larger leaves and capsules of the Indian hemp without the stalks. See bhang.

subjicibility (sub-jis-i-bil'i-ti), n. [< ML. subjicibilita(t-)s, < subjicibilis: see subjicible.] Capability of being a subject of predication.

subjicible (sub-jis'i-bl), a. [< ML. subjicibilis, subjicible, < L. subjicere, subicere, place under, subject: see subject.] 1. Capable of being subjected. [Rare.]

He [Jesus] was not a person subjicible to a command; it was enough that he understood the inclinations and designs of his Father's mercies. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 56.

2. Capable of being made the subject of something else as predicate.

subjoin (sub-join'), v. t. [< OF. subjoindre, < L. subjungere, add, annex, yoke, < sub, under, + jungere, join, yoke: see join.] To add at the end of, especially of something said or written; annex; append: as, to subjoin an argument or an illustration.

I shall subjoin, as a Corollary to the foregoing Remark, an admirable Observation out of Aristotle. Addison, Spectator, No. 273.

=Syn. To affix, attach.

subjoinder (sub-join'dėr), n. [< OF. subjoindre, subjoin, inf. used as a noun: see subjoin.] A remark following or subjoined to another; a rejoinder. [Rare.]

"I will never stand to be hissed," was the subjoinder of young Confidence. Lamb, Ellistoniana.

subjoint (sub'joint), n. In zoöl., a subsidiary or secondary joint; one of the subdivisions, often very numerous, of the regular joints of an insect's or a crustacean's legs, antennæ, etc. Thus, the fore legs of a pedipalp arachnidan, or the antennæ of a lobster, have numerous subjoints in the long, slender, lash-like part of the organ beyond the short and stout joints that are identified by name. See Phrynidæ. Also called subsegment.

sub judice (sub jö'di-sē). [L.: sub, under; judice, abl. sing. of judex, judge: see judge.] Before the judge; under judicial consideration; not yet decided.

The relations of the people and the crown were then [reign of James I.] brought to issue, and, under shifting names, continued sub judice from that time to 1688. De Quincey, Rhetoric.

subjugable (sub'jö-ga-bl), a. [< L. as if subjugabilis*, < subjugare, subjugate: see subjugate.] That may be subjugated; capable of being subdued or conquered.

An abundance of good, readily subjugable land awaiting the settler. Science, VII. 232.

subjugal (sub-jö'gal), a. [< L. sub, under, + E. jugal.] Situated below the jugal, malar, or zygomatic bone.

subjugate (sub'jö-gāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. subjugated, ppr. subjugating. [< L. subjugatus, pp. of subjugare (> It. subjugare = Sp. subjugar, sojuzgar = Pg. subjugar = F. subjuguer), bring under the yoke, subjugate, < sub, under, + jugum, yoke: see yoke.] 1. To bring under the yoke; subdue; conquer; compel to submit to the dominion or control of another; vanquish.

He subjugated a king, and called him his vassal. Baker.

In a few months he [Cromwell] subjugated Ireland as Ireland had never been subjugated during the five centuries of slaughter which had elapsed since the landing of the first Norman settlers. Macaulay, Hist. Eng., i.

2. To make subservient; take or hold captive; bring under bondage, as the senses.

Mans sence captiv'de, his reason subiugate.
Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 109.

I understood that unto such a torment
The carnal malefactors were condemned
Who reason subjugate to appetite.
Longfellow, tr. of Dante's Inferno, v. 39.

=Syn. 1. Vanquish, Subdue, etc. See conquer.

subjugation (sub-jö-gā'shon), n. [= F. subjugation, < ML. subjugatio(n-), < L. subjugare, subjugate: see subjugate.] The act of subjugating, or the state of being subjugated; subjection.

Her policy was military because her objects were power, ascendency, and subjugation. D. Webster, Speech at Plymouth, Dec. 22, 1820.

The subjugation of virgin soil, as we had occasion to notice, is a serious work. B. Taylor, Northern Travel, p. 348.

subjugator (sub'jö-gā-tor), n. [= Sp. sojuzgador = Pg. subjugador, < LL. subjugator, one who subjugates, a conqueror, < subjugare, subjugate: see subjugate.] One who subjugates or enslaves; a conqueror. Coleridge.

subjunction (sub-jungk'shon), n. [< L. as if subjunctio(n-)*, < subjungere, add, subjoin: see subjoin.] The act of subjoining, or the state of being subjoined; also, something subjoined.

subjunctive (sub-jungk'tiv), a. and n. [= F. subjonctif = Sp. subjuntivo = Pg. subjunctivo = It. subjuntivo, < L. subjunctivus, serving to join, connecting, in gram., sc. modus, the subjunctive mode, < subjungere, pp. subjunctus, add, join, subjoin: see subjoin.] I. a. 1†. Subjoined or added to something before said or written.

A few things more, subjunctive to the former, were thought meet to be castigated in preachers at that time. Bp. Hacket, Abp. Williams, p. 87. (Latham.)

2. In gram., noting that mode of the verb by which is expressed condition, hypothesis, or contingency, and which is generally used in a clause subjoined or subordinate to another clause or verb, and preceded by one of certain conjunctions, especially (in English) if or though: as in the sentence "if that be the case, then I am wrong." The subjunctive mode was an original part of the inflection of Indo-European verbs, and is preserved in most of the existing languages of the family: but be and were are the only remaining forms in English in which it is conspicuously distinguished from the indicative. Abbreviated subj.

II. n. In gram., the subjunctive mode.

The subjunctive is evidently passing out of use, and there is good reason to suppose that it will soon become obsolete altogether. Marsh, Lects. on Eng. Lang., xiv.

subkingdom (sub'king″dum), n. 1. A prime subdivision of the animal kingdom; a superclass corresponding to the "branches" or "embranchements" of French zoölogists, as Cuvier, who recognized the four subkingdoms of the vertebrates, mollusks, articulates, and radiates. Such main groups are now more commonly called phyla. Eight such groups now very generally recognized, in fact if not in name, are Protozoa, Cœlentera, Echinodermata, Vermes, Arthropoda, Molluscoidea, Mollusca, and Vertebrata. Some authors degrade Vermes from this rank, or otherwise dispose of it as a subkingdom; some elevate the Tunicata to this rank; and the Molluscoidea are not recognized by all as a subkingdom.

The prolific animals of the fifth day's creation belonged to the three Cuvierian subkingdoms of the Radiata, Articulata, and Mollusca, and to the classes of Fish and Reptiles among the Vertebrata. Dawson, Origin of World, p. 213.

2. In bot., a primary division of the vegetable kingdom, the highest below the kingdom itself. The old division was into two such subkingdoms, the Phanerogamia and the Cryptogamia; but systematists now recognize a large number of such coördinate divisions and are not agreed as to the name or the scope.

sublacunose (sub-lā-kū'nōs), a. Somewhat lacunose.

Convergent to a sublacunose centre. Encyc. Nat. Hist. (1855), III. 580.

sublanate (sub-lā'nāt), a. In bot., somewhat lanate or woolly.

sublanceolate (sub-lan'sē-ō-lāt), a. In zoöl. and bot., approaching the lanceolate form; somewhat tapering and pointed.

sublapsarian (sub-lap-sā'ri-an), a. and n. [< L. sub, under, + lapsus, fall (see lapse), + -arian.] I. a. Relating to the sublapsarians or to their tenets.

According to the sublapsarian doctrine. Hammond.

II. n. One who believes in sublapsarianism. Compare supralapsarian.

sublapsarianism (sub-lap-sā'ri-an-izm), n. [< sublapsarian + -ism.] The doctrine that the decrees of election and reprobation are subsequent to the fall, or that men are elected to grace or reprobated to death while in a state of sin and ruin.

sublapsary (sub-lap'sa-ri), a. and n. Same as sublapsarian.

sublate (sub-lāt'), v. t.; pret. and pp. sublated, ppr. sublating. [< L. sublatus, used as pp. of tollere, raise, take up, < sub, under, from under, + latus, used as pp. of ferre, bear.] 1. To take or carry away; remove. [Rare.]

The aucthores of ye mischiefe [were] sublated & plucked away. Hall, Hen. VII., an. 1.

2. In logic, to deny: opposed to posit.

Where . . . the propositional lines are of uniform breadth, it is hereby shewn that all such opposition is sublated. Sir W. Hamilton, Logic, II. 471.

3. In Hegelian logic, to cancel by a subsequent movement.

The process of the external world left to itself in its externality can only be to go into itself, or to sublate or remove its own externality. Craik, Hegel, p. 198.

sublation (sub-lā'shon), n. [< L. sublatio(n-), a raising, removal, < sublatus, raised, taken away: see sublate.] 1. The act of taking or carrying away. [Rare.]

He could not be forsaken by a sublation of union. Bp. Hall, Remains, p. 188.

2. Cancellation by a subsequent logical movement, in Hegelian philosophy.

sublative (sub'lā-tiv), a. [< sublate + -ive.] Tending to take away or deprive.

sublease (sub'lēs), n. In law, an under-lease; a lease granted by one who is himself a lessee or tenant. For some purposes, a sublease for the entire remaining term of the sublessor is deemed an assignment rather than a sublease.

sublease (sub-lēs'), v. t.; pret. and pp. subleased, ppr. subleasing. To underlease.

He leased his house, . . . and subleased part of it. New York Evening Post, March 3, 1886.

sublessee (sub'le-sē″), n. The receiver or holder of a sublease.

sublessor (sub-les'or), n. The grantor of a sublease.

sublet (sub-let'), v. t.; pret. and pp. sublet, ppr. subletting. To underlet; let to another person, the party letting being himself lessee or tenant.

He's let and sublet, and every man has to make something out of him [the convict] each time. The Century, XL. 221.

sublevaminous† (sub-lē-vam'i-nus), a. [< ML. sublevamen (-min-), a lifting, supporting, < L. sublevare, lift, support: see sublevate.] Supporting; upholding.

His up-holding and sublevaminous Providence. Feltham, Resolves, ii. 2.

sublevate (sub'lē-vāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. sublevated, ppr. sublevating. [< L. sublevatus, pp. of sublevare (> It. sollevare = Pg. Sp. sublevar), lift up from beneath, < sub, under, + levare, lift up, raise, < levis, light.] To raise; elevate; excite. Formerly also sollevate.

sublevation (sub-lē-vā'shon), n. [= Sp. sublevación = Pg. sublevação = It. sollevazione, < L. sublevatio(n-), a lightening, < sublevare, pp. sublevatus, lift up from beneath, support: see sublevate.] 1. The act of lifting or raising; elevation.—2. A rising or insurrection.

Any general commotion or sublevation of the people. Sir W. Temple, Works (ed. 1731), II. 566.

sublicense (sub-lī'sens), v. t. To underlicense; license to another person under the provisions of a license already held by the person so licensing.

sublieutenant (sub'lū-ten″ant), n. In the British navy, a grade immediately below that of lieutenant. Formerly called mate.

subligation (sub-li-gā'shon), n. [< LL. subligatio(n-), a binding below, < L. subligare, pp. subligatus, bind below, < sub, under, + ligare, tie, bind: see ligation.] The act of binding underneath. [Rare.]

sublimable (sub-lī'ma-bl), a. [< sublime + -able.] Capable of being sublimated. See sublimation. Boyle, Works, III. 57.

sublimableness (sub-lī'ma-bl-nes), n. The quality of being sublimable. Boyle, Works, I. 573.

sublimary (sub'li-mā-ri), a. [< sublime + -ary.] Elevated. [Rare.]

First to the master of the feast
This health is consecrated,
Thence to each sublimary guest
Whose soul doth desire
This nectar to raise and inspire.
A. Brome, The Painter's Entertainment.

sublimate (sub'li-māt), v. t.; pret. and pp. sublimated, ppr. sublimating. [< L. sublimatus, pp. of sublimare, lift up on high, raise: see sublime, v.] 1. To bring (a solid substance, such as camphor or sulphur) by heat into the state of vapor, which on cooling returns again to the solid state. See sublimation.—2. To extract by or as by sublimation.

It will be a harder alchymy then Lullius ever knew to sublimat any good use out of such an invention.
Milton, Areopagitica, p. 13.

You that have put so fair for the philosopher's stone that you have endeavoured to sublimate it out of poor men's bones ground to powder by your oppressions.
Bp. T. Adams, Works, I. 380.

3. Figuratively, to deprive of earthly dross; elevate; refine; purify; idealize.

And when [the Sultan is] in state, there is not in the world to be seen a greater spectacle of humane glory, and of sublimated manhood. Sandys, Travailes, p. 59.

I can conceive nothing more sublimating than the strange peril and novelty of an adventure such as this.
Poe, Tales, I. 97.

The atmosphere was light, odor, music; and each and all sublimated beyond anything the sober senses are capable of receiving. B. Taylor, Lands of the Saracen, p. 139.

sublimate (sub'li-māt as adj., -māt as noun), a. and n. [< L. sublimatus, pp. of sublimare, lift on high: see sublimate, v.] I. a. Brought into a state of vapor by heat, and again condensed, as camphor, sulphur, etc.; hence, elevated; purified.

Offering her selfe more sublimate and pure, in the sacred name and rites of Religion. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 366.

II. n. 1. Anything produced by sublimation or refining.—2. In mineral., the deposit formed, as in a glass tube or on a surface of charcoal, when a mineral containing a volatile ingredient is heated before the blowpipe.—Blue sublimate, a preparation of mercury in combination with flowers of sulphur and sal ammoniac, used in painting.—Corrosive sublimate. See corrosive.

sublimation (sub-li-mā'shon), n. [< ME. sublymacioun, < OF. (and F.) sublimation = Sp. sublimación = Pg. sublimação = It. sublimazione, < LL. sublimatio(n-), a lifting up, a deliverance, < L. sublimare, lift up: see sublimate, sublime, v.] 1. In chem., the act or process of sublimating; a process by which solid substances are, by the aid of heat, converted into vapor, which is again condensed into the solid state by the application of cold. Strictly speaking, sublimation is possible only in the case of solids, such as metallic arsenic, which when heated at low pressures pass directly into the state of vapor without liquefying and on cooling return directly to the solid state; but the name is also given to distillations, as of sulphur, iodine, etc., in which, although the material melts before vaporizing, condensation occurs under such conditions of pressure and temperature that the product is a solid. Sublimation effects for solids to some extent what distillation effects for liquids. Both processes purify the substances to which they are severally applied, by separating them from the fixed matters with which they are associated. Sublimation is usually conducted in one vessel, the product being deposited in the upper part of the vessel in a solid state, and often in the crystalline form, while the impurity remains in the lower part. The vapors of some substances which undergo the process of sublimation condense in the form of a fine powder called flowers; such are the flowers of sulphur, flowers of benzoin, etc. Other sublimates are obtained in a solid and compact form, as camphor, ammonium chlorid, and all the sublimates of mercury.

2. The act of heightening, refining, purifying, or freeing (something) from baser qualities: as, the sublimation of the affections.—3. That which has been highly refined or purified; hence, the highest product of anything.—4. In psychopathology, a purposive process of development whereby a source of mental energy, after the removal of a neurotic repression, becomes available for use in a new direction and upon a higher mental or moral plane.—Sublimation theory, in geol. and mining, the theory according to which ore-deposits were formed and vein-fissures filled by the volatilization of metalliferous matter from beneath, or from the ignited interior of the earth.

sublimatory (sub'li-mā-tō-ri), a. and n. [< ME. sublymatorie = F. sublimatoire, < LL. sublimator, a lifter, < L. sublimare, lift up: see sublimate.] I. a. Tending to sublimate; used in sublimation.

II. n.; pl. sublimatories (-riz). A vessel for sublimation.

Violes, croslets, and sublymatories.
Chaucer, Prol. to Canon's Yeoman's Tale, l. 240.

sublime (sub-līm'), a. and n. [= F. sublime = Sp. Pg. It. sublime, < L. sublimis, uplifted, high, lofty, sublime; origin unknown.] I. a. 1†. High in place; uplifted; elevated; exalted; lofty.—2. High in excellence; elevated by nature; exalted above men in general by lofty or noble traits; eminent: said of persons.

The age was fruitful in great men, but amongst them all, if we except the sublime Julian leader, none, as regards splendour of endowments, stood upon the same level as Cicero. De Quincey, Cicero.

Here dwells no perfect man sublime,
Nor woman winged before her time.
Whittier, Last Walk in Autumn.

3. Striking the mind with a sense of grandeur or power, physical or moral; calculated to awaken awe, veneration, exalted or heroic feeling, and the like; lofty; grand; noble: noting a natural object or scenery, an action or conduct, a discourse, a work of man's hands, a spectacle, etc.: as, sublime scenery; sublime heroism.

Easy in Words thy Style, in Sense sublime.
Prior, To Dr. Sherlock.

Know how sublime a thing it is
To suffer and be strong.
Longfellow, Light of Stars.

The forms of elevated masses that are most sublime are the lofty and precipitous, as implying the most intense effort of supporting might.
A. Bain, Emotions and Will, p. 238.

Dinah, covered with her long white dress, her pale face full of subdued emotion, almost like a lovely corpse into which the soul has returned charged with sublimer secrets and a sublimer love. George Eliot, Adam Bede, xv.

4. Of lofty mien; elevated in manner, expression, or appearance.

His fair large front and eye sublime declared Absolute rule. Milton, P. L., iv. 300.

For the proud Souldan, with presumpteous cheare
And countenance sublime and insolent, Sought onely slaughter and avengement.
Spenser, F. Q., V. viii. 30.

5. In anat., superficial; not deep-seated: opposed to profound: as, the sublime flexor of the fingers (the flexor sublimis, a muscle).—Sublime geometry, the theory of higher curves.—Sublime Porte. See Porte.=Syn. 2 and 3. Grand, Lofty, Sublime, majestic, stately. Grand founds its meanings on the idea of great size, lofty and sublime on that of height. Natural objects may be sublime without physical height, if vastness and great impressiveness are present. In the moral field the sublime is that which is so high above ordinary human achievements as to give the impression of astonishment blended with awe, as the leap of Curtius into the chasm, or the death of the martyr Stephen. In moral things the grand suggests both vastness and elevation. Lofty may imply pride, but in this connection it notes only a lower degree of the sublime, sublime being the strongest word in the language for ideas of its class.

II. n. That which is sublime: commonly with the definite article. (a) In lit., that which is most elevated, stately, or imposing in style.

The sublime rises from the nobleness of thoughts, the magnificence of words, or the harmonious and lively turn of the phrase. Addison.

The origin of the sublime is one of the most curious and interesting subjects of inquiry that can occupy the attention of a critic. Macaulay, Athenian Orators.

(b) The grand, impressive, and awe-inspiring in the works of nature or art, as distinguished from the beautiful: occasionally with the indefinite article, to express a particular character of sublimity.

There is a sublime in nature, as in the ocean or the thunder—in moral action, as in deeds of daring and self-denial—and in art, as in statuary and painting, by which what is sublime in nature and in moral character is represented and idealized. Fleming, Vocab. Philos.

(c) That which has been elevated and sublimated to its extreme limit; a noble and exalted ideal.

Your upward gaze at me now is the very sublime of faith, truth, and devotion. Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xxv.

Are you—poor, sick, old ere your time—
Nearer one whit your own sublime
Than we who never have turned a rhyme?
Browning, The Last Ride Together.

sublime (sub-līm'), v.; pret. and pp. sublimed, ppr. subliming. [< ME. sublimen, < OF. sublimer = Sp. Pg. sublimar = It. sublimare, < L. sublimare, raise on high, in ML. also sublimate, < sublimis, raised on high, sublime: see sublime, a.] I. trans. 1. To raise on high.

Thou dear vine, . . .
Although thy trunk be neither large nor strong,
Nor can thy head (not help'd) itself sublime,
Yet, like a serpent, a tall tree can climb.
Sir J. Denham, Old Age, iii.

One mind has climbed
Step after step, by just ascent sublimed.
Browning, Sordello.

2. To sublimate.

Th' austere and ponderous juices they sublime
Make them ascend the porous soil and climb
The orange tree, the citron, and the lime.
Sir R. Blackmore, Creation, ii. 234.

Sub. How do you sublime him?
Face. With the Calce of Egg-shells.
B. Jonson, Alchemist, ii. 5.

3. To elevate; refine; purify; etherealize.

Sublimed thee, and exalted thee, and fixed thee
In the third region, called our state of grace?
B. Jonson, Alchemist, i. 1.

I am sublimed! gross earth,
Support me not! I walk on air!
Massinger, City Madam, iii. 3.

Our Dross but weighs us down into Despair,
While their sublimed spirits daunce i' th' Ayr.
Brome, Jovial Crew, ii.

A judicious use of metaphors wonderfully raises, sublimes, and adorns oratory or elocution.
Goldsmith, Metaphors.

II. intrans. 1. To be affected by sublimation; be brought or changed into a state of vapor by heat, and then condensed by cold, as camphor or sulphur.

Particles of antimony which will not sublime alone.
Newton, Opticks, iii., query 31.

Different bodies sublime at different temperatures, according to their various degrees of volatility.
Pop. Sci. Mo., XXV. 203.

2. To become exalted as by sublimation.

This new faith subliming into knowledge.
E. H. Sears, The Fourth Gospel, p. 172.

Sublimed sulphur. Same as flowers of sulphur. See sulphur.

sublimely (sub-līm'li), adv. In a sublime manner; with exalted conceptions; loftily.

In English lays, and all sublimely great,
Thy Homer warms with all his ancient heat.
Parnell, To Pope.

sublimeness (sub-līm'nes), n. The condition or quality of being sublime; loftiness of sentiment or style; sublimity.

sublimer (sub-lī'mėr), n. [< sublime, v., + -er[1].] One who or that which sublimes; specifically, an apparatus for performing the operation of sublimation. Sublimers are of various forms and materials, according to their special requirements, but each consists essentially of an inclosure of metal, earthenware, or glass, to which heat may be applied, and a condenser or collector for the sublimed substance.

sublimette (sub-li-met'), n. [< F. sublime, high (see sublime), + dim. -ette.] A variety of music-box.

sublimification† (sub-lim″i-fi-kā'shon), n. [< L. sublimis, sublime, + facere, do, make (see -fy), + -ation.] The act of making sublime, or the state of being made sublime.

subliminal (sub-lim'i-nal), a. [< L. sub, under, + limen (limin-), threshold.] Below the threshold or limen, whether of sensation, feeling, attention, etc., or of consciousness in general.

As attention moves away from a presentation its intensity diminishes, and when the presentation is below the threshold of consciousness its intensity is then subliminal, whatever that of the physical stimulus may be.
J. Ward, Encyc. Brit., XX. 49.

sublimitation (sub-lim-i-tā'shon), n. A subordinate or secondary limitation. De Quincey, Style, iii.

sublimity (sub-lim'i-ti), n.; pl. sublimities (-tiz). [< F. sublimité = Sp. sublimidad = Pg. sublimidade = It. sublimità, < L. sublimita(t-)s, loftiness, elevation, < sublimis, raised on high, sublime: see sublime.] 1. The state of being sublime; that character or quality of anything which marks it as sublime; grandeur. Especially—(a) Loftiness of nature or character; moral grandeur: as, the sublimity of an action.

The sublimity of the character of Christ owes nothing to his historians. Luckmintster.

(b) Loftiness of conception; exaltation of sentiment or style.

Milton's chief talent, and, indeed, his distinguishing excellence, lies in the sublimity of his thoughts.
Addison, Spectator, No. 279.

(c) Grandeur; vastness; majesty, whether exhibited in the works of nature or of art: as, the sublimity of a scene or of a building.

It seems manifest that the most perfect realization of structural beauty and sublimity possible to music is attained by instrumental composition.
J. Sully, Sensation and Intuition, p. 217.

There is also the sensation of great magnitude, corresponding to the voluminous in sound, and lying at the foundation of what we term sublimity.
A. Bain, Emotions and Will, p. 217.

2. That which is sublime; a sublime person or thing.

The particle of those sublimities
Which have relapsed to chaos.
Byron, Childe Harold, iv. 54.

3. The highest degree of its highest quality of which anything is capable; climax; acme.

The sublimity of wisdom is to do those things living which are to be desired when dying. Jer. Taylor.

Extensive, intensive, etc., sublimity. See the adjectives.=Syn. 1. See sublime.

sublinear (sub-lin'ē-ār), a. Nearly linear.

Suture sublinear above and slightly channeled below.
Amer. Nat., XXII. 1017.

sublingua (sub-ling'gwä), n.; pl. sublinguæ (-gwē). [NL. (cf. LL. sublinguium, the epiglottis), < L. sub, under, + lingua, the tongue.] A process of the mucous membrane of the floor of the mouth developed between the tip of the tongue and the symphysis of the lower jaw of some animals, as lemurs: it may acquire considerable size, and become denticulated or pectinated.

In many Prosimii and Chiroptera, as also in the platyrrhine apes, there is a process below the tongue which is sometimes double; this is the so-called sublingua.
Gegenbaur, Comp. Anat. (trans.), p. 553.

★sublingual (sub-ling'gwal), a. [=F. sublingual; as sub- + lingual.] 1. Situated under the tongue, or on the under side of the tongue; hypoglossal: specifying various structures. Also subglossal.—2. Of or pertaining to the sublingua.—Sublingual artery, a branch of bifurcation of the lingual artery, arising with the ranine opposite the margin of the hyoglossus muscle, and running on the geniohyoglossus to the sublingual gland.—Sublingual calculus, a salivary calculus of the sublingual gland.—Sublingual cyst. Same as ranula.—Sublingual fossa, a shallow cavity on the inner surface of the inferior maxillary bone above the mylohyoid ridge, and near the symphysis menti, partly lodging the sublingual gland.—Sublingual gland, the smallest salivary gland, lying on the floor of the mouth, discharging by a series of ducts (eight to twenty—the ducts of Rivini) either freely into the mouth or into the duct of Wharton. The longest duct, running along Wharton's duct, and opening with or very near it, is called the duct of Bartholin. See cut under salivary.—Sublingual process, the sublingua.

sublition† (sub-lish'ọn), n. [< L. as if sublitio(n-)*, < sublinere, pp. sublitus, anoint beneath, lay on as a ground-color, prime, < sub, under, + linere, smear: see liniment.] In painting, the act or art of laying the ground-color under the perfect color.

sublittoral (sub-lit'ọ-ral), a. In zoöl., of littoral habits to some extent; living near the seashore, especially, living at a somewhat lower horizon under water than that of the littoral zone.

sublobular (sub-lob'ū-lạr), a. Situated beneath a lobule. Compare interlobular and intralobular.

The intralobular vein . . . opens into the sublobular vein, and thence into the hepatic vein.
Holden, Anat. (1885), p. 597.

Sublobular veins, branches of the hepatic vein on which the hepatic lobules lie and into which the intralobular veins discharge.

sublunar (sub-lū'nạr), a. [= F. sublunaire = Sp. Pg. sublunar = It. sullunare, < L. sub, under, + luna, the moon: see lunar.] Situated beneath or nearer than the moon.

This vast sublunar vault. Milton, P. L., iv. 777.

The city's moonlit spires and myriad lamps
Like stars in a sublunar sky did glow.
Shelley, Revolt of Islam, v. 1.

sublunary (sub'lū-nā-ri), a. and n. [See sublunar.] I. a. 1. Situated beneath the moon.

Each sublunarie bodie is composde
Of the fower elementes, which are proposde
By Nature to that end.
Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 116.

Hence—2. Pertaining to this world; terrestrial; mundane; earthly; worldly: as, sublunary affairs.

All things which are sublunary are subject to change.
Dryden, Parallel of Poetry and Painting.

Am I not now dying a victim to the horror and the mystery of the wildest of all sublunary visions?
Poe, Tales, I. 418.

II.† n. Any worldly thing.

That these sublunaries have their greatest freshness plac'd in only Hope, it is a conviction undeniable; that, upon enjoyment, all our joys do vanish.
Feltham, Resolves, ii. 66.

sublunate (sub-lū'nāt), a. Approaching the form of a crescent; subcrescentic: as, a sublunate mark.

subluxate (sub-luk'sāt), v. t. To dislocate partially.

subluxation (sub-luk-sā'shọn), n. Partial dislocation.

submammary (sub-mam'ạ-ri), a. Situated beneath or below the mammary gland; inframammary; also, more deeply seated than this gland.—Submammary abscess, an abscess between the mammary gland and the chest-wall.—Submammary region. Same as inframammary region (which see, under inframammary).

submargin (sub'mär″jin), n. In entom., a space parallel to a margin and but slightly separated from it.

submarginal (sub-mär'ji-nal), a. In bot. and zoöl., situated near the margin.—Submarginal cells, in entom., a series of cells in the wing of a hymenopterous insect lying behind the stigma and marginal cell.—Submarginal vein or nervure, in hymenopterous insects, one of the transverse nervures separating the submarginal cells. In the Chalcididæ it is a short subcostal vein running from the base of the wing and bending upward to the costal margin, where it takes the name of marginal vein.

submarginate (sub-mär'ji-nāt), a. In entom., bordered with a mark which is slightly separated from the edge.

submargined (sub-mär'jind), a. Same as submarginate.

submarine (sub-ma-rēn'), a. and n. [= F. sousmarin = Sp. Pg. submarino; as sub- + marine.] I. a. 1. Situated or living under or in the sea, either at the bottom or below the surface; below the surface of the sea: as, submarine plants; a submarine telegraph.—2. Occurring or carried on below the surface of the sea: as, submarine explorations; designed for use under the sea: as, submarine armor.—Submarine armor. See armor.—Submarine boat, a boat which is so fitted that it can be propelled when entirely submerged, and carries a sufficient amount of compressed air to admit of remaining below the surface for several hours. The chief object sought is the carrying and operating of torpedoes.—Submarine cable. See cable.—Submarine denudation, denudation which takes place beneath the level of the sea. Some geologists, however, do not clearly distinguish between marine and submarine denudation. In the former, all denudation under or at the edge of the sea is properly included; in the latter, only that which takes place beneath the sea-level.—Submarine forest. See forest.—Submarine gun, a gun adapted for the discharge of projectiles below the surface of the water.—Submarine lamp, mine, etc. See the nouns.—Submarine volcano, a volcano begun beneath the sea, but usually developed by the continued action of the eruptive forces so as to rise above the sea-level, and sometimes to a very considerable height. Some islands thus begun by submarine volcanic agencies have disappeared after a time; others have been permanent. The Mediterranean, the vicinity of the Azores, and the coast of Iceland are localities where submarine volcanic action has been exhibited on a grand scale.

II. n. A submarine plant.

submaster (sub'mȧs″tėr), n. [< OF. soubmaistre, F. sousmaître, < ML. submagister, a submaster, < L. sub, under, + magister, master: see *master*1.] A subordinate or deputy master: as, the submaster of a school.

submaxilla (sub-mak-sil'ạ), n.; pl. submaxillæ (-ē). The under jaw or mandible; especially, the submaxillary bone, or bone of the under jaw.

submaxillary (sub-mak'si-lā-ri), n. and a. I. n.; pl. submaxillaries (-riz). The inferior maxillary bone; the under jaw-bone, inframaxillary, or mandible.

II. a. 1. (a) Of or pertaining to the under jaw or inferior maxilla; forming the basis of the lower jaw, as a bone or bones; mandibular. (b) Of or pertaining to the submaxillary gland: as, submaxillary secretion or saliva.—2. Situated under the jaws: as, the submaxillary triangle.—Submaxillary artery, one of several large branches of the facial artery which supply the submaxillary gland and neighboring parts.—Submaxillary duct, the duct of Wharton.—Submaxillary fossa. See *fossa*1.—Submaxillary ganglion. See ganglion.—Submaxillary gland, a salivary gland situated beneath the lower jaw, on either side, discharging beneath the tongue by Wharton's duct: it is innervated from the chorda tympani and sympathetic nerves. See cut under salivary.—Submaxillary nerve, the inframaxillary nerve.—Submaxillary region. Same as suprahyoid region (which see, under suprahyoid).—Submaxillary triangle. See triangle.—Submaxillary vein, a tributary of the facial vein draining the submaxillary gland.

submaximal (sub-mak'si-mal), a. Nearly but not quite maximal.

Submaximal nerve-irritations.
W. James, Prin. of Psychology, I. 235.

submedial (sub-mē'di-ạl), a. Same as submedian.

submedian (sub-mē'di-ạn), a. Situated near but not at the middle; specifically, in conch., admedian; lying next the middle line on each side, as certain teeth of the radula. Also submedial.—Submedian cell, in entom., same as internomedian cell (which see, under internomedian).

submediant (sub-mē'di-ant), n. In music, the tone of a scale midway between the subdominant and the upper tonic; the sixth, as B in the scale of D. Also called superdominant.

submembranous (sub-mem'brā-nus), a. Somewhat membranous; a little leathery or coriaceous.

submeningeal (sub-mē-nin'jē-ạl), a. Situated beneath the meninges.

submental (sub-men'tal), a. [< submentum + -al.] 1. Situated beneath the chin, or under the edge of the lower jaw. Specifically—2. In entom., of or pertaining to the submentum.—Submental artery, the largest of the cervical branches of the facial artery, given off in the region of the submaxillary gland, and distributed to the muscles of the jaw.—Submental vein, that one of the tributary veins of the facial vein which accompanies the submental artery.

submentum (sub-men'tum), n.; pl. submenta (-tạ). [NL., < L. sub, under, + mentum, the chin: see mentum.] In entom., the proximal one of two basal median parts or pieces of the labium, the other being the mentum; the proximal one of the two basal parts of the second maxilla. See cuts under mouth-part, palpus, Hymenoptera, and Insecta.

submerge (sub-mėrj'), v.; pret. and pp. submerged, ppr. submerging. [< OF. submerger soubmerger, F. submerger = Pr. submerger, submergir, somergir = Sp. sumergir = Pg. submergir = It. sommergere, < L. submergere, summergere, plunge under, sink, overwhelm, < sub, under, + mergere, dip, sink, plunge: see merge.] I. trans. 1. To put under water; plunge.—2. To cover or overflow with water; inundate; drown.

So half my Egypt were submerged, and made A cistern for scaled snakes!
Shak., A. and C., ii. 5. 94.

Submerged bog, submerged forest, a bog or forest sunk below its original position, so that it has become covered by water. Thus, at Clonea, near Dungarvan, in Ireland, there are remains of an ancient pine forest, miles in length, now usually covered with many fathoms of water.—Submerged pump. See *pump*1.

II. intrans. To sink under water; be buried or covered, as by a fluid; sink out of sight.

There is . . . a plot, which emerges more than once, for carrying the King to Rouen; plot after plot emerging and submerging, like ignes fatui in foul weather, which lead nowhither. Carlyle, French Rev., II. iii. 4.

submergence (sub-mėr'jens), n. [< submerge + -ence.] The act of submerging, or plunging under water; the state of being submerged; submersion; hence, a sinking out of sight.

submerse (sub-mėrs'), v. t. [< L. submersus, summersus, pp. of submergere, summergere, submerge: see submerge.] To put under water; submerge. [Rare.]

submerse (sub-mėrs'), a. [< L. submersus, pp.: see the verb.] Same as submersed.

submersed (sub-mėrst'), p. a. In bot., growing under water, as the leaves of aquatic plants. Also demersed and submerged.

submersible (sub-mėr'si-bl), a. [< submerse + -ible.] That may be submersed. The Engineer, LXVII. 59.

submersion (sub-mėr'shọn), n. [= F. submersion = Sp. sumersión = Pg. submersão = It. sommersione, < LL. submersio(n-), summersio(n-), a sinking, submerging, < L. submergere, summergere, submerge: see submerge.] The act of submerging, or the state of being submerged.

submetallic (sub-me-tal'ik), a. Imperfectly or partially metallic: as, the submetallic luster of wolfram.

submiliary (sub-mil'i-ā-ri), a. Slightly smaller than miliary. Lancet, 1891, I.

subminimal (sub-min'i-mal), a. Less than minimal.

subministert (sub-min'is-tėr), v. [< OF. subministrer = Sp. suministrar = Pg. subministrar, < L. subministrare, sumministrare, aid by giving, afford, supply, < sub, under, + ministrare, attend, provide, furnish, < minister, an attendant: see minister.] I. trans. To supply; afford; administer. Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 154.

II. intrans. To subserve; be useful; be subservient. Sir R. L'Estrange.

subministrant† (sub-min'is-trant), a. [< L. subministran(t-)s, sumministran(t-)s, ppr. of subministrare, sumministrare, aid by giving, supply: see subminister.] Subservient; subordinate. Bacon.

subministrate† (sub-min'is-trāt), v. t. [< L. subministratus, sumministratus, pp. of subministrare, sumministrare, aid by giving, supply: see subminister.] Same as subminister. Harvey.

subministration† (sub-min-is-trā'shọn), n. [< OF. subministration = Sp. suministracion = Pg. subministração, < L. subministratio(n-), sumministratio(n-), a giving, supplying: see subministrate.] The act of subministering, or furnishing or supplying. Sir H. Wotton, Reliquiæ, p. 529.

submiss (sub-mis'), a. [= OF. submis, soubmis, soumis, soumi, F. soumis = Sp. sumiso = Pg. submisso = It. sommesso, < L. submissus, summissus, pp. of submittere, summittere, put under, lower, reduce: see submit.] 1. Humble; submissive. [Obsolete or archaic.]

Nearer his presence—Adam, though not awed,
Yet with submiss approach and reverence meek,
As to a superiour nature bowing low.
Milton, P. L., v. 359.

A simple, submiss, humble style.
C. Mather, Mag. Chris., Int.

2†. Low; soft; gentle.

Thus th' old Hebrew muttering gan to speak
In submiss voice, that Isaac might not hear His bitter grief.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, ii., The Fathers.

These are crying sins, and have shrill voices in heaven; neither are they submiss and whispering on the earth.
Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 213.

submission (sub-mish'ọn), n. [< OF. submission, soubmission, soumission, F. soumission = Sp. sumisión = Pg. submissão = It. sommissione, < L. submissio(n-), summissio(n-), a letting down, lowering, sinking, < submittere, summittere, pp. submissus, summissus, put under, let down, lower, reduce: see submit.] 1. The act of submitting, in any sense of that word; especially, the act of yielding; entire surrender to the control or government of another.

Submission, Dauphin! 'tis a mere French word;
We English warriors wot not what it means.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., iv. 7. 54.

'Tis known we are up, and marching. No submission,
No promise of base peace, can cure our maladies.
Fletcher, Loyal Subject, v. 4.

2. The state of being submissive; humility; yielding of opinion; acquiescence.

In all submission and humility
York doth present himself unto your highness.
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., v. 1. 58.

3. Compliance with the commands or laws of a superior; obedience.

This Passage was a little pleasing to the King, to think that he had a Judge of such Courage, and a Son of such Submission. Baker, Chronicles, p. 163.

God will relent, and quit thee all his debt;
Who ever more approves, and more accepts (Best pleased with humble and filial submission).
Milton, S. A., l. 511.

4. In law, an agreement to submit a disputed point to arbitration.—Submission of the clergy, the agreement made by the clergy of the Church of England in convocation in 1532, and embodied in the act of Parliament of 1534 known as the Act of Submission, not to promulgate new canons without the royal assent. =Syn. 4. Compliance, etc. See obedience.

submissive (sub-mis'iv), a. [< submiss + -ive.] 1. Inclined or ready to submit; yielding to power or authority; obedient; humble.

His heart relented
Towards her, his life so late, and sole delight,
Now at his feet submissive in distress.
Milton, P. L., x. 942.

2. Testifying or showing submission of things.

He bring him on submissive knees.
Brome, Antipodes, iii. 2.

He, in delight
Both of her beauty and submissive charms, Smiled with superiour love. Milton, P. L., iv. 498.

The sever'd Bars
Submissive clink again their brazen Portals.
Prior, Second Hymn of Callimachus.

=Syn. 1. Compliant, yielding, obsequious, subservient, tractable, docile; resigned, uncomplaining, unrepining, patient, long-suffering.

submissively (sub-mis'iv-li), adv. In a submissive manner; with submission; with acknowledgment of inferiority; humbly.

submissiveness (sub-mis'iv-nes), n. The state or quality of being submissive, in any sense of the word. Milton, Eikonoklastes, xi.

submissly† (sub-mis'li), adv. Humbly; with submission. Ecclus. xxix. 5.

submissness† (sub-mis'nes), n. Submissiveness; humbleness; obedience. Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 140.

submit (sub-mit'), v.; pret. and pp. submitted, ppr. submitting. [< ME. submitten, < OF. soubmettre, soumettre, F. soumettre = Pr. sobmetre, sotzmetre = Sp. someter = Pg. submetter = It. sommettere, < L. submittere, summittere, put or place under, let down, lower, reduce, put down, quell, < sub + mittere, send.] I. trans. 1†. To put or place under or down.

This said, the bristled throat
Of the submitted sacrifice with ruthless steel he cut;
Which straight into the hoary sea Talthybius cast, to feed
The sea-born nation. Chapman, Iliad, xix. 258.

2†. To let down; cause to sink; lower.

Sometimes the hill submits itself a while.
Dryden, To Lord Chancellor Clarendon, l. 139.

3. To yield; surrender to the power, will, or authority of another; subject: often used reflexively.

Yf ouȝt be mys in word, sillable, or dede,
I submitte me to correccioun without ony debate.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 33.

Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands.
Eph. v. 22.

She sets her forward countenance
And leaps into the future chance, Submitting all things to desire.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, cxiv.

4. To refer to the discretion or judgment of another; refer: as, to submit a controversy to arbitrators; to submit a question to the court.

I submit for your especial consideration whether our Indian system shall not be remodelled.
Lincoln, in Raymond, p. 316.

5. To propose; declare as one's opinion.

Morris submitted that congress should apply to the states for the power of incorporating a bank.
Bancroft, Hist. Const., I. 32.

6†. To moderate; restrain; soften.

What opyn confession of felonye hadde ever juges so accordaunt in cruelte . . . that eyther erroure of mannes wit or elles condicioun of fortune . . . ne submittede some of hem? Chaucer, Boëthius, i. prose 4.

II. intrans. 1. To yield one's self, physically or morally, to any power or authority; give up resistance; surrender.

Courage never to submit or yield.
Milton, P. L., i. 108.

The Mahometans . . . with one consent submitted to the tribute imposed upon them.
Bruce, Source of the Nile, II. 116.

2. To be subject; acquiesce in the authority of another; yield without opposition.

To thy husband's will Thine shall submit. Milton, P. L., x. 196.

Justice is grave and decorous, and in its punishments rather seems to submit to a necessity than to make a choice. Burke, Rev. in France.

No statesman ever enjoyed success with so exquisite a relish, or submitted to defeat with so genuine and unforced a cheerfulness. Macaulay, Horace Walpole.

3. To maintain; declare: usually in formally respectful expression of a decided opinion: as, "That, I submit, sir, is not the case." [Colloq.] =Syn. 1 and 2. To succumb, comply, bow.

submittal (sub-mit'al), n. [< submit + -al.] The act or process of submitting. Amer. Nat., XXII. 262. [Rare.]

submitter (sub-mit'ėr), n. [< submit + *-er*1.] One who submits. Whitlock, Manners of the English, p. 118.

submonish† (sub-mon'ish), v. t. [With term. as in monish, admonish, < L. submonere, summonere, remind privately, < sub, under, + monere, pp. monitus, remind, advise: see monish.] To suggest; reprove gently; advise. Granger.

submonition† (sub-mọ-nish'ọn), n. [< ML. submonitio(n-), < L. submonere, summonere, remind privately: see submonish.] Suggestion; gentle reproof. Granger, On Ecclesiastes, p. 29.

submontagne (sub-mon-tān'), a. Same as submontane. The Nation, March 11, 1869, p. 191.

submontane (sub-mon'tān), a. Situated at or near the base of a mountain or mountain-range; belonging to the foot-hills of a range. See foothill.

Foremost among the wines of Hungary is the sweet Tokay, grown in the submontane district around the town of Tokay. Encyc. Brit., XXIV. 610.

submucosa (sub-mū-kō'sạ), n.; pl. submucosæ (-sē). [NL., < L. sub, under, + mucosus, mucous.] The layer of areolar tissue underlying a mucous membrane; submucous tissue.

submucous (sub-mū'kus), a. 1. Consisting in part of mucus, as a secretion; also, of a character between mucous membrane and ordinary skin, as the red part of the lips.—2. Lying beneath mucous membrane. See submucosa.—Submucous coat. Same as submucosa.—Submucous cystitis, cystitis affecting the submucosa of the urinary bladder.—Submucous râles, râles produced in medium-sized bronchial tubes of an indistinctly mucous character.

submucronate (sub-mū'krọ-nāt), a. In zoöl., imperfectly mucronate; having an imperfect mucro.

submultiple (sub-mul'ti-pl), n. and a. I. n. A number which divides another without a remainder, or is an aliquot part of it: thus, 7 is a submultiple of 56.

II. a. Noting a number or quantity which is contained in another number or quantity an exact number of times: as, a submultiple number.—Submultiple ratio. See ratio.

submundane (sub-mun'dān), a. Existing under the world; underground; subterranean.

submuscular (sub-mus'kụ-lạr), a. Situated beneath a muscle.

subnarcotic (sub-năr-kot'ik), a. Moderately narcotic.

subnasal (sub-nā'zal), a. Situated at the bottom of or under the nose; specifically, situated at the base of the anterior nasal spine.—Subnasal point, in craniom., the middle of the inferior border of the anterior nares, or the root of the anterior nasal spine. See cut under craniometry.

subnascent (sub-nas'ẹnt), a. [< L. subnascen(t-)s, ppr. of subnasci, grow up under or out of, follow after, < sub, under, + nasci, be born: see nascent.] Growing underneath.

Of noxious influence to the subnascent plants of other kinds. Evelyn, Sylva, I. xii. § 1.

subnatural (sub-nat'ū-ral), a. Below nature; infranatural; hypophysical.

Subnecromorphotica (sub-nek″rọ-môr-fot'i-kạ), n. pl. [NL. (Westwood, 1840), < L. sub, under, + Gr. νεκρός, a dead body, + μορφή, form.] A division of neuropterous insects (in a broad sense), including those which have quiescent incomplete pupæ, which, however, acquire the power of locomotion before they assume the perfect state. It corresponds closely with the modern restricted order Neuroptera (as distinguished from the pseudoneuropterous orders).

subnect† (sub-nekt'), v. t. [< L. subnectere, tie under, bind on beneath, < sub, under, + nectere, pp. nexus, bind, tie, fasten. Cf. annect, connect: see also subnex.] To tie, buckle, or fasten beneath. Imp. Dict.

subnervian (sub-nėr'vi-an), a. Same as subneural. Encyc. Brit., XXIV. 679.

subneural (sub-nū'ral), a. Situated beneath a main neural axis or nervous cord: in annelids, specifying that one of the longitudinal trunks of the pseudohemal system which runs beneath the ganglionic cord, as in the earthworm. Encyc. Brit., XXIV. 185.

subnex† (sub-neks'), v. t. [< L. subnexus, pp. of subnectere, tie under: see subnect.] To subjoin; add. Holland, tr. of Plutarch, p. 873.

subnitrate (sub-nī'trāt), n. A basic nitrate, capable of saturating more nitric acid, thus forming a normal nitrate.

subniveal (sub-nī'vẹ-al), a. Same as subnivean.

subnivean (sub-nī'vẹ-an), a. Situated or carried on under the snow. [Rare.]

At a spot where the whiffling winds had left the earth nearly bare [of snow], he commenced his subnivean work. S. Judd, Margaret, I. 17.

Subnobiles (sub-nob'i-lēz), n. pl. [NL., < L. sub, under, + nobilis, noble.] In ornith., in Sundevall's system, a cohort of the order Proceres, established to distinguish the Apterygidæ or kiwis from other ratite or struthious birds.

subnodal (sub-nō'dal), a. In entom., situated behind the nodus, a point near the center of the costal margin, in the wings of certain dragonflies, where the nervures appear to be knotted.

subnormal (sub-nôr'mal), a. and n. I. a. 1. Less than normal; abnormal by defect or deficiency.—2. In math., cut off by the normal.

II. n. That part of the axis of abscissas of a curve which is intercepted between the normal and the ordinate.—Polar subnormal, the line drawn from the origin of polar coördinates perpendicular to the radius vector to meet the normal.

subnormality (sub-nôr-mal'i-ti), n. [< subnormal + -ity.] The state or condition of being subnormal. Lancet, 1890, I. 105.

subnotation (sub-nọ-tā'shọn), n. [< L. subnotatio(n-), a signing underneath, a subscription, < subnotare, pp. subnotatus, note or write underneath, subscribe, < sub, under, + notare, note, mark: see *note*1.] Same as rescript, 1.

subnubilar (sub-nū'bi-lạr), a. [< L. sub, under, + nubila, clouds (see subnuvolar), + *-ar*3.] Situated under the clouds. [Rare.]

The every-day observation of the most unlettered man who treads the fields and is wet with the mists and rains must convince him that there is no sub-nubilar solid sphere. Dawson, Origin of the World, p. 63.

subnude (sub-nūd'), a. In bot., almost naked or bare of leaves.

subnuvolar (sub-nū'vọ-lạr), a. [< L. sub, under, + It. nuvola, a cloud, < L. nubila, clouds, neut. pl. of nubilus, cloudy: see nubilous. Cf. L. subnubilus, somewhat cloudy, < sub, under, + nubilus, cloudy.] Somewhat cloudy; partially covered or obscured by clouds. [Rare.]

Subnuvolar lights of evening. Lord Houghton.

subobscure (sub-ọb-skūr'), a. [< L. subobscurus, somewhat obscure, < sub, under, + obscurus, obscure: see obscure.] Somewhat obscure.

subobscurely (sub-ọb-skūr'li), adv. Somewhat obscurely or darkly. Donne, Devotions, p. 218.

subobtuse (sub-ọb-tūs'), a. Somewhat obtuse.

suboccipital (sub-ok-sip'i-tal), a. 1. Situated under the hindhead, or below (back of) the occipital bone, as a nerve.—2. Situated on the under surface of the occipital lobe of the brain, as a gyre or a fissure.—Suboccipital nerve, the first cervical nerve.—Suboccipital triangle. See triangle.

suboceanic (sub-ō-shē-an'ik), a. Lying beneath the ocean. Nature, XL. 658.

subocellate (sub-os'el-āt), a. Indistinctly ocellate; somewhat resembling an ocellus; in entom., noting spots on the wings of butterflies, etc., surrounded by a ring of another color, but destitute of a central spot or pupil. Also called blind or epupillate spots.

suboctave (sub'ok″tāv), n. 1. An eighth part.

Our gallon, which has the pint for its suboctave.
Arbuthnot, Anc. Coins.

2. In music, the octave below a given tone.—Suboctave coupler, in organ-building, a coupler which adds digitals an octave below those struck, either on the same keyboard or on another.

suboctuple (sub-ok'tū-pl), a. Containing one part of eight; having the ratio 1:8. Bp. Wilkins, Archimedes, vii.

subocular (sub-ok'ū-lăr), a. [< L. subocularis, that is beneath the eye, < sub, under, + ocularis, pertaining to the eye, < oculus, eye.] Situated under the eye; suborbital; suboptic.—Subocular antennæ, in entom., antennæ inserted below the eyes, as in most Homoptera.

subœsophageal, a. See subesophageal.

subopercle (sub'ō-pėr″kl), n. The suboperacular bone, or suboperculum, of a fish.

subopercular (sub-ō-pėr'kū-lăr), a. [< suboperculum + *-ar*3.] Composing a lower part of the operculum or gill-flap of a fish; pertaining to a suboperculum in any sense, or having its character. See cut under opercular.

suboperculum (sub-ō-pėr'kū-lum), n.; pl. *suboperc*ula (-lă). [NL., < L. sub, under, + operculum, a lid, cover.] 1. In ichth., the subopercular bone, an inferior one of four opercular bones usually entering into the composition of the gill-cover, of which it forms a part of the lower margin. See cuts under opercular and teleost. —2. In anat. of the brain, a part of an orbital gyre which to some extent covers the insula or island of Reil in front, and is situated under the præoperculum.

suboptic (sub-op'tik), a. Same as suborbital: as, the suboptic foramen.

suboral (sub-ō'răl), a. Placed under the mouth or oral orifice.

> Other specimens with the characteristic dorsal surface have no suboral avicularium. Geol. Jour., LXVII. 6.

suborbicular (sub-ôr-bik'ū-lăr), a. Almost orbiculate or orbicular; nearly circular.

suborbiculate (sub-ôr-bik'ū-lāt), a. Same as suborbicular.

suborbital (sub-ôr'bi-tal), a. and n. I. a. Situated below the orbit of the eye or on the floor of that orbit; infra-orbital; subocular. Also suboptic, suborbitar.—Suborbital cartilage. See II. —Suborbital foramen, the infra-orbital foramen (which see, under foramen).—Suborbital fossa. Same as canine fossa.

II. n. A special formation of parts below, along the lower border of, or on the floor of the orbit of the eye. (a) A branch of the second division of the fifth nerve, which in various animals, as man, runs under the orbit and escapes upon the cheek through the suborbital foramen. (b) One of a chain of bones or cartilages which in many of the lower vertebrates borders the brim of the orbit below, and corresponds to a like series which may form the supra-orbital margin. The great development of one of these suborbitals is a prominent feature of the mail-cheeked or cottoid fishes. See Scleroparix, and cut under teleost.

subordain (sub-ôr-dān'), v. t. To ordain to an inferior position. [Rare.]

> For she is finite in her acts and powre,
> But so is not that Powre omnipotent
> That Nature subordain'd chiefe Governor
> Of fading creatures while they do endure.
> Davies, Mirum in Modum, p. 24. (Davies.)

suborder (sub'ôr″dėr), n. 1. In biol., a subdivision of an order; a group between an order and a superfamily. See family, 6, and order, n., 5.—2. In arch., a subordinate or secondary order; an order introduced for decoration, or chiefly so, as distinguished from a main order of the structure.

> In the triforium of the choir [of the cathedral of Senlis] the shafts which carry the sub-orders of the arches are comparatively slender monoliths.
> C. H. Moore, Gothic Architecture, p. 202.

subordinacy (sub-ôr'di-nā-si), n. [< subordina(te) + -cy.] The state of being subordinate, or subject to control; subordination. [Rare.]

> He forms a Whole, coherent and proportioned in itself, with due Subjection and Subordinacy of constituent Parts.
> Shaftesbury, Advice to an Author, i. § 3.

subordinal (sub-ôr'di-nal), a. [< NL. subordo (-ordin-), suborder (< L. sub, under, + ordo, order), + -al.] Of the classificatory rank or taxonomic value of a suborder; subordinate to an order, as a group or division of animals; of or pertaining to a suborder.

subordinance† (sub-ôr'di-nans), n. [< subordin(ate) + -ance.] Same as subordinacy.

subordinancy† (sub-ôr'di-nan-si), n. [As subordinance (see -cy).] 1. Subordinacy.—2. Subordinate places or offices collectively.

> The subordinancy of the government changing hands so often. Sir W. Temple.

subordinary (sub-ôr'di-nā-ri), n. In her., a bearing of simple figure, often appearing, but not considered so common or so important as one of the ordinaries. See ordinary, 9. Those bearings which are called ordinaries by some writers and not by others are called subordinaries by these latter: such are the pile, the inescutcheon, the bend sinister, the canton or quarter, the border, the orle, and the point.

subordinate (sub-ôr'di-nāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. subordinated, ppr. subordinating. [< ML. subordinatus, pp. of subordinare (> It. subordinare = Sp. Pg. subordinar = F. subordonner), place in a lower order, make subject, < L. sub, under, + ordinare, order, arrange: see ordinate, order, v.] 1. To place in an order or rank below something else; make or consider as of less value or importance: as, to subordinate temporal to spiritual things.

> So plans he,
> Always subordinating (note the point!)
> Revenge, the manlier sin, to interest,
> The meaner. Browning, Ring and Book, II. 186.

> All that is merely circumstantial shall be subordinated to and in keeping with what is essential. J. Caird.

2. To make auxiliary or subservient to something else; put under control or authority; make subject.

> The stars fight in their courses under his banner, and subordinate their powers to the dictates of his will.
> South, Sermons, VII. 1.

> The branch societies were subordinated to the central one. English Gilds (E. E. T. S.), p. cxxxv.

> There is no known vertebrate in which the whole of the germ-product is not subordinated to a single axis
> H. Spencer, Prin. of Biol., § 50.

Subordinating conjunction. See conjunction, 3.

subordinate (sub-ôr'di-nāt), a. and n. [= F. subordonné = Sp. Pg. subordinado = It. subordinato, < ML. subordinatus, place in a lower order: see subordinate, v.] I. a. 1. In a lower order or class; occupying a lower position in a descending scale; secondary.

> Life is the function of the animal's body considered as one whole, just as the subordinate functions are those of the body's several sets of organs.
> Mivart, Nature and Thought, p. 188.

2. Inferior in order, nature, dignity, power, rank, importance, etc.

> It was subordinate, not enslaved, to the understanding.
> South.

> The great . . . are naturally averse to a power raised over them, and whose weight must ever lean heaviest on the subordinate orders. Goldsmith, Vicar, xix.

Subordinate cause. See cause, 1.—Subordinate clause. (a) In gram., same as dependent clause. (See under clause, 3.) Such a clause has the value of either a noun, an adjective, or an adverb in some other clause to which it is subordinated, being introduced either by a relative pronoun or an adverb, or by a subordinating conjunction. (b) In law, a clause in a statute which, from its position or the nature of its substance, or especially by reason of grammatical relation as above indicated, must be deemed controlled or restrained in its meaning if it conflicts with another clause in the same statute.—Subordinate end. See end.—Syn. Subservient, minor.

II. n. One inferior in power, order, rank, dignity, office, etc.; one who stands in order or rank below another; often, one below and under the orders of another; in gram., a word or clause dependent on another.

> His next subordinate,
> Awakening, thus to him in secret spake.
> Milton, P. L., v. 671.

subordinately (sub-ôr'di-nāt-li), adv. In a subordinate manner; in a lower order, class, rank, or dignity; as of inferior importance.

subordinateness (sub-ôr'di-nāt-nes), n. The state of being subordinate or inferior.

subordination (sub-ôr-di-nā'shon), n. [= F. subordination = Sp. subordinación = Pg. subordinação = It. subordinazione, < ML. subordinatio(n-)*, < subordinare, subordinate: see subordinate.] 1. The act of subordinating, subjecting, or placing in a lower order, rank, or position, or in proper degrees of rank; also, the state of being subordinate or inferior; inferiority of rank or dignity.

> There being no Religion that tends so much to the peace of mens minds and the preservation of civil Societies as this [the Christian religion] doth; yet all this it doth by way of subordination to the great end of it, which is the promoting mens eternal happiness.
> Stillingfleet, Sermons, I. iv.

> In his narrative a due subordination is observed: some transactions are prominent; others retire.
> Macaulay, History.

2†. Degree of lesser rank.

> Persons who, in their several subordinations, would be obliged to follow the example of their superiors. Swift.

3. The state of being under control of government; subjection to rule; habit of obedience to orders.

> Never, never more shall we behold that generous loyalty to rank and sex, that proud submission, that dignified obedience, that subordination of the heart, which kept alive, even in servitude itself, the spirit of an exalted freedom. Burke, Rev. in France.

> They were without subordination, patience, industry, or any of the regular habits demanded for success in such an enterprise. Prescott, Ferd. and Isa., ii. 8.

subordinationism (sub-ôr-di-nā'shon-izm), n. [< subordination + -ism.] In theol., the doctrine that the second and third persons of the Trinity are inferior to God the Father as regards (a) order only, or (b) as regards essence. The former doctrine is considered orthodox, the latter is that of the Arians and others.

> Justin . . . did not hold a strict subordinationism.
> Liddon, Divinity of Our Lord, p. 430.

subordinative (sub-ôr'di-nā-tiv), a. [< subordinate + -ive.] Tending to subordinate; causing, implying, or expressing subordination or dependence.

suborn (sub-ôrn'), v. t. [< F. suborner = Sp. Pg. subornar = It. subornare, < L. subornare, furnish, equip, fit out, incite secretly, < sub, under, + ornare, fit out, provide, ornament.] 1†. To furnish; equip; adorn; ornament.

> Evill thinges, being decked and suborned with the gay attyre of goodly woordes, may easely deceave.
> Spenser, State of Ireland.

2. To furnish or procure unlawfully; procure by indirect means.

> So men oppressed, when weary of their breath,
> Throw off the burden, and suborn their death.
> Dryden, Pal. and Arc., iii. 1039.

3. To bribe or unlawfully procure to some act of wickedness—specifically, in law, to giving false testimony; induce, as a witness, to perjury.

> He had put to death two of the kynges which were the chiefe autours of this newe reuolte, and had suborned Guarionexius and the other kynges to attempte the same.
> Peter Martyr (tr. in Eden's First Books on America, ed. [Arber, p. 84).

> By heaven, fond wretch, thou know'st not what thou speak'st;
> Or else thou art suborn'd against his honour
> In hateful practice. Shak., M. for M., v. 1. 106.

> It was he indeed
> Suborned us to the calumny.
> B. Jonson, Poetaster, v. 1.

> A faithless clerk, who had been suborned . . . to betray their consultations, was promptly punished.
> Bancroft, Hist. U. S., I. 148.

> To bribe a trustee, as such, is in fact neither more nor less than to suborn him to be guilty of a breach or an abuse of trust. Bentham, Introd. to Morals and Legislation, [xvi. 27, note 3.

subornation (sub-ôr-nā'shon), n. [= F. subornation = Sp. subornación = Pg. subornação = It. subornazione, < ML. subornatio(n-), < L. subornare, pp. subornatus, furnish, suborn: see suborn.] 1. The act of procuring wrongfully. —2. The act of procuring one by persuasion, bribery, etc., to do a criminal or bad action; specifically, in law, the crime of procuring perjured testimony; procuring a witness to commit the crime of perjury: more specifically called subornation of perjury.

> The subornation of witnesses or the corrupt sentence of a judge! Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, I. xvii.

> Foul subornation is predominant.
> Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iii. 1. 145.

suborner (sub-ôr'nėr), n. [< suborn + *-er*1.] One who suborns; one who procures another to do a bad action, especially to take a false oath.

> Bacon, Charge at Session for the Verge.

subostracal (sub-os'trā-kal), a. Situated under the shell: noting a dorsal cartilage of some cephalopods.

> A thin plate-like sub-ostracal or (so-called) dorsal cartilage, the anterior end of which rests on and fits into the concave nuchal cartilage. Encyc. Brit., XVI. 675.

Subostracea (sub-os-trā'sē-ă), n. pl. [NL. (De Blainville), < L. sub, under, + NL. Ostracea.] A group of lamellibranchs or bivalve mollusks, so named from their relationship to the oyster family, including such forms as the thorn-oysters (Spondylidæ), etc. See cut under Spondylus.

subostracean (sub-os-trā'sē-an), a. and n. I. a. Of or pertaining to the Subostracea.

II. n. A member of the Subostracea. suboval (sub-ō'văl), a. Nearly or somewhat oval.

subovarian (sub-ō-vā'ri-an), a. Situated below the ovary: specifying certain plates of cystic crinoids.

subovate (sub-ō'vāt), a. Nearly or somewhat ovate.

subovoid (sub-ō'void), a. Somewhat or nearly ovoid.

suboxid, suboxide (sub-ok'sid, -sid or -sīd), n. An oxid which contains less oxygen than the protoxid. [Now rare.]

subpallial (sub-pal'i-al), a. Situated under the mantle or beneath the pallium of a mollusk: as, the subpallial space or chamber.

subpalmate (sub-pal'māt), a. Nearly or somewhat palmate.

subpanation (sub-pā-nā'shon), n. [< NL. subpanatio(n-), < subpanare*, < L. sub, under, + panis, bread: see pain[2]. Cf. impanation.] In the theological controversies of the Reformation, a designation of the view that Christ is under the form of bread and wine in a localized or materialistic sense. See consubstantiation, impanation.

subparallel (sub-par'a-lel), a. Nearly or not quite parallel.

subparietal (sub-pā-rī'e-tal), a. Situated beneath or below the parietal bone or lobe.—Subparietal sulcus, a small inconstant sulcus extending back from the callosomarginal sulcus at its angle.

subpectinate (sub-pek'ti-nāt), a. Imperfectly pectinate, as antennæ which exhibit a form between serrate and pectinate.

subpeduncular (sub-pē-dung'kū-lär), a. Situated below a peduncle of the cerebellum.—Subpeduncular lobe of the cerebellum. Same as flocculus, 2.

subpedunculate (sub-pē-dung'kū-lāt), a. Having a very short stem or peduncle; scarcely pedunculate; subpetiolate. See cut under Polistes.

subpellucid (sub-pe-lū'sid), a. Nearly or almost pellucid; somewhat pellucid or clear.

subpena, subpenal†. See subpœna, subpœnal.

Subpentamera (sub-pen-tam'e-rä), n. pl. [NL.] Same as Cryptopentamera or Pseudotetramera.

subpentamerous (sub-pen-tam'e-rus), a. Same as cryptopentamerous or pseudotetramerous.

subpentangular (sub-pen-tang'gū-lär), a. Irregularly or imperfectly pentagonal; having five sides of different lengths, or five rounded-off angles.

subpericardial (sub-per-i-kär'di-al), a. Situated or occurring beneath the pericardium.

subpericranial (sub-per-i-krā'ni-al), a. Situated or occurring under the pericranium.

subperiosteal (sub-per-i-os'tē-al), a. Situated or occurring beneath the periosteum.—Subperiosteal amputation, an amputation in which the periosteum is dissected up from the bone before the bone is cut, so that the cut end of the bone may be covered by the flaps of periosteum.—Subperiosteal blastema, the osteogenetic layer of the periosteum. Kölliker.

subperiosteally (sub-per-i-os'tē-al-i), adv. In a subperiosteal manner.

subperitoneal (sub-per″i-tō-nē'al), a. Situated beneath the peritoneum—that is, on its outer or attached surface.—Subperitoneal abscess, an abscess situated between the abdominal wall and the parietal peritoneum.—Subperitoneal fascia, the layer of areolar and fatty tissue attaching the peritoneum to the surfaces it covers.

subpermanent (sub-pėr'ma-nent), a. Somewhat permanent; remaining for a time, but with gradual loss of intensity: as, the subpermanent magnetism of iron.

> It was impossible in many cases to avoid imparting subpermanent torsion. Proc. Roy. Soc., XXXVIII. 42.

subperpendicular (sub-pėr-pen-dik'ū-lär), n. A subnormal.

subpetiolar (sub-pet'i-ō-lär), a. In bot., situated under or within the base of the petiole, as the leaf-buds of the plane-tree (Platanus).

subpetiolate (sub-pet'i-ō-lāt), a. 1. In bot., having a very short petiole.—2. In zoöl., somewhat petiolate, as an insect's abdomen; subpedunculate. See cut under Polistes.

subpharyngeal (sub-fā-rin'jē-al), a. Situated beneath or below the pharynx, as a nervous ganglion or commissure.

subphratry (sub'frā″tri), n. A subdivision of a phratry. Encyc. Brit., XXIII. 474.

subphrenic (sub-fren'ik), a. Lying beneath the diaphragm.—Subphrenic abscess, an abscess between the diaphragm and the liver.

subphylar (sub-fī'lär), a. Subordinate to a phylum in taxonomic rank; of the classificatory value of a subphylum.

subphylum (sub'fī″lum), n.; pl. subphyla (-lä). A prime division or main branch of a phylum; a group of a grade next below that of a phylum. Encyc. Brit., XXIV. 810.

subpial (sub-pī'al), a. Situated beneath the pia mater.

subpilose (sub-pī'lōs), a. In bot. and entom., thinly pilose or hairy.

subplantigrade (sub-plan'ti-grād), a. Not quite plantigrade; walking with the heel a little raised.

subpleural (sub-plö'ral), a. Situated beneath the outer or attached side of the pleura.—Subpleural emphysema, that form of interstitial emphysema in which air is found in the subpleural connective tissue.

subplexal (sub-plek'sal), a. Lying under a plexus of the brain. Buck's Handbook of Med. Sciences, VIII. 145.

subplinth (sub'plinth), n. In arch., a second and lower plinth placed under the principal ★one in columns and pedestals.

subpœna, subpena (sub-pē'nä or su-pē'nä), n. [So called from the initial words of the writ in its original form, L. sub pœna, 'under penalty': sub, under; pœnā, abl. of pœna, pain, penalty: see pain[2].] In law, a writ or process commanding the attendance in a court of justice of the person on whom it is served, under a penalty. Specifically—(a) The process by which bills in equity are enforced; a writ, issued by chancery in the name of the sovereign or of the people, commanding the person complained of to appear and answer the matter alleged against him, and abide by the order or decree of the court, under penalty of a fine, etc. Hence—(b) In old Eng. law, a suit in equity. (c) A writ by which the attendance of witnesses is required: used now in all courts. If the writ requires the witness to bring writings, books, or the like with him, it is called a subpœna duces tecum.

subpœna, subpena (sub- or su-pē'nä), v. t. [< subpœna, subpena, n.] To serve with a writ of subpœna; command the attendance of in court by a legal writ: as, to subpœna a witness.

> My friend, who has a natural aversion to London, would never have come up, had he not been subpœnaed to it, as he told me, in order to give his testimony for one of the rebels. Addison, Freeholder, No. 44.

subpœnal†, subpenal† (sub- or su-pē'nal), a. [< subpœna + -al.] Subject to penalty.

> These meetings of Ministers must be authoritative, not arbitrary, not precarious, but subpenall.
> Bp. Gauden, Tears of the Church, p. 483. (Davies.)

subpolar (sub-pō'lär), a. 1. Under or below the poles of the earth in latitude; adjacent to the poles.—2. Beneath the pole of the heavens, as a star at its lowest culmination.

> By a subpolar altitude of the sun, the latitude of 80° 02′ N. was obtained (August 14th, 1872).
> C. F. Hall, Polar Expedition, p. 408.

subpolygonal (sub-pō-lig'ō-nal), a. Nearly or somewhat polygonal.

subporphyritic (sub-pôr-fi-rit'ik), a. Having in an imperfect degree the character of porphyry.

subprefect (sub'prē″fekt), n. [= F. sous-préfet; as sub- + prefect.] An assistant or deputy prefect; specifically, in France, an official charged with the administration of an arrondissement under the immediate authority of the prefect of the department.

subprefecture (sub'prē″fek-tūr), n. A part or division of a prefecture; also, the office or authority of a subprefect.

subprehensile (sub-prē-hen'sil), a. Somewhat prehensile, as a monkey's tail; imperfectly or partially fitted for prehension.

subpreputial (sub-prē-pū'shal), a. Placed between the prepuce and the glans penis.—Subpreputial calculus, a calculus consisting of calcified smegma between the prepuce and the glans penis.

subprimary (sub-prī'ma-ri), a. Under the primary: as, a subprimary school.

subprincipal (sub'prin″si-pal), n. 1. An under-principal.—2. In carp., an auxiliary rafter, or principal brace.—3. In organ-building, a subbass of the open diapason class.

subprior (sub'prī″or), n. [< ML. subprior, < sub, under, + prior, prior.] Eccles., the vicegerent of a prior; a claustral officer who assists the prior.

subprostatic (sub-pros-tat'ik), a. Situated under the prostate gland. Rarely, also, hypoprostatic.

subprovince (sub'prov″ins), n. A prime division of a province; in zoögeog., a division subordinate to a subregion.

subpubescent (sub-pū-bes'ent), a. In entom. ★and bot., slightly or somewhat pubescent.

subpubic (sub-pū'bik), a. Situated beneath the pubes of man, or in the corresponding position in other animals.—Subpubic arch, the arch or angle formed by the junction of the ascending rami of the pubes, broadly arched in the female, more angular and contracted in the male.—Subpubic hernia, obturator hernia. See obturator.—Subpubic ligament, a thick triangular fibrous arch lying along the lower margin of the pubic bones and binding them together.

subpulmonary (sub-pul'mō-nā-ri), a. Situated under (in man) or ventrad of the lungs.

subpurchaser (sub'pėr″chā-sėr), n. A purchaser who buys from a purchaser.

subpyramidal (sub-pi-ram'i-dal), a. Approximately pyramidal. Quart. Jour. Geol. Soc., XLV. 51.—Subpyramidal fossa, a depression in the inner wall of the middle ear, below the pyramid and behind the fenestra rotunda.

subquadrangular (sub-kwod-rang'gū-lär), a. Approaching an oblong form; in form between quadrangular and oval.

subquadrate (sub-kwod'rāt), a. Nearly but not quite square; squarish. Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 238.

subquadruple (sub-kwod'rō-pl), a. Containing one part of four; having the ratio 1:4.

subquintuple (sub-kwin'tū-pl), a. Containing one part of five; having the ratio 1:5.

subradular (sub-rad'ū-lär), a. Situated beneath the radula: specifying a membrane forming part of the odontophore of gastropods.

subramose, subramous (sub-rā'mōs, -mus), a. 1. In bot., slightly ramose; having few branches.—2. In entom., noting antennæ whose joints are furnished with short branches.

subrational (sub-rash'on-al), a. Almost rational.—Subrational function. If X is a rational function of x, and Y a rational function of y, then the equation $X = Y$ constitutes y as a subrational function of x.

subreader (sub'rē″dėr), n. An under-reader in the inns of court. [Eng.]

subrectangular (sub-rek-tang'gū-lär), a. Approaching a right angle in form; a little obtuse or acute.

subrector (sub'rek″tor), n. A rector's deputy ★or substitute.

subregion (sub'rē″jon), n. A subdivision of a region; in zoögeog., a faunal area subordinate in extent to one called a region.—Guinean, Mediterranean, Mongolian, Mozambican subregion. See the adjectives.—New Zealand subregion, a division of the great Australian region, probably more isolated both in time and in space, than any other faunal area of the globe. It consists of the three large islands of New Zealand, with numerous satellites. The fauna is remarkable in the almost entire absence of indigenous mammals, and the presence of many peculiar avian and reptilian types, some of which, like the moas, are recently extinct, and others of which seem doomed to extinction in the near future.—Papuan, Polynesian, Siberian, etc., subregion. See the adjectives.

subregional (sub-rē'jon-al), a. [< subregion + -al.] Of or pertaining to a subregion: as, subregional divisions; subregional distribution of animals or plants.

subreniform (sub-ren'i-fôrm), a. Shaped somewhat like the human kidney.

subrent (sub-rent'), v. t. To sublease.

subreption (sub-rep'shon), n. [= F. subreption = Sp. subrepción = Pg. subrepção, < L. subreptio(n-), surreptio(n-), a stealing, a purloining, < subripere, surripere, pp. subreptus, surreptus, take away secretly, steal, < sub, under, + rapere, take away, snatch: see rapt.] 1. The act of obtaining a favor by surprise or by suppression or fraudulent concealment of facts.

> Lest there should be any subreption in this sacred businesse. Bp. Hall, A Modest Offer.

2. In Scots law, the obtaining of gifts of escheat, etc., by concealing the truth. Compare obreption, 2.

subreptitious† (sub-rep-tish'us), a. Same as surreptitious.

subreptitiously† (sub-rep-tish'us-li), adv. Same as surreptitiously.

subreptive (sub-rep'tiv), a. [< L. subreptivus, surreptivus, false, fraudulent, < subreptus, surreptus, pp. of subripere, surripere, take away secretly, steal: see subreption.] Surreptitious.

> Many conceptions arise in our minds from some obscure suggestion of experience, and are developed to inference after inference by a secret logic, without any clear consciousness either of the experience that suggests or the reason that develops them. These conceptions—of which there are no small number—may be called subreptive.
> Kant, tr. in E. Caird's Philos. of Kant, p. 151.

subresin (sub'rez″in), n. That part of a resin which is soluble only in boiling alcohol, and is precipitated again as the alcohol cools, forming pseudo-crystals.

subretinal (sub-ret'i-nal), a. Lying beneath the retina.

subretractile (sub-rē-trak'til), a. Somewhat retractile: noting the legs of an insect which can be folded against the body, but do not fit into grooves of the lower surface.

subrhomboidal (sub-rom-boi'dal), a. Somewhat rhomboidal or diamond-shaped.

subrigid (sub-rij'id), a. Somewhat rigid or stiff.

subriguous† (sub-rig'ū-us), a. [< L. subriguus, surriguus, watered, < sub, under, + riguus, that waters or irrigates, < rigare, wet, moisten.] Watered or wet beneath; well-watered. Blount, Glossographia.

subrogate (sub'rō-gāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. subrogated, ppr. subrogating. [< L. subrogatus, surrogatus, pp. of subrogare, surrogare (> It. surrogare = Sp. Pg. subrogar = F. subroger), put in another's place, substitute: see surrogate.] To put in the place of another; substitute. See surrogate. Jer. Taylor, Holy Dying, iv. 8.

subrogation (sub-rō-gā′shọn), n. [= F. subrogation = Sp. subrogación = Pg. subrogação = It. surrogazione, < ML. subrogatio(n-), substitution, < L. subrogare, surrogare, substitute: see subrogate.] 1. In law, the act or operation of law in vesting a person who has satisfied, or is ready to satisfy, a claim which ought to be borne by another with the right to hold and enforce the claim against such other for his own indemnification.

Subrogation is "purely an equitable principle, disregarding forms, and aiming to do exact justice by placing one who has been compelled to pay the debt of another as near as possible in the position of him to whom the payment was made." Barton.

2. In a general sense, succession of any kind, whether of a person to a person, or of a person to a thing.

sub rosa (sub rō′zä). [L.: sub, under; rosā, abl. of rosa, a rose.] Under the rose; privately. The rose is the emblem of silence.

subsacral (sub-sā′krạl), a. Situated below (ventrad of) the sacrum; placed in relation with the venter or concavity of the sacrum; presacral (in man): as, subsacral foramina; subsacral divisions of nerves.

subsaline (sub-sā-līn′ or -sā′līn), a. Moderately saline or salt.

subsalt (sub′sâlt), n. In chem., a basic salt; a salt in which less than the normal proportion of the acid radical is present: usually an oxy- or hydroxy-salt, as $Bi_2(HO)_2O(CO_3)$.

subsannation† (sub-sa-nā′shọn), n. [< LL. subsannare, pp. subsannatus, mock, < L. sub, under, + sannare, mock, < sanna, < Gr. σάννας, a mocking grimace.] Derision; scorn; mockery; dishonor.

For Idolatry is as absolute a subsannation and vilification of God as malice could invent, and as ill as if they should call him by the names of all that base liveless matter that they make their Images of, and proclaim him no better than it.
Dr. H. More, Mystery of Iniquity, I. v. § 11.

subsaturated (sub-saṭ′ū-rā-ted), a. Not completely saturated.

subsaturation (sub-saṭ-ū-rā′shọn), n. The condition of being subsaturated.

subscapular (sub-skap′ū-lạr), a. and n. I. a. In anat.: (a) Occupying the under surface of the scapula; of or pertaining to that side of the shoulder-blade which presents to the ribs. (b) Running under or below the scapula, as a vessel or nerve.—Subscapular aponeurosis, the subscapular fascia.—Subscapular artery. (a) The largest branch of the axillary artery, passing along the lower border of the scapula. (b) A small branch of the suprascapular artery.—Subscapular fascia. See fascia.—Subscapular fossa. See fossa[1].—Subscapular muscle, the subscapularis.—Subscapular nerve, one of three branches of the brachial plexus: (a) the upper supplies the subscapular muscle; (b) the lower supplies the teres major muscle; (c) the long or middle supplies the latissimus dorsi, running in the course of the subscapular artery.—Subscapular region. See region.—Subscapular vein, a lateral tributary of the axillary vein.

II. n. A subscapular vessel or nerve, and especially the subscapular muscle. See subscapularis.

subscapularis (sub-skap-ū-lā′ris), n.; pl. subscapulares (-rēz). [NL.: cf. subscapular.] A muscle arising from the venter of the scapula, and inserted into the lesser tuberosity of the humerus.—Subscapularis minor, an anomalous muscle in man, occurring about once in eight subjects, having its origin on the axillary border of the scapula and its insertion above that of the teres major. Also called subscapulohumeralis, infraspinatus secundus.

subscapulary (sub-skap′ū-lā-ri), a. Same as subscapular.

subsclerotic (sub-sklē-rot′ik), a. Beneath the sclerotic.—Subsclerotic dropsy, a morbid collection of fluid between the choroid and sclerotic coats of the eye.

subscribable (sub-skrī′ba-bl), a. [< subscribe + -able.] Capable of being subscribed. Coleridge.

subscribe (sub-skrīb′), v.; pret. and pp. subscribed, ppr. subscribing. [= F. souscrire = Sp. subscribir = Pg. subscrever = It. soscrivere, < L. subscribere, write under, write below, sign one's name, < sub, under, + scribere, write: see scribe.] I. trans. 1. To write beneath: said of what is so written or of the handwriting.

Ador. You'll subscribe
Your hand to this?
Camil. And justify 't with my life.
Massinger, Guardian, iii. 3.

I saw in the Court of the . . . Senate house a goodly statue, . . . with an honourable Elogium subscribed underneath the same. Coryat, Crudities, I. 59.

Hence—2. To sign with one's own hand.

Let your Friend to you subscribe a Female Name.
Congreve, tr. of Ovid's Art of Love.

By extension—3. To give consent to, as to something written, or to bind one's self to, by writing one's name beneath: as, to subscribe a covenant or contract. In law subscribe implies a written or printed signature at the end of a document. See sign, 2.

The Commons would . . . ha e freed the Clergy from subscribing those of the Thirty-nine Articles which related to discipline and Church government.
E. A. Abbott, Bacon, p. 16.

4. To attest by writing one's name beneath.

At last, after many Debatings and Demurs, the Archbishop yields to this also, and subscribes the Ordinance, and sets his Hand unto it. Baker, Chronicles, p. 57.

This message was subscribed by all my chief tenants.
Swift, Story of the Injured Lady.

5. To promise to give or pay, by writing one's name under a written or printed agreement: as, each subscribed $10.—6†. To resign; transfer by signing to another.

The king gone to-night? subscribed his power?
Shak., Lear, i. 2. 24.

7†. To write down or characterize as.

Claudio undergoes my challenge; and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward.
Shak., Much Ado, v. 2. 59.

He who would take Orders must subscribe [himself] slave, and take an oath withall, which, unlesse he took with a conscience that would retch, he must either strait perjure, or split his faith.
Milton, Church-Government, ii., Int.

II. intrans. 1. To promise a certain sum verbally, or by signing an agreement; specifically, to undertake to pay a definite amount, in a manner or on conditions agreed upon, for a special purpose: as, to subscribe for a newspaper or for a book (which may be delivered in instalments); to subscribe to a series of entertainments; to subscribe for railway stock; also, to contribute money to any enterprise, benevolent object, etc. In law the word implies that the agreement is made in writing.

This prints my letters, that expects a bribe,
And others roar aloud, "Subscribe, subscribe!"
Pope, Prol. to Satires, l. 114.

"Yes, I paid it, every farthing," replied Squeers, who seemed to know the man he had to deal with too well to suppose that any blinking of the question would induce him to subscribe towards the expenses.
Dickens, Nicholas Nickleby, xxxiv.

Mrs. H., who, being no great reader, contented herself with subscribing to the Book-Club.
Bulwer, My Novel, i. 12.

2. To give consent; assent as if by signing one's name.

We will all subscribe to thy advice.
Shak., Tit. And., iv. 2. 130.

So spake, so wish'd, much-humbled Eve; but fate Subscribed not. Milton, P. L., xi. 182.

The foundations of religion are already established, and the principles of salvation subscribed unto by all.
Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, ii. 3.

The conclusion of the poem is more particular than I would choose publicly to subscribe to.
Walpole, Letters, II. 37.

3†. To yield; submit.

For Hector in his blaze of wrath subscribes
To tender objects. Shak., T. and C., iv. 5. 105.

Subscribing witness. See witness.

subscriber (sub-skrī′bėr), n. [< subscribe + -er[1].] One who subscribes, in any sense of that word.—The subscriber, the one writing or speaking. [Colloq.]

subscript (sub′skript), a. and n. [= F. souscrit = Sp. suscrito = It. soscritto, < L. subscriptus, pp. of subscribere, write underneath or below: see subscribe.] I. a. Written beneath: as, the Greek iota (ι) subscript, so written since the twelfth century in the improper diphthongs ᾳ (āι), ῃ (ηι), ῳ (ωι): opposed to adscript (as in Αι, Ηι, Ωι). This ι had become mute by about 200 B. C., and was sometimes written (adscript), sometimes omitted.

II. n. Something written beneath. [Rare.]

Be they postscripts or subscripts, your translators neither made them nor recommended them for Scripture.
Bentley, Free-Thinking, § 37.

subscription (sub-skrip′shọn), n. [= F. souscription = Sp. suscripción = Pg. subscripção = It. soscrizione, < L. subscriptio(n-), anything written underneath, a signature, < subscribere, pp. subscriptus, write under, subscribe: see subscript.] 1. The act of subscribing, in any sense of that word.—2. That which is subscribed. (a) Anything underwritten.

The cross we had seen in the subscription.
Bacon, New Atlantis.

(b) The signature attached to a paper. In law subscription implies written signature at the end of a document. See signature, 3, sign, v., 2. (c) Consent, agreement, or attestation given by signature.

The more ye light of ye gospell grew, ye more yey urged their subscriptions to these corruptions.
Bradford, Plymouth Plantation, p. 5.

(d) A sum subscribed; the amount of sums subscribed: as, an individual subscription, or the whole subscription, to a fund.

3. A formal agreement to make a payment or payments. See subscribe, v. i., 1.

Where an advance has been made or an expense or liability incurred by others in consequence of a subscription, before notice given of a withdrawal, the subscription becomes obligatory, provided the advances were authorized by a reasonable dependence on the subscription.
Anderson, Dict. of Law, p. 986.

4†. Submission; obedience.

I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children,
You owe me no subscription. Shak., Lear, iii. 2. 18

[The word subscription is also used attributively, especially as noting what is done by means of the subscribing of money or by money subscribed.

The singers were all English; and here we have the commencement of the subscription opera.
J. Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, II. 29.]

subscriptive (sub-skrip′tiv), a. [< subscript + -ive.] Of or pertaining to a subscription or signature.

I made the messenger wait while I transcribed it. I have endeavoured to imitate the subscriptive part.
Richardson, Clarissa Harlowe, VIII. 78. (Davies.)

subscripture (sub′skrip″tūr), n. A subordinate or lesser scripture. Sir W. Jones, Dissertations Relating to Histories, etc., of Asia, p. 401. [Rare.]

subsecive (sub′sē-siv), a. [< L. subsecivus, more prop. subsicivus, transposed subcisivus, succisivus, that is cut off and left remaining (in surveying lands), hence, left over, remaining (horæ subsicivæ, tempora subsiciva, odd hours, spare time), < subsecare, cut away, < sub, under, + secare, cut: see secant.] Remaining; extra; spare. [Rare.]

Surely at last those "subsecive hours" were at hand in which he might bring to a fruitful outcome the great labour of two-and-thirty years, his never-to-be-written "History of Portugal." Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XLI. 836.

subsection (sub′sek″shọn), n. 1. A part or division of a section: as, a subsection of a learned society; also, the act of subdividing a section. —2. In bot. and zoöl., a division of a genus of less extent than a section, yet above and including one or more species.

subsecute† (sub′sē-kūt), v. t. [< L. subsecutus, pp. of subsequi, follow close after: see subsequent.] To follow so as to overtake; follow closely. Hall, Rich. III., an. 3.

subsecutive (sub-sek′ū-tiv), a. [< subsecute + -ive.] Following in a train or succession. [Rare.] Imp. Dict.

subsegment (sub′seg″mẹnt), n. In entom., same as subjoint.

subsellium (sub-sel′i-um), n.; pl. subsellia (-ä). [< L. subsellium, bench, seat, < sub, under, + sella, a seat, a chair. see sell[2].] Same as miserere, 2.

subsemifusa† (sub-sem-i-fū′sä), n. In medieval musical notation, a thirty-second note.

subsemitone† (sub′sem″i-tōn), n. In medieval music, same as leading note (which see, under leading), or subtonic.

subsensation (sub′sen-sā′shọn), n. An obscure or lesser sensation; a sensation under or beside the obvious one. [Rare.]

As we followed the fortunes of the king, we should all the while have been haunted by a subsensation of how, in Rossetti's weird phrase, his death was "growing up from his birth." The Academy, March 29, 1890, p. 218.

subsensible (sub-sen′si-bl), a. Deeper than the range of the senses; too profound or subtle for the senses to reach or grasp.

Through scientific insight we are enabled to enter and explain that subsensible world into which all natural phenomena strike their roots. Tyndall.

subseptuple (sub-sep′tū-pl), a. Containing one of seven parts; having the ratio 1:7.

subsequence (sub′sē-kwens), n. [< subsequen(t) + -ce.] The state or act of being subsequent or following.

By which faculty [reminiscence] we are . . . able to take notice of the order of precedence and subsequence in which they are past.
N. Grew, Cosmologia Sacra, ii. 3. (Richardson.)

subsequency (sub′sē-kwen-si), n. [As subsequence (see -cy).] Same as subsequence.

Why should we question the heliotrope's subsequency to the course of the sun?
Greenhill, Art of Embalming, p. 336.

subsequent (sub'sē-kwent), a. [< L. subsequen(t-)s, ppr. of subsequi, follow close after, < sub, under, after, + sequi, follow: see sequent.] 1. Following in time; happening or existing at any later time, indefinitely: as, subsequent events; subsequent ages.

This article is introduced as subsequent to the treaty of Munster. Swift.

His [Leochares's] bronze group of the eagle carrying up Ganymede was a bold invention, and as such was duly appreciated, if we may judge from subsequent repetitions of the motive. A. S. Murray, Greek Sculpture, II. 323.

2. Following in the order of place or succession; succeeding: as, a subsequent clause in a treaty.

The subsequent words come on before the precedent vanish. Bacon.

3. Following as a consequence: as, a subsequent illness after exposure.

On any physical hypothesis of the formation of the universe . . . there ought to have been diffused light first, and the aggregation of this about the central luminary as a subsequent process. Dawson, Nature and the Bible, p. 64.

Condition subsequent. See condition, 8 (a).

subsequently (sub'sē-kwent-li), adv. In a subsequent manner; at a later time.

subserous (sub-sē'rus), a. 1. Somewhat serous or watery, as a secretion.—2. Situated or occurring beneath a serous membrane.—Subserous cystitis, cystitis affecting chiefly the subserous tissue of the urinary bladder.—Subserous tissue, the areolar connective tissue situated beneath a serous membrane.

subserrate (sub-ser'āt), a. Somewhat or slightly serrate; serrulate.

subserve (sub-sėrv'), v. [< L. subservire, serve, < sub, under, + servire, serve: see serve.] I. trans. 1. To serve in subordination; be subservient, useful, or instrumental to; promote: scarcely to be distinguished now from serve.

It is a greater credit to know the ways of captivating nature, and making her subserve our purposes, than to have learned all the intrigues of policy. Glanville.

2. To avail: used reflexively. [Rare.]

I not merely subserve myself of them, but I employ them. Coleridge, Literary Remains, I. 373. (Hall.)

II. intrans. To serve in an inferior capacity; be subservient or subordinate.

Not made to rule,
But to subserve where wisdom bears command!
Milton, S. A., l. 57.

subservience (sub-sėr'vi-ens), n. [< subservien(t) + -ce.] Same as subserviency.

There is an immediate and agile subservience of the spirits to the empire of the soul. Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind.

subserviency (sub-sėr'vi-en-si), n. [As subservience (see -cy).] 1. The state or character of being subservient, in any sense.

A seventh property, therefore, to be wished for in a mode of punishment is that of subserviency to reformation, or reforming tendency. Bentham, Introd. to Morals and Legislation, xv. 15.

2. Specifically, obsequiousness; truckling.

There was a freedom in their subserviency, a nobleness in their very degradation. Macaulay, Milton.

subservient (sub-sėr'vi-ent), a. [< L. subservien(t-)s, ppr. of subservire, subserve: see subserve.] 1. Useful as an instrument or means to promote an end or purpose; serviceable; being of service.

There is a most accurate, learned, & critical Dictionary, . . . explaining . . . not onely the termes of architecture, but of all those other arts that waite upon & are subservient to her. Evelyn, To Mr. Place (Bookseller).

All things are made subservient to man. Bacon, Physical Fables, ii., Expl.

The state . . . is not a partnership in things subservient only to the gross animal existence of a temporary and perishable nature. Burke, Rev. in France.

2. Acting as a subordinate instrument; fitted or disposed to serve in an inferior capacity; subordinate; hence, of persons and conduct, truckling; obsequious.

The foreigner came here poor, beggarly, cringing, and subservient, ready to doff his cap to the meanest native of the household. Scott, Ivanhoe, xxi.

Members of Congress are but agents, . . . as much subservient, as much dependent, as willingly obedient, as any other . . . agents and servants. D. Webster, Speech, Pittsburg, July, 1833.

subserviently (sub-sėr'vi-ent-li), adv. In a subservient manner; with subserviency.

subsesquialterate (sub-ses-kwi-al'tėr-āt), a. Having the ratio 2:3.

subsesquitertial (sub-ses-kwi-tėr'shal), a. Having the ratio 3:4.

subsessile (sub-ses'il), a. 1. In bot., not quite sessile; having a very short footstalk.—2. In zoöl., not quite sessile, as an insect's abdomen; subpetiolate. See cut under Polistes.

subsextuple (sub-seks'tū-pl), a. Containing one part in six; having the ratio 1:6.

subside (sub-sīd'), v. i.; pret. and pp. subsided, ppr. subsiding. [< L. subsidere, sit down, sink down, settle, remain, lie in wait, < sub, under, + sedere, sit: see sedent, sit.] 1. To sink or fall to the bottom; settle, as lees from a state of motion or agitation.

This miscellany of bodies being determined to subsidence merely by their different specifick gravities, all those which had the same gravity subsided at the same time. Woodward.

2. To cease from action, especially violent action or agitation; fall into a state of quiet; be calmed; become tranquil; abate: as, the storm subsided; passion subsides.

In every page of Paterculus we read the swell and agitation of waters subsiding from a deluge. De Quincey, Style, iii.

By degrees Rip's awe and apprehension subsided. Irving, Sketch-Book, p. 55.

Old fears subside, old hatreds melt. Whittier, Channing.

3. To fall to a lower level; tend downward; sink; fall; contract after dilatation.

Small air-bladders, dilatable and contractible, capable to be inflated by the admission of Air, and to subside at the Expulsion of it. Arbuthnot, Aliments, ii.

Now Jove suspends his golden scales in air,
Weighs the men's wits against the lady's hair; . . .
At length the wits mount up, the hairs subside.
Pope, R. of the L., v. 74.

The coast both south and north of Callao has subsided. Darwin, Geol. Observations, ii. 272.

4. To stop talking; be quiet; be less conspicuous: as, you had better subside. [Colloq.]

=Syn. 2. Abate, Subside, Intermit (see abate); retire, lull.

subsidence (sub-sī'dens or sub'si-dens), n. [< subside + -ence.] The act or process of subsiding, in any sense of the verb subside.

With poetry it was rather better. He delighted in the swell and subsidence of the rhythm, and the happily-recurring rhyme. Hawthorne, Seven Gables, x.

In certain large areas where subsidence has probably been long in progress, the growth of the corals has been sufficient to keep the reefs up to the surface. Darwin, Coral Reefs, p. 104.

=Syn. Ebb, decrease, diminution, abatement.

subsidency† (sub-sī'den-si or sub'si-den-si), n. [< subside + -ency.] Subsidence. T. Burnet, Theory of the Earth.

subsidiarily (sub-sid'i-ā-ri-li), adv. In a subsidiary manner. Amer. Jour. Philol., IX. 147.

subsidiary (sub-sid'i-ā-ri), a. and n. [= F. subsidiaire = Sp. Pg. subsidiario = It. sussidiario, < L. subsidiarius, belonging to a reserve, < subsidium, a reserve, help, relief: see subsidy.] I. a. 1. Held ready to furnish assistance; held as a reserve.

There is no error more frequent in war than, after brisk preparations, to halt for subsidiary forces. Bacon, Fable of Perseus.

2. Lending assistance; aiding; assistant; furnishing help; ancillary.

We must so far satisfy ourselves with the word of God as that we despise not those other subsidiary helps which God in his church hath afforded us. Donne, Sermons, ii.

No ritual is too much, provided it is subsidiary to the inner work of worship; and all ritual is too much unless it ministers to that purpose. Gladstone, Might of Right, p. 222.

3. Furnishing supplementary supplies: as, a subsidiary stream.—4. Relating or pertaining to a subsidy; founded on or connected with a subsidy or subsidies: as, a subsidiary treaty.—Subsidiary note. Same as accessory note (which see, under note[1]).—Subsidiary quantity or symbol, in math., a quantity or symbol which is not essentially a part of a problem, but is introduced to help in the solution. The phrase is particularly applied to angles in trigonometrical investigations.—Subsidiary troops, troops of one nation hired by another for military service.

II. n.; pl. subsidiaries (-riz). 1. One who or that which contributes aid or additional supplies; an auxiliary; an assistant. Hammond.—2. In music, a subordinate theme or subject, especially in an episode of an extended work.

subsidize (sub'si-dīz), v. t.; pret. and pp. subsidized, ppr. subsidizing. [< subsid-y + -ize.] To furnish with a subsidy; purchase the assistance of by the payment of a subsidy; hence, in recent use, to secure the coöperation of by bribing; buy over. Also spelled subsidise.

He obtained a small supply of men from his Italian allies, and subsidized a corps of eight thousand Swiss, the strength of his infantry. Prescott, Ferd. and Isa., ii. 14.

Pietro could never save a dollar? Straight
He must be subsidized at our expense.
Browning, Ring and Book, I. 155.

subsidy (sub'si-di), n.; pl. subsidies (-diz). [= F. subside = Pr. subsidi = Sp. Pg. subsidio = It. sussidio, help, aid, subsidy, < L. subsidium, troops stationed in reserve, auxiliary forces, help in battle, in gen. help, aid, relief, < subsidere, sit down, settle, remain, lie in wait: see subside.] An aid in money; pecuniary aid.

Out of small earnings [he] managed to transmit no small comforts and subsidies to old parents living somewhere in Munster. Thackeray, Philip, xvi.

Especially—(a) In Eng. hist., an aid or tax formerly granted by Parliament to the crown for the urgent occasions of the realm, and levied on every subject of ability according to the value of his lands or goods; a tax levied on a particular occasion.

That made us pay . . . one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy. Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iv. 7. 25.

Tunnage and poundage was granted for a year, and a new and complicated form of subsidy was voted. Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 334.

(b) A sum paid, often according to treaty, by one government to another, sometimes to secure its neutrality, but more frequently to meet the expenses of carrying on a war.

The continental allies of England were eager for her subsidies, and lukewarm as regarded operations against the common enemy. Sir E. Creasy, Hist. Eng., I. xiii. (Latham.)

(c) Any direct pecuniary aid furnished by the state to private industrial undertakings, or to eleemosynary institutions. Such aid includes bounties on exports, those paid to the owners of ships for running them, and donations of land or money to railroad, manufacturing, theatrical, and other enterprises.

A postal subsidy . . . is simply a payment made for the conveyance, under certain specified conditions as to time and speed, of postal matter. H. Fawcett, Free Trade and Protection (ed. 1881), p. 29.

It seems clear, therefore, that subsidies as a means of restoring American shipping cannot be made the policy of the United States. D. A. Wells, Our Merchant Marine, p. 141.

=Syn. Subsidy, Subvention. In the original and essential meaning of a government grant in aid of a commercial enterprise, these terms are substantially equivalent; but two circumstances lead to some difference in common usage. (a) Such grants being rarely, if ever, made in England or the United States except in aid of the mercantile marine, the establishment of lines of transportation, or the like, subsidy is used more commonly than subvention in reference to such enterprises, while, such grants being frequent in France in aid of the drama and the press, etc., the word subvention is used more commonly than subsidy in application to enterprises connected with literature and the arts. (b) Writers who oppose all such uses of public funds commonly prefer to characterize them as subsidies, while those who approve of them commonly prefer the term subvention.

subsign† (sub-sīn'), v. t. [< L. subsignare, pp. subsignatus, write beneath, subscribe, sign, < sub, under, + signare, set a mark upon, sign: see sign.] 1. To sign; sign under; write beneath; subscribe.

A letter of the Sophie, . . . subsigned with the hands both of the Sophy & his Secretarie. Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 394.

2. To assign by signature to another.

His [Philip III.'s] rents and custome [were] subsigned, for the most parte, for money borrowed. Sir C. Cornwallis, quoted in Motley's Hist. Netherlands, IV. 280.

subsignation (sub-sig-nā'shon), n. [< L. subsignatio(n-), a signature, < subsignare, sign: see subsign.] The act of writing the name or its equivalent under something for attestation; the name so written. [Obsolete or rare.]

The epistle with subsignation of the scribe and notary. Sheldon, Miracles of Antichrist (1616), p. 300. (Latham.)

For a good while after the Conquest the usage of subsignation with crosses was sometimes retained. Madox, Formulare Anglicanum (ed. 1702), p. xxvii.

subsimious (sub-sim'i-us), a. Nearly simious or monkey-like: as, "a subsimious absurdity," Swinburne. [Rare.]

subsist (sub-sist'), v. [< F. subsister = Sp. Pg. subsistir = It. sussistere, sossistere, < L. subsistere, take a stand or position, stand still, stop, stay, remain, continue, < sub, under, + sistere, cause to stand, place: see sist. Cf. consist, desist, exist, insist, persist.] I. intrans. 1. To remain; continue; abide; retain the existing state.

Firm we subsist, but possible to swerve. Milton, P. L., ix. 359.

It is a pity the same fashion don't subsist now. Walpole, Letters, II. 62.

2. To have continued existence; exist.

Can the body
Subsist, the soul departed? 'tis as easy
As I to live without you. Beau. and Fl., Custom of the Country, v. 4.

Those ideas which Plato sometimes contends to be substances, and to subsist alone by themselves. Cudworth, Intellectual System, p. 499.

These enthusiasts do not scruple to avow their opinion that a state can subsist without any religion better than with one. Burke, Rev. in France.

3. To be maintained; be supported; live.

Had it been our sad lot to subsist on other men's charity.
J. Atterbury.

4. To inhere; have existence by means of something else.

Though the general natures of these qualities are sufficiently distant from one another, yet when they come to subsist in particulars, and to be clothed with several accidents, then the discernment is not so easy. South.

II. trans. 1†. To keep in existence.

The old town [of Selivree] is thinly inhabited; the present city, which is a poor place, is to the west of it, and is chiefly subsisted by being a great thorough fare.
Pococke, Description of the East, II. ii. 139.

2. To feed; maintain; support with provisions.

I will raise one thousand men, subsist them at my own expense, and march myself at their head for the relief of Boston. Washington, quoted in Adams's Works, II. 360.

subsistence (sub-sis'tens), n. [= F. subsistance = Sp. Pg. subsistencia = It. sussistenza, < LL. subsistentia, substance, reality, ML. also stability, < L. subsisten(t-)s, ppr. of subsistere, continue, subsist: see subsistent.] 1. Real being; actual existence.

Their difference from the Pharisees was about the future reward, which being denied, they by consequence of that error fell into the rest, to deny the Resurrection, the subsistence spirituall, &c. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 144.

2†. Continuance; continued existence.

This Liberty of the Subject concerns himself and the subsistence of his own regal power in the first place.
Milton, Eikonoklastes, xxvii.

Subsistence is perpetual existence.
Swedenborg, Christian Psychol. (tr. by Gorman), p. 19.

3. That which exists or has real being.—4. The act or process of furnishing support to animal life, or that which is furnished; means of support; support; livelihood.

In China they speak of a Tree called Maguais which affords not only good Drink, being pierced, but all Things else that belong to the subsistence of Man.
Howell, Letters, ii. 54.

Those of the Hottentots that live by the Dutch Town have their greatest subsistance from the Dutch, for there is one or more of them belonging to every house.
Dampier, Voyages, I. 540.

5. The state of being subsistent; inherence in something else: as, the subsistence of qualities in bodies.—Subsistence department, a military staff department in the United States army, which has charge of the purchase or procurement of all provisions for the supply of the army. Its chief officer is the commissary-general of subsistence, with the rank of brigadier-general. —Subsistence diet, the lowest amount of food on which life can be supported in health.—Subsistence stores (milit.), the food-supplies procured and issued for the support of an army. The phrase also covers the grain, hay, straw, or other forage supplied for the sustenance and bedding of animals intended for slaughter in order to provide an army with fresh meat. =Syn. 4. Sustenance, etc. See living.

subsistency (sub-sis'ten-si), n. [As subsistence (see -cy).] Same as subsistence.

A great part of antiquity contented their hopes of subsistency with a transmigration of their souls.
Sir T. Browne.

We know as little how the union is dissolved that is the chain of these differing subsistencies that compound us, as how it first commenced. Glanville.

subsistent (sub-sis'tent), a. [= F. subsistant = Sp. Pg. subsistente = It. sussistente, < L. subsisten(t-)s, ppr. of subsistere, continue, subsist: see subsist.] 1. Continuing to exist; having existence; subsisting.

Such as deny there are spirits subsistent without bodies.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., i. 10.

2. Inherent.

These qualities are not subsistent in those bodies, but are operations of fancy begotten in something else. Bentley.

subsistential (sub-sis-ten'shal), a. Pertaining to subsistence; especially, in theol., pertaining to the divine subsistence or essence.

Having spoken of the effects of the attributes of God's essence as such, we must next speak of the effects of his three great attributes which some call subsistential—that is, his omnipotency, understanding, and will.
Baxter, Divine Life, i. 7.

subsister (sub-sis'tėr), n. [< subsist + *-er*1.] One who subsists; specifically, one who is supported by others; a poor prisoner.

Like a subsister in a gown of rugge rent on the left shoulder, to sit singing the counter-tenor by the cage in Southwarke. Kind-Hart's Dreame (1592). (Halliwell.) subsizar (sub'sī'zär), n. An under-sizar; a student of lower standing than a sizar. Also spelled subsizer.

Friar Bacon's subsizer is the greatest blockhead in all Oxford. Greene, Friar Bacon and Friar Bungay.

How lackeys and subsizers press
And scramble for degrees.
Bp. Corbet, Ans. to A Certain Poem.

subsoil (sub'soil), n. The under-soil; the bed or stratum of earth or earthy matter which lies immediately under the surface soil, and which is a decreasing mixture of it with fragments of the bed-rock. When, as is often the case, it is densely compacted, it becomes what is frequently called hard-pan. In agriculture a great deal depends on the character of the subsoil, more especially as to whether it does or does not permit water to pass through it. See soil.

Subsoil is the broken-up part of the rocks immediately under the soil. Its character of course is determined by that of the rock out of which it is formed by subaerial disintegration. A. Geikie, Encyc. Brit., X. 237.

Subsoil-plow. See plow.

subsoil (sub'soil), v. t. [< subsoil, n.] In agri., to employ the subsoil-plow upon; plow up so as to cut into the subsoil.

The farmer drains, irrigates, or subsoils portions of it.
J. S. Mill.

subsoiler (sub'soi-lėr), n. [< subsoil + *-er*1.] One who or that which subsoils; an implement or part of an implement used in subsoiling. The Engineer, LXX. 472.

subsolar (sub-sō'lär), a. [< L. sub, under, + sol, the sun: see *solar*1.] Being under the sun; terrestrial; specifically, being between the tropics. Fitzroy, Weather Book, p. 71.

subsolary† (sub'sō-lā-ri), a. Same as subsolar.

The causes and effects of all Things done upon this subsolary ball.
A. Brome, Paraphrase on Eccles., i.

subsolid (sub-sol'id), n. A solid incompletely inclosed.

subspatulate (sub-spat'ū-lāt), a. Nearly or somewhat spatulate.

subspecies (sub'spē″shēz), n.; pl. subspecies. [< NL. subspecies, < L. sub, under, + species, species.] In zoöl. and bot., a variety of a species; a climatic or geographical race recognizably different from another, yet not specifically distinguished; a conspecies. The nearest synonym is race. (See *race*3, n., 5 (a) (b).) Subspecies is a stronger and stricter word than variety, though nearly synonymous with the latter in its biological sense; it means decidedly more than strain, sport, or breed in like senses. The interpretation of subspecies and their actual handling in zoological and botanical taxonomy have been much mooted. Such forms are commonly regarded as nascent or incipient species (see species, 5) which have acquired subspecific characters under varying conditions of environment, and whose specific invalidity is determinable by the fact of their intergradation. See intergrade, v. i.

subspecific (sub-spē-sif'ik), a. Of the nature of a subspecies; not quite specific; conspecific.

subspecifically (sub-spē-sif'i-kal-i), adv. As a subspecies. Fisheries of U. S., V. ii. 819.

subsphenoidal (sub-sfē-noi'dal), a. Situated beneath or on the under side of the sphenoid.

subsphere (sub'sfēr), n. A solid imperfectly or approximately spherical.

subspherical (sub-sfer'i-kal), a. Imperfectly spherical; of a form approaching that of a sphere.

subspherically (sub-sfer'i-kal-i), adv. In the form of a subsphere. Quart. Jour. Geol. Soc., XLIV. 150.

subspinous (sub-spī'nus), a. 1. Somewhat spinous or prickly; like a spine to some extent: as, subspinous hairs in the pelage of a mammal. —2. Situated under (ventrad of) the spinal column; hypaxial with reference to the backbone; subvertebral.—3. Situated or occurring below, beneath, or on the under side of a spine, as (1) of a vertebra, or (2) of the scapula; infraspinous: as, a subspinous muscle (the infraspinatus) —Subspinous dislocation of the humerus, a dislocation in which the head of the humerus rests beneath the spine of the scapula.—Subspinous fossa, the fossa below the spine of the scapula; the infraspinous fossa.

subspiral (sub-spī'ral), a. Somewhat spiral; especially, in conch., noting the opercula of some shells which are faintly or indistinctly marked on one side with a spiral line, or this line itself. See cut under operculum.

subsplenial (sub-splē'ni-al), a. Situated under the splenium of the corpus callosum: noting certain cerebral gyres.

subst. An abbreviation of (a) substantive and ★(b) substitute.

substage (sub'stāj), n. An attachment to the compound microscope, placed beneath the ordinary stage, and used to support the achromatic condenser, the polarizing prism, etc. It is usually arranged with a rack-and-pinion movement, centering screws, etc., by which the position may be adjusted: and in the swinging substage there is an arc-shaped arm upon which the support holding the condenser can be moved, so as to give very oblique illumination when desired.

substalagmite (sub-stā-lag'mīt), n. A name used by Nelson for the compact deposit of carbonate of lime, without crystalline structure, filling crevices in the soft calcareous sandstone of Bermuda. Similar deposits when crystalline are called by him stalagmite. Trans. Geol. Soc. London, 1849, V. 106.

substalagmitic (sub-stal-ag-mit'ik), a. [< substalagmite + -ic.] Relating to or consisting of substalagmite. Darwin, Geol. Observations, I. vii. 162.

★substance (sub'stans), n. [< ME. substance, substaunce, < OF. substance, substaunce, F. substance = Sp. substancia, sustancia = Pg. substancia = It. sustanza, sustanzia, < L. substantia, being, essence, material, < substan(t-)s, ppr. of substare, stand under or among, be present, hold out, < sub, under, + stare, stand: see stand.] 1. That which exists by itself, and in which accidents inhere; that which receives modifications, and is not itself a mode; that which corresponds, in the reality of things, to the subject in logic. Aristotle and Kant agree in making the conception of substance essentially the same as that of a subject of predication. But it is difficult to find a property by which substances may be recognized; for the above definition seems to afford none. Many philosophers hold that whatever is perdurable is substance. This, however, would include mechanical energy. Indeed, since every physical law can be stated in the form of an equation, and since that equation must have a constant term, it follows that every absolute uniformity of nature must consist in the perdurability of some quantity. Aristotle makes substances proper, called first substances, to be things individual; but this comports with few philosophical systems. Thus, in the medieval development of Aristotelianism, scientific propositions were regarded as universal statements concerning natures, so that the true subjects, or substances, were universal. Moreover, to make individuality the criterion of substance would seem to make space, as the source of individuality, the only first substance. At any rate, under that view, spatial positions would be substances in a preëminent sense. Others, remarking that the parts of space are not distinct in themselves, apart from their relations to material things, make self-existence, or the being distinct from all other things, not by virtue of modifications or characters, but by the thing's own nature, or arbitrary extrusion of itself, to be the chief mark of a substance, which would thus be most simply defined as an independent entity. Substance and essence are nearly synonymous, except that the latter cannot appropriately be used to designate an individual and lifeless thing.

They add . . . that as he [Christ] coupled the substance of his flesh and the substance of bread together, so we together should receive both.
Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v. 67.

Since the substance of your perfect self
Is else devoted, I am but a shadow;
And to your shadow will I make true love.
Shak., T. G. of V., iv. 2. 124.

A substance is a being subsisting of itself and subject to accidents. To subsist by itself is nothing else than not to be in anything as in a subject; and it agrees to all substances, even to God, but to be subject to accidents only to finite; for God is not subject to accidents. Substance is either first or second. The first is a singular substance, or that which is not said of a subject, as Alexander, Bucephalus. The second is that which is said of a subject, as man, horse. For man is said of Alexander and Philip, and horse of Bucephalus and Cyllarus.
Burgersdicius, tr. by a Gentleman, i. 4.

I confess there is another idea which would be of general use for mankind to have, as it is of general talk as if they had it; and that is the idea of substance, which we neither have, nor can have, by sensation or reflection. If nature took care to provide us any ideas, we might well expect they should be such as by our own faculties we cannot procure to ourselves: but we see on the contrary that since by those ways whereby our ideas are brought into our minds this is not, we have no such clear idea at all, and therefore signify nothing by the word substance but only an uncertain supposition of we know not what, i. e., of some thing whereof we have no particular distinct positive idea, which we take to be the substratum or support, of those ideas we do know. . . . Had the poor Indian philosopher (who imagined that the earth also wanted something to bear it up but thought of this word substance, he needed not to have been at the trouble to find an elephant to support it, and a tortoise to support his elephant: the word substance would have done it effectually. And he that inquired might have taken it for as good an answer from an Indian philosopher, that substance, without knowing what it is, is that which supports the earth, as we take it for a sufficient answer and good doctrine from our European philosophers that substance, without knowing what it is, is that which supports accidents. So that of substance we have no idea of what it is, but only a confused obscure one of what it does.
Locke, Human Understanding, i. 4, § 18, and ii. 13, § 19.

Substance, if we leave out the sensuous condition of permanence, would mean nothing but a something that may be conceived as a subject, without being the predicate of anything else.
Kant, Critique of Pure Reason, tr. by Müller, II. 130.

2. The real or essential part; the essence.

And wel I woot the substance is in me,
If any thing shal wel reported be.
Chaucer, Prol. to Nun's Priest's Tale, l. 37.

Miserable bigots, . . . who hate sects and parties different from their own more than they love the substance of religion. Burke, Rev. in France.

At the close of the [seventeenth] century, . . . the sovereign retained the shadow of that authority of which the Tudors had held the substance.
Macaulay, Sir William Temple.

All the forms are fugitive,
But the substances survive.
Emerson, Woodnotes, ii.

3. In theol., the divine being or essence, common to the three persons of the Trinity.

One Lord Jesus Christ, . . . being of one substance with the Father. Nicene Creed.

4†. The character of being a substance, in sense 1; substantiality.

Thou ground of our substaunce,
Continue on us thy pitous eyen clere.
Chaucer, A. B. C., l. 87.

5. The meaning expressed by any speech or writing, or the purport of any action, as contradistinguished from the mode of expression or performance.

Now haue I here rehersid in substaunce
xv kynges, as shortly as I myght,
With ther powre and all ther hoole puysaunce.
Generydes (E. E. T. S.), l. 1968.

Unto your grace do I in chief address
The substance of my speech.
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., iv. 1. 32.

It seems swearing of Fealty was with the Scots but a Ceremony without Substance, as good as nothing.
Baker, Chronicles, p. 97.

6. Substantiation; that which establishes or gives firm support.

Faith is the substance (margin, ground or confidence) [assurance (margin, giving substance to), R. V.] of things hoped for. Heb. xi. 1.

7. Any particular kind of corporeal matter; stuff; material; part; body; specifically, a chemical species.

Sir, there she stands.
If aught within that little seeming substance
. . . may fitly like your grace,
She 's there, and she is yours. Shak., Lear, i. 1. 201.

All of one nature, of one substance bred.
Shak., 1 Hen. IV., i. 1. 11.

Books are as meats and viands are, some of good, some of evil substance. Milton, Areopagitica, p. 16.

It [chemistry] tells us that everything which exists here is really made up of one or more of only sixty-three different things; that the whole of the animal kingdom, the vegetable kingdom, the mineral kingdom, is made up of only sixty-three different substances.
J. N. Lockyer, Spect. Anal., p. 166.

8. Wealth; means; good estate: as, a man of substance.

His substance also was seven thousand sheep, and three thousand camels. Job i. 3.

I did not think there had been a merchant
Liv'd in Italy of half your substance.
Webster, Devil's Law-Case, i. 1.

9†. Importance.

And for as much as hit is don me to understande that there is a greet straungenesse betwix my right trusty frend John Radcliff and you, withoute any matier or cause of substance, as I am lerned.
Paston Letters, III. 426.

10†. The main part; the majority.

Finally, what wight that it withseyde,
It was for noght — it moste ben, and sholde,
For substaunce of the parlement it wolde.
Chaucer, Troilus, iv. 217.

Colloid substance. See colloid. — Cortical substance of the kidney, the outer part of the kidney-substance, which contains the glomeruli. — Cortical substance of the teeth, the cementum of the teeth. — First substance, an individual thing. — Intervertebral substance. See intervertebral. — Nervous substance. See nervous. — Second substance, a natural class. See second[1]. — Substance of Rolando. Same as substantia gelatinosa Rolandi. = Syn. 2. Pith, gist, soul.

substance† (sub'stans), v. t. [< substance, n.] To furnish with substance or property; enrich.
Chapman, Odyssey, iv.

substanceless (sub'stans-les), a. [< substance + -less.] Having no substance; unsubstantial.
Coleridge, Human Life.

substant (sub'stant), a. [< L. substan(t-)s, ppr. of substare, be present, hold out: see substance.] Constituting substance. [Rare.]

★ Its [a glacier's] substant ice curls freely, molds, and breaks itself like water. The Century, XXVII. 146.

substantia (sub-stan'shiä), n. [L.: see substance.] Substance: used chiefly in a few anatomical phrases. — Substantia cinerea gelatinosa. Same as substantia gelatinosa Rolandi. — Substantia eburnea, ossea, vitrea. See tooth. — Substantia ferruginea, a group of pigmented ganglion-cells on either side of the middle line (just below the surface of the floor) of the anterior part of the fourth ventricle. Seen from the surface, it is the locus cæruleus. — Substantia gelatinosa centralis, the neuroglia which backs the layer of columnar epithelial cells lining the central canal of the spinal cord. — Substantia gelatinosa posterior or Rolandi, a part of the caput of the posterior cornu of gray matter of the spinal cord, near the tip of that cornu, having a peculiar semitransparent appearance. Also called formatio gelatinosa Rolandi. — Substantia nigra, a region, marked by dark pigmented cells, separating the crusta from the tegmentum of the crus cerebri. Also called substantia nigra Soemmeringi, stratum nigrum, stratum intermedium, and locus niger. — Substantia reticularis. Same as reticular formation (which see, under reticular). — Substantia spongiosa, that part of the gray matter of the spinal cord which is not substantia gelatinosa centralis or posterior.

substantial (sub-stan'shal), a. and n. [< ME. substancial, < OF. substanciel, F. substantiel = Sp. Pg. substancial = It. sustanziale, < L. substantialis, of or pertaining to the substance, essential, < substantia, substance, material: see substance.] I. a. 1. Pertaining to or of the nature of substance; being a substance; real; actually existing; true; actual; not seeming or imaginary; not illusive.

If this Atheist would have his chance or fortune to be a real and substantial agent, as the vulgar seem to have commonly apprehended, . . . he is . . . more stupid and more supinely ignorant than those vulgar.
Bentley, Eight Boyle Lectures, v.

All this is but a dream,
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.
Shak., R. and J., ii. 2. 141.

The sun appears to be flat as a plate of silver . . .: the moon appears to be as big as the sun, and the rainbow appears to be a large substantial arch in the sky; all which are in reality gross falsehoods. Watts, Logic, Int.

2. Having essential value; genuine; sound; sterling.

The matter of the point controverted is great, but it is driven to an over-great subtility and obscurity, so that it becometh a thing rather ingenious than substantial.
Bacon, Unity in Religion (ed. 1887).

This he looks upon to be sound learning and substantial criticism. Addison, Tatler, No. 158.

3. Having firm or good material; strong; stout; solid: as, substantial cloth.

Most ponderous and substantial things.
Shak., M. for M., iii. 2. 290.

There are, by the direction of the Lawgiver, certain good and substantial steps placed even through the very midst of this slough [of Despond].
Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, i.

4. Possessed of considerable substance, goods, or estate; moderately wealthy; well-to-do.

She has, 'mongst others, two substantial suitors.
Middleton, The Widow, i. 2.

Pray take all the care you can to inquire into the value, and set it at the best rate to substantial people.
Swift, To Dr. Sheridan, June 29, 1725.

5. Real or true in the main or for the most part: as, substantial success.

Substantial agreement between all as to the points discussed. The Century, XXXIX. 563.

6. Of considerable amount: as, a substantial gift; substantial profit. — 7†. Capable of being substantiated or proved.

It is substantiall;
For, that disguize being on him which I wore,
It will be thought I, which he calls the Pandar,
Did kil the Duke and fled away in his apparell, Leauing him so disguiz'd to auoid swift pursuite.
C. Tourneur, Revenger's Tragedy, iv. 2.

8. Vital; important.

Christes church can neuer erre in any substanciall point that God would haue vs bounden to beleue.
Sir T. More, Works, p. 163.

9. In law, pertaining to or involving the merits or essential right, in contradistinction to questions of form or manner. Thus, a substantial performance of a contract is one which fulfils reasonably well all the material and essential stipulations, though it may be deficient in respect of punctuality or departure from minor details of manner for which moderate deductions from the price would compensate. So, in litigation, the right of trial by jury is a substantial right, but the order in which evidence shall be adduced is not.

10. Pertaining to the substance or tissue of any part or organ.

Transition from substantial to membranous parietes.
Buck's Handbook of Med. Sciences, VIII. 120.

Substantial being, division, form, mode, etc. See the nouns.

II. n. 1. That which has a real existence; that which has substance. — 2. That which has real practical value.

A large and well filled basket . . . contained substantials and delicacies . . . especially helpful.
New York Evangelist, Dec. 2, 1886.

3. An essential part.

Although a custom introduced against the substantials of an appeal be not valid, as that it should not be appealed to a superior but to an inferior judge, yet a custom may be introduced against the accidentals of an appeal.
Ayliffe, Parergon.

substantialia (sub-stan-shi-ā'li-ä), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of L. substantialis: see substantial.] In Scots law, those parts of a deed which are essential to its validity as a formal instrument.

substantialism (sub-stan'shal-izm), n. The doctrine that behind phenomena there are substantial realities, or real substances, whether mental or corporeal.

substantialist (sub-stan'shal-ist), n. One who adheres to the doctrine of substantialism.

Philosophers, as they affirm or deny the authority of consciousness in guaranteeing a substratum or substance to the manifestations of the ego and non-ego, are divided into realists or substantialists and into nihilists or non-substantialists. Sir W. Hamilton, Metaph., xvi.

★ substantiality (sub-stan-shi-al'i-ti), n. [< F. substantialité = It. sustanzialità, < L. substantialita(t-)s, the quality of being substantial or essential, < substantialis, substantial: see substantial.] 1. The character of being substantial, in any sense; the having of the function of a substance in upholding accidents.

The soul is a stranger to such gross substantiality.
Glanville, Vanity of Dogmatizing, iv.

Many of the lower animals build themselves dwellings that excel in substantiality . . . the huts or hovels of men.
Lindsay, Mind in the Lower Animals, I. 113. (Encyc. Dict.)

We understand his lordship very well; he means a particular providence and a future state, the moral attributes of the Deity and the substantiality of the soul.
Warburton, Bolingbroke's Philosophy, iii.

2. Substance; essence.

I shall know whether all souls came from Adam's own substantiality, and whether there be more substance in all than in that one. Baxter, Dying Thoughts.

substantialize (sub-stan'shal-īz), v. t.; pret. and pp. substantialized, ppr. substantializing. [< substantial + -ize.] To render substantial; give reality to.

I liked well to see that strange life, which even the stout, dead-in-earnest little Bohemian musicians, piping in the centre of the Piazza, could not altogether substantialize.
Howells, Venetian Life, iv.

substantially (sub-stan'shal-i), adv. 1. In the manner of a substance; with reality of existence; truly; really; effectually.

In him all his Father shone Substantially express'd. Milton, P. L., iii. 140.

Be substantially great in thyself, and more than thou appearest unto others. Sir T. Browne, Christ. Mor., i. 19.

2. In a substantial manner; strongly; solidly.

To know . . . what good laws are wanting, and how to frame them substantially, that good Men may enjoy the freedome which they merit. Milton, Hist. Eng., iii.

Pleasing myself in my own house and manner of living more than ever I did, by seeing how much better and more substantially I live than others do. Pepys, Diary, I. 421.

3. In substance; in the main; essentially; by including the material or essential part: as, the two arguments are substantially the same.

A king with a life revenue and an unchecked power of exacting money from the rich is substantially an absolute sovereign. Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 373.

substantialness (sub-stan'shal-nes), n. The state or quality of being substantial, in any sense.

substantiate (sub-stan'shi-āt), v. t.; pret. and pp. substantiated, ppr. substantiating. [< ML. substantiatus, pp. of substantiare (> It. sustanziare, sostanziare = Sp. Pg. substanciar), < L. substantia, substance: see substance.] 1. To make to exist; make real or actual.

The accidental of any act is said to be whatever advenes to the act itself already substantiated. Ayliffe, Parergon.

2. To establish by proof or competent evidence; verify; make good: as, to substantiate a charge or an allegation; to substantiate a declaration.

Observation is in turn wanted to direct and substantiate the course of experiment. Coleridge.

3. To present as having substance; body forth.

Every man feels for himself, and knows how he is affected by particular qualities in the persons he admires, the impressions of which are too minute and delicate to be substantiated in language. Boswell, Johnson, I. 129.

As many thoughts in succession substantiate themselves, we shall by and by stand in a new world of our own creation. Emerson, Friendship.

★ substantiation (sub-stan-shi-ā'shon), n. [< substantiate + -ion.] The act of substantiating or giving substance to anything; the act of proving; evidence; proof.

This substantiation of shadows.
Lowell, Study Windows, p. 382.

The fact as claimed will find lasting substantiation.
The American, VIII. 379.

substantival (sub-stan-tī'val or sub'stan-tī'val), a. [< LL. substantivalis, substantival: see substantive.] 1. Pertaining to or having the character of a substantive.

There remain several substantival and verbal formations for which a satisfactory explanation was not reached.
Amer. Jour. Philol., VI. 450.

2. Independent or self-dependent.

The real is individual, self-existent, substantival.
Mind, IX. 128.

★ substantive (sub'stan-tiv), a. and n. [I. a. = F. substantif = Sp. Pg. substantivo = It. sustantivo, < LL. substantivus, self-existent, substantive (substantivum verbum, the substantive verb), ML. also having substance, substantial, < L. substantia, substance, reality: see substance. II. n. = F. substantif = Sp. Pg. substantivo = It. sustantivo = D. substantief = G. Sw. Dan. substantiv, < NL. substantivum, sc. nomen, a substantive name, a noun substantive (a noun), i. e. the name of a thing, as distinguished from

L. adjectivum, sc. nomen, an adjective name, a noun adjective (an adjective), the name of an attribute.] I. a. 1. Betokening or expressing existence: as, the substantive verb.—2. Depending on itself; independent; self-dependent; hence, individual.

He considered how sufficient and substantive this land was to maintain itself, without any aid of the foreigner.
Bacon.

Many . . . thought it a pity that so substantive and rare a creature should . . . be only known . . . as a wife and mother. George Eliot, Middlemarch, Finale.

3. Substantial; solid; enduring; firm; permanent; real.

The trait which is truly most worthy of note in the polities of Homeric Greece is . . . the substantive weight and influence which belonged to speech as an instrument of government.
Gladstone, Studies on Homer (ed. 1858), III. 102.

As to . . . the substantive value of historical training, opinions will still differ.
Stubbs, Medieval and Modern Hist., p. 35.

All this shows that he [Racine] had already acquired some repute as a promising novice in letters, though he had as yet done nothing substantive. Encyc. Brit., XX. 204.

4. Independent; not to be inferred from something else, but itself explicitly and formally expressed.

She [Elizabeth] then, by a substantive enactment, declaring her governorship of the Church.
Nineteenth Century, XXVI. 891.

The decisions of the chair . . . could be brought before the House only by way of a substantive motion, liable to amendment and after due notice.
Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XXXIX. 265.

5. In gram., of the nature of a noun, usable as subject or object of a verb and in other noun constructions: as, a substantive word; a substantive pronoun; a substantive clause.—Substantive colors, colors which, in the process of dyeing, become fixed or permanent without the intervention of other substances, in distinction from adjective colors, which require the aid of mordants to fix them.—Substantive law. See law[1].—Substantive verb, the verb to be.

II. n. 1. In gram., a noun; a part of speech that can be used as subject or as object of a verb, be governed by a preposition, or the like. The term noun, in older usage, included both the "noun substantive" and the "noun adjective": it is now much more common to call the two respectively the substantive, or the noun simply, and the adjective. See noun. Abbreviated s., subst.

2†. An independent thing or person.

Every thing is a total or substantive in itself.
Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii.

K. John, being a Substantive of himself, hath a Device in his Head to make his Subjects as willing to give him Money as he was to have it. Baker, Chronicles, p. 70.

substantive (sub'stan-tiv), v. t.; pret. and pp. substantived, ppr. substantiving. [< substantive, n.] To convert into or use as a substantive. [Rare.]

Wherefore we see that the word δαιμόνιον, as to its grammatical form, is not a diminutive, as some have conceived, but an adjective substantiv'd, as well as το θεῖον is.
Cudworth, Intellectual System, p. 264.

substantively (sub'stan-tiv-li), adv. 1. In a substantive manner; in substance; essentially: as, a thing may be apparently one thing and substantively another.—2. In gram., as a substantive or noun: as, an adjective or a pronoun used substantively.

substantiveness (sub'stan-tiv-nes), n. The state of being substantive. J. H. Newman, Development of Christ. Doct., i. § 1. [Rare.]

substantivize (sub'stan-ti-vīz), v. t.; pret. and pp. substantivized, ppr. substantivizing. [< substantive + -ize.] To make a substantive of; use as a substantive.

Perhaps we have here the forerunners of the substantivized être, pouvoir, vouloir, savoir, etc.
Amer. Jour. Philol., VIII. 104.

★substation (sub'stā″shon), n. A subordinate station: as, a police substation.

substernal (sub-stėr'nal), a. Situated beneath the sternum; lying under the breast-bone.

substile†, n. See substyle.

substitute (sub'sti-tūt), v. t.; pret. and pp. substituted, ppr. substituting. [< L. substitutus, pp. of substituere (> It. sustituire = Sp. sustituir = Pg. substituir = F. substituer), place under or next to, put instead of, substitute, < sub, under, + statuere, set up, station, cause to stand: see statute. Cf. constitute, institute.] 1. To put in the place of another; put in exchange.

For real wit he is obliged to substitute vivacity.
Goldsmith, The Bee, No. 1.

2†. To appoint; invest with delegated authority.

But who is substituted 'gainst the French
I have no certain notice.
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., i 3. 84.

Their request being effected, he substituted Mr. Scrivener his deare friend in the Presidency.
Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 180.

Substituted service. See service[1].

substitute (sub'sti-tūt), a. and n. [< F. substitut = Pr. sustituit = Sp. Pg. substituto = It. sustituito (= D. substituut = G. Sw. Dan. substitut, n.), < L. substitutus, pp. of substituere, substitute: see substitute, v.] I. a. Put in the place or performing the functions of another; substituted.

It may well happen that this pope may be deposed, & another substitute in his rome.
Sir T. More, Works, p. 1427.

II. n. 1. A person put in the place of another; one acting for or in the room of another; theat., an understudy; specifically (milit.), one who for a consideration serves in an army or navy in the place of a conscript; also, a thing serving the purpose of another.

That controlled self-consciousness of manner which is the expensive substitute for simplicity.
George Eliot, Middlemarch, xliii.

2. In calico-printing, a solution of phosphate of soda and phosphate of lime with a little glue or other form of gelatin, used as a substitute for cow-dung.—Substitutes in an entail, in law, those heirs who are called to the succession on the failure of others.—Syn. 1. Proxy, alternate.

★substitution (sub-sti-tū'shon), n. [< F. substitution = Sp. sustitución = Pg. substituição = It. sustituzione, < L. substitutio(n-), a putting in place of another, substitution, < substituere, pp. substitutus, substitute: see substitute.] 1. The act of substituting, or putting (one person or thing) in the place of another; also, the state or fact of being substituted.

We can perceive, from the records of the Hellenic and Latin city communities, that there, and probably over a great part of the world, the substitution of common territory for common race as the basis of national reunion was slow. Maine, Early Hist. of Institutions, p. 75.

2. The office of a substitute; delegated authority. [Rare.]

He did believe
He was indeed the duke; out o' the substitution,
And executing the outward face of royalty,
With all prerogative. Shak., Tempest, i. 2. 103.

3. In gram., the use of one word for another; syllepsis.—4. In Rom. law, the effect of appointing a person to be heir, in case the heir first nominated would not or could not be heir. This was called vulgar substitution. Pupilary substitution existed where, after instituting his child as heir, the testator directed that, if after the child should have become heir it should die before attaining puberty, another be substituted in its place. This was originally allowed only for children under age in the power of the testator, but was afterward extended to children who for any reason could not make a valid will.

5. In French law, a disposition of property whereby the person receiving it, who is called the institute (le grévé), is charged either at his death or at some other time to deliver it over to another person called the substitute (l'appelé).—6. In chem., the replacing of one or more elements or radicals in a compound by other elements or radicals. Thus, by bringing water and potassium together, potassium (K) is substituted for a hydrogen atom in water (H_2O), yielding KOH, or caustic potash. By further action the other hydrogen atom may be replaced, yielding potassium oxid (K_2O). Substitution is the principal method employed in examining the chemical structure of organic bodies. Also called metalepsy.

No generalization has, perhaps, so extensively contributed to the progress made by organic chemistry during the last fifteen years as the doctrine of substitution.
E. Frankland, Exper. in Chem., p. 210.

7. In alg.: (a) The act of replacing a quantity by another equal to it; also, in the language of some algebraists, the replacement of a set of variables by another set connected with the first by a system of equations equal in number to the number of variables in each set. See transformation (which is the better term). (b) The operation of changing the order of a finite number of objects, generally letters, that are in a row, the change following a rule according to which the object in each place is carried to some definite place in the row, this operation being regarded as itself a subject of algebraical operations. For example, supposing we were to start with the row a, b, c, d, e, a substitution might consist in carrying us to the row b, c, a, e, d. Denoting this substitution by S, the repetition of it, which would be denoted by S2, would carry us to c, a, b, d, e. If T denote the substitution of e, d, c, b, a for a, b, c, d, e, then TS would convert the last row into d, e, a, c, b, while ST would convert it into d, c, e, a, b. One way of denoting a substitution to which the terminology of the theory refers is to write a row upon which the substitution could operate, with the resulting row above it. These two rows are called the terms of the substitution, the upper one the numerator, the lower the denominator of the substitution. The objects constituting the rows are called the letters of the substitution.—Associate substitution, one of two substitutions interchangeable with the same substitution.—Bifid substitution. See bifid.—Circular factors of a substitution, circular substitutions whose product constitutes the substitution spoken of, it being understood that no two of these affect the positions of the same letters.—Circular substitution, a substitution whose successive powers carry the letters which it displaces round in one cycle.—Cremona substitution, a substitution of a Cremona transformation, especially of a quadratic transformation.—Derivant substitution, a substitution whose inverse multiplied by another substitution, and then this product by the derivant substitution itself, makes a substitution the derivate of that other substitution.—Derivate of a substitution, the product of three substitutions, of which the middle one is the substitution spoken of, while the other two are inverse substitutions.—Determinant of a linear substitution. See determinant.—Doctrine of substitution, in theol., the doctrine that Christ suffered vicariously, as a substitute for the sinner.—Elementary substitution, a substitution into which only the elements 0, + 1, − 1 enter.—Identical substitution, a substitution which leaves the order of all the letters unchanged.—Imprimitive substitution, a substitution not primitive.—Index of a system of conjugate substitutions, the quotient of the number of permutations of the letters by the order of the system.—Interchangeable substitutions, two substitutions which give the same product in whichever order they are multiplied—that is, whichever is taken first in forming the product.—Inverse substitutions, two substitutions whose product is an identical substitution.—Isomorphous substitution group, one of two groups of substitutions such that every substitution of the one corresponds to a single substitution of the other, and every product of two substitutions to a product of analogous substitutions.—Linear substitution. (a) A circular substitution between a variable, a linear function of it, and the successive iterations of that function. (b) A linear transformation.—Order of a substitution, that power of a substitution which is an identical substitution.—Order of a system of conjugate substitutions, the number of substitutions belonging to the system.—Orthogonal substitution. See orthogonal.—Permutable substitutions, interchangeable substitutions.—Power of a substitution, the operation which consists in the repetition of the substitution spoken of as many times as the exponent of the power indicates.—Primitive substitution, a substitution whose order is a prime number or a power of a prime number.—Product of two substitutions, the result of performing two substitutions successively upon one row.—Rational substitution, a circular substitution between successive iterations of a rational function, such as $x_{m+1} = (ax_m + b) / (cx_m + d)$.—Reduced substitution, a substitution represented by an integral algebraic function having 1 for the coefficient of the highest power of the variable, and 0 for the coefficient of the next highest power and for the absolute term.—Regular substitution, a substitution whose circular factors are all of the same order.—Service by substitution. See substituted service, under service[1].—Similar substitutions, two substitutions which have the same number of circular factors and the same number of letters in the cycles.—Substitution product, a chemical compound prepared by substituting an element or radical for some member of a complex molecule without altering the rest of the molecule.—System of conjugate substitutions, a group of substitutions—that is to say, such a collection of substitutions that every product of substitutions belonging to it is itself a substitution of the same collection.—Term of a substitution, one of the two permutations whose relation constitutes the substitution.

substitutional (sub-sti-tū'shon-al), a. [< substitution + -al.] Pertaining to or implying substitution; supplying, or capable of supplying, the place of another. Imp. Dict.

substitutionally (sub-sti-tū'shon-al-i), adv. In a substitutional manner; by way of substitution. Eclec. Rev.

substitutionary (sub-sti-tū'shon-ā-ri), a. [< substitution + -ary.] Relating to or making substitution; substitutional.

The mediation of Christ in what may . . . be called his substitutionary relation to men. Prog. Orthodoxy, p. 52.

substitutive (sub'sti-tū-tiv), a. [< LL. substitutivus, conditional, < L. substitutus, pp. of substituere, substitute: see substitute.] Tending to afford or furnish a substitute; making substitution; capable of being substituted. Bp. Wilkins.

substract (sub-strakt'), v. t. An erroneous form of subtract, common in vulgar use. Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 469.

substraction (sub-strak'shon), n. An erroneous form of subtraction.

substractor† (sub-strak'tor), n. An erroneous form of subtractor*, subtracter: used in the quotation in the sense of 'detractor.'

By this hand they are scoundrels and substractors.
Shak., T. N., i. 3. 37.

substrate (sub'strāt), n. [< NL. substratum.] A substratum.

Albert and Aquinas agree in declaring that the principle of individuation is to be found in matter—not, however, in matter as a formless substrate, but in determinate matter (materia signata), which is explained to mean matter quantitatively determined in certain respects.
Encyc. Brit., XXI. 428.

substrate† (sub'strāt), v. t. [< L. substratus, pp. of substernere, strew or spread under, < sub, under, + sternere, spread, extend, scatter: see stratum.] To strew or lay under anything.

The melted glass being supported by the substrated sand. Boyle, Works, II. 222.

substrator (sub-strā′tor), n. [< L. substratus, pp. of substernere, spread under: see substrate.] Same as kneeler, 2.

The mourners or weepers, the hearers, the substrators, and the co-standers. Bingham, Antiquities, XVIII. i. 1.

substratum (sub-strā′tum), n.; pl. substrata (-tä). [NL., < L. substratum, neut. of substratus, spread under: see substrate, and cf. stratum.] 1. That which is laid or spread under; a stratum lying under another; in agri., the subsoil; hence, anything which underlies or supports: as, a substratum of truth.

In the living body we observe a number of activities of its material substratum, by which the series of phenomena spoken of as life are conditioned. Gegenbaur, Comp. Anat. (trans.), p. 13.

2. In metaph., substance, or matter, as that in which qualities inhere.

We accustom ourselves to suppose some substratum wherein they [simple ideas] do subsist, and from whence they do result; which therefore we call substance. Locke, Human Understanding, II. xxiii., note A.

substriate (sub-strī′āt), a. In entom., having indistinct or imperfect striæ.

substruct (sub-strukt′), v. t. [< L. substructus, pp. of substruere, build beneath, underbuild, < sub, under, + struere, pile up, erect, build: see structure.] To place beneath as a foundation; build beneath something else. [Rare.]

substruction (sub-struk′shon), n. [< F. substruction = Pg. substrucção, < L. substructio(n-), an underbuilding, a foundation, < substruere, build beneath: see substruct.] An underbuilding; a mass of building below another; a foundation.

It is a magnificent, strong building, with a substruction very remarkable. Evelyn, Diary, Nov. 8, 1644.

substructural (sub′struk″tū-ral), a. [< substructure + -al.] Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a substructure.

substructure (sub′struk″tūr), n. [< substruct + -ure; cf. structure.] A substruction; any under-structure; a foundation.

substylar (sub′stī″lär), a. [< substyle + *-ar*3.] Of, pertaining to, or consisting of the substyle.

substyle (sub′stīl), n. In dialing, the line on which the style or gnomon stands, formed by the intersection of the face of the dial with the plane which passes through the gnomon.

subsultive† (sub-sul′tiv), a. [< L. subsultus, pp. of subsilire, leap up, < sub, under, + salire, leap, spring: see salient. Cf. L. subsultim, with leaps or jumps.] Moving by sudden leaps or starts; making short bounds; spasmodic.

The earth, I was told, moved up and down like the boiling of a pot. . . . This sort of subsultive motion is ever accounted the most dangerous. Bp. Berkeley, Works (ed. 1784), I. 81.

subsultorily† (sub-sul′tō-ri-li), adv. In a subsultory or bounding manner; by leaps, starts, or twitches. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 326.

subsultory† (sub-sul′tō-ri), a. [As subsult-ive + -ory.] Same as subsultive. De Quincey, Style, i.

subsultus (sub-sul′tus), n.; pl. subsultus. [NL., < L. subsilire, pp. subsultus, leap up: see subsultive.] A twitching, jerky, or convulsive movement.—Subsultus clonus. Same as subsultus tendinum.—Subsultus tendinum, a twitching of the tendons, observed in many cases of low fevers, etc.: it is a grave symptom.

subsume (sub-sūm′), v. t.; pret. and pp. subsumed, ppr. subsuming. [< NL. subsumere*, < L. sub, under, + sumere, take: see assume.] In logic, to state (a case) under a general rule; instance (an object or objects) as belonging to a class under consideration. Especially, when the major proposition of a syllogism is first stated, the minor proposition is said to be subsumed under it. Modern writers often use the word in the sense of stating that the object of the verb belongs under a class, even though that class be not already mentioned.

St. Paul, who cannot name that word "sinners" but must straight subsume in a parenthesis "of whom I am the chief." Hammond, Works, IV. viii.

Its business [that of the understanding] is to judge or subsume different conceptions or perceptions under more general conceptions that connect them together. E. Caird, Philos. of Kant, p. 292.

subsumption (sub-sump′shon), n. [< NL. subsumptio(n-), < subsumere*, pp. subsumptus*, subsume: see subsume.] 1. The act of subsuming; the act of mentioning as an instance of a rule or an example of a class; the act of including under something more general (and, in the strict use of the word, something already considered), as a particular under a universal, or a species under a genus.

The first act of consciousness was a subsumption of that of which we were conscious under this notion. Sir W. Hamilton.

2. That which is subsumed; the minor premise of a syllogism, when stated after the major premise.

Thus, if one were to say, "No man is wise in all things," and another to respond, "But you are a man," this proposition is a subsumption under the former. Fleming, Vocab. Philos.

Subsumption of the libel, in Scots law, a narrative of the alleged criminal act, which must specify the manner, place, and time of the crime libeled, the person injured, etc.

subsumptive (sub-sump′tiv), a. [< subsumpt-ion + -ive.] Of or relating to a subsumption; of the nature of a subsumption.

subsurface (sub′sėr″fās), a. and n. I. a. Being or occurring below the surface.

II. n. A three-dimensional continuum in a space of five dimensions.

subsynovial (sub-si-nō′vi-al), a. Situated or occurring within a synovial membrane.—Subsynovial cysts, cysts caused by distention of the synovial follicles which open into joints, due to obstruction of their ducts.

subtack (sub′tak), n. In Scots law, an underlease; a lease, as of a farm or a tenement, granted by the principal tenant or leaseholder.

subtangent (sub′tan″jent), n. The part of the axis of abscissas of a curve cut off between the tangent and the ordinate of the contact-point.—Polar subtangent, that part of the line through the origin of polar coördinates perpendicular to the radius vector of the point of tangency which is cut off between the tangent and the origin.

subtartarean† (sub-tär-tā′rē-an), a. Being or living under Tartarus.

The sable subtartarean pow'rs. Pope, Iliad, xiv. 314.

subtectacle† (sub-tek′ta-kl), n. [< L. sub, under, + tectus, pp. of tegere, cover (see tect, thatch), + -acle.] A tabernacle, a covering.

This is true Faith's intire subtectacle. Davies, Holy Roode, p. 20. (Davies.)

subtectal (sub-tek′tal), n. [< L. sub, under, + tectum, roof, < tegere, pp. tectus, cover: see tect, thatch.] In ichth., a bone of the skull, generally underlying the roof of the cranium behind the orbit, and variously homologized with the orbitosphenoid and with the alisphenoid of higher vertebrates: also used attributively.

subtegulaneous (sub-teg-ū-lā′nē-us), a. [< L. subtegulaneus, under the roof, indoor, < sub, under, + tegula, a tile, a tiled roof: see tile.] Under the eaves or roof; within doors. [Rare.] Imp. Dict.

subtegumental (sub-teg-ū-men′tal), a. Situated beneath the integument; subcutaneous.

subtemperate (sub-tem′pėr-āt), a. Colder than the average climate of the temperate zone: noting the temperature and also other physical conditions of parts of the north temperate zone toward the arctic circle.

subtemporal (sub-tem′pō-ral), a. Situated beneath a temporal gyrus of the brain.

subtenancy (sub′ten″an-si), n. An under-tenancy; the holding of a subtenant.

subtenant (sub′ten″ant), n. A tenant under a tenant; one who rents land or houses from a tenant.

subtend (sub-tend′), v. t. [< Sp. Pg. subtender = It. suttendere, < L. subtendere, stretch underneath, < sub, under, + tendere, stretch.] 1. To extend under or be opposite to: a geometrical term: as, the side of a right triangle which subtends the right angle.

In our sweeping arc from Æschylus to the present time, fifty years subtend scarcely any space. S. Lanier, The English Novel, p. 9.

2. In bot., to embrace in its axil, as a leaf, bract, etc.: as, in many composite heads the florets are subtended by bracts called chaff.

subtense (sub-tens′), n. [< L. subtensus, subtentus, pp. of subtendere, stretch across: see subtend.] In geom., a line subtending or stretching across; the chord of an arc; a line opposite to an angle spoken of.

subtentacular (sub-ten-tak′ū-lär), a. Situated beneath the tentacles or tentacular canal of a crinoid. Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 502.

subtepid (sub-tep′id), a. Slightly tepid; moderately warm.

subter-. [L. subter, also supter, adv. and prep., below, beneath, in comp. also secretly; with compar. suffix, < sub, under, below: see sub-.] A prefix in English words, meaning 'under,' 'below,' 'less than': opposed to super-.

subterbrutish (sub″tėr-brö′tish), a. So brutish as to be lower than a brute. [Rare.]

O subter-brutish! vile! most vile! Carlyle, Sartor Resartus, i. 8.

subterete (sub-tē-rēt′), a. Somewhat terete.

subterfluent (sub-tėr′flö-ent), a. [< L. subterfluen(t-)s, ppr. of subterfluere, flow beneath, < subter, beneath, + fluere, flow: see fluent.] Running under or beneath. Imp. Dict.

subterfluous (sub-tėr′flö-us), a. [< L. as if subterfluus*, < subterfluere, flow beneath: see subterfluent.] Same as subterfluent.

subterfuge (sub′tėr-fūj), n. [< F. subterfuge = Sp. Pg. subterfugio = It. sutterfugio, < LL. subterfugium, a subterfuge, < L. subterfugere, flee by stealth, escape, avoid, < subter, secretly, + fugire, flee.] That to which a person resorts for escape or concealment; a shift; an evasion; artifice employed to escape censure or the force of an argument.

By forgery, by subterfuge of law. Cowper, Task, ii. 670.

We may observe how a persecuting spirit in the times drives the greatest men to take refuge in the meanest arts of subterfuge. I. D'Israeli, Calam. of Authors, II. 276.

=Syn. Shift, etc. (see evasion), excuse, trick, quirk, shuffle, pretense, pretext, mask, blind.

subterminal (sub-tėr′mi-nal), a. Nearly terminal; situated near but not at the end. Encyc. Brit., XXIV. 186.

subternatural (sub-tėr-nat′ū-ral), a. Below what is natural; less than natural; subnatural.

If we assume health as the mean representing the normal poise of all the mental faculties, we must be content to call hypochondria subternatural, because the tone of the instrument is lowered. Lowell, Among my Books, 1st ser., p. 87.

subterposition (sub″tėr-pō-zish′on), n. The state of lying or being situated under something else; specifically, in geol., the order in which strata are situated one below another.

★subterrane (sub′te-rān), a. and n. [= OF. subterrain, soubterrain, F. souterrain = Sp. subterráneo = Pg. subterraneo = It. sotterraneo, < L. subterraneus, underground, < sub, under, + terra, earth, ground: see terrane.] I. a. Underground; subterranean.

A subterrane tunnel. Annals of Phila. and Penn., I. 412.

II. n. A cave or room under ground. [Poetical and rare.]

subterranealt (sub-te-rā′nē-al), a. [< subterrane + -al.] Same as subterranean. Bacon, Physical Fables, xi.

subterranean (sub-te-rā′nē-an), a. [< subterrane + -an.] Situated or occurring below the surface of the earth or under ground.

His taste in cookery, formed in subterranean ordinaries and à la mode beefshops, was far from delicate. Macaulay, Samuel Johnson. (Encyc. Brit., XIII. 721.)

Subterranean forest, a submarine, submerged, or buried forest. See submarine forest and forest-bed group, both under forest, and submerged forest, under submerge.

subterraneityt (sub″te-rā-nē′i-ti), n. [< subterrane + -ity.] A place under ground. [Rare.]

We commonly consider subterraneities not in contemplations sufficiently respective unto the creation. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., ii. 1.

subterraneous (sub-te-rā′nē-us), a. [< L. subterraneus, underground: see subterrane.] Same as subterranean.

subterraneously (sub-te-rā′nē-us-li), adv. In a subterraneous manner; under the surface of the earth; hence, secretly; imperceptibly.

Preston, intent on carrying all his points, skilfully commenced with the smaller ones. He winded the duke circuitously—he worked at him subterraneously. I. D'Israeli, Curios. of Lit., IV. 368.

subterranyt (sub′te-rā-ni), a. and n. [< L. subterraneus, underground: see subterrane.] I. a. Subterranean.

They [metals] are wholly subterrany; whereas plants are part above earth, and part under earth. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 603.

II. n. That which lies under ground.

We see that in subterranies there are, as the fathers of their tribes, brimstone and mercury. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 354.

subterrene (sub-te-rēn′), a. [< LL. subterrenus, underground, < L. sub, under, + terra, earth, ground: see terrene.] Subterranean.

For the earth is full of subterrene fires, which have evaporated stones, and raised most of these mountains. Sandys, Travailes, p. 235.

subterrestrial (sub-te-res′tri-al), a. [< L. sub, under, + terra, earth, ground, > terrestris, of the earth: see terrestrial.] Subterranean.

The most reputable way of entring into this subterrestrial country is to come in at the fore-door. Tom Brown, Works, II. 209. (Davies.)

Subtetramera (sub-te-tram′e-rä), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of subtetramerus:* see subtetramerous.]

Subtetramera A division of coleopterous insects, having the tarsi four-jointed with the third joint diminutive and concealed: synonymous with Cryptotetramera and Pseudotrimera.

subtetramerous (sub-te-tram'e-rus), a. [< NL. subtetramerus*, < L. sub, under, + NL. tetramerus, four-parted: see tetramerous.] Four-jointed, as an insect's tarsus, but with the third joint very small and concealed under the second; of or pertaining to the Subtetramera; pseudotrimerous.

subthoracic (sub-thō-ras'ik), a. 1. Situated under or below the thorax.—2. Not quite thoracic in position: as, the subthoracic ventral fins of a fish.

subtil, a. An obsolete or archaic form of subtile or subtle.

subtile (sut'il or sub'til), a. [Early mod. E. also subtil, subtyle; an altered form, to suit the L., of the earlier sotil, sutil, etc.; = F. subtil = Sp. sutil = Pg. subtil = It. sottile, < L. subtilis, fine, thin, slender, delicate, perhaps < sub, under, + tela, a web, fabric: see tela, toil[2].] 1. Tenuous; thin; extremely fine; rare; rarefied: as, subtile vapor; subtile odors or effluvia; a subtile powder; a subtile medium. Also subtle.

> He forges the subtile and delicate air into wise and melodious words. Emerson, Nature, p. 49.

2. Delicately constituted, made, or formed; delicately constructed; thin; slender; fine; delicate; refined; dainty. Also subtle.

> The remenaunt was wel kevered to my pay,
> Kyght with a subtyl covercheif of Valence,
> Ther nas no thikkere clothe of defens.
> Chaucer, Parliament of Fowls, l. 272.
>
> Gadere that awey with a sotil spone or ellis a fethere. Book of Quinte Essence (ed. Furnivall), p. 9.
>
> When he [the beare] resortethe to the hyllocke where the antes lye hid as in theyr fortresse, he putteth his toonge to one of the ryftes wherof we haue spoken, being as subtyle as the edge of a swoorde, and there with continuall lyckynge maketh the place moyst. R. Eden, tr. of Gonzalus Oviedus (First Books on America, [ed. Arber, p. 222).
>
> Venustas, in a silver robe, with a thin, subtile veil over her hair and it. B. Jonson, Masque of Beauty.
>
> The more frequently and narrowly we look into them [works of nature], the more occasion we shall have to admire their fine and subtile texture, their beauty, and use, and excellent contrivance. Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, I. xii.
>
> The virtue acquires its subtile charm because considered as an outgrowth of the beautiful, beneficent, and bounteous nature in which it has its root. Whipple, Starr King.

3†. Sharp; penetrating; piercing.

> The Monasterie is moist and ye soyle colde, the aire subtile, scarce of bread, euil wines, crude waters. Guevara, Letters (tr. by Hellowes, 1577), p. 45.
>
> Pass we the slow Disease, and subtil Pain,
> Which our weak Frame is destin'd to sustain.
> Prior, Solomon, iii.

4. Same as subtle, 3.

> The Develes ben so subtyle to make a thing to seme otherwise than it is, for to disceyve mankynde. Mandeville, Travels, p. 283.
>
> The seyd Walter by hese sotill and ungoodly enformacion caused the seyd Duke to be hevy lord to the seyd William. Paston Letters, I. 16.
>
> Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made. Gen. iii. 1.
>
> The subtile persuasions of Ulisses. Sir T. Elyot, The Governour, iii. 25.
>
> Wherevnto this subtile Savage . . . replyed. Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 195.
>
> A most subtile wench! how she hath baited him with a viol yonder for a song! B. Jonson, Poetaster, iv. 1.
>
> But yet I shall remember you of what I told you before, that he [the carp] is a very subtile fish, and hard to be caught. I. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 145.

5. Same as subtle, 4.

> And [he] made that by subtyll conduytes water to be hydde, and to come downe in maner of Rayne. Holy Rood (E. E. T. S.), p. 162.
>
> With soutil pencel depeynted was this storie,
> In redoutynge of Mars and of his glorie. Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 1191.

6. Same as subtle, 5.

> Subtille and sage was he manyfold,
> All trouth and verite by hym was vnfold. Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 5989.
>
> A subtile observer would perceive how truly he [Shelley] represents his own time. Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 411.

7. Same as subtle, 7.

> She . . . made her subtil werkmen make a shryne
> Of alle the rubies and the stones fyne
> In al Egipte that she coude espye. Chaucer, Good Women, l. 672.

subtile† (sut'il or sub'til), v. [< ME. sotilen, < OF. soutilier, subtilier, < ML. subtiliare, make thin, contrive cunningly, < L. subtilis, thin, subtle: see subtile, a.] I. trans. To contrive or practise cunningly.

> Alle thise sciences I my-self sotiled and ordeyned,
> And founded hem formest folke to deceyue. Piers Plowman (B), x. 214.

II. intrans. 1. To scheme or plan cunningly.

> Eche man sotileth a sleight synne forto hyde,
> And coloureth it for a kunnynge and a clene lyuynge. Piers Plowman (B), xix. 454.

2. To tamper; meddle.

> It is no science for sothe forto sotyle inne. Piers Plowman (B), x. 183.

subtilely (sut'il-li or sub'til-li), adv. [Formerly also subtilly, subtilley; < subtile + -ly[2]. Cf. subtly.] 1. In a subtile manner; thinly; finely.

> A dram thereof [glass] subtilley powdered in butter or paste. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., ii. 5.

2. Artfully; skilfully; subtly.

> At night she stal awey ful prively
> With her face ywimpled subtilly. Chaucer, Good Women, l. 797.
>
> Putte it into a uessel of glas clepid amphora, the which sotely seele. Book of Quinte Essence (ed. Furnivall), p. 11.
>
> In avoydyng of the payement of the seid vij. c. marc, the seide Sir Robert Wyngfeld sotylly hath outlaywed the seide John Lyston in Notyngham shir, be the vertue of qwch outlagare all maner of chattell to the seide John Lyston apperteynyng arn acruwyd on to the Kyng. Paston Letters, I. 41.
>
> A Sot, that has spent £2000 in Microscopes, to find out the Nature of Eals in Vinegar, Mites in a Cheese, and the blue of Plums, which he has subtilly found out to be living Creatures. Shadwell, The Virtuoso, i. 1.

subtileness (sut'il-nes or sub'til-nes), n. [< subtile + -ness. Cf. subtleness.] The character or state of being subtile, in any sense.

subtiliate† (sub-til'i-āt), v. t. [< L. subtilis, fine, slender, subtile, + -ate[2].] To make subtile; make thin or rare; rarefy.

> Matter, however subtiliated, is matter still. Boyle, Works, III. 39.

subtiliation† (sub-til-i-ā'shon), n. [< subtiliate + -ion.] The act of making thin, rare, or subtile.

> By subtiliation and rarefaction the oil contained in grapes, if distilled before it be fermented, becomes spirit of wine. Boyle, Works, III. 39.

subtilisation, subtilise, etc. See subtilization, etc.

subtilism (sut'i-lizm or sub'ti-lizm), n. [< subtile + -ism.] The quality of being subtile, discriminating, or shrewd.

> The high orthodox subtilism of Duns Scotus. Milman, Latin Christianity, xiv. 3.

subtility (su- or sub-til'i-ti), n.; pl. subtilities (-tiz). [Formerly also subtillity; < F. subtilité = Sp. sutilidad = Pg. subtilidade = It. sottilità, < L. subtilita(t-)s, fineness, slenderness, acuteness, < subtilis, fine, slender, subtile: see subtile.] 1. Subtileness or subtleness; the quality of being subtile or subtle. Also subtlety. [Rare.]

> Without any of that speculative subtility or ambidexterity of argumentation. Sterne, Tristram Shandy.

2. A fine-drawn distinction; a nicety. Also subtlety.

> I being very inquisitiue to know of the subtilities of those countreyes [China and Tartary], and especially in matter of learning and of their vulgar Poesie. Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 75.
>
> Their tutors commonly spend much time in teaching them the subtilities of logic. Lord Herbert of Cherbury, Life (ed. Howells), p. 42.

subtilization (sut″i- or sub″ti-li-zā'shon), n. [= F. subtilisation = Sp. sutilización = Pg. subtilização; as subtilize + -ation.] 1. The act of making subtile, fine, or thin.—2. In chem., the operation of making so volatile as to rise in steam or vapor.—3. Nicety in drawing distinctions, etc.

Also spelled subtilisation.

subtilize (sut'i-līz or sub'ti-līz), v.; pret. and pp. subtilized, ppr. subtilizing. [= F. subtiliser = Sp. sutilizar = Pg. subtilizar = It. sottilizzare; as subtile + -ize.] I. trans. To make thin or fine; make less gross or coarse; refine or etherealize, as matter; spin out finely, as an argument.

> They spent their whole lives in agitating and subtilizing questions of faith. Warburton, Works, IX. viii.
>
> By long brooding over our recollections we subtilize them into something akin to imaginary stuff. Hawthorne, Blithedale Romance, xii.
>
> What has been said above, however, in regard to a possible subtilized theory applies a fortiori to the coarser theory of Absolute and Relative Time. Amer. Jour. Philol., VIII. 66.

II. intrans. To refine; elaborate or spin out, as in argument; make very nice distinctions; split hairs.

> In doubtfull Cases he can subtilize,
> And wyliest pleaders hearts anatomize. Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, ii., The Magnificence.
>
> And Rask, one of the most eminent of modern philologists, has subtilized so far upon them [intonations] that few of his own countrymen, even, have sufficient acuteness of ear to follow him. G. P. Marsh, Lects. on Eng. Lang., xiii.

Seneca, however, in one of his letters (ep. lxxv.), subtilises a good deal on this point [that the affections are of the nature of a disease]. Lecky, Europ. Morals, I. 198.

Also spelled subtilise.

subtilizer (sut'i- or sub'ti-lī-zėr), n. [< subtilize + -er[1].] One who or that which subtilizes; one who makes very nice distinctions; a hair-splitter.

> A subtilizer, and inventor of unheard-of distinctions. Roger North, Lord Guilford, I. 118. (Davies.) subtilty (sut'il-ti or sub'til-ti), n.; pl. subtilties (-tiz). [A form of subtlety, partly conformed in mod. use to subtility: see subtlety, subtility.] 1. The state or character of being subtile; thinness; fineness; tenuity: as, the subtilty of air or light; the subtilty of a spider's web. Also subtlety.

> Moderation must be observed, to prevent this fine light from burning, by its too great subtilty and dryness. Bacon, Physical Fables, vi., Expl.

2. The practice of making fine-drawn distinctions; extreme niceness or refinement of discrimination; intricacy; complexity. Also subtlety.

> Intelligible discourses are spoiled by too much subtilty in nice divisions. Locke.
>
> The subtilty of nature, in the moral as in the physical world, triumphs over the subtilty of syllogism. Macaulay, Utilitarian Theory of Government.
>
> Subtilty of motives, refinements of feeling, delicacies of susceptibility, were rarely appreciated [by the Romans]. Lecky, Europ. Morals, I. 236.

3. Same as subtlety, 4.

> The Sarazines countrefeten it be sotyltee of Craft for to disceyven the Cristene Men, as I have seen fulle many a tyme. Mandeville, Travels, p. 51.
>
> Put thou thy mayster to no payne
> By fraude nor fayned subtiltie. Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 85.
>
> But had of his owne perswaded her by his great subtiltie. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 25.
>
> His subtilty hath chose this doubling line. B. Jonson, Sejanus, iv. 5.
>
> Indeed, man is naturally more prone to subtilty than open valor, owing to his physical weakness in comparison with other animals. Irving, Sketch-Book, p. 350.
>
> He [Washington] had no subtilty of character, no cunning; he hated duplicity, lying, and liars. Theo. Parker, Historic Americans, p. 130.

4. Same as subtlety, 5.

> Loading him with trifling subtilties, which, at a proper age, he must be at some pains to forget. Goldsmith, The Bee, No. 6.
>
> It is only an elevated mind that, having mastered the subtilties of the law, is willing to reform them. Sumner, Orations, I. 162.

5. Skill; skilfulness.

> For eld, that in my spirit dulleth me,
> Hath of endyting al the soteltee [var. subtilitee]
> Wel ny bereft out of my remembraunce. Chaucer, Complaint of Venus, l. 77.

6†. A delicacy; a carefully contrived dainty.

> A bake mete . . . with a sotelte: an anteloppe . . . on a sele that saith with scriptour, "beith all gladd & mery that sitteth at this messe." Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 376.

7†. An intricate or curious device, symbol, or emblem.

> But Grekes have an other subtiltee:
> Of see quyete up taketh thai maryne
> Water purest, oon yere thai lete it fyne, > Wherof thai sayen so maade is the nature
> Of bitternesse or salt that it is sure. Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 197.
>
> A subtiltie, a kyng settyng in a chayre with many lordes about hym, and certayne knyghtes with other people standyng at the bar. Leland, Inthron. of Abp. Warham. (Richardson.) subtitle (sub'tī″tl), n. 1. A secondary or subordinate title of a book, usually explanatory.

> In this first volume of Mr. Van Campen's monograph (the Dutch in the Arctic Seas, Volume I.: A Dutch Arctic Expedition and Route; being a Survey of the North Polar Question, etc.) it is the sub-title rather than the title that indicates the chief importance of his work. N. A. Rev., CXXVII. 346.

2. The repetition of the leading words in the full title at the head of the first page of text.

> Table and contents, xii, followed by subtitle to whist. N. and Q., 7th ser., IX. 143.

subtle (sut'l), a. [Early mod. E. also suttle; < ME. sotil, sotyl, soutil, subtil, subtul, < OF. sotil, soutil, subtil = Sp. sutil = Pg. subtil = It. sottile, < L. subtilis, fine, thin, slender, delicate: see subtile, a more mod. form of the same word. The b in subtle and its older forms subtil, etc., was silent, as in debt, doubt, etc., being, as in those words, inserted in simulation of the orig. L. form. The form subtil, used in the authorized version of the Bible, has been retained in the revised version.] 1. Same as subtile, 1.

See, the day begins to break,
And the light shoots like a streak
Of subtle fire.
Fletcher, Faithful Shepherdess, iv. 4.

We'll rob the sea, and from the subtle air Fetch her inhabitants to supply our fare.
Dekker and Ford, Sun's Darling, v. 1.

2. Same as subtile, 2.

Can I do him all the mischief imaginable, and that easily, safely, and successfully, and so applaud myself in my power, my wit, and my subtle contrivances?
South, Sermons, III. iii.

Besides functional truth, there is always a subtle and highly ornamental play of lines and surfaces in these fanciful creatures [grotesques in medieval sculpture].
C. H. Moore, Gothic Architecture, p. 266.

3. Sly; insinuating; artful; cunning; crafty; deceitful; treacherous: as, a subtle adversary; a subtle scheme. Also subtile.

Play thou the subtle spider; weave fine nets
To ensnare her very life.
Middleton and Dekker, Roaring Girl, i. 1.

The Cuthi, saith he, were the sutlest beggars of all men in the world. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 151.

The serpent, subtlest beast of all the field.
Milton, P. L., vii. 495.

4. Cunningly devised; artfully contrived or handled; ingenious; clever: as, a subtle stratagem. Also subtile.

There is nowhere a more subtle machinery than that of the British Cabinet. . . . These things may be pretty safely asserted: that it is not a thing made to order, but a growth; and that no subject of equal importance has been so little studied. Gladstone, Might of Right, p. 161.

5. Characterized by acuteness and penetration of mind; sagacious; discerning; discriminating; shrewd; quick-witted: as, a subtle understanding; subtle penetration or insight. Also subtile.

She is too subtle for thee; and her smoothness,
Her very silence and her patience,
Speak to the people, and they pity her.
Shak., As you Like it, i. 3. 79.

Scott . . . evinces no very subtle perception of the spiritual mysteries of the universe.
Whipple, Ess. and Rev., I. 321.

The brave impetuous heart yields everywhere
To the subtle, contriving head.
M. Arnold, Empedocles on Etna.

The name of the Subtle Doctor, we are told, was the thirty-sixth on the list, and the entry recording his death ran as follows:— D. P. Fr. Joannes Scotus, sacræ theologiæ professor, Doctor Subtilis nominatus, quondam lector Coloniæ, qui obiit Anno 1308. vi. Idus Novembris.
N. and Q., 7th ser., VII. 452.

6†. Made carefully level; smooth; even.

Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground,
I have tumbled past the throw.
Shak., Cor., v. 2. 20.

The subtlest bowling-ground in all Tartary.
B. Jonson, Chloridia.

7. Ingenious; skilful; clever; handy: as, a subtle operator. Also subtile.=Syn. 3. Cunning, Artful Sly, etc. (see cunning[1]), designing, acute, keen, Jesuitical.—5 Sagacious, Sage, Knowing, etc. (see astute), deep, profound.

subtleness (sut'l-nes), n. [< subtle + -ness. Cf. subtileness.] The quality of being subtle, in any sense.

subtlety (sut'l-ti), n.; pl. subtleties (-tiz). [Cf. subtilty; < ME. sotilte, sotylte, sotelte, sutilte, < OF. soutilete, soutillete, later subtilité (> E. subtility), < L. subtilita(t-)s, fineness, slenderness, acuteness: see subtility, and cf. subtle, subtile.] 1. Same as subtilty, 1.

Naught ties the soul, her subtlety is such.
Sir J. Davies, Immortal. of Soul, x.

2. Acuteness of intellect; delicacy of discrimination or penetration; intellectual activity; subtility.

Although it may seem that the ability to deceive is a mark of subtlety or power, yet the will testifies without doubt of malice and weakness.
Descartes, Meditations (tr. by Veitch), iv.

United with much humour fine subtlety of apprehension. W. H. Russell, Diary in India, I. 15.

3. Same as subtilty, 2.—4. Slyness; artifice; cunning; craft; stratagem; craftiness; artfulness; wiliness. Also subtilty.

For, in the wily snake
Whatever sleights, none would suspicious mark,
As from his wit and native subtlety Proceeding. Milton, P. L., ix. 93.

5. That which is subtle or subtile. Also subtilty. (a) That which is fine-drawn or intricate.

My father delighted in subtleties of this kind, and listened with infinite attention.
Sterne, Tristram Shandy, iv. 29.

(b) That which is intellectually acute or nicely discriminating.

The delicate and infinite subtleties of change and growth discernible in the spirit and the speech of the greatest among poets. Swinburne, Shakespeare, p. 7.

(c) That which is of false appearance; a deception; an illusion. [Rare.]

Unlearned in the world's false subtleties.
Shak., Sonnets, cxxxviii.

6†. Same as subtilty, 6.

At the end of the dinner they have certain subtleties, custards, sweet and delicate things.
Latimer, Misc. Selections.

subtle-witted (sut'l-wit″ed), a. Sharp-witted; crafty.

Shall we think the subtle-witted French,
Conjurers and sorcerers, . . . have contrived his end?
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., i. 1. 25.

subtly (sut'li), adv. [Early mod. E. also suttly; < ME. sotyly; < subtle + -ly[2]. Cf. subtilely.] In a subtle manner; with subtlety. (a) Ingeniously; cleverly; delicately; nicely.

I know how suttly greatest Clarks Presume to argue in their learned Works.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, i. 2.

In the nice bee what sense so subtly true
From poisonous herbs extract the healing dew?
Pope, Essay on Man, i. 219.

Substance and expression subtly interblended. J. Caird.

(b) Slyly; artfully; cunningly.

Thou seest
How subtly to detain thee I devise.
Milton, P. L., viii. 207.

(c) Deceitfully; delusively.

Thou proud dream,
That play'st so subtly with a king's repose.
Shak., Hen. V., iv. 1. 275.

subtonic (sub'ton″ik), n. In music, the next tone below the upper tonic of a scale; the leading-tone or seventh, as E in the scale of F. Also called subsemitone.

subtorrid (sub-tor'id), a. Subtropical.

subtract (sub-trakt'), v. t. [Formerly, and still in illiterate use, erroneously substract (so earlier substraction for subtraction), after the F. forms, and by confusion with abstract, extract; < L. subtractus, pp. of subtrahere (> It. sottrarre = Sp. sustraer, sustraer = Pg. subtrahir = F. soustraire = G. subtrahiren = Sw. subtrahera = Dan. subtrahere), draw away from under, take away by stealth, carry off, < sub, under, + trahere, draw, drag: see tract. Cf. abstract, extract, protract, retract, etc.] To withdraw or take away, as a part from a whole; deduct.

All material products consumed by any one, while he produces nothing, are so much subtracted, for the time, from the material products which society would otherwise have possessed. J. S. Mill, Polit. Econ., I. iii. § 4.

=Syn. Subtract, Deduct. See deduct.

subtracter (sub-trak'tėr), n. [< subtract + -er[1].] One who subtracts.—2. A subtrahend.

subtraction (sub-trak'shon), n. [Formerly, and still in illiterate use, substraction (= D. substraktie), < OF. substraction, soustraction, F. soustraction = Sp. sustracción = Pg. subtracção = It. sottrazione = G. subtraction = Sw. Dan. subtraktion, < L. subtractio(n-), a drawing back, taking away, < subtrahere, pp. subtractus, draw away, take away: see subtract.] 1. The act or operation of subtracting, or taking a part from a whole.

The colour of a coloured object, as seen by transmitted light, is produced by subtraction of the light absorbed from the light incident upon the object.
A. Daniell, Prin. of Physics, p. 450.

2. Specifically, in arith. and alg., the taking of one number or quantity from another; the operation of finding the difference between two numbers.

Subtraction diminisheth a grosse sum by withdrawing of other from it, so that subtraction or rebation is nothing else but an arte to withdraw and abate one sum from another, that the remainer may appeare. Recorde, Ground of Artes.

3. In law, a withdrawing or neglecting, as when a person who owes any suit, duty, custom, or service to another withdraws it or neglects to perform it.—4. Detraction. [Rare.]

Of Shakspere he [Emerson] talked much, and always without a word of subtraction. The Century, XXXIX. 624.

subtractive (sub-trak'tiv), a. [= Pg. subtractivo; as subtract + -ive.] 1. Tending to subtract; having power to subtract.—2. In math., having the minus sign (—).

subtrahend (sub'tra-hend), n. [< NL. subtrahendum, neut. of L. subtrahendus, that must be subtracted, fut. pass. part. of subtrahere: see subtract.] In math., the number to be taken from another (which is called the minuend) in the operation of subtraction.

subtranslucent (sub-tranz-lū'sent), a. Imperfectly translucent.

subtransparent (sub-tranz-pār'ent), a. Imperfectly transparent.

subtransverse (sub-tranz-vėrs'), a. In entom., somewhat broader than long: specifying coxæ which tend to depart from the globose to the transverse form.

subtreasury (sub-trez'ū-ri), n. A branch of the United States treasury, established for convenience of receipt of public moneys under the independent treasury system, and placed in charge of an assistant treasurer of the United States. There are nine subtreasuries, situated in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans, and San Francisco.

subtriangular (sub-trī-ang'gū-lär), a. Somewhat triangular; three-sided with uneven sides or with the angles rounded off. Darwin, Fertil. of Orchids by Insects, p. 104.

subtriangulate (sub-trī-ang'gū-lāt), a. In entom., subtriangular.

subtribal (sub'trī-bal), a. [< subtribe + -al.] Of the classificatory grade of or characterizing a subtribe.

subtribe (sub'trīb), n. A division of a tribe; specifically, in zoöl. and bot., a section or division of a tribe: a classificatory group of no fixed grade. See tribe.

subtriedral (sub-trī-ē'dral), a. Same as subtrihedral. Owen.

subtrifid (sub-trī'fid), a. Slightly trifid.

subtrigonal (sub-trig'ō-nal), a. Nearly or somewhat trigonal. Amer. Jour. Sci., XXIX. 449.

subtrigonate (sub-trig'ō-nāt), a. Same as subtrigonal.

subtrihedral (sub-trī-hē'dral), a. Somewhat prismatic; somewhat like a three-sided pyramid: as, the subtrihedral crown of a tooth. Also subtriedral.

subtriple (sub-trip'l), a. Containing a third or one of three parts: as, 3 is subtriple of 9; having the ratio 1:3. subtriplicate (sub-trip'li-kāt), a. In the ratio of the cube roots: thus, $\sqrt[3]{a}$ to $\sqrt[3]{b}$ is the subtriplicate ratio of a to b.

subtrist (sub-trist'), a. [< L. subtristis, somewhat sad, < sub, under, + tristis, sad: see trist.] Somewhat sad or saddened. [Rare.]

But hey! you look subtrist and melancholic.
Scott, Abbot, xxix.

subtrochanteric (sub-trō-kan-ter'ik), a. Situated below the trochanter.

subtropic (sub-trop'ik), a. and n. I. a. Same as subtropical.

II. n. A subtropical region.

There are but two counties [of Florida] in the sub-tropics — Dade and Monroe. Of these Dade has the most equable climate. The Times (Phila.), May 3, 1886.

subtropical (sub-trop'i-kal), a. Of a climate or other physical character between tropical and temperate; approaching the tropical or torrid zone in temperature: noting a region on the confines of either tropic, or its plants, animals, and other natural productions: as, subtropical America; a subtropical fauna or flora.

subtrude (sub-tröd'), v. t.; pret. and pp. subtruded, ppr. subtruding. [< L. sub, under, + trudere, thrust, press on, drive. Cf. intrude, extrude, protrude, etc.] To insert or place under. [Rare.]

subtutor (sub'tū″tor), n. An under-tutor.

subtympanitic (sub-tim-pa-nit'ik), a. Approaching tympanitic quality.

subtype (sub'tīp), n. In biol., a more special type included in a more general one.

subtypical (sub-tip'i-kal), a. Not quite typical, or true to the type; somewhat aberrant: noting a condition or relation between typical and aberrant. Compare attypical, etypical.

subucula (sū-buk'ū-lä), n. [L. subucula, a man's undergarment, a shirt, < sub, under, + uere*, used also in exuere, put off: see exuviæ.] 1. Among the ancient Romans, a man's undertunic.—2. In the Anglo-Saxon Church, an inner tunic worn under the alb. It seems to have served the purpose of a cassock. Rock, Church of our Fathers, i. 460.

Subularia (sū-bū-lā'ri-ä), n. [NL. (Linnæus, 1735), named from the leaves; < L. subula, an awl.] A genus of cruciferous plants, belonging to the tribe Sinapeæ, subtribe Lepidiinæ. It is characterized by its aquatic habit, and by its awl-shaped leaves, and its short ovate-globose turgid silicle, with about four seeds. The only species, S. aquatica, is a native of fresh-water lakes of Europe, Siberia, and North America, occurring within the United States in lakes of Maine and New Hampshire, and at Yellowstone lake and Mono Pass, California. See awlwort.

Subulate Leaves of Juniper (Juniperus communis).

subulate (sū'bū-lāt), a. [< NL. subulatus, < L.

subula, an awl, < suere, sew: see sew[1].] Awl-shaped; subuliform; in bot., zoöl., etc., slender, more or less cylindrical, and tapering to a point. See awl-shaped, 2.

subulated (sū′bū-lā-ted), a. [< subulate + -ed[2].] Same as subulate.

subulicorn (sū′bū-li-kôrn), a. and n. [< NL. subulicornis, < L. subula, an awl, + cornu, horn.] I. a. Having subulate antennæ, as an insect; of or pertaining to the Subulicornia.

II. n. A member of the Subulicornia.

Subulicornia (sū″bū-li-kôr′ni-ạ), n. pl. [NL. (Latreille, in the form Subulicornes), < L. subula, an awl, + cornu, horn.] In Latreille's classification of insects, a division of Neuroptera containing the Odonata of Fabricius, and the Ephemeræ or Agnathi, or the dragon-flies and May-flies.

subuliform (sū′bū-li-fôrm), a. [< L. subula, an awl, + forma, form.] Subulate in form; awl-shaped.

Subulipalpi† (sū″bū-li-pal′pī), n. pl. [NL., < L. subula, an awl, + palpus, in mod. sense of 'palp.'] In Latreille's system, a group of caraboid beetles, distinguished from the Grandipalpi by the subulate form of the outer palp. It corresponds to the Bembidiidæ.

subumbonal (sub-um′bō-nal), a. Situated under the umbones of a bivalve shell.

subumbral (sub-um′bral), a. In Hydrozoa, same as subumbrellar.

subumbrella (sub-um-brel′ạ), n.; pl. subumbrellæ (-ē). [NL., < L. sub, under, + NL. umbrella.] The internal ventral or oral disk of a hydrozoan, as a jellyfish; the muscular layer beneath the umbrella or swimming-bell of a hydromedusan, continuous with the velum. If such an acaleph is likened to a woman's parasol, lined, then the lining is the subumbrella, the covering being the umbrella. Compare cut under Discophora.

subumbrellar (sub-um-brel′ạr), a. [< subumbrella + -ar[3].] Of, or having characters of, a subumbrella.

subuncinate (sub-un′si-nāt), a. Imperfectly uncinate or hooked.

subundation† (sub-un-dā′shọn), n. [< L. sub, under, + undare, overflow: see ound, inundation.] A flood; a deluge. Huloet.

subungual, subunguial (sub-ung′gwạl, -gwi-ạl), a. Situated under the nail, claw, or hoof.

Subungulata (sub-ung-gū-lā′tạ), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of subungulatus: see subungulate.] 1. The Ungulata polydactyla, or polydactyl hoofed quadrupeds, including the existing Hyracoidea and Proboscidea, with the fossil Amblypoda, having a primitive or archetypical carpus, with the os magnum of the distal row of carpal bones articulating mainly with the lunare, or with the cuneiform, but not with the scaphoid. See Ungulata.—2†. In Illiger's classification (1811), a family of rodents whose claws are somewhat hoof-like, as the paca, agouti, guinea-pig, and capibara. See Caviidæ.

subungulate (sub-ung′gū-lāt), a. and n. [< NL. subungulatus, < L. sub, under, + LL. ungulatus, ungulate, < L. ungula, a hoof.] I. a. Hoofed, but with several digits, and thus not typically ungulate; having the characters of the Subungulata, 1. See ungulate, and compare solidungulate.

II. n. A member of the Subungulata, 1, as the elephant or the hyrax.

suburb (sub′ėrb), n. and a. [< ME. suburb, suburbe, < OF. suburbe, usually in pl. suburbes, = Sp. Pg. suburbio, < L. suburbium, an outlying part of a city, a suburb, < sub, under, near, + urbs, city: see urban.] I. n. 1. An outlying part of a city or town; a part outside of the city boundaries but adjoining them: often used in the plural to signify loosely some part near a city: as, a garden situated in the suburbs of London. The form suburbs was formerly often used as a singular.

> "In the suburbes of a toun," quod he,
> "Lurking in hernes and in lanes blynde."
> Chaucer, Prol. to Canon's Yeoman's Tale, l. 104.

> From which Northward is the Market-place and St. Nicolas's Church, from whence for a good way shoots out a Suburbs to the North-east, . . . and each Suburbs has its particular Church.
> Defoe, Tour through Great Britain, III. 213. (Davies.)

> A small part only spreads itself on to Bua, where it begins to climb the hills. . . . This outlying part, which contains two churches, may pass as a suburb, a Peraia.
> E. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 179.

2. The confines; the outskirts.

> The suburb of their straw-built citadel.
> Milton, P. L., l. 773.

> This life of mortal breath
> Is but a suburb of the life elysian,
> Whose portal we call Death.
> Longfellow, Resignation.

II.† a. Suburban; suited to the suburbs, or to the less well regulated parts of a city.

> Now, if I can but hold him up to his height, as it is happily begun, it will do well for a suburb humour; we may hap have a match with the city, and play him for forty pound. B. Jonson, Every Man in his Humour, i. 2.

> A low humour, not tinctured with urbanity; fitted to the tastes of the inferior people who usually reside in the suburbs.
> Whalley, Note at "humour" in the above passage.

> Some great man sure that 's asham'd of his kindred; perhaps some Suburbe Justice, that sits o' the skirts o' the City, and lives by 't. Brome, Sparagus Garden, ii. 3.

suburban (sub-ėr′bạn), a. and n. [= Sp. Pg. It. suburbano; < L. suburbanus, situated near the city (of Rome), < sub, under, + urbs, city. Cf. suburb.] I. a. Pertaining to, inhabiting, or being in the suburbs of a city.

> The old ballad of King Christian > Shouted from suburban taverns.
> Longfellow, To an Old Danish Song-book.

II. n. One who dwells in the suburbs of a city.

suburbanism (sub-ėr′bạn-izm), n. [< suburban + -ism.] The character or state of being suburban. Mrs. Humphry Ward, Robert Elsmere, II. xi.

suburbed (sub′ėrbd), a. [< suburb + -ed[2].] Having a suburb. [Rare.]

> Bottreaux Castle, . . . suburbed with a poore market town. R. Carew, Survey of Cornwall, fol. 120.

suburbial† (sub-ėr′bi-ạl), a. [< L. suburbium, suburb (see suburb), + -al.] Same as suburban. T. Warton, Hen. IV., i. 2., note.

suburbian† (sub-ėr′bi-ạn), a. [< OF. suburbien, < ML. suburbianus*, < L. suburbium, suburb: see suburb. Cf. suburban.] Same as suburban. Dryden, Mac Flecknoe, l. 83.

> Take me e're a shop subvrbian
> That selles such ware.
> Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 72.

suburbican† (sub-ėr′bi-kạn), a. [For suburbicarian.] Same as suburban. Bp. Gauden, Tears of the Church, p. 27. (Davies.) suburbicarian (sub-ėr-bi-kā′ri-ạn), a. [< LL. suburbicarius, situated near the city (of Rome), < L. sub, under, near, + urbs, city. Cf. suburb, suburban.] Being near the city: an epithet applied to the provinces of Italy which composed the ancient diocese of Rome. The name suburbicarian churches is by some restricted to those that are within a hundred miles of Rome, or, as at a later period, the districts in central and southern Italy and the Italian islands, since this circuit was under the authority of the prefect of the city. Certain Roman Catholic scholars, however, consider it to have included and still to include all the churches of the Western Church.

> The Pope having stretched his authority beyond the bounds of his suburbicarian precincts.
> Barrow, Pope's Supremacy.

suburbicary (sub-ėr′bi-kā-ri), a. [< LL. suburbicarius: see suburbicarian.] Same as suburbicarian.

subursine (sub-ėr′sin), a. and n. I. a. Somewhat ursine; bear-like to some extent; representing the arctoid series of carnivores subtypically; procyoniform or racoon-like.

II. n. A subursine carnivore; one of several small animals of the arctoid or ursine series, as the racoon, the coati, and the panda.

subvaginal (sub-vaj′i-nal), a. Placed within or on the inner side of a vaginal or sheathing membrane.

subvarietal (sub-vā-rī′e-tal), a. Varying slightly; having the character of a subvariety.

subvariety (sub-vā-rī′e-ti), n.; pl. subvarieties (-tiz). A subordinate variety; the further and minor modification of a variety; a strain differing little from one more comprehensive, as among domestic animals or cultivated plants.

subvene (sub-vēn′), v. i.; pret. and pp. subvened, ppr. subvening. [< F. subvenir = Sp. subvenir, relieve, supply, < L. subvenire, come to aid, relieve, succor, < sub, under, + venire, come: see come. Cf. convene, etc.] To come under, as a support or stay; arrive or happen, especially so as to prevent or obviate something.

> A future state must needs subvene, to prevent the whole edifice from falling into ruin.
> Warburton, Bolingbroke's Philosophy, iv.

subventaneous† (sub-ven-tā′nē-us), a. [< L. sub, under, + ventus, wind, + -aneous.] Pertaining to, of the nature of, or caused by wind; windy. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., iii. 21.

subvention (sub-ven′shọn), n. [< F. subvention = Sp. subvención, < LL. subventio(n-), a rendering of aid, assistance, < L. subvenire, relieve, subvene: see subvene.] 1. The act of coming under.

> The subvention of a cloud which raised him from the ground. Stackhouse.

2. The act of coming to the relief of some one; something granted in aid; support; subsidy. For specific use, see under subsidy.

> The largesses to the Roman people, and the subventions to the provinces in aid of sufferers from earthquakes.
> C. T. Newton, Art and Archæol., p. 131.

=Syn. 2. Subsidy, Subvention. See subsidy.

subvention (sub-ven′shọn), v. t. [< subvention, n.] To give aid to; assist pecuniarily.

> The Revue Européenne (1859) was at first subventioned, like the Revue Contemporaine. Encyc. Brit., XVIII. 540.

subventitious (sub-ven-tish′us), a. [< subvent-ion + -itious.] Affording subvention or relief; aiding; supporting. Urquhart, tr. of Rabelais, iii. 33.

subvermiform (sub-vėr′mi-fôrm), a. [< L. sub, under, + vermis, a worm, + forma, form.] Shaped somewhat like a worm.

subverse† (sub-vėrs′), v. t. [< L. subversus, pp. of subvertere, subvert: see subvert.] To subvert. Spenser, F. Q., III. xii. 42.

subversed (sub′vėrst), a. Same as suversed.

subversion (sub-vėr′shọn), n. [= F. subversion = Sp. subversión, suversión = Pg. subversão = It. sovversione, < L. subversio(n-), an overthrow, ruin, destruction, < subvertere, overturn, subvert: see subvert.] 1. The act of subverting or overthrowing, or the state of being overthrown; entire overthrow; utter ruin; destruction.

> Subversion of thy harmless life.
> Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iii. 1. 208.

> The subversion [by a storm] of woods and timber.
> Evelyn.

> Nothing can be so gratifying and satisfactory to a rightly disposed mind as the subversion of imposture by the force of ridicule. Landor, Lucian and Timotheus.

2. The cause of overthrow or destruction.

> It may be truly affirm'd he [the Pope] was the subversion and fall of that Monarchy, which was the hoisting of him.
> Milton, Reformation in Eng., ii.

=Syn. 1. Overturning, downfall, demolition. See subvert.

subversionary (sub-vėr′shọn-ā-ri), a. [< subversion + -ary.] Destructive; subversive.

subversive (sub-vėr′siv), a. [= F. subversif = Sp. subversivo, suversivo = Pg. subversivo; as subverse + -ive.] Tending to subvert; having a tendency to overthrow and ruin: with of.

> Utterly subversive of liberty.
> A. Tucker, Light of Nature, II. iii. 25.

> From mere superstition may arise a systematized polytheism, which in every stage of growth or decay is subversive of all high religious aims.
> Dawson, Nature and the Bible, p. 28.

subvert (sub-vėrt′), v. t. [< F. subvertir = Sp. subvertir = Pg. subverter = It. sovvertere, sovvertire, < L. subvertere, overturn, upset, overthrow, < sub, under, + vertere, turn: see verse. Cf. evert, invert, pervert, etc.] To overthrow; overturn; ruin utterly; destroy.

> Wo worth these gifts! they subvert justice every where.
> Latimer, 3d Sermon bef. Edw. VI., 1549.

> Those bookes tend not so moch to corrupt honest liuing as they do to subuert trewe Religion.
> Ascham, The Scholemaster, p. 79.

> Razeth your cities and subverts your towns.
> Shak., 1 Hen. VI., ii. 3. 65.

> The tempest of wind being south-west, which subverted, besides huge trees, many houses.
> Evelyn, Diary, Feb. 17, 1662.

> This would subvert the principles of all knowledge.
> Locke.

> In Rome the oligarchy was too powerful to be subverted by force. Macaulay, Mitford's Hist. Greece.

=Syn. Overthrow, Invert, etc. See overturn.

subvertebral (sub-vėr′tē-bral), a. Placed under a vertebra; lying under the vertebral or spinal column; subspinal or hypaxial.—Subvertebral aorta, the aorta; especially, one of the primitive aortæ, as distinguished from the definitive aorta. See aorta.—Subvertebral chevron-bone or wedge-bone. See wedge-bone, and cut under chevron-bone.

subverted, subvertent (sub-vėr′ted, -tent), a. In her., same as reversed.

subverter (sub-vėr′tėr), n. [< subvert + -er[1].] One who subverts; an overthrower. Waterland, On Occasional Reflections, i., App.

subvertible (sub-vėr′ti-bl), a. [< subvert + -ible.] Capable of being subverted.

subvertical (sub-vėr′ti-kal), a. Almost vertical or perpendicular.

subverticillate (sub-vėr′ti-sil-āt), a. Imperfectly verticillate; forming or disposed in an incomplete or irregular whorl or verticil.

subvesicular (sub-vē-sik′ū-lär), a. Somewhat vesicular; imperfectly vesicular.

subvirate (sub′vi-rāt), n. [< L. sub, under, + viratus, manly, < vir, man: see virile.] One having an imperfectly developed manhood. [Rare.]

> Even these poor New England Brahmins of ours, subvirates of an organizable base as they often are, count as full men if their courage is big enough for the uniform which hangs so loosely about their slender figures.
> O. W. Holmes, Old Vol. of Life, p. 9.

subvirile (sub-vir′il), a. Deficient in virility. Roger North, Examen, III. vii. § 62.

subvitreous (sub-vit′rē-us), a. More or less imperfectly vitreous; vitreous in part.

sub voce (sub vō′sē). [L.: sub, under; voce, abl. of vox, voice, a word: see voice.] Under a word specified: a common dictionary reference. Abbreviated s. v.

subway (sub′wā), n. An underground way; an underground passage for traffic, or to contain gas- and water-mains, telegraph-wires, etc.

subworker (sub′wėr″kėr), n. A subordinate worker or helper. South.

subzonal (sub-zō′nal), a. 1. Somewhat zonal or zonary, as the placenta of some mammals.—2. Lying below a zone, belt, or girdle: noting a membrane between the zona radiata and the umbilical vesicle of a mammalian embryo.

subzone (sub′zōn), n. A subdivision of a zone. Quart. Jour. Geol. Soc., XLIV. 403.

suc-. See sub-.

succade (su-kād′), n. [Also sucket (as if < suck[1] + -et); appar. < L. succus, sucus, juice, liquor, + -ade[1].] A sweetmeat; green fruits and citron, candied and preserved in syrup. Defoe.—Succade gourd. See squash[2].

succatush†, n. Same as succotash. J. F. Cooper.

succedaneous (suk-sē-dā′nē-us), a. [< L. succedaneus, succidaneus, that follows after or fills the place of something, < succedere, follow after, succeed: see succeed.] Pertaining to or acting as a succedaneum; supplying the place of something else; being or employed as a substitute.—Succedaneous end, an end sought in default of the principal end.

succedaneum (suk-sē-dā′nē-um), n.; pl. succedanea (-ä). [NL., neut. of succedaneus: see succedaneous.] One who or that which supplies the place of another; that which is used for something else; a substitute.

> I would have a gentleman know how to make these medicines himself, and afterwards prepare them with his own hands, it being the manner of apothecaries so frequently to put in the succedanea that no man is sure to find with them medicines made with the true drugs which ought to enter into the composition when it is exotic or rare. Lord Herbert of Cherbury, Life (ed. Howells), p. 44.
>
> Prudence . . . is a happy succedaneum to genius.
> Goldsmith, Voltaire.

Caput succedaneum. See caput.

succedent† (suk-sē′dent), n. [< ME. succedent, < L. succeden(t-)s, ppr. of succedere, follow after: see succeed.] 1. A follower; a succeeder.

> So maketh to crafte nature a succedent.
> Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 101.

2. That which follows or results.

> Such is the mutability of the inconstant Vulgar, desirous of new things but never contented, despising the time being, extolling that of their forefathers, and ready to act any mischief to try by alteration the succedent.
> E. Fannant (?), Hist. of Edw. II., p. 143.

3. In astrol., a house about to succeed or follow the angular houses. The succedent houses are the second, fifth, eighth, and eleventh. Skeat.

> The lord of the assendent, sey they, . . . is fortunate whan he . . . is in a succedent, whereas he is in his dignite and conforted with frendly aspectys of planetes and wel received. Chaucer, Astrolabe, ii. 4.

succeed (suk-sēd′), v. [< OF. succeder, F. succéder = Sp. suceder = Pg. succeder = It. succidere, soccidere, succeed, < L. succedere, go below, go under, go from under, mount, also go near, come near, approach, follow after, follow, succeed, go well, prosper, < sub, under, + cedere, go: see cede.] I. trans. 1. To follow; come after; be subsequent or consequent to.

> The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils!
> Shak., Pericles, i. 4. 104.
>
> Those destructive effects . . . succeeded the curse.
> Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., v. 4.
>
> Hypocrisy in one age is generally succeeded by atheism in another. Addison, Spectator, No. 119.

2. To take the place of; be heir or successor to.

> Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds,
> But Harry Harry. Shak., 2 Hen. IV., v. 2. 48.

3. To fall heir to; inherit. [Rare.]

> Else let my brother die,
> If not a feodary, but only he > Owe and succeed thy weakness.
> Shak., M. for M., ii. 4. 123.

4†. To prosper; give success to.

> God was pleased so far to succeed their . . . endeavours that a stop was put to the fury of the fire.
> Stillingfleet, Sermons, I. i.

II. intrans. 1. To follow; be subsequent; come after; come next; come in the place of another or of that which has preceded.

> Enjoy, till I return,
> Short pleasures; for long woes are to succeed.
> Milton, P. L., iv. 535.
>
> The pure law
> Of mild equality and peace succeeds
> To faiths which long have held the world in awe.
> Shelley, Revolt of Islam, iv. 15.

> The succeeding Legend has long been an established favourite with all of us. Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 70.

2. To become heir; take the place of one who has died; specifically, to ascend a throne after the removal or death of the occupant.

> No woman shall succeed in Salique land.
> Shak., Hen. V., i. 2. 39.

> Rodolph succeeded in the See of Canterbury, but not till five Years after the Death of Anselm.
> Baker, Chronicles, p. 41.

3. To come down by order of succession; descend; devolve.

> A ring the county wears
> That downward hath succeeded in his house,
> From son to son, some four or five descents.
> Shak., All's Well, iii. 7. 23.

4. To arrive at a happy issue; be successful in any endeavor; meet with success; obtain the object desired; accomplish what is attempted or intended.

> 'Tis almost impossible for poets to succeed without ambition. Dryden.
>
> The surest way not to fail is to determine to succeed.
> Sheridan. (Imp. Dict.)

5. To terminate according to desire; turn out successfully; have the desired result: as, his plan succeeded admirably.—6†. To descend.

> Or will you to the cooler cave succeed?
> Dryden, tr. of Virgil's Eclogues, v.

7†. To approach by following. Spenser, F. Q., VI. iv. 8.—Syn. 1. Follow, Succeed, Ensue. See follow.—4 and 5. To prosper, flourish, thrive.

succeedant (suk-sē′dant), a. [< F. succédant, < L. succeden(t-)s, following: see succedent.] In her., following; especially, following one another: noting several bearings of the same sort, especially beasts or birds.

succeeder (suk-sē′dėr), n. [< succeed + -er[1].] One who succeeds; one who follows or comes in the place of another; a successor. Shak., Rich. III., v. 5. 30.

succeeding (suk-sē′ding), n. [Verbal n. of succeed, v.] 1. The act of one who succeeds.—2†. Consequence; result.

> Laf. Is it not a language I speak?
> Par. A most harsh one, and not to be understood without bloody succeeding. Shak., All's Well, ii. 3. 199.

succent (suk-sent′), v. t. [< L. succentus, pp. of succinere, succanere, sing to, accompany, agree, < sub, under, + canere, sing: see chant.] To sing the close or second part of. See the quotation. [Rare.]

> One voice sang the first part of a verse (as we say, incepted it), and the rest of the congregation all together succented it—that is, sang the close of it.
> Dict. of Christ. Antiq., p. 1744.

succentor (suk-sen′tor), n. [< LL. succentor, an accompanier in singing, a promoter, < L. succinere, succanere, sing to, accompany, agree: see succent.] 1. In music: (a) One who sings a lower or bass part. (b) A precentor's deputy; a subchanter charged with the performance of the precentor's duties in his absence or under his direction. Also subcantor, subchanter.—2†. An inciter.

> The prompter and succentor of these cruell enterludes. Holland, tr. of Ammianus Marcellinus (1609). (Nares.) succenturiate†, v. t. [< L. succenturiatus, pp. of succenturiare, receive into a century, substitute, < sub, under, + centuria, a century: see century.] To fill up the number of (a band of soldiers). Bailey, 1731.

succenturiate (suk-sen-tū′ri-āt), a. [< L. succenturiatus, pp.: see the verb.] Secondary or subsidiary to; substituted for, or as it were taking the place of: applied in anatomy to the adrenals or suprarenal capsules, formerly called renes succenturiati.

success (suk-ses′), n. [= OF. succes, succez, F. succès = Sp. suceso = Pg. successo = It. successo, < L. successus, an advance, a succession, a happy issue, success, < succedere, pp. successus, follow, go well, succeed: see succeed.] 1†. Succession; order of sequence. Shak., W. T., i. 2. 394.

> Then all the sonnes of these five brethren raynd
> By dew successe. Spenser, F. Q., II. x. 45.

2. The termination of any affair, whether happy or (now rarely) unhappy; issue; result; consequence.

> Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,
> And bring me their opinions of success.
> Shak., J. C., ii. 2. 5.

> In Italy the Spaniard hath also had ill successes at Piombino and Porto-longone. Howell, Letters, ii. 43.

3. A favorable or prosperous termination of anything attempted; a termination which answers the purpose intended; prosperous issue; often, specifically, the gaining of money, position, or other advantage.

> Or teach with more success her son
> The vices of the time to shun.
> Waller, Epitaph on Sir George Speke.

> The good humour of a man elated by success often displays itself towards enemies. Macaulay, Dryden.

> They follow success, and not skill. Therefore, as soon as the success stops and the admirable man blunders, they quit him; . . . and they transfer the repute of judgment to the next prosperous person who has not yet blundered.
> Emerson, Fortune of the Republic.

> Success in its vulgar sense, the gaining of money and position. O. W. Holmes, Emerson, xi.

4. A successful undertaking or attempt; what is done with a favorable result: as, political or military successes.

> Could any Soul have imagined that this Isle [Great Britain] would have produc'd such Monsters as to rejoice at the Turks good Successes against Christians?
> Howell, Letters, ii. 62.

5. One who or that which succeeds, especially in a way that is public or notorious: as, the speech was a success; he is a social success. [Colloq.]

successantly†, adv. In succession. Shak., Tit. And., iv. 4. 113.

successary†, n. [< success + -ary.] Succession. [Rare.]

> The glory
> Of my peculiar honours, not deriv'd
> From successary, but purchas'd with my bloud.
> Beau. and Fl., Laws of Candy, i. 2.

successful (suk-ses′fûl), a. [< success + -ful.] Having or resulting in success; obtaining or terminating in the accomplishment of what is wished or intended; often, specifically, having succeeded in obtaining riches, high position, or other objects of ambition; prosperous; fortunate.

> And welcome, nephews, from successful wars.
> Shak., Tit. And., i. 1. 172.

> But, besides the tempting profits of an author's night, which . . . could hardly average less than from three to four hundred pounds, there was nothing to make the town half so fond of a man . . . as a successful play.
> J. Forster, Life and Adventures of Oliver Goldsmith, p. 377.

—Syn. Prosperous, etc. (see fortunate); effectual.

successfully (suk-ses′fûl-i), adv. In a successful manner; with a favorable termination of what is attempted; prosperously; favorably.

successfulness (suk-ses′fûl-nes), n. The character or state of being successful; prosperous conclusion; favorable event; success.

succession (suk-sesh′on), n. [< F. succession = Sp. sucesión = Pg. successão = It. successione, < L. successio(n-), a following after, a coming into another's place, succession, success, < succedere, pp. successus, follow after, succeed: see succeed.] 1. A following of things in order; consecution; also, a series of things following one another, either in time or in place.

> Another idea . . . is . . . constantly offered us by what passes in our own minds; and that is the idea of succession. For if we look immediately into ourselves, and reflect on what is observable there, we shall find our ideas always . . . passing in train, one going and another coming without intermission.
> Locke, Human Understanding, II. vii. 9.
>
> The succession of his ideas was now rapid.
> Sterne, Tristram Shandy, ii. 5.
>
> The leaves of "evergreens" . . . are not cast off until the appearance of a new succession.
> W. B. Carpenter, in Grove's Corr. of Forces, p. 418.
>
> The succession of certain strong emotions passed through yesterday is easier to recall than the emotions themselves.
> H. Spencer, Prin. of Psychol., § 105.

2. The act or right of succeeding to the place, proper dignity, functions, or rights of another; the act or right of succeeding or coming to an inheritance; the act or right of entering upon an office, rank, etc., held by another: as, he holds the property by the title of succession; also, a line of persons so succeeding.

> Slander lives upon succession,
> For ever housed where it gets possession.
> Shak., C. of E., iii. 1. 105.

Especially—(a) The act of succeeding under established custom or law to the dignity and rights of a sovereign; also, a line of sovereigns thus following one another.

> King Richard being dead, the Right of Succession remained in Arthur, Son of Geoffery Plantagenet.
> Baker, Chronicles, p. 68.

These 2 Kings they have at present are not any way related in their Descent or Families, nor could I learn how long their Government has continued in the present form; but it appears to have been for some successions.
Dampier, Voyages, II. i. 67.

This hereditary right should be kept so sacred as never to break the succession.
Swift, Sentiments of a Ch. of Eng. Man, ii.

Although their [the Beauforts'] legitimation by pope and parliament was complete, they were excluded from the succession by Henry IV. so far as he had power to do it.
Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 347.

(b) Eccles., the act of succeeding to clerical office or receiving transmitted authority through ordination; a series of persons so succeeding. See apostolic succession, under apostolic.

We can justify that [mission] of our fathers by an uninterrupted succession from Christ himself: a succession which hath already continued longer than the Aaronical priesthood, and will, we doubt not, still continue till the church militant and time itself shall be no more.
Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, I. xviii.

3. An order or series of descendants; lineage; successors collectively; heirs.

Cassibelan, . . . for him
And his succession, granted Rome a tribute, Yearly three thousand pounds.
Shak., Cymbeline, iii. 1. 8.

4. In biol., descent with modification in unbroken evolutionary series; the sequence of organic forms thus developed; the fact or the result of evolution or development along any line of descent or during any period of time.—5†. A person succeeding to rank, office, or the like. Milton.—6. In music, same as progression (of parts) or as sequence, 5.—7. In psychol., suggestion; association. Sir W. Hamilton.—Apostolic succession. See apostolic.—Arms of succession, in her. See arm[2], 7 (d).—Conjunct succession. Same as conjunct motion (which see, under conjunct).—Law of succession, the law regulating inheritance. (See descent and distribution.) In civil law succession is either singular or universal. It is the former when it passes one or more separate rights, the latter when all the rights as an aggregate are considered to pass.—Lucrative succession. See lucrative.—Right of succession, the right to succeed; the right to take by succession.—Succession Act, Succession to the Crown Act. See Limitation of the Crown Act, under limitation.—Succession bath, a bath in which cold and hot water are alternately applied.—Succession Duty Act, an English statute of 1853 (16 and 17 Vict., c. 51) which imposed a tax upon property transmitted by will or operation of law. A class of somewhat similar statutes is known as collateral-inheritance tax laws.—Succession of crops, in agri., the rotation of crops. See rotation.—Succession tax, in law, a tax on property passing by succession; a tax on the devolution of property by inheritance or will. A collateral-inheritance tax is a succession tax on the devolution of property on others than direct descendants or progenitors. A legacy tax is a succession tax on devolution in some or all cases by will.—Teeth of succession. See tooth.—Title by succession. (a) Title acquired by inheritance, etc. (b) More specifically, the continuity of title in a corporation notwithstanding successive changes of membership.—Wars of succession, wars undertaken for the purpose of settling a disputed succession to a throne. The most notable are those of the Spanish Succession (1701–13), of the Austrian Succession (1741–8), and of the Bavarian Succession (1778–9).

successional (suk-sesh′ọn-al), a. [< succession + -al.] Relating to succession; implying succession; existing in succession; consecutive: as, "successional tooth," Owen, Anat. of Vertebrates, § 70.

successionally (suk-sesh′ọn-al-i), adv. In a successional manner; by way of succession.

successionist (suk-sesh′ọn-ist), n. [< succession + -ist.] One who insists on the validity and necessity of a given succession of persons or events; especially, one who adheres to the doctrine of apostolic succession.

successive (suk-ses′iv), a. [= F. successif = Sp. sucesivo = Pg. It. successivo, < ML. successivus, successive, < L. succedere, pp. successus, succeed: see succeed, success.] 1. Following in order or uninterrupted course, either in time or in place, as a series of persons or things; consecutive.

Send the successive ills through ages down. Prior.

2†. Inherited by succession; having or giving the right of succeeding to an inheritance; hereditary.

And countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title with your swords.
Shak., Tit. And., i. 1. 4.

This function is successiue, and by tradition they teach their eldest sonnes the mysterie of this iniquitie.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 752.

Successive indorsements. See indorsement, 3 (a).

successively (suk-ses′iv-li), adv. 1. In succession; in a series or uninterrupted order, one following another.

These wet and dry Seasons do as successively follow each other as Winter and Summer do with us.
Dampier, Voyages, II. iii. 2.

2. By order of succession and inheritance.

But as successively from blood to blood,
Your right of birth, your empery, your own.
Shak., Rich. III., iii. 7. 135.

3†. Successfully; fully; completely; entirely. Fairfax. (Imp. Dict.) successiveness (suk-ses′iv-nes), n. The state of being successive. Bailey.

successless (suk-ses′les), a. [< success + -less.] Without success.

Successless wars, and poverty behind.
Dryden, Pal. and Arc., ii. 587. successlessly (suk-ses′les-li), adv. In a successless manner; without success. Imp. Dict.

successlessness (suk-ses′les-nes), n. The state of being successless; want of success. Imp. Dict.

successor (suk-ses′ọr), n. [< F. successeur = Sp. sucesor = Pg. successor = It. successore, < L. successor, a follower, one who succeeds, < succedere, follow after, succeed: see succeed.] One who or that which succeeds or follows; one who takes the place which another has left, and sustains the like part or character: correlative to predecessor.

I here declare you rightful successor,
And heir immediate to my crown.
Dryden, Secret Love, v. 1.

The splendid literature of the classic period in Greece and Rome had no successors, but only the feeblest of imitators. N. A. Rev., CXL. 329.

Singular successor. See singular.

successorship (suk-ses′ọr-ship), n. [< successor + -ship.] The state or office of a successor; the position of being in the line of succession.

successory (suk-ses′ọ-ri), a. [< LL. successorius, of or belonging to succession, < successor, one who succeeds: see successor.] Of or pertaining to succession.

succi, n. Plural of succus.

succiduous (suk-sid′ū-us), a. [< L. succiduus, sinking down, failing, < succidere, sink down, < sub, under, + cadere, fall: see cadent. Cf. deciduous.] Ready to fall; falling. [Rare.] Imp. Dict.

succiferous (suk-sif′ẹ-rus), a. [< L. succus, sucus, juice, + -i- + ferre = E. bear[1]: see -ferous.] Producing or conveying sap. Imp. Dict.

succin (suk′sin), n. [< L. succinum, sucinum, amber (usually called electrum).] Amber.

succinate (suk′si-nāt), n. [< succin(ic) + -ate[1].] A salt of succinic acid.

succinated (suk′si-nā-ted), a. [< succin(ic) + -ate[1] + -ed[2].] Combined with or containing succinic acid.

succinct (suk-singkt′), a. [= F. succinct = Sp. sucinto = Pg. It. succinto, < L. succinctus, pp. of succingere, gird below or from below, tuck up, < sub, under, + cingere, gird: see cincture.] 1. Drawn up, or held up, by or as by a girdle or band; passed through the girdle, as a loose garment the folds of which are so retained; hence, unimpeded. [Rare.]

His habit fit for speed succinct. Milton, P. L., iii. 643.

Over her broad brow in many a round, . . .
Succinct, as toil prescribes, the hair was wound
In lustrous coils, a natural diadem.
Lowell, Ode for Fourth of July, 1876, i. 1.

2. Compressed into a small compass, especially into few words; characterized by verbal brevity; short; brief; concise; terse: as, a succinct account of the proceedings of the council.

Hee [man] is stiled a little and succinct world within himselfe. Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 83.

A strict and succinct style is that where you can take away nothing without losse, and that losse to be manifest.
B. Jonson, Discoveries.

A tale should be judicious, clear, succinct,
The language plain, and incidents well link'd.
Cowper, Conversation, l. 225.

3. In entom., girdled, as a lepidopterous pupa; having the character of those chrysalids which are supported by a silken thread around the middle. See cut b under Papilionidæ.—Syn. 2. Condensed, Laconic, etc. See concise.

succinctly (suk-singkt′li), adv. In a succinct manner; briefly; concisely; tersely: as, the facts were succinctly stated.

succinctness (suk-singkt′nes), n. The state or character of being succinct; brevity; conciseness; terseness: as, the succinctness of a narration.

succinctorium (suk-singk-tō′ri-um), n.; pl. succinctoria (-ä). [LL., < L. succinctus, pp. of succingere, gird: see succinct.] A vestment worn on solemn occasions by the Pope, similar in shape to a maniple, and hanging on his left side from a cincture or girdle (also called succinctorium or subcingulum) answering to the lower of the two girdles formerly worn by bishops with a similar pendent ornament, sometimes on both sides. It has been variously explained as originally a towel or cloth, and connected by some with the gremial or the Greek epigonation, or as a purse, at first a pair of purses. It has embroidered upon it an Agnus Dei bearing a banner. Also subcinctorium.

succinctory (suk-singk′tọ-ri), n.; pl. succinctories (-riz). [< LL. succinctorium: see succinctorium.] Same as succinctorium.

Succinea (suk-sin′ẹ̄-ä), n. [NL. (Drapiez), < L. succineus, sucineus, of amber, < succinum, sucinum, amber: see succin.] The typical genus of Succineidæ; the amber-snails. Also Succinæa, Succinia.

Succineidæ (suk-si-nē′i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Succinea + -idæ.] A family of geophilous pulmonate gastropods, typified by the genus Succinea. The shell is more or less developed, spiral, thin, and transparent; the mantle is more or less included; the jaw is surmounted by an accessory quadrangular plate; and the teeth are differentiated into three kinds.

succinic (suk-sin′ik), a. [< succin + -ic.] Of or pertaining to amber; obtained from amber.—Succinic acid, $C_4H_6O_4$, a dibasic acid crystallizing in white monoclinic tables having a faint acid taste and quite soluble in water. It is obtained by the dry distillation of amber, by the fermentation of calcium malate, and in small amount is a product of a variety of fermentations. It was formerly employed in medicine, under the name of salt of amber. Also called acid of amber.

succinite (suk′si-nīt), n. [< succin + -ite[2].] 1. An amber-colored variety of lime-garnet.—2. A name given to amber.

succinous (suk′si-nus), a. [< L. succinus, sucinus, of amber: see succin.] Pertaining to or resembling amber.

succirubra-bark (suk-si-rō′brä-bärk), n. [< NL. succirubra, specific name, fem. of succiruber*, < L. succus, sucus, juice, + ruber, red: see red.] The bark of Cinchona succirubra; red cinchona.

succise (suk-sīs′), a. In bot., appearing as if cut or broken off at the lower end. A. Gray.

succision† (suk-sizh′ọn), n. [< LL. succisio(n-), a cutting off or away, < L. succidere, pp. succisus, cut off, cut from below, < sub, under, + cædere, cut.] The act of cutting off or down.

In the succision of trees. Bacon. (Imp. Dict.) succivorous (suk-siv′ọ-rus), a. [< L. succus, sucus, juice, + vorare, devour.] Feeding upon the juices of plants, as an insect.

succlamation† (suk-klā-mā′shọn), n. [< L. succlamatio(n-), a crying out, < succlamare, cry out, exclaim after or in reply, < sub, under, after, + clamare, cry out: see claim.] A shouting after; a calling after, as to deter.

Why may we not also, by some such succlamations as these, call off young men to the better side?
Plutarch's Morals (trans.), iii. 412.

succor, succour (suk′ọr), v. t. [< ME. socouren, sokouren, soucouren, socoren, sucuren, < OF. sucurre, soscorre, soscorrer, soscorrir, later secourir, F. secourir = Pr. soccorre, secorre, secorrer = Sp. socorrer = Pg. soccorrer = It. soccorrere, < L. succurrere, subcurrere, run under, run to the aid of, aid, help, succor, < sub, under, + currere, run: see current.] To help or relieve when in difficulty, want, or distress; assist and deliver from suffering.

And anon the Cristene men kneleden to the grounde, and made hire preyeres to God, to sokoure hem.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 260.

He is able to succour them that are tempted. Heb. ii. 18.

Bethink thee, mayest thou not be born
To raise the crushed and succor the forlorn?
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, III. 106.

succor, succour (suk′ọr), n. [< ME. socour, socours, socurs, sucurs, < OF. sucurs, secours, souscors, F. secours = Pr. socors, secors = Sp. socorro = Pg. soccorro = It. soccorso, < ML. succursus, help, succor, < L. succurrere, help, succor: see succor, v.] 1. Aid; help; assistance.

Thus, alas! withouten his socours,
Twenty tyme yswowned hath she thanne.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 1341.

My noble father, . . .
Flying for succour to his servant.
Shak., Hen. VIII., ii. 1. 109.

She . . . knew them all, had studied their wants, had again and again felt in what way they might best be succored, could the means of succor only be found.
Charlotte Brontë, Shirley, xiv.

2. The person or thing that brings relief; especially, troops serving as an aid or assistance.

Than com the socours on bothe sides, and ther be-gan the bataile a-bowte Gawein fell and longe lastinge.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 198.

The levied succours that should lend him aid.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., iv. 4. 23.

Take up the bodies; mourn in heart, my friends;
You have lost two noble succours; follow me.
Fletcher, Double Marriage, v. 2.

succorable, succourable (suk'ọr-a-bl), a. [= F. secourable; as succor + -able.] 1. Capable of being succored or relieved; admitting of succor.—2†. Affording succor or relief; helpful; helping.

The goodness of God, which is very succourable, serveth for feet and wings to his servants that are wrongfully traduced. Cleaver, The Book of Proverbs, p. 434. (Latham.) succorer, succourer (suk'ọr-ėr), n. [< ME. socorour; < succor + *-er*1.] One who succors, or affords assistance or relief; a helper; a deliverer.

Socorourris of the said fraternite.
English Gilds (E. E. T. S.), p. 335.

She hath been a succourer of many, and of myself also.
Rom. xvi. 2.

succoress† (suk'ọr-es), n. [< succor + -ess.] A female helper.

Of trauayl of Troians, O Queene, thee succeres only.
Stanihurst, Æneid, i.

succorless, succourless (suk'ọr-les), a. [< succor + -less.] Destitute of succor, help, or relief. Drayton, Queen Isabella to Rich. II.

succory (suk'ọ-ri), n. [A corruption of cichory, now chicory: see chicory.] The chicory, Cichorium Intybus. See Catananche.—Gum succory, an Old World composite plant, Chondrilla juncea, with straggling branches and small yellow heads, the leaves small except the radical. A narcotic gum is said to be obtained from it on the island of Lemnos. The plant is abundantly naturalized in Maryland and Virginia.—Lamb's-succory, a low stemless composite herb, Arnoseris minima, which is found in central and northern Europe. The scapes bear single small yellow heads.—Poisonous succory, Crepis fœtida.—Swine's-succory, the hog-succory or lamb's-succory. Also called dwarf nipplewort.—Wild succory, the common or wild chicory. (See also hog-succory.)

succose (suk'ōs), a. [< L. succus, sucus, juice, + -ose.] Full of juice.

succotash (suk'ọ-tash), n. [Also succatash, suckatash, succatush; < Amer. Ind. (Narragansett msickquatash).] A dish consisting of Indian corn (maize) and beans, variously prepared. The early settlers in New England and Virginia found it a favorite dish among the Indians. In winter it was and still is in some parts of New England prepared from hulled corn and dried beans, but it usually consists of green corn and beans, with or without a piece of salt pork or other meat.

According to him [Roger Williams, Key, pp. 208, 221], the Indian msickquatash was boiled corn whole.
Trans. Amer. Antiq. Soc., IV. 188, note.

The wise Huron is welcome; . . . he is come to eat his succatush with his brothers of the lakes.
J. F. Cooper, Last of Mohicans, xxxviii.

By and by, the old woman poured the contents of the pot into a wooden trough, and disclosed a smoking mess of the Indian dish denominated succotash—to wit, a soup of corn and beans, with a generous allowance of salt pork.
H. B. Stowe, Oldtown, p. 157.

succour, succourable, etc. See succor, etc.

succub (suk'ub), n. [< F. succube, < L. succuba: see succuba.] Same as succuba.

succuba (suk'ū-bạ), n.; pl. succubæ (-bē). [< L. succuba, subcuba, m. and f., one who has sexual connection with another, a strumpet, < succumbere (cf. succubare), lie under: see succumb.] A female demon fabled to have sexual connection with men in their sleep.

We'll call him Cacodemon, with his black gib there, his succuba, his devil's seed, his spawn of Phlegethon, that, o' my conscience, was bred o' the spume of Cocytus.
Beau. and Fl., Knight of Malta, v. 2.

succubate (suk'ū-bāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. succubated, ppr. succubating. [< L. succubatus, pp. of succubare, lie under: see succuba.] To have carnal knowledge of (a man), as a succuba.

succubine (suk'ū-bin), a. [< succuba + *-ine*1.] Of the nature of, or characteristic of, a succuba.

Oh happy the slip from his Succubine grip
That saved the Lord Abbot.
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 254.

succubous (suk'ū-bus), a. [< L. succumbere, lie under (see succuba), + -ous.] In bot., having the anterior margin of one leaf passing beneath the posterior margin of that succeeding it, as in the foliage of certain of the Jungermanniaceæ: opposed to incubous.

succubus (suk'ū-bus), n.; pl. succubi (-bī). [< ML. succubus, a masc. form of L. succuba, regarded as fem. only: see succuba. Cf. incubus.] A demon fabled to have sexual intercourse with human beings in their sleep.

So Men (they say), by Hell's Delusions led,
Have ta'en a Succubus to their Bed.
Cowley, The Mistress, Not Fair.

The witches' circle intact, charms undisturbed
That raised the spirit and succubus.
Browning, Ring and Book, I. 236.

succula (suk'ū-lạ), n.; pl. succulæ (-lē). [Prop. sucula; L. sucula, a winch, windlass, capstan.] A bare axis or cylinder with staves on it to move it round, but no drum.

succulence (suk'ū-lens), n. [< succulen(t) + -ce.] The character of being succulent; juiciness: as, the succulence of a peach.

succulency (suk'ū-len-si), n. [As succulence (see -cy).] Same as succulence.

succulent (suk'ū-lent), a. [= F. succulent = Sp. suculento = Pg. succulento = It. succulento, L. succulentus, suculentus, full of juice, sappy, < succus, prop. sucus, juice, < sugere, suck: see *suck*1. Cf. *suck*2.] 1. Full of juice; specifically, in bot., juicy; thick and fleshy: noting plants that have the stems or leaves thick or fleshy and juicy, as the houseleek and live-forever, the families Cactaceæ, Crassulaceæ, etc.

As the leaves are not succulent, little more juice is pressed out of them than they have imbibed.
Cook, First Voyage, i. 18.

Hence—2. Figuratively, affording mental sustenance; not dry.

It occurred to her that when she had known about them [glimpses of Lingon heraldry] a good while they would cease to be succulent themes of converse or meditation, and Mrs. Transome, having known them all along, might have felt a vacuum in spite of them.
George Eliot, Felix Holt, xl.

succulently (suk'ū-lent-li), adv. In a succulent manner; juicily.

succulous (suk'ū-lus), a. [< L. succul(ent) + -ous.] Succulent. Imp. Dict.

succumb (su-kum'), v. i. [= F. succomber = Sp. sucumbir = Pg. succumbir = It. succombere, < L. succumbere, lie under, sink down, submit, yield, succumb, < sub, under, + cubare, lie down.] To sink or give way under pressure or superior force; be defeated; yield; submit; hence, to die.

He, too, had finally succumbed, had been led captive in Cæsar's triumph.
Sir E. Creasy, Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World, v.

In general, every evil to which we do not succumb is a benefactor. Emerson, Compensation.

succumbent† (su-kum'bent), a. [< succumben(t-)s, ppr. of succumbere, submit, yield: see succumb.] Yielding; submissive.

Queen Morphandra . . . useth to make nature herself not only succumbent and passive to her desires, but actually subservient and pliable to her transmutations and changes. Howell, Parly of Beasts, p. 2. (Davies.) succumbentes (suk-um-ben'tēz), n. pl. [L., pl. of ppr. of succumbere, submit, fall down: see succumb.] The class of penitents also known as kneelers.

The succumbentes were passing the silver gates on their way out. J. M. Neale, Eastern Church, i. 210.

succursal (su-kėr'sạl), a. [< F. succursale, an establishment that contributes to the success of another, a subsidiary branch, < ML. succursus, aid, help, succor: see succor.] Serving as a subsidiary church, or chapel of ease (which see, under chapel).

Not a city was without its cathedral, surrounded by its succursal churches, its monasteries and convents.
Milman, Hist. Latin Christianity, VI. 564.

succus (suk'us), n.; pl. succi (-sī). [NL., < L. succus, prop. sucus, juice, moisture: see *suck*2, succulent.] 1. In anat. and physiol., juice; one of certain fluid secretions of the body specified by a qualifying term.—2. In med., the extracted juice of different plants: as, succus liquoritiæ, Spanish licorice.—Succus entericus, intestinal juice, the secretion of the small glands of the intestinal walls. It seems to have more or less feeble amylolytic and proteolytic properties.—Succus gastricus, gastric juice.—Succus pancreaticus, pancreatic juice.

succuss (su-kus'), v. t. [< L. succussus, pp. of succutere, fling up, shake up, < sub, under, + quatire, shake, disturb: see quash. Cf. concuss, discuss, percuss.] To shake suddenly for any purpose, as to elicit a splashing sound in pneumothorax.

succussation (suk-u-sā'shọn), n. [< L. succussare, pp. succussatus, shake or jerk up and down, freq. < succutere, pp. succussus, fling up: see succuss.] 1. A trot or trotting. [Rare.]

Lifting one foot before and the cross foot behind, which is succussation or trotting. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., iv. 6.

2. A shaking; succussion.

By a more frequent and a more convulsive elevation and depression of the diaphragm, and the succussations of the intercostal and abdominal muscles in laughter, to drive the gall and other bitter juices from the gall-bladder . . . down into their duodenums.
Sterne, Tristram Shandy, iv. 22.

succussion (su-kush'ọn), n. [= F. succussion, < L. succussio(n-), a shaking, < succutere, shake up: see succuss.] 1. The act of shaking.—2. A shaking; a violent shock.

If the trunk is the principal seat of lesion, as . . . from violent succussion.
J. M. Carnochan, Operative Surgery, p. 111.

3. A method in physical diagnosis which consists in grasping the thorax between both hands and shaking it quickly to elicit sounds, and thus to detect the presence of liquid, etc., in the pleural sacs.—Succussion sound, a splashing sound developed by sudden movements of the body, as in pneumohydrothorax or pneumopyothorax.

succussive (su-kus'iv), a. [< L. succussus, a shaking, jolting, < succutere, shake up: see succuss.] Characterized by a shaking motion, especially an up-and-down movement.

such (such), a. and pron. [Early mod. E. also soch, soche; dial. sich, sech, Sc. sic, sick, sik, etc.; < ME. such, suche, soche, siche, also unassibilated sik, sike, contracted, with loss of w, from swich, swech, swuch, swych, swyche, itself contracted, with loss of l, from swilch, an assibilated form of swilc, swilk, swylk, < AS. swylc, swilc, swelc = OS. sulik = OFries. sullik, sellech, selik, selk, salk, sulch, sek, suk = MD. solick, solck, sulck, D. zulk = MLG. solik, sollik, sollek, solk, LG. sölk, sulk, suk = OHG. sulīh, solīh, solh, MHG. sulich, solich, solch, G. solch = Icel. slíkr (> ME. slike) = OSw. salik, Sw. slik = Norw. slik = Dan. slig = Goth. swaleiks, such; < AS., etc., swā, so, + -līc, an adj. formative connected with gelīc, like, līc, form, body: see *so*1 and *like*1, *-ly*1, and cf. which, Sc. whilk and thilk, of similar formation with such, and each, which contains the same terminal element.] I. a. 1. Of that kind; of the like kind or degree; like; similar. Such always implies from its sense a comparison with another thing, either unexpressed, as being involved in the context (as, we have never before seen such a sight (sc. as this is); we cannot approve such proceedings (sc. as these are); such men (sc. as he is) are dangerous), or expressed, such being then followed by as or that before the thing which is the subject of comparison (as, we have never had such a time as the present; give your children such precepts as tend to make them wiser and better; the play is not such that I can recommend it). As in such constructions often becomes by ellipsis the apparent subject of the verb of the second clause: as, such persons as are concerned in this matter. It is to be noted that, as with other pronominal adjectives, the indefinite article a or an never immediately precedes such, but is placed between it and the noun to which it refers, or such comes after the noun preceded by the article: as, such a man; such an honor; I never saw a man such as he.

Clerkus that knowen this sholde kenne lordes,
What Dauid seide of suche men as the sauter telleth.
Piers Plowman (C), viii. 92.

I am soche a fole that I love a-nother better than myself, and haue hir lerned so moche, where thourgh I am thus be-closed. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 694.

For truly, such as the noblemen be, such will the people be. Latimer, Sermon of the Plough.

The variety of the curious objects which it exhibiteth to the spectator is such that a man shall much wrong it to speake a little of it. Coryat, Crudities, I. 216.

True fortitude glories not in the feats of war as they are such, but as they serve to end War soonest by a victorious Peace. Milton, Hist. Eng., vi.

There is no place in Europe so much frequented by strangers, whether they are such as come out of curiosity, or such who are obliged to attend the court of Rome on several occasions.
Addison, Remarks on Italy (Works, ed. Bohn, I. 420).

Trade brings men to look each other in the face, and gives the parties the knowledge that these enemies over sea or over the mountain are such men as we, who laugh and grieve, who love and fear as we do. Emerson, War.

When such is followed by an attributive adjective before the noun, it assumes a quasi-adverbial appearance, as if equivalent to so: as, such terrible deeds; such reckless men; such different views; but it is still properly adjective, as when with the indefinite article: as, such a terrible deed; such a reckless man.

Such terrible impression made the dream.
Shak., Rich. III., i. 4. 63.

In Middle English such appears in another quasi-adverbial use, preceding a numeral, in the sense of 'as much,' or 'as many': as, such seven, 'seven such'—that is, 'seven times as many.'

This toun is ful of ladyes al aboute,
And to my doom, fayrer than swiche twelve
As ever she was, shal I fynden in some route.
Chaucer, Troilus, iv. 402.

The length is suche ten as the deepnesse.
Pilgrimage of the Manhode, p. 235. (Encyc. Dict.)

Such without the correlative clause with as is often used emphatically, noting a high degree or a very good or very bad kind, the correlative clause being either obvious, as, he did not expect to come to such honor (sc. as he attained), or quite lost from view, as, such a time! he is such a liar!

How have I lost a father! such a father!
Such a one, Decius! I am miserable Beyond expression.
Beau. and Fl., Laws of Candy, i. 2.

2. The same as previously mentioned or specified; not other or different.

A fayr syȝt to Mannes ye
To see such a cheualrye.
Arthur (ed. Furnivall), l. 300.

Soche was the a-vision that I saugh in my slepe.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 632.

In China they have a holy kind of Liquor made of such sort of Flowers for ratifying and binding of Bargains.
Howell, Letters, ii. 54.

In another garden to the east is such another mosque, called by the Mahometans Zalousa, who pretend also that some holy person is buried there.
Pococke, Description of the East, II. i. 86.

For such is fate, nor canst thou turn its course
With all thy rage, with all thy rebel force.
Pope, Iliad, viii. 595.

Such was the transformation of the baronage of early England into the nobility of later times.
Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 299.

3. Of that class: especially in the phrase as such 'in that particular character.'

Of onest merth sche cowde rith mosche,
Too daunce and synge and othre suche.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 50.

In it he melted lead for bullets
To shoot at foes and sometimes pullets,
To whom he bore so fell a grutch,
He ne'er gave quarter t' any such.
S. Butler, Hudibras, I. i. 358.

Witty men are apt to imagine they are agreeable as such.
Steele, Spectator, No. 386.

4. Some; certain: used to indicate or suggest a person or thing originally specified by a name or designation for which the speaker, for reasons of brevity, of convenience or reserve, or from forgetfulness, prefers to substitute, or must substitute, a general phrase: often repeated, such or such, or such and such (even with a single subject, but in this case implying repetition of action or selection of instances).

Newes then was brought unto the king
That there was sicke a won as hee.
Johnie Armstrang (Child's Ballads, VI. 251).

She complayneth of him that, not contented to take the wheate, the bacon, the butter, the oyle, the cheese, to giue vnto such and such out of ye doores, but also steleth from her, to giue vnto his minion, that which she spinneth at the rock. Guevara, Letters (tr. by Hellowes, 1577), p. 310.

I have appointed my servants to such and such a place.
1 Sam. xxi. 2.

When in rush'd one, and tells him such a knight
Is new arriv'd. Daniel, Civil Wars, iii.

In the mean time, those [conditions in life] of husband, wife, parent, child, master, servant, citizen of such or such a city, natural-born subject of such or such a country, may answer the purpose of examples.
Bentham, Introd. to Morals and Legislation, xvi. 11.

From the earliest times we hear of the king of such and such a province, the arch-king of all Ireland, the kings of Orkney and Man, even kings of Dublin.
The Century, XL. 295.

As such. See def. 3.—Never such. See never.—Such like. See like[2], a.

II. pron. 1. Such a person or thing; more commonly with a plural reference, such persons or things: by ellipsis of the noun.

Such as sit in darkness and in the shadow of death.
Ps. cvii. 10.

2. The same.

I bring you smiles of pity, not affection;
For such she sent.
Beau. and Fl., Knight of Malta, i. 1.

Suchospondylia (sū″kō-spon-dil′i-ạ), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. σοῦχος, the crocodile, + σπονδύλη, a vertebra: see spondyl.] One of the major groups into which Reptilia (except Pleurospondylia) are divisible, characterized by having upon the anterior dorsal vertebræ long and divided transverse processes, the divisions of these with which the tubercles of the ribs articulate being longer than those with which the heads of the ribs articulate. The group contains the existing order Crocodilia, and the fossil orders Dicynodontia, Ornithoscelida, and Pterosauria, which are collectively thus distinguished on the one hand from Herpetospondylia and on the other from Perospondylia. See these words, and Pleurospondylia.

suchospondylian (sū″kō-spon-dil′i-ạn), a. [< Suchospondylia + -an.] Having a crocodilian conformation of the vertebræ with regard to the articulation of the ribs, in consequence of the occurrence of long divided transprocesses of the vertebræ; pertaining to the Suchospondylia, or having their characters.

suchospondylous (sū-kō-spon′di-lus), a. [As Suchospondylia + -ous.] Same as suchospondylian.

suck[1] (suk), v. [Early mod. E. also souke; < ME. souken, sowken, suken (pret. sec, soc, soek, sok), < AS. sūcan (pret. seác, pp. socen), also sūgan = MD. suyghen, D. zuigen = MLG. sūgen = OHG. sūgan, MHG. sūgen, G. saugen = Icel. sjūga, sūga = Sw. suga = Dan. suge, suck (Goth. not recorded): Teut. root in two forms, √ suk and √ sug: = W. sugno, suck, = Gael. sug, suck, = OIr. sugim, Ir. sughaim, suck, = L. sūgere (pp. suctus) (LL. suctiare*, > It. succiare = OF. succer, sucer), suck (cf. L. sucus, succus, juice: see succulent, suction); = Lett. sugu, suck, = OBulg. sŭsati, suck. Hence ult. soak (of which the ME. form soken was more or less confused with the ME. forms of suck), suckle, suckling, honeysuckle, etc.] I. trans. 1. To draw into the mouth by action of the lips and tongue which produces a partial vacuum.

The milk thou suck'dst from her did turn to marble.
Shak., Tit. And., ii. 3. 144.

The Bee and the Spider suck Honey and Poison out of one Flower. Howell, Letters, iii. 4.

2. To draw something from with the mouth; specifically, to draw milk from.

A certain woman . . . lifted up her voice, and said unto him, Blessed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou hast sucked. Luke xi. 27.

Did a child suck every day a new nurse, I make account it would be no more affrighted with the change of faces at six months old than at sixty. Locke, Education, § 115.

Some [bees] watch the food, some in the meadows ply,
Taste every bud, and suck each blossom dry.
Addison, tr. of Virgil's Georgics, iv.

3. To draw in or imbibe by any process; inhale; absorb: usually with in, out, away, etc.: as, to suck in air; a sponge sucks in water.

Wise Dara's province, year by year,
Like a great sponge, sucked wealth and plenty up.
Lowell, Dara.

4. To draw or drain.

Old ocean too suck'd through the porous globe.
Thomson, Autumn, l. 770.

5. To draw in, as a whirlpool; swallow up; ingulf.

As waters are by whirlpools sucked and drawn. Dryden.

Thus far no suspicion has been suffered to reach the disciple that he is now rapidly approaching to a torrent that will suck him into a new faith.
De Quincey, Essenes, iii.

6†. To draw in or obtain by fraudulent devices; soak.

For ther is no theef withoute a lowke,
That helpeth hym to wasten, and to sowke
Of that he brybe kan or borwe may.
Chaucer, Cook's Tale, l. 52.

To suck in. (a) To draw into the mouth; imbibe; absorb. (b) To cheat; deceive; take in. [Slang.]—To suck the monkey. See monkey.—To suck up, to draw into the mouth; draw up by any sucking action.

II. intrans. 1. To draw fluid into the mouth; draw by producing a vacuum, as with a tube.

Where the bee sucks, there suck I.
Shak., Tempest, v. 1. 88.

2. To draw milk from a teat: said of the young of a mammal.—3. To draw air when the water is low or the valve imperfect: said of a pump.

This pump never sucks; these screws are never loose.
Emerson, Farming.

suck[1] (suk), n. [< suck[1], v. Cf. suck[2], n.] 1. Suction by the mouth or in any way; the act of sucking; a sucking force.

Powerful whirlpools, sucks and eddies.
Scribner's Mag., VIII. 611.

2. Nourishment drawn from the breast.

They moreover drawe unto themselves, togither with theyr sucke, even the nature and disposition of theyr nurses. Spenser, State of Ireland.

I have given suck, and know
How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me.
Shak., Macbeth, i. 7. 54.

3. A small draught. [Colloq.]

Well. No bouse? nor no tobacco?
Tap. Not a suck, sir;
Nor the remainder of a single can.
Massinger, New Way to Pay Old Debts, i. 1.

4. Rum or liquor of some kind. Tuft's Glossary.—5. Same as sucket, 1.

suck[2]† (suk), n. [< OF. (and F.) suc = Sp. suco = Pg. succo = It. succo, sugo, < L. succus, prop. sūcus, juice, moisture, < sugere, pp. suctus, suck: see suck[1], v., and cf. suck[1], n., with which suck[2] is confused.] Juice; succulence.

The force whereof pearceth the sucke and marie [marrow] within my bones.
Palace of Pleasure, ii. S 5 b. (Nares.) suckatash†, n. Same as succotash.

sucken (suk′n), n. [Also suckin; a var. of soken.] In Scots law, the district attached to a mill, or the whole lands astricted to a mill, the tenants of which are bound to bring their grain to the mill to be ground. See thirlage. Jamieson. [Lowland Scotch.]

suckener (suk′nėr), n. [< sucken + -er[1].] A tenant bound to bring his grain to a certain mill to be ground. See sucken.

suckeny†, n. [ME. suckiny, sukkenye, < OF. souquenie, sosquenie, souskanie, a surtout (> F. dim. souquenille, chiquenille), < ML. soscania, < MGr. σουκανία, a surtout; origin unknown.] A loose frock worn over their other clothes by carters, etc.

She hadde on a sukkenye,
That not of hempe ne heerdis was.
Rom. of the Rose, l. 1238.

sucker (suk′ėr), n. [< suck[1] + -er[1].] 1. One who or that which sucks; a suckling.

The entry of doubts is as so many suckers or spunges to draw use of knowledge.
Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii.

Specifically—(a) A sucking pig: a commercial term.

For suckers the demand was not very brisk.
Standard, Sept. 3, 1882. (Encyc. Dict.)

(b) A new-born or very young whale. (c) In ornith., a bird which sucks or is supposed to do so: only in composition. See goatsucker, honey-sucker. (d) In ichth., one of numerous fishes which suck in some way or are supposed to do so, having a conformation of the protrusive lips which suggests a sucker, or a sucker-like organ on any part of the body by means of which the fish adheres to foreign objects. (1) Any North American cyprinoid of the family Catostomidæ, as a carp-sucker, chub-sucker, hog-sucker, etc. There are about 60 species, of some 12 or 14 genera, almost confined to the fresh waters of North America, though one or two are Asiatic; they are little esteemed for food, the flesh being insipid and full of small bones. Leading generic forms besides Catostomus are Ictiobus and Bubalichthys, the buffalo-fishes; Carpiodes, the carp-suckers, as C. cyprinus, the quillback or skimback; Cycleptus, as C. elongatus, the black-horse, or gourd-seed sucker; Pantosteus, the hard-headed suckers; Erimyzon, the chub-suckers, as E. sucetta, the sweet sucker; Minytrema, the spotted suckers; Moxostoma, some of whose many species are called mullet, chub-mullet, jump-rocks, red-horse, etc.; and Quassilabia, or harelipped suckers. (See the distinctive names, with various cuts.) The typical genus Catostomus is an extensive one, including some of the commonest species, as C. commersoni, the white or brook sucker, 18 inches long, widely distributed from Labrador to Montana and southward to Florida; its section Hypentelium contains H. nigricans, the hog-sucker, hog-molly, or stone-lugger, etc. (2) Any fish of the genus Lepadogaster. The Cornish sucker is L. gouani; the Connemara sucker, L. candollei; the bimaculated or network sucker, L. bimaculatus. See cut under Lepadogaster. [Eng.] (3) A snail-fish or sea-snail; one of several different members of the family Liparididæ, as the unctuous sucker, Liparis vulgaris. See cuts under snail-fish. (4) The lump-sucker or lump-fish. See cut under Cyclopterus. (5) The sucking-fish or remora. See cut under Echeneis. (6) A cyclostomous fish, as the glutinous hag, Myxine glutinosa. See cut under hag[1], 3. (7) A Californian food-fish, the sciænoid Menticirrus undulatus.

2. A suctorial part or organ; a formation of parts by means of which an animal sucks, imbibes, or adheres by atmospheric pressure, as if sucking; a sucking-tube or sucking-disk. (a) The fin of a fish formed into a suctorial disk, as that of the remora. See cuts under Echeneis and Rhombochirus. (b) The mouth of a myzont or cyclostomous fish. (c) The haustellate or siphonal mouth-parts of an insect or siphonostomous crustacean; a sucking-tube, especially of a flea. See cut under chrysalis. (d) One of the cup-shaped sucking-disks or cupules on the lower surface of the expanded tarsi, found in certain aquatic beetles. They are either affixed directly to the joint, or the smaller ones are elevated on stems, and resemble wine-glasses in shape. (e) An adhesive pad of an insect's foot, as a fly's, by means of which it walks on walls and ceilings; a pulvillus. See cut under house-fly. (f) A sucking-disk or acetabulum of the arms of a cephalopod, as an octopus; one of the acetabuliferous arms of such an animal. See cut under cuttle-fish. (g) An adhesive or suctorial facet on the head or tail of various parasitic worms, as tapeworms or leeches; a bothrium. See cuts under Bucephalus, leech, and cestoid. (h) The disk-like suctorial mouth of a leech. (i) One of the ambulacral pedicels or tube-feet of echinoderms, as starfishes; a sucker-foot or sucker-tube.

3. The piston of a suction-pump.

Pretty store of oil must be poured into the cylinder, . . . that the sucker may slip up and down in it the more smoothly and freely. Boyle, Works, I. 6.

4. A pipe or tube through which anything is drawn.—5. In bot.: (a) A shoot rising from a subterranean creeping stem. Plants which emit suckers freely, as the raspberry and rose, are readily propagated by division. (b) A sprout from the root near or at a distance from the trunk, as in the pear and white poplar, or an adventitious shoot from the body or a branch of a tree. Compare propagulum (a).

Here, therefore, is our safest course, to make a retrenchment of all those excrescences of affections which like the wild and irregular sucker, draw away nourishment from the trunk.
Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 108.

(c) Same as haustorium.—6. A small piece of leather to the center of which a string is attached, used by children as a toy. When rendered flexible by wetting and pressed firmly down on a smooth object, as a stone, the adhesion of the two surfaces, due to atmospheric pressure, is so firm that a stone of considerable weight may be lifted by the string.

7. A parasite; a sponger; in recent use, also, a stupid person; a dolt. [Colloq.]

This sucker thinks nane wise
But him that can to immense riches rise.
Allan Ramsay, The General Mistake.

A person readily deceived . . . the . . . Suckers, . . . who, despite . . . oft-repeated warnings, . . . swallowed the hook so clumsily baited with "Bohemian Oats."
New York Semi-weekly Tribune, Jan. 11, 1887.

8. A cant name for an inhabitant of Illinois. [U. S.]—9. Same as sucket, 1. [Scotch.]

sucker (suk'ėr), v. [< sucker, n.] I. trans. 1. To strip off suckers or shoots from; deprive of suckers; specifically, to remove superfluous shoots from the root and at the axils of the leaves of (tobacco).

How the Indians ordered their tobacco I am not certain, . . . but I am informed they used to let it all run to seed, only succoring the leaves to keep the sprouts from growing upon and starving them; and when it was ripe they pulled off the leaves, cured them in the sun, and laid them up for use. Beverley, Virginia, II. ¶ 20.

2. To provide with suckers: as, the suckered arms of a cuttlefish. H. Spencer, Prin. of Psychol., § 5.

II. intrans. To send out suckers or shoots.

Its most marked characteristics, however, are its tendencies to sucker immoderately. Scribner's Mag., March, 1880, p. 762.

suckerel (suk'ėr-el), n. [< suck[1] + -erel, on model of pickerel.] A catostomoid fish of the Mississippi valley, Cycleptus elongatus; the Missouri or gourd-seed sucker, or black-horse, a singular catostomoid of large size (1½ to 2½ feet long), and of very dark or blackish coloration. See cut under Cycleptus.

sucker-fish (suk'ėr-fish), n. The sucking-fish or remora. Jour. Anthrop. Inst., XIX. 325.

sucker-foot (suk'ėr-fůt), n. 1. One of the suctorial tube-feet, or sucker-tubes, of an echinoderm; an ambulacral pedicel capable of acting as a sucker.—2. In entom., a proleg.

sucker-mouthed (suk'ėr-moutht), a. Having a mouth like that of the catostomoid fishes called suckers: as, the sucker-mouthed buffalo, a fish, Ictiobus bubalus.

sucker-rod (suk'ėr-rod), n. A rod which connects the brake and the bucket of a pump. E. H. Knight.

sucker-tube (suk'ėr-tūb), n. One of the sucker-feet of an echinoderm.

sucket (suk'et), n. [Partly an accom. form of succade, partly < suck[1] + -et. Cf. equiv. suck[1], 5, sucker, 9.] 1. A dried sweetmeat or sugar-plum; hence, a delicacy of any kind.

Windam, all rageinge, brake vppe Pinteados Caben, broke open his chestes, spoyled suche prouisyon of coulde stilled waters and suckettes as he hade prouided for his health, and lefte hym nothynge. R. Eden, First Books on America (ed. Arber, p. 377).

But, monsieur,
Here are suckets, and sweet dishes.
Fletcher, Sea Voyage, v. 2.

2. A sucking rabbit. Halliwell. [Obsolete or ★provincial in both uses.]

suckfish (suk'fish), n. 1. The sucking-fish or remora.—2. A crustacean parasite of the sperm-whale: so called by whalemen. Lobtailing is said to be done by the whale to rid itself of these troublesome creatures. C. M. Scammon.

suckin (suk'in), n. See sucken.

suck-in (suk'in), n. [< suck in: see suck[1].] A take-in; a fraud. [Slang.]

sucking (suk'ing), p. a. [< ME. souking; ppr. of suck[1], v.] 1. Drawing or deriving nourishment from the mother's breast; not yet weaned; very young.

There were three sucking pigs serv'd up in a dish. Massinger, City Madam, ii. 1.

Hence—2. Figuratively, very young and inexperienced; undergoing training; in the early stage of a career; in leading-strings; "vealy."

My enemies are but sucking critics, who would fain be nibbling ere their teeth are come. Dryden, All for Love, Pref.

The very curates . . . she . . . looked upon as sucking saints. Charlotte Brontë, Shirley, xiv.

3†. Draining; exhausting.

Accidia ys a souking sore. Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 117.

Sucking center, a nervous center believed to exist in the medulla, with afferent fibers from the fifth and glossopharyngeal nerves—the efferent fibers being in the facial, hypoglossus, third division of the fifth, and branches of the cervical plexus, which supply the depressors of the lower jaw.—Sucking dove, a sucker or dupe; a simpleton; a cony; a gull.

sucking-bottle (suk'ing-bot″l), n. A nursing-bottle.

sucking-disk (suk'ing-disk), n. A sucker; a discoidal sucking-organ, as an acetabulum: applied to any flat or concave expansive surface which functions as a sucker.

sucking-fish (suk'ing-fish), n. 1. A fish of the family Echeneididæ; a remora.—2. The lamprey. [Local, Eng.]

sucking-pump (suk'ing-pump), n. Same as suction-pump.

sucking-stomach (suk'ing-stum″ak), n. The haustellate or suctorial stomach of various insects and some crustaceans, which sucks up the juices of plants on which they feed or of the host on which they are parasites.

suckiny†, n. Same as suckeny.

suckle (suk'l), v.; pret. and pp. suckled, ppr. suckling. [Freq. of suck[1]. Cf. suckling.] I. trans. To give suck to; nurse at the breast.

She was a wight, if ever such wight were, . . .
To suckle fools and chronicle small beer.
Shak., Othello, ii. 1. 161.

II. intrans. To suck; nurse.

suckle† (suk'l), n. [< suckle, v.] A teat.

Two paps, which are not only suckles, but stilts to creep ★a shoare upon. Sir T. Herbert, Travels, p. 26.

suckler (suk'lėr), n. [< suckle + -er[1].] An animal which suckles its young; any mammal; also, a young one not yet weaned; a suckling.

Sucklers, or even weaned calves. The Field, Jan. 16, 1886. (Encyc. Dict.) sucklers (suk'lėrz), n. [Pl. of suckler.] The red clover, Trifolium pratense; also, the white clover, T. repens: so called because the flowers are sucked for honey. Johnston. [Provincial English.]

suckling (suk'ling), n. and a. [< ME. sokling, sokeling, sokelynge (= MD. suygelinck, sooghelinck, D. zuigeling = MHG. sūgelinc, G. säugling), a suckling, < soken, souken, suck, + -ling[1]. Cf. suckle.] I. n. 1. A suckler; a young animal not yet weaned.

Babes and sucklings. Ps. viii. 2.

The tend'rest Kid
And fattest of my Flock, a Suckling yet,
That ne'er had Nourishment but from the Teat.
Congreve, tr. of Eleventh Satire of Juvenal.

2. (a) The white clover, Trifolium repens; (b) the red clover, T. pratense; (c) the honeysuckle, Lonicera Periclymenum: so called because their flower-tubes are sucked for honey. Britten and Holland. [Prov. Eng.]—Lamb's suckling, the white clover, and the bird's-foot trefoil, Lotus corniculatus.—Yellow suckling, an agricultural name for the small yellow clover, Trifolium dubium.

II. a. Sucking, as a young mammal; not yet weaned; hence, figuratively, young and inexperienced.

O breast whereat some suckling sorrow clings.
Swinburne, Laus Veneris.

suckstone (suk'stōn), n. [< suck[1], v., + obj. stone.] The remora, Echeneis remora.

A little fishe called a suckstone, that staieth a ship under saile, remora. Withals, Dict., 1608.

sucre[1]†, n. and v. A Middle English form of sugar.

sucre[2] (sö'krā), n. The monetary unit of Ecuador, equal to 48.7 United States cents. Gold ten-sucre pieces and a silver sucre and its subdivisions are coined.

sucrose (sū'krōs), n. [< F. sucre (see sugar) + -ose.] A name sometimes used for cane-sugar, $C_{12}H_{22}O_{11}$, the most important of the disaccharides.

★suction (suk'shon), n. [< OF. suction, F. succion = Sp. succión, < L. as if suctio*(n-), < sugere, pp. suctus, suck: see suck.] The process or condition of sucking; the removal of air or gas from any interior space producing a diminution of pressure which induces an inrush of gas or liquid to restore the equilibrium. If the process is maintained, a continuous current is produced. See suction-pump and pump[1]. Also used attributively.—Suction curette of Teale, an instrument employed for the removal of a soft cataract from the eye.

suction-anemometer (suk'shon-an-e-mom″e-tėr), n. An anemometer in which a diminution of pressure caused by the wind is used as a measure of its velocity. Two different forms have been proposed, corresponding to two distinct ways in which a moving fluid produces a diminution of pressure. This, the so-called suction, is produced in the one by the wind blowing through a horizontal tube having a contracted section, and in the other by the wind blowing across the ★mouth of a vertical tube.

suction-box (suk'shon-boks), n. In paper-making, a chamber in which there is a partial vacuum, placed below the web of pulp to assist in removing the water from it.

suction-chamber (suk'shon-chām″bėr), n. The barrel or chamber of a pump into which the liquid is delivered from the suction-pipe.

suction-fan (suk'shon-fan), n. In milling, a fan for withdrawing by suction chaff and refuse from grain, or steam and hot air from meal as it comes from the burs. E. H. Knight.

suction-pipe (suk'shon-pīp), n. 1. The pipe leading from the bottom of a pump-barrel or -cylinder to the well, cistern, or reservoir from which the water or other liquid is to be drawn up. See pump[1].—2. An air-tight pipe running from beneath a water-wheel to the level of the tail-race. It is said to render the whole fall available. E. H. Knight.

suction-plate (suk'shon-plāt), n. A form of dental plate for supporting an upper set of artificial teeth, held in position by atmospheric pressure induced by a vacuum between the plate and the roof of the mouth.

suction-primer (suk'shon-prī″mėr), n. A small force-pump fitted to a steam-pump, and used to fill the pump and drive out the air before ★admitting steam to the main pump.

suction-pump (suk'shon-pump), n. A pump having a barrel placed above the level of the water to be drawn, a suction-pipe extending from the barrel down into the water to be raised, an inlet-valve opening inward or toward the piston, and an outlet-valve in the piston. When the piston is raised, the air in the barrel below the piston expands, its tension is correspondingly diminished, and the pressure of the external air upon the surface of the liquid outside forces it up into the suction-tube. See pump[1].

Suction-pump.
a, piston; b, barrel; c, e, suction-pipe; d, pump-back or pump-box; e, valve in piston; f, valve which admits water into the barrel; g, spout, pump-dale, or dale.

suction-valve (suk'shon-valv), n. 1. In a suction-pump, the valve in the bottom of the barrel, below the piston.—2. In a steam-engine, a valve through which the rise of the plunger causes the water from the hot-well to flow into the feed-pump.

Suctoria (suk-tō'ri-ä), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of suctorius: see suctorious.] Suctorial animals: applied to various zoölogical groups in which the mouth is suctorial, haustellate, siphonostomous, or otherwise fitted for sucking. Specifically—(a†) In ichth., the cyclostomous fishes, or myzonts; the lampreys and hags, having the mouth formed into a sucker; in Cuvier's system, the second family of Chondropterygii branchiis fixis, later called Cyclostomata, or Cyclostomi, and Myzontes, and now known as the class Marsipobranchii. Also Suctorii. See cut under lamprey. (b†) In Vermes: (1) The suctorial or discophorous annelids; the leeches: now called Hirudinea. See cut under leech. (2) A branch of the phylum Platyhelmia, composed of the three classes Trematoidea, Cestoidea, and Hirudinea: an artificial group contrasted with a branch Ciliata. E. R. Lankester. (c†) In entom., the suctorial apterous insects: so called by De Geer; in Latreille's system, the fourth order of insects, also called by him Siphonaptera, and often known as Aphaniptera; the fleas. (d) In Crustacea, the Rhizocephala or Centrogonida. (e) In Protozoa, the suctorial, acinetiform, or tentaculiferous infusorians; in the classification of Claparède and Lachmann (1858–60), the third order of Infusoria, consisting of a family Acinetina, with 8 genera: called by Kent Tentaculifera suctoria. See Tentaculifera.

suctorial (suk-tō'ri-al), a. [< suctori-ous + -al.] 1. Adapted for sucking; functioning as a sucker or sucking-organ of any kind; sucking; haustellate: as, the suctorial mouth of a lamprey; the suctorial tongue (antlia) of a butterfly or moth; the suctorial proboscis of a flea; the suctorial disk of a sucking-fish, an octopod, a leech; the suctorial facets of a trematoid worm; the suctorial tentacles of an infusorian.—2. Capable of sucking; fitted for imbibing fluid or for adhering by means of suckers; provided with a sucking-organ, whether for imbibing or for adhering; of or pertaining to the Suctoria, in any sense: as, a suctorial bird, fish, worm, insect, crustacean, or animalcule.—Suctorial fishes, the cyclostomous fishes, or lampreys and hags: same as Suctoria (a). The lancelets have been called fringed-mouthed suctorial fishes.

suctorian (suk-tō'ri-an), n. [< suctori-ous + -an.] A suctorial animal; a member of the Suctoria, in any sense; especially, a cyclostomous fish.

suctorious (suk-tō'ri-us), a. [< NL. suctorius, < L. suctorius, < sugere, pp. suctus, suck: see suck[1].] Same as suctorial.—Suctorious mandibles, in entom., mandibles which are tubular, having an orifice through which liquid food passes to the mouth, as in the larvæ of certain aquatic beetles and in the young ant-lion.

sud (sud), n. [A var. of sod, or from the same ult. source: see sod, seethe. Cf. suds.] 1. The drift-sand left in meadows by the overflowing of rivers. [Prov. Eng.]—2. A young scallop of the first year, from July to November.

sud (sud), v. t.; pret. and pp. sudded, ppr. sudding. [< sud, n.] To cover with drift-sand by flood. Wright. [Prov. Eng.]

sudamina (sū-dam'i-nä), n. pl. [NL., < L. sudare, sweat: see sudation.] In pathol., vesicles resembling millet-seeds in form and magnitude, appearing on the skin in various fevers.

In sudamina alba the epithelium is macerated and the vesicular contents milky; in sudamina crystallina the vesicles are clear; and in sudamina rubra they have a reddish base.

sudaminal (sū-dam′i-nal), a. [< sudamina + -al.] Pertaining to or of the nature of sudamina.

Sudanese (sö-da-nēs′ or -nēz′), a. and n. [< Sudan (see def.) + -ese.] I. a. Of or pertaining to Sudan, or Soudan, a region in Africa lying south of Sahara, and sometimes extended to include the valley of the middle Nile and the region eastward to the Red Sea.

II. n. sing. and pl. An inhabitant or the inhabitants of Sudan.

Also Soudanese.

sudarium (sū-dā′ri-um), n.; pl. sudaria (-ä). [L.: see sudary.] A handkerchief.

The most intrepid veteran of us all dares no more than wipe his face with his cambric sudarium.
Sydney Smith, in Lady Holland, iii.

Specifically—(a) The legendary sweat-cloth; the handkerchief of St. Veronica, according to tradition miraculously impressed with the mask of Christ; also, the napkin about Christ's head (John xx. 7). (b) In general, any miraculous portrait of Christ. See vernicle. (c) Same as maniple, 4. (d) The orarium or vexillum of a pastoral staff.

sudary (sū′da-ri), n.; pl. sudaries (-riz). [< ME. sudarye, < L. sudarium, a cloth for wiping off perspiration, a handkerchief, < sudare, sweat: see sudation.] Same as sudarium.

He shewed me the clothe in ye whiche I wrapped his body and also the sudarye that I bounde his hede withall. Joseph of Arimathie (E. E. T. S.), p. 30.

Here a monk fumbled at the sick man's mouth
With some undoubted relic — a sudary
Of the Virgin. Browning, Paracelsus, iii.

sudation (sū-dā′shon), n. [< L. sudatio(n-), a sweating, perspiration, < sudare, pp. sudatus, sweat: see sweat.] A sweating.

sudatorium (sū-da-tō′ri-um), n.; pl. sudatoria (-ä). [L., < sudare, pp. sudatus, sweat.] A hot-air bath for producing perspiration.

sudatory (sū′da-tō-ri), n. and a. [< L. sudatorius, pertaining to or serving for sweating, < sudare, pp. sudatus, sweat.] I. n.; pl. sudatories (-riz). That which is sudorific; a sweat-bath; a sudatorium; a diaphoretic.

Neere to this cave are the natural stoves of St. Germain, of the nature of sudatories, in certaine chambers partition'd with stone for the sick to sweate in.
Evelyn, Diary, Feb. 7, 1645.

II. a. 1. Sweating or perspiring.—2. Promoting or inducing perspiration; sudorific; diaphoretic.—Sudatory fever, sweating-sickness.

sudd (sud), n. [< Ar. sudd, sodd, a barrier, obstacle.] An impenetrable mass of floating water-plants interlaced with trunks of trees and decayed vegetable matter, forming floating islands in the White Nile.

It is in this part of the White Nile that, from time to time, forms the sudd, that vegetable barrier which completely closes the river to navigation.
Scribner's Mag., VI. 520.

sudden (sud′n), a. and n. [Early mod. E. also suddain, soudaine, sodeine, < ME. sodain, sodein, sodeyn, soden, sodene, < OF. sodain, sodeyne, sudain, soubdain, soudain, F. soudain = Pr. sobtan, subtan, subitan = Sp. subitáneo = Pg. subitaneo = It. subitaneo, subitano, sudden, < L. subitaneus, ML. also subi anius, sudden, < subitus, sudden, lit. that which has come stealthily, orig. pp. of subire, come or go stealthily, < sub, under, + ire, go: see iter[1]. Cf. subitaneous.] I. a. 1. Happening without notice, instantly and unexpectedly; immediate; instant.

To glad, ne to sory, but kepe thee euene bitwene
For los, or lucre, or ony case sodene.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 31.

From lightning and tempest; from plague, pestilence, and famine; from battle and murder, and from sudden death, Good Lord, deliver us!
Book of Common Prayer, Litany.

For when they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them. 1 Thes. v. 3.

2. Found or hit upon unexpectedly.

Up sprung a suddain Grove, where every Tree
Impeopled was with Birds of softest throats.
J. Beaumont, Psyche, iv. 88.

A sudden road! a long and ample way.
Pope, Iliad, xv. 409.

A sudden little river crossed my path,
As unexpected as a serpent comes.
Browning, Childe Roland.

3. Hastily made, put in use, employed, prepared, etc.; quick; rapid.

Never was such a sudden scholar made.
Shak., Hen. V., i. 1. 32.

These pious flourishes and colours, examin'd thoroughly, are like the Apples of Asphaltis, appearing goodly to the sudden eye, but look well upon them, or at least but touch them, and they turne into Cinders.
Milton, Eikonoklastes, xxiv.

Nothing is more certain than that great poets are not sudden prodigies, but slow results.
Lowell, Study Windows, p. 234.

4. Hasty; violent; rash; precipitate; passionate.

The wordes of this sodeyn Diomede.
Chaucer, Troilus, v. 1024.

I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name. Shak., Macbeth, iv. 3. 59.

How, child of wrath and anger! the loud lie?
For what, my sudden boy?
B. Jonson, Alchemist, iv. 1.

5. In zoöl., abrupt; sharply defined from neighboring parts: as, a sudden antennal club; a sudden truncation.=Syn. 1. Unexpected, unanticipated, unlooked-for, abrupt.

II. n. That which is sudden; a surprise; an unexpected occurrence. [Obsolete except in the phrases below.]

I would wish parents to mark heedfully the witty excuses of their children, especially at suddains and surprizals. Sir H. Wotton, Reliquiæ, p. 84.

All of (on) a sudden, at the suddent, on a (the) sudden, of a sudden, of the suddent, sooner than was expected; without the usual preparatives; all at once and without notice; hastily; unexpectedly; suddenly.

Before we had gone far, we saw all of a sudden about fifty Arab horse coming towards us; immediately every one had his fire arms ready.
Pococke, Description of the East, II. i. 145.

In the warre wee haue seene many Capteines loste for no other cause but for that, when they shoulde haue done a thing at the soudaine, they haue sit downe with great leysure to take counsell.
Guevara, Letters (tr. by Hellowes, 1577), p. 70.

How art thou lost! how on a sudden lost.
Milton, P. L., ix. 900.

When you have a mind to leave your master and are too bashful to break the matter, for fear of offending him, the best way is to grow rude and saucy of a sudden.
Swift, Advice to Servants (General Directions).

Why may not I be a favourite on the sudden? I see nothing against it. Beau. and Fl., Woman-Hater, i. 3.

O' the sudden, as good gifts are wont befall.
Browning, Ring and Book, II. 158.

On such a suddent, so suddenly.

Is it possible, on such a sudden, you should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir Rowland's youngest son?
Shak., As you Like it, i. 3. 27.

Upon all suddens†, for all unexpected occurrences; for all emergencies.

Be circumspect and carefull to haue your ships in readinesse, and in good order alwaies, and vpon all suddens.
Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 454.

sudden (sud′n), adv. [< sudden, a.] Suddenly; unexpectedly.

suddenly (sud′n-li), adv. [< ME. sodeynly, sodeynliche; < sudden + -ly[2].] 1. In a sudden or unexpected manner; unexpectedly; hastily; without preparation or premeditation; quickly; immediately.—2. In zoöl., sharply; abruptly; squarely: as, a part suddenly truncate.

suddenness (sud′n-nes), n. The state or character of being sudden, in any sense; a coming or happening without previous notice.

suddenty (sud′n-ti), n. [< OF. soudiainete, F. sudaineté, < ML. subitaneïta(t-)s,* suddenness, < L. subitaneus, sudden: see sudden.] Suddenness. [Scotch.]—On (of) a suddenty, on a sudden; without premeditation.

My father's tongue was loosed of a suddenty.
Scott, Redgauntlet, letter xi.

sudder (sud′ėr), a. [< Hind. sadr, < Ar. sadr, chief.] Chief: in Bengal specifically noting several important departments of government: as, the sudder court or sudder adawlet; the sudder board (of revenue); the sudder station, or the chief station of a district, where the civil officials reside.

An Indian lawyer expresses this by saying that the three older High Courts were formed by the fusion of the Supreme and Sudder Courts, words which have the same meaning, but which indicate very different tribunals.
Maine, Village Communities, p. 36.

sud-oil (sud′oil), n. In soap-making, oil or fat recovered from soapy waters or suds. The addition to such waters of an acid in sufficient quantity to neutralize the alkali frees the oily matters, which then separate from the water and are so regained.

sudor (sū′dor), n. [L., < sudare, sweat: see sweat.] Sweat or perspiration; the insensible vapor or sensible water which issues from the sudoriferous pores of the skin; diaphoresis.—Sudor anglicus, the English sweating-sickness.—Sudor cruentus, hemathidrosis.

sudoral (sū′dō-ral), a. [< sudor + -al.] Of or pertaining to sudor or sweat.

sudoriferous (sū-dō-rif′e-rus), a. [= F. sudorifère = Sp. sudorífero = Pg. It. sudorifero, < L. sudorifer, sweat-producing, < sudor (sudoris), sweat, + ferre = E. bear[1].] Bearing or producing sweat; sudoriparous.—Sudoriferous gland. Same as sweat-gland.

sudorific (sū-dō-rif′ik), a. and n. [= F. sudorifique = Sp. sudorífico = Pg. It. sudorifico, < L. sudor, sweat, + facere, make, do.] I. a. Causing, inducing, or promoting sweat; sudatory; diaphoretic.

A decoction of sudorific herbs. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 706.

Did you ever . . . burst out into sudorific exudation like a cold thaw? Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 117.

II. n. Something which promotes sweating; a diaphoretic.

sudoriparous (sū-dō-rip′a-rus), a. [< L. sudor, sweat, + parere, bring forth, produce.] Secreting sweat; producing perspiration.—Sudoriparous gland. Same as sweat-gland.

sudorous† (sū′dō-rus), a. [< LL. sudorus, sweaty, < L. sudor, sweat: see sudor.] Sweaty; sticky or clammy like sweat; consisting of or caused by sweat. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., v. 21.

Sudra (sö′drä), n. [Also Soodra (and Sooder); < Hind. sudra, < Skt. çūdra.] The lowest of the four principal castes into which Hindu society was anciently divided, composed of the non-Aryan aborigines of India, reduced to subjection or servitude by their Aryan conquerors.

The Brahmin still dodges the shadow of the Soodra, and the Soodra spits upon the footprint of the Pariah.
J. W. Palmer, The New and the Old, p. 289.

★suds (sudz), n. pl. [Prop. pl. of sud, var. of sod, lit. 'a bubbling or boiling': see sud, sod, seethe.] 1. Water impregnated with soap, forming a frothy mass; a lixivium of soap and water.

Alas! my miserable master, what suds art thou wash'd into! Marston, The Fawne, iv. 1.

Why, thy best shirt is in t' suds, and no time for t' starch and iron it. Mrs. Gaskell, Sylvia's Lovers, xvii.

2. The foam or spray churned up by a wounded whale; white water. [Slang.]

An officer of a boat never follows the wake of a right whale, for the moment the boat strikes the suds it is maintained that the whale is immediately made acquainted with the fact through some unknown agency.
Fisheries of U. S., V. ii. 261.

In the suds, in turmoil or difficulty; in distress. [Colloq.]

Hist, hist, I will be rul'd;
I will, i' faith; I will go presently:
Will you forsake me now, and leave me i' the suds?
Fletcher, Wildgoose Chase, ii. 3.

sue[1] (sū), v.; pret. and pp. sued, ppr. suing. [Early mod. E. also sew; < ME. suen, suwen, sewen, seuwen, < OF. suir, sewir, sevir, also sevre, sure, suivre, F. suivre = Pr. segre, seguir = Sp. Pg. seguir = It. seguire, follow, < LL. sequere,* follow, for L. sequi, follow: see sequent, and cf. ensue, pursue, suit, suite, etc.] I. trans. 1†. To follow; follow after; pursue; chase; follow in attendance; attend.

Maistre, I shal sue thee, whidir euer thou shalt go.
Wyclif, Mat. viii. 19.

For yit was ther no man that hadde him sewed.
Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, l. 517.

I shal suwe thi wille. Piers Plowman (B), xi. 21.

2†. To follow up; follow out; continue.

But while I, suing this so good successe,
Laid siege to Orliaunce on the river's side.
Mir. for Mags., p. 316. (Nares.)

He meanes no more to sew
His former quest, so full of toile and paine.
Spenser, F. Q., VI. ix. 2.

3. To follow with entreaty; seek to persuade; entreat.

I sywdde hys Grace [Henry VIII.] to signe the Popis lettre. And he comaundydde me to brynge the same unto hym at evynsonge tyme.
Richard Pace, Ellis's Hist. Letters, 3d ser., I. 277.

4. To seek after; try to win; seek the favor of; seek in marriage; woo.

I was belov'd of many a gentle Knight,
And sude and sought with all the service dew.
Spenser, F. Q., VI. viii. 20.

They would sue me, and woo me, and flatter me.
Tennyson, The Mermaid.

5. To seek justice or right from by legal process; institute process in law against; prosecute in a civil action for the recovery of a real or supposed right: as, to sue one for debt; to sue one for damages in trespass. [Used sometimes of the object of the action instead of the defendant.]

The executors of bishops are sued if their mansion-house be suffered to go to decay. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, vii. 24.

It is written, our men's goods and estates in Spain are confiscated, and our men sued, some to be imprisoned, others to be enjoined, on pain of death, to depart.
Court and Times of Charles I., I. 69.

To sue livery†, to sue out livery, to take proceedings, on arriving at age, to recover lands which the king had held as guardian in chivalry during the plaintiff's minority; hence, metaphorically, to declare one's self of age.

I am denied to sue my livery here.
Shak., Rich. II., ii. 3. 129.

Our little Cupid hath sued livery,
And is no more in his minority.
Donne, Eclogue (1613).

It concern'd them first to sue out thir Liverie from the unjust wardship of his encroaching Prerogative.
Milton, Eikonoklastes, xi.

To sue out, to petition for and take out; apply for and obtain: as, to sue out a writ in chancery; to sue out a pardon for a criminal.

Thou art my husband, no divorce in heaven
Has been su'd out between us.
Ford, Perkin Warbeck, v. 3.

And now he would go to London at once, and sue out his pardon. R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, xxxviii.

II. intrans. 1†. To follow; come after, either as a consequence or in pursuit.

With Ercules and other mo of his aune men,
He sues furth on the soile to Chethes the kyng.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 821.

Wetith wel that we . . . haue grauntyd . . . to the citezens of the forsayd cite the fraunches that ben suying to haue to hem and to her eyers and successours for euer.
Charter of London (Rich. II.), in Arnold's Chron., p. 28.

The kynge dide do make this dragon in all the haste he myght, like to the dragon that sewde in the ayre.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), i. 57.

2. To make entreaty; entreat; petition; plead: usually with for.

And as men here devoutly wolde writen holy Seyntes Lyfes and here Myracles, and sewen for here Canonizacions, righte so don thei there, for hem that sleen hem self wilfully, and for love of here Ydole.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 176.

The Kings of Poland and Sweden have sued to be their Protector. Howell, Letters, I. vi. 3.

By adverse destiny constrain'd to sue
For counsel and redress, he sues to you. Pope.

Much less shall mercy sue
In vain that thou let innocence survive.
Browning, Ring and Book, II. 108.

3. To pay court, or pay one's addresses as a suitor or lover; play the lover; woo, or be a wooer.

But, foolish boy, what bootes thy service bace
To her to whom the hevens doe serve and sew?
Spenser, F. Q., III. v. 47.

Well. Has she no suitors? . . .
All. Such as sue and send,
And send and sue again, but to no purpose.
Massinger, New Way to Pay Old Debts, i. 1.

4. To prosecute; make legal claim; seek for something in law: as, to sue for damages.

Their fast, on the 17 of the fourth Moneth, . . . and from thence to the ninth day of the moneth following, are holden vnluckie dayes, in which schoole masters may not beat their schollers, nor any man will sue at the law.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 211.

5†. To issue; flow.

Being rough-cast with odious sores to cover
The deadly juice that from his brain doth sue.
J. Beaumont, Psyche, ii. 167.

To sue, labor, and travel, in Eng. marine insurance, to make due exertions and use necessary and proper means: used with reference to the preservation of insured property from loss or to its recovery. What is called the suing and laboring clause in a policy usually provides that "in any case of loss or misfortune, it shall be lawful to the assured . . . to sue, labour, and travel for, in, and about the defence, safeguard, and recovery of" what is insured.

These two words [sue and labor], the meaning of which is different, and not merely a redundant parallelism, take in the acts of the owner or assured, whether in asserting and following the rights of interests in danger, or working and expending money for the benefit of those interests. . . . In this clause two things are noticeable: that suing (which in this place is understood 'doing work,' and not simply 'suing at law'), labouring, and travelling are made lawful to certain persons acting in lieu of the insured, and that to such expenses of suing, etc., the underwriters agree to contribute their share.
Hopkins, Law of Gen. Av., pp. 386, 390.

sue²†. An old spelling of *sew*¹, *sew*³, 2.

suède (swād), a. and n. [F., 'Swede.'] Of undressed kid: said of gloves; also, undressed kid. [Trade use.]

suent, suently. See *suant*¹, suantly.

suer (sū'ėr), n. [< *sue*¹ + *-er*¹.] 1†. One who follows.—2. A suitor.

suerte†, n. An old spelling of surety.

suet (sū'et), n. [Early mod. E. also sewet; < ME. suet, swete, < OF. seu, suis, suif, F. suif = Pr. seu, sef = Sp. Pg. sebo = It. sevo, < L. sebum, sevum, tallow, suet, grease; prob. akin to sapo, soap: see sebaceous, soap.] The fatty tissue about the loins and kidneys of certain animals, as the ox, the sheep, the goat, and the hart, harder and less fusible than that from other parts of the same animals. That of the ox and sheep is chiefly used, and when melted out of its connective tissue forms tallow. Mutton suet is used as an ingredient in cerates, plasters, and ointments; beef suet, and also mutton suet, are used in cookery. The corresponding flaky fat of hogs furnishes leaf-lard.

suety (sū'et-i), a. [< suet + *-y*¹.] Consisting of suet or resembling it: as, a suety substance. Imp. Dict.

suf-. See sub-.

suff¹ (suf), n. See *sough*¹, *surf*¹.

suff² (suf), n. See *sough*².

suffect (su-fekt'), v. t. [< L. suffectus, pp. of sufficere, put into, afford, furnish, be sufficient: see suffice.] To substitute. [Rare.]

The question was of suffecting Amadeus, Duke of Savoy, a married man, in the room of Eugenius.
Bp. Hall, Honour of Married Clergy, i. § 24.

suffect (su-fekt'), a. [< L. suffectus, pp. of sufficere, put into: see suffect, v.] Substituted; put in place of another. [Rare.]

The date of the suffect consulship of Silius the younger is not known. Athenæum, Oct. 28, 1882, p. 569.

suffer (suf'ėr), v. [< ME. suffren, soffren, < OF. soufrir, soffrir, sueffrir, sueffrer, F. souffrir = Sp. sufrir = Pg. soffrer = It. sofferire, soffrire, < L. sufferre, carry or put under, hold up, bear, support, undergo, endure, suffer, < sub, under, + ferre = E. *bear*¹.] I. trans. 1. To endure; support bravely or unflinchingly; sustain; bear up under.

If she be riche and of heigh parage,
Thanne seistow it is a tormentrie
To soffren hire [a wife's] pride and hire malencolie.
Chaucer, Prol. to Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 252.

Our spirit and strength entire,
Strongly to suffer and support our pains.
Milton, P. L., i. 147.

2. To be affected by; undergo; be acted on or influenced by; sustain; pass through.

Nothing of him that doth fade
But doth suffer a sea-change
Into something rich and strange.
Shak., Tempest, i. 2. 400.

When all that seems shall suffer shock.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, cxxxi.

3. To feel or bear (what is painful, disagreeable, or distressing); submit to with distress or grief; undergo: as, to suffer acute bodily pain; to suffer grief of mind.

At the day of Doom 4 Aungeles, with 4 Trompes, schulle blowen and reysen alle men that hadden suffred Dethe sithe that the World was formed, from Dethe to Lyve. Mandeville, Travels, p. 114.

A man of great wrath shall suffer punishment.
Prov. xix. 19.

It is said all martyrdoms looked mean when they were suffered. Emerson, Experience.

Each had suffer'd some exceeding wrong.
Tennyson, Geraint.

4. To refrain from hindering; allow; permit; tolerate.

I prayed Pieres to pulle adown an apple, and he wolde,
And suffre me to assaye what sauoure it hadde.
Piers Plowman (B), xvi. 74.

Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not. Mark x. 14.

Heaven will not suffer honest men to perish.
Fletcher (and Massinger?), Lovers' Progress, ii. 4.

My Lord Sandwich . . . suffers his beard to grow on his upper lip more than usual. Pepys, Diary, II. 347.

They live only as pardoned men; and how pitiful is the condition of being only suffered.
Steele, Spectator, No. 438.

5†. To tolerate abstention from.

Master More . . . by no meanes would admit of any diuision, nor suffer his men from finishing their fortifications. Quoted in Capt. John Smith's True Travels, II. 130.

=Syn. 2. To feel, bear, experience, go through.—4. Allow, Permit, Consent to, etc. See *allow*¹.

II. intrans. 1†. To have endurance; bear evils bravely.

Now looke that atempree be thy brydel,
And for the beste ay suffre to the tide.
Chaucer, Troilus, i. 954.

2. To feel or undergo pain of body or mind; bear what is distressing or inconvenient.

If I be false,
Send me to suffer in those punishments
You speak of; kill me!
Beau. and Fl., Philaster, iii. 1.

Raw meat, unless in very small bits, and large pieces of albumen, &c., . . . injure the leaves, which seem to suffer, like animals, from a surfeit.
Darwin, Insectiv. Plants, p. 130.

3. To be injured; sustain loss or damage.

The kingdom's honour suffers in this cruelty.
Fletcher, Wife for a Month, ii. 1.

Thus the English prosper every where, and the French suffer. Baker, Chronicles, p. 122.

4. To undergo punishment; especially, to be put to death.

The father was first condemned to suffer upon a day appointed, and the son afterwards the day following.
Clarendon.

5. To allow; permit.

Remayning as diuers languages and dialects will suffer, almost the same. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 437.

Still dost thou suffer, heaven! will no flame,
No heat of sin, make thy just wrath to boil!
B. Jonson, Sejanus, iv. 5.

6†. To wait; hold out.

Marganors hem seide, and badde hem suffre and a-bide while thei myght for to socour theire peple.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 165.

sufferable (suf'ėr-a-bl), a. [< ME. suffrable, < OF. souffrable,* < souffrir, suffer: see suffer and -able.] 1. Capable of being suffered, endured, tolerated, or permitted; allowable.

It shal be more suffrable to the loond of men of Sodom and of Gommor in the dai of iugement than to thilke citee. Wyclif, Mat. x. 15.

Ye have a great loss;
But bear it patiently: yet, to say truth,
In justice 'tis not sufferable.
Fletcher, Valentinian, iv. 4.

I believe it's very sufferable; the pain is not so exquisite but that you may bear it a little longer.
Steele, Conscious Lovers, iii. 1.

2†. Capable of suffering or enduring with patience; tolerant; patient.

It is fair to have a wyf in pees:
One of us two moste bowen, doutelees;
And sith a man is more resonable
Than womman is, ye moste been suffrable.
Chaucer, Prol. to Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 442.

The people are thus inclined, religious, franke, amorous, ireful. sufferable of infinit paines.
Stanihurst, Ireland, viii. (Holinshed's Chron., I.).

sufferableness (suf'ėr-a-bl-nes), n. The state or character of being sufferable or endurable; tolerableness.

sufferably (suf'ėr-a-bli), adv. In a sufferable manner; tolerably. Addison, tr. of Claudian, in Anc. Medals, ii.

sufferance (suf'ėr-ans), n. [Early mod. E. also sufferaunce; < ME. suffrance, soverans, < OF. soufrance, F. souffrance = Pr. sufrensa, sufransa = It. sofferenza, < L. sufferentia, endurance, toleration, < sufferen(t-)s, ppr. of sufferre, endure, suffer: see suffer.] 1. The state of suffering; the bearing of pain or other evil; endurance; suffering; misery.

He must not only die the death,
But thy unkindness shall the death draw out
To lingering sufferance. Shak., M. for M., ii. 4. 167.

Sufferance
Of former trials hath too strongly arm'd me.
Ford, Fancies, iv. 1.

All praise be to my Maker given!
Long sufferance is one path to heaven.
Scott, Rokeby, iv. 24.

2†. Damage; loss; injury.

A grievous wreck and sufferance
On most part of their fleet.
Shak., Othello, ii. 1. 23.

3. Submission under difficult or oppressive circumstances; patient endurance; patience.

Therfore hath this wise worthy knyght,
To lyve in ese, suffrance hire bihight.
Chaucer, Franklin's Tale, l. 60.

Still have I borne it with a patient shrug,
For sufferance is the badge of all our tribe.
Shak., M. of V., i. 3. 111.

Sir, I have learn'd a prisoner's sufferance,
And will obey.
Beau. and Fl., King and No King, i. 1.

4. Consent by not forbidding or hindering; toleration; allowance; permission; leave.

And, sers, syn he so is be souerans of goddis,
Vs may falle here by fortune a fulfaire gifte,
That shuld lelly be laght, as me leue thinke.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 3154.

Either dispysest thou the riches of his goodnesse, pacyence, and long sufferaunce? Bible of 1551, Rom. ii. 4.

Whose freedom is by suff'rance, and at will
Of a superior, he is never free.
Cowper, Task, v. 363.

5. In customs, a permission granted for the shipment of certain goods.—Bill of sufferance. See *bill*³.—Estate by sufferance or at sufferance, in law, the interest in land recognized by the law in a person who came into possession by lawful right but is keeping it after the title has ceased, without positive leave of the owner. Such person is called a tenant at sufferance.—On sufferance, by passive allowance, permission, or consent; without being actively interfered with or prevented; without being positively forbidden: often with a sense of blame or disparagement.—Sufferance wharf, a wharf on which goods may be landed before any duty is paid. Such wharves are appointed by the commissioners of the customs.

sufferant† (suf'ėr-ant), a. and n. [< ME. suffraunt, < OF. souffrant, F. souffrant = Sp. sufriente = It. sofferente, < L. sufferen(t-)s, ppr. of sufferre, endure, suffer: see suffer.] I. a. Tolerant; enduring; patient.

Pure suffraunt was her wit.
Chaucer, Death of Blanche, l. 1010.

And thou a god so sufferant and remisse.
Heywood, Dialogues (Works, ed. Pearson (1874), VI. 157).

II. n. One who is patient and enduring.

Forthi, sle with reson al this hete,
Men seyn the suffraunt overcomth, parde.
Chaucer, Troilus, iv. 1584.

sufferer (suf'ėr-ėr), n. [< suffer + *-er*¹.] 1. One who suffers; a person who endures or undergoes pain, either of body or of mind; one sustaining evil of any kind.

Thro' Waters and thro' Flames I'll go,
Suff'rer and Solace of thy Woe.
Prior, To a Young Gentleman in Love.

2. One who permits or allows.

What care I though of weakness men tax me?
I'd rather sufferer than doer be.
Donne, To Ben Jonson.

suffering (suf'ėr-ing), n. [Verbal n. of suffer, v.] The bearing of pain, inconvenience, or loss; also, pain endured; distress, loss, or injury incurred.

In front of the pile is the suffering of St. Laurence painted a fresca on the wall. Evelyn, Diary, Nov. 12, 1644.

To each his suff'rings; all are men,
Condemn'd alike to groan.
Gray, Ode on Prospect of Eton College.

Meeting for Sufferings, in the Society of Friends, an organization, established in 1675, to investigate and relieve the sufferings of those who were distrained for tithes, etc. It acts for the Yearly Meeting ad interim. The name is still retained in England and Ireland, but in all the American yearly meetings except that of Philadelphia the body is now called the Representative Meeting.

Seventh Month 21st.—To Westminster meeting-house at twelve o'clock; about fifty Friends of the Meeting for Sufferings met, and afterwards proceeded to James's Palace to present the address to the Queen Victoria.
William Allen, Journal, 1837.

suffete (suf'ēt), n. [Also sufet; ‹ L. sufes, suffes (sufet-, suffet-), a suffete; ‹ Punic; cf. Heb. shōphēt, judge, ruler.] One of the chief officials of the executive department of the government in ancient Carthage.

The Roman Senate encroached on the consuls, though it was neither a legislature nor representative; the Carthaginian Councils encroached on the Suffetes; the Venetian Councils encroached on the Doge.
J. Bryce, American Commonwealth, I. 223.

suffice (su-fīs'), v.; pret. and pp. sufficed, ppr. sufficing. [Early mod. E. also suffise; ‹ ME. sufficen, suffisen, ‹ OF. suffis-, stem of ppr. of suffire, soufire, F. suffire, be sufficient, ‹ L. sufficere, put under or into, substitute for, substitute, supply, intr. be sufficient, suffice, ‹ sub, under, + facere, make, do.] I. trans. 1†. To be sufficient for.

The leed condite conteyneth this mesure:
XII C pounde of metal shal suffise
A thousand feet in lengthe of pipes sure.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 178.

2. To satisfy; content; be equal to the wants or demands of.

Parentes . . . being suffised that their children can onely speke latine proprely, or make verses with out mater or sentence, they from thens forth do suffre them to liue in idelnes. Sir T. Elyot, The Governour, i. 13.

Let it suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter. Deut. iii. 26.

By farre they'd rather eat
At their owne howses, wher their carnall sence
May be suffic'd. Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 18.

Then Jove ask'd Juno: "If at length she had suffic'd her spleen, Achilles being won to arms?" Chapman, Iliad, xviii. 316.

3†. To afford in sufficient amount; supply adequately.

When they came ther the[y] sawe a faire cite,
As full a pepill as it cowde suffice.
Generydes (E. E. T. S.), l. 1150.

The pow'r appeas'd, with winds suffic'd the sail.
Dryden, Iliad, i. 653.

II. intrans. To be enough or sufficient; be equal to the end proposed; be adequate.

What neded it thanne a newe lawe to bigynne,
Sith the fyrst sufficeth to sauacioun and to blisse?
Piers Plowman (B), xvii. 31.

Suffise that I have done my dew in place.
Spenser, F. Q., II. viii. 56.

My designs
Are not yet ripe; suffice it that ere long
I shall employ your loves.
Beau. and Fl., Philaster, iii. 1.

No matter for the sword, her word sufficed
To spike the coward through and through.
Browning, Ring and Book, I. 312.

sufficience† (su-fish'ens), n. [= F. suffisance = Sp. suficiencia = Pg. sufficiencia = It. sofficienzia, ‹ LL. sufficientia, sufficience, sufficiency, ‹ L. sufficere, be sufficient, suffice: see suffice. Cf. suffisance, the older form.] Same as sufficiency.

sufficiency (su-fish'en-si), n. [As sufficience (see -cy).] 1. The state or character of being sufficient; adequacy.

Some of ye cheefe of ye company, perceiveing ye mariners to feare ye suffisiencie of ye shipe, as appeared by their mutterings, they entred into serious consulltation with ye mr. Bradford, Plymouth Plantation, p. 75.

His sufficiency is such that he bestows and possesses, his plenty being unexhausted. Boyle.

We know the satisfactoriness of justice, the sufficiency of truth. Emerson, Success.

2. Qualification for any purpose; ability; capacity; efficiency.

Hee [Sir Humphrey Gilbert] hath worthely beene constituted a coronell and generall in places requisite, and hath with sufficiencie discharged the same, both in this Realme and in forreigne Nations.
Gascoigne, in Book of Precedence (E. E. T. S., extra ser.), [Forewords, p. ix.

A substitute of most allowed sufficiency.
Shak., Othello, i. 3. 224.

We shall find two differing kinds of sufficiency in managing of business. Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii.

3. Adequate substance or means; enough; abundance; competence; especially, supply equal to wants; ample stock or fund.

An elegant sufficiency, content,
Retirement, rural quiet, friendship, books.
Thomson, Spring, l. 1159.

He [Philip] had money in sufficiency, his own horses and equipage, and free quarters in his father's house.
Thackeray, Philip, v.

4. Conceit; self-confidence; self-sufficiency.

Sufficiency is a compound of vanity and ignorance.
Sir W. Temple.

sufficient (su-fish'ent), a. and n. [= F. suffisant = Sp. suficiente = Pg. sufficiente = It. sofficiente, ‹ L. sufficien(t-)s, ppr. of sufficere, be sufficient, suffice: see suffice. Cf. suffisant, the older form.] I. a. 1. Sufficing; equal to the end proposed; as much as is or may be necessary; adequate; enough.

I sawe it in at a back dore, and as it is sayd the same stable or vought is sufficient to receyue a M. horses.
Sir R. Guylforde, Pylgrymage, p. 44.

Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. Mat. vi. 34.

My grace is sufficient for thee. 2 Cor. xii. 9.

2. Possessing adequate talents or accomplishments; of competent power or ability; qualified; fit; competent; capable.

Also, ther schul be foure suffisaunt men for to kepe the catel wel and suffisauntly. English Gilds (E. E. T. S.), p. 8.

Who is sufficient for these things? 2 Cor. ii. 16.

Pray you, let Cassio be received again. . . .
You'll never meet a more sufficient man.
Shak., Othello, iii. 4. 91.

Nay, they are esteemed the more learned, and sufficient for this, by the many.
B. Jonson, Alchemist, To the Reader.

3†. Having a competence; well-to-do.

His [John Selden's] father . . . was a sufficient plebeian, and delighted much in music.
Wood, Athenæ Oxon., II. 179.

He [George Fox] descended of honest and sufficient parents, who endeavoured to bring him up, as they did the rest of their children, in the way and worship of the nation.
Penn, Rise and Progress of Quakers, v.

4. Self-sufficient; self-satisfied; content.

Thou art the most sufficient (I'll say for thee),
Not to believe a thing. Beau. and Fl.

Sufficient condition, evidence, reason. See the nouns.
=Syn. 1. Ample, abundant, satisfactory, full.—1 and 2. Competent, Enough, etc. See adequate.

II. n. That which is sufficient; enough; a sufficiency.

One man's sufficient is more available than ten thousands multitude. Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, p. 452. (Davies.) sufficiently (su-fish'ent-li), adv. [‹ sufficient + -ly[2]. Cf. suffisantly, the older form.] 1. To a sufficient degree; to a degree that answers the purpose or gives satisfaction; adequately.

He left them sufficiently provided, and conceived they would have been well governed.
N. Morton, New England's Memorial, p. 105.

2. To a considerable degree: as, he went away sufficiently discontented. [Colloq.]

sufficingly (su-fī'sing-li), adv. In a sufficing manner; so as to satisfy.

sufficingness (su-fī'sing-nes), n. The quality of sufficing. H. Spencer, Social Statics, p. 323.

suffisance† (suf'i-zans), n. [Early mod. E. also suffisaunce; ‹ ME. suffisaunce, ‹ OF. suffisance, suffisaunce, ‹ LL. sufficientia, sufficience: see sufficience.] Sufficiency; satisfaction.

No man is wrecched but himself hit wene,
And he that hath himself hath suffisaunce.
Chaucer, Fortune, l. 26.

Be payed with litelle, content with suffisance.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 27.

suffisant†, a. [ME. suffisant, suffisaunt, ‹ OF. suffisant, suffisaunt, ‹ L. sufficien(t-)s, sufficient: see sufficient.] Sufficient; capable; able.

He was lyk a knyght,
And suffisaunt of persone and of might.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 1067.

suffisantly†, adv. [ME. suffisantly; ‹ suffisant + -ly[2].] Sufficiently. Chaucer, Prol. to Astrolabe.

suffix (su-fiks'), v. t. [‹ L. suffixus, subfixus, pp. of suffigere, subfigere, fasten below, fasten or fix on, ‹ sub, under, below, + figere, fasten, fix: see fix, v.] To attach at the end: specifically used of adding or annexing a letter or syllable, a suffix.

suffix (suf'iks), n. [= F. suffixe = Sp. sufijo = Pg. suffixo = It. soffisso = G. suffix, ‹ NL. suffixum, a suffix, neut. of L. suffixus, subfixus, pp. of suffigere, subfigere, fasten or fix on: see suffix, v. Cf. affix, prefix, postfix.] 1. In gram., a letter or syllable added or annexed to the end of a word or to a verbal root or stem; a formative element, consisting of one or more letters, added to a primitive word to make a derivative; a postfix; a terminal formative, as the -th of length, the -d of loved, the -ly of godly, the -ly of badly, etc.—2. In math., an index written after and under a letter, as x_0, x_1, x_2, x_3.

suffixal (suf'ik-sal), a. [‹ suffix + -al.] Of or pertaining to a suffix; of the nature of a suffix. Encyc. Brit., XXI. 272; Amer. Jour. Philol., IV. 29.

suffixion (su-fik'shon), n. [‹ suffix + -ion.] The act of suffixing, or the state of being suffixed.

sufflaminate† (su-flam'i-nāt), v. t. [‹ L. sufflaminatus, pp. of sufflaminare, hold back by a clog, check, ‹ sufflāmen, a clog, brake, shoe, drag-chain to check the motion of a wheel; perhaps for sufflaemen*, ‹ sub, under, + flac- in flaccus, flācus*, hanging down; or for suffragmen*, ‹ sub, under, + frag- in frangere, pp. fractus, break (cf. brake as related to break): see suffrage.] To retard the motion of, as a carriage by preventing one or more of its wheels from revolving; stop; impede.

God could anywhere sufflaminate and subvert the beginnings of wicked designs.
Barrow, Sermon on the Gunpowder Plot.

sufflate (su-flāt'), v. t.; pret. and pp. sufflated, ppr. sufflating. [‹ L. sufflatus, pp. of sufflare, subflare (> It. soffiare = Sp. soplar = Pg. soprar = F. souffler), blow up from below, inflate, ‹ sub, under, + flare, blow: see blow[1], flatus.] To blow up; inflate; also, to inspire. [Rare.]

An inflam'd zeal-burning mind
Sufflated by the Holy Wind.
T. Ward, England's Reformation, iii.

sufflation (su-flā'shon), n. [‹ L. sufflatio(n-), a blowing or puffing up, ‹ sufflare, blow up: see sufflate.] The act of blowing up or inflating. [Rare.] Imp. Dict.

sufflue (su-flö'), n. In her., a clarion.

suffocate (suf'ō-kāt), v.; pret. and pp. suffocated, ppr. suffocating. [‹ L. suffocatus, pp. of suffocare (> It. soffogare, soffocare = Pg. suffocar = Sp. sufocar = F. suffoquer), choke, stifle, ‹ sub, under, + faux (fauc-), the upper part of the throat, the pharynx: see fauces.] I. trans. 1. To kill by preventing the access of air to the blood through the lungs or analogous organs, as gills.

Either his [Judas's] grief suffocated him, or his guilt made him hang himself; for the words will signifie either.
Stillingfleet, Sermons, I. vi.

2. To impede respiration in; compress so as to prevent respiration.

And let not hemp his wind-pipe suffocate.
Shak., Hen. V., iii. 6. 45.

3. To stifle; smother; extinguish: as, to suffocate fire or live coals.

So intense and ardent was the fire of his mind that it not only was not suffocated beneath the weight of fuel, but penetrated the whole superincumbent mass with its own heat and radiance. Macaulay.

=Syn. 1. Stifle, Strangle, etc. See smother.

II. intrans. To become choked, stifled, or smothered: as, we are suffocating in this close room.

suffocate† (suf'ō-kāt), a. [‹ L. suffocatus, pp.: see the verb.] Suffocated; choked.

This chaos, when degree is suffocate, Follows the choking. Shak., T. and C., i. 3. 125.

suffocating (suf'ō-kā-ting), p. a. Choking; stifling.

The suffocating sense of woe. Byron, Prometheus.

suffocatingly (suf'ō-kā-ting-li), adv. In a suffocating manner; so as to suffocate.

suffocation (suf-ō-kā'shon), n. [‹ F. suffocation = Sp. sufocación = Pg. suffocação = It. soffocazione, ‹ L. suffocatio(n-), a choking, stifling, ‹ suffocare, choke, stifle: see suffocate.] 1. The act of suffocating, choking, or stifling.

Death by asphyxia is a common mode of accomplishing homicide, as by suffocation, hanging, strangulation.
Encyc. Brit., XV. 780.

2. The condition of being suffocated, choked, or stifled.

It was a miracle to 'scape suffocation.
Shak., M. W. of W., iii. 5. 119.

suffocative (suf'ō-kā-tiv), a. [‹ suffocate + -ive.] Tending or able to choke or stifle. Arbuthnot, Air.

suffossion† (su-fosh'ọn), n. [< L. suffossio(n-), a digging under, an undermining, < suffodire, pp. suffossus, pierce underneath, bore through, < sub, under, + fodire, dig: see fodient, fossil.] A digging under; an undermining.

Those suffossions of walls, those powder-trains.
Bp. Hall, St. Paul's Combat.

suffragan (suf'rạ-gạn), a. and n. [< ME. suffragan, < OF. suffragan*, var. of suffragant, in part prob. < ML. suffraganeus, suffraganius, assisting, applied esp. to a bishop, < L. suffragari, assist: see suffragant.] I. a. Assisting; assistant; of or pertaining to a suffragan: as, a suffragan bishop; a suffragan see. In ecclesiastical usage every bishop of a province is said to be suffragan relatively to the archbishop. See suffragan bishop, under bishop.

The election of archbishops had . . . been a continual subject of dispute between the suffragan bishops and the Augustine monks. Goldsmith, Hist. Eng., xiv.

II. n. 1. An auxiliary bishop, especially one with no right of ordinary jurisdiction; in the Ch. of Eng., a bishop who has been consecrated to assist the ordinary bishop of a see in a particular part of his diocese, like the ancient chorepiscopus (which see).

In the time of the Christians it was the seat of a suffragan: now hardly a village. Sandys, Travailes, p. 157.

2. A title of every ordinary bishop with respect to the archbishop or metropolitan who is his superior. = Syn. Coadjutor, Suffragan. See coadjutor.

suffraganship (suf'rạ-gạn-ship), n. [< suffragan + -ship.] The position of suffragan.

suffragant† (suf'rạ-gạnt), a. and n. [< F. suffragant = Pr. suffraguant = It. suffragante, < L. suffragan(t-)s, ppr. of suffragari, vote for, support with one's vote, support, assist: see suffragate, suffrage, v. Cf. suffragan.] I. a. Assisting.

Heavenly doctrine ought to be chief ruler and principal head everywhere, and not suffragant and subsidiary.
Florio, tr. of Montaigne (1613), p. 175. (Latham.)

II. n. 1. An assistant; a favorer; one who concurs with another.

More friends and suffragants to the virtues and modesty of sober women than enemies to their beauty.
Jer. Taylor (?), Artif. Handsomeness, p. 118.

2. A suffragan bishop; a suffragan. Cotgrave.

suffragate† (suf'rạ-gāt), v. i. [< L. suffragatus, pp. of suffragari (> It. suffragare = Pg. sufragar = Sp. sufragar), vote for, support with one's vote, support, assist: see suffrage, v.] To act as suffragant, aid, or subsidiary; be assistant

Our poets hither for adoption come,
As nations sued to be made free of Rome;
Not in the suffragating tribes to stand,
But in your utmost, last, provincial band.
Dryden, Prol. to University of Oxford (1681 ?), l. 31.

It cannot choose but suffragate to the reasonableness and convenience thereof, being so discovered.
Sir M. Hale, Origin of Mankind, p. 291.

suffragator† (suf'rạ-gā-tọr), n. [< L. suffragator, < suffragari, support by one's vote: see suffragate.] One who assists or favors.

The synod in the Low Countries is held at Dort; the most of their suffragators are already assembled.
Bp. of Chester to Abp. Ussher, p. 67.

suffrage (suf'rāj), n. [< F. suffrage = Sp. sufragio = Pg. It. suffragio, < L. suffragium, a voting-tablet, a ballot, a vote, the right of voting, a decision, judgment, esp. a favorable decision, approbation; prob. connected with suffrago, hock-bone, also a shoot or spray, and orig., it is conjectured, a broken piece, as a potsherd, used in voting (cf. ostracism, a kind of voting so called from the use of shells or potsherds); < suffringere (pp. suffractus), break below, break up, < sub, under, + frangere (√ frag), break: see fraction, break. Cf. naufrage, saxifrage.] 1. A vote or voice given in deciding a controverted question, or in the choice of a person to occupy an office or trust; the formal expression of an opinion on some doubtful question; consent; assent; approval.

There doe they give their suffrages and voyces for the election of the Magistrates. Coryat, Crudities, I. 253.

We bow to beg your suffrage and kind ear.
Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, Prol.

I know, if it were put to the question of theirs and mine, the worse would find more suffrages.
B. Jonson, Alchemist, To the Reader.

2. The political right or act of voting; the exercise of the voting power in political affairs; especially, the right, under a representative government, of participating, directly or indirectly, in the choice of public officers and in the adoption or rejection of fundamental laws: usually with the definite article.

The suffrage was not yet regarded as a right incident to manhood, and could be extended only according to the judgment of those who were found in possession of it.
Bancroft, Hist. Const., II. 118.

3. Testimony; attestation; witness.

Every miracle is the suffrage of Heaven to the truth of a doctrine. South.

4. Eccles., an intercessory prayer or petition.

The suffrages of all the saints. Longfellow.

In liturgics: (a) Short petitions, especially those in the litany, the lesser litany or preces at morning and evening prayer, etc.

And then shall be said the litany; save only that after this place: That, . . . etc., the proper suffrage shall be, etc. Book of Common Prayer, Consecr. of Bishops.

(b) The prayers of the people in response to and as distinguished from the versicles or prayers said in litanies by the clergyman.

5†. Aid; assistance; relief.

Charms for every disease, and sovereign suffrages for every sore. W. Patten (Arber's Eng. Garner, III. 71).

Manhood suffrage, a phrase denoting suffrage granted to all male citizens who are of age, and are not physically or morally incapacitated for its exercise. — Universal suffrage, a loose phrase, commonly meaning suffrage (of adult males) restricted only by non-citizenship, minority, criminal character, or bankruptcy. — Woman suffrage, the political right of women to vote. It is either full, as in Wyoming (granted 1869), Colorado (1893), Utah (1896), Idaho (1896), Washington (1910), California (1911), Oregon (1912), Arizona (1912), Kansas (1912), Alaska (1913), New Zealand (1893), Federated Australia (1902: state suffrage 1895–1908), Finland (1906), and Norway (1913), or it is limited to a special class or a special object (or both), as in Massachusetts, Michigan, Illinois, the United Kingdom (where certain unmarried and widowed women may vote in county council, municipal, and local elections, but not in parliamentary elections), Sweden, Denmark, Canada, etc.

suffrage (suf'rāj), v. t.; pret. and pp. suffraged, ppr. suffraging. [< OF. suffrager*, < L. suffragari, LL. also suffragare, vote for, support with one's vote, support, favor, assist, < suffragium, a vote: see suffrage, n. Cf. suffragant, suffragan.] To vote for; elect. Milton, Reformation in Eng., ii. [Rare.]

suffragines, n. Plural of suffrago.

suffraginous† (su-fraj'i-nus), a. [< L. suffraginosus, diseased in the hock, < suffrago (-in-), hock: see suffrago.] Of or pertaining to the suffrago, especially of the horse.

The hough or suffraginous flexure behinde.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., iii. 1.

suffragist (suf'rā-jist), n. [< suffrage + -ist.] 1. One who possesses or exercises the right of suffrage; a voter. — 2. One holding certain opinions concerning the right of suffrage, as about its extension: as, a woman-suffragist.

suffrago (su-frā'gō), n.; pl. suffragines (-fraj'i-nēz). [L.: see suffrage.] 1. The hock, or so-called knee, of a horse's hind leg, whose convexity is backward, and which corresponds to the human heel; the tibiotarsal articulation. See cuts under hock and Perissodactyla. — 2. In ornith., the heel proper, sometimes called the knee; the mediotarsal articulation, whose convexity is backward, at the top of the shank, where the feathers of most birds stop.

suffrutescent (suf-rọ̄-tes'ẹnt), a. [< sub- + frutescent.] In bot., only slightly or obscurely woody; a little woody at the base.

suffrutex (suf'rọ̄-teks), n. [NL., < L. sub, under, + frutex, a shrub, a bush: see frutex.] 1. In bot., an undershrub, or very small shrub; a low plant with decidedly woody stems, as the trailing arbutus, American wintergreen, etc. — 2. A plant with a permanent woody base, but with a herbaceous annual growth above, as the garden-sage, thyme, etc. [Rare, Eng.]

suffruticose (su-frō'ti-kōs), a. [< suffrutex (-ic-) + -ose; or < sub- + fruticose.] In bot., having the character of a suffrutex; small with woody stems, or having the stems woody at the base and herbaceous above; somewhat shrubby: noting a plant or a stem.

suffruticous (su-frō'ti-kus), a. Same as suffruticose.

suffruticulose (suf-rọ̄-tik'ū-lōs), a. [< sub- + fruticulose.] In bot., slightly fruticulose, as some lichens.

suffulted (su-ful'ted), a. In entom., gradually changing to another color. — Suffulted pupil, the central spot of an ocellus when it is formed by two colors shading off into each other.

suffumigate (su-fū'mi-gāt), v.; pret. and pp. suffumigated, ppr. suffumigating. [< L. suffumigatus, pp. of suffumigare, subfumigare (> It. suffumigare, suffumicare), smoke from below, < sub, under, + fumigare, smoke: see fumigate.] To apply fumes or smoke to, as to the body in medical treatment.

suffumigation (su-fū-mi-gā'shọn), n. [Also subfumigation; < ME. subfumygacioun, < OF. (and F.) suffumigation = Sp. sufumigación = Pg. suffumigação = It. suffumicazione, < LL. suffumigatio(n-), subfumigatio(n-), a smoking from below: see suffumigate.] 1. The act of fumigating, literally from below; fumigation.

Take your meate in the hotte time of Summer in cold places, but in the Winter let there bee a bright fire, and take it in hotte places, your parlors or Chambers being first purged and ayred with suffumigations.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 257.

2. The act of burning perfumes: one of the ceremonies in incantation.

Sorceresses
That usen exorsisaciouns
And eke subfumygaciouns.
Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 1264.

A simple suffumigation, . . . accompanied by availing ourselves of the suitable planetary hour.
Scott, Antiquary, xxii.

3. A fume; especially, a preparation used in fumigating.

As the suffumigations of the oppressed stomach surge up and cause the headache.
Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 204.

Another piebald knave
Of the same brotherhood (he loved them ever)
Was actively preparing 'neath his nose
Such a suffumigation as, once fired,
Had stunk the patient dead ere he could groan.
Browning, Paracelsus.

suffumige† (su-fū'mij), n. [< ML. suffumigium, < L. suffumigare, smoke from below: see suffumigate.] A medicinal fume.

suffuse (su-fūz'), v. t.; pret. and pp. suffused, ppr. suffusing. [< L. suffusus, pp. of suffundere, pour below or underneath, or upon, overspread, < sub, under, + fundere, pour out, spread out: see fuse[1].] To overspread, as with a fluid or tincture; fill or cover, as with something fluid: as, eyes suffused with tears.

When purple light shall next suffuse the skies. Pope.

Hers was a face suffused with the fine essence of beauty.
T. Winthrop, Cecil Dreeme, xv.

Alpine meadows soft-suffused
With rain.
M. Arnold, Stanzas from the Grande Chartreuse.

suffusion (su-fū'zhọn), n. [= F. suffusion = Sp. sufusión = Pg. suffusão = It. suffusione, < L. suffusio(n-), a pouring out or over, a spreading: see suffuse.] 1. The act or operation of suffusing or overspreading, as with a fluid or a color; also, the state of being suffused or overspread.

To those that have the jaundice or like suffusion of eyes, objects appear of that color. Ray.

2. That which is suffused or spread over, as an extravasation of blood.

So thick a drop serene hath quench'd their orbs,
Or dim suffusion veil'd. Milton, P. L., iii. 26.

3. In entom., a peculiar variegation, observed especially in Lepidoptera, in which the colors appear to be blended or run together. It is most common in northern or alpine forms of species which are found with normal colors in warmer regions.

suffusive (su-fū'siv), a. [< suffuse + -ive.] Pertaining to suffusion; overspreading. George Eliot, Middlemarch, xvi.

sufi (sö'fi), n. [Also soofee, sofi, etc.; = F. soufi; = Hind. Pers. Turk. sufi, < Ar. sūfi, a Moslem mystic; either lit. 'wise,' < Gr. σοφός, wise (see sophist), or, according to some, < sūf, wool, the sufis (dervishes, fakirs) being obliged to wear garments of wool, and not of silk.] 1. A Mohammedan mystic who believes (1) that God alone exists, and that all visible and invisible beings are mere emanations from him; (2) that, as God is the real author of all acts of mankind, man is not a free agent, and there can be no real difference between good and evil; (3) that, as the soul existed before the body, and is confined within the latter as in a cage, death should be the chief object of desire, for only then does the soul return to the bosom of the divinity; and (4) that religions are matters of indifference, though some are more advantageous than others (as, for instance, Mohammedanism), and that sufism is the only true philosophy.

The principal occupation of the Sūfi whilst in the body is meditation on the . . . unity of God, the remembrance of God's names, . . . and the progressive advancement in the . . . journey of life, so as to attain unification with God. Hughes, Dict. of Islam, p. 609.

2. Same as sophi.

If Pharaoh's Title had befall'n to thee [Solomon],
If the Medes Myter bowed at thy knee,
Wert thou a Sophy.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, ii., The Magnificence.

sufic (sö'fik), a. [< sufi + -ic.] Of or pertaining to sufism.

There are frequent Súfic allegories, just as in the Makhzan. Encyc. Brit., XVII. 522.

sufism, sofism (sō'fizm, sō'fizm), n. [Also sufiism; < sufi + -ism.] The mystical system of the sufis.

The system of philosophy professed by Persian poets and dervishes, and in accordance with which the poems of Háfiz are allegorically interpreted, is called Sufism. Encyc. Brit., XI. 368.

sufistic (sō-fis'tik), a. [Also sufiistic; < sufi + -ist + -ic.] Same as sufic.

The point of view indicated by the Sufistic system of philosophy. Encyc. Brit., XI. 368.

sug (sug), n. [Origin obscure.] An unidentified parasite of the trout, probably an epizoic crustacean. Also called trout-louse.

Many of them [trout] have sticking on them Sugs, or Trout-lice, which is a kind of Worm, in shape like a Clove, or Pin with a big head, and sticks close to him and sucks his moisture. I. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 91.

sug-. See sub-.

Sugantia (sū-gan'shi-ą), n. pl. A variant of ★Sugentia.

sugar (shůg'ăr), n. [Early mod. E. also suger; < ME. suger, sugor, sugre, sucre, < OF. sucre, F. sucre = Pr. sucre = Sp. azúcar = Pg. assucar (with Ar. article al) = It. zucchero = D. suiker = MLG. sucker = OHG. zucura, MHG. zuker, zucker, G. zucker = Icel. sykr = Sw. socker = Dan. sukker = OBulg. sakarŭ = Serv. chakara, zakara, chukar = Bohem. cukr = Little Russ. cukor, cukur = Russ. sakharŭ = Pol. cukier = Hung. zukur (Slavic, etc., partly after G.), < ML. succarum, succarium, sucarium, also zuccarium, zuccara, zucara, also suctura, etc., altered forms, in part appar. simulating L. succus, sucus, juice (see suck[2]), of saccharum, L. saccharon, < Gr. σάκχαρ, σάκχαρον, < Ar. sakkar, sokkar, sukkar, with the article as-sokkar, < Pers. shakar = Hind. shakkar, < Prakrit sakkara, sugar, < Skt. çarkarā, candied sugar, orig. grit, gravel; cf. Skt. karkara, hard, L. calculus, a pebble (see calculus).]

1. The general name of certain chemical compounds belonging to the group of carbohydrates. They are soluble in water and have a more or less sweet taste. The most important sugars found in nature belong to the classes known as pentoses and hexoses. See these in the supplement.

2. A sweet crystalline substance, prepared chiefly from the expressed juice of the sugar-cane, Saccharum officinarum, and of the sugar-beet, but obtained also from a great variety of other plants, as maple, maize, sorghum, birch, and parsnip. The process of manufacturing cane-sugar generally begins with extracting the juice of the canes, either by passing them between the rollers of a rolling-mill (see sugar-mill), or by the use of raspers or "defibrators" reducing the canes to pulp and expressing the juice by subjecting the pulp to the action of powerful presses. Maceration of the canes in steam or water, as a preparation for extraction of the juice, is also practised to some extent. Another method, now coming extensively into use, is that of diffusion, in which the canes or beets are cut in small pieces, and the sugar is extracted by repeated washings with hot water. (Compare diffusion apparatus (under diffusion), and osmose.) The extraction of the juice by the crushing and expressing action of rollers in sugar-mills is, however, still more extensively practised than any other method. The juice is received in a shallow trough placed beneath the rollers, and defecated by adding to it while heated below the boiling-point either milk of lime, lime-water, bisulphite of lime, lime followed by sulphur dioxid, sulphur dioxid followed by lime, alkaline earths, sulphur compounds, or chlorine compounds, milk of lime being more generally used than any of the other substances named. (Compare defecator.) The saccharine liquor is concentrated by boiling, which expels the water; lime-water is added to neutralize the acid that is usually present; the grosser impurities rise to the surface, and are separated in the form of scum. When duly concentrated the syrup is run off into shallow wooden coolers, where it concretes; it is then put into hogsheads with holes in the bottom, through which the molasses drains off into cisterns below, leaving the sugar in the state known in commerce by the name of raw sugar, or muscovado. Sometimes the molasses is immediately separated from the sugar by centrifugal force. The raw sugar is further purified by solution in water and filtration, first through cotton bags, then through layers of animal charcoal, boiling down under diminished pressure, and crystallization. Thus clarified, it takes the names of lump-sugar, loaf-sugar, refined sugar, etc., according to the different degrees of purification and the form in which it is placed on the market. The manufacture of sugar from beet-root is carried on to a very considerable extent in France, Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands, and the United States. The sugar is mostly extracted from the roots by diffusion, and the subsequent defecation and concentration are carried out in a manner entirely analogous to that described for these operations in the manufacture of cane-sugar. In the United States and in Canada great quantities of sugar are obtained from the sap of the sugar-maple, Acer Saccharum. (See cut under Acer.) From the West Indies, Louisiana, Brazil, Java, etc., come the chief supplies of cane-sugar; the sugar used on the continent of Europe is chiefly obtained from the beet. Sugar was only vaguely known to the Greeks and Romans; it seems to have been introduced into Europe during the time of the crusades. The cane was grown about the middle of the twelfth century in Cyprus, whence, some time later, it was transplanted into Madeira, and about the beginning of the sixteenth century it was thence carried to the New World. For the chemical properties of pure cane-sugar, see saccharose, 3.

This Manna is clept Bred of Aungeles; and it is a white thing, that is fulle swete and righte delicyous, and more swete than Hony or Sugre. Mandeville, Travels, p. 152.

When shall we have any good sugar come over? The wars in Barbary make sugar at such an excessive rate, you pay sweetly now, I warrant, sir, do you not?
Dekker and Webster, Northward Ho, ii. 1.

3. Something that resembles sugar in any of its properties.—4. Figuratively, sweet, honeyed, or soothing words; flattery employed to disguise something distasteful.—Bastard, beet-root, black, centrifugal sugar. See the qualifying words.—Brown sugar, common dark muscovado sugar.—Coffee-crushed sugar, a commercial name for crushed sugar in which the lumps are of convenient size for table use in sweetening coffee and tea.—Confectioners' sugar, a highly refined sugar pulverized to an impalpable powder, used by confectioners for various purposes.—Crushed sugar, a commercial name for loaf-sugar broken into irregular lumps.—Cut sugar, a commercial name for loaf-sugar cut into prismatic form, generally cubes.—Diabetic sugar. See diabetic.—Ergot-sugar, a sugar obtained from ergot. Its crystals are transparent rhombic prisms. It is soluble in both water and alcohol, and the solution is capable of undergoing alcoholic fermentation.—Gelatin sugar. Same as glycocoll.—Granulated sugar. (a) A sugar which, by stirring during the crystallization of the concentrated syrup, is formed into small disintegrated crystals or grains, instead of compacting into a crystalline cake or mass as in loaf-sugar. (b) The coarse grains or dust of refined sugar formed during the operations of crushing or cutting loaf-sugar, and separated from the lumps by screening.—Inverted sugar. Same as invert-sugar.—Liquid sugar, a name sometimes given to uncrystallizable glucose; this substance, however, is capable of solidifying into an amorphous mass.—Malado sugar, sugar conglomerated into a sticky mass, the crystalline form of the sugar being masked by the presence of a quantity of highly concentrated invert-sugar which cements the crystals together: distinguished from muscovado sugar, in which the sugar has a distinctly crystalline form—the small crystals, however, being more or less colored by invert-sugar and adhering impurities.—Maple sugar. See maple[1].—Pulverized sugar, a commercial name for refined sugar ground to a fineness intermediate between that of granulated sugar and confectioners' sugar.—Rotatory power of sugar. See rotatory polarization, under rotatory.—Starch-sugar. Same as glucose.—Sugar of acorns, quercite.—Sugar of Barbary†, the finest sugar, which was formerly supposed to be brought from Barbary, before the trade of the West Indies was fully established. (Nares.)

Ah sweet, honey, Barbary sugar, sweet master.
Marston, What you Will, ii. 3.

Sugar of lead. See lead[2].—Sugar of milk, lactose.

sugar (shůg'ăr), v. [< ME. sugren, < OF. sucrer, sugar; from the noun.] I. trans. 1. To season, cover, sprinkle, mix, or impregnate with sugar.—2. Figuratively, to cover as with sugar; sweeten; disguise so as to render acceptable what is otherwise distasteful.

We are oft to blame in this—
'Tis too much proved—that with devotion's visage
And pious action we do sugar o'er
The devil himself. Shak., Hamlet, iii. 1. 48.

II. intrans. 1. To sweeten something, as tea, with sugar. [Rare.]

He sugared, and creamed, and drank, and spoke not.
Miss Edgeworth, Helen, xxxvi. (Davies.)

2. To make (maple) sugar. [U. S. and Canada.]—To sugar off, in maple-sugar manuf., to pour the syrup into molds to granulate, when sufficiently boiled down. The sugaring off is the last process, and is usually attended with some sort of frolic in the sugar-camp. [U. S. and Canada.]

sugar-apple (shůg'ăr-ap″l), n. See Rollinia.

sugar-baker† (shůg'ăr-bā″kėr), n. One who refines sugar.

You know her mother was a Welsh milliner, and her father a sugar-baker at Bristol.
Sheridan, School for Scandal, ii. 2.

sugar-bean (shůg'ăr-bēn), n. A variety of Phaseolus lunatus (see bean), cultivated particularly in Jamaica. The species is probably a native of tropical America, but is widely diffused in cultivation.

sugar-beet (shůg'ăr-bēt), n. See beet[1].

sugarberry (shůg'ăr-ber″i), n.; pl. sugarberries (-iz). Same as hackberry, 2.

sugar-bird (shůg'ăr-bėrd), n. 1. Any bird of the family Cœrebidæ, as the Bahaman honey-creeper, Certhiola bahamensis: so called from its habit of sucking the sweets of flowers. See cut under Cœrebinæ.—2. A honey-eater or honey-sucker; one of various tenuirostral birds of the Old World which suck the sweets of flowers. See Nectariniidæ, Meliphagidæ.—3. A translation of the Indian name of the American evening grosbeak or hawfinch, Coccothraustes or Hesperiphona vespertina, which is specially fond of maple sugar. [Local, U. S.]

★sugar-bush (shůg'ăr-bůsh), n. 1. Same as sugar-orchard.—2. See Protea.

sugar-camp (shůg'ăr-kamp), n. A place in or near a maple forest or orchard where the sap from the trees is collected and manufactured into sugar. [U. S. and Canada.]

sugar-candian† (shůg'ăr-kan'di-ąn), n. Sugar-candy.

If nor a dram of treacle sovereign,
Or aqua-vitæ, or sugar-candian,
Nor kitchin cordials can it remedy,
Certes his time is come.
Bp. Hall, Satires, II. iv. 30.

sugar-candy (shůg'ăr-kan'di), n. Sugar clarified and concreted or crystallized. Compare ★candy[1].

sugar-cane (shůg'ăr-kān), n. A saccharine grass, Saccharum officinarum, the original source of manufactured sugar, and still the source of most of the supply. The sugar-cane is a stout perennial with the habit of Indian corn and sorghum, growing from 6 to 20 feet high; the leaves are broad and flat, 3 feet or more long; the joints of the stalk are about 3 inches long near the foot, becoming longer upwardly, at length producing a very long joint called the "arrow," which bears a large panicle. Sugar-cane is propagated almost wholly by cuttings, the power to perfect seed being nearly lost through cultivation. Seedlings, however, have recently been observed in Barbados. The first growth from the cuttings is called plant-cane. The succeeding years the root sends up ratoons, which form the crop for one, two, or sometimes more years, its value decreasing from exhaustion of the soil. The cane requires a rich moist soil, preferring the vicinity of the sea. The plant is not known in a wild state, but is supposed to have originated in southern Asia, perhaps in Cochin-China or Bengal. Its cultivation in those regions began very early, and now extends throughout the tropics, the stalk being chewed where not otherwise used. It is grown in the United States in several southern States, but only in Louisiana in sufficient amount for the export of sugar.—African sugar-cane, an African variety of the common sorghum, called imphee.—Chinese sugar-cane. Same as sorghum, 1.—Sugar-cane beetle, a scarabæid beetle, Ligyrus rugiceps, which damages sugar-cane in Louisiana by boring into the canes in the early spring and gnawing off the buds. It also damages sorghum and corn in the southern United States.—Sugar-cane borer, the larva of a crambid moth, Diatræa saccharalis, which bores sugar-cane in the southern United States, the West Indies, and ★elsewhere.

Sugar-cane (Saccharum officinarum). a, part of the inflorescence; b, a spikelet.

Sugar-cane Beetle (Ligyrus rugiceps), nearly twice natural size.

sugar-coated (shůg'ăr-kō″ted), a. Coated with sugar: as, a sugar-coated pill; hence, made palatable, in any sense.

sugared (shůg'ărd), p. a. Sweet; alluring; honeyed: formerly much used in poetry to express anything unusually attractive: as, sugared conceits.

This messinger connyng and gentile was,
Off hys mouth issued sugred swete langage.
Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 6029.

A sugared kiss
In sport I suckt, while she asleep did lie.
Sir P. Sidney (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 539).

sugar-grass (shůg'ăr-grȧs), n. 1. The common sorghum, particularly its Chinese variety.—2. The grass Lulalia fulva (Pollinia fulva of Bentham). [Australia.]

sugar-gum (shůg'ăr-gum), n. An Australian gum-tree, Eucalyptus corynocalyx, which grows 120 feet high, and affords a durable timber, used for railroad-ties, posts, etc. The foliage is sweetish, and, unlike that of most eucalypts, attracts cattle and sheep.

sugar-house (shůg'ăr-hous), n. A manufacturing establishment in which saccharine juices are extracted from cane, etc., and treated to make raw sugar. In some such establishments the process of refining is carried further; but they are more properly called refineries.—Sugar-house molasses, a very dark and concentrated low-grade molasses containing much caramel, formerly largely produced at sugar-houses (whence the name), but now, under improved methods of manufacture, much reduced in quantity, and little used except in the manufacture of some proprietary medicines and in some chemical industries.

sugar-huckleberry (shůg'ăr-huk″l-ber-i), n. See huckleberry.

sugariness (shûg′ăr-i-nes), n. The state or quality of being sugary or sweet.

A . . . flavor, not wholly unpleasing, nor unwholesome, to palates cloyed with the sugariness of tamed and cultivated fruit. Lowell, Biglow Papers, 1st ser., Int.

sugaring (shûg′ăr-ing), n. [Verbal n. of sugar, v.] 1. The act of sweetening with sugar.—2. The sugar used for sweetening.—3. The process of making sugar.

sugar-kettle (shûg′ăr-ket″l), n. A kettle used for boiling down saccharine juice.

sugarless (shûg′ăr-les), a. [< sugar + -less.] ★Free from sugar.

sugar-loaf (shûg′ăr-lōf), n. and a. [< ME. sugorloff, sugrelof*; < sugar + loaf.] I. n. 1. A conical mass of refined sugar. Hence—2. A hat of a conical shape.

I pray yow that ye woll vouchesaff to send me an other sugor loff, for my old is do; and also that ye well do make a gyrdill for your dowgter, for she hath nede therof. Paston Letters, I. 236.

3. A high conical hill: a common local name.

II. a. Having the form of a sugar-loaf; having a high conical form: as, a sugar-loaf hat. —Sugar-loaf tool, in seal-engraving, a tool with an end of soft iron shaped like a sugar-loaf, used to smooth the surfaces of shields.

sugar-louse (shûg′ăr-lous), n. 1. Same as sugar-mite.—2. A springtail, Lepisma saccharina. See cut under silverfish.

sugar-maple (shûg′ăr-mā″pl), n. See maple[1] and Acer (with cut).

sugar-meat (shûg′ăr-mēt), n. Same as sweetmeat.

Then . . . came another "most sumptuous banquet of sugar-meates for the men-at-arms and the ladies," after which, it being now midnight, the Lord of Leicester bade the whole company good rest. Motley, Hist. Netherlands, II. 17.

sugar-mill (shûg′ăr-mil), n. A machine for pressing out the juice of the sugar-cane. It consists usually of three parallel heavy rollers, placed horizontally one above and between the other two. The canes are made to pass between the rollers, by which means they are crushed, and the juice is expressed from them.

Sugar-mill at work.

sugar-millet (shûg′ăr-mil″et), n. The common sorghum.

sugar-mite (shûg′ăr-mīt), n. A mite of the family Tyroglyphidæ, Tyroglyphus or Glyciphagus sacchari, or some other species of the restricted genus Glyciphagus, infesting sugar. These mites abound in some samples of unrefined sugar, and are supposed to cause grocers' itch. Also sugar-louse.

sugar-mold (shûg′ăr-mōld), n. A conical mold in which sugar-loaves are formed in the process of refining.

sugar-nippers (shûg′ăr-nip″ėrz), n. sing. and pl. 1. A tool for cutting loaf-sugar into small lumps It is made like shears with a spring-back, but the blades are edged and are directly opposite each other. 2. Same as sugar-tongs.

sugar-orchard (shûg′ăr-ôr″chărd), n. A collection or small plantation of sugar-maples. Also called sugar-bush. [American.]

sugar-packer (shûg′ăr-pak″ėr), n. A machine for packing sugar into barrels.

sugar-pan (shûg′ăr-pan), n. An open or closed vessel for concentrating syrups of sugar. See also vacuum-pan.—Sugar-pan lifter, a form of crane especially designed for lifting sugar-pans from the furnaces.

sugar-pea (shûg′ăr-pē), n. See pea[1], 1.

sugar-pine (shûg′ăr-pīn), n. See pine[1].

sugar-plate† (shûg′ăr-plāt), n. Sweetmeats. Puttenham.

sugar-planter (shûg′ăr-plan″tėr), n. One who owns or manages land devoted to the cultivation of the sugar-cane.

sugar-plum (shûg′ăr-plum), n. A sweetmeat made of boiled sugar and various flavoring and coloring ingredients into a round shape, or into the shape of flattened balls or disks; a bonbon; hence, something particularly pleasing, as a bit of flattery.

If the child must have grapes or sugar-plums when he has a mind to them. Locke, Education, § 36.

"His Grace is very condescending," said Mrs. Glass, her zeal for inquiry slaked for the present by the dexterous administration of this sugar plum. Scott, Heart of Mid-Lothian, xxxviii.

sugar-press (shûg′ăr-pres), n. A press for extracting the juice of sugar-cane or effecting the drainage of molasses from sugar.

In the Ilande of Hispana or Hispaniola were erected 28 suger presses, to presse ye sugre which groweth plentifully in certaine canes or redes of the same countrey. R. Eden, tr. of Sebastian Munster (First Books on America, ed. Arber, p. 40).

sugar-refiner (shûg′ăr-rē-fī″nėr), n. One who refines sugar.

sugar-refinery (shûg′ăr-rē-fī″ner-i), n. An establishment where sugar is refined; a sugar-house in which sugar is not only made from the raw syrup, but is also refined.

sugar-refining (shûg′ăr-rē-fī′ning), n. The act or process of refining sugar.

sugar-sop† (shûg′ăr-sop), n. A sugar-plum.

Dandle her upon my knee, and give her sugar-sops. Fletcher, Monsieur Thomas, ii. 2.

Half our gettings
Must run in sugar-sops and nurses' wages now. Middleton, Chaste Maid, ii. 2.

sugar-squirrel (shûg′ăr-skwur″el), n. The sciurine petaurist, Belideus sciureus, or another member of the same genus. See Belideus. These little marsupials closely resemble true flying-squirrels (as of the genus Sciuropterus, figured under flying-squirrel), but are near relatives of the opossum-mice, figured under Acrobates.

sugar-syrup (shûg′ăr-sir″up), n. 1. The raw juice or sap of sugar-producing plants, roots, or trees.—2. In the manufacture and refining of sugar, a more or less concentrated solution of sugar.

sugar-teat (shûg′ăr-tēt), n. Sugar tied up in a rag of linen of the shape and size of a woman's nipple, and moistened: given to an infant to quiet it.

sugar-tongs (shûg′ăr-tôngz), n. sing. and pl. An implement having two arms, each furnished at the end with a flat or spoon-shaped plate or a cluster of claws, for use in lifting small lumps of sugar. It is usually made with a flexible back like that of shears for sheep. Also called sugar-nippers.

Or would our thrum-capp'd ancestors find fault
For want of sugar-tongs, or spoons for salt? W. King, Art of Cookery, l. 70.

sugar-tree (shûg′ăr-trē), n. 1. Any tree from which sugar-syrup or sugary sap can be obtained; particularly, the sugar-maple. See maple[1].—2. An Australian shrub or small tree, Myoporum platycarpum.

sugar-vinegar (shûg′ăr-vin″ē-găr), n. Vinegar made of the waste juice of sugar-cane.

sugary[1] (shûg′ăr-i), a. [Early mod. E. also sugrie; < sugar + -y[1].] 1. Resembling sugar in appearance or properties; containing or composed of sugar; sweet; sometimes, excessively or offensively sweet.—2. Fond of sugar or of sweet things: as, sugary palates.—3. Sweet in a figurative sense; honeyed; alluring; sometimes, deceitful.

And with the sugrie sweete thereof allure Chast Ladies eares to fantasies impure. Spenser, Mother Hub. Tale, l. 820.

Walsingham bewailed the implicit confidence which the Queen placed in the sugary words of Alexander [Duke of Parma]. Motley, Hist. Netherlands, II. 329.

sugary[2] (shûg′a-ri), n.; pl. sugaries (-riz). [For sugarery*, < sugar + -ery.] An establishment where sugar is made; a sugar-house. [Rare.]

The primitive mode of arranging the sugary. New Amer. Farm Book, p. 272.

sugent (sū′jent), a. [< L. sugen(t-)s, ppr. of sugere, suck: see suck[1].] Sucking, imbibing; suctorial; fitted for or habitually sucking: as, a sugent process; a sugent animal.

Sugentia (sū-jen′shi-ă), n. pl. [NL. (Brandt): see sugent.] A suborder or an order of myriapods; the sugent or suctorial millepeds, having the opening of the sexual organs in the anterior part of the body; the families Polyzoniidæ and Siphonophoridæ. Also Siphonizantia.

sugescent (sū-jes′ent), a. [< L. sugere, suck, + -escent.] Fitted for sucking or imbibing; sugent; suctorial; haustellate. Paley, Nat. Theol., xviii.

suggest (su-jest′), v. [< L. suggestus, pp. of suggerere (> It. suggerire = Sp. sugerir = Pg. suggerir = F. suggérer), carry or bring under, furnish, supply, produce, excite, advise, suggest, < sub, under, + gerere, bear, carry: see gerent. Cf. congest, digest, ingest, etc.] I. trans. 1. To place before another's mind problematically; hint; intimate; insinuate; introduce to another's mind by the prompting of an indirect or mediate association.

Nature her selfe suggesteth the figure in this or that forme: but arte aydeth the iudgement of his vse and application. Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 249.

Fie, fie, Master Ford! are you not ashamed? What spirit, what devil suggests this imagination? Shak., M. W. of W., iii. 3. 230.

Virgil . . . loves to suggest a truth indirectly, and, without giving us a full and open view of it, to let us see just so much as will naturally lead the imagination into all the parts that lie concealed. Addison, On Virgil's Georgics.

Sunderland, therefore, with exquisite cunning, suggested to his master the propriety of asking the only proof of obedience which it was quite certain that Rochester never would give. Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vi.

2. To act, as an idea, so as to call up (another idea) by virtue either of an association or of a natural connection between the ideas.

The sight of part of a large building suggests the idea of the rest instantaneously. Hartley, Observations on Man, I. ii. 10.

We all know that a certain kind of sound suggests immediately to the mind a coach passing in the street, and not only produces the imagination, but the belief, that a coach is passing. Reid, Inquiry into the Human Mind, II. vii.

3†. To seduce; tempt; tempt away (from).

There's my purse; I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy master thou talkest of; serve him still. Shak., All's Well, iv. 5. 47.

I, Dametas, chief governor of all the royal cattle, and also of Pamela, whom thy master most perniciously hath suggested out of my dominion, do defy thee in a mortal affray. Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, iii.

=Syn. 1. Intimate, Insinuate, etc. See hint[1].—2. To indicate, prompt, advise, remind of.

II. intrans. To make suggestions; be tempting; present thoughts or motives with indirectness or with diffidence to the mind.

O sweet suggesting Love, if thou hast sinn'd, Teach me, thy tempted subject, to excuse it. Shak., T. G. of V., ii. 5. 7.

But ill for him who . . .
. . . ever weaker grows thro' acted crime,
Or seeming-genial venial fault, Recurring and suggesting still! Tennyson, Will.

suggestable (su-jes′tą-bl), a. [< suggest + -able.] Same as suggestible.

suggestedness (su-jes′ted-nes), n. The state of being suggested. Bentham, Judicial Evidence, II. iv.

suggester (su-jes′tėr), n. [< suggest + -er[1].] One who or that which suggests. Also suggestor.

Some suborn'd suggester of these treasons. Fletcher (and others), Bloody Brother, iii. 1.

suggestibility (su-jes-ti-bil′i-ti), n. [< suggestible + -ity (see -bility).] 1. Capability of being suggested.—2. A conforming social impulse, leading a person to believe what is emphatically asserted and to do what is imperatively commanded; credenciveness and submissiveness; susceptibility to hypnotic suggestion.

A republic needs independent citizens, quick in comprehension, but slow in judgment, and tenacious in that which they have recognized as right. Every honest thinker must endeavor to counteract the suggestibility of the masses by the proper education of our people. Carus, Soul of Man, V. 10.

Suggestibility. The patient believes everything which his hypnotizer tells him, and does everything which the latter commands. W. James, Prin. of Psychol., II. 602.

suggestible (su-jes′ti-bl), a. [< suggest + -ible.] 1. Capable of being suggested.—2. Having great suggestibility; credencive and submissive.

Professor Ricket tried on her some experiments of suggestion in the waking state, and found her somewhat suggestible. Proc. Soc. Psych. Research, Dec., 1890, p. 441.

suggestio falsi (su-jes′ti-ō fal′sī). [L.: suggestio, a suggestion; falsi, gen. of falsum, falsehood, fraud: see suggestion and false, n.] An affirmative misrepresentation, whether by words, conduct, or artifice, as distinguished from a ★mere suppression of the truth; an indirect lie.

suggestion (su-jes′chon), n. [< F. suggestion = Sp. sugestión = Pg. suggestão = It. suggestione, < L. suggestio(n-), an addition, an intimation, < suggerere, pp. suggestus, supply, suggest: see suggest.] 1. The act of placing before the mind problematically; also, the idea so produced; the insinuation of an idea by indirect association; hint; intimation; prompting; also, especially, an incitement to an animal, brutal, or diabolical act.

For all the rest,
They'll take suggestion as a cat laps milk.
Shak., Tempest, ii. 1. 288.

He knew that by his preaching evident and certain good was done; but that there was any evil in his way of doing it, or likely to arise from it, was a thought which, if it had arisen in his own mind, he would immediately have ascribed to the suggestion of Satan.
Southey, Bunyan, p. 48.

2. The action of a perception or an idea in bringing to mind another idea which, in virtue of some preformed association, is now liable to reproduction.

The other part of the invention, which I term suggestion, doth assign and direct us to certain markes or places which may excite our mind to return and produce such knowledge as it hath formerly collected, to the end we may make use thereof.
Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii.

Let it not be supposed that the terms suggest and suggestion are, in their psychological relation, of recent, or even modern, application; for, so applied, they are old—the oldest we possess. In this relative signification, suggero, the verb, ascends to Cicero; and suggestio, the noun, is a household expression of Tertullian and St. Augustine. Among the earlier modern philosophers, and in this precise application, they were, of course, familiar words—as is shewn, among five hundred others, by the writings of Hermolaus Barbarus, the elder Scaliger, Melanchthon, Simonius, Campanella, to say nothing of the Schoolmen, etc. They were no strangers to Hobbes and Locke; and so far is Berkeley from having first employed them in this relation, as Mr. Stewart seems to suppose, Berkeley only did not continue what he found established and in common use. Hamilton, Reid's Works, note D.

[But the above is somewhat exaggerated. Suggestion was hardly in common use in this sense before Berkeley.]

It is by suggestion, not cumulation, that profound impressions are made upon the imagination.
Lowell, Among my Books, 1st ser., p. 185.

3. Specifically, in hypnotism, the insinuation of a belief or impulse into the mind of the subject by any means, as by words or gestures, usually by emphatic declaration; also, the impulse of trust and submission which leads to the effectiveness of such incitement; also, the idea so suggested. Verbal suggestion is the usual method. Another is known as suggestion by attitude, as when, for instance, a person placed in the attitude of prayer is caused to pray.

Suggestion appears to be entirely a phenomenon of unconscious memory. Amer. Jour. Psychol., I. 514.

4†. Indirect or hidden action.

This cardinall [Wolsey] . . . by craftie suggestion gat into his hands innumerable treasure.
Holinshed, Chron., III. 922.

5. In law, information without oath. (a) An information drawn in writing, showing cause to have a prohibition. (b) A statement or representation of some matter of fact entered upon the record of a suit at the instance of a party thereto, made by attorney or counsel without further evidence, usually called suggestion upon the record: a mode of proceeding allowed in some cases as to undisputed facts incidentally involved, such as the death of one of several plaintiffs, where the survivors are entitled to continue the action.—Negative suggestion, that form of hypnotic suggestion which results in lessened or suppressed activity, as abrogation of volition, anæsthesia of any kind, or inability to think, talk, act, etc.—Post-hypnotic suggestion, an impression made on a hypnotized person, persisting unregarded for some time after the hypnotic condition is passed, and taking effect at the intended time.—Principle of suggestion, association of ideas. See association.—Relative suggestion, judgment.—Spontaneous suggestion. See spontaneous. = Syn. 1. Intimation, Insinuation, etc. See hint[1], v. t.

suggestionism (su-jes'chon-izm), n. The doctrine that hypnotic persons are merely persons who are unusually trustful and submissive, and that hypnosis is merely a state in which these characters have been stimulated and distrust lulled.

suggestionist (su-jes'chon-ist), n. A person who accepts the theory of suggestionism.

suggestive (su-jes'tiv), a. and n. [< F. suggestif = Pg. It. suggestivo; as suggest + -ive.] I. a. 1. Containing a suggestion or hint; suggesting what does not appear on the surface; also, full of suggestion; stimulating reflection.

He [Bacon] is, throughout, and especially in his Essays, one of the most suggestive authors that ever wrote.
Whately, Pref. to Bacon's Essays.

"The king [of Uganda] habitually bears a couple of spears": a duplication of weapons again suggestive, like the two swords, of a trophy [one presumably being taken from an enemy]. H. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 409.

2. Of the nature of, or pertaining to, hypnotic suggestion.

Hypnotic or suggestive therapeutics.
Björnström, Hypnotism, p. 91.

II. n. Something intended to suggest ideas to the mind.

suggestively (su-jes'tiv-li), adv. In a suggestive manner; by way of suggestion; so as to suggest, or stimulate reflection.

suggestiveness (su-jes'tiv-nes), n. The state or character of being suggestive. New Princeton Rev., Nov., 1886, p. 364.

suggestment (su-jest'ment), n. [< suggest + -ment.] Suggestion. Imp. Dict. [Rare.]

suggestor (su-jes'tor), n. Same as suggester.

suggestress (su-jes'tres), n. [< suggester + -ess.] A female who suggests. De Quincey. [Rare.]

suggestum (su-jes'tum), n.; pl. suggesta (-tä), as E. suggestums (-tumz). [L., < suggerere, pp. suggestus, carry or bring under: see suggest.] In Rom. antiq., a platform, stage, or tribune; a raised seat; a dais.

The ancient Suggestums, as I have often observed on medals, as well as on Constantine's arch, were made of wood, like a little kind of stage, for the heads of the nails are sometimes represented that are supposed to have fastened the boards together. We often see on them the emperor, and two or three general officers, sometimes sitting and sometimes standing, as they made speeches or distributed a congiary to the soldiers or people.
Addison, Remarks on Italy (Works, ed. Bohn, I. 402).

suggil† (suj'il), v. t. [< OF. sugiller, < L. suggillare, also sugillare, beat black and blue, hence insult, revile.] 1. To beat black and blue.

Tho' we with blacks and blues are suggilld,
Or, as the vulgar say, are cudgelld.
S. Butler, Hudibras, I. iii. 1039.

2. To defame; sully; blacken.

Openly impugned or secretly suggilled. Strype.

suggillate† (suj'i-lāt), v. t. [< L. suggillatus, pp. of suggillare, beat black and blue: see suggil.] Same as suggil, 1. Wiseman, Surgery.

suggillation† (suj-i-lā'shon), n. [< F. sugillation = Sp. sugilación = Pg. sugillação, < L. sugillatio(n-), suggillatio(n-), a black-and-blue mark, a spot from a bruise, an affront: see suggillate.] A livid or black-and-blue mark; a blow; a bruise; ecchymosis: also applied to the spots which occur in disease and in incipient putrefaction.

sugh, n. An obsolete or Scotch form of sough[2].

sugi (sö'gē), n. [Jap.] A coniferous tree, Cryptomeria Japonica, the Japan cedar. It is the largest tree of Japan, growing 120 feet high, with a long straight stem; the wood is compact, very white, soft, and easily worked, much used in house-building. It is found also in northern China, and is locally planted as a timber-tree, but requires moist forest valleys for success.

suicidal (sū'i-sī-dal), a. [< suicide + -al.] Partaking or being of the nature of the crime of suicide; suggestive of suicide; leading to suicide: as, suicidal mania; hence, figuratively, destructive of one's aims or interests; self-destructive: as, a suicidal business policy.

I am in the Downs. It's this unbearably dull, suicidal room—and old Boguey down-stairs, I suppose.
Dickens, Bleak House, xxxii.

At the root of all suicidal tendencies lies an estimate of moral obligation and of the sacredness of human life entirely at variance with that introduced or sanctioned by the Gospel. H. N. Oxenham, Short Studies, p. 180.

suicidally (sū'i-sī-dal-i), adv. In a suicidal manner.

suicide[1] (sū'i-sīd), n. [= F. suicide = Sp. Pg. It. suicida, < NL. suicida*, < L. sui, of oneself, + -cīda, a killer, < cædere, kill.] One who commits suicide; at common law, one who, being of the years of discretion and of sound mind, destroys himself.

If fate forbears us, fancy strikes the blow;
We make misfortune, suicides in woe.
Young, Love of Fame, v.

suicide[2] (sū'i-sīd), n. [= F. suicide = Sp. Pg. It. suicidio, < NL. suicidium*, suicide, < L. sui, of oneself, + -cīdium, a killing, < cædere, kill.] 1. The act of designedly destroying one's own life. To constitute suicide at common law, the person must be of years of discretion and of sound mind. The word is by some writers used to include the act of one who, in maliciously attempting to kill another, occasions his own death, as where a man shoots at another and the gun bursts and kills himself. H. Stephen.

The argument which Plutarch and other writers derived from human dignity was that true courage is shown in the manful endurance of suffering, while suicide, being an act of flight, is an act of cowardice, and therefore unworthy of man. Lecky, Europ. Morals, II. 46.

2. Figuratively, destruction of one's own interests or aims.

In countries pretending to civilisation there should be no war, much less intestine war, which may be justly called political suicide. V. Knox, Works, V. 125.

suicide[2] (sū'i-sīd), v. i. [< suicide[2], n.] To be guilty of suicide. [Slang.]

The wills which had been made by persons who suicided while under accusation were valid.
Quoted in N. and Q., 7th ser., V. 197.

suicidism (sū'i-sī-dizm), n. [< suicide[2] + -ism.] A disposition to suicide. Imp. Dict.

suicism (sū'i-sizm), n. [< L. sui, of oneself, + -c-ism: see egoism.] Selfishness; egotism; egoism: the opposite of altruism. [Rare.]

But his suicisme was so grosse that any of Ahab's relations (whom he made run out of all they had) might read it. R. Whitlock, Zootomia, p. 383. (Nares.)

Suidæ (sū'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Sus + -idæ.] The swine; the suiform or suilline quadrupeds, a family of setiferous artiodactyl (or eventoed) non-ruminant ungulate mammals, typified by the genus Sus. The family formerly contained all the swine, and corresponded to the three modern families—the Dicotylidæ or peccaries, the Phacochœridæ or wart-hogs, and the Suidæ proper. In these last the palatomaxillary axis is scarcely deflected, or nearly parallel with the occipitosphenoid axis; the basisphenoid is normal, without sinuses; the orbits are directed outward and forward; the malar bones are elongated, and expanded downward; and the dentition is normal, with 44 teeth. The restricted family contains, besides the genus Sus, the Indian Porcula, the African Potamochœrus or river hogs, and the Malayan Babirussa. See cuts under babirussa, boar, peccary, Phacochœrus, and Potamochœrus.

suiform (sū'i-fôrm), a. [< L. sus, swine, + forma, form.] Having the form or characters of the Suidæ; related to the swine; of or pertaining to the Suiformia.

Suiformia (sū-i-fôr'mi-ą), n. pl. [NL.: see suiform.] The suiform setiferous animals, or swine proper, represented by the Suidæ and Phacochœridæ, as distinguished from the Dicotyliformia or Dicotylidæ. Gill.

sui generis (sū'ī jen'e-ris). [L.: sui, gen. of suus, his, her, its, their; generis, gen. of genus, kind: see genus.] Of his, her, its, or their own or peculiar kind; singular.

sui juris (sū'ī jö'ris). [L.: sui, gen. of suus, his, her, its, their; juris, gen. of jus, right, justice, duty: see jus[2].] 1. In Rom. law, the status of any one who was not subject to the patria potestas. S. E. Baldwin.—2. In modern legal usage, of full age and capacity, and legally capable of managing one's own affairs, as distinguished from infants, lunatics, and woman under common-law disqualifications of coverture.

suillage†, n. Same as sullage.

suilline (sū'i-lin), a. and n. [< L. suillus, pertaining to swine, < sus, a hog, swine: see Sus.] I. a. Swinish; pig-like; suiform; pertaining to the swine: as, a suilline artiodactyl.

II. n. A swine.

Suinæ (sū-ī'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Sus + -inæ.] A subfamily of Suidæ, when the family name is used in a broad sense: same as Suidæ proper.

suine (sū'in), n. A preparation from beef-suet and lard; a mixture of oleomargarin with lard, refined cottonseed-oil, or other fatty substances, used as a substitute for butter.

suing[1] (sū'ing), n. [Also sewing; < ME. sewynge; verbal n. of sue[1], v.] 1†. Regular succession, order, or gradation; proportion.

Men may seo on an appul-treo, meny tyme and ofte,
Of o lynne apples aren nat yliche grete,
Ne of sewynge smale ne of o swetnesse swete.
Piers Plowman (C), xix. 63.

2. The act or process of making or paying suit; wooing.—3. The act or process of prosecuting judicially; bringing suit.

suing[1]† (sū'ing), p. a. [< ME. sewynge; ppr. of sue[1], v.] 1. Following; ensuing.

The nyght sewynge, this white Knyght cam to the 7 Lynages. Mandeville, Travels, p. 225.

2. Conformable; in proportion.

I knew on her noon other lak
That al her limmes nere [were not] pure sewing.
Chaucer, Death of Blanche, l. 959.

suing[2]†, n. Same as sewing[2].

The percolation, or suing of the verjuyce through the wood. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 79.

suingly† (sū'ing-li), adv. [< ME. sewyngly; < suing[1], p. a., + -ly[2].] In due order; afterward; later.

Now schalle I seye zou sewyngly of Contrees and Yles that ben bezonde the Contrees that I have spoken of.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 263.

suint (swint), n. [F.: see sandiver.] The natural grease of wool, consisting of insoluble soapy matter combined with a soluble salt containing from 15 to 33 per cent. of potash, which may be extracted commercially from the woolwashings.

suiriri (swi-rē'ri), n. [S. Amer.] A South American tyrannine bird of the genus Fluvicola, as F. icterophrys; a watercap. See cut under Fluvicola.

suist (sū'ist), n. [< L. sui, of himself, herself, itself, + -ist.] One who selfishly seeks his own gratification; a self-seeker; an egotist. [Rare.]

In short, a suist and selfe-projector (so far as known) is one the world would not care how soon he were gone; and when gone, one that Heaven will never receive; for thither I am sure he cometh not that would (like him) go thither alone. R. Whitlock, Zootomia, p. 383. (Nares.)

★suit (sūt), n. [Early mod. E. also suite, sute; < ME. sute, seute, suite, soyte, < OF. suite, suitte, suete, seute, siute, a following, pursuit, chase, action, series, suit, = Sp. seguida, f., seguido, m., = Pg. seguito, sequito, m., = It. seguita, f., seguito, m., a following, suit, etc., < ML. *secuta, sequuta, sequita, a following, suit, etc., < L. sequi, pp. secutus, follow, pursue: see sue[1]. Cf. suite (swēt), the same word, from mod. F.] 1†. A following; the act of pursuing, as game; pursuit.

Tho the seute sesed after the swete bestes.
William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 2615.

2†. Series; succession; regular order.

There is a toy which I have heard, and I would not have it given over, but waited upon a little. They say it is observed in the Low Countries (I know not in what part) that every five and thirty years the same kind and sute of years and weathers comes about again.
Bacon, Vicissitudes of Things (ed. 1887), p. 566.

3. The act of suing; a seeking for something by solicitation or petition; an address of entreaty; petition; prayer.

They made wonderful earnest and importunate suit unto me, that I would teach and instruct them in that tongue and learning [the Greek].
Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), ii. 7.

Especially—(a) A petition made to a person of exalted station, as a prince or prelate.

And hauing a suite to the king, [he] met by chaunce with one Philino, a louer of wine and a merry companion in Court. Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 112.

That swift-wing'd advocate, that did commence
Our welcome suits before the King of kings.
Quarles, Emblems, i. 15.

(b) Solicitation for a woman's hand in marriage; courtship; proposal of marriage.

Since many a wooer doth commence his suit
To her he thinks not worthy.
Shak., Much Ado, ii. 3. 52.

Jer. Oh, here comes Isaac! I hope he has prospered in his suit.
Ferd. Doubtless that agreeable figure of his must have helped his suit surprisingly. Sheridan, The Duenna, ii. 3.

4. In law: (a) A proceeding in a court of justice for the enforcement or protection of a right or claim, or for the redress of a wrong; prosecution of a right or claim before any tribunal: as, a civil suit; a criminal suit; a suit in chancery. Suit is a very general term, more comprehensive than action, and includes both actions at law and bills in chancery. It usually includes special proceedings, such as mandamus.

Our lawyers, like Demosthenes, are mute,
And will not speak, though in a rightfull sute,
Vnlesse a golden kei vnlocke their tongue.
Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 42.

In England the several suits or remedial instruments of justice are . . . distinguished into three kinds: actions personal, real, and mixed. Blackstone, Com., III. viii.

(b) The witnesses or followers of the plaintiff in an action at law.—5. In feudal law, a following or attendance. (a) Attendance by a tenant on his lord, especially at his court. (b) Attendance for the purpose of performing service. (c) The offspring, retinue, chattels, and appurtenances of a villein.

6. A company of attendants or followers; train; retinue. Now commonly suite.

So come in sodanly a senatour of Rome,
Wyth sextene knyghtes in a soyte sewande hym one.
Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 81.

Had there not come in Tydeus and Telenor, with fortie or fiftie in their suit, to the defence.
Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, ii.

7. A number of things composing a sequence or succession; a number of things of a like kind that follow in a series and are intended to be used together; a set or suite; specifically, one of the four sets or classes, known as spades, clubs, hearts, and diamonds, into which playing-cards are divided.

Leaving the ancient game of England (Trumpe), where every coate and sute are sorted in their degree, [they] are running to Ruffe. Martins Months Minde (1589), Epistle [to the Reader. (Nares.)

I have chosen one from each of the different suits, namely, the King of Columbines, the Queen of Rabbits, the Knave of Pinks, and the Ace of Roses; which answered to the spades, the clubs, the diamonds, and the hearts of the moderns. Strutt, Sports and Pastimes, p. 432.

The cards don't cheat, . . . and there is nothing so flattering in the world as a good suite of trumps.
Thackeray, Virginians, xxx.

8. A number of different objects intended to be used together, especially when made of similar materials and corresponding in general character and purpose: thus, a number of different garments designed to be worn together form a suit of clothes; a number of sails of different sizes and fitting different spars form a suit of sails.

Al his halles
I wold do peynte with pure golde,
And tapite hem ful many folde
Of oo sute. Chaucer, Death of Blanche, l. 261.

Braue in our sutes of chaunge, seuen double folde.
Udall, Roister Doister, ii. 3.

Some four suits of peach-coloured satin.
Shak., M. for M., iv. 3. 11.

From Ten to Twelve. In Conference with my Mantua Maker. Sorted a Suit of Ribbonds.
Lady's Diary, in Ashton's Social Life in Reign of Queen [Anne, I. 91.

Three horses and three goodly suits of arms.
Tennyson, Geraint.

Administration suit, in Eng. law, an action of an equitable nature, to have administration of the estate of a decedent in case of alleged insolvency.—A suit of hair, teeth, or whiskers, a full complement; a full set of its kind. [Local and colloq., U. S.]

Suit of hair, for head of hair. Chautauquan, VIII. 430.

The face of this gentleman was strikingly marked by a suit of enormous black whiskers that flowed together and united under his chin. S. Judd, Margaret, ii. 1.

Discontinuance of a suit. See discontinuance.—Fresh suit, in law. See fresh.—Long suit, in the game of whist, a suit of four cards or more.—Next, petitory, skeleton suit. See the adjectives.—Out of suits, no longer in service and attendance; no longer on friendly terms.

Wear this for me, one out of suits with fortune,
That could give more, but that her hand lacks means.
Shak., As you Like it, i. 2. 258.

Short suit, in the game of whist, a suit of three cards or less.—Suit and service, in the feudal system, the attendance upon the court of the lord, and the homage and services rendered by the vassal, in consideration of his tenure and the protection afforded by the lord.

His [Lord Egmont's] scheme was to divide the Island into fifty baronies; each baron was to erect a castle with a moat and drawbridge in genuine mediæval fashion, he was to maintain a certain number of men-at-arms, and do suit and service to the Lord Paramount.
W. F. Rae, Newfoundland to Manitoba, iv.

Suit at law. See def. 4.

Dr. Warburton, in his notes on Shakspeare, observes that a court solicitation was called simply a suit, and a process a suit at law.
J. Nott, Note in Dekker's Gull's Hornbook, p. 114.

Suit covenant, in Eng. feudal law, a covenant to attend and serve at a lord's court; the covenant of the vassal to render suit to his lord's retinue.—Suit for contribution. See contribution.—Suit of court, in the feudal system, a tenant's obligation to render suit and service (which see, above).—To follow suit. See follow.—Syn. 3. Request, Petition, etc. See prayer[1].

suit (sūt), v. [Early mod. E. also suite, sute; < suit, n.] I. trans. 1. To adapt; accommodate; fit; make suitable.

Suit the action to the word, the word to the action.
Shak., Hamlet, iii. 2. 19.

I must suit myself with another page.
B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, iv. 1.

2. To be fitted or adapted to; be suitable or appropriate to; befit; answer the requirements of.

Such furniture as suits
The greatness of his person.
Shak., Hen. VIII., ii. 1. 99.

These institutions are neither designed for nor suited to a nation of ignorant paupers.
Daniel Webster, Speech, Buffalo, June, 1833.

Perhaps
She could not fix the glass to suit her eye.
Tennyson, Enoch Arden.

3. To be agreeable to; fall in with the views, wishes, or convenience of: as, a style of living to suit one's tastes.

Nor need they blush to buy Heads ready dress'd,
And chuse, at publick Shops, what sutes 'em best.
Congreve, tr. of Ovid's Art of Love.

None but members of their own party would suit the majority in Parliament as ministers.
W. Wilson, State, § 685.

4†. To dress, as with a suit of clothes; clothe.

I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant.
Shak., Cymbeline, v. 1. 23.

No matter; think'st thou that I'le vent my bagges
To suite in Sattin him that Jets in ragges?
Heywood, Royal King (Works, ed. Pearson, 1874, VI. 19).

To suit one's book. See book.—Syn. 2. To comport with, tally with, correspond to, match, meet.—3. To please, gratify, content.

II. intrans. To correspond; agree; accord: generally followed by with or to.

They are good work-women, and can and will doe anything for profit that is to be done by the art of a woman, and which sutes with the fashion of these countreys.
Sandys, Travailes, p. 116.

The place itself was suiting to his care. Dryden.

And of his bondage hard and long . . .
It suits not with our tale to tell.
Whittier, The Exiles.

suitability (sū-ta-bil′i-ti), n. [< suitable + -ity (see -bility).] The character of being suitable; suitableness.

The passages relating to fish in The Week . . . are remarkable for a vivid truth of impression and a happy suitability of language not frequently surpassed.
R. L. Stevenson, Thoreau, iii.

suitable (sū′ta-bl), a. [< suit + -able.] Capable of suiting; conformable; fitting; appropriate; proper; becoming.

For his outward habit,
'Tis suitable to his present course of life.
Fletcher, Beggars' Bush, i. 3.

Give o'er,
And think of some course suitable to thy rank,
And prosper in it.
Massinger, New Way to Pay Old Debts, i. 1.

Nothing is more sutable to the Law of Nature than that Punishment be inflicted upon Tyrants.
Milton, Ans. to Salmasius.

=Syn. Fit, meet, appropriate, apt, pertinent, seemly, eligible, consonant, corresponding, congruous.

suitableness (sū′ta-bl-nes), n. The state or quality of being suitable, in any sense.

suitably (sū′ta-bli), adv. In a suitable manner; fitly; agreeably; appropriately.

suit-broker† (sūt′brō″kėr), n. One who made a trade of procuring favors for court petitioners.
Massinger.

suite (sūt; in present use (defs. 2, 3, etc.), like mod. F., swēt), n. [In earlier use a form of suit; in recent use, < F. suite, a following, suit, suite: see suit.] 1†. An obsolete form of suit (in various senses).—2. A company of attendants or followers; retinue; train: as, the suite of an ambassador.

Not being allowed to take more than 2,000 followers in the king's suite, they nevertheless had evidently entertained a scheme of arming a greater number.
J. Gairdner, Richard III., ii.

3. A number of things taken collectively and constituting a sequence or following in a series; a set; a collection of things of like kind and intended to be used together: as, a suite of rooms; a suite of furniture.

Through his red lips his laughter exposed a suite of fair white teeth. S. Judd, Margaret, i. 2.

The careful examination of large suites of specimens revealed an unexpected amount of variability in species.
Huxley, Encyc. Brit., II. 49.

Two other courts, on whose sides are extended what may be called three complete suites of apartments, very similar to each other in arrangement, though varied in dimensions. J. Fergusson, Hist. Arch., I. 173.

4. A sequel. [Rare.]

I had always intended to write an account of the "Conquest of Mexico," as a suite to my "Columbus," but left Spain without making the requisite researches.
Irving, to Prescott, in Ticknor's Prescott, p. 158.

5. In music, a set or series of instrumental dances, either in the same or in related keys, usually preceded by a prelude, and variously grouped so as to secure variety and contrast. Suites were the earliest form of instrumental work in detached movements, and continued in favor from the beginning of the seventeenth to the end of the eighteenth century, though sometimes known by other names. They included a great variety of dances, notably the allemande, courant, saraband, and gigue, together with the gavotte, passepied, branle, and minuet. The early suite was not fully distinguishable from the early sonata, and the developed suite finally gave place to the modern sonata, though the true sonata form as a method of construction did not belong to the suite. Suites are properly for a single instrument, like the harpsichord or clavichord, but are sometimes written for an orchestra. The suite form has lately been revived. Among modern writers of orchestral music in suite form are Lachner, Raff, Bizet, Dvořák, and Moszkowski.

suite†, v. See suit.

suiter† (sū′tėr), n. Same as suitor.

suithold (sūt′hōld), n. [< suit + hold.] In feudal law, a tenure in consideration of certain services to the superior lord.

suiting (sū′ting), n. [Verbal n. of suit, v.] Cloth for making a suit of clothes: especially in the plural: as, fashionable suitings. [Trade cant.]

suit-like† (sūt′līk), a. [Early mod. E. also sutelike; < suit + like[2].] Suitable.

Then she put her into mans apparel, and gave her all things sute-like to the same, and laid her upon a mattress all alone without light or candle.
North, tr. of Plutarch, p. 40.

suitly†, adv. [Early mod. E. also sutely; < ME. sutely, sutly; < suit + -ly[2].] So as to match.

Item, ij. stripis of the same trappuris sutly.
Paston Letters, I. 477.

suitor (sū′tor), n. [Early mod. E. also suiter, suter; < ME. sutere; < suit + -or[1]; ult. < L. secutor, a follower, ML. a prosecutor, suitor, < sequi, follow: see suit.] 1. In law, a party to a suit or litigation. The pronunciation sū′tor is sometimes made shō′tor, as if spelled shooter (whence the punning allusion in the quotation from Shakspere, below).

In following suites there is muche to be considered: what the suter is, to whome he maketh suite, and wherefore he maketh suite, and also in what time he sueth:

bycause to dispatche a thing out of time is to cut the pecocke by the knees.
Guevara, Letters (tr. by Hellowes, 1577), p. 199.

Boyet. Who is the suitor? Who is the suitor? . . .
Ros. Why, she that bears the bow.
Shak., L. L. L., iv. 1. 109.

To save suitors the vexation and expense of haling their adversaries always before the courts in London.
W. Wilson, State, § 731.

2. One who sues, petitions, solicits, or entreats; a petitioner.

Here I would be a suitor to your majesty, for I come now rather to be a suitor and petitioner than a preacher.
Latimer, Sermon bef. Edw. VI., 1550.

She hath been a suitor to me for her brother.
Shak., M. for M., v. 1. 34.

Humility is in suiters a decent virtue. Hooker.

This mans Serraglio, which is neither great in receit nor beauty, yet answerable to his small dependency and infrequency of suters. Sandys, Travailes, p. 48.

3. One who sues for the hand of a woman in marriage; a wooer; one who courts a mistress.

I am glad I have found a way to woo yet; I was afraid once
I never should have made a civil suitor.
Fletcher, Wildgoose Chase, iii. 1.

He passed again one whole year . . . under the wing and counsels of his mother, and then was forward to become a suiter to Sir Roger Ashton's daughter.
Sir H. Wotton, Reliquiæ, p. 209.

suitor (sū′tor), v. i. [< suitor, n.] To play the suitor; woo; make love.

Counts a many, and Dukes a few,
A suitoring came to my father's Hall.
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends.

suitorcide (sū′tor-sīd), a. [< suitor + L. -cidium, a killing, < cædere, kill.] Suitor-killing; fatal to suitors. [Rare and humorous.]

Not a murmur against any abuse was permitted; to say a word against the suitorcide delays of the Court of Chancery . . . was bitterly and steadily resented.
Sydney Smith, in Lady Holland, ii.

suitress (sū′tres), n. [< suitor + -ess.] A female supplicant or suitor.

Beshrew me, but 'twere pity of his heart
That could refuse a boon to such a suit'ress.
Rowe, Jane Shore, iii. 1.

suit-shape (sūt′shāp), n. A fashion; a model. [Rare.]

This fashion-monger, each morn 'fore he rise,
Contemplates suit-shapes, and, once from out his bed,
He hath them straight full lively portrayed.
Marston, Scourge of Villanie, xi. 164.

suity† (sū′ti), a. Suitable; fitting.

In loue, in care, in diligence and dutie,
Be thou her sonne, sith this to sonnes is sutie.
Davies, Holy Roode, p. 18. (Davies.)

suivez (swē-vā′). [F.: 2d pers. pl. pres. impv. of suivre, follow: see sue[1].] In music, a direction to an accompanist to adapt his tempo and style closely to those of the soloist.

sujee (sö′jē), n. [Also soojee, soujee; < Hind. sūjī.] Fine flour made from the heart of the wheat, used in India to make bread for English tables. Yule and Burnell.

Sula (sū′lä), n. [NL. (Brisson, 1760), < Icel. sūla: see solan.] A genus of gannets, conterminous with the family Sulidæ, or restricted to the white gannets, or solan-geese—the brown gannets, or boobies, being called Dysporus. S. bassana is the leading species. See cut under gannet.

sulcate† (sul′kāt), v. t. [< L. sulcare, furrow through, plow, < sulcus, a furrow: see sulcus, sulk[2].] To plow; furrow. Blount.

sulcate (sul′kāt), a. [< L. sulcatus, pp. of sulcare: see sulcate, v.] Furrowed; grooved; having long narrowed depressions, shallow fissures, or open channels; channeled or fluted; cleft, as the hoof of a ruminant; fissured, as the surface of the brain.

Sulcate Stems.

1. Stem of Equisetum hyemale. 2. Stem of Rubus nigrobaccus.

sulcated (sul′kā-ted), a. [< sulcate + -ed[2].] Same as sulcate.

sulcation (sul-kā′shon), n. [< sulcate + -ion.] 1. A furrow, channel, or sulcus; also, a set of sulci collectively.—2. The state of being sulcated; also, the act, manner, or mode of grooving.

sulci, n. Plural of sulcus.

sulciform (sul′si-fôrm), a. [< L. sulcus, a furrow, + forma, form.] Having the form or character of a sulcus; like a furrow or groove.

sulcus (sul′kus), n.; pl. sulci (-sī). [NL., < L. sulcus, a furrow, trench, ditch, wrinkle: see sulk[2].] A furrow or groove; a more or less linear or narrow and shallow depression; specifically, in anat., a fissure between two gyri or convolutions of the surface of the brain: used with English or Latin context. See phrases under fissure, and cuts under brain, cerebral, and gyrus.—Auriculoventricular sulcus, the transverse groove marking off the auricles from the ventricles of the heart.—Calcarine sulcus. See calcarine.—Callosal sulcus, the callosal fissure, between the callosal gyre, or gyrus fornicatus, and the corpus callosum.—Callosomarginal sulcus. See callosomarginal and fissure.—Carotid sulcus, the carotid groove on the sphenoid bone. See cut under sphenoid.—Central sulcus, the fissure or sulcus of Rolando. See fissure.—Collateral sulcus. See collateral.—Crucial or cruciate sulcus (or fissure), a remarkably constant sulcus of the cerebrum of carnivores and some other mammals, described by Cuvier in 1805, and first named (in French, as sillon crucial) by Leuret in 1839. In the cat this sulcus begins on the median aspect of the hemisphere, reaches and indents the margin, and thence extends laterally for a distance equal to or greater than its mesal part. It has many variant forms of its name, as carnivoral crucial sulcus, sulcus cruciatus, fissura cruciata, scissura cruciata, etc., and different names (as frontal fissure, etc.) from varying views of its homology with any sulcus of the human brain. This question has been much discussed, but not conclusively settled. Two prevalent views are that the crucial sulcus is equivalent (1) to the callosomarginal sulcus of man, and (2) to the central or Rolandic sulcus of man. The question is of importance because some well-marked motor centers have been made out with reference to this sulcus in the lower animals.—Fimbrial sulcus, the sulcus choroideus; the shallow furrow on the optic thalamus corresponding to the margin of the fimbria.—Frontal sulci, the sulci which separate the frontal gyri: the superior frontal sulcus marks off the middle from the superior gyrus, and the inferior frontal sulcus divides the middle gyrus from the inferior.—Gingivobuccal sulcus, the space between the gums and the cheek.—Gingivolingual sulcus, the space between the tongue and the gums.—Hippocampal sulcus. See hippocampal.—Intraparietal sulcus, the sulcus dividing the superior from the inferior parietal lobule; the intraparietal fissure.—Lateral, paracentral, parallel sulcus. See the adjectives.—Occipitotemporal sulcus, the collateral sulcus.—Orbital sulcus, one of several sulci of the frontal lobe of the brain, in relation with the orbit of the eye, and separating the orbital gyri (which see, under gyrus).—Paramedian dorsal sulcus, the groove on the dorsal surface of the oblongata and upper part of the spinal cord marking the division between the funiculus gracilis and the funiculus cuneatus.—Parapyramidal sulcus, a slight groove on the ventral surface of the oblongata, running from the median fissure upward and outward, bounding the pyramid laterally.—Parieto-occipital sulcus. See parieto-occipital fissure, under parieto-occipital.—Peduncular sulcus, the great transverse fissure of the cerebellum.—Postcentral sulcus, the shallow postrolandic sulcus separating the ascending parietal convolution from the superior parietal convolution.—Posterior sulcus of Reil. See posterior.—Precentral sulcus. See precentral.—Splenial sulcus, the callosomarginal sulcus.—Sulcus choroideus, a shallow groove on the upper surface of the optic thalamus, running from the anterior tubercle backward and outward.—Sulcus corporum quadrigeminorum longitudinalis, the median longitudinal furrow on the upper surface of the corpora quadrigemina.—Sulcus corporum quadrigeminorum transversus, the transverse furrow separating the nates from the testes of the brain.—Sulcus cruciatus. See crucial sulcus.—Sulcus habenæ, a name proposed by Wilder in 1881 for a furrow along the dorsomesal angle of the optic thalamus, just back of the habena.—Sulcus intercruralis mesalis, sulcus intercruralis lateralis, small grooves just behind the postperforatus of the brain of the cat. Wilder and Gage, Anat. Tech., p. 489.—Sulcus internus olivæ, the upward extension of the sulcus lateralis ventralis of the spinal cord, passing along the olivary body on the median side. Obersteiu.—Sulcus lateralis dorsalis, the groove on the spinal cord, extending up into the oblongata, from which the dorsal roots of the spinal nerves emerge. Also called posterolateral groove.—Sulcus limitans, a name proposed by Wilder in 1881 for the usually obvious depression between the optic thalamus and the corpus striatum.—Sulcus longitudinalis medianus ventriculi quarti vel sinus rhomboidalis, the median furrow on the floor of the fourth ventricle of the brain.—Sulcus longitudinalis mesencephali, the furrow on the external surface of the mesencephalon, between the crusta below and the superficial lemniscus and brachia of the corpora quadrigemina above.—Sulcus occipitalis anterior, a fissure extending the occipitoparietal fissure down over the convex surface of the cerebrum. The two fissures are continuous in certain apes, but not normally in man. Also called sulcus occipitalis externus.—Sulcus occipitalis inferior, a longitudinal fissure of the occipital lobe separating the second from the third occipital gyrus.—Sulcus occipitalis superior, a longitudinal fissure of the occipital lobe separating the first from the second occipital gyrus.—Sulcus occipitalis transversus, a transverse fissure seen on the upper and lateral surface of the occipital lobe, behind the parieto-occipital fissure.—Sulcus oculomotorii, a groove on the median side of the crus cerebri, from which the third nerve issues. It marks the boundary between the crusta and the tegmentum.—Sulcus olfactorius, the fissure on the orbital surface of the brain bounding the gyrus rectus on the outer side. Along it lies the tractus olfactorius.—Sulcus orbitalis, the triradiate or H-shaped sulcus on the orbital surface of the frontal lobe.—Sulcus postolivaris, the postolivary sulcus, a short furrow on the side of the oblongata just laterad of the olivary body.—Sulcus spiralis, the spiral groove along the border of the lamina spiralis, or spiral lamina, of the cochlea.—Sulcus triradiatus, a name proposed by Wilder in 1881 for the three-pointed depression which demarcates the corpora albicantia from each other and from the tuber cinereum.—Supercallosal sulcus, the callosomarginal sulcus.—Sylvian sulcus, the fissure of Sylvius. See fissure.—Temporal sulci, the fissures on the outer surface of the temporal lobe. The superior is also called the parallel fissure.—Triradiate sulcus. Same as sulcus orbitalis.—Vertical sulcus, the precentral sulcus.

Sulci.

Brains of Rabbit (A), Pig (B), and Chimpanzee (C), showing some of the principal median sulci and gyri of the mammalian brain. Ol, olfactory lobe; Cc, corpus callosum; Ac, anterior commissure; H, hippocampal sulcus; Un, uncinate gyrus; M, marginal gyrus; C, callosal gyrus; Ip, internal perpendicular sulcus; Ca, calcarine sulcus; Coll, collateral sulcus; F, fornix; LT, lamina terminalis. (Compare other views of the same brains under gyrus.)

sulfer†, sulfur†, n. Obsolete spellings of sulphur.

Sulidæ (sū′li-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Sula + -idæ.] A family of totipalmate natatorial birds, represented by the genus Sula, of the order Steganopodes, related to the cormorants and pelicans; the gannets and boobies. They have the bill longer than the head, very stout at the base, tapering to the little decurved tip, cleft to beyond the eyes, with abortive nostrils in a nasal groove, and a small naked gular sac; long pointed wings; moderately long, stiff, wedge-shaped tail of twelve or fourteen feathers; stout serviceable feet beneath the center of equilibrium; and the general configuration somewhat like that of a goose. There are two carotids, a discoid oil-gland, small cæca, and large gallbladder. The pneumaticity of the body is extreme, as in pelicans. See cut under gannet.

Sulinæ (sū-lī′nē), n. pl. [NL., < Sula + -inæ.] The Sulidæ as a subfamily of Pelecanidæ.

sulk[1]† (sulk), a. [Early mod. E. sulke; reduced from ME. sulken*, solken*, < AS. solcen, slothful, remiss (cf. equiv. ā-solcen, be-solcen), prop. pp. of seolcan*, in comp. ā-seolcan*, ā-sealcan (= OHG. ar-selhan), and be-seolcan, be slothful, grow languid; cf. Skt. √ sarj, send forth, let loose. Cf. sulk[1], v. and n., sulky.] Languid; slow; dull; of goods, hard to sell.

Never was thrifty trader more willing to put of a sulke commodity. Heywood, Challenge for Beauty, iii. 1.

sulk[1] (sulk), v. i. [< sulk[1], a., in part a back-formation from sulky.] 1. To be sulky; indulge in a sullen or sulky mood; be morose or glum. [Colloq.]

Most people sulk in stage-coaches; I always talk. I have had some amusing journeys from this habit.
Sydney Smith, in Lady Holland, vii.

He was sulking with Jane Tregunter, was trying to persuade himself he did not care for her.
Whyte Melville, White Rose, II. xiv.

Of course things are not always smooth between France and England; of course, occasionally, each side sulks against the other. Nineteenth Century, XXIV. 466.

2. To keep still when hooked: said of a fish.

sulk[1] (sulk), n. [< sulk[1], v.] A state of sulkiness; sullen fit or mood: often in the plural: as, to be in a sulk or in the sulks; to have a fit of the sulks. [Colloq.]

I never had the advantage of seeing the Chancellor before in his sulks, though he was by no means unfrequently in them. Greville, Memoirs, Dec. 8, 1831.

Rodbertus had lived for a quarter of a century in a political sulk against the Hohenzollerns.
Contemporary Rev., LIV. 383.

sulk[2]† (sulk), n. [= OSp. sulco, Sp. Pg. sulco = It. solco, solgo, < L. sulcus, a furrow, trench, ditch, groove, track, wrinkle; cf. Gr. ὀλκός, a furrow, track, < ἕλκειν, draw. Cf. sullow[1].] A furrow. [Rare.]

The surging sulks of the Sandiferous Seas.
Sir P. Sidney, Wanstead Play, p. 619. (Davies.)

sulk[2]† (sulk), v. t. [< sulk[2], n.] To furrow; plow. [Rare.]

Soom synck too bottoms, sulcking the surges asunder.
Stanihurst, Æneid, i. 117. (Davies.) sulkily (sul'ki-li), adv. In a sulky manner; sullenly; morosely.

sulkiness (sul'ki-nes), n. The state or quality of being sulky; sullenness; moroseness.

sulky (sul'ki), a. [An extended form of sulk[1], a., due in part to the noun sulkiness, now regarded as < sulky + -ness, but earlier sulkeness, < ME. solkenesse*, < AS. solcenes, solcennes: see sulk[1], a.] 1. Silently resentful; dogged; morose; sullen; moody; disposed to keep aloof from society, or to repel the friendly advances of others.

It is surely better to be even weak than malignant or sulky. V. Knox, Essays (1777), No. 123.

During the time he was in the house he seemed sulky or rather stupid. Haslam, Insanity, X.

Corydon, offended with Phyllis, becomes, as far as she is concerned, a mere drivelling idiot, and a sulky one into the bargain. Whyte Melville, White Rose, II. xviii.

The true zeal and patience of a quarter of an hour are better than the sulky and inattentive labour of a whole day. Ruskin, Elements of Drawing, ii.

2. Stunted, or of backward growth: noting a condition of a plant, sometimes resulting from insect injury.

The condition called sulky as applied to a tea-bush is unfortunately only too common on many estates.
E. Ernest Green, in Ceylon Independent, 1889.

=Syn. 1. Morose, Splenetic, etc. (see sullen); cross, spleenish, perverse, cross-grained, out of humor.

sulky (sul'ki), n.; pl. sulkies (-kiz). [So called because it obliges the rider to be alone; < sulky, a.] A light two-wheeled carriage for one person, drawn by one horse, commonly used for trials of speed between trotting-horses.

The country doctor . . .
Whose ancient sulky down the village lanes
Dragged, like a war-car, captive ills and pains.
Whittier, The Countess.

sulky-cultivator, sulky-rake (sul'ki-kul″ti-vā-tọr, -rāk), n. A cultivator or a horse-rake having a seat for the driver. See cut under rake[1].

sulky-harrow, sulky-scraper (sul'ki-har″ō, -skrā″pėr), n. A harrow or scraper mounted on a wheeled carriage, and having a seat for the driver.

sulky-plow (sul'ki-plou), n. See plow.

sull (sul), n. A shorter form of sullow[1].

sullage (sul'āj), n. [Early mod. E. also sulledge, sulliage, suillage, < OF. souillage*, soillage*, < souiller, soil: see soil[3]. Cf. sulliage.] 1†. That which defiles.

No tincture, sullage, or defilement. South.

2†. Drainage; sewage.

Naples is the pleasantest of Cities, if not the most beautyfull; the building all of free stone, the streets are broad and paved with brick, vaulted underneath for the conveyance of the sulledge. Sandys, Travailes, p. 202.

The streetes exceeding large, well paved, having many vaults and conveyances under them for the sullage, wch renders them very sweete and cleane.
Evelyn, Diary, Feb. 8, 1645.

3. In founding, the scoria which rises to the surface of the molten metal in the ladle, and is held back when pouring to prevent porous and rough casting.—4. Silt and mud deposited by water.

April 3, 1712. A grant unto Israel Pownoll of his new invented engine or machine for taking up ballast, sullage, sand, etc., of very great use in cleansing rivers, harbours, etc.
Ashton, Social Life in the Reign of Queen Anne, II. 57.

sullage-piece (sul'āj-pēs), n. In founding, a deadhead, or a rising head.

Sullan (sul'an), a. [< L. Sullanus, < Sulla, improp. Sylla, Sulla (see def.).] Of or pertaining to Lucius Cornelius Sulla (138–78 B. C.), a Roman general and dictator.

In 70 B. C. Pompeius, in conjunction with Crassus, repealed the Sullan constitution. Encyc. Brit., IV. 634.

sullen (sul'en), a. and n. [< ME. sollein, solein, soleyn, solain, < OF. solain (= Pr. solan), solitary, lonely; as a noun, a pittance for one person; < ML. as if solanus*, < L. solus, alone: see sole[3].] I. a. 1†. Being alone; solitary; lonely; hence, single; unmarried.

Lat ech of hem be soleyn al her lyve.
Chaucer, Parliament of Fowls, l. 607.

That ofte, whan I shulde play,
It maketh me drawe out of the way
In solein place by my selve,
As doth a laborer to delve.
Gower, Conf. Amant., vi.

2†. Being but one; unique; hence, rare; remarkable.

Trewely she was to min ye
The soleyn fenix of Arabye.
Chaucer, Death of Blanche, l. 982.

Ye shall find this solain auenture
Full strang vnto sight of ech creature.
Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 5431.

3. Remaining alone through ill humor; unsociable; silent and cross; sulky; morose; glum.

Still is he sullen, still he lours and frets.
Shak., Venus and Adonis, l. 75.

Nor sullen discontent, nor anxious care,
E'en though brought thither, could inhabit there.
Dryden, Flower and Leaf, l. 99.

Two doughty champions, flaming Jacobite
And sullen Hanoverian. Wordsworth, Excursion, vi.

As sullen as a beast new-caged. Tennyson, Geraint.

4. Gloomy; dismal; somber.

Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth?
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., i. 2. 5.

Those [natural properties] of the Sea to bee saltish and unpleasant, and the colour sullen and greenish.
Dekker, London Triumphing (Works, ed. Pearson, III. 241).

Now began
Night with her sullen wings to double-shade
The desert. Milton, P. R., i. 500.

The dull morn a sullen aspect wears. Crabbe.

5. Sad; sorrowful; melancholy.

Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change.
Shak., R. and J., iv. 5. 88.

6. Slow-moving; sluggish; dull: as, a sullen pace.

When death's cold, sullen stream
Shall o'er me roll.
Ray Palmer, My Faith Looks up to Thee.

7. Malignant; unpropitious; foreboding ill; baleful.

Such sullen planets at my birth did shine,
They threaten every fortune mixt with mine.
Dryden.

She meets again
The savage murderer's sullen gaze.
Whittier, Mogg Megone, i.

=Syn. 3. Gloomy, Sullen, Sulky, Morose, Splenetic. These words are arranged in the order of their intensity and of their degrees of activity toward others. Gloomy has the figurative suggestion of physical gloom or darkness: the gloomy man has little brightness in his mind, or he sees little light ahead. The sullen man is silent because he is sluggishly angry and somewhat bitter, and he repels friendly advances by silence and a lowering aspect rather than by words. The sulky person persists in being sullen beyond all reason and for mere whim: the young are often sulky. In the morose man there is an element of hate, and he meets advances with rudeness or cruel words: the young have rarely development of character enough to be morose. The splenetic man is sulky and peevish, with frequent outbursts of irritation venting itself upon persons or things. Any of these words may indicate either a temporary mood or a strong tendency of nature.

II. n. 1†. A solitary person; a recluse.

He sit nother with seynt Iohan, with Symon, ne with Iude, . . .
Bote as a soleyn by hym-self. Piers Plowman (C), xv. 145.

2. pl. Sullen feelings; sulks; sullenness. [Colloq.]

Let them die that age and sullens have.
Shak., Rich. II., ii. 1. 139.

If she be not sick of the sullens, I see not
The least infirmity in her.
Massinger, Emperor of the East, iii. 4.

Being ourself but lately recovered—we whisper it in confidence, reader—out of a long and desperate fit of the sullens. Lamb, Popular Fallacies, xvi.

3†. A meal for one person. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

sullen† (sul'en), v. t. [< sullen, a.] To make sullen, morose, or sulky.

In the body of the world, when members are sullen'd, and snarl one at another, down falls the frame of all.
Feltham, Resolves, i. 86.

sullenly (sul'en-li), adv. In a sullen manner; gloomily; with moroseness.

sullenness (sul'en-nes), n. 1. The state or quality of being sullen.

The form which her anger assumed was sullenness.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vii.

2†. Silence; reserve.

Her very Coyness warms;
And with a grateful Sullenness she charms.
Congreve, Paraphrase upon Horace, I. xix. 1.

=Syn. 1. See sullen.

sullen-sick† (sul'en-sik), a. Sick with sullenness.

On the denyall, Ahab falls sullen-sick.
Fuller, Pisgah Sight, II. vii. 7. (Davies.)

sullery† (sul'ẹ-ri), n. [< sull + -ery.] A plow-land.

sullevate† (sul'ẹ-vāt), v. t. [Also sollevate; < L. sublevatus, pp. of sublevare (> It. sollevare = Pg. Sp. Pr. solevar = F. soulever), lift up from beneath, support, assist, < sub, under, + levare, lift up, raise, < levis, light, not heavy: see levity. Cf. elevate.] To cause to rise in insurrection; excite, as to sedition.

I come to shew the Fruits of Connivance, or rather Encouragement, from the Magistrates in the City, upon other Occasions, to sollevate the Rabble.
Roger North, Examen, p. 114.

sulliage† (sul'i-āj), n. [A var. of sullage, as if < sully + -age.] Same as sullage.

Till we are in some degree refined from the dross and sulliage of our former lives' incursions.
Evelyn, True Religion, I. 243.

sullow[1] (sul'ō), n. [Also sull; < ME. solow, suluh, solh, < AS. sulh, rarely sul (gen. sules, dat. syl; in comp. sulh-, sul-), a plow. Cf. L. sulcus, a furrow: see sulcus, sulk[2].] A plow. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

sullow[2]†, v. t. [A var. of sully.] To sully.

sully (sul'i), v.; pret. and pp. sullied, ppr. sullying. [Early mod. E. also sullow; < ME. sulien, < AS. sylian, sully, defile, bemire (= OS. sulian = MD. soluwen = OHG. bi-sulian, G. sühlen, sully, = Sw. söla = Dan. söle = Goth. bi-sauljan, bemire), < sol = OHG. sol, MHG. sol, söl, G. suhle = Dan. söl, mire. The form sully is prob. due in part to the OF. sollier, souiller, etc., soil, sully: see soil[3], with which sully is often confused.] I. trans. 1. To soil; stain; tarnish; defile.

Over it perpetually burneth a number of lamps, which have sullyed the roof like the inside of a chimney.
Sandys, Travailes, p. 130.

And statues sully'd yet with sacrilegious smoke.
Roscommon, trans. of Horace's Sixth Ode (of bk. iii.).

One of the great charms of this temple [the great Vaishnava temple at Seringham], when I visited it, was its purity. Neither whitewash nor red nor yellow paint had then sullied it, and the time-stain on the warm-coloured granite was all that relieved its monotony.
J. Fergusson, Hist. Indian Arch., p. 365.

2. Figuratively, to stain or tarnish morally.

The over-daring Talbot
Hath sullied all his gloss of former honour
By this unheedful, desperate, wild adventure.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., iv. 4. 6.

A look and a word . . . seemed to flash upon me the conviction that the woman I loved was sullied.
T. Winthrop, Cecil Dreeme, vi.

3. To dim; darken.

Let there be no spots in these our feasts of charity; nothing that may sully the brightness and damp the cheerfulness of this day's solemnity.
Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, I. xviii.

Weakened our national strength, and sullied our glory abroad. Bolingbroke, Parties, i.

II. intrans. To be or become soiled or tarnished.

Silvering will sully and canker more than gilding.
Bacon.

sully (sul'i), n.; pl. sullies (-iz). [< sully, v.] Soil; tarnish; spot.

A noble and triumphant merit breaks through little spots and sullies on his reputation. Spectator.

sulphacid (sulf'as″id), n. [< sulph(ur) + acid.] An acid in which sulphur takes the place of oxygen; a sulpho-acid.

sulphamate (sul'fa-māt), n. See sulphamic.

sulphamic (sul-fam'ik), a. [< sulph(ur) + am(monium) + -ic.] Having sulphur and amidogen as the characteristic constituents.—Sulphamic acid, an acid the ammonium salt of which is produced by the action of dry ammonia on dry sulphur trioxid. It may be regarded as sulphuric acid in which one OH group is replaced by NH_2; thus, $SO_2\{^{OH}_{NH_2}$. It is a monobasic acid, forming salts called sulphamates; of these ammonium sulphamate, $SO_2\{^{ONH_4}_{NH_2}$, is one of the best-known.

sulphamide (sul'fa-mid or -mīd), n. [< sulph(ur) + am(monia) + -ide[2].] A compound which may be regarded as consisting of the group SO_2 combined with two amido-groups, NH_2.

sulpharsin (sul'fär-sin), n. [< sulph(ur) + arsine.] Cacodyl sulphid, $(CH_3)_2As_2S$, a colorless liquid having an intensely disagreeable smell and being highly inflammable.

sulphate (sul'fāt), n. [= F. sulfate = Sp. Pg. sulfato = It. solfato, < NL. sulphatum, sulfatum; as sulph(ur) + -ate[1].] A salt of sulphuric acid. The acid is dibasic, forming two classes of salts—normal sulphates, in which both hydrogen atoms of the acid are replaced by basic radicals, and acid sulphates, in which only one of the hydrogen atoms is so replaced. Most sulphates are readily soluble in water, while a few, as calcium, strontium, and lead sulphates, are very sparingly soluble, and barium sulphate is insoluble in water and dilute acids. The sulphates are widely and abundantly distributed in nature. Gypsum and anhydrite are calcium sulphates. Epsom salts and Glauber salts, contained in all sea-water, are magnesium sulphate and sodium sulphate respectively. Barytes or heavy-spar, used on account of its high specific gravity (4.5) as a paint, adulterant, and makeweight, is barium sulphate. Anglesite, or lead sulphate, is an ore of lead. Many other sulphates occur in nature in smaller quantity. Of the sulphates artificially prepared may be mentioned sodium sulphate, or salt-cake (made from salt on an enormous scale as the first step in the manufacture of sodium carbonate), and ammonium sulphate (made extensively from gas liquor, and used for preparing other ammonia salts and as a fertilizer). Zinc sulphate, or white vitriol, is used in medicine as an astringent and a tonic, and in larger doses as an emetic. In overdoses it acts as an irritant poison. Copper sulphate, or blue vitriol, is made on an enormous scale, and is used in preparing pigments (Scheele's green, Paris green, etc.), in calico-printing, in electrometallurgy, and in horticulture, particularly by vineyardists, as a fungicide. It is used in medicine, chiefly as a feeble escharotic for exuberant granulations, and as a local stimulant. Aluminium sulphate, called concentrated alum or sulphate of alumina, is used as a mordant, in tanning, and for clarifying water. Ferrous sulphate, or green vitriol, is used as a mordant and for the manufacture of inks, Prussian blue, etc. The alkaloids morphine, atropin, quinine, etc., are generally administered in the form of sulphates.—Carbyl sulphate. Same as ethionic anhydrid (which see, under ethionic).—Ethyl sulphate. See sulphuric ether, under sulphuric.—Precipitated sulphate of iron. See precipitate.—Sulphate of indigo. See indigo.

sulphate (sul'fāt), v.; pret. and pp. sulphated, ppr. sulphating. [< sulphate, n.] I. trans. 1. To form a deposit of lead sulphate on, as a lead plate or plates of a secondary battery or a secondary cell.—2. To convert (red lead used as a coloring material, as on placards) into lead sulphate by means of dilute sulphuric acid.—Sulphated oil. See castor-oil.

II. intrans. To form a sulphate (especially a lead sulphate) deposit.

> The sodium salt diminishes the chance of objectionable sulphating in the cell. Philos. Mag., XXX. 162.

sulphatic (sul-fat'ik), a. [< sulphate + -ic.] Relating to, containing, or resembling a sulphate.

sulphatite (sul'fa-tīt), n. [< sulphate + *-ite*2.] A name sometimes given to native sulphuric acid, present in certain mineral waters.

sulpheret†, n. An obsolete spelling of sulphur.

sulphid, sulphide (sul'fid, -fid or -fīd), n. [< ★sulph(ur) + *-id*1, *-ide*1.] A combination of sulphur with another more electropositive element, or with a radical which can take the place of such an element. Also sulphuret, hydrosulphid, hydrosulphuret.—Allyl, golden, hydrogen, etc., sulphid. See the qualifying words.

sulphindigotic (sul-fin-di-got'ik), a. Same as sulphoindigotic.

sulphion (sul'fi-on), n. [< sulph(ur) + -ion.] A hypothetical body consisting of one equivalent of sulphur and four of oxygen: so called in reference to the binary theory of salts. Graham.

sulphionide (sul'fi-ō-nid or -nīd), n. [< sulphion + Gr. εἶδος, form, resemblance: see *-ide*1.] In the binary theory of salts, a compound of sulphion with a metal, or with a body representing a metal: as, sulphionide of sodium, otherwise ★called sodium sulphate. Graham.

sulphite (sul'fīt), n. [= F. sulfite; as sulph(ur) + *-ite*2.] A salt of sulphurous acid. The sulphites are recognized by giving off the suffocating smell of sulphurous acid when acted on by a stronger acid. A very close analogy exists between them and the carbonates.—Sulphite pulp, in paper-manuf., pulp made from wood, straw, esparto, and other vegetable products, by the action of a solution of a sulphite of an alkaline earth, as lime, or of an alkali, as soda, that contains an excess of sulphurous acid.

sulpho-acid (sul'fō-as″id), n. [< sulph(ur) + acid.] In chem., an acid which contains the group $SO_2.OH$ united to carbon. Also called sulphonic acid. The term has also been used for a class of acids in which sulphur is substituted for oxygen, now called thio-acids: as, thiosulphuric acid, $H_2S_2O_3$, which may be regarded as sulphuric acid in which one oxygen atom has been replaced by sulphur.

sulphocyanate (sul-fō-sī'a-nāt), n. [< sulpho- ★cyan-ic + *-ate*1.] A salt of sulphocyanic acid.

sulphocyanic (sul″fō-sī-an'ik), a. [< sulphocyan(ogen) + -ic.] Of, pertaining to, or containing sulphur and cyanogen, or derived from sulphocyanogen.—Sulphocyanic acid, CNHS, an acid occurring in the seeds and blossoms of cruciferous plants, and in the saliva of man and the sheep. It is a colorless liquid of a pure acid taste, and smells somewhat like vinegar. It colors the salts of peroxid of iron blood-red. It yields salts called sulphocyanates, or sometimes sulphocyanides. Also called rhodanic acid.

sulphocyanide (sul'fō-sī-a-nid or -nīd), n. [< sulphocyan-ic + *-ide*2.] Same as sulphocyanate.

sulphocyanogen (sul″fō-sī-an'ō-jen), n. [< sulph(ur) + cyanogen.] A compound of sulphur and cyanogen, $(CN)_2S$, also called sulphocyanic anhydrid. It is obtained in the form of colorless rhombic crystals, which are easily soluble in water, alcohol, or ether. More properly called cyanogen sulphid.

sulphohalite (sul'fō-hā-līt), n. [< sulph(ur) + Gr. ἅλς, salt, + *-ite*2.] A mineral occurring in transparent rhombic dodecahedrons of a pale greenish-yellow color. It consists of the sulphate and chlorid of sodium in the ratio of 3 to 2. It is found at Borax Lake, in the northwest corner of San Bernardino county, California.

sulphohydrate (sul-fō-hī'drāt), n. [< sulph(ur) + hydr(ogen) + *-ate*2.] A compound consisting of any element or radical united with the radical SH, which contains one atom of sulphur and one of hydrogen: as, calcium sulphohydrate, $Ca(SH)_2$.

sulphoindigotic (sul-fō-in-di-got'ik), a. [< sulph(ur) + indigo + -t-ic.] Pertaining to, derived from, or containing sulphuric acid and indigo. Also sulphindigotic.—Sulphoindigotic acid, $C_{16}H_8N_2O_2(SO_3H)_2$, an acid formed by the action of sulphuric acid on indigo. When 1 part of pure indigo is added to 8 parts of sulphuric acid, the addition of water causes the deposition of a purple powder called sulphopurpuric acid, while a blue solution is obtained which contains sulphoindigotic acid. The latter is more properly called indigo disulphonic acid.

sulphonal (sul'fō-nal), n. Diethylsulphone-dimethyl-methane, $(CH_3)_2C.(C_2H_5SO_2)_2$, a hypnotic of considerable value.

sulphonate (sul'fō-nāt), n. [< sulphon-ic + *-ate*1.] A salt of a sulphonic acid.

sulphonation (sul-fō-nā'shon), n. [< sulphonate + -ion.] The act of introducing into a compound, by substitution, the acid radical SO_2OH.

sulphonic (sul-fon'ik), a. [< sulph(ur) + -on-ic.] Containing the acid radical SO_2OH.—Sulphonic acid. Same as sulpho-acid in one sense.

sulphopurpuric (sul″fō-pėr-pū'rik), a. [< sulph(ur) + purpuric.] Noting an acid obtained by the action of sulphuric acid on indigo. See sulphoindigotic acid, under sulphoindigotic.

sulpho-salt (sul'fō-sâlt), n. [< sulph(ur) + *salt*1.] A salt of a sulpho-acid. Also sulphur-salt, sulphosel.

sulphosel (sul'fō-sel), n. [< sulph(ur) + F. sel, < L. sal, salt: see *salt*1.] Same as sulpho-salt.

sulphovinate (sul-fō-vī'nāt), n. [< sulphovin-ic + *-ate*1.] A salt of sulphovinic acid.

sulphovinic (sul-fō-vin'ik), a. [< sulph(ur) + L. vinum, wine, + -ic.] Pertaining to, derived from, or containing sulphuric acid and alcohol, or spirit of wine.—Sulphovinic acid, $C_2H_5HSO_4$, ethyl hydrogen sulphate, or ethyl sulphuric acid, a colorless oily liquid with strong acid properties, prepared by the action of oil of vitriol on alcohol. It may be regarded as sulphuric acid in which one hydrogen atom has been replaced by the radical ethyl C_2H_5. It is a ★monobasic acid, and forms a series of crystallizable salts.

sulphur (sul'fėr), n. and a. [Early mod. E. sulpher, sulfer; < ME. sulphur, soulfre = D. solfer, OF. soulfre, souffre, soufre, later also sulphur, F. soufre = Pr. solfre, sulpre, solpre = Cat. sofre = OSp. çufre, açufre, Sp. azufre = Pg. xofre, enxofre, also sulfur, = It. solfo = G. sulfur, < L. sulfur, also sulphur, sulpur, sulphur; cf. late Skt. çulvāri (according to a favorite fancy, lit. 'hostile to copper,' < çulva, copper, + -ari, enemy), sulphur (prob. a borrowed word). The AS. name was swefel = D. zwavel = OHG. sweval, swebal, MHG. swevel, swebel, G. schwefel = Sw. svafvel (< D.) = Goth. swibls, sulphur; prob. not akin to the L. name.] I. n. 1. Chemical symbol, S; atomic weight, 32.07. An element which occurs in nature as a yellow, brittle crystalline solid, with resinous luster, almost tasteless, and emitting when rubbed or warmed a peculiar characteristic odor. It is a non-conductor of electricity. Its specific gravity is 2.05. It is insoluble in water, nearly so in alcohol and in ether, but quite soluble in carbon disulphid, petroleum ether, etc. It burns in the air with a blue flame, and is oxidized to sulphur dioxid or sulphurous acid. It melts at 238° F., and boils at 832° F., giving off a dense red vapor. Sulphur exists in two distinct crystalline forms, and also as an amorphous variety; these modifications are characterized by differences in specific gravity, in solubility in various liquids, and in many other respects. Between its melting-point and 280° F. it is most fluid, and when cast in wooden molds it forms the stick-sulphur or brimstone of commerce. Between 430° and 480° it becomes much less liquid, and can with difficulty be poured. If poured into water, it forms an elastic mass called plastic sulphur, which may be stretched into long threads. On standing it becomes hard and brittle. From 480° to its boiling-point it is liquid again. Sulphur occurs in great abundance and purity in the neighborhood of active and extinct volcanoes. As an article of commerce, most of it is brought from Sicily. It is also widely distributed in combination with other elements, chiefly in the form of sulphates and sulphids, and it is now extensively obtained from the native sulphids of iron and copper for use in the manufacture of sulphuric acid. It also occurs sparingly in animal and vegetable tissues. Sulphur combines with oxygen, hydrogen, chlorin, etc., to form important compounds, of great use in the arts. It is used in the pure state extensively in the manufacture of gunpowder and matches, and for vulcanizing rubber. Refined sulphur, prepared by sublimation from the crude substance, is used in medicine as a laxative, diaphoretic, and resolvent; it is also largely employed in skin-diseases, both internally and externally. From the sixteenth to the eighteenth century casts or copies of antique gems were frequently made by pouring into a mold melted sulphur colored with metallic oxids.

2†. The supposed substance of lightning.

> To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o' the air,
> And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt
> That should but rive an oak. Shak., Cor., v. 3. 152.

3. In zoöl., one of many different pieridine butterflies; a yellow pierian. These butterflies are of some shade of yellow, blanching to nearly white, or deepening to orange, and more or less marked with black. They represent several genera. Eurymus philodice of the United States is the clouded sulphur; Callidryas eubule is the cloudless sulphur. The former is one of the commonest of North American butterflies, often seen in flocks along roads, settling about mud-puddles and other moist spots. Its larva feeds upon clover. See cuts under Colias, Pieris, and cabbage-butterfly.—Anisated sulphur balsam, an electuary composed of oil of anise 5 parts, sulphur balsam 1 part.—Barbados sulphur balsam, a balsam composed of sulphur boiled with Barbados tar.—Clouded, cloudless sulphur. See def. 3.—Crude sulphur, the product of the distillation of native sulphur.—Flowers of sulphur, a yellow powder formed by condensing the vapor of sulphur.—Liver of sulphur. See *liver*2.—Milk of sulphur, a white impalpable powder made by dissolving sulphur in a solution of milk of lime and adding muriatic acid. Hydrogen sulphid is set free, and sulphur is precipitated.—Precipitated sulphur. See precipitate.—Roll- or stick-sulphur, sulphur refined and cast in wooden molds.—Ruby sulphur. Same as realgar.—Soft sulphur, an allotropic form of sulphur produced by heating ordinary sulphur to 450° F. and pouring it into water. It remains for some days soft and elastic, and then resumes a hard, brittle condition.—Stones of sulphur†, thunderbolts.

> The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
> That box I gave you was not thought by me
> A precious thing. Shak., Cymbeline, v. 5. 240.

Sulphur balsam, a balsam composed of 1 part of sulphur dissolved in 8 parts of olive- or linseed-oil.—Sulphur-bath, a bath to which a pound of the flowers of sulphur has been added: used in the treatment of skin-diseases.—Sulphur group, the elementary substances sulphur, selenium, and tellurium: all have a strong attraction for oxygen.—Sulphur ointment. See ointment.—Vegetable sulphur. Same as lycopode.

II. a. Of the color of brimstone, or stick-sulphur; of a very greenish, excessively luminous, and highly chromatic yellow: used in zoölogy in many obvious compounds: as, sulphur-bellied; sulphur-crested. A color-disk of two thirds bright chrome-yellow and one third emerald-green gives a some-★what dull sulphur-yellow.

sulphur (sul'fėr), v. t. [< sulphur, n.] To apply sulphur to; also, to fume with sulphur; sulphurate.

> Immediately after or about the time they blossom, the vines are sulphured, to keep off the Oidium, which disease is still active in Portugal. Encyc. Brit., XXIV. 608.

sulphurate (sul'fū-rāt), a. and n. [< L. sulfuratus, sulphuratus, impregnated with sulphur, < sulfur, sulphur: see sulphur.] I. a. Mingled with sulphur; of the yellow color of sulphur.

> A pale sulphurate colour.
> Dr. H. More, Mystery of Godliness, p. 189.

II. n. A sulphid: as, sulphurate of antimony, Sb_2S_3.

sulphurate (sul'fū-rāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. sulphurated, ppr. sulphurating. [< sulphur + *-ate*2.] To impregnate or combine with sulphur; also, to subject to the action of sulphur.

sulphuration (sul-fū-rā'shon), n. [< L. sulfuratio(n-), sulphuratio(n-), a vein of sulphur, < sulfuratus, sulphuratus, impregnated with sulphur: see sulphurate.] 1. The act of dressing or anointing with sulphur. Bentley, On Freethinking, § 50.—2. The act or process of impregnating, combining, or fumigating with sulphur; specifically, the subjection of a substance, such as straw-plait, silks, and woolens, to the action of sulphur or its fumes for the purpose of bleaching; also, the state of being impregnated with sulphur. Also sulphurization, sulphurisation.

sulphurator (sul'fū-rā-tọr), n. [< sulphurate + *-or*1.] An apparatus for impregnating with sulphur or exposing to the action of the fumes of sulphur, especially for fumigating or bleaching by means of burning sulphur.

sulphur-bottom (sul'fėr-bot″um), n. The sulphur-bellied whale of the Pacific, a rorqual, Balænoptera (or Sibbaldius) musculus. Also sulphur-whale.

sulphur-concrete (sul'fėr-kon″krēt), n. A mixture of sulphur with pulverized stoneware and glass, melted and run into molds. At 230° F. it becomes exceedingly hard, remains solid in boiling water, and resists water and acids. It is used to cement stones, melting readily at about 248° F.

sulphureity (sul-fū-rē'i-ti), n. [< sulphure-ous + -ity.] The state of being sulphureous. B. Jonson, Alchemist, ii. 1. [Rare.]

sulphureous (sul-fū'rē-us), a. [< L. sulfureus, sulphureus, of or like sulphur, < sulfur, sulphur: see sulphur.] 1. Consisting of sulphur; having the qualities of sulphur or brimstone; impregnated with sulphur; sulphurous.

> He belches poison forth, poison of the pit,
> Brimstone, hellish and sulphureous poison.
> Randolph, Muses' Looking-Glass, iv. 5.
>
> The room was filled with a sulphureous smell.
> Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 105.

2. In bot., sulphur-colored; of a pale bright yellow.

sulphureously (sul-fū'rē-us-li), adv. In a sulphureous manner; especially, with the odor of sulphur, or with the stifling fumes or the heat of burning sulphur.

Aden is seated low, sulphuriously shaded by a high barren Mountaine, whose brazen front, scorching the miserable Towne, yeelds a perfect character of Turkish basenesse. Sir T. Herbert, Travels (ed. 1638), p. 31.

sulphureousness (sul-fū′rē-us-nes), n. The state or property of being sulphureous.

sulphuret (sul′fū-ret), n. [< sulphur + -et.] Same as sulphid.

sulphureted, sulphuretted (sul′fū-ret-ed), a. Having sulphur in combination. Also sulphydric. —Sulphureted bath, a bath, used in the treatment of scabies and eczema, consisting of 3 ounces of potassium, calcium, or sodium sulphid in 40 gallons of water.—Sulphureted hydrogen. See hydrogen.

sulphuric (sul-fū′rik), a. [= F. sulfurique = Sp. sulfúrico = Pg. sulphurico = It. solforico, < NL. sulfuricus, sulphuricus; as sulphur + -ic.] Of or pertaining to or obtained from sulphur.—Sulphuric acid, H_2SO_4, oil of vitriol, a dense oily colorless fluid, having, when strongly concentrated, a specific gravity of about 1.84. It is exceedingly acid and corrosive, decomposing all animal and vegetable substances by the aid of heat. It has a very great affinity for water, and unites with it in every proportion, evolving at the same time great heat; it attracts moisture strongly from the atmosphere, becoming rapidly weaker if exposed. When the concentrated acid is heated, sulphur trioxid is given off, and at about 640° F. it boils with decomposition. The sulphuric acid of commerce is never pure, but may contain lead sulphate dissolved from the lead chambers during the process of manufacture, arsenic, and other impurities. It was formerly procured by the distillation of dried iron sulphate, called green vitriol, whence the corrosive liquid which came over in the distillation, having an oily consistence, was called oil of vitriol. It is now prepared in the United States and most other countries by burning sulphur, or frequently iron pyrites, in closed furnaces, and leading the fumes, mixed with oxids of nitrogen, into large leaden chambers, into which jets of steam are continuously sent. The oxids of nitrogen are produced by the action of sulphuric acid upon niter contained in pots, which are placed between the sulphur-ovens and the chambers. The sulphur dioxid takes away part of the oxygen from the oxids of nitrogen, which are again oxidized by the air in the chambers. The sulphur trioxid produced unites with the steam to form sulphuric acid. The acid produced in the chamber, called chamber-acid, which has a specific gravity of about 1.5 and contains 64 per cent. of H_2SO_4, is concentrated in leaden vessels until it reaches a specific gravity of 1.71 and contains 78 per cent. of H_2SO_4, when it is run into glass or platinum vessels, where the concentration is continued. Concentrated acid is now made by the "contact" process, sulphur dioxid and air being carried over heated spongy platinum, and the sulphur trioxid formed carried into water. Nordhausen or fuming sulphuric acid is prepared by heating iron protosulphate or green vitriol in closed vessels; it is a solution of variable quantities of sulphur trioxid in sulphuric acid, or it may be regarded as pyrosulphuric acid, $H_2S_2O_7$. It is largely used in the manufacture of artificial alizarin. Sulphuric acid is a strong dibasic acid, and forms both acid and normal salts. It is found uncombined in natural waters of certain volcanic districts. Its salts are universally distributed in nature, and are most extensively used in the arts. The free acid is more widely used than any other, and is the agent for releasing other acids from their salts and preparing them in a pure state. See sulphate.—Sulphuric caustic, strong sulphuric acid made into a paste with asbestos, plaster of Paris, or saffron.—Sulphuric ether, $(C_2H_5)_2O$, ethylic, vinic, or ordinary ether, a colorless mobile liquid, of a pleasant smell and pungent taste; specific gravity, 0.720. It is extremely volatile and highly inflammable; and its vapor, mixed with oxygen or atmospheric air, forms a very dangerous explosive mixture. It dissolves in 14 parts of water, and is miscible with alcohol and the fatty and volatile oils in all proportions. It is employed in medicine as a stimulant and antispasmodic. The vapor of the ether when inhaled has at first an exhilarating intoxicating effect, which is soon followed by partial or complete insensibility. It is largely used as an anesthetic in surgical operations, either alone or mixed with chloroform. It is prepared by distilling a mixture of alcohol and sulphuric acid; hence the name sulphuric ether, although sulphuric acid does not enter into its composition. True sulphuric ether, also known as ethyl sulphate, $(C_2H_5)_2SO_4$, is an oily liquid, of burning taste and ethereal odor, resembling that of peppermint, of specific gravity 1.184, and may be distilled without decomposition under diminished pressure at a temperature of about 244° F.—Sulphuric oxid, or sulphur trioxid, SO_3, a white crystalline body produced by the oxidation of sulphurous oxid (which see, under sulphurous). When this oxid is thrown into water, it combines rapidly with it to form sulphuric acid.

sulphurine (sul′fū-rin), a. [< sulphur + -ine[1].] Pertaining to or resembling sulphur; sulphureous. Bailey. [Rare.]

sulphuring (sul′fėr-ing), n. [Verbal n. of sulphur, v.] 1. The act or process of exposing to fumes of burning sulphur or of sulphurous acid.—2. The process of converting a part of the oxygen of the air in a wine-cask into sulphurous acid, by introducing, just before the wine is racked into the cask, a burning rag impregnated with sulphur. It serves to hinder acetous fermentation.—3. The act or process of applying flowers of sulphur, as to vines or roses to combat or prevent mildew.

sulphurization, sulphurisation (sul″fū-ri-zā′shon), n. [< sulphurize + -ation.] Same as sulphuration, 2.

The higher the temperature employed, the lower is the degree of sulphurisation of the products. W. H. Greenwood, Steel and Iron, p. 50.

sulphurize (sul′fū-rīz), v. t.; pret. and pp. sulphurized, ppr. sulphurizing. [< sulphur + -ize.] To sulphurate. Also spelled sulphurise.

Large commercial packages, as bales of goods and the like, cannot efficiently be sulphurized without loosening their covers and spreading out the contents. Workshop Receipts, 2d ser., p. 205.

sulphur-ore (sul′fėr-ōr), n. The commercial name of iron pyrites, from the fact that sulphur and sulphuric acid are obtained from it.

sulphurous (sul′fū-rus), a. [< F. sulfureux = Pr. solpros = Sp. sulfuroso, < L. sulfurosus, sulphurosus, full of sulphur, < sulfur, sulphur: see sulphur.] Full of or impregnated with sulphur; containing sulphur; of or pertaining to sulphur; like sulphur; like the suffocating fumes or the heat of burning sulphur.

There 's hell, there 's darkness, there 's the sulphurous pit! Shak., Lear, iv. 6. 130.

She has a sulphurous spirit, and will take Light at a spark. B. Jonson, Catiline, iii. 3.

Wee once more sail'd under the Æquator, . . . the wind . . . veering into E. N. E., so that the Monzoon affronted us, . . . at which time many of your company died, imputing the cause of their Calentures, Fluxes, Aches, . . . and the like to the sulphurous heat there. Sir T. Herbert, Travels (ed. 1638), p. 30.

And the sulphurous rifts of passion and woe Lie deep 'neath a silence pure & smooth. Lowell, Vision of Sir Launfal, i., Prel.

Sulphurous oxid, SO_2, a gas formed by the combustion of sulphur in air or dry oxygen. It is transparent and colorless, of a disagreeable taste, a pungent and suffocating odor, is fatal to life, and very injurious to vegetation. By the aid of pressure and cold it may be reduced to the liquid state. It extinguishes flame, and is not itself inflammable. It has bleaching properties, so that the fumes of burning sulphur are often used to whiten straw, and silk and woolen goods. It is also used as an antiseptic. This gas is also called sulphur dioxid; when led into water it forms sulphurous acid, H_2SO_3. This acid readily takes up oxygen, passing into sulphuric acid; it is dibasic, forming salts called sulphites. Sulphurous-acid gas is called in the trade vapor of burning brimstone.

sulphur-rain (sul′fėr-rān), n. See rain[1], 2 (a).

sulphur-root (sul′fėr-röt), n. Same as sulphur-wort.

★sulphur-salt (sul′fėr-sâlt), n. Same as sulpho-salt.

sulphur-spring (sul′fėr-spring), n. A spring containing sulphurous compounds, or impregnated with sulphurous gases. Such springs are common in regions of dying-out or dormant volcanism. See spring.

sulphur-waters (sul′fėr-wâ″tėrz), n. pl. Waters impregnated with sulphureted hydrogen.

sulphurweed (sul′fėr-wēd), n. Same as sulphurwort.

sulphur-whale (sul′fėr-hwāl), n. Same as sulphur-bottom.

sulphurwort (sul′fėr-wėrt), n. An Old World umbelliferous herb, Peucedanum officinale, with large umbels of pale-yellow flowers. The root has a yellow resinous juice, and an odor comparable to that of sulphur. It contains peucedanin, and was formerly used in medicine; it is still somewhat used in veterinary practice. Also sulphurweed and sulphur-root.

sulphury (sul′fėr-i), a. [< sulphur + -y[1].] 1. Sulphurous.

Sulphury wrath
Having once enter'd into royal breasts,
Mark how it burns. Lust's Dominion, ii. 3.

I . . . beheld a long sheet of blue water, its southern extremity vanishing in a hot, sulphury haze. B. Taylor, Lands of the Saracen, p. 77.

2. In entom., tinged with sulphur-yellow: as, sulphury white.

sulphur-yellow (sul′fėr-yel″ō), n. The yellow color of sulphur; a pale or light yellow.

★sulphuryl (sul′fū-ril), n. The bivalent radical SO_2.

sulphydrate (sulf′hī′drāt), n. Same as hydrosulphid.—Methyl sulphydrate. Same as methyl mercaptan (which see, under mercaptan).

sulphydric (sulf′hī′drik), a. [< sulph(ur) + hydr(ogen) + -ic.] In 'sulphydric acid' (sulphureted hydrogen).

Sulpician, Sulpitian (sul-pish′iạn), n. [< F. Sulpicien, the parish of St. Sulpice in Paris, where they were first organized; < L. Sulpicius, a Roman name.] One of a Roman Catholic community of priests established at Paris by the Abbé Olier, about 1645, for the purpose of training young men for the clerical office.

sultan (sul′tạn), n. [A later form, after the mod. F. or It. or the orig. Ar., of early mod. E. soldan, soldane, souldan, < ME. soldan, soudan, sowdan, sowdon, sawdon, < OF. souldan, soudan, sultan, F. sultan = Pr. sultan = Sp. soldán, sultán = Pg. soldão, sultão = It. sultano = D. G. Sw. Dan. sultan = Russ. sultanŭ, < ML. sultanus, soldanus = MGr. σουλτάνος, σολδάνος, NGr. σουλτάνος, < Turk. sultān = Pers. Hind. sultān, < Ar. sultān, also written soltān, a prince, monarch, sultan, orig. dominion, = Chal. sholtān, dominion, < sulta, solta, dominion, power.] 1. A Mohammedan sovereign: as, the Sultan of Zanzibar or of Morocco; by way of eminence, the ruler of Turkey, who assumes the title of Sultan of sultans; in old use, any ruler.

Sowdanes and Sarezenes owt of sere landes. Morte Arthur (E. E. T. S.), l. 607.

Thise marchants stode in grace
Of him, that was the sowdan of Surrye. Chaucer, Man of Law's Tale, l. 79.

Whiche lordes be all Mamolukes and vnder the soldan. Sir R. Guylforde, Pylgrymage, p. 16.

It has been mentioned that Turkey, in Sultan Abdul Medjid's reign, consented to the reunion of Moldavia and Wallachia as a single dominion, practically independent of the Porte. Creasy, Hist. Ottoman Turks, xxv.

2. In ornith., a purple or hyacinthine gallinule, or porphyrio; a bird of either of the genera Porphyrio and Ionornis, belonging to the rail family, Rallidæ: so called from their gorgeous coloration. The American sultan is Ionornis martinica. See the generic names, and gallinule. Also called sultana.—3. An ornamental variety of the domestic hen, of small size and pure-white plumage, and having the head heavily crested and bearded, beak white, legs blue, shanks feathered, and toes five.

A small white-crested variety, profusely feathered on the legs, was received some twenty years since (1864) from Turkey; they are now known as Sultans. Encyc. Brit., XIX. 645.

4. Either of two garden-flowers, Centaurea moschata, the sweet sultan, with purple or white flowers, and C. Amberboi, the yellow sultan: both of the section Amberboa. They are desirable old annuals, both, especially the former, sweet-scented. They are also called respectively purple (or white) sweet-sultan and yellow sweet-sultan.—Sultan coffee. See coffee.—Sultan's parasol. See Sterculia.

sultana (sul-tä′nä), n. [< It. sultana (= Sp. Pg. sultana = F. sultane), < ML. sultana*, fem. of sultanus, sultan: see sultan.] 1. The mother, a wife, or a daughter of a sultan.—2. A mistress, especially of a king or prince.

Lady Kitty Crocodile . . . was a favorite sultana of several crowned heads abroad, and lastly married a most noble and illustrious duke. S. Foote, quoted in W. Cooke's Memoirs of Foote, I. 121.

While Charles flirted with his three sultanas, Hortensia's French page . . . warbled some amorous verses. Macaulay, Hist. Eng., iv.

3. A peculiar form of necklace worn by women in the second half of the eighteenth century.—4. An obsolete musical instrument of the viol class, having several wire strings, tuned in pairs, like the zither.—5. In ornith., same as sultan, 2.—6. A variety of raisin. See raisin, 2.

sultana-bird (sul-tä′nạ-bėrd), n. Same as sultan, 2.

sultanate (sul′tạn-āt), n. [< sultan + -ate[3]. Cf. Turk. sultānāt, sultanate.] The rule, dominion, or territory of a sultan.

The dominions of the Sultanate of Zanzibar. Nineteenth Century, XXIV. 440.

sultaness (sul′tạn-es), n. [Altered, after sultan, from earlier soldaness, < ME. sowdanesse, < OF. soudanesse*, fem. of soudan, sultan: see sultan and -ess.] A sultana.

This olde sowdanesse, this cursed crone, Hath with her frendes doon this cursed dede. Chaucer, Man of Law's Tale, l. 334.

sultan-flower (sul′tạn-flou″ėr), n. Same as sultan, 4.

sultanic (sul-tan′ik), a. [< sultan + -ic.] Of or belonging to a sultan; imperial.

sultanry (sul′tạn-ri), n. [< sultan + -ry.] The dominions of a sultan; a sultanate.

Neither should I make any great difficulty to affirm the same of the sultanry of the Mamaluches. Bacon, Holy War.

sultanship (sul′tạn-ship), n. [< sultan + -ship.] The office or state of a sultan.

sultrily (sul′tri-li), adv. In a sultry manner; oppressively. Browning, Serenade at the Villa.

sultriness (sul′tri-nes), n. The state of being sultry; heat with a moist or close air.

sultry (sul′tri), a. [Contr. of sweltry, q. v.] 1. Giving forth great or oppressive heat.

Such as, born beneath the burning sky
And sultry sun, betwixt the tropics lie. Dryden, Æneid, vii. 309.

2. Very hot and moist; heated, close, stagnant, and heavy: as, a sultry atmosphere; a sultry night.

April passes and May steals by;
June leads in the sultry July. Bryant, The Song Sparrow.

3. Associated with oppressive heat.

What time the gray-fly winds her sultry horn.
Milton, Lycidas, l. 28.

The reapers at their sultry toil.
Tennyson, Palace of Art.

★sum[1] (sum), n. [Early mod. E. summe, somme, < ME. summe, somme, < OF. somme, F. somme = Sp. suma = Pg. summa = It. somma = D. G. Sw. summa = Dan. sum, < L. summa, the highest part, the top, summit, the chief point, the main thing, the principal matter, the substance, completion, issue, perfection, the whole, the amount, sum, fem. (sc. pars) of summus, highest, superl. of superus, superior, higher, < super, over, above: see super-. Cf. supreme.] 1. The highest point; the top; summit; completion; full amount; total; maximum.

Thus have I told thee all my state, and brought My story to the sum of earthly bliss.
Milton, P. L., viii. 522.

2. The whole; the principal points or thoughts when viewed together; the substance.

And in this moone is eke castracion
Of hyves ronke of hony fild, the some Wherof is this significacion.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 162.

That is the sum of all, Leonato.
Shak., Much Ado, i. 1. 147.

The summe of what I said was that a more free permission of writing at some times might be profitable.
Milton, Apology for Smectymnuus.

3. The aggregate of two or more numbers, magnitudes, quantities, or particulars; the result of the process of addition: as, the sum of 5 and 7 is 12; the sum of a and b is $a + b$.

They semble in sortes. summes fulle huge,
Sowdanes and Sarezenes owt of sere landes.
Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), l. 606.

You know how much the gross sum of deuce-ace amounts to. Shak., L. L. L., i. 2. 49.

An Induction is not the mere sum of the Facts which are colligated. The Facts are not only brought together, but seen in a new point of view.
Whewell, Philos. of Induct. Sciences, I. xxxix.

Public events had produced an immense sum of misery to private citizens. Macaulay, Machiavelli.

Hence—4. The whole number or quantity.

The stretching of a span Buckles in his sum of age.
Shak., As you Like it, iii. 2. 140.

5. A quantity of money or currency; an indefinite amount of money.

Than he fot hom of florens a full fuerse soume.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 12610.

I did send to you
For certain sums of gold, which you denied me.
Shak., J. C., iv. 3. 70.

6. An arithmetical problem to be solved, or an example of a rule to be worked out; also, such a problem worked out and the various steps shown.

His most judicious remarks differ from the remarks of a really philosophical historian as a sum correctly cast up by a book-keeper from a general expression discovered by an algebraist. Macaulay, History.

7. In the calculus of finite differences, a function the result of operating upon another function with the sign of summation, and expressing the addition of all successive values of that function in which the variable differs from unit to unit from zero or other constant value to one less than the value indicated; also, a special value of such a function. Thus, the sum of r^x is or, since the summation may commence at any other integral value of x, $\Sigma r^x = r^x/(r-1) + C$, where C is an arbitrary constant or periodic function having for its period a submultiple of unity.—Algebraic sum. See algebraic.—A round sum, a good round sum, a large amount of money.

$$\Sigma r^x = 1 + r + r^2 + r^3 + \cdots r^{x-1} = \frac{r^x - 1}{r - 1};$$

Bethinke thee, Gresham, threescore thousand pounds,
A good round sum: let not the hope of gaine
Draw thee to losse.
Heywood, If you Know not Me (Works, ed. 1874, I. 252).

Gaussian sum. See Gaussian.—Geometrical sum, a sum of vectors; the vector whose origin is the origin of the first of the added vectors, and whose terminal is the terminal of the last of the added vectors when the terminal of each except the last is made the origin of the next.—In sum, in short; in brief.

In sum, she appeares a saint of an extraordinary sort, in so religious a life as is seldom met with in villages now-a-daies. Evelyn, Diary, October 26, 1685.

Logical sum, the aggregate of a number of propositions, or that which is true if any one of the aggregants is true, and false only if all are false; also, the aggregate of terms, or that which includes all that any one of the aggregants includes, and excludes only what all exclude.—Lump, penal, etc., sum. See the qualifying words.—Pyramidal sum, the sum of a number of quantities, A, B, C, D, . . . having the form $A + 3B + 6C + 10D + \cdots$.—Triangular sum, the sum of several quantities, A, B, C, D, . . . having the form $A + 2B + 3C + 4D + \cdots$ sum[1] (sum), v.; pret. and pp. summed, ppr. summing. [Early mod. E. also summe; < OF. sommer = Sp. sumar = Pg. summar = It. sommare, < ML. summare, sum up, charge, exact, < L. summa, sum: see sum[1], n.] I. trans. 1. To combine into a total or sum; add together; ascertain the totality of: often followed by up.

You cast the event of war, my noble lord,
And summ'd the account of chance, before you said,
"Let us make head." Shak., 2 Hen. IV., i. 1. 167.

The sands that are vpon the shore to summe,
Or make the wither'd Floures grow fresh againe.
Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 559.

Sum up at night what thou hast done by day;
And in the morning, what thou hast to do.
G. Herbert, The Temple, The Church Porch.

2. To bring or collect into a small compass; condense in a few words: usually with up: as, to sum up evidence; to sum up arguments.

To sum up all the Rage of Fate
In the two things I dread and hate—May'st thou be false, and I be great.
Prior, To a Young Gentleman in Love.

Since by its fruit a tree is judged,
Show me thy fruit, the latest act of thine!
For in the last is summed the first and all.
Browning, Ring and Book, II. 178.

Faith in God, faith in man, faith in work—this is the short formula in which we may sum up the teaching of the founders of New England, a creed ample enough for this life and the next.
Lowell, Among my Books, 1st ser., p. 229.

3†. In falconry, to have (the feathers) full grown and in full number.

With prosperous wing full summ'd.
Milton, P. R., i. 14.

Hence—4†. To supply with full clothing.

No more sense spoken, all things Goth and Vandal,
Till you be summ'd again, velvets and scarlets,
Anointed with gold lace.
Fletcher, Wit without Money, iii. 1.

5. In the calculus of finite differences, to find the general expression for the aggregate of: said of the result of adding successive values of a given function in each of which the variable is increased over the last by unity. See sum, n., 7.—To sum up evidence, to recapitulate to the jury the facts and circumstances which have been adduced in evidence in the case before the court, giving at the same time an exposition of the law where it appears necessary: said of the presiding judge on a jury trial, or of counsel arguing for his client at the close of the evidence. See summing-up, under summing.

II. intrans. To make a recapitulation; offer a brief statement of the principal points or substance: usually with up.

The young lawyer sums up in the end.
W. M. Baker, New Timothy, p. 316.

sum[2]†, a. An obsolete spelling of some[1].

-sum. See -some.

★sumac, sumach (sū′mak), n. [Formerly also shumac, shumack, shumach; earlier sumak, sumake, sumaque; = D. smak = G. sumak, sumach = Sw. sumack = Dan. sumak, < OF. sumac, sumach, F. sumac, sommac = Sp. zumaque = Pg. sumagre = It. sommaco, < Ar. summāq, sumac. Cf. F. sommail, < Ar. samāgīl, sumac.] 1. One of numerous shrubs or small trees of the genus Rhus. See def. 2, and phrases below.—2. A product of the dried and ground leaves of certain shrubs or trees of the genus Rhus or of other genera, much used for tanning light-colored leathers and to some extent for dyeing. The leading source of this product is the tanners' or Sicilian sumac, Rhus Coriaria, of southern Europe, cultivated in Sicily and also in Tuscany. The Venetian sumac, smoke-tree, or wig-tree, Cotinus Cotinus, is grown in Tyrol for the same purpose. (See smoke-tree and scotino.) In Spain various species supply a similar substance, and in Algeria the leaves of Rhus pentaphylla, five-leaved or Tezera sumac, are applied to the manufacture of morocco. In France a tree of another genus, Coriaria myrtifolia, myrtle-leaved sumac, furnishes a similar product. (See Coriaria.) In the United States, particularly in Virginia, the leaves of several wild sumacs are now gathered as tan-stock—namely, of the dwarf, the smooth, the stag-horn, and perhaps the Canadian sumac. These contain more tannin than the European, but, at least with careless gathering, they make an inferior leather.—Canadian sumac, a low straggling bush, Rhus Canadensis aromatica, found from Canada southward. Its leaves when crushed are pleasantly scented. Also called fragrant sumac.—Chinese sumac. See Ailantus.—Coral-sumac, the poisonwood, Metopium Metopium: so named from its scarlet berries. See poisonwood, 1.—Curriers' sumac. See Coriaria.—Dwarf sumac, Rhus copallina, of the eastern half of the United States, in the north a shrub, southward a small tree. It has dark shining leaves, with the common petiole winged between the leaflets. It yields tanning material (see def. 2), and its drupes are used like those of the smooth sumac. Also black or mountain sumac.—Jamaica sumac. Same as coral-sumac.—Laurel sumac, the Californian Rhus laurina, a large evergreen much-branched and very leafy shrub, exhaling an aromatic odor. This and R. integrifolia, forming dense smooth thickets along cliffs near the sea in the same region, and a few species elsewhere, have simple leaves.—Poison sumac. See poison-sumac.—Scarlet sumac, the smooth sumac, in allusion to its leaves in autumn.—Sicilian sumac. See def. 2.—Smooth sumac, a shrub, Rhus glabra, common in barren or rocky soil in the eastern half of the United States. The leaves are smooth, somewhat glaucous, whitened beneath. It bears a large panicle of small crimson drupes, which are pleasantly acid, and officinally recognized as astringent and refrigerant. A strong decoction or diluted fluid extract forms an effective gargle. Also Pennsylvania, upland, or white sumac.—Stag-horn or stag's-horn sumac, a shrub or small tree, Rhus hirta, of eastern North America. It is a picturesque species with irregular branches, abundant long pinnate leaves, and in autumn pyramidal panicles of velvety crimson drupes. Its branchlets and leafstalks are densely velvety-hairy. Its wood is satiny, yellow streaked with green, occasionally used for inlaying. Its fruit is of a similar quality with that of R. glabra, both sometimes called vinegar-tree. Its bark and foliage are sometimes used for tanning and dyeing.—Swamp-sumac. Same as poison-sumac.—Tanners' or tanning sumac, specifically, Rhus Coriaria, a tree resembling the stag-horn sumac. The curriers' sumac is also so called.—Varnish sumac, the Japan lacquer- or varnish-tree. See lacquer-tree.—Venetian, Venice, or Venus's sumac. See def. 2.—Virginian sumac, a foreign name of the stag-horn sumac.—West Indian sumac, a small tree, Brunellia comocladifolia of the Brunelliaceæ, resembling sumac.

Smooth Sumac (Rhus glabra).

sumac-beetle (sū′mak-bē″tl), n. A chrysomelid beetle of the United States, Blepharida rhois, Jumping Sumac-beetle (Blepharida rhois).

a, egg; b, egg-masses covered with excrement; c, larva; d, cocoon; e, pupa; f, beetle. (Lines show natural sizes of a, c (separate figure), e, f; other figures natural size.)

which, both as larva and adult, feeds upon the foliage of sumac. The larva covers itself with its own excrement, like certain others of its family. More fully called jumping sumac-beetle.

sumach, n. See sumac.

sumack†, sumak†. Obsolete forms of sumac.

sumaget, n. See summage.

sumatra (sŏ-mä′trä), n. [So called from the island of Sumatra.] A sudden squall occurring in the narrow sea between the Malay peninsula and the island of Sumatra.

Sumatra camphor. Same as Borneo camphor (which see, under camphor).

Sumatran (sŏ-mä′tran), a. and n. [< Sumatra (see def.) + -an.] I. a. Of or relating to Sumatra, a large island of the Malay archipelago, lying west of Borneo and northwest of Java, or of or relating to its inhabitants.—Sumatran broadbill, Corydon sumatranus, a bird of the family Eurylæmidæ.—Sumatran monkey, Semnopithecus melalophus, of a yellowish-red color above, with blue face and black crest.—Sumatran rhinoceros, Rhinoceros sumatrensis, a hairy species with two short horns.

II. n. A native or an inhabitant of Sumatra.

Sumatra orange. See Murraya.

Sumatra pepper. See pepper.

sumbul (sŭm'bŭl), n. [= F. sumbul, < Ar. Pers. Hind. sumbul, spikenard.] An East Indian name of the spikenard (Nardostachys Jatamansi), the valerian, and the musk-root (Ferula Sumbul), more especially of their roots. The musk-root is the commercial sumbul. See cut under spikenard.

Sumbul (Ferula Sumbul). a, flower.

sumbul-root (sŭm'bŭl-rōt), n. The root of Ferula Sumbul. See sumbul.

sum-calculus (sum'kal″kū-lus), n. That part of the calculus of finite differences which treats of summation.

Sumerian, Sumir, Sumirian (sū-mē'ri-an, sū'mir, sū-mir'i-an), n. See Accadian.

sumless (sum'les), a. [< sum[1] + -less.] Not to be summed up or computed; of which the amount cannot be ascertained; incalculable; inestimable. Shak., Hen. V., i. 2. 165.

summage†, n. [Also sumage; < OF. sommage, a burden, drudgery, < somme, some, saume, same, a load, burden, pack: see seam[2]. Cf. summer[2], sumpter.] A toll for carriage on horseback; also, a horse-load.

summarily (sum'a-ri-li), adv. In a summary manner; briefly; concisely; in a narrow compass, or in few words; in a short way or method; without delay; promptly; without hesitation or formality.

summariness (sum'a-ri-nes), n. The character of being summary.

summarist (sum'a-rist), n. [< summar-y + -ist.] One who summarizes; a writer or compiler of a summary.

summarize (sum'a-rīz), v. t.; pret. and pp. summarized, ppr. summarizing. [< summar-y + -ize.] To make a summary or abstract of; reduce to or express in a summary; state or represent briefly. Also spelled summarise.

The distinctive catch-words which summarize his doctrine. S. Lanier, The English Novel, p. 44.

summary (sum'a-ri), a. and n. [I. a. = F. sommaire = Sp. sumario = Pg. summario = It. sommario, < L. summarius*, of or pertaining to the sum or substance, < summa, the main thing, the substance, the whole: see sum[1]. II. n. = F. sommaire = Sp. sumario = Pg. summario = It. sommario, < L. summarium, an epitome, abstract, summary, neut. of summarius*, adj.: see I.] I. a. 1. Containing the sum or substance only; reduced to few words; short; brief; concise; compendious: as, a summary statement of arguments or objections.—2. Rapidly performed; quickly executed; effected by a short way or method; without hesitation, delay, or formality.

He cleared the table by the summary process of tilting everything upon it into the fireplace.
Dickens, Martin Chuzzlewit, xiii.

This, it must be confessed, is rather a summary mode of settling a question of constitutional right.
D. Webster, Speech, March 10, 1818.

Summary conviction. See conviction.—Summary Jurisdiction Act. See jurisdiction.—Summary proceedings, in law. See proceeding.—Syn. 1. Succinct, Condensed, etc. (see concise); synoptical, terse, pithy.—2. Prompt, rapid.

II. n.; pl. summaries (-riz). 1. An abridged or condensed statement or account; an abstract, abridgment, or compendium containing the sum or substance of a fuller statement.

And have the summary of all our griefs,
When time shall serve, to show in articles.
Shak., 2 Hen IV., iv. 1. 73.

There is one summary, or capital law, in which nature meets, subordinate to God.
Bacon, Physical Fables, viii., Expl.

2. In law, a short application to a court or judge, without the formality of a full proceeding. Wharton.—Syn. 1. Compendium, Abstract, etc. ★See abridgment.

summation (su-mā'shon), n. [= F. sommation, < ML. summatio(n-), admonition, lit. 'a summing up,' < summare, sum up: see sum[1].] Addition; specifically, the process of finding the sum of a series, or the limit toward which the sum of an infinite series converges; any combination of particular quantities in a total.

Of this series no summation is possible to a finite intellect. De Quincey.

We must therefore suppose that in these ideational tracts, as well as elsewhere, activity may be awakened, in any particular locality, by the summation therein of a number of tensions, each incapable alone of provoking an actual discharge. W. James, Prin. of Psychol., I. 563.

Summation of series, in math. See series.—Summation of stimuli, the phenomenon of the production of mental effects by iterated stimuli which a single one would not produce.

summational (su-mā'shon-al), a. [< summation + -al.] Produced or expressed by summation or addition: in contradistinction to somewhat similar results produced by other operations.—Summational tone. See resultant tone, under resultant.

summative (sum'a-tiv), a. [< summat-ion + -ive.] Additive; operating or acting by means of addition. [Rare.]

Inhibition, however, is not the destruction, but the storing-up, of energy; and is attended not by the discharge, but by the increased tension, of relatively large and strongly-acting motor cells, whose connections with each other are mainly summative. G. S. Hall, German Culture, p. 235.

★summer[1] (sum'ėr), n. and a. [Early mod. E. also sommer; < ME. somer, sumer, < AS. sumer, sumor = OS. sumar = OFries. somer, sumur = MD. somer, D. zomer = MLG. somer, LG. sommer = OHG. sumar, MHG. sumer, G. sommer = Icel. sumar = Sw. sommar = Dan. sommer (Goth. not recorded), summer; akin to OIr. sam, Ir. sam, samh, summer, sun (OIr. samrad, samradh, summer), = OW. ham, W. haf, summer, = Armenian am, year (amarn, summer), = Skt. samā, year, = Zend hama, summer.] I. n. 1. The warmest season of the year: in the United States reckoned as the months June, July, and August; in Great Britain as May, June, and July. See season.

In Somer, be alle the Contrees, fallen many Tempestes.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 129.

2. A whole year as represented by the summer; a twelvemonth: as, a child of three summers.

Five summers have I spent in furthest Greece.
Shak., C. of E., i. 1. 133.

All-hallown summer†. See all-hallown.—Indian summer. See Indian.—Little summer of St. Luke, or St. Luke's summer, a recurrence of mild weather lasting for ten days or a fortnight, usually beginning about the middle of October, the 18th of which month is St. Luke's day.—St. Martin's summer, a period of fine weather occurring about St. Martin's day, November 11th; hence, prosperity after misfortune.

Expect Saint Martin's summer, halcyon days,
Since I have entered into these wars.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., i. 2. 131.

But suppose easterly winds have largely predominated in autumn, and south-westerly winds begin to prevail in the end of November or beginning of December, the weather is likely to continue exceptionally mild, with frequent storms of wind and rain, till about Christmas. This period occurs nearly every year, and its beginning is popularly known as St. Martin's summer.
Buchan, Handy Book of Meteorol. (2d ed.), p. 331.

II. a. Of or pertaining to summer: as, summer heat; hence, sunny and warm.

Thyne oilcellar sette on the somer syde.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 19.

He was sitting in a summer parlour. Judges iii. 20.

Summer bronchitis, summer catarrh. Same as hay-fever.—Summer cloud. See cloud[1], 1 (b).—Summer colts, the quivering vaporous appearance of the air near the surface of the ground when heated in summer. [Prov. Eng.]—Summer complaint, diarrhea occurring in the summer. [Colloq., U. S.]—Summer cypress. See cypress[1], 1 (c).—Summer duck. See duck[2].—Summer fever, hay-fever.—Summer finch. See finch[1] and Peucæa.—Summer grape, haw, lightning, rape. See grape[1], 2, haw[2], 3, etc.—Summer redbird, the rose tanager, Piranga æstiva, which breeds in the United States throughout its summer range. It is 7 inches long, and 12 in extent. The male is rich-red, of a rosy or vermilion tint, different from the scarlet of the black-winged tanager.—Summer savory. See savory[2].—Summer snipe. (a) The common sandpiper, Tringoides hypoleucus. (b) The green sandpiper. (c) The dunlin or purre. [Eng. in all senses.]—Summer snowflake. See snowflake, 3.—Summer squash. See squash[2].—Summer teal, the pied widgeon, or garganey, Querquedula circia. [Eng.]—Summer warbler. Same as summer yellowbird.—Summer wheat. See wheat.—Summer yellowbird, the summer warbler, Dendrœca æstiva, one of the golden warblers abounding in the United States in summer. See warbler.

summer[1] (sum'ėr), v. [< summer[1], n.] I. intrans. To pass the summer or warm season.

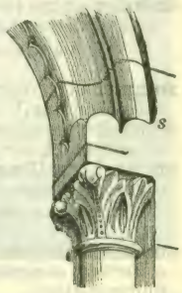
The fowls shall summer upon them [mountains], and all the beasts of the earth shall winter upon them.
Isa. xviii. 6.

II. trans. 1. To keep or carry through the summer. [Rare.]

Maids, well summered and warm kept, are like flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind, though they have their eyes.
Shak., Hen. V., v. 2. 335.



2. To feed during the summer, as cattle. [Scotch.]

summer[2] (sum'ėr), n. [Early mod. E. also sommer; < ME. somer, < OF. somier, sommier, sumier, sumer*, F. sommier = Pr. saumier = It. somiere, somaro, a pack-horse, also a beam, < ML. sagmarius, sugmarius, samarius, saumarius, somarius, summarius, a pack-horse, prop. adj., sc. caballus, < sagma, ML. also sauma, salma, a pack, burden, < Gr. σάγμα, a pack-saddle: see seam[2]. Cf. G. saumer, säumer, a pack-horse; and see sumpter, from the same ult. source. For the use of summer, 'pack-horse,' in the sense 'beam' (as bearing weight), cf. E. horse, easel, in similar uses.] 1†. A pack-horse; a sumpter-horse.

The two squires drof be-fore hem a somer with two cofers, and thei a-light a-noon vnder the pyne tre.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 636.

The monke hath fifty two men,
And seven somers full stronge.
Lytell Geste of Robyn Hode (Child's Ballads, V. 82).

2. In building: (a) A large timber or beam laid as a bearing-beam. See cuts under beam, 1. (b) A girder. (c) A brest-summer. (d) A large stone, the first that is laid upon a column or pilaster in the construction of an arch, or of several arches uniting upon one impost, as in the ribs of groined vaulting. (e) A stone laid upon a column to receive a haunch of a platband. (f) A lintel.

Summer of an Arch, 12th century. s, summer. (From Viollet-le-Duc's "Dict. de l'Architecture.") summer[3] (sum'ėr), n. [< sum[1] + -er[1].] One who sums; one who casts up an account.

summer-dried (sum'ėr-drīd), a. Dried by the heat of the summer. [Rare.]

Like a summer-dried fountain.
Scott, L. of the L., iii. 16.

summer-fallow (sum'ėr-fal″ō), a. and n. I. a. Lying fallow during the summer.

II. n. Naked fallow; land lying bare of crops in summer, but frequently plowed, harrowed, and rolled, so as to pulverize it and clean it of weeds.

summer-fallow (sum'ėr-fal″ō), v. t. [< summer-fallow, a.] To plow and let lie fallow; plow and work repeatedly in summer to prepare for wheat or other crop.

summer-house (sum'ėr-hous), n. 1. A structure in a park or garden, sometimes elaborate, but more often of the simplest character, generally little more than a roof supported on posts, and with the sides open or closed merely with a lattice for the support of vines, intended to provide a shady and cool place to sit in the open air, or for the enjoyment of a view, or the like. Compare kiosk and pavilion.

In its centre was a grass-plat, surrounding a ruinous little structure, which showed just enough of its original design to indicate that it had once been a summer-house.
Hawthorne, Seven Gables, vi.

Eighteenth-century summer-houses seem to have been of two types—those that closed a vista in the garden at the end of a long walk, and those that were placed in the corner of the bowling-green or court.
N. and Q., 7th ser., IX. 175.

2. A house for summer residence.

summering[1] (sum'ėr-ing), n. [< summer[1], n., + -ing[1].] 1. A kind of early apple.—2†. Rural merrymaking at midsummer; a summer holiday. Nares.

summering[2] (sum'ėr-ing), n. [< summer[2] + -ing[1].] In arch., in conic vaulting, where the axis is horizontal, the two surfaces which, if produced, would intersect the axis of the cone. Gwilt.

summer-lay†, v. t. [ME. somer-layen; < summer[1] + lay[1].] To sow in summer (?).

Your fader had fro John Kendale the croppe of the seide x acres londe, sowen barly and peson, wherof v acres were weel somer layde to the seid barly.
Paston Letters, III. 402.

summer-like (sum'ėr-līk), a. Resembling summer; summerly.

Grapes might at once have turned purple under its summerlike exposure. Hawthorne, Seven Gables, viii.

summerliness (sum'ėr-li-nes), n. The state of being summerly, or of having a mild or summer-like temperature. Fuller, Worthies, Somersetshire, III. 85. [Rare.]

summerly (sum'ėr-li), a. [< ME. somerlich, < AS. sumorlic, < sumor, summer: see summer[1] and -ly[1].] Like summer; characteristic of summer; warm and sunny.

As summerly as June and Strawberry Hill may sound, I assure you I am writing to you by the fire-side.
Walpole, Letters, II. 164.

summer-ripe (sum'ėr-rīp), a. Quite or fully ripe. [Rare.]

It is an injury, or, in his word, a curse upon corn, when it is summer-ripe, not to be cut down with the sickle.
Bp. Hacket, Abp. Williams, ii. 228. (Davies.)

summer-room† (sum'ėr-röm), n. A summer-house.

On the summit of this Hill his Lordship is building a Summer-room.
Defoe, Tour through Great Britain, i. 335. (Davies.)

summersault, n. See somersault.

summersaut†, n. Same as somersault.

summer-seeming (sum'ėr-sē″ming), a. Appearing like summer; full-blown; rank or luxuriant. Shak., Macbeth, iv. 3. 86.

summerset, n. and v. See somerset[1].

summer-shine (sum'ėr-shīn), n. The summer color or dress of a bird or insect. [Rare.]

A gay insect in his summer-shine.
Thomson, Winter, l. 644.

summer-stir (sum'ėr-stėr), v. t. To summer-fallow. [Eng.]

summer-stone (sum'ėr-stōn), n. Same as skew-corbel (which see, under skew[1]).

summer-swelling (sum'ėr-swel″ing), a. Growing up in summer.

Disdain to root the summer-swelling flower.
Shak., T. G. of V., ii. 4. 162.

summertide (sum'ėr-tīd), n. and a. [< ME. somertide, sumertid; < summer[1] + tide[1].] I. n. Summer-time.

Most cheffest time was of somertide
That ther hys wacche gan so to prouide.
Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 5522.

Lulled by the fountain in the summer tide.
Wordsworth, Hart-Leap Well, ii.

II. a. Of or pertaining to summer-time. The Atlantic, LXIV. 124.

summer-time (sum'ėr-tīm), n. [< ME. somer-time; < summer[1] + time.] The summer season; summer.

In Somer tyme him liketh wel to glade;
That when Virgiles [Pleiads] downe gooth gynneth fade.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 184.

The genial summer-time. Longfellow.

summer-tree (sum'ėr-trē), n. 1. In carp., a horizontal beam serving to support the ends of floor-joists, or resting on posts and supporting the wall of the stories above; a lintel. Also called brest-summer.—2. In masonry, the first stone laid over a column or beam. E. H. Knight.

summerward, summerwards (sum'ėr-wärd, -wärdz), adv. [< summer + -ward, -wards.] Toward summer. The Century, XXXVIII. 774. [Rare.]

summery (sum'ėr-i), a. [< summer + -y[1].] Of or pertaining to summer; like summer; summer-like.

Gave the room the summery tone.
The Atlantic, LX. 262.

summing (sum'ing), n. [Verbal n. of sum[1], v.] The act of one who sums, in any sense of the verb sum; specifically, the act or process of working out an arithmetical problem.

Mr. Tulliver . . . observed, indeed, that there were no maps, and not enough summing. . . . It was a puzzling business, this schooling.
George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, ii. 7.

Summing up. (a) A summary; a recapitulation; a compendious restatement.

Not a history, but exaggerative pictures of the Revolution, is Mazzini's summing-up. The Century, XXXI. 406.

(b) In law: (1) The address of the judge to the jury on a trial, after the close of the evidence and generally after arguments of counsel, usually recapitulating the essential points of the case and the evidence, and instructing them on the law. This is the English usage of the phrase, and corresponds to the charge or the American use of the word instructions. (2) The argument of counsel at the close of evidence on a trial either before a jury or before a judge or referee. This is the American usage of the phrase.

summist (sum'ist), n. [= Sp. sumista, < ML. summista, < L. summa, sum: see sum[1] and -ist.] One who forms an abridgment or summary; specifically, a medieval writer of a compendium (Latin summa), especially of theology, as St. Thomas Aquinas.

A book entitled "The Tax of the Apostolical Chamber or Chancery," whereby may be learned more sorts of wickedness than from all the summists and the summaries of all vices. Bp. Bull, Corruptions of Ch. of Rome.

Hugo [of St. Victor (1097–1141)], by the composition of his Summa Sententiarum, endeavoured to give a methodical or rational presentation of the content of faith, and was thus the first of the so-called Summists.
★ Encyc. Brit., XXI. 425.

summit (sum'it), n. [< F. sommet, dim. of OF. som, top of a hill, < L. summum, the highest point, neut. of summus, highest: see sum[1]. The older word in E. is summity.] 1. The highest point; the top; the apex.

Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount.
Shak., Hamlet, iii. 3. 18.

2. The highest point or degree; the utmost elevation; the maximum; the climax.

From the summit of power men no longer turn their eyes upward, but begin to look about them.
Lowell, Among my Books, 1st ser., p. 233.

3. In math.: (a) A point of a polyhedron where three or more surfaces (generally planes) meet. (b) A point at which a penultimate curve cuts two coincident parts of the same degenerate curve. Thus, if a double line be a degenerate conic, there are two points on it at which it is intersected by a true conic differing infinitely little from it; and these are called summits. =Syn. 1 and 2. Apex, vertex, acme, pinnacle, zenith.

summitless (sum'it-les), a. [< summit + -less.] Having no summit. Sir H. Taylor.

summit-level (sum'it-lev″el), n. The highest level; the highest of a series of elevations over which a canal, watercourse, railway, or the like is carried.

summity† (sum'i-ti), n. [< ME. summyte, < OF. sommite, F. sommité = Sp. sumidad = Pg. sumidade = It. sommità, < LL. summita(t-)s, height, top, < summus: see sum[1].] The highest point; the summit.

But see wel that the chief roote oon directe
Be hool translate unto his summyte
Withouten hurte and in no wise enfecte.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 214.

On the North-east corner and summity of the hill are the ruines of huge arches sunk low in the earth.
Sandys, Travailes, p. 116.

To remove themselves and their effects down to the lower summity. Swift, Battle of the Books.

summon (sum'on), v. t. [Early mod. E. also sommon; < ME. somonen, somonyen, somenen, sompnen, < OF. somoner, sumoner, semoner, also semonre, semondre, somoundre, F. semondre = Pr. semondre, somondre, somonre, summon, < L. summonere, submonere, remind privily, < sub, under, privily, + monere, remind, warn: see monish, admonish. The ME. forms were partly confused with ME. somnen, somnien, < AS. samnian, gather together: see sam. Hence ult. summons, sumner, etc.] 1. To call, cite, or notify by authority to appear at a place specified, to attend in person to some public duty, or to assume a certain rank or dignity; especially, to command to appear in court: as, to summon a jury; to summon witnesses.

Tho by-gan Grace to go with Peers the Plouhman,
And consailede hym and Conscience the comune to someny.
Piers Plowman (C), xxii. 214.

Some trumpet summon hither to the walls
These men of Angiers. Shak., K. John, ii. 1. 198.

The parliament is regularly to be summoned by the king's writ or letter. Blackstone, Com., I. ii.

Thomas Fane married Mary, daughter of Henry, Lord Abergavenny, 1574, heir general of Abergavenny. She was summoned to the barony of Le Despenser (Dispensarius), 1604, and her son was created Earl of Westmorland.
N. and Q., 7th ser., V. 391.

2. To call; send for; ask the presence or attendance of, literally or figuratively.

But the kynge leodogan ne cometh not, and all this chiualrie haue I yow somowned, and therfore I owe to haue guerdon. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 567.

To summon timely sleep, he doth not need Aethyop's cold Rush, nor drowsie Poppy-seed.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, i. 3.

Lord Lonsdale had summoned the peers to-day to address the King not to send the troops abroad in the present conjuncture. Walpole, Letters, II. 28.

3. To call on to do some specified act; warn; especially, to call upon to surrender: as, to summon a fort.

Coal-black clouds that shadow heaven's light
Do summon us to part and bid good night.
Shak., Venus and Adonis, l. 534.

Summon the town. Shak., Cor., i. 4. 7.

The Bridge being thus gained, the Duke of Exeter was sent, and with him Windsor the Herald, to summon the Citizens to surrender the Town. Baker, Chronicles, p. 173.

4. To arouse; excite into action or exertion; raise: with up.

Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood.
Shak., Hen. V., iii. 1. 7.

Do we remember how the great teacher of thanksgiving summons up every one of his faculties to assist him in it? Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, I. i.

=Syn. 1 and 2. Invite, Convoke, etc. (see call[1]), convene, assemble.

summon† (sum'on), n. [< summon, v. Cf. summons.] An invitation, request, or order.

Esther durst not come into the presence till the sceptre had given her admission; a summon of that emboldens her. Rev. T. Adams, Works, III. 250.

summonance†, n. [ME. somonaunce, < OF. somonance,* < somoner, summon: see summon.] A summons.

I have, quod he, a somonaunce of a bille.
Chaucer, Friar's Tale (Harl. MS.), l. 288.

summoner (sum'on-ėr), n. [Formerly also sumner; < ME. somonour, somenour, somnour, sompnour, somner, < OF. somonour, semoneor,* one who summons, < somoner, semoner, summon: see summon.] 1. One who summons, or cites by authority; especially, one employed to warn persons to appear in court; also, formerly, an apparitor.

A somonour is a rennere up and doun
With mandementz for fornicacioun,
And is ybet at every townes ende.
Chaucer, Prol. to Friar's Tale, l. 19.

Marc. My lady comes. What may that be?
Clau. A sumner,
That cites her to appear.
Fletcher, Valentinian, ii. 2.

2†. In early Eng. law, a public prosecutor or complainant.

summoning (sum'on-ing), n. [Verbal n. of summon, v.] 1. The act or process of calling or citing; a summons.

Reluctantly and slow, the maid
The unwelcome summoning obey'd.
Scott, L. of the L., ii. 21.

2. See the quotation.

According to the authors just named [Livy and Dionysius], the whole body of free Romans, burgesses and non-burgesses, was divided into a certain number of classes (i. e., summonings, probably from calare), numbered according to the amount of fortune possessed by each citizen. Encyc. Brit., VI. 195.

summons (sum'onz), n.; pl. summonses (-ez). [< ME. somons, somouns, < OF. somounse, semonse,* F. semonce (= Pr. somonsa, somosta, semosta), a summons, admonition, orig. fem. of semons, pp. of somoner, semondre, summon: see summon, v.] 1. A call, especially by authority or the command of a superior, to appear at a place named, or to attend to some public duty; an invitation, request, or order to go to or appear at some place, or to do some other specified thing; a call with more or less earnestness or insistence.

Music, give them their summons.
B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, v. 2.

As when the Master's summons came.
Whittier, Lucy Hooper.

That same day summonses were issued to fifty gentlemen to receive knighthood, in anticipation of the king's coronation. J. Gairdner, Rich. III., ii.

Then flew in a dove,
And brought a summons from the sea.
Tennyson, In Memoriam, ciii.

2. In law, a call by authority to appear in a court or before a judicial officer; also, the document by which such call is given; a citation to appear before a judge or magistrate. Specifically—(a) A writ calling on a defendant to cause an appearance to the action to be entered for him within a certain time after service, in default whereof the plaintiff may proceed to judgment and execution. (b) A notice of application to a judge at chambers, whether at law or in equity. (c) A citation summoning a person to appear before a police magistrate or bench of justices, or before a master or referee in a civil case. (d) In Scots law, a writ issuing from the Court of Session in the sovereign's name, or, if in a sheriff court, in the name of the sheriff, setting forth the grounds and conclusions of an action, and containing a warrant or mandate to messengers-at-arms or sheriff-officers to cite the defender to appear in court.

3. Milit., a call to surrender.—Omnibus summons, a name sometimes given in present English practice to an order or process of the court calling the parties in for directions of an interlocutory nature: an expedient intended to supersede or merge in one application to the court the various incidental motions which under the former practice might be made successively.—Original summons, in modern English practice, a summons by which proceedings are commenced without a writ. A proceeding so commenced is, however, sometimes deemed an action.—Privileged summonses. See privilege.

summons (sum'onz), v. t. [< summons, n.] To serve with a summons; summon. [Colloq.]

I did not summons Lord Lansdown.
Swift, to Mrs. Johnson, March 22, 1711–12. (Seager's [Supp. to Johnson.)

On behalf of "I'll summons you" it may be urged that it is not thereby intended to use the verb to summon, but the noun summons in its verb form, just as people also say, "I'll county court you."
N. and Q., 7th ser., VII. 471.

summula (sum'ū-lā), n.; pl. summulæ (-lē). A small tractate giving a compend of a part of a science. The Summulæ Logicales of Petrus Hispanus constituted the common medieval text-book of logic. It was written about the middle of the thirteenth century by the doctor who afterward became Pope John XXI. It is noticeable for the number of mnemonic verses it contains, and for its original development of the Parva Logicalia.

summulist (sum'ū-list), n. A commentator of the Summulæ Logicales of Petrus Hispanus.

summum bonum (sum'um bō'num). [L.: summum, neut. of summus, highest (see sum[1]); bonum, neut. of bonus, good: see bonus.] The chief or highest good.

sumner† (sum'nėr), n. An obsolete form of summoner.

Sumner's method. In nav., the method of finding a ship's position at sea by the projection of one or more lines of equal altitude on a Mercator's chart: so called from the navigator who first published it, in 1843.

sumoom (su-möm′), n. Same as simoom.

sump (sump), n. [< D. somp = MHG. G. sumpf ★(cf. OHG. sunft) = Dan. Sw. sump, a swamp: see swamp[1].] 1. A puddle or pool of dirty water. [Prov. Eng.]—2. A pond of water reserved for salt-works.—3. In mining: (a) The bottom of a shaft in which water is allowed to collect, in order that it may be pumped or otherwise raised to the surface or to the level of the adit. Also called in England, in some mining districts, a lodge. (b) A shaft connecting one level with another, but not reaching the surface; a winze. [North. Eng.]—4. A round pit of stone, lined with clay, for receiving metal on its first fusion.

sump-fuse (sump′fūz), n. A fuse inclosed in a water-proof casing, for blasting under water, etc.

sumph (sumf), n. [Cf. D. suf, dull, doting, suffen, dote; Sw. sofva = Dan. sove, be sleepy, sleep (see sweven).] A dunce; a blockhead; a soft, dull fellow. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

A Sumph . . . is a chiel to whom Natur has denied ony considerable share o' understaunin', without hae'n chose to mak him altogether an indisputable idiot.
Hogg, in Noctes Ambrosianæ, Nov., 1831.

sumphish (sum′fish), a. [< sumph + -ish[1].] Like a sumph; characteristic of a sumph; stupid. Ramsay. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

sumphishness (sum′fish-nes), n. The state or character of being sumphish. Mrs. Gaskell, Life of Charlotte Brontë, II. 131. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

sumpit (sum′pit), n. [Malay sūmpit.] A small poisoned dart or arrow, thrown by means of a sumpitan.

sumpitan (sum′pi-tan), n. [Malay sūmpitān; cf. sumpit.] The blow-gun of the Malays and the Dyaks of Borneo. Its effective range is necessarily very short, not exceeding fifty yards, and the arrow is so light that to render it efficient the head is always poisoned.

sump-plank (sump′plangk), n. One of the planks fixed as a temporary bottom or floor of a sump-shaft, covering the sump.

sump-pump (sump′pump), n. In mining, a pump placed in the sump of a mine, and raising water to the hogger-pump, or directly to the hogger-pipe or discharge-pipe at the mouth of the shaft. See hogger-pipe.

sump-shaft (sump′shâft), n. In mining, the shaft at the bottom of which is the sump, or place from which the water is pumped.

sump-shot (sump′shot), n. A shot or blast fired near the center of a shaft which is being sunk, to make a cavity or temporary sump in which the water will collect.

sumpsimus (sump′si-mus), n. [L., first pers. pl. perf. ind. act. of sumere, take: see mumpsimus.] A correct form replacing an erroneous one in familiar use; correctness regarded as pedantic. See mumpsimus.

King Henry [VIII.], finding fault with the disagreement of Preachers, would often say: Some are too stiffe in their old Mumpsimus, and other too busie and curious in their new Sumpsimus. Happely borrowing these phrases from that which Master Pace his Secretary reporteth, in his book De Fructu Doctrinæ, of an old Priest in that age, which alwaies read, in his Portasse, Mumpsimus Domine, for Sumpsimus; whereof when he was admonished, he said that hee now had used Mumpsimus thirtie yeares, and would not leave his old Mumpsimus for their new Sumpsimus.
Camden, Remains (ed. 1637), p. 273.

sumpt† (sumpt), n. [< L. sumptus, cost, expense, < sumere, pp. sumptus, take up, take, choose, select, apply, use, spend, < sub, under, + emere, buy, orig. take: see emption. Cf. assume, consume, etc. Hence sumptuary, sumptuous.] Sumptuousness; cost; expense. Patten, Exped. to Scotland, 1548. (Davies.)

sumpter (sump′tėr), n. [< ME. sumpter, < OF. sommetier, a pack-horse driver, < ML. sagmatarius*, fuller form of sagmarius, a pack-horse driver, < sagma (sagmat-), a pack, burden: see summer[2].] 1†. A pack-horse driver. King Alisaunder, l. 6023.—2. A pack-horse.

It is great improvidence . . . for old men to heap up provisions, and load their sumpters still the more by how much their way is shorter.
Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 227.

3. By extension, a porter; a man that carries burdens. [Rare.]

Persuade me rather to be slave and sumpter
To this detested groom. Shak., Lear, ii. 4. 219.

4. A pack; a burden.

And thy base issue shall carry sumpters.
Beau. and Fl., Cupid's Revenge, v. 2.

sumpter-cloth (sump′tėr-klôth), n. A horse-cloth spread over the saddle.

Men do now esteeme to paint their armes in their houses, to graue them in our seales, to place them in their portals, & to weaue them in their sumpterclothes, but none aduentureth to winne them in the field.
Guevara, Letters (tr. by Hellowes, 1577), p. 69.

sumpter-horse (sump′tėr-hôrs), n. A pack-horse.

sumpter-mule (sump′tėr-mūl), n. A pack-mule.

sumpter-pony (sump′tėr-pō″ni), n. A pony used as a pack-horse.

The sumpter-pony, which carried the slung water-proofs and what not. W. Black, In Far Lochaber, vi.

sumpter-saddle† (sump′tėr-sad″l), n. A pack-saddle. [Rare.]

sumption (sump′shọn), n. [< L. sumptio(n-), sumpsio(n-), a taking, < sumere, pp. sumptus, take, take up: see sumpt.] 1. The act of taking or assuming.

The sumption of the mysteries does all in a capable subject. Jer. Taylor.

2. The major premise of a syllogism, or modus ponens (which see, under modus).

sumptuary (sump′tụ̄-ạ̄-ri), a. [= F. somptuaire, < L. sumptuarius, relating to expense, < sumptus, cost, expense: see sumpt.] Relating to expense; regulating expense or expenditure.

When Sunday came, it was indeed a day of finery, which all my sumptuary edicts could not restrain.
Goldsmith, Vicar, iv.

Sumptuary law. See law[1].

sumptuosity (sump-tụ̄-os′i-ti), n. [= F. somptuosité, < L. sumptuosita(t-)s, costliness, < sumptuosus, costly: see sumptuous.] Expensiveness; costliness.

He added sumptuosity, invented jewels of gold and stone, and some engines for the war. Sir W. Raleigh.

sumptuous (sump′tụ̄-us), a. [= F. somptueux, < L. sumptuosus, costly, expensive, < sumptus, cost, expense: see sumpt.] Costly; expensive; hence, splendid; magnificent: as, a sumptuous house or table; sumptuous apparel.

The sumpteous house declares the princes state,
But vaine excesse bewrayes a princes faults.
Gascoigne, Steele Glas (ed. Arber), p. 60.

It [St. John Baptist's Day] is celebrated with very pompous and sumptuous solemnity. Coryat, Crudities, I. 103.

= Syn. Gorgeous, superb, rich, lordly, princely.

sumptuously (sump′tụ̄-us-li), adv. In a sumptuous manner; expensively; splendidly; with great magnificence. Gascoigne.

sumptuousness (sump′tụ̄-us-nes), n. The state of being sumptuous; costliness; expensiveness; splendor; magnificence. Bailey.

sumpture† (sump′tụ̄r), n. [< ML. sumptura*, sumtura, used in sense of 'wealth, property'; cf. L. sumptus, cost, expense, < sumere, pp. sumptus, take up, use, spend: see sumpt.] Sumptuousness; magnificence.

Celebrating all
Her train of servants, and collateral
Sumpture of houses.
Chapman, tr. of Homer's Hymn to Hermes, l. 127.

★sun[1] (sun), n. [Early mod. E. also sunne, sonne; < ME. sunne, sonne, sone, < AS. sunne, f., = OS. sunna, sunne, sunno = OFries. sunne, sonna = MD. sonne, D. zon = MLG. LG. sunne = OHG. sunno, m., sunnā, f., MHG. sunne, m. and f., G. sonne, f., = Icel. sunna, f. (only in poetry), = Goth. sunno, m., sunna, f., the sun; with a formative -na (-nōn-), from the same root as AS. sōl = Icel. sōl = Sw. Dan. sōl = Goth. sauil = L. sōl (> It. sole = Sp. Pg. Pr. sol; cf. F. soleil, < L. soliculus*, dim. of sol) = Lith. Lett. saule = Skt. svar, the sun, with formative -l or -r; both prob. < √ su, √ saw, be light.] 1. The central body of the solar system, around which the earth and other planets revolve, retained in their orbits by its attraction, and supplied with energy by its radiance. Its mean distance from the earth is a little less than 93 millions of miles, its horizontal parallax being 8.″80 ± 0.″02. Its mean apparent diameter is 32′ 04″; its real diameter 866,500 miles, 109½ times that of the earth. Its volume, or bulk, is therefore a little more than 1,300,000 times that of the earth. Its mass—that is, the quantity of matter in it—is 330,000 times as great as that of the earth, and is about 900 times as great as the united masses of all the planets. The force of gravity at the sun's surface is nearly 28 times as great as at the earth's surface. The sun's mean density (mass ÷ volume) is only one fourth that of the earth, or less than one and a half times that of water. By means of the spots its rotation can be determined. It is found that the sun's equator is inclined 7¼° to the plane of the ecliptic, with its ascending node in (celestial) longitude 73° 40′. The period of rotation appears to vary systematically in different latitudes, being about 25 days at the equator, while in solar latitude 40° it is fully 27. Beyond 45° there are no spots by which the rate of rotation can be determined. The cause of this peculiar variation in the rate of the sun's surface motion is still unexplained, and presents one of the most important problems of solar research. The sun's visible surface is called the photosphere, and is made up of minute irregularly

The Sun (after Winlock).

rounded "granules," intensely brilliant, and apparently floating in a darker medium. These are usually 400 or 500 miles in diameter, and so distributed in streaks and groups as to make the surface, seen with a low-power telescope, look much like rough drawing-paper. Near sun-spots, and sometimes elsewhere, the granules are often drawn out into long filaments. (See sun-spot.) In the neighborhood of the sun-spots, and to some extent upon all parts of the sun, faculæ (bright streaks which are due to an unusual crowding together and upheaval of the granules of the photosphere) are found. They are especially conspicuous near the edge of the disk. At the time of a total eclipse certain scarlet cloud-like objects are usually observed projecting beyond the edge of the moon. These are the prominences or protuberances, which in 1868 were proved by the spectroscope to consist mainly of hydrogen, always, however, mixed with helium (first identified on the earth in 1895) and calcium, and often interpenetrated with the vapors of magnesium, iron, and other metals. It was also immediately discovered by Janssen and Lockyer that these beautiful and vivacious objects can be observed at any time with the spectroscope, and that they are only extensions from an envelop of incandescent gases which overlies the photosphere like a sheet of scarlet flame, and is known as the chromosphere. Its thickness is very irregular, but averages about 5,000 miles. The prominences are often from 50,000 to 100,000 miles in height, and occasionally exceed 200,000; they are less permanent than the spots, and their changes and motions are correspondingly swift. They are not confined to limited zones of the sun's surface; those of the greatest brilliance and activity are, however, usually connected with spots, or with the faculæ which attend the spots. The corona—the most impressive feature of a total eclipse—is a great "glory" of irregular outline surrounding the sun, and composed of nebulous rays and streams which protrude from the solar surface, and extend sometimes to a distance of several millions of miles, especially in the plane of the sun's equator. The lower parts are intensely bright, but the other parts are faint and indefinite. Its real nature, as a true solar appendage and no mere optical or atmospheric phenomenon, has been abundantly demonstrated by both the spectroscope and the camera. Its visual spectrum is characterized by a conspicuous bright line in the green (wave-length, 5304), and photography brings out several more in the violet and ultra-violet. They all seem to form a single spectrum-series, due to some gaseous element not yet detected on the earth, but provisionally named coronium, and show that to a great extent the corona is something more than a mere reflection of sunlight from meteoric dust, though the background of continuous spectrum suggests its presence. The fact that the corona is observable only during the few moments of a total solar eclipse makes its study slow and difficult. Huggins has attempted to photograph the corona without eclipse, and Hale to observe it with the bolometer. The spectroscope enables us to determine the presence in the sun of certain well-known terrestrial elements in the state of vapor. The solar spectrum is marked by numerous dark lines (known as Fraunhofer's lines), and between 1850 and 1860 their explanation was worked out as depending upon the selective absorption due to the transmission of the light from the photosphere through the overlying atmosphere of cooler gases and vapors. Kirchhoff was the first (in 1859) to identify many of the familiar elements whose vapors thus impress their signature upon the sunlight. According to the investigations of Rowland (mostly previous to 1896), thirty-six of the chemical elements are already identified in the solar atmosphere, all of them metals, hydrogen excepted. Among them barium, calcium, carbon, chromium, cobalt, hydrogen, iron, magnesium, manganese, nickel, silicon, sodium, titanium, and vanadium are either specially conspicuous or theoretically important. The fact that some of the most abundant and important of the terrestrial elements fail to show themselves is, of course, striking, and probably significant. Chlorin, oxygen (probably), nitrogen, phosphorus, and sulphur are none of them apparent; it would, however, be illogical and unsafe to infer from their failure to manifest themselves that they are necessarily absent. A difference of opinion prevails as to the precise region of the solar atmosphere in which Fraunhofer's lines originate. Some hold that the absorption which produces them takes place almost entirely in a comparatively thin stratum known as the reversing-layer, just above the surface of the photosphere. Lockyer holds, on the other hand, that many of them originate at a high elevation, and even above the chromosphere. Photometric observations show that the brilliance of the solar surface far exceeds that of any artificial light: it is about 150 times as great as that of the lime-cylinder of the calcium-light, and from two to four times as great as that of the "crater" of the electric arc. It is to be noted that the brightness of the sun's disk falls off greatly near the edge, owing to the general absorption by the solar atmosphere. The solar constant is defined as the quantity of heat (in calories) received in a unit of time by an area of a square meter perpendicularly exposed to the sun's rays at the upper surface of the earth's atmosphere, when the earth is at its mean distance from the sun. This quantity can be determined, with some approach to accuracy (say within 25 or 30 per cent.), by observations with pyrheliometers and actinometers. The earliest determinations (by J. Herschel and Pouillet, in 1838) gave about 19 calories a minute; later and more elaborate observations give larger results. Langley's observations make it very probable that its value is not under 30. Assuming it, however, as 25, it appears that the amount of energy incident upon the earth's atmosphere in the sun's rays is nearly 2¼ continuous horse-power per square meter when the sun is vertical; at the sea-level this is reduced about one third by the atmospheric absorption. The total amount of energy radiated by the sun's surface defies conception; it is fully 100,000 continuous horse-power or more than 1,100,000 calories a minute for every square meter, and according to Ericsson more than 400 times as great as that radiated by a surface of molten iron. It would melt in one minute a shell of ice 50 feet thick incasing the photosphere: to supply an equal amount by combustion would require the hourly burning of a layer of the best anthracite more than 20 feet thick — more than a ton for every square foot of surface. As to the temperature of the sun, our knowledge is comparatively vague. We have no means of determining with accuracy from our present laboratory data the temperature the photosphere must have in order to enable it to emit heat at the known rate, but various recent determinations based on Stefan's law give a value of about 1,000° C., or 1,200° F. Experiments with burning-glasses, however, and observations upon the penetrating power of the solar rays, demonstrate that the temperature of the photosphere is certainly higher than that of any known terrestrial source, even the electric arc itself. The only theory yet proposed concerning the maintenance of the sun's heat which meets the case at all is that of Helmholtz, who finds the explanation in a slow contraction of the solar globe. A yearly shrinkage of about 250 feet (or 300 feet, if we accept Langley's value of the solar constant) in the sun's diameter would make good the whole annual expenditure of radiant energy, and maintain the temperature unchanged. If this is the true explanation, it follows, of course, that in time — probably in about eight or ten millions of years — the solar heat will begin to wane, and will at last be exhausted. It should be noted also that certain other causes — such, for instance, as the fall of meteors on the sun — contribute something to its heat-supply; but all of them combined will account for not more than a small percentage of the whole. The view now generally accepted of the constitution of the sun accords with this theory of the solar heat. The sun is believed to be, in the main, a mass of intensely heated gas and vapor, powerfully compressed by its own gravity. The central part is entirely gaseous, because its temperature, being from physical necessity higher than that of the inclosing photosphere, is far above the so-called "critical point" for every known element; no solidification, no liquefaction even, can therefore occur in the solar depths. But near the outer surface radiation to space is nearly free, the temperature is lowered to a point below the "critical point" of certain substances, and under the powerful pressure due to solar gravity condensation of the vapors begins, and thus a sheet of incandescent cloud is formed, which constitutes the photosphere. The chromosphere consists of the permanent gases and uncondensed vapors which overlie the cloud-sheet, while the corona still remains in great degree a mystery, as regards both the substances which compose it and the forces which produce and arrange its streamers. See also cut under sun-spot.

An Eruptive Prominence.

To fynde the degree in which the sonne is day by day after hir cours abowte. Chaucer, Astrolabe, ii. 1.

I'll say this for him,
There fights no braver soldier under sun, gentlemen.
Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, i. 1.

To him that sitting on a hill
Sees the midsummer, midnight, Norway sun
Set into sunrise. Tennyson, Princess, iv.

Without solar fire we could have no atmospheric vapour, without vapour no clouds, without clouds no snow, and without snow no glaciers. Curious then as the conclusion may be, the cold ice of the Alps has its origin in the heat of the sun. Tyndall, Forms of Water, p. 7.

2. The sunshine; a sunny place; a place where the beams of the sun fall: as, to stand in the sun (that is, to stand where the direct rays of the sun fall). —3. Anything eminently splendid or luminous; that which is the chief source of light, honor, glory, or prosperity.

The sun of Rome is set! Shak., J. C., v. 3. 63.

I will never consent to put out the sun of sovereignty to posterity. Eikon Basilike.

4. The luminary or orb which constitutes the center of any system of worlds: as, the fixed stars may be suns in their respective systems. —5. A revolution of the earth round the sun; a year.

Vile it were
For some three suns to store and hoard myself.
Tennyson, Ulysses.

6. The rising of the sun; sunrise; day.

Your vows are frosts,
Fast for a night and with the next sun gone.
Beau. and Fl., Philaster, iii. 2.

7. In her., a bearing representing the sun, usually surrounded by rays. It is common to fill the disk with the features of a human face. When anything else is represented there, it is mentioned in the blazon: as, the sun, etc., charged in the center with an eye. See sun in splendor, below.

8. In electric lighting, a group of incandescent lamps arranged concentrically under a reflector at, near, or in the ceiling of a room or auditorium.

The interior of the copious reflectors contains a cluster of electrical lamps. In addition to these there are 12 suns in the ceiling. Elect. Rev. (Amer.), XVII. 235.

Against the sun. See against. — Blue sun, a colored appearance of the sun resulting from a peculiar selective absorption of its rays by foreign substances in the atmosphere. The phenomenon has been observed especially after great volcanic eruptions, notably after the Krakatoa eruption of 1883, when large quantities of foreign matter were projected into the atmosphere. The precise nature of the particles or gases producing the absorption is not known. — Collar of suns and roses, a collar granted by the English sovereigns of the house of York as an honorary distinction in rivalry of the Lancaster collar of SS. It is a broad band decorated with, alternately, the white rose of York and the sun adopted by Edward IV. as his personal cognizance. — Fixed sun, a kind of pyrotechnics consisting of a certain number of jets of fire arranged circularly like the spokes of a wheel. — From sun to sun, from sunrise to sunset.

Man's work 's from sun to sun,
Woman's work 's never done. Old rime.

Green sun. Same as blue sun. — Line of the sun, in palmistry. See line[2]. — Mean sun. See mean[3]. — Midnight sun, the sun as visible at midnight in arctic regions. — Mock sun. See parhelion. — Nadir of the sun. See nadir. — Order of the Rising Sun, an order of the empire of Japan, founded in 1875. — Order of the Sun and Lion, a Persian order, founded in 1808 by the shah, for military and civil service and for conferring honor on strangers, as ambassadors at the court of Persia. The badge is a species of star, of which the center is a medallion, upon which is represented the rising sun, and from which radiate six blades or bars with rounded points. The ribbon is red. — Revolving sun, a pyrotechnic device consisting of a wheel around the periphery of which are fixed rockets of various styles. E. H. Knight. — Sun-and-planet wheels, an ingenious contrivance adopted by Watt in the early history of the steam-engine, for converting the reciprocating motion of the beam into a rotatory motion. See cut under planet-wheel. — Sun before or after clock, the amount by which, at certain times of the year, an accurately adjusted sun-dial is faster or slower than a correct mean solar clock. — Sun in splendor, or in his splendor, in her., the sun surrounded by rays which are generally as long as the diameter of the disk or even longer, and alternately straight and waved. — Sun lamp. See lamp[1]. — Sun of righteousness, in Scrip., one of the titles of Christ. — The rising of the sun. See rising. — To have the sun in one's eyes, to be intoxicated. Dickens, Old Curiosity Shop, ii. [Slang.] — To shoot the sun. See shoot. — To take the sun (naut.), to ascertain the latitude by observation of the sun. — Under the sun, in the world; on earth: a proverbial expression.

Sun in Splendor.

There is no new thing under the sun. Eccl. i. 9.

With the sun, in the direction of the apparent movement of the sun.

sun[1] (sun), v.; pret. and pp. sunned, ppr. sunning. [= D. zonnen = LG. sunnen = G. sonnen; from the noun.] I. trans. To expose to the sun's rays; warm or dry in the sunshine; insolate: as, to sun cloth.

To sun thyself in open air.
Dryden, tr. of Persius's Satires, iv. 37.

Spring parts the clouds with softest airs,
That she may sun thee.
Wordsworth, To the Daisy.

II. intrans. To become warm or dry in the sunshine.

The fields breathe sweet, the daisies kiss our feet,
Young lovers meet, old wives a-sunning sit.
Nash, Spring.

sun[2], n. See sunn.

sun-angel (sun'ān″jel), n. A humming-bird of the genus Heliangelus.

sun-animalcule (sun'an-i-mal″kūl), n. A heliozoan, or radiant filose protozoan of the group Heliozoa, such as Actinophrys sol, to which the name originally applied. These little bodies are amœbiform, but of comparatively persistent spherical figure, from all parts of the surface of which radiate fine filamentous pseudopodia with little tendency to move, or change in form, except when the animalcule is feeding. The protoplasm is vacuolated, and nucleated with one or several nuclei; a kind of test or shell may be developed or not. Some are stalked forms. They mostly inhabit fresh water, and are very attractive microscopic objects. There are various generic forms besides Actinophrys, as Actinosphærium and Clathrulina. See these technical names, Heliozoa, and cut under Clathrulina.

Sun-animalcule (Actinophrys sol), magnified 250 times.

sun-bath (sun'bȧth), n. Exposure of the naked body to the direct rays of the sun, especially as a therapeutic measure.

sunbeam (sun'bēm), n. [Early mod. E. also sunnebeam; < ME. sonnebeme, < AS. sunnebeám, < sunne, sun, + beám, beam: see sun[1] and beam.] A ray of the sun.

Ther vnder sate a creature
As bright as any sonne beme.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 102.

The gay motes that people the sunbeams.
Milton, Il Penseroso, l. 8.

sun-bear (sun'bȧr), n. 1. A bear of the genus Helarctos; the bruang, or Malay bear, H. malayanus, of small size and slender form, with a close black coat and a white mark on the throat. See cut under bruang. —2. The Tibetan bear, Ursus thibetanus. [A misnomer.]

sun-beat, sun-beaten (sun'bēt, sun'bē″tn), a. Smitten by the rays of the sun. [Rare.]

And wearies fruitful Nilus to convey
His sun-beat waters by so long a way.
Dryden, tr. of Juvenal's Satires, x. 239.

sun-beetle (sun'bē″tl), n. One of several metallic beetles of the genera Amara, Pœcilus, etc.; any cetonian: so called from their running about in the sunshine. Westwood.

sunbird (sun'bėrd), n. A common name of various birds. (a) A general or indiscriminate name of cinnyrimorphic birds, of the genera Nectarinia, Cinnyris, Dicæum, and related forms, of more than one family. See also cut under Dicæum. (b) An exact book-name of the honey-suckers, nectarbirds, or Nectariniidæ, mostly of glittering metallic iridescence, as Cinnyris superba, of western Africa, a characteristic example. See cut under Drepanis. (c) The sun-bittern. (d) A sun-grebe. See cuts under Heliornis and Podica. (e) An unidentified bird, probably any bird associated with sun-worship or similar religious rites. See the quotation, and compare wakon-bird.

Sunbird (Cinnyris superba).

When at midday the sunlight poured down upon the altar, . . . the sun-birds, the Tonatzuli, were let fly sunwards as messengers. E. B. Tylor, Prim. Culture, II. 289.

sun-bittern (sun'bit″ėrn), n. A South American bird, Eurypyga helias: so called from the brilliant ocellated plumage. Also named peacock-bittern, for the same reason. See cut under Eurypyga.

sun-blink (sun'blingk), n. A flash or glimpse of sunshine. Scott. [Scotch.]

sunbonnet (sun'bon″et), n. A light bonnet projecting in front so as to protect the face, and having a flounce or cape to protect the neck.

The pale and washed-out female who glares with . . . stolidity from the recesses of her telescopic sun-bonnet.
Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XXXIX. 76.

sunbow (sun'bō), n. An iris formed by the refraction of light on the spray of cataracts, or on any rising vapor.

> The sunbow's rays still arch
> The torrent with the many hues of heaven.
> Byron, Manfred, ii. 2.

> The future is gladdened by no sun-bow of anticipation.
> The Rover, II. 68.

sun-bright (sun'brīt), a. Bright as the sun; like the sun in brightness: as, a sun-bright shield.

> Now therefore would I have thee to my tutor . . .
> How and which way I may bestow myself
> To be regarded in her sun-bright eye.
> Shak., T. G. of V., iii. 1. 88.

> Wise Ali's sunbright sayings pass
> For proverbs in the market-place.
> Emerson, Saadi.

sun-broad (sun'brâd), a. Broad as the sun; like the sun in breadth; great. [Rare.]

> His sunbroad shield about his wrest he bond.
> Spenser, F. Q., II. ii. 21.

sunburn (sun'bèrn), v. [< sun[1] + burn[1].] I. trans. To discolor or scorch by the sun; tan: said especially of the skin or complexion.

> Her delivery from Sunburning and Moonblasting.
> Milton, Apology for Smectymnuus.

II. intrans. To be discolored or tanned by the sun.

sunburn, sunburning (sun'bèrn, sun'bèr″ning), n. 1. A burning or scorching by the sun; especially, the tan occasioned by the exposure of the skin to the action of the sun's rays.—2. In bot., same as heliosis.

sunburned (sun'bèrnd), p. a. 1. Same as sunburnt.—2. Dried by the heat of the sun: as, sunburned bricks.

sun-burner (sun'bèr″nèr), n. A combination of burners with powerful reflectors, used to light a place of public assembly, etc. It is often placed beneath an opening in the ceiling, so that the up-draft from the lights may serve to ventilate the room. Also sun-light.

sunburnt (sun'bèrnt), p. a. 1. Scorched by the sun's rays.

> They sun-burnt Afric keep > Upon the lee-ward still.
> Drayton, Polyolbion, i. 421.

2. Discolored by the heat or rays of the sun; tanned; darkened in hue: as, a sunburnt skin.

> A chaste and pleasing wife, . . .
> Sun-burnt and swarthy though she be.
> Dryden, tr. of Horace, Epode ii.

★ sunburst (sun'bèrst), n. A strong outburst of sunlight; a resplendent beaming of the sun through rifted clouds; hence, in pyrotechny, an imitation of such an effect.

> Strong sun-bursts between the clouds flashed across these pastoral pictures. B. Taylor, Northern Travel, p. 428.

sun-case (sun'kās), n. In pyrotechny, a slow-burning piece giving out an intense white light: used in set-pieces for revolving suns, etc.

sun-clad (sun'klad), a. Clothed in radiance; bright. [Rare.]

> The sun-clad power of chastity. Milton, Comus, l. 782.

sun-crack (sun'krak), n. In geol., a crack formed in a rock by exposure to the sun's heat at the time the rock was consolidating.

sun-cress (sun'kres), n. A South African herb, Heliophila pectinata.

sun-dance (sun'dans), n. A religious ceremony practised by the North American Indians of the northern parts of the Plains, as the Sioux and the Blackfeet. An essential feature is the self-torture of youths who are candidates for admission to the full standing of warriors; the candidates pass thongs through the flesh of their breasts, and strain against the thongs, which have been attached to a pole, until released by the tearing of the flesh. Dancing, charging at sunrise upon a "sun-pole," etc., are other features.

> Ordinarily each tribe or reservation has its own celebration of the sun-dance.
> Schwatka, The Century, XXXIX. 753.

Sundanese (sun-da-nēs′ or -nēz′), a. and n. [< Sunda (see def.) + -n-ese.] I. a. Of or belonging to the Sunda Islands (including that chain of the East Indian archipelago which extends from the Malay peninsula to Papua), or the natives or inhabitants. See II.

II. n. One of a section of the Malay race inhabiting Malacca, the Sunda Islands, and the Philippines. Imp. Dict.

Sundanesian (sun-da-nē′şian), a. and n. [Irreg. < Sundanese + -ian.] Same as Sundanese.

sundaree (sun'da-rē), n. See sundoree.

sundari (sun'da-ri), n. [Also soondree, soondrie; < Beng. sundarī, Hind. sundrī.] A tree, Heritiera Fomes (H. minor), found on the coasts of Burma and Borneo, and very abundant in the delta of the Ganges, there, according to some, giving name to the wild tracts called the Sundarbans. It is a tree of moderate size, with a dark-colored hard, tough, and durable wood employed for piles, for boat-making, etc., and in Calcutta much used for fuel. The native name belongs also to the less useful H. littoralis, abundant on the tropical coasts of the Old World. Also sundra-tree, sunder-tree.

sun-dart (sun'därt), n. A ray of the sun. Hemans. [Rare.]

sun-dawn (sun'dân), n. The light of the dawning sun; hence, the beginning; the dawn. [Rare.]

> Under that brake where sundawn feeds the stalks
> Of withered fern with gold. Browning, Sordello, ii.

★ Sunday (sun'dā), n. and a. [Early mod. E. also Sonday; < ME. sunday, sonday, sunnedey, sonenday, sunnenday, sunnendei, sonnendai, < AS. sunnan dæg = OS. sunnūn dag = OFries. sunnandi, sunnandei, sonnendei = MD. sondag, D. zondag = MLG. sunnendach, sondach = OHG. sunnuntag, MHG. sunnentac, suntac, G. sonntag = Icel. sunnudagr = Sw. Dan. söndag (the Scand. forms are borrowed, the Sw. Dan. simulating sön, son, i. e. 'the Son,' Christ), Sunday, lit. 'Sun's day' (tr. L. dies solis): AS. sunnan, gen. of sunne, sun; dæg, day: see sun[1] and day[1].] I. n. The first day of the week; the Christian Sabbath; the Lord's Day. See Sabbath. The name Sunday, or 'day of the Sun,' belongs to the first day of the week on astrological grounds, and has long been so used, from far beyond the Christian era, and far outside of Christian countries. (See week.) The ordinary name of the day in Christian Greek and Latin and in the Romanic languages is the Lord's Day (Greek κυριακή, Latin dominica, French dimanche, etc.), while the Germanic languages, including English, call it Sunday. In the calendar of the Roman Catholic and Anglican churches the Sundays of the year form two series—one reckoned from Christmas, and one from Easter. The first series consists of four Sundays in Advent, one or two Sundays after Christmas, and the Sundays after Epiphany, from one to six in number, according to the date of Septuagesima. The second series consists of the remaining Sundays of the year—namely, Septuagesima, Sexagesima, Quinquagesima, six Sundays in Lent, Easter Sunday, five Sundays after Easter, Sunday after Ascension, Pentecost or Whitsunday, and the Sundays after Pentecost (the first of which is Trinity Sunday), from twenty-three to twenty-eight in number, or the Sundays after Trinity (according to the usage of the Anglican Church), from twenty-two to twenty-seven in number, the last of these being always the Sunday next before Advent. On the Sundays after Pentecost or Trinity not provided with offices of their own are used the offices of the Sundays omitted after Epiphany. In the Greek Church the first Sunday of the ecclesiastical year is the Sunday of the Publican and Pharisee, which is that next before Septuagesima. Then follow the Sundays of the Prodigal Son, of Apocreos, of Tyrophagus, the six Sundays of Lent, Easter, (called Pascha or Bright Sunday), the five Sundays after Easter (called of St. Thomas or Antipascha, of the Ointment-bearers, of the Paralytic, of the Samaritan Woman or Mid-Pentecost, of the Blind Man), the Sunday after Ascension (called of the Three Hundred and Eighteen Fathers of Nicæa), Pentecost, and All Saints' Sunday, answering to Trinity Sunday. The Sundays after Pentecost are numbered continuously till the Sunday of the Publican and Pharisee is again reached. They are mostly named after the evangelist from whom the gospel for the day is taken. They are called Sundays of St. Matthew from Pentecost till the Exaltation of the Cross (September 14th), when two Sundays are called Sunday before and after the Exaltation respectively. After this follow the Sundays of St. Luke. The Sundays corresponding to the third and fourth in Advent are the Sunday of the Holy Forefathers and the Sunday before Christmas, and the Sundays next preceding and succeeding the Epiphany are called Sunday before and after the Lights. Some Sundays of St. Matthew, if omitted before the Exaltation, are transferred to the time after the Epiphany. The seventeenth or last Sunday of St. Matthew is called the Sunday of the Canaanitish Woman.

> Father, and wife, and gentlemen, adieu;
> I will to Venice; Sunday comes apace:
> We will have rings and things and fine array;
> And kiss me, Kate, we will be married o' Sunday.
> Shak., T. of the S., ii. 324.

Alb Sunday. Same as Low Sunday.—Bragget Sunday. Same as Refreshment Sunday.—Cycle of Sundays. Same as solar cycle (which see, under cycle).—Fisherman's Sunday. See fisherman.—God's Sunday†. See God[1].—Great Sunday, Great and Holy Sunday, in the Gr. Ch., Easter Sunday.—Green Sunday, in the Armenian Church, the second Sunday after Easter.—Hosanna Sunday. See hosanna.—Hospital Sunday. See hospital.—Jerusalem Sunday. Same as Refreshment Sunday.—Lost Sunday†, Septuagesima Sunday, which, having no peculiar name, was so called. Hampson, Medii Ævi Kalendarium, II. 250.—Low Sunday. See low[2].—Mid-Lent Sunday, Mid-Pentecost Sunday. See Lent[1], Pentecost.—Month of Sundays, an indefinitely long period. [Colloq.]

> I haven't heard more fluent or passionate English this month of Sundays.
> Kingsley, Alton Locke, xxvii. (Davies.)

Mothering Sunday. Same as Refreshment Sunday.—New Sunday. Same as Low Sunday.—Oculi Sunday. See oculus.—Orthodoxy, Passion, Quadragesima, Quinquagesima, Refreshment, Renewal, Rogation Sunday. See the qualifying words.—Refection Sunday, Rose Sunday. Same as Refreshment Sunday.—Sallow Sunday, a Russian name for Palm Sunday.—Second-first Sunday. Same as Low Sunday.—Simnel, Shrove Sunday. See the qualifying words.—Sunday best, best clothes, as kept for use on Sundays and holidays. [Colloq. or humorous.]

> At eleven o'clock Mrs. Gibson was off, all in her Sunday-best (to use the servant's expression, which she herself would so have contemned).
> Mrs. Gaskell, Wives and Daughters, xlv.

Sunday of St. Thomas. Same as Low Sunday.—Sunday of the Golden Rose. Same as Lætare Sunday. See Lætare, and golden rose (under golden). (See also Palm Sunday, Reminiscere Sunday.)

II. a. Occurring upon, or belonging or pertaining to, the Lord's Day, or Christian Sabbath.

> Old men and women, young men and maidens, all in their best Sunday "braws."
> W. Black, Daughter of Heth, iii.

Sunday letter. Same as dominical letter (which see, under dominical).—Sunday saint, one whose religion is confined to Sundays.—Sunday salt, a name given in salt-works to large crystals of salt: so called because such crystals form on the bottom of the pans in the boiling-house on Sunday, when work is stopped.

Sundayism (sun'dā-izm), n. [< Sunday + -ism.] Same as Sabbatarianism. [Rare.]

> There are ten contributions in the Catholic World for September, the characteristic ones being "Sundayism in England," etc. The American, VI. 316.

Sunday-school (sun'dā-sköl), n. A school for religious instruction on Sunday, more particularly the instruction of children and youth. The modern Sunday-school grew out of a movement in England at the close of the eighteenth century for the secular instruction of the poor on Sunday, but its character has been generally changed into an institution for religious instruction, especially in and about the Bible; it embraces all classes in the community, and often adults as well as youth and children. Abbreviated S. S. Also called Sabbath-school.

sun-dazzling (sun'daz″ling), a. Dazzling like the sun; brilliant. [Rare.]

> Your eyes sun-dazzling coruscancy.
> Jer. Taylor, Works (1630), p. 111. (Encyc. Dict.)

sunder[1]† (sun'dèr), adv. [< ME. sunder, sundir, sonder, sondir, < AS. sundor, adv., apart, asunder (used esp. in the phrase on sundor, with adj. inflection on sundran, on sundrum, > ME. on sunder, on sundren, on sonder, in sonder, o sunder, a sonder, > E. asunder), = OS. sundor, sundar, adv., apart (on sundron, asunder), = OFries. sundar, sonder = MD. sonder, D. zonder, prep., without, = MLG. sunder, sonder, adv. apart, conj. but, adj. separate, LG. sondern, conj., but, = OHG. suntar, MHG. sunder, adv. apart, conj. but, MHG. also prep., without, G. sonder, prep., without, sondern, conj., but, = Icel. sundr = Sw. Dan. sönder = Goth. sundrō, adv., apart, separately; = Gr. ἄτερ (orig. σατερ*, σντερ*), prep., without, apart, from; with compar. suffix -der (-dra) (as in under, hither (AS. hider), etc.), from a base sun-, sn-, not elsewhere found. L. sine, without, is not connected. Cf. asunder. Hence sunder[1], v., sundry, a.] Apart; asunder: used only in the adverbial phrase on sunder, in sunder, now reduced to asunder, apart, in which, in the fuller form, sunder assumes the aspect of a noun.

> Oure menge he marres that he may,
> With his seggynges he settes tham in sondre,
> With synne. York Plays, p. 323.

> Gnawing with my teeth my bonds in sunder,
> I gain'd my freedom. Shak., C. of E., v. 1. 249.

sunder[1] (sun'dèr), v. [Also sinder (Sc.); < ME. sundren, < AS. sundrian, syndrian (= OHG. suntarōn, MHG. sundern, G. sondern = Icel. sundra = Sw. söndra = Dan. söndre, put asunder), < sundor, apart, asunder: see sunder[1], adv.] I. trans. To part; separate; keep apart; divide; sever; disunite in any manner, as by natural conditions (as of location), opening, rending, cutting, breaking, etc.

> With an ugli noise noye for to here,
> Hit sundrit there sailes & there sad ropis;
> Cut of there cables were caget to gedur.
> Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 3702.

> The sea that sunders him from thence.
> Shak., 3 Hen. VI., iii. 2. 138.

> Which Alpes are sundred by the space of many miles the one from the other. Coryat, Crudities, I. 56.

> As he sat
> In hall at old Caerleon, the high doors
> Were softly sunder'd, and thro' these a youth . . .
> Past. Tennyson, Pelleas and Ettarre.

=Syn. To disjoin, disconnect, sever, dissever, dissociate.

II. intrans. To part; be separated; quit each other; be severed.

> Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we.
> Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iii. 2. 411.

sunder[2] (sun'dèr), v. t. [Var. of sunner*, freq. of sun[1], v.] To expose to or dry in the sun, as hay. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

sunderance (sun'dèr-ans), n. [< sunder[1], v., + -ance.] The act or process of sundering; separation. [Rare.]

Any sunderance of sympathy with the Mother Country. The American, VIII. 343.

sunderlingt, adv. [ME. sunderling (= MD. sonderlingh = MLG. sunderlinges, sunderlingen, adv., sunderlink, adj.), < sunder[1], adv., + -ling[2].] Separately.

To uch one sunderling he zaf a dole. Castell off Love, p. 290.

sunderment (sun'dėr-ment), n. [< sunder[1] + -ment.] The state of being parted or separated; separation. [Rare.]

It was . . . apparent who must be the survivor in case of sunderment. Miss Burney, Diary, VII. 318. (Davies.)

sunder-tree (sun'dėr-trē), n. See sundari.

sundew (sun'dū), n. 1. A plant of the genus Drosera. The species are small bog-loving herbs with perennial root or rootstock, their leaves covered with glandular hairs secreting dewy drops. The European and North American plants have the leaves in radical tufts, and the flowers racemed on a simple scape which nods at the summit so that the flower of the day is always uppermost. The best-known of these is D. rotundifolia, the round-leaved sundew of both continents, having small white flowers. (See cut under Drosera.) D. filiformis, the thread-leaved sundew, is a beautiful plant of wet sands near the Atlantic coast of the United States. Its slender leaves are very long, and its flowers are purple, very numerous, half an inch wide. Also dew-plant.

2. Any plant of the order Droseraceæ. Lindley. —Sundew family, the Droseraceæ.

sun-dial (sun'dī″al), n. [Early mod. E. also sunne-diall; < sun[1] + dial.] An instrument for indicating the time of day by means of the position of a shadow on a dial or diagram. The shadow used is generally the edge of a gnomon, which edge must be parallel to the earth's axis, about which the sun revolves uniformly in consequence of the earth's diurnal rotation. If a series of imaginary planes through the edge (one in the meridian and the others inclined to one another by successive multiples of 15°) be cut by the plane of the dial, the intersecting lines will be in the positions of the hour-lines of the dial. The shadow of any given point upon the gnomon-edge will fall at different positions on the hour-line according to the declination of the sun, and this circumstance may be used to make the dial show mean instead of apparent time. But this is inconvenient, and seldom used. Portable sun-dials used often to be made so that their indications depended exclusively on the altitude of the sun; such dials require adjustment for the time of the year. See dial.—To rectify a sun-dial. See rectify.

Sun-dial.
Face of horizontal dial, shadow pointing to one o'clock.

sun-dog (sun'dog), n. A mock sun, or parhelion.

sundoree (sun'dō-rē), n. [Also sundaree, sentoree, Assamese.] A cyprinoid fish, Semiplotus macclellandi, of Assam. It has a long dorsal fin with twenty-seven or twenty-eight rays.

sundown (sun'doun), n. [< sun[1] + down[2].] 1. Sunset; sunsetting.

Sitting there birling . . . till sun-down, and then coming hame and crying for ale! Scott, Old Mortality, v.

2. A hat with a wide brim intended to protect the eyes. [U. S.]

Young faces of those days seemed as sweet and winning under wide-brimmed sundowns or old-time "pokes" as ever did those that have laughed beneath a "love of a bonnet" of a more de rigueur mode. The Century, XXXVI. 769.

★sundowner (sun'dou″nėr), n. A man who makes a practice of arriving at some station at sundown, receiving rations for that night, and the next morning, when he is expected to work out the value of the rations, vanishing or pretending to be ill. [Slang, Australia.]

The only people [in Australia] who let themselves afford to have no specific object in life are the sundowners, as they are colonially called—the loafers who saunter from station to station in the interior, secure of a nightly ration and a bunk. Arch. Forbes, Souvenirs of some Continents, p. 74.

sundra-tree (sun'drą-trē), n. See sundari.

sun-dried (sun'drīd), a. Dried in the rays of the sun.

sundries (sun'driz), n. pl. Various small things, or miscellaneous matters, too minute or numerous to be individually specified: a comprehensive term used for brevity, especially in accounts.

Mr. Giles, Brittles, and the tinker were recruiting themselves, after the fatigues and terrors of the night, with tea and sundries. Dickens, Oliver Twist, xxviii.

sundrilyt (sun'dri-li), adv. [< ME. sundrily*, sundrely; < sundry + -ly[2].] In sundry ways; variously.

Dyuers auctours of theyse namys of kynges, and contynuaunce of theyr reygnes, dyuersly and sundrely reporte and wryte. Fabyan, Chron., cxlvi.

sundrops (sun'drops), n. A hardy biennial or perennial plant, Kneiffia fruticosa, of eastern North America, a shrubby herb from 1 to 3 feet high, often cultivated for its profuse bright-yellow flowers. Differently from the related evening primrose, its flowers open by day. See cut under Œnothera.

sundry (sun'dri), a. [Also dial. sindry; < ME. sundry, sondry, sindry, < AS. syndrig, separate (= OHG. suntarc, MHG. sunderig = Sw. sönderig, broken, tattered), < sundor, apart, separately: see sunder[1], adv.] 1†. Separate; distinct; diverse.

It was neuer better with the congregacion of God then whan euery church allmost had ye Byble of a sondrye translacion. Coverdale, Prol. to Trans. of Bible.

There were put about our neckes lacis of sondry colours to declare our personages. Sir T. Elyot, The Governour, ii. 12.

2†. Individual; one for each.

At ilka tippit o' his horse mane
There hang a siller bell;
The wind was loud, the steed was proud,
And they gae a sindry knell.
Young Waters (Child's Ballads, III. 301).

3. Several; divers; more than one or two; various.

He was so neody, seith the bok in meny sondry places. Piers Plowman (C), xxiii. 42.

Wel nyne and twenty in a compainye,
Of sondry folk, by auenture i-falle.
Chaucer, Gen. Prol. to C. T., l. 25.

Masking the business from the common eye
For sundry weighty reasons.
Shak., Macbeth, iii. 1. 126.

I doubt not but that you have heard of those fiery Meteors and Thunderbolts that have fallen upon sundry of our Churches, and done hurt. Howell, Letters, I. vi. 43.

All and sundry, all, both collectively and individually: as, be it known to all and sundry whom it may concern. —Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill, one of the regular appropriation bills passed by the United States Congress, providing for various expenses in the civil service.

sundry-man (sun'dri-man), n. A dealer in sundries, or a variety of different articles.

sun-fern (sun'fėrn), n. The fern Phegopteris Phegopteris. Also called oak-fern and beech-fern. See Phegopteris.

sun-fever (sun'fē″vėr), n. 1. Same as simple continued fever (which see, under fever[1]).—2. Same as dengue.

sun-figure (sun'fig″ūr), n. One of the stellate or radiate figures observed in the protoplasm of germinating ovum-cells during karyokinesis. Jour. Micros. Sci., XXX. 163.

★sunfish (sun'fish), n. [< sun[1] + fish[1].] 1. A common name of various fishes. (a) Any fish of the genus Mola, Orthagoriscus, or Cephalus, notable when adult for their singularly rounded figure and great size. See Molidæ, and cut under Mola. (b) The basking-shark, Cetorhinus maximus. See cut under basking-shark. (c) The opah or kingfish, Lampris luna. [Eng.] (d) The boarfish, Capros aper. [Local, Eng.] (e) One of the numerous small centrarchoid fishes of the United States, belonging to the genus Lepomis or Eupomotis and some related genera, having a long and sometimes spotted but mostly black opercular flap. They are known by many local names, as bream, pond-fish, pond-perch, pumpkin-seed, coppernose, tobacco-box, sun-perch, and sunny. They are among the most abundant of the fresh-water fishes of the United States east of the Rocky Mountain region, and about 25 species are known. In the breeding-season they consort in pairs, and prepare a nest by clearing a rounded area, generally near the banks, and watch over the eggs until they are hatched.

Sunfish or Pumpkin-seed (Eupomotis gibbosus).

2. A jellyfish, especially one of the larger kinds, a foot or so in diameter. See cut under Cyanea.

sunfish (sun'fish), v. i. [< sunfish, n.] To act like a sunfish, specifically as in the quotation.

Sometimes he [the bronco] is a "plunging" bucker, who runs forward all the time while bucking; or he may buck steadily in one place, or sunfish—that is, bring first one shoulder down almost to the ground and then the other. T. Roosevelt, The Century, XXXV. 854.

sunflower (sun'flou″ėr), n. 1. A plant of the genus Helianthus, so named from its showy golden radiate heads. The common or annual sunflower is H. annuus, a native of the western United States, much planted elsewhere for ornament, and for its oily seeds, which are valued as food for poultry and as a remedy for heaves in horses. (See also sunflower-oil, below.) It is naturally robust; but in cultivation it grows to a height of 10 or 12 feet; the disk of the head broadens from an inch or so to several inches, the leaves becoming more heart-shaped and often over a foot long. A favorite profusely flowering garden sunflower known as H. multiflorus is referred for origin to H. decapetalus. Other cultivated species are H. orgyalis of the great plains of Nebraska, etc., a smooth plant 10 feet high, with narrow graceful leaves, and H. argophyllus of Texas, with soft silky white foliage. H. tuberosus is the Jerusalem artichoke (which see, under artichoke). See Helianthus, and cut under anthoclinium.

Sunflower (Helianthus annuus).

2. The rock-rose or sun-rose. See Helianthemum.—3†. The marigold, Calendula officinalis, from its opening and closing with the ascent and descent of the sun. Prior.—4. In civil engin., a full-circle protractor arranged for vertical mounting on a tripod. It has two levels arranged at right angles with one another, adjusting devices, and an adjustable arm pivoted to the center of the protractor; the tripod mounting is effected by means of an open-ended tube to which the protractor is attached, the tube being passed vertically through the ball of the ball-and-socket joint of the tripod, and held therein by a set-screw. The instrument is used in measuring sectional areas of tunnels.

5. In writing-telegraphs and other electrical instruments and apparatus, a series of alternate conducting and insulating segmental pieces or tablets symmetrically arranged in circular form, each conducting piece being connected with a source of electricity and also with the ground. It is operated by a tracer (also having a ground connection) rotated over the series, and making a circuit in passing over any of the conducting segments and breaking it when passing over any of the insulating segments.—Bastard or false sunflower. See Helenium.—Jungle-sunflower, a shrubby South African composite, Osteospermum moniliferum, forming a bush 2 to 4 feet high, the rays bright-yellow, the achenia drupaceous and barely edible. A colonial name is bush-tick berry.—Sunflower-oil, sunflower-seed oil, a drying-oil expressed from the seeds of the common sunflower.—Tickseed sunflower. See tickseed.

sun-fruit (sun'frōt), n. See Heliocarpus.

sung (sung). A preterit and the past participle of sing.

sun-gate-downt, n. [< ME. sunne gate downe; < sun[1] + gate[2] + down[2].] Sundown; sunset. Palsgrave.

sun-gem (sun'jem), n. A humming-bird of the genus Heliactin (Boie, 1831). The type and only species is H. cornutus of Brazil, remarkable for the brilliant tuft on each side of the crown, and the peculiar shape and coloration of the tail. The four median rectrices are subequal to one another in length, and much longer than the rapidly shortened lateral feathers. The male has the upper parts, belly, and flanks bronzy-green, the throat velvety-black, the rest of the under parts white, most of the tail-feathers white edged with olive-brown, the crown shining greenish-blue, the tufts fiery-crimson; the female is differently colored. The length is 4½ inches, of which the tail is more than one half; the wing is 2 inches, the bill ½ inch.

Sun-gem (Heliactin cornutus).

★sun-glass (sun'glȧs), n. A burning-glass.

sun-glimpse (sun'glimps), n. A glimpse of the sun; a moment's sunshine. Scott, Rokeby, iv. 17.

sun-glow (sun'glō), n. 1. A diffused hazy light which is seen around the sun. It is an effect due to particles of foreign matter in the atmosphere, other than those that form coronæ, glories, or halos.

2. The glow or warm light of the sun.

The few last sunglows which give the fruits their sweetness. The Academy, No. 900, p. 75.

sun-god (sun'god), n. The sun considered or personified as a deity. See solar myth (under solar[1]), and cut under radiate.

Although there can be little doubt that [the Egyptian] Ra was a sun-god, there can be as little that he is the Il or El of the Shemitic peoples, and that his worship represents that of the one God, the Creator.
Dawson, Origin of the World, p. 413.

sun-gold (sun'gōld), n. Same as heliochrysin.

sun-grebe (sun'grēb), n. A sort of sunbird; a finfoot, whether of Africa or South America, having pinnatiped feet, like a grebe's, but not nearly related to the grebes. See cuts under Podica and Heliornis.

sun-hat (sun'hat), n. A broad-brimmed hat worn to protect the head from the sun, and often having some means of ventilation.

sun-hemp, n. See sunn.

sunk[1] (sungk). A preterit and the past participle of sink.—Sunk fence. See fence.

sunk[2] (sungk), n. [Also sonk; prob. ult. < AS. song, a table, couch, = Sw. säng = Dan. seng, a bed, couch.] 1. A cushion of straw; a grassy seat.—2. A pack-saddle stuffed with straw. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch in both senses.]

sunken (sung'kn), p. a. [Pp. of sink, v.] 1. Sunk, in any sense.

With sunken wreck and sumless treasuries.
Shak., Hen. V., i. 2. 165.

The embers of the sunken sun. Lowell, To the Past.

2. Situated below the general surface; below the surface, as of the sea: as, a sunken rock.—Sunken battery. See battery.—Sunken block, in geol., a mass of rock which occupies a position between two parallel or nearly parallel faults, and which is relatively lower than the masses on each side, having been either itself depressed by crust-movements, or made to appear as if such a depression had taken place by an uplift of both of the adjacent blocks. Now called graben.

sunket (sung'ket), n. [Also Sc. suncate (as if < sun[1] + cate); prob. a var. (conformed to junket, juncate ?) of sucket, succade.] A dainty. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

There 's thirty hearts there that wad hae wanted bread ere ye had wanted sunkets. Scott, Guy Mannering, viii.

sunkie (sung'ki), n. [Dim. of sunk[2].] A low stool. Scott, Guy Mannering, xxii. [Scotch.]

sunless (sun'les), a. [< sun[1] + -less.] Destitute of the sun or of its direct rays; dark; shadowed.

Down to a sunless sea. Coleridge, Kubla Khan.

sunlessness (sun'les-nes), n. The state of being sunless; shade.

sunlight (sun'līt), n. 1. The light of the sun.—2. Same as sun-burner. [In this sense usually written sun-light.] sunlighted (sun'lī″ted), a. Lighted by the sun; sunlit. Ruskin, Elements of Drawing, i., note.

sunlike (sun'līk), a. Like the sun; resembling the sun in brilliancy. Channing, Perfect Life, p. 225.

sunlit (sun'lit), a. Lighted by the sun.

sun-myth (sun'mith), n. A solar myth. See under solar[1].

St. George, the favorite mediæval bearer of the great Sun-myth.
E. B. Tylor, Early Hist. Mankind (ed. 1870), p. 363.

sunn (sun), n. [More prop. sun; < Hind. Beng. san, < Skt. sana.] 1. A valuable East Indian fiber resembling hemp, obtained from the inner bark of Crotalaria juncea. It is made chiefly into ropes and cables, in India also into cordage, nets, sacking, etc. Finely dressed it can be made into a very durable canvas. A similar fiber, said to be equal to the best St. Petersburg hemp, is the Jubbulpore hemp, derived from a variety of the same plant formerly distinguished as a species, C. tenuifolia. Also called sunn-hemp. Native names are taag and janapum.

Sunn (Crotalaria juncea).

2. The plant Crotalaria juncea, a stiff shrub from 5 to 8 or even 12 feet high, with slender wand-like rigid branches, yielding the sunn-hemp. Also sun-plant.

Sunna, Sunnah (sun'ä), n. [< Ar. sunna, sunnat (> Pers. Hind. sunnat), tradition, usage.] The traditionary part of the Moslem law, which was not, like the Koran, committed to writing by Mohammed, but preserved from his lips by his immediate disciples, or founded on the authority of his actions. The orthodox Mohammedans who receive the Sunna call themselves Sunnites, in distinction from the various sects comprehended under the name of Shiahs. See Shiah. Also Sonna.

sunnaget, n. [< sun[1] + -age.] Sunning; sunniness. [Rare.]

Solaige [F.], sunnage or sunniness. Cotgrave.

Sunnee, n. See Sunni.

sunn-hemp, n. Same as sunn, 1.

Sunni, Sunnee (sun'ē), n. [Also Sunne, Soonee; < Ar. sunnī, < sunna, tradition: see Sunna.] An orthodox Moslem; a Sunnite.

sunniness (sun'i-nes), n. The state of being sunny. Landor, Southey and Landor, ii.

sunnish (sun'ish), a. [< ME. sonnish, sonnysh; < sun[1] + -ish[1].] Of the color or brilliancy of the sun; golden and radiant.

Hire owndeed here that sonnysh was of hewe.
Chaucer, Troilus, iv. 735.

Sunnite (sun'īt), n. [Also Sonnite; = F. sunnite; < Sunna + -ite[2].] One of the so-called orthodox Mohammedans who receive the Sunna as of equal importance with the Koran. See Sunna and Shiah.

sunnud (sun'ud), n. [< Hind. sanad, < Ar. sanad, a warrant, voucher.] In India, a patent, charter, or written authority.

sunny[1] (sun'i), a. [= D. zonnig = G. sonnig; as sun[1] + -y[1].] 1. Like the sun; shining or dazzling with light, luster, or splendor; radiant; bright.

Her sunny locks
Hang on her temples like a golden fleece.
Shak., M. of V., i. 1. 169.

2. Proceeding from the sun: as, sunny beams.—3. Exposed to the rays of the sun; lighted up, brightened, or warmed by the direct rays of the sun: as, the sunny side of a hill or building.

Her blooming mountains and her sunny shores.
Addison, Letter from Italy to Lord Halifax.

4. Figuratively, bright; cheerful; cheery: as, a sunny disposition.—Sunny side, the bright or hopeful aspect or part of anything.

sunny[2] (sun'i), n.; pl. sunnies (-iz). [Dim. of sun(fish).] A familiar name of the common sunfish, or pumpkin-seed, Eupomotis gibbosus, and of other related species. See cut under sunfish.

sunny-sweet (sun'i-swēt), a. Rendered sweet or pleasantly bright by the sun. Tennyson, The Daisy. [Rare.]

sunny-warm (sun'i-wârm), a. Warmed with sunshine; sunny and warm. Tennyson, Palace of Art. [Rare.]

sun-opal (sun'ō″pal), n. Same as fire-opal.

sun-perch (sun'pėrch), n. Same as sunfish, 1 (e).

sun-picture (sun'pik″tūr), n. A picture made by the agency of the sun's rays; a photograph.

sun-plane (sun'plān), n. A coopers' hand-plane with a short curved stock, used for leveling the ends of the staves of barrels. E. H. Knight.

sun-plant[1] (sun'plant), n. [< sun[1] + plant[1].] See Portulaca.

sun-plant[2] (sun'plant), n. [< sun[2], sunn, + plant[1].] Same as sunn, 2.

sun-proof (sun'pröf), a. Impervious to the rays of the sun. Marston, Sophonisba, iv. 1. [Rare.]

sun-ray (sun'rā), n. A ray of the sun; a sunbeam.

sunrise (sun'rīz), n. [Early mod. E. also sunnerise, sonneryse, < late ME. sunne ryse; < sun[1] + rise[1]. Cf. sunrising, sunrist.] 1. The rise or first appearance of the upper limb of the sun above the horizon in the morning; also, the atmospheric phenomena accompanying the rising of the sun; the time of such appearance, whether in fair or cloudy weather; morning.

Sunne ryse, or rysynge of the sunne (sunne ryst or rysing of the sunne . . .). Ortus. Prompt. Parv., p. 484.

2. The region or place where the sun rises; the east: as, to travel toward the sunrise.

sunrising (sun'rī″zing), n. [< ME. sunnerysynge; < sun + rising.] 1. The rising or first appearance of the sun above the horizon; sunrise.

Bid him bring his power
Before sunrising. Shak., Rich. III., v. 3. 61.

2. The place or quarter where the sun rises; the east.

Then ye shall return unto the land . . . which Moses . . . gave you on this side Jordan toward the sunrising.
Josh. i. 15.

The giants of Libanus mastered all nations, from the sunrising to the sunset. Raleigh, Hist. World.

sunrist†, n. [ME. sunneryst; < sunne, sun, + rist, ryst, < AS. rist* (in ǣrist: see arist), rising, < risan, rise: see rise[1].] Sunrise. See the quotation under sunrise, 1.

sun-rose (sun'rōz), n. The rock-rose, Helianthemum.

sun-scald (sun'skâld), n. The killing of plant-tissues by too rapid and excessive transpiration.

sunset (sun'set), n. [Early mod. E. sonne sett; < sun[1] + set[1]. Cf. sunsetting. Cf. Icel. sōl-setr, sunset and sunrise.] 1. The descent of the upper limb of the sun below the horizon in the evening; the atmospheric phenomena accompanying the setting of the sun; the time when the sun sets; evening.

The twilight of such day
As after sunset fadeth in the west.
Shak., Sonnets, lxxiii.

The normal sunset consists chiefly of a series of bands of colour parallel to the horizon in the west—in the order, from below upwards, red, orange, yellow, green, blue—together with a purplish glow in the east over the earth's shadow, called the 'counter-glow.' Nature, XXXIX. 346.

Hence—2. Figuratively, the close or decline.

'Tis the sunset of life gives me mystical lore.
Campbell, Lochiel's Warning.

3. The region or quarter where the sun sets; the west. Compare sunrising, 2.

sunset-shell (sun'set-shel), n. A bivalve mollusk of the genus Psammobia: so called from the radiation of the color-marks of the shell, suggesting the rays of the setting sun. P. vespertina, whose specific designation reflects the English

Sunset-shell (Psammobia vespertina).
f, foot; bs, branchial siphon; es, anal siphon.

name, and P. ferroensis are good examples. The genus is one of several leading forms of the family Tellinidæ (sometimes giving name to a family Psammobiidæ). The shell is sinupalliate, and more or less truncate posteriorly; the animal has very long separate siphons and a stout foot. Also called setting-sun (which see).

sunsetting (sun'set″ing), n. [< ME. sonnesettynge; < sun[1] + setting.] Sunset.

Sunne settynge. . . . Occasus. Prompt. Parv., p. 484.

sunshade (sun'shād), n. [< sun[1] + shade[1]. Cf. AS. sunsceadu, a shadow cast by the sun.] Something used as a protection from the rays of the sun. Specifically—(a) A parasol; in particular, a form, fashionable about 1850 and later, the handle of which was hinged so that the opened top could be held in a vertical position between the face and the sun.

Forth . . . from the portal of the old house stepped Phœbe, putting up her small green sunshade.
Hawthorne, Seven Gables, xi.

(b) A hood or front-piece made of silk shirred upon whalebones, worn over the front of a bonnet as a protection from sun or wind. Such hoods were in fashion about 1850. Compare ugly, n.

I . . . asked her . . . to buy me a railway wrapper, and a sunshade, commonly called an ugly.
Jean Ingelow, Off the Skelligs, viii.

(c) A kind of awning projecting from the top of a shop-window. (d) A dark or colored glass used upon a sextant or telescope to diminish the intensity of the light in observing the sun. (e) A tube projecting beyond the objective of a telescope to cut off strong light. (f) A shade-hat. [Rare.]

sunshine (sun'shīn), n. and a. [< ME. sunneschine, sunnesine* (cf. AS. sunscin, a mirror, speculum) = MD. sonnenschijn, D. zonneschijn = G. sonnenschein (cf. Icel. sólskin, Sw. solsken, Dan. solskin); < sun[1] + shine[1], n.] I. n. 1. The light of the sun, or the space on which it shines; the direct rays of the sun, or the place where they fall.

It malt at the sunne-sine.
Genesis and Exodus (E. E. T. S.), l. 3337.

Ne'er yet did I behold so glorious Weather
As this Sun-shine and Rain together.
Cowley, The Mistress Weeping.

2. Figuratively, the state of being cheered by an influence acting like the rays of the sun; anything having a genial or beneficial influence; brightness; cheerfulness.

That man that sits within a monarch's heart,
And ripens in the sunshine of his favour.
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., iv. 2. 12.

A sketch of my character, all written by that pen which had the power of turning every thing into sunshine and joy. Lady Holland, Sydney Smith, viii.

To be in the sunshine, to have taken too much drink; be drunk. George Eliot, Janet's Repentance, i. (Davies.) [Slang.]

II. a. 1. Sunny; sunshiny; hence, prosperous; untroubled.

Send him many years of sunshine days!
Shak., Rich. II., iv. 1. 221.

2. Of or pertaining to the sunshine; of a fair-weather sort. [Rare.]

Summon thy sunshine bravery back,
O wretched sprite!
Whittier, My Soul and I.

★sunshine-recorder (sun′shīn-rē-kôr″dėr), n. An instrument for registering the duration of sunshine. Two principal forms have come into use, one utilizing the heating effect, the other the actinic effect, of the sun's rays. The Campbell sunshine-recorder consists of a glass sphere which acts as a lens, with its focus on a curved strip of millboard. The sun's rays, focused by the sphere, burn a path on the millboard as the sun moves through the heavens. The length of the burnt line indicates the duration of sunshine, or, more strictly, the length of time that the sun shines with sufficient intensity to burn the millboard. The photographic sunshine-recorder consists of a dark chamber into which a ray of light is admitted through a pinhole. This ray falls on a strip of sensitized paper which is placed on the inside of a cylinder whose axis is perpendicular to the sun's rays. Under the diurnal motion of the sun, the ray travels across the paper, and leaves a sharp straight line of chemical action, while no other part of the paper is exposed to light. The axis of the cylinder has an adjustment for latitude. In the latest form of the apparatus two cylinders are used, one for the morning and the other for the afternoon trace.

sunshining† (sun′shī″ning), a. Sunshiny. [Rare.]

As it fell out on a sun-shining day,
When Phœbus was in his prime.
Robin Hood and the Bishop (Child's Ballads, V. 298).

sunshiny (sun′shī″ni), a. [< sunshine + -y[1].] 1. Bright with the rays of the sun; having the sky unclouded in the daytime: as, sunshiny weather.

We have had nothing but sunshiny days, and daily walks from eight to twenty miles a day. Lamb, To Coleridge.

2. Bright like the sun.

The fruitfull-headed beast, amazd
At flashing beames of that sunshiny shield, Became stark blind, and all his sences dazd,
That downe he tumbled. Spenser, F. Q., I. viii. 20.

3. Bright; cheerful; cheery.

Perhaps his solitary and pleasant labour among fruits and flowers had taught him a more sunshiny creed than those whose work is among the tares of fallen humanity. R. L. Stevenson, An Old Scotch Gardener.

sun-smitten (sun′smit″n), p. a. Smitten or lighted by the rays of the sun. [Rare.]

I climb'd the roofs at break of day;
Sun-smitten Alps before me lay.
Tennyson, The Daisy.

sun-snake (sun′snāk), n. A figure resembling the letter S, or an S-curve, broken by a circle or other small figure in the middle: it is common as an ornament in the early art of northern Europe, and is supposed to have had a sacred signification.

sun-soothing (sun′sou″ŦHing), n. The transit of the center of the sun over the meridian at apparent noon.

★sun-spot (sun′spot), n. One of the dark patches, from 1,000 to 100,000 miles in diameter, which are often visible upon the photosphere. The central part, or umbra, appears nearly black, though the darkness is really only relative to the intense surrounding brightness. With proper appliances the umbra itself is seen to contain still darker circular holes, and to be overlaid by films of transparent cloud. It is ordinarily surrounded by a nearly concentric penumbra composed of converging filaments. Often, however, the penumbra is unsymmetrical with respect to the umbra, and sometimes it is entirely wanting. The spots often appear in groups, and frequently a large one breaks up into smaller ones. They are continually changing in form and dimensions, and sometimes have a distinct drift upon the sun's surface. They last from a few hours to many months. They are ordinarily shallow cavities in the photosphere, depressed several hundred miles below the general level, and owe their darkness mainly to the absorption of light due to the cooler vapors which fill them. Their cause and the precise theory of their formation are still uncertain, though it is more than probable that they are in some way connected with descending currents from the upper regions of the solar atmosphere. The spots are limited to the region within 45° of the sun's equator, and are most numerous in latitudes from 15° to 20°, being rather scarce on the equator itself. They exhibit a marked periodicity in number: at intervals of about eleven years they are abundant, while at intermediate times they almost vanish. The explanation of this periodicity is still unknown. Numerous attempts have been made to correlate it with various periodic phenomena upon the earth — with doubtful success, however, except that there is an unmistakable (though unexplained) connection between the spottedness of the sun's surface and the number and violence of our so-called magnetic storms and auroras.

Sun-spot of March 5th, 1873.

sun-spurge (sun′spėrj), n. See spurge[2].

sun-squall (sun′skwâl), n. A sea-nettle or jellyfish. One of the common species so called by New England fishermen is Aurelia flavidula.

sun-star (sun′stär), n. A starfish of many rays, as the British Crossaster papposus. See Heliaster, and cuts under Brisinga and Solaster.

sunstead (sun′sted), n. [Early mod. E. also sunnestead, sunsted.] A solstice. Cotgrave. [Obsolete or archaic.]

The summer-sunnestead falleth out alwaies (in Italie) to be just upon the foure and twentie day of June. Holland, tr. of Pliny, xviii. 28.

sunstone (sun′stōn), n. [< sun[1] + stone.] A variety either of oligoclase or of orthoclase, or when green a microcline feldspar, showing red or golden-yellow colored reflections produced by included minute crystals of mica, göthite, or hematite. That which was originally brought from Aventura in Spain is a reddish-brown variety of quartz. Also called aventurin, heliolite. The name is also occasionally given to some kinds of cat's-eye.

sun-stricken (sun′strik″n), p. a. Stricken by the sun; affected by sunstroke.

Enoch's comrade, careless of himself, . . . fell Sun-stricken. Tennyson, Enoch Arden.

★sunstroke (sun′strōk), n. Acute prostration from excessive heat of weather. Two forms may be distinguished — one of sudden collapse without pyrexia (heat-exhaustion), the other with very marked pyrexia (thermic fever: see fever[1]). The same effects may be produced by heat which is not of solar origin.

sunstruck (sun′struk), a. Overcome by the heat of the sun; affected with sunstroke.

sunt (sunt), n. [Ar. sanat.] The wood of Acacia scorpioides, of northern Africa and southwestern Asia. It is very durable if water-seasoned, and much used for wheels, well-curbs, implements, etc. Also sant.

sun-tree (sun′trē), n. The Japanese tree-of-the-sun. See Retinospora.

sun-trout (sun′trout), n. The squeteague, a sciænoid fish, Cynoscion regalis.

sun-try (sun′trī), v. t. To try out, as oil, or try out oil from, as fish, by means of the sun's heat. Sharks' livers are often sun-tried. [Nantucket.]

sun-up (sun′up), n. [< sun[1] + up. Cf. sundown.] Sunrise. [Local, U. S.]

Such a horse as that might get over a good deal of ground atwixt sun-up and sun-down. J. F. Cooper, Last of Mohicans, iv.

On dat day ole Brer Tarrypin, en his ole 'oman, en his th'ee chilluns, dey got up 'fo' sun-up. J. C. Harris, Uncle Remus, xviii.

sun-wake (sun′wāk), n. The rays of the setting sun reflected on the water. According to sailors' tradition, a narrow wake is an indication of good weather on the following day, a broad wake a sign of bad weather.

sunward, sunwards (sun′wärd, -wärdz), a. and adv. [< sun[1] + ward.] To or toward the sun. Carlyle, Sartor Resartus, ii. 6.

Which, launched upon its sunward track,
No voice on earth could summon back.
T. B. Read, Wagoner of the Alleghanies, p. 17.

★sun-wheel (sun′hwēl), n. A character of wheel-like form, supposed to symbolize the sun: it has many varieties, among others the wheel-cross, and exhibits four, five, or more arms or spokes radiating from a circle, every arm terminating in a crescent.

sunwise (sun′wīz), adv. [< sun[1] + -wise.] In the direction of the sun's apparent motion; in the direction of the movement of the hands of a watch.

sun-worship (sun′wėr″ship), n. The worship or adoration of the sun as the symbol of the deity, as the most glorious object in nature, or as the source of light and heat; heliolatry. See fire-worship.

Sun-worship is by no means universal among the lower races of mankind, but manifests itself in the upper levels of savage religion in districts far and wide over the earth, often assuming the prominence which it keeps and developes in the faiths of the barbaric world. E. B. Tylor, Prim. Culture, II. 259.

sun-worshiper (sun′wėr″ship-ėr), n. A worshiper of the sun; a fire-worshiper.

sun-year (sun′yēr), n. A solar year.

sun-yellow (sun′yel″ō), n. A coal-tar color: same as maize, 3.

sup (sup), v.; pret. and pp. supped, ppr. supping. [Also dial. soup (pron. soup), sope; < ME. soupen (pret. soop), < AS. sūpan (pret. sēap, pp. sopen) = MD. suypen, D. zuipen = MLG. sūpen, LG. supen = OHG. sūfan, MHG. sūfen, G. saufen = Icel. sūpa = Sw. supa, sup; Teut. √ sup, sup, sip. Hence ult. sup, n., sip, sop, and, through F., soup[2], supper: see supper.] I. trans. 1. To take into the mouth with the lips, as a liquid; take or drink by a little at a time; sip.

Thare ete thay nougt but Flesche with outen Brede: and thay soupe the Brothe there of. Mandeville, Travels, p. 129.

Sup pheasant's eggs,
And have our cockles boiled in silver shells. B. Jonson, Alchemist, iv. 1.

There I'll sup
Balm and nectar in my cup. Crashaw, Steps to the Temple, Ps. xxiii.

2. To eat with a spoon. [Scotch.] — 3†. To treat with supper; give a supper to; furnish supper for.

Sup them well, and look unto them all. Shak., T. of the S., Ind., i. 28.

Having caught more fish than will sup myself and my friend, I will bestow this upon you. I. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 78.

II. intrans. 1. To eat the evening meal; take supper; in the Bible, to take the principal meal of the day (a late dinner).

When they had supped, they brought Tobias in. Tobit viii. 1.

Where sups he to-night? Shak., T. and C., iii. 1. 89.

The Sessions ended, I din'd, or rather supp'd (so late it was), with the Judges. Evelyn, Diary, July 18, 1679.

2. To take in liquid with the lips; sip.

Whenne your potage to yow shalle be brouhte, Take yow sponys, and soupe by no way. Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 6.

Nor, therefore, could we supp or swallow without it [the tongue]. N. Grew, Cosmologia Sacra, i. 5.

3. To eat with a spoon. [Scotch.]

sup (sup), n. [< sup, v. Cf. sop, n., and sip, n.] A small mouthful, as of liquor or broth; a little taken with the lips; a sip.

Shew 'em a crust of bread,
They'll saint me presently; and skip like apes
For a sup of wine. Fletcher, Sea Voyage, iv. 2.

supawn (su-pân′), n. [Also suppawn, sepawn, sepon (also, in a D. spelling, sepaen, sappaen (Trumbull), from a form connected with Natick saupáe, sabáe, it is softened, made soft by water). See samp.] A dish consisting of Indian meal boiled in water, usually eaten with milk: often called mush. [U. S.]

Ev'n in thy native regions, how I blush
To hear the Pennsylvanians call thee Mush!
On Hudson's banks while men of Belgic spawn Insult and eat thee by the name Suppawn. J. Barlow, Hasty Pudding, i.

They ate their supaen and rolliches of an evening, smoked their pipes in the chimney-nook, and upon the Lord's Day waddled their wonted way to the Gereformeerde Kerche. E. L. Bynner, Begum's Daughter, i.

supe (sūp), n. [An abbr. of super, 1, for supernumerary.] 1. A supernumerary in a theater; a super. [Colloq.] — 2. A toady; especially, one who toadies the professors. [College slang, U. S.]

supe (sūp), v. i.; pret. and pp. suped, ppr. suping. [< supe, n.] To act the supe, in either sense.

supellectile (sū-pe-lek′til), a. and n. [< L. supellex (supellectil-), household utensils.] I. a. Pertaining to household furniture; hence, ornamental. [Rare.]

The heart of the Jews is empty of faith, . . . and garnished with a few broken traditions and ceremonies: supellectile complements instead of substantial graces. Rev. T. Adams, Works, II. 37.

II. n. An article of household furniture; hence, an ornament. [Rare.]

The heart, then, being so accepted a vessel, keep it at home; having but one so precious supellectile or moveable, part not with it upon any terms. Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 259.

super-. [F. super-, sur- = Sp. Pg. super-, sobre- = It. super-, sopra-, < L. super-, prefix, < super, prep., over, above, beyond, = Gr. ὑπέρ, over, above: see hyper-. In ML. and Rom. super- is more confused with the related supra-. In words of OF. origin it appears in E. as sur-, as in surprise, surrender, surround, etc.] A prefix of Latin origin, meaning 'over, above, beyond': equivalent to hyper- of Greek origin, or over- of English origin. In use it has either (a) the meaning 'over' or 'above' in place or position, as in superstruc- ture, etc., or (b) the meaning 'over, above, beyond' in manner, degree, measure, or the like, as in superexcellent, superfine, etc. It is a common English formative, especially in technical use. In chemistry it is used similarly to per-. In zoology and anatomy it is used like hyper-, sometimes like epi-, is the opposite of sub-, subter-, and hypo-, and is the same as supra-. The more recent and technical compounds of super- which follow are left without further etymology.

super (sū′pėr), n. [Abbr. of the words indicated in the definitions.] 1. A supernumerary; specifically, a supernumerary actor.

My father was a man of extraordinary irritability, partly natural, partly induced by having to deal with such preternaturally stupid people as the lowest class of actors, the supers, are found to be.
Yates, Fifty Years of London Life, I. ii.

2. A superhive. See bar super, under bar[1].—3. A superintendent. [Colloq. in all uses.]

superable (sū′pėr-ạ-bl), a. [< L. superabilis, that may be surmounted, < superare, go over, rise above, surmount, < super, over: see super-.] Capable of being overcome or conquered; surmountable.

Antipathies are generally superable by a single effort.
Johnson, Rambler, No. 126.

superableness (sū′pėr-ạ-bl-nes), n. The quality of being superable or surmountable. Bailey.

superably (sū′pėr-ạ-bli), adv. So as to be superable.

superabound (sū″pėr-ạ-bound′), v. i. [= F. surabonder = Pr. sobrondar = Sp. sobreabundar = Pg. sobreabundar, superabundar = It. soprabbondare, < LL. superabundare, superabound, < L. super, above, + abundare, overflow, abound: see abound.] To abound above or beyond measure; be very abundant or exuberant; be more than sufficient.

In those cities where the gospel hath abounded, sin hath superabounded. Rev. T. Adams, Works, II. 271.

God has filled the world with beauty to overflowing—superabounding beauty. J. F. Clarke, Self-Culture, p. 183.

superabundance (sū″pėr-ạ-bun′dạns), n. [= F. surabondance = Pr. sobrehabondansa = Sp. sobreabundancia = It. soprabbondanza, < LL. superabundantia, superabundance, < L. superabundan(t-)s, superabundant: see superabundant.] The state of being superabundant, or more than enough; excessive abundance; excess.

Many things are found to be monstrous & prodigious in Nature; the effects whereof diuers attribute . . . either to defect or super-aboundance in Nature.
Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 462.

superabundant (sū″pėr-ạ-bun′dạnt), a. [= F. surabondant = Sp. sobreabundante = Pg. sobreabundante, superabundante = It. soprabbondante, < L. superabundan(t-)s, ppr. of superabundare, superabound: see superabound.] Abounding to excess; being more than is sufficient; redundant.

God gives not onely corne for need,
But likewise sup'rabundant seed.
Herrick, To God.

superabundantly (sū″pėr-ạ-bun′dạnt-li), adv. In a superabundant manner; more than sufficiently; redundantly.

Nothing but the uncreated infinite can adequately fill and superabundantly satisfy the desire. Cheyne.

superacidulated (sū″pėr-a-sid′ụ̈-lā-ted), a. Acidulated to excess.

superacromial (sū″pėr-a-krō′mi-ạl), a. Situated upon or above the acromion. Also supra-acromial.

superadd (sū-pėr-ad′), v. t. [< L. superaddere, add over and above, < super, over, + addere, add: see add.] To add over and above; join in addition.

To the obligations of creation all the obligations of redemption and the new creation are superadded; and this threefold cord should not so easily be broken.
Baxter, Divine Life, i. 11.

The superadded circumstance which would evolve the genius had not yet come; the universe had not yet beckoned. George Eliot, Middlemarch, x.

superaddition (sū″pėr-a-dish′ọn), n. 1. The act of superadding, or the state of being superadded.

It is quite evident that the higher forms of life are the result of continued superaddition of one result of growth-force on another.
E. D. Cope, Origin of the Fittest, p. 397.

2. That which is superadded.

It was unlikely women should become virtuous by ornaments and superadditions of morality who did decline the laws and prescriptions of nature.
Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 38.

superadvenient (sū″pėr-ad-vē′niẹnt), a. 1. Coming upon; coming to the increase or assistance of something.

The soul of man may have matter of triumph when he has done bravely by a superadvenient assistance of his God. Dr. H. More.

2. Coming unexpectedly. [Rare.]

superagency (sū-pėr-ā′jẹn-si), n. A higher or superior agency.

superaltar (sū′pėr-âl-tạr), n. [< ML. superaltare, < L. super, over, + altare, altar.] A small slab of stone consecrated and laid upon or let into the top of an altar which has not been consecrated, or which has no stone mensa: often used as a portable altar. [The word is often incorrectly used of the altar-ledge or -ledges (gradines), also called the retable.]

superambulacral (sū-pėr-am-bụ̄-lā′krạl), a. In zoöl., situated above ambulacra. Huxley, Anat Invert., p. 483.

superanal (sū-pėr-ā′nạl), a. In entom., same as supra-anal.

superangelic (sū″pėr-an-jel′ik), a. More than angelic; superior in nature or rank to the angels; relating to or connected with a world or state of existence higher than that of the angels.

I am not prepared to say that a Superangelic Being, continuing such, might not have entered into all our wants and feelings as truly as one of our race.
Channing, Perfect Life, p. 217.

superangular (sū-pėr-ang′gụ̄-lạr), a. Situated over or above the angular bone of the mandible: more frequently surangular (which see).

superannate† (sū-pėr-an′āt), v. i. [< ML. superannatus, pp. of superannare (> F suranner), live beyond the year, hence (in F.) grow very old, < L. super, over, + annus, a year: see annual.] To live beyond the year.

The dying in the winter of the roots of plants that are annual seemeth to be partly caused by the over-expence of the sap into stalk and leaves, which being prevented, they will superannate, if they stand warm.
Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 448.

superannuate (sū-pėr-an′ụ̄-āt), v.; pret. and pp. superannuated, ppr. superannuating. [Altered, in apparent conformity with annual, from superannate, q. v.] I. trans. 1. To impair or disqualify in any way by old age: used chiefly in the past participle: as, a superannuated magistrate.

Some superannuated Virgin that hath lost her Lover.
Howell, Letters, I. i. 12.

Were there any hopes to outlive vice, or a point to be superannuated from sin, it were worthy our knees to implore the days of Methuselah.
Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, i. 42.

A superannuated beauty still unmarried.
Goldsmith, Citizen of the World, xxviii.

2. To set aside or displace as too old; specifically, to allow to retire from service on a pension, on account of old age or infirmity; give a retiring pension to; put on the retired list; pension off: as, to superannuate a seaman.

History scientifically treated restores the ancient gift of prophecy, and with it may restore that ancient skill by which a new doctrine was furnished to each new period and the old doctrine could be superannuated without disrespect. J. R. Seeley, Nat. Religion, p. 224.

II.† intrans. 1. To last beyond the year.—2. To become impaired or disabled by length of years; live until weakened or useless.

superannuate (sū-pėr-an′ụ̄-āt), a. [Cf. superannuate, v.] Superannuated; impaired or disabled through old age; lasting until useless.

Doubtless his church will be no hospital
For superannuate forms and mumping shams.
Lowell, Cathedral.

superannuation (sū-pėr-an-ụ̄-ā′shọn), n. [< superannuate + -ion.] 1. The condition of being superannuated; disqualification on account of old age; of persons, senility; decrepitude.

Slyness blinking through the watery eye of superannuation. Coleridge.

The world itself is in a state of superannuation, if there be such a word. Cowper, To Joseph Hill, Feb. 15, 1781.

2. The state of being superannuated, or removed from office, employment, or the like, and receiving an allowance on account of long service or of old age or infirmity; also, a pension or allowance granted on such account. Also used attributively: as, a superannuation list.

In the first place superannuation is a guarantee of fidelity; in the second place, it encourages efficient officers; in the third place, it retains good men in the service.
Pop. Sci. Mo., XXVII. 579.

3. The state of having lived beyond the normal period.

The world is typified by the Wandering Jew. Its sorrow is a form of superannuation.
G. S. Hall, German Culture, p. 201.

4. Antiquated character.

A monk he seemed by . . . the superannuation of his knowledge. De Quincey, John Foster.

superaqueous (sū-pėr-ā′kwẹ̄-us), a. Situated or being above the water. [Rare.]

There has been no evidence to show that the uprights supported a superaqueous platform.
Jour. Anthrop. Inst., XV. 459.

superarrogant† (sū-pėr-ar′ọ-gạnt), a. Arrogant beyond measure.

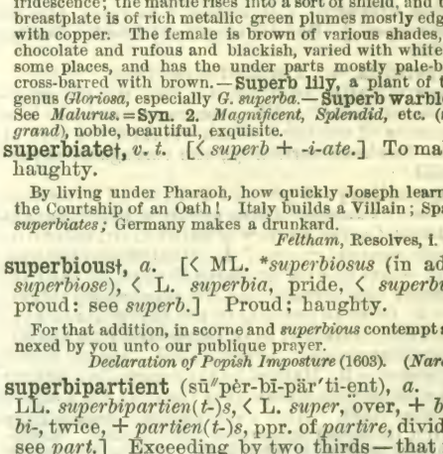
The Pope challengeth a faculty to cure spiritual impotencies, leprosies, and possessions. Alas! it is not in his power, though in his pride and superarrogant glory.
Rev. T. Adams, Works, II. 42.

superation (sū-pẹ-rā′shọn), n. [= F. supération, < L. superatio(n-), an overcoming, < superare, pp. superatus, go over.] 1. The apparent passing of one planet by another, in consequence of the more rapid movement in longitude of the latter.—2. The act or process of surmounting; an overcoming.

This superb and artistic superation of the difficulties of dancing in that unfriendly foot-gear.
Howells, Venetian Life, ii.

superb (sū-pėrb′), a. [= F. superbe = Sp. soberbio = Pg. soberbo = It. superbo, < L. superbus, proud, haughty, domineering, < super, over: see super-. Cf. Gr. ὑπέρβιος, overweening, outrageous, < ὑπέρ, over, + βία, strength, force.] 1†. Proud; haughty; arrogant. Bailey, 1731.—2. Grand; lofty; magnificent; august; stately; splendid.



Where noble Westmoreland, his country's friend,
Bids British greatness love the silent shade,
Where piles superb, in classic elegance,
Arise, and all is Roman, like his heart.
C. Smart, The Hop-Garden, ii.

He [Thoreau] gives us now and then superb outlooks from some jutting crag. Lowell, Study Windows, p. 208.

3. Rich; elegant; sumptuous; showy: as, superb furniture or decorations.

The last grave fop of the last age,
In a superb and feather'd hearse.
Churchill, The Ghost.

4. Very fine; first-rate: as, a superb exhibition. [Colloq.]—Superb bird of paradise, Lophorhina superba: so named by Latham, after le superbe of Brisson (1760).

Superb Bird of Paradise (Lophorhina superba), male.

It was placed in the genus Paradisea, till Vieillot founded for it the generic name under which it is now known, in the form Lophorina (1816). The superb is confined to New Guinea. The male is 9 inches long; the general color is velvety-black, burnished and spangled with various metallic iridescence; the mantle rises into a sort of shield, and the breastplate is of rich metallic green plumes mostly edged with copper. The female is brown of various shades, as chocolate and rufous and blackish, varied with white in some places, and has the under parts mostly pale-buff cross-barred with brown.—Superb lily, a plant of the genus Gloriosa, especially G. superba.—Superb warbler. See Malurus.=Syn. 2. Magnificent, Splendid, etc. (see grand), noble, beautiful, exquisite.

superbiate†, v. t. [< superb + -i-ate.] To make haughty.

By living under Pharaoh, how quickly Joseph learned the Courtship of an Oath! Italy builds a Villain; Spain superbiates; Germany makes a drunkard.
Feltham, Resolves, i. 69.

superbious†, a. [< ML. superbiosus* (in adv. superbiose), < L. superbia, pride, < superbus, proud: see superb.] Proud; haughty.

For that addition, in scorne and superbious contempt annexed by you unto our publique prayer.
Declaration of Popish Impostures (1603). (Nares.)

superbipartient (sū″pėr-bī-pär′ti-ẹnt), a. [< LL. superbipartien(t-)s, < L. super, over, + bis, bi-, twice, + partien(t-)s, ppr. of partire, divide: see part.] Exceeding by two thirds—that is, in the ratio to another number of 5 to 3.—Superbipartient double, a number which is to another number as 8 to 3.

superbiquintal (sū″pėr-bī-kwin′tạl), a. Related to another number as 7 to 5; exceeding by two fifths.

superbitertial (sū″pėr-bī-tėr′shal), a. Same as superbipartient.

superbly (sū-pėrb′li), adv. In a superb manner. (a†) Haughtily; contemptuously: as, he snubbed him superbly. (b) Richly; elegantly; magnificently: as, a book superbly bound.

superbness (sū-pėrb′nes), n. The state of being superb; magnificence. Imp. Dict.

supercalendered (sū-pėr-kal′en-dėrd), a. Noting paper of high polish that has received an unusual degree of rolling. Paper passed through the calendering-rolls attached to the Fourdrinier machine is known as machine-calendered. When passed again through a stack of six or more calendering-rolls, it is known as supercalendered.

supercallosal (sū″pėr-ka-lō′sal), a. and n. I. a. In anat., lying above the corpus callosum: specifying a fissure or sulcus of the median aspect of the cerebrum, otherwise called the callosomarginal and splenial fissure or sulcus.

II. n. The supercallosal fissure or sulcus.

supercanopy (sū-pėr-kan′ō-pi), n. In ornamental constructions and representations, such as the shrine or the engraved brass, an upper arch, gable, or the like covering in one or more subordinate niches, arches, etc.

supercargo (sū-pėr-kär′gō), n. [Accom. < Sp. Pg. sobrecarga, a supercargo, < sobre, over, + carga, cargo: see cargo.] A person in a merchant ship whose business is to manage the sales and superintend all the commercial concerns of the voyage.

supercargoship (sū-pėr-kär′gō-ship), n. [< supercargo + -ship.] The position or business of supercargo.

"I am averse," says this brother [of Washington Irving], in a letter dated Liverpool, March 9, 1809, "to any supercargoship, or anything that may bear you to distant or unfriendly climates."
Pierre M. Irving, Washington Irving, I. 107.

supercelestial (sū″pėr-sē-les′tial), a. [< LL. supercælestis, that is above heaven, < L. super, above, + cælum, heaven: see celestial.] 1. Situated above the firmament or vault of heaven, or above all the heavens. The doctrine of supercelestial regions belongs to Plato, who, in the "Phædrus" (trans. by Jowett), says: "Now of the heaven which is above the heavens [Greek ὑπερουράνιος] no earthly poet has ever sung or will sing worthily; but I must tell, for I am bound to speak truly when speaking of the truth. The colorless and shapeless and intangible essence and only reality dwells encircled by true knowledge in this home, visible to the mind alone, who is the lord of the soul."

I dare not think that any supercelestial heaven, or whatsoever else, not himself, was increate and eternal.
Raleigh.

2. More than celestial; having a nature higher than that of celestials; superangelic.

superceremonious (sū-pėr-ser-ē-mō′ni-us), a. Excessively ceremonious; too much given to ceremonies. Bp. Gauden, Tears of the Church, p. 625. (Davies.) supercharge (sū-pėr-chärj′), v. t. 1. To charge or fill to excess. Athenæum, No. 3233, p. 499. —2. In her., to place as a supercharge.

supercharge (sū′pėr-chärj), n. In her., a charge borne upon an ordinary or other charge: thus, three mullets charged upon a fesse or bend constitute a supercharge.

supercheryt (sū-pėr′chē-ri), n. [< OF. supercherie, F. supercherie = Sp. supercheria, < It. soperchieria, oppression, injury, fraud, < soperchio, excessive, also excess, < L. super, above: see super-.] Deceit; cheating; fraud. Bailey, 1731.

supercilia, n. Plural of supercilium.

superciliaris (sū-pėr-sil-i-ā′ris), n.; pl. superciliares (-rēz). [NL.: see superciliary.] The muscle of the brow which wrinkles the skin of the forehead vertically; the corrugator supercilii.

superciliary (sū-pėr-sil′i-ā-ri), a. [< NL. superciliaris, < L. supercilium, eyebrow, hence haughtiness, < super, over, + √kal as in Gr. καλύπτειν, hide, conceal, + -ary.] 1. Situated over the eyelid—that is, over or above the eye, as the eyebrow; superorbital: as, the superciliary ridges. —2. Of or pertaining to the supercilia or eyebrows; contained in or connected with the superciliary region; superorbital. See cut under Coluber.—3. Marked by the supercilia; having a conspicuous streak over the eye: as, a superciliary bird. Also supraciliary.—Superciliary arch, the arched superorbital border or ridge.—Superciliary muscle, the superciliaris. Also called corrugator supercilii. See cut under *muscle*¹.—Superciliary ridge. (a) A prominence over the eye gradually developed in man by the formation of the frontal sinuses, which causes this part of the bone to bulge out. It is absent in childhood, and varies much in different individuals. (b) The superorbital prominence of various animals, formed by the projection of the upper edge of the orbit itself, or of a separate superorbital ossicle.—Superciliary shield, in ornith., a prominent plate or shelf projecting over the eye, as of many birds of prey.—Superciliary woodpecker, Picus (or Colaptes or Zebrapicus or Centurus or Melanerpes) superciliaris (or superciliosus or subocularis or striatus) of Cuba, 11 inches long, with the sides of the head conspicuously striped, and the nape and belly crimson.

supercilious (sū-pėr-sil′i-us), a. [< L. superciliosus, haughty, arrogant, < supercilium, pride, arrogance: see supercilium.] 1. Lofty with pride; haughtily contemptuous; overbearing.

Age, which always brings one privilege, that of being insolent and supercilious without punishment.
Pitt, Speech in Reply to Walpole.

2. Manifesting haughtiness, or proceeding from it; overbearing; arrogant: as, a supercilious air; supercilious behavior.

The deadliest sin, I say, that same supercilious consciousness of no sin. Carlyle. (Imp. Dict.) =Syn. Disdainful, contemptuous, overweening, lordly, consequential. See arrogance.

superciliously (sū-pėr-sil′i-us-li), adv. In a supercilious manner; haughtily; with an air of contempt. Milman.

superciliousness (sū-pėr-sil′i-us-nes), n. The state or character of being supercilious; haughtiness; an overbearing temper or manner.

That, in case they prove fit to be declined, they may appear to have been rejected, not by our superciliousness or laziness, but (after a fair trial) by our experience.
Boyle, Works, III. 199.

=Syn. Pride, Presumption, etc. See arrogance.

supercilium (sū-pėr-sil′i-um), n.; pl. supercilia (-ä). [< L. supercilium, eyebrow, fig. a nod, the will, hence pride, haughtiness, arrogance, < super, over, + cilium, eyelid: see cilium.] 1. The eyebrow. (a) The superciliary region, ridge, or arch, including the hairs which grow upon it; the brow-ridge and associate structures. (b) The hairs of the eyebrow collectively; the eyebrow of ordinary language, a conspicuous feature of the countenance of most persons: commonly in the plural, meaning the right and left eyebrows together. See second cut under *eye*¹.

2. In anc. arch., the upper member of a cornice; also, the small fillet on either side of the scotia of the Ionic base.—3. In entom., an arched line of color partly surrounding an ocellus.

supercivilized (sū-pėr-siv′i-līzd), a. Civilized to excess; over-civilized. Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 340.

superclass (sū′pėr-klȧs), n. A group embracing two or more classes, or a single class contrasting with such a combination. Thus, birds and reptiles are classes collectively forming the superclass Sauropsida, contrasting with the Mammalia and with the superclass Ichthyopsida, which comprises the Amphibia and the fish-like vertebrates. Compare subphylum.

supercolumnar (sū″pėr-kō-lum′nȧr), a. Situated over a column or columns; of, pertaining to, or characterized by supercolumniation.

supercolumniation (sū″pėr-kō-lum-ni-ā′shon), n. In arch., the placing of one order above another.

supercomprehension (sū-pėr-kom-prē-hen′shon), n. Comprehension superior to what is common; superior comprehension.

Molina said, for instance, that God saw the future possible acts of man through His supercomprehension of human nature. Mind, XII. 268.

superconception (sū″pėr-kon-sep′shon), n. Same as superfetation.

As also in those superconceptions where one child was like the father, the other like the adulterer.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., iii. 17.

superconformityt (sū″pėr-kon-fôr′mi-ti), n. Excessive conformity, as to ceremonial usages; over-compliance.

A pragmatick super-conformity.
Bp. Gauden, Tears of the Church, p. 113. (Davies.)

superconscious (sū-pėr-kon′shus), a. Unconscious; of too lofty a nature to be conscious.

superconsequence (sū-pėr-kon′sē-kwens), n. Remote consequence.

For, not attaining the deuteroscopy and second intention of the words, they are fain to omit their superconsequences, figures, or tropologies. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., i. 3.

supercrescence (sū-pėr-kres′ens), n. [< ML. supercrescentia, overgrowth, redundance, < supercrescen(t-)s, growing over: see supercrescent.] That which grows upon another growing thing; a parasite. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., ii. 6. [Rare.]

supercrescent (sū-pėr-kres′ent), a. [< L. supercrescen(t-)s, ppr. of supercrescere, grow up, grow over, excel, < super, above, + crescere, grow: see crescent.] Growing on some other growing thing. Imp. Dict. [Rare.]

supercretaceous (sū″pėr-krē-tā′shius), a. Same as supracretaceous.

supercritical (sū-pėr-krit′i-kal), a. Excessively critical; hypercritical. Bp. Gauden, Tears of the Church, p. 15. (Davies.) supercurious (sū-pėr-kū′ri-us), a. Extremely or excessively curious or inquisitive. Evelyn, Acetaria, viii.

supercurve (sū′pėr-kėrv), n. A two-dimensional continuum in five-dimensional space.

superdentate (sū-pėr-den′tāt), a. In cetaceans, having teeth only in the upper jaw: the opposite of subdentate. Dewhurst, 1834. [Rare.]

superdeterminate (sū″pėr-dē-tėr′mi-nāt), a. Subject to more conditions than can ordinarily be satisfied at once.—Superdeterminate relation. See relation.

superdominant (sū-pėr-dom′i-nant), n. In mus. sic, same as submediant.

superembattled (sū″pėr-em-bat′ld), a. In her., embattled, or cut into battlements, on the upper side only: as, a fesse superembattled. In this case the notches or crenelles are usually cut down one third of the width of the fesse.

supereminence (sū-pėr-em′i-nens), n. [= Sp. Pg. supereminencia, < LL. supereminentia, < L. supereminen(t-)s. see supereminent.] The state of being supereminent; eminence superior to what is common; distinguished eminence: as, the supereminence of Demosthenes as an orator. Milton, Reformation in Eng., ii.

supereminencyt (sū-pėr-em′i-nen-si), n. [As supereminence (see -cy).] Same as supereminence.

supereminent (sū-pėr-em′i-nent), a. [= F. suréminent = Sp. Pg. It. supereminente, < L. supereminen(t-)s, ppr. of supereminere, rise above, overtop, < super, above, + eminere, stand out, project: see eminent.] 1. Surpassingly eminent; very lofty; particularly elevated.

Paria is the Region which possesseth the supereminente or hyghest parte thereof [of the earth] nereste vnto heauen.
Peter Martyr (tr. in Eden's First Books on America, ed. [Arber, p. 90).

The lofty Hils, and supereminent Mountains.
Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 4.

2. Eminent in a superior or in the highest degree; surpassing others in excellence, power, authority, and the like.

His supereminent glory and majesty before whom we stand. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v. 47.

supereminently (sū-pėr-em′i-nent-li), adv. In a supereminent manner; in a supreme degree of excellence, ability, etc. Milton, Free Commonwealth.

superendow (sū″pėr-en-dou′), v. t. To endow in an extraordinary degree. Donne, Sermons, v.

supererogant (sū-pėr-er′ō-gant), a. [< L. supererogan(t-)s, ppr. of supererogare: see supererogate.] Supererogatory. Stackhouse, Hist. Bible. (Latham.) supererogate (sū-pėr-er′ō-gāt), v. i.: pret. and pp. supererogated, ppr. supererogating. [< LL. supererogatus, pp. of supererogare, pay out over and above, < L. super, above, + erogare, expend, pay out: see erogate.] To do more than duty requires; make up for some deficiency by extraordinary exertion.

Good my lord,
Let mine own creatures serve me; others will
In this work supererogate, and I Shall think their diligence a mockery.
Beau. and Fl. (?), Faithful Friends, iv. 4.

supererogation (sū-pėr-er-ō-gā′shon), n. [= F. surérogation = Sp. supererogación = Pg. supererogação = It. supererogazione, < LL. supererogatio(n-), a payment in addition, < supererogare, pay in addition: see supererogate.] The act of one who supererogates; performance of more than duty requires.

It would be a work of supererogation for us to say one word in favor of military statistics as a means of illustrating the condition of an army.
Dr. J. Brown, Spare Hours, 3d ser., p. 167.

Works of supererogation, in Rom. Cath. theol., works which are salutary (or conduce to salvation) but are not imposed under obligation.

supererogative (sū″pėr-e-rog′a-tiv), a. [< supererogate + -ive.] Supererogatory. [Rare.]

O new and never-heard-of Supererogative heighth of wisdome and charity in our Liturgie!
Milton, On Def. of Humb. Remonst.

supererogatory (sū″pėr-e-rog′a-tō-ri), a. [= F. surérogatoire = Sp. supererogatorio, < ML. supererogatorius*, < LL. supererogare, pay in addition; as supererogate + -ory.] Partaking of supererogation; performed to an extent not enjoined or not required by duty; unnecessary; superfluous.

The declamations of philosophy are generally rather exhausted on supererogatory duties than on such as are indispensably necessary. Goldsmith, The Bee, No. 3.

superessential (sū″pėr-e-sen′shal), a. Supersubstantial; of a nature which transcends mere being and essence: applied to the One by the Platonic philosophers, especially Proclus.

superethical (sū-pėr-eth′i-kal), a. Transcending the ordinary rules of ethics; more than ethical.

Moral theology contains a superethical doctrine, as some grave divines have ridiculously called it.
Bolingbroke, Authority in Matters of Religion, § 6.

superexalt (sū″pėr-eg-zâlt′), v. t. [< L. superexaltare, exalt above others, < super, above, + exaltare, exalt: see exalt.] To exalt to a superior degree.

She was super-exalted by an honour greater than the world yet ever saw. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 31.

superexaltation (sū-pėr-eks-âl-tā′shon), n. Elevation above the common degree. Holyday.

superexceed (sū″pėr-ek-sēd′), v. t. [< LL. superexcedere, exceed, < super, above, + excedere, exceed: see exceed.] To exceed greatly; surpass in large measure. [Rare.]

This great Nature Naturant . . .
Which All things Holds, Fills All, doth All Embrace, Super-exceedes, Sustaines; and in One place.
Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 78.

superexcellence (sū-pėr-ek′se-lens), n. [< superexcellen(t) + -ce.] Superior excellence.

superexcellent (sū-pėr-ek′se-lent), a. [< LL. superexcellen(t-)s, very excellent, < super, above, + excellen(t-)s, excellent: see excellent.] Excellent in an uncommon or superior degree; very excellent.

One is Three, not in the confusion of Substance, but vnitie of Person; and this is the first and super-excellent Commixtion. Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 310.

superexcitation (sū-pėr-ek-si-tā′shon), n. Excessive excitation.

Disturbances of the sensibility produce superexcitation which is subsequently replaced by exhaustion.
Pop. Sci. Mo., XXXI. 816.

superexcrescence (sū″pėr-eks-kres′ens), n. A superfluous outgrowth. Wiseman, Surgery.

superfamily (sū′pėr-fam″i-li), n. In biol., a group of families, or a group of a grade next above the family. Thus, the monkeys of the New World constitute a superfamily, Ceboidea or Platyrrhina, contrasting with those of the Old World, Simioidea or Catarrhina. The superfamily formally intervenes between the family and the suborder; some authors are fond of this refinement, and the term is much used; but the difference between a suborder and a superfamily is not obvious.

superfecundation (sū-pėr-fek-un-dā′shon), n. The fertilization of two ova at the same menstruation by two different acts of coition. This unquestionably occurs in woman.

superfecundity (sū″pėr-fē-kun′di-ti), n. Superabundant fecundity, or multiplication of the species. Macaulay, Sadler's Ref. Refuted.

superfetate (sū-pėr-fē′tāt), v. i.; pret. and pp. superfetated, ppr. superfetating. [Formerly also superfœtate; < L. superfetatus, pp. of superfetare, conceive anew when already pregnant, < super, above, + fetare, bring forth, breed: see fetus.] To conceive after a prior conception.

The female brings forth twice in one month, and so is said to superfetate, which . . . is because her eggs are hatched in her one after another. N. Grew, Museum.

superfetation (sū″pėr-fē-tā′shon), n. [Formerly also superfœtation; = F. superfétation = Sp. superfetación = Pg. superfetação = It. superfetazione, < L. as if superfetatio(n-)*, < superfetare, superfetate: see superfetate.] 1. A second conception some time after a prior one, by which two fetuses of different age exist together in the same female: often used figuratively. The possibility of superfetation in the human female has been the subject of much investigation, but the weight of evidence goes to show that it may occur not only with double uteri, but also in the earlier period of pregnancy, under rare conditions, with normal single uterus. Also called superconception.

Here is superfetation, child upon child, and, that which is more strange, twins at a latter conception.
Donne, Letters, lxv.

2. The fetus produced by superfetation; hence, any excrescent growth. [Rare.]

It then became a superfetation upon, and not an ingredient in, the national character. Coleridge.

superfete† (sū-pėr-fēt′), v. [Also superfœte; < OF. superfeter, superfœter, < L. superfetare, superfetate: see superfetate.] I. intrans. To superfetate.

It makes me pregnant and to superfete.
Howell, Poem to Charles I., 1641.

II. trans. To conceive after a former conception.

His Brain may very well raise and superfœte a second Thought. Howell, Letters, iv. 19.

superfibrination (sū-pėr-fī-bri-nā′shon), n. Excessive tendency to form fibrin, or excess of fibrin in the blood.

superfice† (sū′pėr-fis), n. [< ME. superfice, < OF. superfice, surface: see superficies, surface.] Superficies; surface.

The zodiak in hevene is ymagened to be a superfice contienyng a latitude of 12 degrees. Chaucer, Astrolabe, i. 21.

The turned in water . . . filling the dusty trenches and long emptyed cisterns, and a while after covering in many places the superfices of the land. Sandys, Travailes, p. 76.

superficial (sū-pėr-fish′al), a. [< ME. superficial, < OF. superficiel, F. superficiel = Pr. Sp. Pg. superficial = It. superficiale, < LL. superficialis, of or pertaining to the surface: see superficies.] 1. Lying in or on, or pertaining to, the superficies or surface; not penetrating below the surface, literally or figuratively; being only on the surface; not reaching to the interior or essence; shallow: as, a superficial color; a superficial resemblance.

Whenne the must boileth scome of the grape
That wol rise and be superficialle,
So take hem that nought oon of hem escape.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 202.

The discovery of flint tools or celts in the superficial formations in many parts of the world.
Darwin, Origin of Species, p. 31.

2. Of persons or their mental states or acts, comprehending only what is apparent or obvious; not deep or profound; not thorough.

This superficial tale
Is but a preface of her worthy praise.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., v. 5. 10.

Their knowledge is so very superficial, and so ill-grounded, that it is impossible for them to describe in what consists the beauty of these works. Dryden.

For how miserable will our Case be, if we have nothing but a superficial Faith, and a sort of Anniversary Devotion. Stillingfleet, Sermons, III. ix.

He [Temple] seems to have been . . . a lively, agreeable young man of fashion, not by any means deeply read, but versed in all the superficial accomplishments of a gentleman. Macaulay, Sir William Temple.

Even the most practised and earnest minds must needs be superficial in the greater part of their attainments.
J. H. Newman, Gram. of Assent, p. 52.

3. In anat., not deep-seated or profound; lying on the surface of some part, or near but not on the surface of the whole body; subcutaneous; cutaneous: specifically said of various tissues and structures.—Superficial content or contents. See content[2].—Superficial deposits, the most recent of the geological formations; unconsolidated detrital material lying on or near the surface, and generally unstratified, or only very rudely stratified. Most of what is called diluvium, drift, or alluvium might be called by geologists a superficial deposit, especially if spoken of with reference to much older formations lying beneath.—Superficial fascia. See fascia, 7 (a).—Superficial reflexes. See reflex.—Superficial stomatitis. See stomatitis.=Syn. 1. External, exterior, outer.—2. Slight, smattering, shallow.

superficialist (sū-pėr-fish′al-ist), n. [< superficial + -ist.] One who attends to anything superficially; one of superficial attainments; a sciolist; a smatterer. Herné, Beauties of Paris, I. 68.

superficiality (sū-pėr-fish-i-al′i-ti), n.; pl. superficialities (-tiz). [= F. superficialité = Sp. superficialidad = Pg. superficialidade = It. superficialità, < LL. superficialita(t-)s*, superficialness, < superficialis, superficial: see superficial. Cf. superficialty.] 1. The character of being superficial, in any (literal or figurative) sense; want of depth or thoroughness; shallowness.

She despised superficiality, and looked deeper than the color of things. Lamb, Mrs. Battle on Whist.

2. That which is superficial or shallow, in any (literal or figurative) sense; a superficial person or thing.

Purchasing acquittal . . . by a still harder penalty, that of being a triviality, superficiality, self-advertiser, and partial or total quack. Carlyle, Mirabeau.

superficialize (sū-pėr-fish′al-īz), v.; pret. and pp. superficialized, ppr. superficializing. [< superficial + -ize.] I. trans. To treat or regard in a superficial, shallow, or slight manner. [Rare.]

It is a characteristic weakness of the day to superficialize evil; to spread a little cold cream over Pandemonium.
Whipple, Lit. and Life, p. 188.

II. intrans. To be superficial or shallow; think, feel, or write superficially. [Rare.]

Better to elaborate the history of Greece or of Rome or of England than to superficialize in general history.
The Galaxy, March, 1871, p. 328.

superficially (sū-pėr-fish′al-i), adv. In a superficial manner, in any sense of the word superficial. Goldsmith.

superficialness (sū-pėr-fish′al-nes), n. The state or character of being superficial, in any sense. Bailey.

superficialty† (sū-pėr-fish′al-ti), n. [< ME. superficialtie, < OF. superficialte*, < LL. superficialita(t-)s*, superficialness: see superficiality.] Superficies.

In als many iorneyes may thei gon fro Jerusalem unto other Confynyes of the Superficialtie of the Erthe bezonde.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 188.

superficiary (sū-pėr-fish′i-ā-ri), a. and n. [= F. superficiaire = Pr. superficiari = Sp. It. superficiario, < LL. superficiarius, situated on another man's land, < L. superficies, surface: see superficies.] I. a. 1. Of or pertaining to the superficies or surface; superficial.—2. In law, situated on another's land. W. Smith.

II. n.; pl. superficiaries (-riz). In law, one to whom a right of surface is granted; one who pays the quit-rent of a house built on another man's ground.

superficies (sū-pėr-fish′iēz), n. [= F. superficie = Pr. superficia = Sp. Pg. It. superficie, < L. superficies, the upper side, the top, surface, superficies, < super, above, + facies, form, figure, face: see face[1].] 1. A boundary between two bodies; a surface.

Here's nothing but A superficies; colours, and no substance.
Massinger, City Madam, v. 3.

The most part of . . . [the wells] would ebbe and flow as the Sea did, and be leuell or little higher then the superficies of the sea. Capt. John Smith, Works, II. 112.

2. In civil law, the right which one person might have over a building or other thing in or upon the surface of the land of another person. Also used for such thing itself, if so united with the land as to form a part of it.=Syn. 1. Surface, etc. See outside.

superfine (sū-pėr-fīn′), a. [< F. superfin = Sp. Pg. superfino; as super- + fine[2].] 1. Very fine, or most fine; surpassing others in fineness: as, superfine cloth.—2. Excessively or faultily subtle; over-subtle; over-refined.—Superfine file. See file[1].

superfineness (sū-pėr-fīn′nes), n. The character of being superfine.

superfinical (sū-pėr-fin′i-kal), a. Excessively finical. See superserviceable.

A . . . superfinical rogue. Shak., Lear, ii. 2 (quartos).

superflu† (sū′pėr-flō), a. [ME., < OF. superflu: see superfluous.] Superfluous.

A stene of wyne a poundes quantitee
Of hem receyve, alle leves superflu
Ikiste away, and thai that paled greu.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 168.

superfluence (sū-pėr′flö-ens), n. [< superfluen(t) + -ce.] Superfluity; more than is necessary. [Rare.]

The superfluence of grace. Hammond.

★ superfluent† (sū-pėr′flö-ent), a. [< ME. superfluent, < L. superfluen(t-)s, ppr. of superfluere, overflow, run over, < super, over, + fluere, flow: see fluent.] 1. Floating on the surface.

After this tyme in handes clene uphent
Alle that wol swymme and be superfluent.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 204.

2. Abundant; in profusion; superfluous.

In November kytte of the bowes drie,
Superfluent, and thicke, eke utter trie.
Palladius, Husbondrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 54.

superfluitance† (sū-pėr-flö′i-tans), n. [< superfluitan(t) + -ce.] The act or condition of floating above or on the surface; that which floats on the surface.

Out of the cream or superfluitance the finest dishes, saith he, are made. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., ii. 5.

superfluitant (sū-pėr-flö′i-tant), a. [< superfluit-y + -ant.] Floating above or on the surface. [Rare.]

The vapor of the superfluitant atmosphere.
Amer. Jour. Sci., 3d ser., XXIX. 389.

superfluity (sū-pėr-flö′i-ti), n.; pl. superfluities (-tiz). [< OF. superfluite, F. superfluité = Pr. superfluitat = Sp. superfluidad = Pg. superfluidade = It. superfluità, < ML. superfluita(t-)s, that which is superfluous or unnecessary, < L. superfluus, superfluous: see superfluous.] 1. A quantity that is superfluous or in excess; a greater quantity than is wanted; superabundance; redundancy.

I would have you to refresh, to cherish, and to help them with your superfluity. Latimer, Misc. Selections.

Superfluity of drink
Deceives the eye, & makes the heart misthink.
Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 67.

2. That which is in excess of what is wanted; especially, something used for show or luxury rather than for comfort or from necessity; something that could easily be dispensed with.

It is ye diuel that doth persuade us to many vices; it is the worlde that doth ingulfe us in greate troubles; it is the fleshe that craueth of us muche excesse and superfluities. Guevara, Letters (tr. by Hellowes, 1577), p. 48.

To give a little of your superfluities, not so acceptable as the widow's gift, that gave all. Donne, Sermons, viii.

superfluous (sū-pėr'flō-us), a. [= F. superflu = Sp. superfluo = Pg. It. superfluo, < L. superfluus, overflowing, unnecessary, superfluous, < superfluere, overflow, run over, superabound, < super, above, + fluere, flow: see fluent.] 1. More than is wanted or sufficient; unnecessary from being in excess of what is needed; excessive; redundant; needless: as, a composition abounding with superfluous words.

Superfluous branches
We lop away, that bearing boughs may live.
Shak., Rich. II., iii. 4. 63.

It is superfluous to argue a point so clear.
Macaulay, Utilitarian Theory of Government.

2†. Supplied with superfluities; having somewhat beyond necessaries.

Let the superfluous and lust-dieted man
. . . feel your power quickly.
Shak., Lear, iv. 1. 70.

3†. Doing more than what is called for; supererogatory.

I see no reason why thou shouldst be so superfluous to demand the time of the day. Shak., 1 Hen. IV., i. 2. 12.

4†. Excessive.

Purchased
At a superfluous rate.
Shak., Hen. VIII., i. 1. 99.

5. In music, of intervals, augmented.=Syn. 1. Excessive, useless, needless.

superfluously (sū-pėr'flō-us-li), adv. In a superfluous manner; with excess; in a degree beyond what is necessary.

superfluousness (sū-pėr'flō-us-nes), n. The state or character of being superfluous.

superflux (sū'pėr-fluks), n. [< ML. superfluxus, an overflow, < L. superfluere, overflow: see superfluent.] That which is more than is wanted; a superabundance or superfluity. [Rare.]

Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel,
That thou mayst shake the superflux to them.
Shak., Lear, iii. 4. 35.

superfœtate†, superfœtation†. See superfetate, superfetation.

superfoliation (sū-pėr-fō-li-ā'shon), n. Excess of foliation.

The disease of φυλλομανια, ἐμφυλλισμός, or superfoliation, . . . whereby the fructifying juice is starved by the excess of leaves. Sir T. Browne, Misc. Tracts, i. § 43.

superfrontal (sū-pėr-fron'tal), a. and n. I. a. Superior or upper, as a fissure of the frontal lobe of the brain: specifying one of the anterior lateral fissures: distinguished from subfrontal.

II. n. Eccles.: (a†) A dossal. (b) The covering of the mensa, or top of the altar. It overhangs the upper part of the frontal. See frontal, 5 (a).

superfunction (sū-pėr-fungk'shon), n. Excessive activity, as of an organ of the body.

superfunctional (sū-pėr-fungk'shon-al), a. Being in excess of the normal function. ★

superfuse (sū-pėr-fūz'), v.; pret. and pp. superfused, ppr. superfusing. [< L. superfusus, pp. of superfundere, pour over, < super, over, + fundere, pour out: see fuse[1].] I. trans. To pour over something else. [Rare.]

Dr. Slayer showed us an experiment of a wonderful nature, pouring first a very cold liquor into a glass, and super-fusing on it another.
Evelyn, Diary, Dec. 13, 1685. (Davies.)

II. intrans. To be poured or spread over something else. The Century, XXXVII. 225. [Rare.]

superheat (sū-pėr-hēt'), v. t. To heat to an extreme degree or to a very high temperature; specifically, to heat, as steam, apart from contact with water, until it is at such a temperature that its temperature may be lowered or its pressure increased or both at once without the conversion of some steam back into water.

superheater (sū-pėr-hē'tėr), n. In a steam-engine, a contrivance for increasing the temperature of the steam above that which it would have as saturated steam in contact with the hot water from which it was generated.

superheresy† (sū-pėr-her'e-si), n. A heresy based on another.

superhive (sū'pėr-hīv), n. An upper compartment of a beehive, removable at pleasure.

superhuman (sū-pėr-hū'man), a. [= F. surhumain = Sp. Pg. sobrehumano; as super- + human.] Above or beyond what is human; hence, sometimes, divine.

It is easy for one who has taken an exaggerated view of his powers to invest himself with a superhuman authority.
J. B. Mozley, Augustinian Doct. of Predestination. [(Latham.)

The superhuman quality of Divine truth.
W. G. T. Shedd, Sermons, Spiritual Man, p. 418.

=Syn. Preternatural, etc. See supernatural.

superhumanity (sū″pėr-hū-man'i-ti), n. [< superhuman + -ity.] The character of being superhuman. [Rare.]

I have dwelt thus on the transcendent pretensions of Jesus, because there is an argument here for his superhumanity which cannot be resisted.
Bushnell, Nature and the Supernat., p. 291.

superhumanly (sū-pėr-hū'man-li), adv. In a superhuman manner. E. H. Sears, The Fourth Gospel, p. 87.

superhumeral (sū-pėr-hū'mę-ral), n. [= Sp. Pg. superhumeral = It. superumerale, < ML. superhumerale, < L. super, above, + humerus, prop. umerus, shoulder: see humerus.] 1. Eccles.: (a) A Jewish ephod. (b) An amice. (c) An archiepiscopal pallium or pall. See humeral.—2. Something borne on the shoulders; a burden: probably with allusion to an ecclesiastical vestment.

A strange superhumeral, the print whereof was to be seen on His shoulders. Bp. Andrews, Sermons, I. 25.

superhumerate (sū-pėr-hū'mę-rāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. superhumerated, ppr. superhumerating. [< L. super, over, + humerus, prop. umerus, shoulder. Cf. superhumeral.] To place, as a burden, on one's shoulders. [Rare.]

Nothing surer tyes a friend then freely to superhumerate the burthen which was his. Feltham, Resolves, i. 82.

superimaginary (sū″pėr-i-maj'i-nā-ri), a. Related to other imaginary transformations as an imaginary to a real root. ★ superimpose (sū″pėr-im-pōz'), v. t.; pret. and pp. superimposed, ppr. superimposing. [< super- + impose, after L. superimponere, pp. superimpositus, lay upon, < super, over, + imponere, lay upon: see impose.] To lay or impose on something else: as, a stratum superimposed on another.

superimposition (sū-pėr-im-pō-zish'on), n. The act of superimposing, or the state of being superimposed. Amer. Jour. Sci., 3d ser., XL. 359.

superimpregnation (sū-pėr-im-preg-nā'shon), n. Superfetation; superfecundation.

superincumbence (sū″pėr-in-kum'bens), n. [< superincumben(t) + -ce.] The state or condition of lying upon something.

superincumbency (sū-pėr-in-kum'ben-si), n. Same as superincumbence.

superincumbent (sū″pėr-in-kum'bent), a. [< L. superincumben(t-)s, ppr. of superincumbere, lay or cast oneself upon, < super, over, + incumbere, lie upon: see incumbent.] Lying or resting on something else.

It is sometimes so extremely violent that it forces the superincumbent strata, breaks them throughout, and thereby perfectly undermines and ruins their foundations.
Woodward.

It can scarce uplift
The weight of the superincumbent hour.
Shelley, Adonais, xxxii.

superinduce (sū″pėr-in-dūs'), v. t.; pret. and pp. superinduced, ppr. superinducing. [< L. superinducere, draw over, bring upon, < super, over, + inducere, bring upon: see induce.] To bring in or upon as an addition to something; develop or bring into existence in addition to something else.

The anointment of God superinduceth a brotherhood in kings and bishops. Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii.

Here are two imitations: first, the poet's of the sufferer; secondly, the actor's of both: poetry is superinduced.
Landor, Epicurus, Leontion, and Ternissa.

superinducement (sū″pėr-in-dūs'ment), n. The act of superinducing; also, that which is superinduced. Bp. Wilkins, Nat. Religion, i. 12.

superinduction (sū″pėr-in-duk'shon), n. [< LL. superinductio(n-), < superinducere, superinduce: see superinduce.] The act of superinducing. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 6., Pref.

superindue† (sū″pėr-in-dū'), v. [< super- + indue[2].] To assume; put on.

A subtle body which the soul had before its terrene nativity and which continues with it after death will, at last, superindue or put on immortality.
Cudworth, Intellectual System, v. § iii.

superinenarrable (sū-pėr-in-ē-nar'a-bl), a. [< super- + inenarrable.] In the highest degree incapable of narration or description. [Rare.]

St. Augustine prays: "Holy Trinity, superadmirable Trinity, and superinenarrable, and superinscrutable."
M. Arnold, Literature and Dogma, ix.

superinfinite (sū-pėr-in'fi-nit), a. In math., going through infinity into a new region. See superinfinite quantity, under quantity.

superinspect (sū″pėr-in-spekt'), v. t. [< LL. superinspicere, pp. superinspectus, oversee, < L. super, over, + inspicere, look upon, inspect: see inspect.] To oversee; superintend by inspection. [Rare.] Imp. Dict.

superinstitution (sū-pėr-in-sti-tū'shon), n. In eccles. law, one institution upon another; the institution of one person into a benefice into which another is already instituted. This has sometimes taken place where two persons have claimed, by adverse titles, the right of making presentation to the benefice.

superintend (sū″pėr-in-tend'), v. [= Pg. superintender, < LL. superintendere, attend to, oversee, < L. super, over, + intendere, intend, attend: see intend.] I. trans. To have charge and direction of, as of a school; direct the course and oversee the details of (some work, as the construction of a building, or movement, as of an army); regulate with authority; manage. See supervise.

The king will appoint a . . . council who may superintend the works of this nature, and regulate what concerns the colonies. Bacon, Advice to Villiers.

Of what importance it is, even to the formation of taste, that the manners should be severely superintended!
Goldsmith, Taste.

=Syn. To overlook, supervise, guide, regulate, control, conduct, administer.

II.† intrans. To oversee; have charge or oversight; exercise superintendence.

In like manner, they called both the child-bearing of women, and the goddesses that superintend over the same, Eilithuia or Lucina.
Cudworth, Intellectual System, p. 229.

superintendence (sū″pėr-in-ten'dens), n. [< OF. superintendance, also surintendance, F. surintendance = Sp. Pg. superintendencia, < ML. superintendentia, < LL. superintenden(t-)s, overseeing: see superintendent.] The act of superintending; also, the right of superintending, or authority to superintend.

An admirable indication of the divine superintendence and management. Derham.

=Syn. Supervision, direction, control, guidance, charge, management.

superintendency (sū″pėr-in-ten'den-si), n. [As superintendence (see -cy).] 1. Same as superintendence.

Where the Theistical Belief is intire and perfect, there must be a stedy Opinion of the Superintendency of a Supreme Being. Shaftesbury, Inquiry, II. iii. § 3.

2. The office or the place of business of a superintendent.

Superintendency of Trade, Hong Kong, December 22, 1853. . . . Your excellency's most obedient humble servant.
J. G. Bonham, The Americans in Japan, App., p. 399.

superintendent (sū″pėr-in-ten'dent), a. and n. [< OF. superintendant, also surintendant, F. surintendant = Sp. Pg. superintendente, < LL. superintenden(t-)s, ppr. of superintendere, attend to, oversee: see superintend.] I. a. Superintending.

The superintendent deity, who hath many more under him. Stillingfleet.

A superintendent provincial organization.
W. Wilson, State, § 471.

II. n. 1. One who superintends, or has the oversight and charge of something with the power of direction: as, the superintendent of an almshouse; the superintendent of customs or finance; a superintendent of police. Hence—2. In certain Protestant churches, a clergyman exercising supervision over the church and clergy of a district, but not claiming episcopal authority; in the English Wesleyan Church, an officer who has charge of a circuit, and presides as chief pastor in all circuit courts.—3. The commanding officer of various military or naval institutions, as the United States Military Academy at West Point, New York, and the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland.—4. An officer who has charge of some specific service: as, the superintendent of the recruiting service.=Syn. 1. Inspector, overseer, supervisor, manager, director, curator.

superintendentship (sū″pėr-in-ten'dent-ship), n. [< superintendent + -ship.] The office or work of a superintendent. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 64.

superintender (sū″pėr-in-ten'dėr), n. [< superintend + -er[1].] One who superintends, or who exercises oversight; a superintendent.

We are thus led to see that our relation to the Superintender of our moral being, to the Depositary of the supreme law of just and right, is a relation of incalculable consequence. Whewell. (Imp. Dict.) superinvolution (sū-pėr-in-vō-lū′shọn), n. Excessive involution.

superior (sū-pē′ri-ọr), a. and n. [Formerly also superiour; ‹ OF. superieur, F. supérieur = Sp. Pg. superior = It. superiore, a., ‹ L. superior, higher, in ML. as a noun, one higher, a superior, compar. (cf. superl. supremus, summus, highest) of superus, that is above, ‹ super, over, above: see super-, and cf. supreme and sum[1].]

I. a. 1. More elevated in place; higher; upper: as, the superior limb of the sun: opposed to inferior.

Now from the depth of hell they lift their sight,
And at a distance see superior light.
Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Metamorph., Ceyx and Alcyone, l. 138.

2. In anat. and zoöl., upper in relative position or direction; uppermost with regard to something else: correlated with anterior, inferior, and posterior. The epithet was originally used in anatomical language to note the parts relatively so situated in man, and has caused much confusion in its extension to other animals, since that which is superior in man becomes anterior in most animals, and so on with the three correlated words. The tendency is now to replace these epithets with others not affected by the posture of the animal, as cephalic, caudal, dorsal, and ventral, with the corresponding adverbs ending in -ad.

The vague ambiguity of such terms as superior, inferior, anterior, posterior, etc., must have been felt and acknowledged by every person the least versant with anatomical description. Dr. John Barclay, A New Anatomical [Nomenclature (1803).

3. In bot.: (a) Placed higher, as noting the relative position of the calyx and ovary: thus, the ovary is superior when the calyx is quite free from it, as normally; the calyx is superior when from being adnate to the ovary it appears to spring from its top. (b) Next the axis; belonging to the part of an axillary flower which is toward the main stem. Also called posterior. (c) Pointing toward the apex of the fruit; ascending: said of the radicle.—4. Higher in rank or office; more exalted in dignity: as, a superior officer; a superior degree of nobility.

The apostles in general, in their ordinary offices, . . . were superior to the seventy-two, the antecessors of the presbyterate. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), II. 163.

5. Higher or greater in respect to some quality or property; possessed or manifested in a higher (or, absolutely, very high) degree: applied to persons and things, and to their qualities and properties; surpassing others in the greatness, goodness, extent, or value of any quality; in math., greater.

Honesty has no fence against superior cunning.
Swift, Gulliver's Travels, i. 6.

His [Dryden's] claims on the gratitude of James were superior to those of any man of letters in the Kingdom.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vii.

The French were superior in the number and condition of their cavalry. Prescott, Ferd. and Isa., ii. 12.

Nor do I know anything in ivory carving superior to the panels of the tomb [Maximilian's] itself.
C. D. Warner, Roundabout Journey, p. 70.

6. Being beyond the power or influence of something; too great or firm to be subdued or affected by something; above: used only predicatively or appositively: with to: as, a man superior to revenge. Sometimes used sarcastically, as of an assumed quality, without to: as, he smiled with a superior air.

Great Mother, let me once be able To have a Garden, House, and Stable,
That I may read, and ride, and plant,
Superior to Desire, or Want.
Prior, Written at Paris, 1700.

7. In logic, less in comprehension; less determinate; having less depth, and consequently commonly wider.

Biped is a genus with reference to man and bird, but a species with respect to the superior genus, animal.
J. S. Mill, Logic, I. vii. § 3.

Superior conjunction, in astron. See conjunction, 2.—Superior Court. See court.—Superior figures or letters, small figures or letters cast at the top of text-type, used as marks of reference to notes or for other purposes: for examples, see II., 4, below.—Superior limit, a value which some quantity cannot exceed.—Superior planet, a planet farther from the sun than the earth, especially Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune.—Superior slope, in fort., the slope from the crest of the parapet to the top of the exterior slope, with which it forms an obtuse angle.—Superior wings, in entom., the anterior wings, which overlie or fold over the posterior ones; the upper wings.=Syn. 5. Paramount, surpassing, predominant.

II. n. 1. One who is superior to or above another; one who is higher or greater than another, as in social station, rank, office, dignity, power, or ability.

Now we imagine ourselves so able every man to teach and direct all others that none of us can brook it to have superiors. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, vii. 16.

Specifically—2. The chief of a monastery, convent, or abbey.—3. In Scots law, one who or whose predecessor has made an original grant of heritable property on condition that the grantee, termed the vassal, shall annually pay to him a certain sum (commonly called feu-duty) or perform certain services.—4. In printing, a small figure or letter standing above or near the top of the line, used as a mark of reference or for other purposes: thus, x^2, a^n; so back[1], back[2], and other homonyms as distinguished in this dictionary.—To enter with a superior. See enter.

superioress (sū-pē′ri-ọr-es), n. [‹ superior + -ess.] A woman who holds the chief authority in an abbey, nunnery, or similar institution: more properly called lady superior. [Rare.]

superiority (sū-pē-ri-or′i-ti), n. [‹ OF. superiorite, F. supériorité = Sp. superioridad = Pg. superioridade = It. superiorità, ‹ ML. superiorita(t-)s, ‹ L. superior, superior: see superior.] 1. The state or character of being superior, in any sense.

These two streets doe seem to contend for the superiority, but the first is the fairest. Coryat, Crudities, I. 216.

"He read, Sir," rejoined Pott . . . with a smile of intellectual superiority, "he read for metaphysics under the letter M, and for China under the letter C; and combined his information [for Chinese metaphysics], Sir!"
Dickens, Pickwick, l.

2. In Scots law, the right which the superior enjoys in the land held by the vassal. (See superior, 3.) The superiority of all the lands in the kingdom was originally in the sovereign. =Syn. 1. Preference, etc. (see priority); predominancy, ascendancy, advantage, preponderance, excellence, nobility.

superiorly (sū-pē′ri-ọr-li), adv. 1. In a higher position; above; cephalad, of man; dorsad, of other animals.—2. In a superior manner.

superiorness (sū-pē′ri-ọr-nes), n. Superiority. Mme. D'Arblay, Camilla, iii. 6. (Davies.) [Rare.]

superius (sū-pē′ri-us), n. [ML., neut. of superior, higher: see superior.] In medieval music, the highest voice-part in part-writing, corresponding to the modern soprano or treble.

superjacent (sū-pėr-jā′sẹnt), a. [‹ L. superjacen(t-)s, ppr. of superjacere, lie upon, ‹ super, above, + jacere, lie: see jacent.] Lying above or upon; superincumbent: the opposite of subjacent. Whewell.

superlation† (sū-pėr-lā′shọn), n. [= It. superlazione, ‹ L. superlatio(n-), an exaggerating, ‹ superlatus, used as pp. of superferre, carry over or beyond: see superlative.] Exaltation of anything beyond truth or propriety.

Superlation and over-muchness amplifies.
B. Jonson, Discoveries.

superlative (sū-pėr′la-tiv), a. and n. [‹ ME. superlatif, ‹ OF. (and F.) superlatif = Pr. superlatiu = Sp. Pg. It. superlativo = G. superlativ, ‹ LL. superlativus, exaggerated, hyperbolic, superlative, ‹ L. superlatus, used as pp. of superferre, carry over or beyond, raise high, ‹ super, above, + ferre = E. bear[1].] I. a. 1. Raised to or occupying the highest pitch, position, or degree; most eminent; surpassing all other; supreme: as, a man of superlative wisdom.

Ther nys no thyng in gree superlatyf,
As seith Senek, above an humble wyf.
Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, l. 131.

Here beauty is superlative.
Beau. and Fl., Laws of Candy, ii. 1.

2. In gram., noting that form of an adjective or an adverb which expresses the highest or utmost degree of the quality or manner: as, the superlative degree of comparison.

II. n. 1. That which is highest or of most eminence; the utmost degree.

Thus doing, you shall be most fayre, most ritch, most wise, most all; you shall dwell vpon Superlatiues.
Sir P. Sidney, Apol. for Poetrie.

2. In gram.: (a) The superlative degree of adjectives or adverbs, which is formed in English by the termination -est, as meanest, highest, bravest; hence, also, the equivalent phrase made by the use of most, as most high, most brave; or even of least, as least amiable.

Some have a violent and turgid manner of talking and thinking; they are always in extremes, and pronounce concerning everything in the superlative. Watts.

(b) A word or phrase in the superlative degree: as, to make much use of superlatives.

I well know the peril which lies in superlatives—they were made for the use of very young persons.
Josiah Quincy, Figures of the Past, p. 334.

superlatively (sū-pėr′la-tiv-li), adv. In a superlative manner or degree; in the highest or utmost degree. Bacon.

superlativeness (sū-pėr′la-tiv-nes), n. The state or character of being superlative. Bailey, 1727.

superline (sū′pėr-līn), n. A two-dimensional linear continuum in five-dimensional space.

superlinear (sū-pėr-lin′ē-ạr), n. In math., a determinant.

superlucrate† (sū-pėr-lū′krāt), v. t. [‹ LL. superlucratus, pp. of superlucrari, gain in addition, ‹ L. super, above, + lucrari, gain: see lucre, v.] To gain in addition; gain extraordinarily.

As hath been proved, the people of England do thrive, and . . . it is possible they might superlucrate twenty-five millions per annum.
Petty, Political Arithmetick, p. 107. (Encyc. Dict.) superlucration† (sū″pėr-lū-krā′shọn), n. [‹ superlucrate + -ion.] Extraordinary gain; gain in addition.

superlunar (sū-pėr-lū′nạr), a. [‹ L. super, above, + luna, the moon: see lunar.] Being above the moon; not sublunary or of this world. Pope.

superlunary (sū-pėr-lū′nạ-ri), a. Same as superlunar.

Other ambition than of crowns in air,
And superlunary felicities, Thy bosom warm. Young, Night Thoughts, vi.

superlunatical (sū″pėr-lū-nat′i-kạl), a. Lunatic in the extreme; insane to an extraordinary degree. [Rare.]

First Rabbi Busy, thou superlunatical hypocrite.
B. Jonson, Bartholomew Fair, v. 3.

supermedial (sū-pėr-mē′di-ạl), a. [‹ L. super, above, + medius, middle: see medial.] Lying or being above the middle.

supermolecule (sū-pėr-mol′e-kūl), n. A compounded molecule, or combination of two molecules of different substances.

supermundane (sū-pėr-mun′dān), a. [‹ L. super, above, + mundus, the world: see mundane.] Being above the world; superior to the world or earthly things.

supermundial† (sū-pėr-mun′di-ạl), a. Supermundane. Cudworth, Intellectual System, p. 563.

supern†, a. [Early mod. E. superne; = Sp. Pg. It. superno, ‹ L. supernus, that is above, on high, upper, ‹ super, above: see super.] That is above; celestial; supernal. Bp. Fisher, Seven Penitential Psalms.

supernacular (sū-pėr-nak′ū-lạr), a. [‹ supernacul(um) + -ar[3].] Having the quality of supernaculum; of first-rate quality; very good: said of liquor.

Some white hermitage at the Haws (by the way, the butler only gave me half a glass each time) was supernacular. Thackeray, Book of Snobs, xxxi.

supernaculum (sū-pėr-nak′ū-lum), adv. and n. [Prop. an adverbial phrase, NL. super naculum, 'on the nail': L. super, above, upon; NL. naculum, ‹ G. nagel, nail: see nail.] I. adv. On the nail: used of drinking, with reference to the custom of turning the glass over the thumb to show that there was only a drop left small enough to rest on the nail: as, to drink supernaculum.

To drink supernaculum was an antient custom, not only in England, but also in several other parts of Europe, of emptying the cup or glass, and then pouring the drop or two that remained at the bottom upon the person's nail that drank it, to shew that he was no flincher.
Brand, Pop. Antiq. (ed. 1813), II. 238.

II. n. Wine good enough to be worth drinking to the bottom; good liquor; hence, anything very fine or enjoyable.

Gab. For the cup's sake I'll bear the cupbearer.
Iden. 'Tis here! the supernaculum! twenty years
Of age, if 'tis a day. Byron, Werner, i. 1.

And empty to each radiant comer
A supernaculum of summer. Lowell, Eurydice.

supernal (sū-pėr′nạl), a. [= It. supernale, ‹ L. supernus, that is above, on high, upper: see supern. Cf. infernal.] 1. Being in a higher or upper place; situated above: as, supernal regions.

Then downe she [Fortune] thrustes from their supernall seat Princes & kings, & makes them begg their meat.
Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 125.

2. Relating to things above; celestial; heavenly.

That supernal judge that stirs good thoughts.
Shak., K. John, ii. 1. 112.

God
. . . will send his winged messengers
On errands of supernal grace.
Milton, P. L., vii. 573.

3. In zoöl., superior in position; situated high up: as, the supernal nostrils of a bird.

supernatant (sū-pėr-nā′tant), a. [< L. supernatan(t-)s, ppr. of supernatare, swim above, float, < super, above, + natare, swim: see natant.] Swimming above; floating on the surface.

After the urinous spirit had precipitated the gold into a fine calx, the supernatant liquor was highly tinged with blue, that betrayed the alloy of copper, that did not before appear. Boyle, Works, III. 421.

supernatation (sū″pėr-nā-tā′shon), n. [< L.supernatatio(n-)*, < supernatare, swim above, float: see supernatant.] The act of floating on the ★surface of a fluid. Bacon; Sir T. Browne.

supernatural (sū-pėr-nat′ū-ral), a. and n. [< OF. supernaturel, also surnaturel, F. surnaturel = Sp. Pg. sobrenatural = It. supernaturale, < ML. supernaturalis, being above nature, divine, < L. super, above, + natura, nature: see natural.] I. a. 1. Being beyond or exceeding the powers or laws of nature; not occurring, done, bestowed, etc., through the operation of merely physical laws, but by an agency above and separate from these.

All these gyftes God gaue hym aboue hys naturales, and not for himself onely, but for him and al his posteritye. But all these supernaturall giftes he gaue him with the knot of thys condicion: that is to wytte, that, yf hee brake hys commaundement, then shuld he lese them al.
Sir T. More, Works, p. 1286.

2. Of or pertaining to that which is above or beyond nature.

Of all the numbers arithmeticall,
The number three is heald for principall,
As well in naturall philosophy
As supernaturall theologie.
Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 148.

